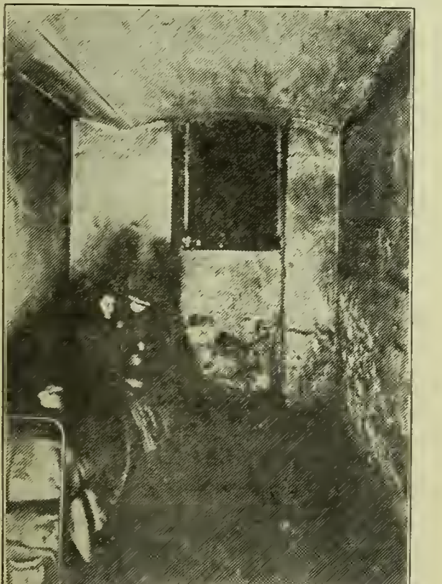
The internal affairs of Jewish congregational life, naturally in a somewhat critical state due to the difficulty of adjusting themselves to present conditions so entirely different from the obsolete laws under which they are administrated. A few individual facts may be cited as specimens of the condition of Jews and Judaism. The Allgemeine Zeitung des Judentums, the oldest existing Jewish newspaper founded in 1837, and about the only exponent of liberal Judaism, was reduced to a biweekly. The normal school of Cassel and the high school Philanthropia of Frankfort, each more than one hundred years old and products of the powerful liberal movement during the Napoleonic era, were closed. Of personal achievements the following may be noted. Herman Cohn of Dessau, for years prominent in politics of Anhalt was elected member of the government. Dorothy Hirschfeld was appointed to an office about equal to our assistant secretary of labor, and Rudolph Mosse, the famous publisher of Berlin, was honored by the City Council which named a street for him. This is especially worth mentioning because Mosse's paper stands for middle class liberalism while the City Council is predominantly socialist.

Europe's Kaleidoscope.

A letter received from Vienna in reply to a question what the local people thought of a description of Vienna's misery published in the Saturday Evening Post (May 1), stated briefly it is true we are a molehill of misery (ein Haeuflein Elend). Czecho Slovakia indulges in really puerile stunts quite natural for a political infant. Going from Vienna to Bruenn which in the days of autocracy was a plain affair of buying a ticket, making a journey of two and one-half hours and returning the same day, requires now passports and hours of waiting in custom houses, often only marked as such by a shed or a sentinel house, and is a source of direct misery. The consequence is corruption of officials and brutality of guards. The most serious Jewish problem of Vienna is the constant agitation for the expulsion of the Galician refugees. One of the agitators is a Prince Windischgraetz, perhaps the one who married the granddaughter of the emperor Francis Joseph and working for the restoration of monarchy.

Minor instances of a similar character are resolutions adopted by various summer resorts in the Alps, declaring in utter disregard of the constitution that Jews will not be admitted as summer guests. One fact illustrating the change of internal conditions is the last election of the Board of Trustees of the Vienna congregation when the Zionist party won 13 seats, the orthodox who formerly were not represented at all, 3 and the old liberals who, since the present Jewish congregation of Vienna was organized in 1849 held undisputed power, still control 20 votes out of 36. Similar were the conditions in Berlin, all of which is decidedly a sign of the change of times.

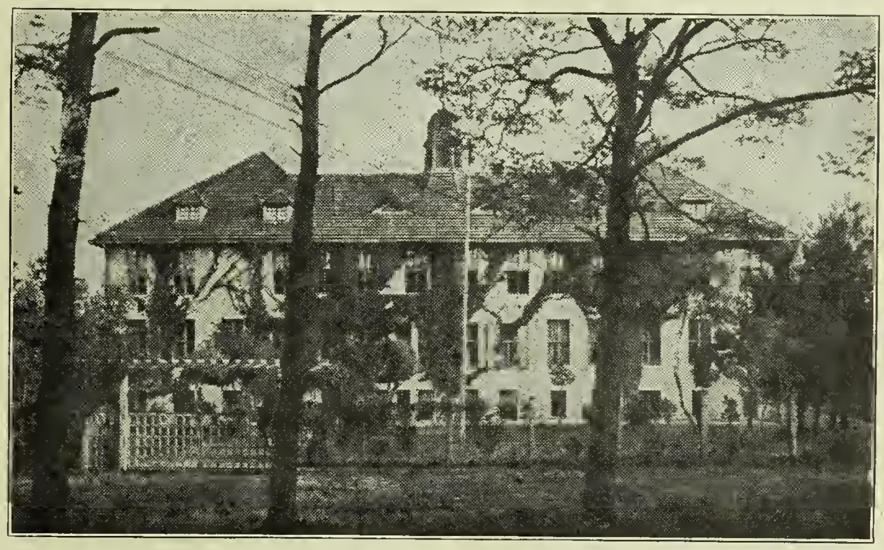


Refugees in Vienna Tenement

The Mulattoes of the Balkans.

The Roumanians like to be called the French of the near east. As a matter of fact their Latin blood is rather diluted, and the new Roumania consists of various nationalities, German, Slavic and Magyar. There is one notable fact. Dr. Benno Straucher, formerly member of the Austrian Reichsrat, is now member of the Roumanian senate, and as far as we are informed, the first Jew elected to a Roumanian parliament. Straucher was returned from a district in the former Austrian province of Bukowina. He therefore declares that he represents north Roumania, probably wishing to intimate that he is not to be considered a representative of the Jewish population. Our information on the complex situation is rather meager and contradictory.

The government emphasizes its desire to be fair to the Jews. His majesty, visiting in the former Austrian district in a talk with the superintendent of Jewish schools, expressed his interest in Hebrew, and her majesty went even so far as to ask to hand to Mr. Oscar Leonard a most gracious message addressed to Mr. Felix M. Warburg, thanking him for what American Jews have done to relieve the misery of their coreligionists in Roumania. In spite of all these most gracious acts we learned quite authoritatively that Jews of the former Austrian and Hungarian territory were dismissed from the offices which they held under their former government, and that Senator Cusa, a well known anti-Semite who is a professor of law in a Roumanian university delivered a harangue against the Jews which the Senate ordered to be printed and posted all over the country.

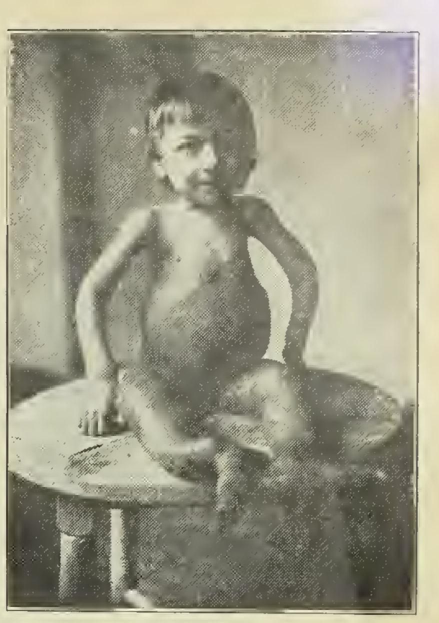


Institute for Backward Children, Beelitz, Germany, maintained by D. G. L., No. 8, I. O. B. B., and Union of Jewish Congregations

Roumania's Worthy Neighbor.

The most depressing disappointment caused by the war is the situation in Hungary. It is needless to go over the history of the last fifty odd years when the first Jew, Wahrmann, was elected to parliament (1867) to the time when the first Jew, Vaszony (1916) was made member of the cabinet, but even compared with conditions previous to 1848 the present situation in Hungary is the worst disappointment ever experienced in Jewish history since the turning point in their situation in Spain in 1391. The reaction is not entirely aimed at the Jews, but affects socialists and all liberal elements. So the International Labor Organization in Amsterdam took a decisive step by declaring a boycott against Hungary (June 20). According to this order no member of the organization is permitted to do any work for Hungary. Railroad, postal, telephone, and telegraph service with foreign countries are completely suspended. Naturally the Jews are charged with the responsibility, and extremists in Hungary replied by renewed acts or barbarity. The leader of the white terror, Lieutenant Heijas, harangued his cutthroats with a demand to confiscate all Jewish property, to burn all socialist newspaper offices and to arrange a pogrom all through the country. Some politicians are more moderate in their language, and Count Apponyi, who had considerable experience in America, just as Count Andrassy the son of the famous statesman, counselled moderation. Even Carl Huszar who as Premier was the leader of the white terror came out with a hypocritical appeal for law and order. Huszar arrived in New York on a somewhat mysterious mission. He claimed, at least, that he had come in the interest of the Hungarian prisoners of war still kept in Siberia, which indeed is a disgrace to humanity. The New York Nation (July 24) had a very clear presentation of the feeling of liberal-minded Americans on the arrival of a statesman coming from a country with which the United States is still technically at war. The mystery why Huszar obtained this permission has not been solved, but for one reason or another he saw fit to leave the country (August 11), not waiting for an action which the Department of Labor might have taken in response to resolutions passed at indignation meetings all over the country.

The British government evidently takes a view favorable to the reign of terror for the same reason for which it shielded the atrocities in Poland. The old Shtadlan policy of the British board of delegates resulted in the usual satire. They appealed to the foreign office and learned that things were not so bad. They surely were not so bad for Lord Curzon. The committee sent by the British labor party arrived at a different conclusion. In their report they criticize the British official mission which had denied the existence of terror in Hungary and told some stories of almost incredible atrocities, and yet, as a Vienna paper commenting on this report says, the Hungarian statesmen did all they could to show these guests a good time and naturally concealed from them the places where the worst atrocities had been committed, where Jews had been buried alive, mutilated in an unspeakable manner and clubbed to death. With all that, the labor delegates learned something, but all those who gave them information or were in the remotest way suspected of giving them information had to pay dearly for their act. It is absolutely impossible to give even a remote outline of barbarities which fully equal those of the Ukrainian villages. One specimen, however, shall be recorded. Heinrich Schapira, a traveling salesman and a Polish subject, was arrested at Komarom for having a bundle of letters in his possession. These letters were private letters written by people in Vienna to their relatives in Hungary and given to him with the request to deliver them personally because of the uncertainty of the Hungarian mail service. After waiting for an examination of these letters he was treated as a criminal, not merely handcuffed, but whipped until he fainted, compelled to swallow the dregs of a tobacco pipe, and submitted to other incredible brutalities. He saw in the same prison a fellow sufferer, the engineer Mueller who had already lost one eye, slowly tortured to death. This is the man whose case was mentioned by Rabbi Loew of Szeged and led to his arrest. Fortunately for Schapira he was a Polish subject whose relatives interested their minister, and for political reasons the Polish government saw fit to manifest its power and the Magyar government felt that they would rather release the man than risk trouble with a more powerful neighbor. So Schapira escaped alive. The latest reports are that Rabbi Loew was discharged from prison but is still under surveillance. It will be remembered that the cause of his trouble was an apostate Jew who had invented the story which he gave out as an interview obtained from the rabbi. A similar proof of the old Jewish proverb about Jews being their own worst enemies seems to be found in a report that Marcus Braun, not very favorably known years ago as a New York ward politician, bought the Magyar Ujsag, a paper published in Vienna in the Magyar language in the interest of the liberal parties, and the latest information is to the effect that Mr. Braun acted as an agent of the Hungarian reactionaries with Count Apponyi at the head for the sake of muzzling the exposures of the white terror. Another fact which cannot be disputed is the report of a great celebration held in the Hungarian capital to commemorate the first anniversary of the establishment of the white terror, July 20, 1919. The enthusiasm manifested itself soon afterwards. On July 27, a bunch of armed rowdies entered a cafe in Budapest and without any provocation killed two people and wounded one, whom they considered Jews. This act, committed in the center of the capital, was, after all, too much for the authorities who like to have these things done in a more quiet fashion, and so a member of the government party interpellated on the subject in the parliament on the next day, and the new Premier, Count Teleki, theatrically expressed his indignation and promised that order should be restored. A statement was considered necessary because in the interpolation it was pointed out that such acts were bound to have a bad effect on the rate of exchange.



Result of Undernourishment, Vienna

The Seed of Chmelincki.

The present writer received in a roundabout way a letter from a dear friend in Kiew who writes: "If I tell you that we have had sixteen governments in two years and that the first week of a new government and the last week of one that was nearing its end meant always terror and even death, you can imagine what I and my family have lived through since I wrote you last." With this the conditions in the Ukraine are fully characterized. Judge Fisher's vivid description of the grave in Proskurow which contains the bodies of more than 1,600 men, women and children, butchered within a few hours, is a story which is tragic enough to make us dispense with other horrid details. From the point of view of America we must however, give special prominence to the death of the two martyrs, Professor Israel Friedlander and Rabbi Bernard Cantor, who were assassinated near Jarmolinitzi, Podolia, July 5, just on the day when in their home country the anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence was celebrated. The details are still too meager and uncertain and the emphatic statement in the first dispatches that the assassins were Bolshevists makes the report a little suspicious, but we prefer not to express these suspicions until details shall be at hand. It is a duty of the public press to give expression of the universal grief at the tragic death of two noble men who offered their lives for the cause of their suffering brethren. Especially in the case of Professor Friedlander, Jewish scholarship mourns the loss of a truly Jewish man and the interruption of a very promising career. In addition to death by violence, epidemics especially of typhus demand thousands of victims. There is no doubt that we shall hear some very bad details when once communication with this country shall have become normal.

Solomon's Wisdom.

Conceit is followed by break-down.

(Continued on page 16.)

The Jewish World Relief Conference

THE Jewish World Relief Conference was opened in Carlsbad, Czecho Slovakia, Friday, August 6, 1920. There were assembled close to ninety delegates representing Jews of 28 countries, including eleven delegates from America. Numerous messages of greeting were read including one from Prof. Massaryk, President of the Republic of Czecho-Slovakia, and from the Provisional American Jewish Congress. The first session was opened by Dr. Leo Motzkin who outlined in brief the needs for calling the Relief Conference. He expressed his regret that the Joint Distribution Committee was not represented at the conference, but said that he hoped that in future conferences of this nature, the Jewry of the whole world would be fully represented.

In the afternoon session a praesidium was elected, composed of the following: Prof. Simonsen, Advocate Sliossberg, Dr. Salkind, Mr. Birnbaum, Dr. Motzkin, Minister Soloweitchik, Dr. Singer, Morris Rothenberg, and Abe Epstein. Sliosberg and Temkin of Russia presented reports on the Jewish situation in Russia and Ukrania. Of special importance was Engineer Temkin's detailed report on the pogroms in Ukrainia. There were 568 pogroms and the number of dead was over 138,000. He told of thousands in Russia who were dying of starvation and said that there were over 130,000 homeless orphans.

It was later decided to print the report of Temkin on Ukrainia in an official "black book" to be published in five languages.

Saturday's session was devoted to the following reports: Salzman for Canada, Reisner for Constantinople, Cohen for Holland, Bitman for Switzerland, Schwak for France, Prof. Simonsen for Denmark, and Dr. Ehrenpreis for Sweden.

Sunday's session heard the further reports of Meyer for England, Cohen for Scandinavia, Dr. Berger for Vilna, Saforana for Salonika and Baruch Zuckerman for America.

One of the most important events of the session was when Anita Muller of Austria reported on the condition in which the 400,000 homeless Jewish orphans find themselves in Vienna, and appealed for their early emigration. In answer to her appeal announcement was made that the South African Jews have already cabled a subscription of 140,000 pounds in behalf of these orphans. It was suggested that a central protective organization be formed which would concern itself exclusively with the welfare of the Jewish orphans and that special measures should be taken to obtain for this organization the necessary financial support.

A number of delegates at the conference formed themselves into a democratic faction with the object of making the present methods of relief more democratic. This section was lead by David Nomberg, Efroykin, Baruch Zuckerman and Morris Meyer.

The next two sessions of the Relief Conference were mainly taken up with the question of constructive help as opposed to immediate relief for the Jews of Europe. In this connection the work of the Joint Distribution Committee of America was sharply criticized. In a speech advocating the proletarization of the Jewish people of Europe, Baruch Zuckerman said that not a single American dollar that was given for relief purposes should have gone for immediate help. It was understood he said, that immediate help would be taken care of by the Landsmanschaften or organizations of relatives and friends. He warned the conference that neither he nor his colleagues will take part in an organization which will work only for immediate help. There must be created a central relief body. The conference should openly declare to the Joint Distribution Committee that its present policy of reducing the Jewish people of Europe to "schnorrers" will only ruin the Jewish nation. Engineer Temkin was also outspoken in his criticism of the Joint Distribution Committee and declared that its many millions were only being wasted through the methods at present employed. Temkin also supported Zuckerman's demand for the proletarization of the Jewish masses in Europe.

The defense of the Joint Distribution Committee was taken up by Professor [illegible] and Advocate Sliosberg. Sliosberg [illegible] Zuckerman's demand for [illegible] proletarization saying that Eastern Jewry will never permit those of the extreme left to decide for them. He said he hoped that Zuckerman does not express the opinion of the whole American Jewry in this matter for the Joint Distribution Committee had certainly done good work and deserves better appreciation. In connection with Zuckerman's speech the conference found very interesting the report of Dr. Goldberg in which he said that the Jews of Lithuania were developing a strong inclination for agriculture. He declared that there were at the present more than nine hundred families who desired to settle on farms. The Lithuanian Jewish National Council had already settled fifty of these families.

At the next session there was further criticism of the work of the Joint Distribution Committee. Chief Rabbi, Dr. N. Ehrenpries of Stockholm, condemned the Joint Distribution Committee for ministering only to the physical needs of the East European Jewry and entirely neglecting their spiritual wants. Dr. Ehrenpreis continued by giving the conference a report regarding the plight of the Jewish students in Europe. In Russia and Ukrania, he stated, there are no less than half a million children who are absolutely without any schooling. In Vienna 92 per cent out of seven thousand students are from Eastern Europe. Of these 18 per cent are suffering from Tuberculosis, and 43 per cent from malnutrition. Rabbi Ehrenpreis concluded his speech by declaring that there is no reconstruction worthy of its name which does not consider the Jewish spiritual wants.

At the same session, Rabbi Hoffman of the London Mizrachi caused a storm with his resolution that the conference declare itself for having the Sabbath and Kashruth observed in all the relief institutions that are to be created in Europe. A compromise was finally arrived at which satisfied the Orthodox element completely.

Thursday's session was mainly devoted to the problems of emigration. Bernhard Cahan of the Berlin Hilfsverein proposed the establishment of a central organization to control immigration and to protect the immigrants by establishing branches at every important center. It was also suggested that a bank be established to aid in the mass emigration of Eastern Europe.

At the last session of the conference the following resolutions were adopted:

1. The Question of Immediate Help. The conference decided that so far as possible no cash contributions should be made. Instead definite funds should be provided with which are to be instituted orphan asylums, hospitals, sanatoriums and similar institutions.

2. Constructive Help. The conference decided to create credit and cooperative societies in every land; also central banks which will be easily accessible to the masses. This resolution urges the Jews of Western Europe to buy shares in these central banks and to provide the Jews of Eastern Europe with raw material and the necessary machinery. The resolution further provides for the opening of trade schools and especially to encourage Jews to take up agricultural labor.

3. Welfare of Jewish children. It was decided that there be created a national body which will organize schools, find homes for the children, find people to adopt the orphans, open agricultural and technical schools, and aid the wounded and helpless Jewish soldiers.

4. Emigration. After stormy debates, the Emigration Committee decided to elect a special committee which is to work out some plans on the emigration question and bring in recommendations to a future meeting.

After some addresses by Nahum Sokolow, Morris Rothenberg, Advocate Sliosberg, and Dr. Motzkin, the conference was brought to a close late Friday afternoon, August 13. After much heated discussion the conference elected a central committee of twenty eight to carry into effect the various resolutions and plans adopted by the conference with regard to reconstruction, emigration and constructive relief. The new central committee will have its headquarters in London and is at present composed of the following: Sir Stuart M. Samuel, Dr. David Jochelman, Chief Rabbi Dr. Chajes, Chief Rabbi Dr. Ehrenpreis, Prof. Simonsen, Prof. Pick, Anita Muller, Dr. Churgin, Dr. Soloveichick, Dr. Salkind, Dr. Leon Motzkin, Dr. Efroykin, Dr. Hellman, Farbstein, Caplan, Kramer, Klumel, Bernard Cahan, Meyer Kohn, Emil Margolis, Kaufman, Niemirower, Rosemarin, Brenson, Klee, Rachmilowitch, Salzman, Advocate Sliosberg and Engineer Temkin. This central committee is empowered to elect an Executive Committee to be composed of nine members. The American delegates to the conference did not see their way to join at present this new committee but provision was made that the conference be empowered to add to their number the American members when they so desire.

In their closing addresses, Dr. Motzkin gave an outline of the great and difficult work which confronted the world. Nahum Sokolow stated that East European Jewry could not in its present condition hope to accomplish anything without the help of American Jewry.

In a special cable summarizing the accomplishments of the Relief Conference, William Edlin, one of the delegates of the American Jewish Congress to the conference says as follows:

"The conference at Carlsbad, where for eight days were discussed and considered various ways of aiding the Jews of Eastern Europe, was successful in showing that the relief problem is one that affects the Jewish nation as a whole, and in demonstrating the right method for the future relief work.

"As a whole, the conference was very interesting; it brought out new thoughts and opinions through the presence and action of the most prominent and characteristic leaders of European Jewry. The conference was an important step in the movement to unite the Jews of the world in one great nation and to make them more conscious of their nationality and more influential in world affairs.

"The Joint Distribution Committee made a great mistake in not taking part in the Relief Conference. I have a private admission of this from one of the special representatives of the committee who happened to be at the conference. The delegates from America are greatly satisfied with the work of the conference, although they were forced to refuse to take places in the new Executive Committee, since they did not have the instructions of the People's Relief and the American Jewish Congress to do so.

"The conference was of special importance from the moral standpoint, as Nahum Sokolow brought out in his closing speech, when he said that the conference was an important step in the movement for an all-inclusive Jewish world congress."

FISHER-PINE SUGGESTIONS ABOUT JEWS IN SOVIET RUSSIA DENIED.

In a recent issue of the "Jewish Daily News," Mr. D. L. Dalidansky wrote:

"Last week regards were brought us from the Jews of Soviet Russia by Judge Harry Fisher of Chicago and Mr. Max Pine of New York who have just returned from that country. Both declared that the situation of the Jews in Soviet Russia is not at all bad. Judge Fisher was particularly satisfied with the conditions which he found there. He related that the Jews in Russia are getting accustomed to the new conditions, that they know of no persecutions or laws of exclusion and that they make a living under the changed order in Russia.

"At the same time we heard of another report about the Jews of Soviet Russia. At the conference of the Poalei-Zion in Vienna, the Russian delegates stated that the Jews of Soviet Russia are completely ruined economically, that they cannot make their way under the new order of things, that their old sources of income earned through trade and shopkeeping, have been completely swept away and since the very great majority of them are without any specific occupation, they have under the new order of things where the government controls both the industry and commerce of the country, nothing to do. They are therefore forced to break stones, dig roads and do all the other low forms of labor to which they are unused and which they can hardly do in order to keep off starvation.

"Unfortunately it must be admitted that the report of the Poalei-Zion appears to be more in keeping with the known conditions of Russia than the statements of Fisher and Pine who have been in that country but a very brief period. The Poalei-Zion reports are also in agreement with an interview which recently appeared in the London 'Jewish Chronicle,' with one of the Soviet Commissioners. The Commissioner stated that the Jewish question is one of the most serious and difficult problems which the Russian Bolsheviki are faced with. The Jews, the Commissioner said, have no trade, are no specialists and there is simply nothing for them to do. Among the Russians themselves there is but a small number of this sort of business man. The majority of Russians continue their labors under the new order as they did previously. The farmer is tilling his soil and the factory worker carries on with his labors. Those Russians who could not adapt themselves to the new order of things joined the anti-Bolsheviki. With the Jews, the matter is totally different.

"Even under the old order, the Jews had but an infirm basis for existence. The old regime excluded them from everything except commerce and with the disappearance of commerce the Jews remained as if suspended in mid-air. Under the new order there is nothing left for them but to dig roads and break stones.

"One is reminded of the old saying that if the pot falls upon the stone, the pot breaks and if the stone falls upon the pot, the pot again breaks. This sort of sums up the Jewish tragedy. In anti-Bolshevist countries Jews are oppressed because of Anti-Semitism and in Bolshevist Russia where anti-Semitism is apparently not in vogue or if it is there, it is completely suppressed, the Jews are economically ruined. The result of it all is that the condition of the Jews in Central Europe is one of utter helplessness and looks hopeless. The present solution to the Jewish problem is the same as it was before the great war; Jews have no alternative; they must emigrate."

ORTHODOX JEWS OF EUROPE WILL CALL A WORLD CONGRESS.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service).—European Orthodox Jews have resolved to call a world congress according to a dispatch received here today from Pressburg, Czecho-Slovakia. This decision was taken at a conference of the "Agudath Israel", a powerful organization of orthodox Jews in Europe, which is now meeting in Pressburg. The conference has organized a Central Council of forty-five members and has decided to transfer its headquarters from Zurich to London. Dr. Simkouvic, in welcoming the conference, in behalf of the Czecho-Slovakian government, stated that the cooperation of the Jews was indispensable to the progress of the new republic. Messages of greeting were received from President Massaryk and the Ministers Srobar, Markoiwicz, Derar and Haberman.

JOINT DISTRIBUTION COMMITTEE MAKES STRENUOUS EFFORTS TO ACCOMMODATE DANZIG EMIGRANTS.

Advices received from Danzig report that the representatives of the Joint Distribution Committee in that city are building new, large barracks for the accommodation of East-European Jews who are waiting to embark for America. Jacob Massel, the European director of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America has also reached Danzig where he is helping to cope with the critical situation created by the flood of emigrants. Within the past few days ten thousand Jews, on their way to America, had their passports vised.

POLES CAN GRANT JEWS ONLY CIVIL EQUALITY.

The British labor party has received a memorandum from the Central Executive of the Polish Socialists in which Poland's war demands are vigorously defended.

The memorandum points out that Poland is prepared to accept the principle of granting Jews complete civil equality but the Socialist party expresses itself as opposed to making Poland bilingual or binational for the benefit of a people forming only 10 per cent of the population.

POGROM LEADER CONVICTED.

Vienna.—The infamous pogrom leader, Rigoszki, was recently tried on a charge of murder and sentenced to twelve years at hard labor. In the course of the trial it was established that he was a member of the "Awakening Hungarians".

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, August 9, 1920.

OOKING back over the last three months the chronicler of events in nglo-Jewry is struck by the number of lebrations that have marked this short riod of history. In every case the reason as worthy, the response magnificent, d the result heartening. First in order time was the send-off dinner given to r Herbert Samuel, the High Commissioner of Palestine. It is difficult to press in words the intense satisfaction at this appointment called forth among ws and non-Jews alike. For Jews it was rhaps more than satisfaction—it was thusiasm. And why? Because Sir erbert is a man who in an eminent deree is gifted with the capacity for doing nd saying the right thing at the right oment. He inspires confidence. He akes you feel instinctively that with im you are safe. And this enthusiasm haracterized the gathering that assembled do him honour on that warm evening in une. Those who were privileged to be resent will long remember the scene. r. Weizmann and his lady received the uests in the drawing room of the Royal alace Hotel. Who was there? Who hat was of any significance was not there? ll the prominent Zionists turned up in heir phalanxes; many a distinguished olitician came to do honour to a colleague hom to honour was a delight; and there as the rank and file, including the clergy. he dinner itself was voted a success, nd the speeches were worthy of the ccasion. Dr. Weizmann, who presided, as visibly moved when he toasted the uest of the evening, and Sir Herbert's peech was a masterpiece. It was tactful n what he said, and equally tactful in hat he left unsaid. The effect was marelous; it left everybody with the feeling hat wisdom had found a resting place ith the High Commissioner of Palestine. ow and again, as he spoke, his audience as deeply moved. Deeply moving, too, as the reference in the Grace, intoned by r. Samuel Daiches, to the "Prince of udah and Israel." Sir John Simon, n ex-Cabinet Minister, also spoke; Sir obert Waley Cohen expressed the congratulations of the larger Jewish community; there was a speech of greeting in ebrew; and Mr. Nahum Sokolow welomed the guests, among whom was included Mr. Barnes, another ex-Cabinet Minister, who had recently returned from alestine.

The scene changes. A synagogue is the lace of the second great gathering, the o-called "cathedral" synagogue. A stream f visitors is making for the entrance, ach armed with a ticket of admission; or only selected guests were invited to his celebration. What was it? To ommemorate the fiftieth anniversary of he foundation of the United Synagogue, he first attempt to organize the whole of nglo-Jewry as a religious entity. Unortunately the attempt stopped at this irst effort, with the result that the second tep will have to be taken sooner or later. But the fact is that the first effort was made, and deserves to be celebrated. The holy fane was packed; on the almemar sat the honorary officials of the United Synagogue and the Lord Mayor of London. One of the two Sheriffs was also present; so was the Bishop of Jerusalem. The principal celebrant was the Chief Rabbi, whose address was eminently suited to the occasion. The outstanding feature of the service was the beautiful singing of the Rev. A. Katz, whose voice was most sympathetic. The national anthem which concluded the service was sung by a boy with the voice of an angel. The large congregation went away edified, enriched by a pleasing memory, a memory of an impressive service, and a memory of great and good men who had laid the foundations of the structure of the United Synagogue. It may not be without interest to relate a curious fact in this connection. As the congregants entered the synagogue that Thursday afternoon, the first of July, the skies were dull and dark and threatening; as they left the precincts of the synagogue the rain came down in torrents and it has been raining heavily ever since, with only a few intervals of sunshine.

Again the scene changes. We are taken to the Albert Hall, the largest building in London. It is calculated that ten thousand people can be seated in the enormous structure, which is famous for great concerts and great demonstrations. On Monday evening, July 12, a vast concourse of people might have been seen wending their way towards the Albert Hall. Automobiles were crowded with men and women; the omnibusses were full of passengers from the East End who were crossing London on the Great Pilgrimage. They were mostly Jews. All classes were represented. Rich and poor, great and small—all were there. Round the hall a seething crowd was swaying, and ticket-holders found it extremely difficult to wade through to the doors. Inside, the scene was most impressive. The Jews of London, reinforced by many visitors from the provincial towns, had assembled at a demonstration of joy on the freeing of Palestine and the beginning of the British mandate. Tier on tier, from ceiling to stalls, thousands of faces looked eagerly towards the platform, where, at the appointed hour, Lord Rothschild came in to take the chair. He was followed by Mr. Balfour, Lord Robert Cecil, the Earl of Crewe, and others. Mr. Balfour received a most remarkable ovation, and when he got up to speak, the whole house rose as one man and greeted him with a mighty roar of delight. His speech was most encouraging; it was suffused with a warmth for the Jewish cause which acted like balm on a wounded spirit. His kinsman, Lord Robert Cecil, spoke—an admirable speech marked by that depth and seriousness which we have learned to expect from Lord Robert. Mr. Ormsby Gore, a member of Parliament and one intensely interested in, and acquainted with, the East, delivered a spirited speech which roused the audience to a most noble enthusiasm. There were other speakers. Colonel Wedgwood brought down the house by beginning "Jews!" He brought the greetings of the British Labour Party. He expressed a strong hope that Palestine would be the success it deserved. The Chief Rabbi, spoke encouragingly; Dr. Weizmann and Mr. Sokolow also spoke. The enthusiasm of the audience was well maintained throughout. Then a tall young man stepped forward. His voice was musical; his words were like honey; his golden-tongued oratory quickly enthralled the audience and held it spellbound. The previous speakers had done remarkably well; yet his speech was voted supreme. Everyone asked in whispers: Who is it? Slowly the answer circulated round the vast hall: It was Rabbi Silver, of Cleveland. Those who heard his message will long remember it for its passion, its oratory, its skillful intonation, its climax. It was a grand ending to a grand scene. That evening will be historic in Anglo-Jewry. The place, the occasion, the speakers—all were on a high plane, and as the crowd made its way home in the cool of a lovely London summer evening, one could see how infectious the enthusiasm had become. The nearest Metropolitan station was so crowded with Jews that there was not room in which to turn; all along Hyde Park a continuous crowd walked as on air, talking over the magnificent sight of which they had been spectators, and next day the Press was unanimous in accounting the occasion great.

Once more the scene changes. We are taken to the Memorial Hall in Farringdon Street, the body of which is packed, and the narrow galleries fairly full. Again it is a gathering of Jews. The Zionists have met in conference. From all parts of Europe as well as from America delegates and visitors have come to discuss the great question of Zionism and of Palestine. There were representatives from the East, in gorgeous attire, looking most impressive; there were rabbis from Poland in long, silk gaberdines, with saints' faces; there were Americans and Germans and Austrians, and Palestine, too, had sent her quota. The first day delegates were getting themselves accustomed to the atmosphere of London and of the Conference. There were greetings and general speeches, and preliminaries of all sorts. Gradually the conference warmed to its work, and one could almost feel the rising tide of eloquence ready to burst its banks. Soon the voice of criticism became loud; the meetings were more and more stormy; the chairman lost control of the assembly; the bell sounded incessantly above the din. For two days the "General Debate" continued, a volume of words, words, words. Nothing was done. Much was spoken that had better have been left unsaid. The leaders were blamed. There were differences of opinions among the delegates. Compliments were exchanged across the floor of the house. All this continued until the eve of Sabbath, when the heat of debate subsided. It was then resolved to form committees for the study of special questions. The committees sat in private, so that if bickerings there were, they did not reach the outside world. After a week of these sessions the Conference came together again. Once more the storm broke, fiercer than ever. The noise was intelligible. For six years and more Zionists have not met in a central Conference. They have had to be silent. There has been no opportunity to exchange views. Besides many came from countries where the war years had made great inroads on nerve power. Bearing all this in mind, it is easy to see why the London conference of 1920 should have been noisy. What was the sum total of its achievements? It left things pretty well where they were before. The same "bosses" were left in charge and the old policy continued. But after all, this is of little moment. What matters is the response of Jewry throughout the world. Palestine must be made to flourish, and all Jews must lend a hand.

The last change of scene takes us to Oxford, the city of towers and spires and dreams. Here have assembled a small band of earnest Jewish school teachers, intent on extending their knowledge of Judaism. A summer school has been organized for them for the first time, and it has turned out a great success. The authorities have been most kind in placing lecture and meeting rooms at their disposal, and the spirit of the gathering is such that already the promoters are thinking of a second such summer school.

These are the gatherings and celebrations of the last three months in Anglo-Jewry, and if they spell energy and encouragement, in the world beyond the Anglo-Jewish community has had to put up with a certain amount of anti-Semitism. The principal organ of this gospel of hate and prejudice is The Morning Post. It should be borne in mind that this paper stands for a kind of conservatism that was current in England a hundred years ago or more, a conservatism almost feudal in spirit. Needless to add that its supporters and adherents are an exceedingly small number of people, reactionaries to the core. Above all things else, they hate revolution. Revolution means the upsetting of the established order, and the disturbing of their personal comfort. But they cannot deny the existence of revolution. So they seek out its causes and, as usual, blame the Jews. The Jews stir up the simple folk of the world and make them discontented. The obvious thing, therefore, is to attack the Jew. Accuse him of all manner of evils; make him unpopular; attempt to hound him out of public life; and all for what? To lessen his influence, and therefore to weaken his power of stirring up revolution. In brief that is the case of the Morning Post. Its wickedness is patent; its stupidity is observed by all sensible people; and its hatred marks the quality of its Christianity. But its appeal is sensational, and on the strength of this sensationalism it is fishing for new subscribers. Many people allege that this anti-Semitic campaign has no other end in view than to extend the paper's poor circulation. It is very likely. But on the whole, while it has done a certain amount of harm, the total effect of its screeching is not very great. We are reminded of a passage in Burke which aptly describes the ignoble policy of the Morning Post, now gradually sinking to the level of all anti-Semitic rags. "Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern," Burke wrote, "make the field ring with their importunate chink, whilst thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that, of course, they are many in number; or that, after all, they are other than the little, shrivelled, meagre, hopping, though loud and troublesome, insects of the hour."

A number of distinctions have recently fallen to Jews and Jewesses in this country. Sir Matthew Nathan has been appointed Governor of Queensland. Sir Matthew is one of three distinguished brothers who have served their country well. He himself has already occupied the position of Governor before. He was Governor of Natal and Hong-Kong. At home he has filled very important administrative offices. Sir Matthew is of those who, while ready to devote their best energies to the service of their country, are proud of their Jewish origin. Another such is Mr. Philip Hartog, one of the most gifted men in London, who has been appointed Vice Chancellor of the newly-established University of Dacca, in India. For the last ten years and more Mr. Hartog has been Academic Registrar of the University of London, to the recent development of which his ability has contributed much. He is himself a teacher of distinction, and an administrator of ripe experience.

Two Jewesses, too, have lately been honoured for public work. We have recently in this country had women magistrates appointed to the bench. Many students of our public life assert that these unpaid justices of the peace represent an institution which might with advantage be copied elsewhere. Hitherto only men were appointed to these positions; now women are also admissible, and the first batch of appointments included the names of Miss Nettie Adler and the Hon. Lily Montagu. The former is a daughter of the late Chief Rabbi, a Member of the London County Council, the body which governs Greater London, and a social worker well known within and without the community. The Hon. Lily Montagu is a daughter of the late Lord Swaythling, and she has devoted her life to the care of working girls.

Of the London lodge there is no immediate news, since we are in vacation. But we had some interesting meetings before the summer recess, ending up with a long Sunday afternoon on which the constitution was amended. Our experience of the last ten years has shown us that here and there it would make for the smoother working of the business of the lodge if amendments were introduced into the constitution. But it speaks well for those who framed that constitution that so few changes were required in all these years. The proceedings of the lodge were interrupted by tea, at which a large number of members and their ladies sat down for a cosy talk. We intend to arrange many more such social functions.

A number of children from Vienna are at present with us in London, and the committee which has the matter in hand deserves every praise for its diligence in placing so many of its guests. Those who have volunteered to receive the little visitors are to be even more congratulated. The work is worthy; it is the purest form of humanity; and there will be opportunity enough for all to participate who desire to do so. More children are coming—this time from Galicia and other war-stricken areas. The lodge has had this matter under consideration, and it is hoped that after the recess, it will be thoroughly discussed in order to adopt some course which will lead to fruitful results. Brother Sydney Strowe deserves special mention in this connection. He has constituted himself General Manager of the movement to send aid to our poor co-religionists in Vienna and the neighborhood, and with characteristic energy he has organized the work on a splendid basis.

The London lodge had the case of the Jews of Eastern Europe brought before it in another way too. Dr. M. Vishnitzer, Secretary of the Ukrainian Mission in London, gave a public lecture, under the auspices of the lodge, on the condition of the Jews in the border states of the old Russian Empire. The audience much appreciated the lecture, but what was even more interesting was the confession of the Chairman, Mr. R. D. Blumenfeld, the editor of the Daily Express. Mr. Blumenfeld told us that he was of Jewish origin and that he felt great sympathy with the Jewish cause. "Whatever strength and influence I possess," he said in effect, "I shall devote to help the Jews." We of the lodge felt that it was something to have been instrumental in getting that confession of faith from so prominent a publicist.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1920
New Moon	August 15
Selihoth	September 5
5681
New Year, first day	September 13
New Year, second day	September 14
Day of Atonement	September 22
Feast of Tabernacles, 1st day	September 27
Feast of Tabernacles, 2d day	September 28
Feast of Tabernacles, 8th day	October 4
New Moon	October 13
New Moon	November 12
Chanukah, first day	December 6
New Moon	December 12
Chanukah, last day	December 13
Fast of Tebet	December 21
	1921
New Moon	January 10
New Moon	February 9
New Moon	March 11
Fast of Esther	March 23
Purim	March 24
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

THE PERIL TO THE JEW.

It is well that we open our eyes to the existence of an organized campaign against the Jewish people. We may laugh at the crude forgeries in "The Jewish Peril." We may dismiss them as unworthy of serious attention and question the good sense of men like Solomon Reinach and Lucien Wolf in troubling themselves to expose a glaring fraud. It is not so long ago when Jewish leaders pronounced Anti-Semitism to be a matter of the imagination only and deserving no notice. It is quite true that the puerilities of our enemies, their utmost ignorance of Jewish life and Jewish literature, and their disregard of all common sense seem to make their slanders unnecessary of refutation. We would kill them by silence, by inattention. But this attitude cannot be said to be a wise one. The evidence is forced upon us that we are not dealing with a few individuals of distorted vision operating unconnectedly and without cooperation. We may speak of a plot against our people which is world-wide. No matter where the scheme was evolved, its originators have contrived to propogate it beyond their own boundaries. We recognize it as the child of Czarism. Finding itself face to face with dissolution, the old vicious order of Russian militarism revived the ancient cry, "The Jew is at fault." With what weapons the Jew has been fought in the former Czar's domain, wherever the last remnants of the old regime held sway the world knows by now. There the sword killed; there Jewish communities were given over to pillage and rapine and massacre. These murderers, to justify themselves before the world, took to the pen, which is a mightier weapon. The Jew was to be the scapegoat of all the ills that the war brought as an aftermath. Harassed, imprisoned, suppressed by the Soviets, the Jew was decried as a Bolshevist. With that lie the English press was inoculated. Hatred knows no logic. The Jew was at the same time branded as the profiteer, the corruptor of nations and governments by his alleged hold on international capital. The virus of Anti-Semitism has found its lodgment in the minds of ministers of state and of writers of fiction. Sir Harry Johnston glibly speaks of Americo-German-Jewish machinations for world dominance. We again laugh at this figment of world dominion, we who know on the inside how utterly disorganized we are, how all we wish and crave for is to be allowed to live in peace, to guard intact the large or small measure of freedom dealt out to us, to heal the breaches which the fortunes of a war by no means over for us have wrought in our midst, to build up what was wantonly destroyed, to make life and limb safe in the vast regions where the masses of our people are still concentrated, overrun by the belligerents on the right and on the left, to the north and to the south. The campaign of lying and libeling is on in full force; we may just as well realize it. They speak of a Jewish peril for which there is no foundation in fact. We are only too conscious of the peril to the Jew which stalks at our very doors, in this land which has been freest from it. The pen is working against us. The pen must work for us. Our own pen in the first place. No lie, however stupid, but must immediately be nailed. No calumny, however sinister, but must be met. There is no standing on our dignity. There is no being too proud to fight. We shall not stoop to the clumsy methods of our enemies. We must let the truth speak for itself, but speak it must in no uncertain tones. The feud is not of our choosing. The gauntlet has been thrown at our feet. We take it up.

MARTYRDOM.

The crown of martyrdom is the saint's greatest achievement. Life is sweet; death is bitter. The Jewish saint does not forswear life. For life means service, the service of man and God. To live in the world, to take part in the trials of men, to give much and to take little, to bless God for good and evil this is the vocation of the saintly man. There is much in the world that is ignoble. Turning away from it will not rule it out of existence. Some may withdraw into cloistral solitude, but not for the selfish raptures of soul refinement. Rather that from there may irradiate the benign influence of a model life. Some may go out into the mart of life. The long and drawn and morose face is not necessarily the saint's symbol. Austerity need not parade itself in lugubrious attire. Undue mirth belongs to the worldly; but a cheerful countenance will evoke much innocent joy by sheer contagion. The dignified scholar might dance with the bride. What is a snare to the wicked may be a stronghold of defense for the upright in mind. Everything was created for His glory. To glorify the life of the everyday drudge is to be a partner in creation. Every age brings its own measure of work. In the complicated life of today there are many avenues of service to man. If done from purest motives, not for the sake of aggrandizement, not for the sake of meeting over boards of council those that one may not meet in home or club, this service to man is the whole service of God. Not everybody is called to do social work. There are the timid who shrink from contact with everyday affairs. It requires a certain amount of self-consciousness to put oneself forward in a community. But there is a communal life, there are communal institutions. Often it is the wrong-headed person that gets to the top. So much the more important that those of vision, of knowledge, of selflessness should step in and do their share. It calls away from home. It means going from meeting to meeting. It means the use of persuasion to convert the narrow-minded. The communal worker has come to stay. The unpaid variety is most needed. It is a self-imposed task. And just as often it is not. The community does seek out the right man. It places upon him the burden of the communal weal whether he wishes it or no. Those who make others do must be prepared to do things themselves. The general must frequently lead in person and share the common danger with the most lowly. Duty is a stern commander. It commands from within. It bids men forsake their peaceful avocations and unflinchingly meet danger. It is of these that our age makes willing martyrs. Israel has a long roll of martyrs. Many a man has acquired the bliss of the everlasting world in one hour. But it is not really one hour. For it is the culmination of a life consecrated, every hour in which has for many years been occupied in doing in a small way what the crowning opportunity achieves in a moment. All honor to the two men whose names a mourning people adds now to its list of martyrs, the one a minister dedicated to social service, the other a scholar of renown, a teacher, a writer—both had given of their best to the cause of their hapless people, both sealed their lives of communal usefulness by the supreme service of going out on an errand of mercy where death was almost a certainty and where death did come at the hands of bloody assassins We mourn their loss. But we glory in their end. We find solace in that sons of this eminently practical age and land went forth and regardless of danger held dear the ideal of service to their people in the dire hour of need. We shall cherish their memory. Idealists we call them in modern terminology. They have achieved more. They have risen to sainthood. They stand as martyrs, as witnesses of the faith that was in them, the faith which manifests itself in unstinted service to our people, even unto death. Mourn them not. Their bliss has been of the highest that mortal man may win for himself. Their heritage to their nearest exceeds gold and silver. They died as they had lived, in the service of their people. Far away from their kindred they fell, were committed to the grave. Their names and their deeds will forever remain enshrined in our hearts throughout the confines of Israel's dispersion.

COLONEL HARRY CUTLER.

It is with deep regret that we chronicle the death of Colonel Harry Cutler, who passed away in London on August 29. It has been given to few men to crowd into the short span of forty-five years so many activities for the benefit of their fellow men. Born in Russia in 1875, he came to America when nine years old, and settled in Providence, Rhode Island. Starting from the very bottommost rung of the ladder, he rose with ever increasing momentum, until at the time of his death he stood among the first in his community. As president of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, he displayed the same indefatigable energy which later brought him to the top in the Jewish Welfare Board and earned for him the distinguished service medal. His premature death has deprived American Jewry of one of its most promising potentialities.

M. S. MEYERHOFF.

During the month of July, Brother Meyerhoff of Philadelphia, Treasurer of District Grand Lodge No. 3, celebrated his seventieth birthday anniversary, which anniversary also marked the passing of the fiftieth milestone in his life as a member of the Order.

Brother Meyerhoff, during the long series of years, gave to the B'nai B'rith the best that was in him, and in recognition of his services, he was unanimously made a Past President of the District Grand Lodge.

The B'nai B'rith News, on behalf of the membership of the Order, express the hope that Brother Meyerhoff will be blessed with many more years of good health replete with happiness and prosperity.

Oscar Leonard of St. Louis has been appointed by Governor Gardner of Missouri a member of the Children's Code Commission, which is to help frame bills for the welfare of children in the state, to be taken up by the next legislature for enactment. Mr. Leonard, who is Superintendent of the Jewish Educational and Charitable Association of St. Louis, just returned from Roumania, where he was representative of the Joint Distribution Committee. Mr. Leonard is President of Missouri Lodge, I. O B. B.

HUNGARIAN VICTIM RELATES HORRIBLE DETAILS OF WHITE TERROR REIGN.

Paul Reiss, a Hungarian refugee who has reached Vienna gives details of the tortures to which victims of the white terror are subjected which sound incredible. Reiss was arrested near Budapest and when placed in prison was tortured with fire tongs, burning cigarettes and other similar devices. Reiss relates that Commander Teker, Lieutenant Szeghalmy and Lieutenant Anatovists personally tortured to death Hoffman, a merchant 89 years of age. He is also a witness to the fact that Anatoviets personally blinded Dr. Epstein while Detective Stankovics cut off four fingers of the hand of Lazar, a Hungarian jeweler.

According to reports received here the town council of Nagykoeroes, one of the smaller cities in Hungary, has officially protested against the white terror. In their statement of protest the town councillors confirm the fact that the awakening Hungarians first robbed and then murdered the Jews of the town, finally setting fire to their homes. They also state that in the course of their terrible deeds Jews were stripped naked, brought into the market place and flogged with nailed whips. While there were previously a goodly number of Jews in that part, there is not a single Jew alive in Nagykoeroes or Kecskemet, an adjoining town. It is the demand of the city representatives that the Allied Commission should take all necessary steps to punish the perpetrators of the enumerated cruelties.

ENGLISH PRESS SCORES GERMAN SCIENTISTS.

Commenting on Professor Einstein's forced departure from the Berlin University the Daily Telegraph of London says that the incident is without parallel in the annals of science and characterizes well the point of madness attained by the people of Central Europe.

Reports from Berlin state that an association of German scientists has been founded especially to fight Einstein. To carry on their campaign they organize public meetings at which they accuse the great scientist of having appropriated the ideas of others as his own. At one of these meetings one excited participant shouted "Let us get at the throat of this Jewish hog." The opinion is general that the German nationalists cannot tolerate the idea that a Jew should be the foremost representative of German science, nor do they cherish the fact that he is supported by the world of English science.

THE ENGLISH PRESS ON POLAND AND THE JEWS.

London (J. C. B. Service).—The Daily Telegraph today vehemently denounces the anti-Jewish atrocities which are being committed by Poles in retaken territory. The writer says that the Polish troops are not distinguishing between those guilty of having sympathized with the Bolsheviki and those who did not, and that the innocent are made to suffer. To prevent further injustice, the writer demands that the Allies should delegate representatives to safeguard Jewish communities.

The Daily Herald commenting on the memorandum submitted to the British Labor Party by the Polish Socialist Party says that the Polish Socialists represent the Jingoist elements of the petty bourgeoisie, the classes which are to a great extent responsible for the pogroms.

DEATH OF MR. E. SASSOON GUBBAY, AT BOMBAY.

On June 14, death removed one of the most prominent members of the Bombay Jewish community, Mr. E. Sassoon Gubbay. The deceased came from a noble family widely known in India and his sudden death came as a great shock to the whole community, by whom the deceased was highly respected and esteemed. He was a scrupulous and straightforward man; free of conceit and a source of help to the poor and needy. He cherished only the highest aims of life, and possessed a good heart. His genial disposition, tact and broad-mindedness has won him numerous friends.

National Memorial Meeting for Professor Israel Friedlaender and Dr. Bernard Cantor

UNDER the auspices of the Joint Distribution Committee, a memorial meeting was held at Carnegie Hall on Thursday evening, September 9, in memory of Prof. Israel Friedlaender and Dr. Bernard Cantor, who met their death at the hands of assassins last July, while engaged in relief work in the Ukraine.

More than 100 organizations with which the two men were affiliated cooperated in the meeting, the chairman of which was Dr. Cyrus Adler. Addresses were delivered by Louis Marshall, Judge Julian W. Mack, Judge Abram I. Elkus, the Rev. H. Masliansky, and Dr. Judah L. Magnes. Cantor Josef Rosenblatt chanted Jewish religious anthems and Dr. Elias L. Solomon delivered Michtam Le David.

The meeting was the largest ever held in Carnegie Hall and one of the most impressive in point of character in the history of the auditorium. It was a national tribute upon the part of American Jewry to the two New York men whose lives were sacrificed.

In issuing the call for the meeting, the Friedlaender-Cantor Memorial Committee of the Joint Distribution Committee, which consists of Felix M. Warburg, Dr. Cyrus Adler, Dr. Judah L. Magnes, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, Samuel C. Lamport, Sholem Asch, and Stanley Bero, as Secretary, signified the importance of the occasion by saying:

"American Jewry has been profoundly stirred and sorrowfully impressed by the tragic deaths in the Ukraine of Professor Israel Friedlaender and Dr. Bernard Cantor who, without thought of the consequences to themselves and only thought of the needs of their suffering coreligionists in that unfortunate country, went forth to minister to those needs and in the name of American Jewry, and with funds placed at their disposal by the Joint Distribution Committee, through its constituent committees, sought to alleviate suffering, to give bread to the starving, clothes to the naked, and spiritual and mental comfort and hope to the hopeless.

"Those men, as is true of all the men who have gone forth from America to lend the helping hand of American Jewry to the sufferers from the war, whether Jew or non-Jew, gave no thought to the element of personal danger, gave no thought to the sacrifice they were compelled to make, to the separation from their family and home, but gave thought only to the great objective, that of comfort, help and succor to those whose misery and distress passes utterly the comprehension of those of us here, who have never witnessed anything to equal it.

"In order that fitting honor be done to these men, in order that there may be a realization in the minds of all of us of the sacrifice they made in behalf of humanity and of the great and overwhelming disaster which occasioned this sacrifice, and in order that we may pause for a few hours to give thought to these men, to their heroic accomplishments and to their untimely end, the Joint Distribution Committee has called, with its constituent committees, a memorial meeting, to be held at Carnegie Hall, New York City, at 8 o'clock, on the evening of September 9, in which the cooperation and participation of Jewish organizations, educational religious, and fraternal, throughout the United States, is invited."

PROFESSOR ISRAEL FRIEDLAENDER

DR. BERNARD CANTOR

COURT DECIDES B'NAI B'RITH ORDER IS PATRIOTIC.

The libel suit against the editor of the "Volkischen Beobacter," Mr. Hans G. Muller, instituted by District Grand Lodge No. 8, of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, through its President, Dr. Berthold Timendorder, before the highest court of Munich, resulted in the verdict for the plaintiff. Editor Muller was charged with having printed a libelous scurrilous article, accusing the B'nai B'rith as being unpatriotic and as having in conjunction with members and lodges of the Order in other countries incited the last war against Germany. At the trial the Constitution of the Order was introduced as evidence to prove that the organization is limited with humanitarian and philanthropic activities. The defendant, Mr. Muller, had no evidence to substantiate his libel or to raise even the slightest suspicion of the B'nai B'rith's loyalty. He was sentenced to serve fifty days in prison and to pay a fine of 500 marks and to print in his newspaper the decision of the court.

THE NEW JEWISH STAMPS.

Philatelists are looking forward with keen anticipation to the stamps which the new Jewish state is to issue. They will be the first stamps to be printed in Hebrew characters, though the Jews had a postal system long before the time of Christ, according to II. Chronicles xxx. 6. It will be interesting to see how the stamps are designed, and whether the new state will draw upon the varied history of Palestine in their execution. Shall we see, for instance, Abraham entering Canaan and Allenby entering Jerusalem?—[Lloyd's Weekly (Shanghai).

MR. FORD.

"Ford would have had about as rough sledding in a presidential campaign, had he been nominated, after his attack on the Jews, as one of his victims does careening around in a Ford car. Ford may have good mechanics, but the editors of his papers exhibit poor judgment in attacking a race whose objectionable qualities, to him, are thrift and racial purity."—[J. A. Richardson, in Sunflower Tocsin, Indianola, Miss.

PROFESSOR EINSTEIN DENOUNCED AS A BOLSHEVIK BY SIR OLIVER LODGE.

At the meeting of British Scientists which was held in Cardiff, Wales, Sir Oliver Lodge, in the course of an address denounced Professor Einstein and his theory, stating that Einstein was trying to introduce Bolshevism into science.

As a result of the efforts of Honorable Simon Wolf of Washington, the National Gallery at Washington, D. C., accepted the painting of late Mr. Julius Bein, for more than thirty years President of the Order B'nai B'rith.

The portrait was painted by Mr. G. M. Piexotta, son of Benjamin Piexotta, an ardent worker in B'nai B'rith ranks and United States diplomatic representative in Roumania.

Half the world is on the wrong scent in pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and in being served by others. It consists in giving and in serving others.—[Henry Drummond.

FIELD DAY FOR JEWISH FARMERS.

An event of much importance to Jewish farmers was held on Sunday, July 4, when Jewish Farmers' Field Day was held in Botsford, Conn. Five Jewish organizations were sponsoring the affair, including the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, The Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society, Federation of Jewish Farmers of America, Council of Jewish Women and the Fairfield County Farm Bureau.

The program for the day included judging of animals, exhibition of fruits, vegetables, dairy products, and prizes were awarded to the best in each line.

Addresses were made by the manager of the Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society, Mr. Gabriel Davidson, and by Brother Chas. Y. Shapiro of Bridgeport, Conn., Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1.

Delegations from various city organizations were present as well as a number from New York City.

The one serviceable, safe, certain, remunerative, attainable quality in every study, and in every pursuit, is the quality of attention.—[Dickens.

The Jew and the Christian World

By Georg Brandes

(Extracts reprinted with permission of The Menorah Journal)

ONE who is related to the Judaism of our day through birth only, not through education or studies, must needs exercise much reservation and caution in expressing himself when asked his opinion as to the present status of the Jews.

That the situation of the Jewish people at this moment is most depressing seems only too true. Hatred and the contempt revealed in cruel persecutions of the Jews have never been more intense—at the very moment, moreover, when believing Jews regard their dearest hope, the return to Palestine, as realized—and are consequently more prepared for jubilation than for sorrow.

There have been times—as, for instance, in the year 1848—when it was confidently assumed that the progress of knowledge and the rising tide of enthusiasm for freedom would extinguish the hatred against the Jews, this hatred being already on the verge of extinction. It has since become evident that the hatred did not disappear, even though the religious fanaticism on which it was based was very much cooled. Instead of being nourished from religious sources, it now derives its nourishment from social and national sources, from false race theories and from antipathies that are only too genuine.

Why Christian Antipathy is Illogical.

It would, however, be an error to disregard the fruits of Christian education as a main cause of this hatred. It is my own opinion that this main cause has not been combated as powerfully as might very readily be done with out modern analytic sciences. . . .

The Christians have adopted the Jewish feasts, Easter and Pentecost. They have made Christian hymns out of Jewish psalms. They have adopted as Holy Writ the Old Testament written entirely by Jews. Even the New Testament, the part of the Bible that does not concern itself with Judaism, is from the first page to the last of Jewish authorship, and notwithstanding this, Christianity regards it as inspired by the Deity.

But this is not all! Christianity, according to its own theology, places the Jewish people higher than the Jewish people has ever placed itself. The Jews have regarded themselves as God's chosen people. But according to Christian doctrines, inasmuch as God's son put on human nature, he also put on a nationality. Which nationality? Why of course the Jewish! Thus the worthy Danish bishop, D. G. Monrad, named the Jewish nationality the royal one: Christ, he said, is sitting on the right of the Almighty, guiding the world, not only as son of God but also as son of man, not only with his divine but also with his human nature. If now the human nature—however pure it may be—retains an impress of its nationality, then the Jewish nationality takes part in the world-sovereignty, and thus all other nations owe homage to it.

The Frailty of the Jesus Story.

This argument cannot be disputed by any orthodox Christian. But he finds other grounds for his hatred in the tradition that the Jews brought Jesus before the Roman tribunal and thus caused his condemnation and death. It is not necessary to refute this argument with the fact that all nations have accorded ill-treatment to their great men. Today no one holds a Greek in contempt because the ancient Greeks sent Socrates to his death by administering poison—nor a Roman because the Romans murdered Caesar, the greatest man of ancient Rome. No one today despises a Frenchman because the University of Paris unanimously adopted the resolution that Joan of Arc was to burn as a witch—nor an Italian because the Italian clergy sent such men as Savonarola and Giordano Bruno to their death by fire—nor a Czech because the [illegible] murdered John [illegible].

It is indisputable that the tale in the [illegible] Second Isaiah of the suffering of the Righteous One is meant as an allegory for the Jewish people, not for a single person—nevertheless the evangelical Jesus has been built up on these fundamentals. Whether a historic Jesus ever existed is by the nature of the case impossible to decide, but this much is certain: The history of the Passion is a mere literary fabrication, influenced as it is by the psalmists, especially by Psalm 22 and also Psalm 109, which are to be adopted as prophecies about events postulated to have happened. The evangelic Jesus dies with a quotation on his lips—the second verse of Psalm 22: "My God, my God, why hast Thou abandoned me!" There is a probability that this exclamation was framed a long time afterward on the model of the Psalm. Usually only pedants (or criminals—like Nero) die with a quotation on their lips. . . .

Anti-Semitism—A Compound of Hypocrisy and Nonsense.

The hatred against the Jews, never extinct, rose again with renewed energy in the years 1876-80 in Germany, provoked by the fact that certain Jews had enriched themselves after the war of 1870-71. This hatred was given a new name no longer aiming at religion but at extraction: The name of anti-Semitism. An anti-Semitic league was founded and an anti-Semitic group was formed in Parliament.

This designation is a cloak not only for hypocrisy but for sheer nonsense. The findings of science as to the supposed ancestry of European peoples are all dubious and contradictory. A scientific hypothesis was needed to establish the connection between various languages, and a myth was created about a mysterious people, the Aryans, which in its wanderings across the earth bred the various European nations. Modern philology is now foremost in rejecting the nonsense of an Aryan race. A family of Aryan languages is known to us, but race and language should not be confused. The Latin language conquered Gaul, but the Gauls did not turn Romans on that account. Max Müller has very strikingly said: "He who speaks of the Aryan race, Aryan blood, Aryan eyes and hair makes the same mistake as he who speaks of a dolichocephalic dictionary, or a brachycephalic grammar."

More than once it has been proved that the Jews do not constitute a "race" so named by persons who ignore the fact that modern science rejects this term. An entire Tartaric tribe, the Khasars, were converted to Judaism about the year 760, and preserved their existence as a people until the year 1016. It is of course impossible to estimate the numbers of west Europeans, Frenchmen, Spaniards, etc., in antiquity and the early medeival period, who adopted the religion of the Jews. The dogma of the Trinity then being preached scared many away from Christianity, and made them join the ranks of Judaism. . . .

Representative European Minds That Were Jewish.

Rachel and Sarah Bernhardt have always been regarded as representing French dramatic art. Heinrich Heine is more read and better known outside of Germany than any other German poet. The German social democracy, more influential than any other in the world, was created by Ferdinand LaSalle and Karl Marx, both of whom were of Jewish origin. The ideas of Marx, moreover, have passed the German boundaries and have spread to all the laboring classes of Europe and America. If the laboring classes had regarded him as a foreigner they would not have taken to him so readily.

As the greatest Jew who ever lived we should remember Benedict Spinoza. It is the glory of Judaism that it produced him—its deepest shame that it ill-treated and expelled him. His philosophy forms a natural and huge link in the history of European philosophy.

In the nineteenth century there lived in England a Jew of high intelligence. His father, it is true, had introduced him to the Christian Church when he was a child, so as to remove an obstacle to his entering the Civil Service. But he devoted himself more earnestly than anyone else to the task of removing the prejudices of English society against his race. His chief passion was an ever-burning ambition, which ultimately brought him to the summit of political power. Since the mythical Joseph ruled Egypt as the powerful minister of Pharaoh, no one of Jewish extraction has been given so elevated a position as his. This man was Benjamin Disraeli.

At first he was opposed with the prejudice that having been born a Jew he was a pariah. England was ruled by aristocrats. He fought against this prejudice in his works with enthusiasm compounded with prudence. . . .

The "Assimilationist" and the "Patriot."

Our own time is not lacking in Jews of the ultra-modern type who would reproach Disraeli for regarding himself as an Englishman to at least the same degree that he felt himself the representative of Judaism. Certain persons gladly give the abusive name of assimilationist to everyone of Jewish origin who takes part in the intellectual and political activities of his native or adopted land. This sickly attempt to sow hatred against such men is based on the assumption that they feel their extraction as a disgrace and desire to conceal it. Such an accusation is ridiculous, especially as the men so accused are reproached with their origin by a thousand voices from the first step on the stage of life. Even if they sought to conceal their race it would be a hopeless task. The first word from their critics at every opportunity points out their Jewish origin.

As to Disraeli, this charge is particularly absurd. Even as Lord Beaconsfield he never disclaimed his race, the name of which was originally comprised in his own.

When in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries the ideals of cosmopolitanism gained the ascendency, the Jews who joined the rationalist movement (as, for example, the school of Mendelssohn in Germany) tended only to show their public spirit and patriotism, especially after civil rights had been accorded to them in the leading states. Their only aim was to conduct themselves as other Frenchmen, Englishmen, Germans, Swedes etc., did on their native soil. Eventually, in the last decade of the nineteenth century, the medieval hatred against the Jews blazed out anew. The mysterious reason once given for the hatred against them, effective during the medieval ages and the Reformation, that they had killed the son of God, who was God himself now gave away to the national hatred against them as a body of foreigners. Cosmopolitanism had yielded to overwrought patriotism.

The Rise of Zionism.

The Frenchmen, Germans, etc., of Jewish extraction—to whom this extraction had for a long time signified no more than Scotch or Irish blood signified to other Frenchmen and Germans—saw themselves suddenly treated with scorn and hatred, abused daily for their origin, and above all told that they were not as they believed themselves, Frenchmen, Germans, Poles, Russians, Swedes, Danes, etc., but merely Jews.

Very naturally the impulse flamed up at once to make this assumption true and to answer: "You are right. We no longer feel any patriotism common with yours. We have our own species of patriotism. We are like you, a people, a people much older, with a longer and more tragic history." And the desire was born to regain the country which in ancient times had been the home of the Israelitic tribes. . . .

Theodor Herzl took up the idea which before him had occupied Moses Hess—the foundation of a Jewish state in Palestine.

The suppressed and martyred Jews of Eastern Europe soon paid homage to Theodor Herzl as a sort of Messiah. He worked with relentless energy and died comparatively young, but his ideas were destined to triumph.

The Danger of Claiming National Rights.

A large and powerful Zionist party was formed. The Zionists valued greatly the promise given them by an English minister that England viewed with great pleasure the founding of a home in Palestine for the Jews who had been dispersed for so many centuries.

For the present the Jews are in a minority in Palestine. The territory occupied by the English holds a total population of some 600,000 souls. Of these slightly over 500,000 are Mohammedans, about 65,000 are Jews, and 62,000 Christians. The Arabic population at first met the Jews most benevolently, and the Emir Feisal issued a manifesto in which he expressed sympathy—the Arabs' and his own. But later a strong Pan-Arabic movement arose, and both in the Arabic newspapers and in the municipal council of Jerusalem the idea of giving the Jewish people the control of Palestine has met with the most passionate resistance.

In Europe there is not a little disagreement between Zionists and non-Zionists. The latter are always branded as assimilationists by their opponents. The Zionists contend that the Jews form a people and should insist upon being treated as a separate people everywhere when they have settled down in sufficient numbers.

Neither in England, France, Germany, Italy nor Scandinavia can the Jews reasonably demand to be treated as a separate people. Instead of expending their rights and their prestige such a demand would most probably cause their expulsion or their incarceration in some ghetto. Nor could a demand from the Jews of the United States that they be treated as a separate people be regarded in any other light than an absurdity. In Eastern Europe, where the demand has been amply justified, it has only augmented their sufferings. . . .

The number of Jews living out of Palestine will most probably continue to be at least the same as now. I am inclined to the belief that they are likely to lower their status, especially in America, if they cease to regard themselves merely as adherents to a religion and demand to be treated as a separate nation.

"The Most Intelligent of All the Peoples of the Earth."

All of which is by no means to deny that the establishment of a Jewish political community in Palestine—with the goodwill of the British and the Arabs—will in a high degree fortify the position of the Jews throughout the world. I maintain that the Jews are the most intelligent of all the peoples of the earth, and their union is certain to augment their intelligence.

Modern Jews, it is true, do not form a people in the same sense as the Spaniards, Portuguese, Danes or Swedes. They have no common language, perhaps the most important characteristic of a people. The Israelites of Palestine claim the Hebrew language as their national tongue, and are erecting a Hebrew University. The Jews of Eastern Europe insist that the Jewish-German dialect called Yiddish is to be regarded as the true national language. The Jews of Greece and Turkey, being of Spanish extraction, have still another dialect known as Ladino.

Through the colonization of Palestine no doubt all these differences of religion, language and politics will flame out in a violent polemic. But in every existing country party stands against party, and probably no people will ever surpass in intelligence the people which in time to come will be assembled in Palestine.

News from Roumania

Bucharest, May 20, 1920.

E celebration of the seventieth birthay of the President of the Order, Bro.
Kraus, took place in a manner truly
ing, under the auspices of the Board hedrin. You are probably already ied of the celebration in the "Fraas" Lodge of Bucharest. Our cele-n was made more solemn by the ice of the U. S. Minister, Hon.
es J. Vopicka, a friend of our Presiat the banquet, given in honor of the rian. The special issue of the B'nai Bulletin, published by the "Fraas" Lodge on this occasion, is a of the President, adorned with his
it. Unfortunately, I must forego rivilege of giving an abstract of the is articles contained in this paper he toasts spoken at the banquet, was attended by more than 200
I limit myself to a resume of the l impression created by the special meeting and the banquet which was on the following day. This imon was as profound as it will be last-nd equally honors the jubilarian and present, the former because of his merits in the cause of the Order, and atter for their gladsome willingness ppreciate these merits and receive ation from them.

ty-eight members were initiated as f Kraus Class" at this special ses-
This is a record even when mea-by the American standard.

provincial lodges celebrated the day equally splendid manner, and in spect "Bien" Lodge of Galatz headed hers. This Lodge is in every respect ual of "Fraternitas" Lodge. Brother
Saubergher, who, as first vice-presi-and member of the General Come, a few weeks ago had installed the s of this lodge, presented an inter-report on the activity of Galatz and on the respect which the lodges enjoy both in Jewish circles and g the authorities of the city. The Jewish elements of the city have reapplied for admission, and to bea member of the Order is considered tinction by everybody. The lodge tly collected among its members a of nearly 100,000 lei for the building ome, and will surely see its ambition ed in the near future. The celebraof the President's birthday, held by odge, was reported in a local Rouan paper of high standing, which may ken as proof of both the interest in affair and the high standing of the in the municipal life. During the l meeting held as part of the celeon, twenty-seven members were ind as "Adolf Kraus Class.'

bbi Margulies, as spokesman of the ted candidates, expressed the appre-
n of the new members in an address created a profound impression.
meeting was followed by a banquet
venty-three covers in the lodge room
, for the occasion, had been taste-decorated with the Roumanian tri-
, the stars and stripes and a Zionist which Theodore Herzl, at the second Congress had presented to the Rouan delegates, while the energetic tary of the lodge, Bro. Sigmund ehrmann, had furnished the splendid ric illumination. Witty toasts, eulo-of the jubilarian, poetical contribu-
, reminiscences of the older members, wed in quick succession and inspired audience, which will carry these mions into the regular activity of the r.

ually dignified and inspiring was the ration in the Menorah Lodge of ra, N. Brother Dr. V. Daniel, the ident of the lodge, placed it with one into the center of local Jewish organ-ons, and the Kraus celebration grew an "event" in the life of the city.
n the initiative of this lodge, which ys took an active interest in Palesn affairs, an avenue of olive trees will planted by the local Zionist society alestine, which shall bear the name of lf Kraus, and with the aid of other es it is hoped to enlarge this avenue to rove. The realization of this hope nfidently looked for. At the banquet onor of the President's birthday one dred and twenty covers were laid, and a tary band furnished the music. A e followed, in which the elite of the participated. The "Adolf Kraus s," initiated on this occasion, included ve brothers.

The celebration in the "Samoil" lodge of Jassy was equally inspiring. The President celebrated the jubilarian in an address, which made a profound impression on the brethren present and filled them with a zeal which cannot fail to produce a lasting effect on the progress of the lodge. After the festival lodge meeting, seven brothers were initiated. The session was followed by a banquet in the lodge rooms in the course of which the merits of our leader were duly extolled.

The "Viitorul" lodge in Buzaeu, as a token of its appreciation of the President of the Order endowed a scholarship of 2,000 lei per annum which shall enable a worthy young man to obtain a college education. It shall be known as Adolf Kraus Scholarship. The first award shall be given in September a. c. All local brethren took part in the festival meeting and two new members were initiated.

At the festival meeting of the "Lumina" lodge in Bucharest, which was followed by a pleasant social gathering, eight brothers were initiated, as Adolf Kraus Class. Other festival meetings, followed by animated social gatherings, were held by the lodges "Progresul" in Roman and Concordia in Moinesti. Summing up my report, I may assure you, that no man was ever so generally and enthusiastically celebrated in Roumania, as was our universally esteemed President.

The District Grand Lodge held its meeting at the end of February. You also know the most important actions taken. The minutes, an abstract of which is going through the press, will be sent to you shortly. Meantime the Constitution Grand Lodge has held its meeting in Cleveland. We are looking forward with vivid interest to its actions. The propaganda for the Order cannot yet begin in earnest. We are holding committee meetings and are making preparations, but conditions are stronger than our zeal. Traveling is still beset with great difficulties and without personal appeal no effective propaganda work is possible. It will have to wait until conditions shall improve. Besides, during the last month the Jewish Community was completely occupied with the campaign for parliamentary elections, which created a feverish excitement and monopolized all interests. For the first time in history the Roumanian Jews have an opportunity to elect candidates of their own.

Ten of the twelve lodges of the district are now in full activity. The two others which had suspended their work during the war, are still dormant and it is difficult to resuscitate them. We have resolved to send a delegate to each of these two cities at the earliest possible opportunity.

District nine tendered a dinner to its honorary president, Dr. Adolphe Stern, upon his return to the country last Sunday. The affair was a brilliant success.

THE GOOD FIGHT OF FAITH.

The spirit that fights back is the normal and conquering spirit. We do not mean the spirit which is belligerent as the world understands the term, the spirit which malevolent strikes back, returns evil for evil, resists, retaliates, and brutally seeks a mastery. We mean the spirit which braces itself against a background of stern endurance and unyielding faith in self and God and by a course of resistance conquers circumstance and all the enemies of flesh and soul.

JEWS QUICKLY SETTLING IN PALESTINE.

London (J. C. B. Service).—Hundreds of Jews are weekly arriving in Palestine and find no difficulty in locating themselves on Jewish farms and finding employment on road construction, etc., according to a Jerusalem dispatch to the Times. The authorities, the dispatch adds, have ordered all official announcements to be made in Hebrew, Arabic and English.

NOTED RABBI ARRESTED BY POLES.

Information has been received here from Danzig that after the retreat of the Bolshevist forces, the Poles arrested Rabbi Moses Romer, the noted Rabbi of Garwolin.

The Pogroms in Poland

Extracts of Sir Stuart Samuel's Report

Sir Stuart Samuel's report on his mission to Poland on behalf of the British Government was issued as a White Paper (Cd. No. 674) of thirty-six pages last Saturday. Sir Stuart's report occupies only twelve of the pages, and concludes with the following recommendations:

1. That the Polish Government be urged to carry out the clauses of the Minority Treaty of June 28, 1919, in a spirit of sympathy with its Jewish subjects. A State can only be strong when all sections of its inhabitants are working unitedly and in mutual confidence for its welfare.
2. That a genuine and not a "masked" equality be accorded to the Jewish population of Poland.
3. That all outrages against the person or property of the subject, irrespective of religion or race, should be promptly punished and the names of the delinquents published. This latter action is especially necessary, inasmuch as the State does not punish out of revenge, but as a deterrent to others.
4. That Jews in East Galicia be restored to their official positions in the same manner as non-Jews have been.
5. That Jewish railway officials and employes be restored to their posts in the same manner as non-Jews have been.
6. That no restrictions should be placed upon the number of Jews admitted to the universities.
7. That a decree be published declaring boycotts illegal, and ordering all publications advocating boycott to be suspended.
8. That all prisoners in internment camps be brought to immediate trial, and that humane treatment be assured to all interned prisoners.
9. That facilities be afforded for the introduction of new industries into Poland with a view to converting a larger proportion of the Jewish population into producers.
10. That the British Government should assist Jews wishing to emigrate from Poland by providing facilities to proceed to countries such as Palestine, Canada, South Africa, Algeria, and South America, or any other country desiring to receive them.
11. That banks be established possessing the confidence of the Jewish public, so that money might be deposited therein instead of being carried on the person or concealed in dwellings.
12. That the desirability of a secretary who understands and speaks Yiddish being added to the staff of his Majesty's Legation at Warsaw be considered.

"Military Murder."

Sir Stuart states that he has not embodied in his report any matters which he was not able to investigate personally. He explains that in England the word "pogrom" has become associated with "Excesses organized by the Government against a portion of the population, or when the authorities took no steps to restrain those perpetrating the excesses, or intervened at a period too late to be effective in preventing the loss of human life."

In that sense there were pogroms in Lida and Vilna. The awful massacre at Pinsk, he says, partook more of the character of a military murder. In Cracow and Lodz a certain number of Jews were assaulted, but the military authorities endeavored to restrict the action of the soldiers as much as possible. The gendarmerie has almost unlimited powers, and is in the habit of entering houses, chiefly of Jews, and robbing and beating the inmates. "This is done quite openly, and the Jews have no means of redress." With the exception of Minsk, no pogroms occurred during the stay of either the American or the British Mission.

The Effect of Yiddish.

The 3,000,000 Jews of Poland and Galicia are classified by Sir Stuart as follows:

Assimilators.
Zionists.
Orthodox.

There are, doubtless, many Orthodox among the Zionists. They speak Yiddish, and Sir Stuart remarks:

"The fact of their language being akin to German often led to their being employed during the German occupation in preference to other Poles. This circumstance caused the Jews to be accused of having had business relations with the Germans. Almost as soon as the Polish Government was established ill-feeling became manifest against the Jews."

This led to a boycott. Jewish doctors are unable to obtain posts in hospitals, Jews cannot secure appointments as post-office officials, teachers, on the railway, etc. There is a limitation of Jewish students in the universities. There are few officers in the army. Sir Stuart could find no proof that Jews were discriminated against in the markets, but there is a systematic attempt, he avers, to oust Jews from their trades. A severe private, social and commercial boycott of Jews exists among the people generally. In Lemberg a so-called Social court, presided over by M. Przyluski, summoned persons having trade relations with Jews to explain their conduct. Sir Stuart quotes a Polish newspaper announcement stating in the form of a funeral notice that a Polish Countess sold her property to Jews. He thinks the Government could greatly restrain the virulence of this movement.

Jews in Business.

Initiative in business is almost entirely the prerogative of the Jewish population, but the fallacious idea is prevalent that it is possible to transfer a large percentage of the business to other hands. Sir Stuart found it to be a fact that the Jewish Pole commands greater trust than his neighbors; nearly the whole of the estate agents for the Polish nobility are Jews:

"The real interest of the Polish State would seem to be rather in the direction of developing and encouraging the export business hitherto carried on by Jews; in this way lies almost the sole hope of the economic regeneration of Poland and of the rehabilitation of its depreciated currency. . . . A further remedy for the congestion of occupation would be to introduce into Poland new industries for which Jews in other countries have evinced special aptitude. . . . It is for the Poles to choose whether they will follow the example of Great Britain, the United States, France, Holland, Italy, and the other liberal-minded States which have treated the Jew equitably, or link their fate with ancient Egypt, mediaeval Spain, and modern Russia."

Bolshevism.

On the question of Bolshevism, Sir Stuart says, the real danger is to be sought in other directions than among the Jews. If the Polish Government would grant the Jews a genuine, and not a masked equality, they would secure the support of the most conservative, law-abiding and loyal section of the population. Sir Stuart estimates that only ten per cent of the Jews are Bolshevik, "a considerably less proportion than characterizes the population as a whole." It is not at all unusual for Polish peasants to avail themselves of the Rabbis' Arbitration Courts. A large emigration of Jews would result in a great decrease in the productive powers of Poland.

Sir Stuart then goes into details of the pogroms. There is no need to repeat what is only too painfully familiar. He describes a dramatic incident in the Pinsk murders. After a number of Jews had been shot and buried, others were taken to the cemetery and ordered to reopen the grave. Then they were placed in a row and soldiers leveled their rifles. One of the prisoners, an elderly Jew, prayed in a loud voice, "O Lord, forgive Thy servants. Thou art powerful to save even now." The words were no sooner out of his mouth than a man came to the gendarme in command and whispered something to him. He ordered the prisoners to fill up the grave again, and they were taken to prison.

Major Luczynski and Lieutenant Landsberg, who were in command, have not been punished. Sir Stuart endeavored to see the Major, but failed. Sir Stuart sets forth the evidence he heard, and speaks of numerous cases of Jews being assaulted and robbed in railway trains and their beards cut. Nearly all these outrages were perpotrated by soldiers. Sir Stuart estimates that at least 348 lives were lost.

Captain Wright's Report.

Captain Wright, who accompanied Sir Stuart, adds a separate and longer report. Part deals with history. It speaks of the "assimilated Jews" as "the highest class of Jews, and who are Polish in the same way as the best kind of Jews in England are English." Captain Wright points out

(Continued on page 16.)

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

HALF of the tragedies, great and small, in the lives of men arise through misunderstandings. Perspicuous as we may endeavor to make ourselves, our neighbors scent mystery. Whatever is short of their own way is suspected, magnified, misconceived. The mien cannot be made transparent enough. Words, obviously clear, cannot be too clear. How many battles have been fought over words! A famous theological controversy has turned about an "i" added or subtracted. Among ourselves we Jews are divided on the force of "the" against "a" prefixed to so simple a word as "home." Jews and Christians elbow each other in the marts of life. How little they know of each other! The antipathy of our neighbors to ourselves may be due to envy or race antagonism. Let us by no means minimize the religious difference. Taken at its lowest, it means that the Jews killed the founder. In a more sublimated form, it amounts to our failure to recognize him. It is there that the great misunderstanding occurred, fraught with dire consequences to generations to come.

What was it that actually took place in those far-off days? The church, the early church at that, magnified the original misunderstanding, whatever it was. That we may take for granted. As the body of disciples and their small following became estranged from the large mass of their people, as proselytes were made from amongst the Greeks to whom the inner quarrel had to be made understandable in their own way, the more the constitution of the church emerged as a separate religious body, the more glorified the founder had become, the darker became the background, the greater the misunderstanding. Even the earliest writings fail to present it in its true light. But we shall not presume to judge ourselves, lest it be said that we are prejudiced. I have before me a volume on "The Beginnings of Christianity" by two eminent Christian scholars assisted by a number of other specialists, only one of whom is a Jew. It is remarkable how all of them, even the Jew (Mr. Montefiore), have striven to be fair to Judaism. Let us submit ourselves to their guidance to get at the root of that ancient misunderstanding.

Jesus came to be a founder of a new religion as things gradually developed long after his death, but he neither contemplated this step, nor did he command his disciples to announce anything concerning him—for instance, that he was the Messiah—or to baptize in his name. Even in the earliest account, whose theme is the proof that Jesus was the Messiah, he appears as a preacher, calling people to repentance because of the speedy approach of the Kingdom of God. Neither of these two things was something new or foreign to the Jewish mind. Nor were they used by the preacher in any novel sense. "The practical meaning of 'repent' was probably the same in his mind and that of his Jewish contemporaries—a change of conduct." Repentance is the Hebrew Teshubah, which ought to be familiar to every Jew in this sacred month which opens with the ten days of repentance. The call to repentance, or rather as the Hebrew word properly connotes, to a return, to a turning away from all the things that estrange man from God and a coming back to God, just as wayward children might return to their father. The call to a restoration of right relations between man and God was on the lip of every prophet and every preacher, and our liturgy on the Day of Atonement is replete with constant admonition to the sinner to return. "Make us come back unto Thee with a most perfect return," is our daily prayer thrice repeated. It means a return to the service of God and to the law commanded by God. 'The standard required by Jesus, as by the scribes, was the law." He never abandoned the law; he brought it back to its first principles. The piety of his disciples was to be more, not less, than that of the Pharisees, who were, it is true, punctilious in trifles, but only because they recognized the importance of small things as a fence about the weighty matters. The rabbis themselves were critical of their own men. None would have sacrificed inwardness. The rigorist morality of the Galilean would have commended itself to them.

And when he said that the kingdom of God was coming, he meant nothing more and nothing less than what it means in our own prayer book, ascending as it does to those ancient times in which that preacher lived. What is it that we pray for at the end of all our prayers? That the sovereignty of the one God, now recognized by us, may speedily be accepted by all mankind; "that the world may be set right, perfected through the kingdom of God." What is that we fervently yearn for in our liturgy on New Year's day and the Day of Atonement? That Zion be restored and the Davidic kingdom be renewed? Quite so. But also that all mankind may be formed into one league, to do God's will with a perfect heart. What is the jubilant cry we utter on New Year's day? "The Lord reigneth." The sovereignty of God means that His holy will is paramount, that there is but one line of conduct which He would have men follow, and to the extent that they follow that line of conduct they acknowledge Him to be their Master, Lord, King, Sovereign. So long as there are sinners in the world, aye, among His own people, so long as abroad the worship of idols, of error, of sin continues, the full sovereignty of God is impaired. Its full force is therefore a hope for the future, for the age to come. Remember, it is not conversion of the world to certain beliefs, dogmas, ceremonies, religions as we call them. It is the conversion to religion.

The impression which the teaching of Jesus made upon his hearers, we are told by the eminent authors, was somewhat as follows: "He tells us that the new age is close at hand in which God's sovereignty will be supreme. He warns us to repent that we may have life in the coming age, and explains the nature of God's sovereignty. He is a prophet, and unlike the scribes he does not appeal to tradition, but he does not talk about himself." Exactly, he did not talk about himself. All the attributes of Messiahship, sonship of God, sonship of man, came to be applied to him in the sequel. In the face of "much modern writing" we are assured in the book before me that Jesus taught nothing about God that was essentially new to Jewish ears. "The God of Jesus is the God of the Jews, about whom he says nothing which cannot be paralleled in Jewish literature." "Many rabbis, then and afterwards, were inspired by the vision of the age to come, and awed by the difficulty of attaining it."

But we are told that there were three important differences. In the first place, he taught non-resistance to oppressors. That brought him into collision with the patriot party that demanded war with Rome. Then he consorted with publicans and sinners and offered them the entry into the kingdom of God through repentance. Not that the rabbis denied them this privilege: only with the rabbis it meant attention to the ceremonial part of religion, like washing of the hands, etc. "There is much for scholars to admire in the rabbinical teaching of the law. At its best it is the recognition that knowledge is one of the roads which leads to life; but at its worst it is, as Jesus said, the 'tithing of mint and anise and cummin'; the prostitution of life to learning." And lastly, Jesus emphasized the principle rather than the letter of the law, which led on the one hand to a more lenient interpretation of Sabbath observance, and on the other to a more rigorous conception of marriage and divorce. Here again the Pharisees often modified the intent of the law, only that they insisted that they were fulfilling the letter seemingly. At any rate the slighting of learning and the character of interpretation applied to the law brought about the conflict with the religious authorities of the day.

That was then, all told, the great misunderstanding between Jesus and his contemporaries. Surely the points of agreement outweigh the disagreements. We frequently hear among Christians the call for a return to the religion of Jesus, recognizing of course how his teaching was distorted or relegated to the background during the history of the church. But "back to Jesus" would show forth all that linked the Galilean to his people. He might quarrel with this or that rabbi, or even with the system in vogue in his days. But in all essentials, in all that constituted the very highest piety, he was at one with the rabbis, and the rabbis with him. Would that Christendom would undertake this journey back to its fountainhead. It would then perhaps also discover how very near to each other synagogue and church are even in their latter-day developments. The world being threatened by a pernicious denial all the groundwork upon which Judai and Christianity rest. They must uni their spiritual forces to fight the comm enemy. Surely that one great misunde standing, now revealed in its true pr portions, should not stand in the way.

Report From Germany

By Dr. Alfred Goldschmidt

THE anti-Semitic movement in Germany has lately concentrated its agitation against our Order. Its organs, including every gutter sheet, started a drive as if on a signal given from headquarters. The most favorite form of these attacks is a series of letters in the "editor's mail box" of the little sheets, published in our suburban villages. The editor camouflages his attacks with a pretense of impartiality and can give to every kind of meanness the right of way. The German district is charged with having plotted in common with the lodges of other countries to create sentiment hostile to Germany and thus to have caused the ruin of the fatherland. An additional trick is the claim that our Order is a branch of the masonic organization, which is controlled by the Jews. The president of our district, Dr. Timendorfer, created a test case and instituted proceedings against one of these sheets, the "Muenchener Beobachter," with the result that its editor was sentenced for libel to a fine of 500 marks or fifty days in prison. In addition he was compelled to publish the sentence in several papers.

One of the lowest of these anti-Semitic sheets obtained a copy of the "Addresses and Essays on the I. O. B. B.," by our late Brother Maretzki, and publishes regularly a few disconnected sentences from addresses, delivered at the District Grand Lodge conventions. It has so far not forged or distorted the passages, but the insidious object is that, seeing these fragments published in an anti-semitic organ, the reader will look in the plainest statement for some suggestion of hidden meaning and for concealed hints, for it is obvious that such a sheet cannot intend to spread the ethical principles of our Order among its readers.

At the latest elections for the Reichstag the extremists of the right and the left gained at the expense of the Democratic party. We have to interpret this fact as a synonym of discontent with the existing political and economic situation of Germany. The strengthening of the reactionary parties means an ascendancy of anti-Semitism in public life. The socialist parties take no part in the government because they will not cooperate with the conservatives. The latter consists of two sections, the German Nationalists and the German People's Party. Of these, only the last named is represented in the government, together with the Catholics and the Democrats. The German People's Party is not officially anti-Semitic, but some of its districts and factions are strongly imbued with anti-Semitism. It is possible however, that the need of cooperation with the moderate parties and the fear of socialism will work towards an abatement of anti-Semitic proclivities, and not all the buds on the anti-Semitic tree will mature into fruits. One thing is certain, there is plenty of work ahead for the organizations which have the combating of anti-Semitism for their object.

The employment bureau of the federated Jewish organizations of Germany, whose activity is mainly devoted to the care for Russian and Polish refugees, has a large field of activity before it. Our office facilities are by no means adequate to cope with the rush of applicants for work.

The leaders of the so-called neutral Jewish young people's societies met recently in Eisenach to deliberate on the principles of common action. The enthusiasm, a privilege of youth with which they approach their task, is highly gratifying. They proclaim their object as the desire to become better than their environment, which is infected with materialism and selfishness; they are working for self-improvement through a religious revival. These ideals were presented in a brilliant and impressive address by Dr. Gustav Loeffler, a young physician from Fran fort-on-the-Main. He knows how to carr his audience with him and to provide with solid facts for their guidance. "San tify yourselves" is the slogan of this orga ization, and everything noble is divin One prominent object is sexual moralit with the devise: "Keep your blood pure In Hanover a Society of Action was e tablished with the purpose of bringin these objects to realization. This societ also organized a scout movement. Hik in the open country shall bring membe into closer union and enable them to b come familiar with their ideals. "W shall make it a fact." This is the closin appeal of one of these scouts in the bull tin of the organization. We welcome th spirit as highly promising of good result

I shall close my report with a comforti prospect. It would be wrong to see on forces of hostility in the interdenomin tional relations of German citizens. society, called "Volkskraftbund," w organized under the leadership of the cel brated poet, Bruno Wille, with the obje of combining the highest talents of t German nation and among its objects the combating of anti-Semitism. Asi from leaflets, which were distributed thousands of copies, the society has pu lished a book, entitled: "German Spi and Jew-hatred," which is in the main collection of views of celebrities on t Jewish question. With the exception a few unsympathetic views, most of t authorities included, plead for justice the Jews and commend their merits in t work of civilization with full justice.

WORK AMONG THE FALASHAS AN THE JEWS OF ABYSSINIA.

Dr. Jacques Faitlovich, who left t latter part of 1919 in order to initiate ed cational and religious work among t Jews, reports that he has made satisfacto arrangements with the Italian Colon Government in Eritrea for his expediti into Abyssinia. He has also secured fr the Ethiopian Government permission enter the interior. It is his intention af visiting several of the Falasha settleme to send a full report of the present situati among this group of our co-religionis After remaining in the interior until ab the end of October, Dr. Faitlovitch expe to go to Addis-Abeba, the capitol Abyssinia, in order to secure author to undertake various tasks. By the e of the year he expects to return to Asma in the Italian Colony and to begin t construction of a normal school for t purpose of training young Falashas become teachers in religious and secu subjects among their people. Dr. Fa lovitch is being assisted by two Falas young men, who had been receiving the past two years an European educati and also by two European teachers, one whom is a physician who will adminis medical aid to the natives. Dr. Fait vitch is extremely hopeful that he will ab'e to accomplish a great deal of good behalf of these isolated Abyssinian Je

HAIFA TECHNICAL COLLEGE.

The famous Haifa Technical Colle which was acquired by the Zionist org ization last February, through Jacob Schiff who contributed 640,000 ma for its purchase, will be re-opened in fall of 1921, after being closed through the war, according to the report. connection with the college, a techni Hebrew dictionary is being prepar containing all present Hebrew scienti terms, as well as new terms, where it necessary to create them. This mo mental work is planned to be complet in a year with five Hebrew scholars c laborating on it.

On the Passion Play

By Irene E. Sobeloff

NG in Buffalo a few weeks ago, behooved me to do as all natives and ıers in Buffalo do—to see the on Play," which is there the event decade. It is given to celebrate ftieth anniversary of the establish- of Canisius College.

ticularly at this time when the ive campaign of the Anti-Defama- eague and other agencies is being , it is natural that a Jew should to know what attitude is taken d the Jew in this presentation of performances, playing to approxi- y three thousand people at every ion. I came away convinced that ıe course for us Jews to pursue is to not tearfully and timorously, but ously and systematically, the tre- ous spread of anti-Semitism that to have blinded an otherwise reasonable world.

lay, presented not only as religion, history also, by college men possess- ıe intelligence for proper interpreta- under the direction of college in- ors of acknowledged learning and ity—what is more inevitable than he audience should carry away with the impression that the play intends avey? And the patent motive is to y the Jewish "church" as displaying ost extreme narrowness, and desiring ce its people to its own bigoted views, power that is determined to destroy ho oppose it.

play opens propitiously. The ation of Christ as "King of The " promises to dispel some of the dices already established in the of the spectators, when they realize their Christ was born and lived a It soon becomes evident, however, the emphasis is on the "King," not e "Jews," and that the title is only as a red rag to flaunt in the face of l, then king, who would naturally t the idea of any successor other than wn son.

efly, the plot begins with the attempts erod to destroy the infant born in ehem. Dathian and Ammon, spies e ruler, set out on an errand of slaugh- f every infant in the land, to make n that the one child does not escape. urse he does. After the death of the Herod, and the exile into which the asure of Rome has sent the younger, ersecution of the Nazarene is left to ewish Council of Priests, and particu- to Caiaphas, the high priest.

e priests hold council, resulting in the nce of death to Christ. Dathian, serving Caiaphas, persuades the dis- Judas to deliver Jesus into the hands e priests for silver offered by them. plans prosper. Jesus is taken.

ally, the second Herod, on his return wer, promises to the disciple Matthew, Jechonias, most venerated man in the n, to release their master. Through has he is influenced then to turn over to Pontius Pilate, the Roman nor. He himself refuses to raise his against him. Pontius Pilate is ready e Christ on the testimony of Matthew Jechonias, but for the intervention of phas again, and the mob incited by phas. Pilate must helplessly carry he letter of the Jewish law. That is greement made by Rome. And the sh law says that, should he desire to on a prisoner, the populace has the to select the man to be freed. They se Barrabas, a murderer, jeering st, much against the exhortations of e, who pleads with them not to make the murderer of Jesus, innocent. Jews and their priests are inexorable. crucifixion takes place. The skies in or darken and storm, and the temple ıe Jews, in just punishment, "is con- nated."

das, remorseful, realizes the enormity is crime, committed for thirty pieces lver. Rejected by all, he turns hope- for shelter to Dathian, his tempter, spurns and denounces him. Then s flings back at him the money earned is deceit, and in despair hangs himself.

he final triumph for the followers of st is complete when Pontius Pilate s himself upon his knees, and begs to accepted by the disciples and taught teachings of their master.

o you note who is responsible always? phas, high priest of the Jews! For a t space, during Christ's infancy, od is the moving spirit of the persecutions, but since his hatred is inspired by fear of the usurpation of his throne, his enmity is the forgivable selfishness of self-preservation. Yet when the life of Christ is actually in his hands, he, the one man to fear the influence of Christ and to desire his destruction, refuses to injure him. It remains for the priests with no such excuse as their own safety, relentlessly to act the spies, the persecutors, the prejudiced judges, the tempters, the instigators of the mob, and the ruthless murderers.

There are only two good actors: Judas and Pilate. They are shrewdly chosen! Judas—poor Judas—in a moment of weakness, allows himself to be made the tool of the tool of the priests. His bitter remorse, his undeserved rejection at the hands of Dathian who caused his fall, make of Judas a hero who has been victimized by a despicable, unscrupulous, tempter, who bought him with the silver of the Jewish church. Always the Jewish church! With what relish the players cast the blame on the Jewish church! How much more effective to portray Judas, after all a disciple who left home and wealth for Christ, as the wronged instead of the wrong-doer, more to be pitied than censured—and to make the priests, who completely denied Christ, the inspiration of the deed, and hence the objects of hatred! Clever acting is required to draw tears for Judas, and the best actor in the caste of five hundred players is assigned to the role.

The only other good performer is Pontius Pilate. He too is wisely selected. Why should any smirch be permitted to stain the name of Rome, seat of the Christian religion from its beginning? Powerful pleading for the accused, strong invective against the infamous judges, denunciation of the ruthless Jewish mob, so that Rome may be freed of all blame—these require a strong actor.

The rest of the players are amateurish. They can afford to be. The purpose of the play is accomplished. The Jewish church is responsible for Christ's death. Rome is exonerated. What more is there for the Passion Play to do?

However much or however little we adhere to the forms of our religion, we respect the wisdom of the rabbis. We give consideration to the opinions of a teacher. And so these thousands who witness the play at Canisius College come away with the feeling that they at last have gotten, from an indisputable source, the true history of the event, and with a deep conviction that the religion and the religious organization of the Jews is a strong evil pact, a menace to the civilization of the world, that the Jewish doctrines consist of hatred, treacherous dealing, despotic enforcement of conformity to the opinions of the heads of the temples and synagogues, instead of the beautiful creeds of love and faith taught in their own churches.

Small wonder that the European nations are to this day permitted to revel in pogroms unmolested, and that the Jews in Europe have been criticized for merely being contented at the victories of the "Red" army, which temporarily distracted the attention of these nations from more butchering of the Jews. Nothing startling in the recent assertion of Huszar, former Hungarian premier, that the slightest harm to him here will result in instant death to fifty thousand Jews in Hungary. A world fed on the passion dealt out in Passion Plays can see the destruction of the whole Jewish race and smack its lips. The one salvation lies in the fact that few localities essay so pretentious an undertaking as the rendering of so "holy" a play.

This is no time to continue the timeworn Jewish plaint: "We have been reviled, cast aside, spat upon, through all the ages, but we suffer nobly. They may crush and persecute us, but our spirit never dies." Of what use for the spirit to live on, while lives are being taken because of just such misrepresentation as the play portrays? Because of this type of teaching, the Poles, Hungarians, Roumanians, and other nations vent their spite, nineteen hundred years old, on the Jew, without intervention by the allied nations. These fly to the aid of Poland when threatened by an outside enemy, but failed to assist the Jews in Poland against a bigoted, rapacious majority. Our government feels constrained to pledge support to Poland. Authenticated stories of atrocities committed there against the Jews evoked no official protest from the United States.

The concentrated effort of all agencies active in fighting this tornado of anti-Semitism will prevent duplication. Cooperation and system will save us time, effort, and funds, and will prove more effective. And one way to overcome the effect produced by an incident modified and elaborated through almost two thousand years of prejudice is to present to the world clearly and unmistakably the picture of the horrors invented by a modern Europe in retribution for the false and ancient traditional wrong. These scenes must be presented in so forceful a manner, that the Christian and pagan world will wince at the realization of its own unspeakable brutality.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR APPOINTED BY DISTRICT GRAND LODGE No. 2.

District Grand Lodge No. 2 has appointed Jacob B. Krohngold of Akron, Ohio, its Executive Director, whose duties will be in the nature of Field Secretary. His activity will be principally devoted to propaganda work, giving publicity to the interests of the Order and toward retaining and increasing the membership throughout the district, social service work, and Anti-Defamation League service. He will visit all lodges in the district, making necessary surveys of local activities, helping to accomplish them, and making suggestions. He will give special attention to lodges showing lethargy and want of activities. He is to visit all penal institutions in each state of the district and render such service as possible to inmates. He will also visit all philanthropic institutions of the district, such as The Cleveland Orphans' Home, Denver Hospital for Consumptives, and Leon N. Levi Hospital at Little Rock. He will carry forward campaign work of the Anti-Defamation League. He will cover the field under the direction of President Samuel Rosenfeld of District Grand Lodge No. 2, and will make his headquarters at St. Louis, Mo. The appointment of an Executive Director is a new plan of District No. 2 and no doubt will be watched with interest by all other American districts.

COMMUNICATED.

Kansas City Lodge, No. 184,
Kansas City, Mo.

Editor, B'nai B'rith News:

I request the publication of the following in the next issue of the B. B. News:

Notice to Lodge Secretaries.

Henry Langsner, alias Harry Lang, heavy-set, light-haired, fair-looking, over six feet tall, with a deep gash cut on face, formerly a member of Ephraim Lodge of Philadelphia, is wanted in Kansas City. If located he should be held pending telegraphic communication with Albert Lipper, Secretary of Kansas City Lodge, No. 184, I. O. B. B., 3240 Harrison St., Kansas City, Missouri.

This man is wanted here in Kansas City for a serious offense and the police are looking for him. It develops that after imposing upon the generosity and friendship of the local lodge and having been helped out of a possible prison sentence of several years and also receiving financial aid which has not been repaid, he pulled off a hold-up job on a woman that he escorted in an automobile.

JACK WEINBERGER,
President.

MENORAH LODGE, CARUTHERSVILLE, MO.

At a meeting of Menorah Lodge, No. 832, held on Sunday, July 4, the officers for the ensuing term were elected.

The lodge, although comparatively in its infancy, has a membership of fifty-nine and has, during its short term of existence, distributed over $600 for charitable and philanthropic purposes.

The lodge is planning to invite speakers of nearby cities to address Jews of surrounding communities on "Jewish Work and Jewish Problems" at public meetings to be held. The first of such public meetings will take place in September. Rabbi Rothstein of Pine Bluff will be the speaker.

FORREST CITY, ARK.

The seventh annual picnic under the auspices of Barnett Lodge, No. 754, of Forrest City, Ark., was held on July 18, 1920.

The affair was largely attended and proved most enjoyable to all those who participated.

ENGLISH REPRESENTATIVES INVESTIGATE HUNGARIAN POGROM.

London (J. C. B. Service).—At the instance of the Joint Foreign Committee of organized British Jewry, the British High Commissioner in Budapest, Johnston, together with General Gordon, visited Debreczin in order to investigate the pogrom which is supposed to have taken place in that city. The investigators have now reported that Rabbi Kraus of that city handed them a letter to Chief Rabbi Hertz of England in which he denied that a pogrom had taken place in that city, although he admitted that anti-Semitic placards and demonstrations had taken place in which two Jews were killed. The Joint Foreign Committee acknowledging the report states that at this moment no Jew in Hungary who values his life dares tell the truth as to what is happening in Hungary.

MR. FORD FLIVVERS.

Henry Ford got himself into a nice tub of pickles by permitting anti-Jewish propaganda to ramp about in his weekly paper, the Dearborn Independent. The Jewish people all over America resent the series of articles, which they contend are animated by the same group, or at least by the same type of group, which is now trying in Europe to blame everything onto the Jews.

This desire to make race hatreds a convenient safety valve for the wrath of the people crops up again and again in human history. If there is profiteering and war-millionairing in Europe—why, it is the Jews who are to blame, of course. They are the profiteers. If Bolshevism arises, why, it is the Jews who are to blame, of course. They are the Bolsheviki. If there are pogroms, and Jewish people are killed, there is no doubt that it was the Jews who did the killing.

So convenient a device for carrying away the wrath of the people naturally arouses the enthusiasm of those who fear democracy and the coming of real thought. This device cannot get far in America so far as the Jews are concerned. The Jewish people are so firmly a part of the history of America, and hold such tremendously important positions in American life, that it is impossible for the pogrom spirit ever to get started here.

But there are other races in America not so immune from manifestations of the pogrom spirit. We all know what race is blamed for everything in the southern states, and—under our breath—we some of us know what race is blamed for everything on the Pacific coast. —[Evening News, San Jose, California.

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE EXTENDS WORK.

Adolf Kraus, president of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, has just issued a circular letter to the members, asking for contributions towards the expansion of the work of the Anti-Defamation League of the Order.

The league has been in existence for seven years, and has for its purpose the elimination of the causes of prejudice and the defamation of the Jew. Its work has been conducted along dignified lines, and it has accomplished a great deal in abolishing the caricaturing of the Jew on the stage, in motion pictures and in the press.

It is now proposed to expand the league's activities. "Anti-Semitism cannot be cured by threats and force. It can only be cured by reason and justice," said Mr. Kraus in his message to the recently held Constitution Grand Lodge convention. "Are we, or our children after us, in any danger in this country?" he asks. "I think not, but it is well to remember that public opinion is plastic."

POLISH SOCIALISTS ARE ALARMED BY ANTI-JEWISH OUTBREAKS.

Warsaw (J. C. B. Service).—Alarmed by the dangerous proportions which the anti-Jewish outbreaks in this country are assuming, the Executive of the Polish Socialist Party called a special meeting of the Party Council to consider measures for combating these excesses.

A Busy Season in District No. 4

By I. J. Ascchheim

SINCE the return of the delegates from Cleveland, the General Committee, a majority of whom attended the General Convention, granted three new charters; namely,

San Jose Lodge, No. 868, at San Jose, Calif., Modesto Lodge, No. 869, at Modesto, Calif.; Long Beach Lodge, No. 869, at Long Beach, Calif.

San Jose Lodge was instituted by President L. M. Mendelsohn on July 17 and Modesto Lodge received its charter on July 25. Long Beach is to be instituted September 29, when President Mendelsohn will pay his respects to all the lodges in Southern California.

San Jose Lodge, No. 868, begins its existence with a membership of about ninety, while Modesto has enrolled upon its roster about sixty names.

San Jose is one of our oldest communities, and, for forty years, harbored Ariel Lodge, No. 248. One by one the old pioneers were laid to rest, while their descendants branched out either in San Francisco or in Los Angeles. The result was a decided diminution in the strength of Ariel Lodge, and, with it came a general apathy. Intermittent efforts were made to resuscitate the organization, but without avail, until finally the loyal remnant was compelled to surrender the charter. A pause set in and San Jose, for about two years, as far as Jewish affairs went, was non-existent. Suddenly there came a change, as in the course of events it was bound to come. A new element began to pour into the thriving city, which is located in the center of the greatest prune industry in the United States, where an acre of land is valued by the thousands. This new community being greatly stimulated by the seething B'nai B'rith activities in the neighboring city of Oakland, became infected. A temporary organization was formed by Brother Lionel Wachs, President of Oakland Lodge, and a charter applied for.

The institution of the lodge was a gala event. The large charter list, reinforced by great numbers from San Francisco and Oakland, made up an audience of about two hundred. The initiation was conducted with precision and to the manner born, by the initiatory team of Oakland Lodge, with Brother Matt Wahrhaftig, a prominent young attorney in the chair. Following the initiation, the President of the District, Brother Mendelsohn, installed the lodge and its officers in the form prescribed by the ritual. There is absolutely no reason why the lodge should not flourish and become a pillar of the jurisdiction. It has all the natural advantages of economic prosperity, climate and an intelligent population. Some day some bright young rabbinical graduate may find a pulpit awaiting him in the old historic Shuhl. The vacancy has lasted long enough.

Modesto is similarly lucky, though of new development. A thriving city of about eighteen thousand, it is located in the center of the richest and most diversified agricultural district in the granary of California, known as the San Joaquin (San Waukeen) Valley. This is its first attempt at organizing; consequently there opens to the membership altogether a new vista. Until now the Jewish population of Modesto, as all other small communities do, displayed a sublime indifference to Jewish events and to Jewish solidarity, but that, it is hoped, will now change. They have voluntarily decided to enlist among those who watch the signs of the times, and will no longer be found wanting, when called upon, to do their share of thinking and acting, for Jewry at large. As sponsor for Modesto Lodge stands Hope Lodge, No. 126, at Stockton, California another beehive of young B'nai B'rith enthusiasts. Their initiatory team, with Brother Harold Hirsch at the head, performed the initiation in faultless style. All the cities mentioned are on the famous California highways, and it involves no more than a pleasant joy-ride, for any San Franciscan to visit their lodges. It remains to be added that on both occasions, Brother Lucius L. Solomons was the orator of the day. Sufficient therefore to infer that the candidates went home properly equipped for all future duties as B'nai B'rith.

Long Beach Lodge when instituted will be the child of Los Angeles Lodge, whose glory is concentrated in such men as Brother M. J. Finkenstein, second Vice President of the district, Brothers Louis Cole, the District Deputy; H. W. Frank, with an honorable B'nai B'rith record; S. G. Marshutz, a loyal Past President of many years standing, Marco R. Newmark, the indefatigable President of the lodge; Maurice Salzman, a man deserving of an honorable B'nai B'rith career, David S. Hamburger, the scion of a B'nai B'rith family, and the nephew of the distinguished Julius Bien, and, finally, the young and energetic Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin. All these men are of transcendant quality and high standing in the southern metropolis. By their example and influence, they have built up Los Angeles Lodge to a thousand strong.

Long Beach is one of the noted tourist resorts of Southern California and has a population of a leisure class. The lodge should engage in all sorts of altruistic work, if for no other purpose than to put in their time.

After this, there will be but very few towns left in California with Jewish population large enough to make them the focus of the General Committee.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF JEPHTHA LODGE.

An event long to be remembered in Paterson, N. J., took place on May 18, when Jephtha Lodge, No. 143, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with a golden jubilee celebration.

The lodge has increased its membership more than two hundred per cent within a few months. It came out in full strength to participate in the celebration and to enjoy high-class entertainment and listen to a number of prominent speakers.

The principal address was delivered by Mr. David Bortin, of Philadelphia, President of District Grand Lodge No. 3. He was followed by a number of other visiting Grand Lodge officers.

THE INSTITUTION OF OIL CITY LODGE.

Oil City Lodge, No. 865, was organized and instituted in Oil City, Pa., on Sunday afternoon, June 6, with a charter membership of fifty.

The credit for the organization of this new lodge is due to Brother Jos. S. Cohen of Butler, Pa.

The work of initiation and institution of the lodge, as well as the installation of officers, was conducted by Brothers Morris Shaffner, First Vice-President of the District, and Marcus Feuchtwanger, Past President of the District Grand Lodge.

A class of forty-three candidates was initiated as charter members of the lodge.

The new lodge has our best wishes and we look forward with confidence toward good B'nai B'rith work in that community.

DENVER, COLO.

Two public meetings were held under the auspices of Denver Lodge, No. 171, on June 27, 1920, in its regular lodge rooms.

In the morning, at 10 o'clock, a business meeting of the lodge was held, during which a large class of candidates was initiated.

In the evening, at 8 o'clock, a patriotic meeting, consisting of a Flag Day celebration, a musical program and social hour, was most successfully carried out.

The meeting was open to the public and was well attended by the members and their families.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

A B'nai B'rith picnic under the auspices of Minnesota Lodge, No. 157, of St. Paul, Minn., was held at Excelsior Villa on Sunday, August 1, 1920.

Those who made the journey by automobiles assembled at Rice Park and proceeded in a body to the picnic grounds. The Entertainment Committee arranged an excellent program of lively sports consisting of baseball games, fishing and boating.

JEWISH ORGAN APPEALS FOR CORK MAYOR.

London (J. C. B. Service).—The Jewish World, a popular weekly appearing in English, in its issue of yesterday vigorously demands the release of MacSwiney, the Irish Mayor of Cork.

Appointment of the Executive Director for District No. 2

Office of Executive Director
Independent Order B'nai B'rith
District Grand Lodge, No. 2

MR. JACOB B. KROHNGOLD of Akron, Ohio, was appointed Executive Director for District No. 2 at a meeting of the General Committee in Cleveland on July 11. His duties will be to coordinate the various activities of the district and to pay especial attention to the work of propaganda, anti-defamation and social service. Mr. Krohngold has already begunhis work and hashis office at 415 Locust St., Room 403, St. Louis, Mo.

Executive Director Planning Trip Throughout District.

As soon as the lodges throughout the District resume their activities the Executive Director is planning a trip around the district visiting each lodge in turn. Following is a tentative outline of the trip.

September 12-18: Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Las Vegas, N. Mex.

September 19-25: Trinidad, Colo.; Pueblo, Colo.

September 26-October 2: Colorado Springs, Colo.; Denver, Colo.

October 3-9: Wichita, Kas.; Topeka, Kas.

October 10-16: Leavenworth, Kas.; Kansas City, Kas.

October 17-23: Kansas City, Mo.; St. Joseph, Mo.

October 24-30: Joplin, Mo.; Springfield, Mo.

October 31-November 6: Sedalia, Mo.; Louisiana, Mo.

November 7-13: St. Louis.

November 14-20: Paducah, Ky.; Evansville, Ind.

November 21-27: Owensboro, Ky.; Terre Haute, Ind.

November 28-December 4: Lafayette, Ind.; Gary, Ind.

December 5-11: Michigan City (Chicago).

December 12-January 1: Open.

January 2-8: Ligonier, Ind.; South Bend, Ind.

January 9-15: Wabash, Ind.; Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

January 16-22: Muncie, Ind.; Indianapolis, Ind.

January 23-29: Madison, Ind.; Louisville, Ky.

January 30-February 5: Lexington, Ky.; Newport, Ky.

February 6-12: Portsmouth, Ohio; Cincinnati, Ohio.

February 13-19: Middletown, Ohio; Dayton, Ohio.

February 20-26: Lima, Ohio; Toled Ohio.

February 27-March 5: Marion, Oh Mansfield, Ohio.

March 6-12: Springfield, Ohio; Colur bus, Ohio.

March 13-19: Zanesville, Ohio; Bellai Ohio.

March 20-26: Steubenville, Ohio; Liverpool, Ohio.

March 27-April 2: Youngstown, Oh Alliance, Ohio.

April 3-9: Canton, Ohio; Akron, Oh

April 10-16: Cleveland, Ohio.

April 17-23: Lorain, Ohio; Elyria, Oh

This outline, of course, is only tentati and will have to be greatly modified to s local requirements. But it will enal each lodge to anticipate approximat the time when the Executive Director w be in the vicinity and to make its pla accordingly.

Begin Campaign for Membership No

All lodges that are planning to cond a systematic campaign for members duri the coming year should begin to make th arrangements at once. Let your memb ship committee get busy at once and co pile a list of desirable prospects. Consi carefully whom you will invite into t order. The wrong man is a liability, r an asset. When you have this list names completed send a copy of it to t office with the addresses and we will se a preliminary letter to your prospect wh you will then follow up with a perso solicitation. We are planning to sup lodges with membership campaign lite ture, which is now in preparation. Wh you are ready to launch your campai call upon us for aid and advice. Th our business.

Put Us on Your Mailing List.

All lodge secretaries are kindly reques to put this office on their mailing list all publications, announcements, bu tins and letters sent out to members of t lodge. This will not only enable this of to keep up with the activities of the lod but will help us to recommend the of such materials to other lodges in n of them. If you have hit upon a g "stunt" in your lodge pass it on to so that we can suggest it to others. Kin send us such bulletins and announceme as you may have on hand from the p year.

Yours for a bigger and better B B'rith.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT LORRAINE, OHIO.

On Sunday, August 22, Lorraine Lodge, No. 863, was instituted under the jurisdiction of D. G. L. No. 2. With the institution of this lodge, D. G. L. now numbers fifty-five lodges in fifty-four cities in the district.

Lou M. Frank, member General Committee D. G. L. No. 2, installed the lodge, and the degree team of Toledo Lodge, No. 183, in a most impressive manner initiated the thirty charter members of Lorraine Lodge.

Mr. J. Krohngold, Ex. Secretary of D. G. L. No. 2, gave the new members a most impressive and concise account of what the B'nai B'rith is doing. Remarks were made by Mr. Max Goldstein, Vice-President of Elyria Lodge, and by Jos. Ringold, Morris Newman and Lou M. Frank of Toledo Lodge.

A very pleasant time was had by all who attended the installation.

SAMUEL LODGE, VANCOUVER, B. C.

A banquet given by Samuel Lodge, in honor of the Grand officers of District No. 4, was held at the Vancouver Hotel. After the dinner, a mass meeting, at the West End Academy, was held, which was open to all Jewry. Grand President L. M. Mendelsohn outlined the work of the Order. Speeches were also made by Grand Orator Barnett E. Marks and Past President Abraham Jonas.

During the Canadian Jewish Relief Drive, all the members gave their financial as well as their moral support. The lodge itself donated $100 to this worthy cause.

On August 1 Samuel Lodge held its annual picnic at Bowen Island. A large gathering was present. Special attractions were given for the benefit of the children. Twenty five per cent of the net proce was donated to the local Talmud Torah.

Brother President J. B. Jaffe was elec a delegate to the Saskatoon conventi held for the purpose of bringing Je orphans from Ukrania into Canada adoption in private homes.

Our Immigration Committee, under direct auspices of this lodge, is doing w derful work. Every incoming boat fr the Orient is met by Brother J. W. H man, Chairman of this important c mittee, and aid, financially, is tende to all those in need. Brother Herma being ably assisted by Brother Max Grossman.

At the present time, a campaign is for a B. B. home. Active work for a d will commence soon after the holidays.

The officers of Samuel Lodge take opportunity of wishing all members a v happy and prosperous New Year.— Malakoff.

CELEBRATION BY READING LODGE.

On June 10, Reading Lodge, No. 7 of Reading, Pa., passed the fifth m stone and celebrated it with a banquet the Reading Country Club.

Brother Isadore Whitson, Chairman the Arrangements Committee, presided welcomed the ladies and gentlemen p ent. Addresses were made by Broth Samuels Lurio, President of the lo Arthur A. Bolin, First Vice-President the lodge, and Joseph Horbach of P adolphia, Secretary of the District Gr Lodge.

The banquet was concluded with musical program and dance.

KING HONORS LONDON RAB

In appreciation of work done by Ra Hillman of London, England, on be of Belgian refugees, the Belgian K awarded him with a medal.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT MARION, OHIO,

Marion Lodge, No. 864, Independent Order, B'nai B'rith, was instituted at Marion, Ohio, on Sunday, July 18. Brother Lou Frank, who had been most active in the procuring of the application for the charter for this lodge, acted as the installing officer and had complete charge of the affair. Brother Frank is a member of the General Committee of District No. 2. The initiatory ceremony was most beautifully carried out by the Degree Team of Toledo, consisting of Brothers Joe Ringold, President; Samuel Messing, Vice-President; Morris Newman, Monitor; M. M. Simon, Assistant Monitor. Mr. Henry Strelitz, a life long resident of Marion, and for many years a member of Zion Lodge of Columbus, Ohio, was elected President of the new Lodge, and the following officers were elected: Vice-President, Harry Kessel; Secretary, Sol Freed; Treasurer, George G. Kleinmeier; Monitor, Abe Schoen; Asst. Monitor, Dave Ellison; Warden, Wm. Haas; Guardian, Frank Seidlow.

At the close of the formal initiation, a reception was held in the lodge room, which was attended by the Hon. Warren G. Harding, U. S. Senator from Ohio, and his wife, and by all of the membership of Marion Lodge, and many from surrounding cities. Senator Harding made it known that he would like to be apprised of the principles and purposes of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith. E. J. Schanfarber, Vice President of District No. 2, was presented to the meeting by Brother Lou Frank for the purpose of offering this explanation to the Senator and the newly elected members. In his remarks, Brother Schanfarber dwelt upon the early history of the Order, described the transition from the period of benefits for the members to the philanthropic and benevolent Order of today. He dwelt upon the lessons of patriotism taught by the Ritual and described in detail the various social service works carried on and finally, upon the development of the Anti-Defamation League, referring especially to the recent articles published in The Dearborn Independent.

Brother Fred Lazarus of Columbus, Ohio, then responded with a few well chosen remarks with reference to the Jewish Orphans' Home at Cleveland.

Although Senator Harding had been pledged not to make any public address until after his formal notification, which was to take place on July 22, he did respond to the call of the Acting President and in a most impressive manner endorsed the work of the Order and expressed his warm friendship for the members of the new lodge and his desire to cooperate with the Order in every way possible. He especially dwelt upon the Anti-Defamation feature. He said: "There should be no reason for an Anti-Defamation League in the United States of America, the first great republic in the world." In most forcible language he condemned those who attempted by word or deed to create a spirit of race hatred. He said that he wished there were more lodges like the B'nai B'rith in America and that all people would live and practice the principles and purposes of this Order, as enunciated there. The remarks and the attitude of the Senator rang true and carried with them the conviction of sincerity.

The meeting marked the beginning of a new epoch in the history of Marion Jewry, and was a great day in the history of the Order.

PROGRESSIVE LODGE, NEW YORK CITY.

A regular meeting of Progressive Lodge, No. 841, of New York City was held on July 13, 1920, at which the newly elected officers were installed by representatives of the Grand Lodge.

In place of the usual banquet celebration, the lodge resolved to commemorate the first anniversary of its institution by a visit to the B'nai B'rith Home for the Aged at Yonkers.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

The dance given by the Committee of Fifty, representing the San Francisco lodges for the benefit of a gymnasium was a success, and as far as the financial end is concerned, will help materially to relieve the indebtedness on the gymnasium.

Under the auspices of the Welfare Committee, an entertainment and dance was given at the B'nai B'rith building on July 28.

At the meeting of Golden Gate Lodge, held on June 16, Grand President Brother Henry Neuberg gave an interesting talk to the lodge, containing a synopsis of the proceedings of the convention of the Order held in Cleveland.

Golden Gate Lodge recently held its golden jubilee anniversary and celebrated the same with a banquet. It can be stated without fear of contradiction that the entire affair was a success in every way. An extended address was made by District Deputy Brother Stein.

An interesting feature of the banquet was remarks by veterans of the lodge.

ASHLAND, WIS.

Moses Atlass Lodge of Ashland, Wisconsin, held a well-attended meeting on Sunday, August 29, 1920.

During the afternoon a meeting of the lodge was held, at which a class of twenty-three candidates was initiated. A propaganda campaign resulted in the securing of a class of candidates numbering more than fifty, but owing to the inclement weather, a large number of the candidates who promised to be present for initiation and who reside in distant towns and villages were not able to motor down to Ashland for the initiation.

Brother H. D. Frankel of St. Paul, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, was the guest of honor and represented the Grand Lodge on this occasion, and addressed the members of the lodge on "The Work of the Order."

In the evening a banquet was held under the auspices of the lodge at which more than one hundred and seventy-five members and their ladies were present, although preparations were made for more than two hundred fifty.

Brother Joseph Cohen, Secretary of the lodge, acted as toastmaster and Mrs. Jos. I. Levy was Chairman of the Auxiliary Entertainment Committee. Brother Frankel addressed the gathering at the banquet on the work of the Anti-Defamation League.

Moses Atlass Lodge is but a recently instituted lodge of the Order. Its record so far has been most excellent and it is endeavoring to become one of the better lodges of the district.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

Minnesota Lodge, No. 157, went on a machine picnic Sunday, August 1. About fifty automobiles filled with members of the B'nai B'rith and their families left Rice Park about 10 o'clock, driving by way of Summit Avenue and the Riverside Drive to Excelsior Villa, Lake Minnetonka, where they were joined by many more members of the lodge. Quite a number of machines loaded with B'nai B'rith members from Minneapolis came out in the afternoon.

An interesting program of races was held and an indoor baseball game between the blue and red membership armies kept the crowd very enthusiastic. Prizes were awarded for all sporting events. Everyone had a very enjoyable time. The trip home was taken by way of Superior Boulevard.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Emes Lodge, No. 67, had a rousing meeting on the evening of August 18, 1920. The Campaign Committee was appointed to arrange for a drive throughout the entire city's Jewish population for the purpose of increasing not only the membership of the lodge, but also to secure contributions for the Anti-Defamation League.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY.

An open meeting under the auspices of Louisville Lodge, No. 14, was held in Louisville, Kentucky, on June 23, 1920, before a large number of representative Jews, when the aims and ideals of the Order were explained.

Governor Edwin P. Morrow was the guest of honor, and other distinguished visitors were: E. J. Schanfarber of Columbus, Ohio, First Vice-President of the District Grand Lodge, and Dr. Jos. Kornfeld, Past President of the District Grand Lodge.

After being presented by President Joseph Lazarus, Mr. Schanfarber expressed greetings from other lodges of the district. Speaking on "The Work of the Order," he emphasized the fact that it stood for the uplifting of humanity, and for philanthropy in its broadest sense.

He spoke of the work done in penal institutions, of visits to the Jewish inmates, and of religious services conducted for their welfare.

Dr. Kornfeld delivered a stirring address on the Order's accomplishments and emphasized the fact that the Order has ceased to be a secret organization, and, therefore, there cannot be any reason that a Jew can give for refusing to affiliate with the Order.

When Gov. Morrow was introduced, he received an ovation. His delivery was very earnest and eloquent, and he left his hearers with a very pleasing impression. He said in part: "I have known a great deal of this Order. I had never understood its purposes so fully until tonight, as explained by your Vice President. You, 'Sons of the Covenant'," he said, "belong to the only real nobility of the earth.

"I am glad to talk to the 'Sons of the Covenant' because I feel that I am talking to my friends. Some of the truest and closest associations of my life have been with Jews. I know of your hospitals. I know of your institutions, and it is a great thing that a great people should have such an organization. I welcome the 'Sons of the Covenant' as an asset to Kentucky; I count you as a part of the Commonwealth."

Vocal selections by Miss Ethel Reimer, accompanied by Mr. Louis M. Zoeller, and refreshments after the meeting, made up an interesting and enjoyable evening.

Preceding the public meeting, a regular meeting of the lodge was held at which a class of thirteen candidates was initiated.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT ASHLAND, WIS.

June 20, 1920, was the biggest day our co-religionists ever had in the city of Ashland, Wisconsin, as it marked the institution of Moses Atlass Lodge, No. 862, of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith.

Brothers Gustavus Loevinger of St. Paul and Charles D. Oreckovsky of Duluth, represented the District Grand Lodge at the institution ceremonies.

Thirty-seven charter members were initiated and two members affiliated by card. After the lodge was instituted, a public installation of the officers was held, a banquet was served, and a literary and musical program carried out. More than 125 people participated and paid close attention to the addresses delivered by the visiting Grand Lodge officers on "The Work of the Order—Its Aims and Purposes."

Much credit for the institution of this lodge is particularly due to Brother Jos. I. Levy. The lodge was named "Moses Atlass" in memory of the deceased father of Mrs. Jos. I. Levy, well known as a great and noble-hearted Jew.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON.

Abr. Geiger Lodge, No. 423, and Ida Bloom Strauss Ladies' Auxiliary held their annual banquet at Liberty hall on Sunday, June 27, 1920. The program consisted of a ball game between married and single men, running races and events for young and old. Prizes were delivered to successful contestants.

MENORAH LODGE, STEVENS POINT, WIS.

Menorah Lodge, No. 769, of Stevens Point, Wis., held its annual B'nai B'rith Day celebration on July 5, 1920. Brother Dr. Martin M. Ritter, Past President of David-Fish Lodge, Chicago, attended the meeting as representative of the District Grand Lodge.

The meeting of the lodge was held in the afternoon at which Brother Dr. Ritter delivered an address on "The Work of the Order," and subsequently he had conferences with the members of the lodge with a view of improving the condition of the lodge. He also held conferences with several ladies of the community with the result that a ladies' auxiliary was formed, also an association of women was called into life to take up the subject of teaching the Jewish children Jewish history and to conduct a Sabbath-school. Brother Dr. Ritter further arranged Friday evening services to be held regularly and was authorized to secure a suitable person to officiate.

MAHONING LODGE, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

The first meeting of the season of Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, was held on September 5. Gratifying reports were made of the membership campaign in progress. A program was outlined by the entertainment committee for a series of entertainments and dances to be held during the winter season, to which affairs all the neighboring lodges are to be invited. The members of the lodge are striving to make this the banner year so that the time will not be distant when the lodge may inaugurate active steps in the matter of erecting a building to be known as The B'nai B'rith Home.

B'NAI B'RITH ORPHANAGE, ERIE, PA.

The eighth annual meeting of the governors of the B'nai B'rith orphanage of district No. 3, in Erie, was held in Trenton, N. J., on July 25.

Election of officers was held, resulting in the re-election of most of the officers. The recommendation of the superintendent for a vocational school to be instituted at the home was approved, subject to the result of the building fund campaign.

In compliance with the wishes of a number of cities in the district, requesting postponement of the fund campaign, it was decided that the campaign be held in the early part of October or immediately after the high holidays.

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, Michigan, under the auspices of the Recreation Commission gave an outing on Wednesday, August 25, for the children of the Bishop school playground. More than 500 boys and girls of Detroit's East Side met at the playground in the morning where they were taken to Belle Isle in trucks and motor cars for an all day outing. A series of contests, dances and games were arranged and prizes donated by members were awarded.

Pisgah Lodge adopted a resolution, authorizing the Intellectual Advancement Committee of the lodge to assist in the matter of bringing to Detroit during the coming winter season a number of famous musical stars. The lodge resolved to act as sponsor for the concert course, feeling encouraged in this step by the fact that the lecture course held during the past year by the lodge proved successful.

The course will be known as The B'nai B'rith Concert Course, and will be given in the Orchestra hall. This move is generally recognized as an important step taken by the lodge.

Among the artists who are expected to appear will be: Leo Ornstein, Eddy Brown, Mary Kent, Oscar Seagle, Hans Hess, Rosa Raisa. In all there are to be seven concerts, the dates for which are to be arranged later.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT SAN JOSE, CAL.

A new link has been added to the fraternal chain by the institution of a new lodge in San Jose, Cal., on June 26. The lodge was formerly organized by President Lionel Wachs and other officers of Oakland Lodge, who, on May 22, journeyed to San Jose to aid in this work.

After the institution ceremonies, a banquet and dance were held which were attended by the entire Jewish citizenry of San Jose.

The principal address at the celebration was given by Brother M. Wahrhaftig of Oakland Lodge, who spoke on "Judaism in Action."

CLEVELAND LODGE, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Complete report of the various teams was made at the meeting of the committee having charge of the propaganda campaign held on August 19. Dinner was served in the evening, which was followed by an open meeting, and an interesting program was arranged.

With the available funds from the increased membership, the lodge plans to build a gymnasium, swimming pool, etc., thereby making the B'nai B'rith Home and Club Building at 71st and Euclid Avenue a clubhouse in every respect.

CURRENT EVENTS.

(Continued from page 5.)

This truism uttered by King Solomon is probably found in the proverbs of every nation, and the Poles who hardly had gained their independence when they set out on an expedition of conquest are finding it out to their sorrow. A weekly edition of the Berlin Tageblatt (July 14) published an article by the well-known Jewish publicist and communal worker, Paul Nathan, who said among others that there can be no doubt about the complete and final collapse of the new Polish state. This having been proven, the reviewer may use it as a test for the correctness of other reports. One thing is absolutely certain, the Jews feel that Poland is hell. Rabbi Gelles of Lissa, in the former Prussian part of Poland, said in a published statement that the congregations in this section are dying out. Everybody who can is running away to seek a home in Germany. The congregation of Rawicz which some years ago had over 400 members is reduced to some 30. The Jewish school was recently closed. From Russian Poland everybody who has the remotest chance of coming to America is trying to get a passport. Thousands are besieging the American legation in Warsaw every day.

The attitude of the government is clearly defined in the action, or rather inaction in the case of the wholesale murder of Pinsk. This fact has been often referred to and is coming to light again in Sir Stuart Samuel's report. Major Luczinski who ordered the wholesale murder of thirty-five innocent, unarmed people has not been punished to this day, though evidently under pressure of the publication of Samuel's report the Polish parliament finally, after more than a year's delay, received the report of a commission which declared that this murder was not justified. The hypocrisy of this action becomes evident through it by individual facts. A Jewish member of the parliament found secret circulars of the government giving directions for discrimination against the Jews, and the sentiment of the officials is sufficiently illustrated by the single fact that bundles of letters are thrown into the public garbage cans instead of being delivered to the Jews to whom they are addressed.

The Poles would have to be different from all other nations under such circumstances, would they not ascribe their complete rout to Jewish influence. Naturally this sentiment finds its expression in the arrest of Jewish journalists, in the suspension of Zionist societies and in the suppression of Jewish newspapers. Quite lately the government saw the futility of such procedure, which could merely impress the ignorant and fanatic masses, and began to deal with the Jews. The Jewish members of parliament were called into consultation and they declared their willingness to cooperate with the government, provided the anti-Jewish agitation in the press and in the government offices would cease. As a proof of good will the government appointed Professor Simon Asknazy of Warsaw as delegate to the League of Nations, and the Jews came out everywhere with appeals for subscription to bonds and for volunteers, but so far as we know the situation has not improved, and an attack on a Jewish peddler by Poles in Chicago may be taken as a fair specimen of how the bravery of the Polish nation expresses itself.

Miscellaneous.

The International Jewish Relief Conference, held in Carlsbad August 5-13, naturally heard many complaints about the work of the Joint Distribution Committee which some speakers found to lack constructive ability while others defended it as doing the best that could have been done under the distressing circumstances. Of prominent achievements the appointment of the famous painter Max Liebermann as president of the Art Academy of Berlin is an event worth recording in view of the fact that Liebermann, as his two brothers, now dead, both of whom were scientists of the first rank, come from a wealthy family of manufacturers, thus showing the participation of the Jews in all national activities, material as well as spiritual.

The anti-Semitic career of a priest in a country resort near Vienna, after having accepted a donation for two church bells from the daughter of the late Baron Albert Rothschild and her sister-in-law, Baroness Springer, and having named the bells for the donors, is also an interesting story showing the misapplied generosity of Jewish high finance calculated to placate their enemies.

The death of Shalom Baer Schneierson, the descendant of a long line of miracle-working rabbis, occurring at this time is full of significant recollections. He died in exile, having fled from his home in the Ukraine a few years ago, just as his great-great-grandfather Shneor Zalman died in 1812, fleeing before Napoleon's army. The prayer of the elder rabbi is supposed to have decided Napoleon's downfall because he was afraid that political liberty would make the Jews infidels and he would rather have them live under the Czar's knout and be "good Jews," than be free and lose their Judaism. It is not known how Shalom Baer prayed before Bolshevik victory.

From Vienna comes the report that the prominent historian Heinrich R. Friedjung died, July 13, at the age of 69. He was a representative of the old idea of Austrian liberalism under German leadership. In the same city Adam Politzer, one of the world's greatest specialists in otology died, August 12, at the age of 85. Numerous American physicians were his disciples.

A note of special interest may close this review. The daughter of President Masaryk was married (July 3) to Leon Bondy, the son of Gottlieb Bondy, one of the first Jews to take part in Czech politics and the editor of an important historical work on the Jews of Bohemia. The Vienna paper which reports the fact abstained from saying how the marriage was performed. President Masaryk is a liberal in matters of religion, but officially a Protestant, while Bondy is a Jew.

REPORT OF THE INAUGURATION.

(Continued from page 2.)

for the support of widows and orphans. This sum was contributed by twenty-six brothers. Brother Heller, of the Berthold Auerbach Lodge, added as a personal testimony of his good wishes, the sum of one thousand marks. Brother Timendorfer added an equal amount to which, afterwards, Brothers Wilhelm Schlesinger and Julius David also added one thousand marks each. Vice-President Kuznitzki closed the address with a word of thanks in the name of the District Grand Lodge. The lodge was closed by Ex-President Brother Dr. Merzbach of Magdeburg, and Brothers Davidson and Friedman, cantors of Berlin Congregation, added to the solemnity of the occasion by instrumental and vocal music.

THE POGROMS IN POLAND.

(Continued from page 11.)

that in the proletariat of Eastern Europe only the Jews are able to read and write, and so Bolshevism at times appears to be almost purely a Jewish movement. He estimates that not more than two hundred or three hundred Jews have been been unjustly killed in the pogroms. The worst offenders are soldiers, "peasants in uniform," and the army is anti-Semitic. "Some very grave—but quite rare—failures of justice (what, in effect, were unpunished murder or attempted murder) were brought to the notice of the Commission. Most reverend orthodox Rabbis," says Captain Wright, "travel under the seat in the trains."

Speaking of the Pinsk murders, Captain Wright thinks that Major C. would have been acquitted by a court as being within his strict rights. Jewish ladies who were arrested were stripped and flogged, and then made to pass naked down a passage full of Polish soldiers. Captain Wright asserts that in Lida a Polish soldier was murdered by a Jew "with those horrible mutilations practiced by Jewish Chassidim murderers." Sir Stuart Samuel refers to this murder, and mentions that a priest declared that the murderer was not a Jew. Captain Wright believes that the situation of the Polish Jews in future will hardly be happier. He maintains that the great mass of the poor Jews are Chassidim, "unfit for the modern economic world, not in consequence of any fault of their own, but in consequence of a long historical past." He compares them with the negroes of the United States. The sole recommendation he makes is that the Jewish community in Great Britain be "invited to study this side of the subject."

Sir H. Rumbold's Comments.

In an introductory letter to the report, Sir Horace Rumbold, the British representative in Warsaw, ascribes the events to the absence of authority after the German occupation and to the lack of discipline in the Polish army. Sir Horace disagrees with Sir Stuart's views on the Jewish part in business, and states that the cooperatives are exclusively Polish. The cotton industry in Lodz, he also says, owes its development more to the Polish industrial community of German extraction than to the Jews. He agrees that the boycotting of Jews should be prohibited by legislation or proclamation, but "it is beyond the power of any Government to force its subjects to deal with persons with whom they do not wish to deal." He comments on the recommendations in detail. No. 1 is justifiable and should prove workable; 2 to 6 "are certainly very appropriate"; 9 "is to be strongly supported"; as to 11, a national loan bank exists, and there is no differentiation between the Poles and the Jews. The latter could start their own banks. As to 12, Sir Horace thinks it is a matter for the League of Nations and not the British Government, since the work of the Yiddish-speaking member of the staff would consist mainly in seeing that Article 93 is applied.

Sir Horace adds that in the Ukraine the massacres of Jews can find "no parallel except in the massacres of Armenians in the Turkish Empire. . . . Towns of many thousand inhabitants almost wholly Jewish have apparently been wiped out." Similar events have taken place all over Southern Russia, and in Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia. Sir Horace concludes: "It is giving the Jews very little real assistance to single out, as is sometimes done, for reprobation and protest, the country where they have perhaps suffered least."

The report is one of the most important official documents dealing with the Jews that has been issued in modern times.

OAKLAND, CAL.

Under the auspices of Oakland Lodge, No. 252, of Oakland, Cal., Friday luncheons were given weekly until the vacation season. During their progress the lodge was awarded the opportunity to listen to speakers of note.

On May 21, Mr. Peter J. Crosby, one of Oakland's most prominent attorneys, addressed the lodge in an eloquent and forceful manner.

On June 4, Mr. R. J. Mille, Secretary of the Commission of Immigration in the State of California, spoke to the lodge on "The Work of the Commission," especially its work in Americanizing and aiding the alien.

On June 11, Mr. Earl W. Hodges, Pacific Coast Director of the American Jewish Relief Committee, addressed the members of the lodge, explaining the needs and problems of our coreligionists in the stricken countries of Europe.

Judge George Samuels, for many years a member of Oakland Lodge and Past President of the District Grand Lodge, is candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court. Judge Samuels has served as public official for almost a quarter of a century and has filled the office with honor and distinction.

On June 24, Oakland Lodge and its members and friends were invited to a dance given by the new lodge at San Jose More than 150 journeyed from Oakland and enjoyed a delightful time. This affair is but a forerunner of many pleasant gatherings that will be held between the two sister lodges.

On Tuesday evening, June 15, a group of members of the new San Jose Lodge were entertained by Oakland Lodge. The subject of the meeting, which was presented by Brother Sidney J. Silverstein, was "The Soldier and His Bonus." All present joined in the discussion.

EZEKIEL LODGE, NEWARK, N. J.

A regular meeting of Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J., was held on July 19 and it was well attended.

An address was delivered by Dr. Thormor. He advised the members of the lodge to work for harmony and brotherhood.

Under the auspices of the Entertainment Committee, with Brother Milton Greenebaum as Chairman, the lodge is planning a great outdoor picnic.

Mr. Simon D. Goodman, prominent in B'nai B'rith circles of Fairmount, W. Va., was elected President of the Community Civic Council of Fairmount.

The object of this organization is to coordinate the affairs of civic organizations and agencies in the city interested in the promotion of community welfare.

Honorable Irving Lehman, Supreme Court Justice from New York, has been elected member at large of the Executive Committee of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith.

REGINA, CANADA.

On June 6, 1920 Louis D. Brandeis Lodge, No. 833, of Regina, Canada, held an intellectual and social meeting. The guest of honor was the Chief Justice of the Province of Saskatchewan, Honorable G. H. Haultain, who addressed the lodge, taking for his subject, "The Laws of the Country". His address, which was very much appreciated, was followed by a general discussion.

On July 1, 1920, Louis D. Brandeis Lodge held its first annual picnic, the day being a Dominion holiday. The lodge acted as sponsor and host for the entire Jewish population of Regina, who attended in large numbers the outing at Quappelle. Over three hundred people were in attendance. Everyone present had an enjoyable day. During the afternoon, a program of sports, consisting of racing, and baseball games, was carried out.

On June 28, 1920, the lodge held a special meeting, at which the officers elected for the ensuing term were installed. The meeting was open to the public and was well attended.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

On Wednesday, July 21, Toledo Lodge joined with Pisgah Lodge of Detroit in the annual outing which was held at Sugar Island.

The event was largely attended by members of both lodges and their families. The ball game was won by the Toledo Lodge team, with a very liberal margin of runs. A silver cup has been bought jointly by the two lodges, and will become the permanent property of the lodge winning the annual game, three successive years.

Field days sports, including fat and thin men's races, women's and children's races, tug-of-war, etc., were enjoyed by the picnickers.

The degree team of Toledo Lodge assisted in the installation of new lodges at Marion and at Lorain, Ohio, during the month of July. Lou M. Frank and other members of Toledo Lodge were instrumental in the formation of these lodges.

PROGRESSIVE LODGE, NEW YORK.

The first anniversary celebration of Progressive Lodge, No. 841, of New York City was observed in the form of a visit to the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Yonkers, N. Y., on Sunday, August 1, 1920.

Supper was served at the Home and the inmates were the guests of the lodge. Prominent speakers addressed the gathering on this occasion.

Preceding the journey to Yonkers, a short session of the lodge was held, at which a class of candidates was initiated.

THE B'NAI B'RITH.

It is our good fortune to witness the multitude of affairs which take place in the association's auditorium during the course of the year. Perhaps no hall in the city is the scene of such a variety of lectures, meetings, entertainments, plays and other functions as is our auditorium. Just recently Governor Morrow addressed an open meeting of the B'nai B'rith, which was attended by a fair-sized crowd. An account of this meeting is given elsewhere in this issue. It is not our purpose here to deal with the splendid oratorical effort on the part of the Governor nor with the stirring speeches made by District Vice President E. J. Schanfarbe or Rabbi Kornfeld, both of Columbu but to speak of the B'nai B'rith itself. The Chronicler, as the spokesman of the Y. M. H. A., is always glad of the opportunity to commend worthy Jewish movements. There has been, unfortunately, a lack of interest in the work of the local B'nai B'rith during the past few years. Strenuous efforts on the part of the present officers and the infusion of new blood will, however, gradually dispel this laxity. Plans for the future will leave no doubt as to the necessity and value of a live B'nai B'rith organization in Louisville, as well as in every Jewish community.

The Y. M. H. A. is eager for the B'nai B'rith to come to the front, and wherever cooperation can be extended, we are sure that the association will not be lacking in effort.—[The Chronicler, Louisville.

ZIONIST LEADER DEAD.

Warsaw dispatches report the death of the noted Jewish scholar and Zionist leader, Dr. Tobias Hindes, at the age of 68. At the funeral many thousands of Jews turned out to pay him their last respect.

.05
BN
RR

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

ublication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

ol. XIII OCTOBER, 1920 No. 2

An Exposure

The hoax which is being foisted upon the American public by Henry Ford in his weekly newspaper entitled "The Dearborn Independent" and in the pamphlet which he is distributing entitled "The World's Foremost Problem."

(A pamphlet published by the Anti-Defamation League, 1228 Tribune Bldg., Chicago, Ill.)

IN a recently published book entitled "Talks with T. R.", John J. Leary, Jr., gives Theodore Roosevelt's opinion of Henry Ford as follows:

"Ford" said President Roosevelt, "is a pretty good man for making cheap automobiles. He makes a good car for the money and in his sphere has done a very good work. But he won't stick to his sphere. He would instruct Cosmos.

"It would not be so bad if he knew anything about the matters outside of automobiles that he attempts to manage and direct. He does not seem to have the faintest idea of such matters. He knows nothing of world politics yet he sets himself up, with the aid of an army of press agents as the man who must teach everybody. He has no conception of what we mean by Americanism and has an extreme idea of the importance and power of his money. He is ignorant, yet because he has been so successful in motors, many, many persons, hardly as ignorant as himself, think him wise in all things, and allow him to influence their views.

"Henry, like Barnum, has been a great advertiser. I do not say his peace ship was an advertising dodge—I will give him credit for being sincere there, but I won't say that he has not been given credit for a lot of philanthropy that was merely good business. Other of his schemes given much publicity are imaginings that in others would attract no attention."

Mr. Ford's actions during the past six months confirm Colonel Roosevelt's estimate of the man. The same stupid pertinacity which he exhibited in his anti-preparedness and anti-war propaganda he now displays in his audacious endeavor to lead the American public into the preposterous belief that the Jew is a menace to our country and to civilization in general.

Do Jews Control the Presidents?

Henry Ford is the publisher and owner of the Dearborn Independent, a weekly newspaper. For the past five months, each issue has contained a lengthy article attempting to show the presence of a Jewish problem in this country—a "foremost problem" so the articles contend. Never has any propaganda conducted in this country been more vicious, more insidious, more hypocritical. The writer while protesting that he is not preaching anti-Semitism, crams his articles full with criminal charges against the Jewish people. Mr. Ford, whom President Roosevelt described as one who "has no conception of what we mean by Americanism" has become so fanatical in his search for new slanders and libels of three million, patriotic, law-abiding citizens of America, that to make a point he is willing to besmirch the most honored names in American history. If by defaming Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Roosevelt, Taft, and all our other ex-Presidents he can add still another charge against the Jew, he is quite willing to do so. In his article in the Dearborn Independent dated September 18, 1920, entitled "Does this Explain Jewish Political Power", Mr. Ford expresses his opinion of the moral character of our Presidents as follows:

"Men with a 'past' are specially favored (by the Jews) for the presidential office. Men with a 'past' have become presidents in various countries including the United States. There is no doubt of that. In some instances, the particular scandal that constitutes the past has been publicly known; in other cases it has been hushed up and lost in a maze of rumor. * * * In American affairs, at least, the woman-note is predominant. In our higher offices that has more frequently occurred than any other, oftener than the money-note. The whole subject is extremely distasteful but truth has its surgical duties to perform and this is one of them. It may be safely assumed that the custody of the secret is almost entirely with that race (the Jews)."

The charge is broad enough to include all our Presidents. Which of the nation's Presidents has Mr. Ford in mind? He dares not mention the name of one. A more cowardly lie has never been uttered. What would President Roosevelt have said had he read Mr. Ford's opinion of America's chief executives! On behalf of the hundred and five million American citizens who revere the names of those who have been raised to the highest office within the gift of the American people, we call upon Mr. Ford to name those presidents or presidential candidates whom he states had a "past". Everybody knows that Mr. Ford has absolutely no foundation whatsoever for his charges against those honorable men. They will therefore know what credence to give to the charges which he brings in the same article against Jewish citizens.

International Anti-Semitism.

It is the purpose of this series of articles to refute the libelous charges which Mr. Ford has brought against various sections of the American public. His publications would not merit serious consideration were it not, as Colonel Roosevelt says, that "Many, many persons, hardly as ignorant as Ford think him wise in all things and allow him to influence their views". His wealth permits him to address audiences of millions. His propaganda is sent to the owners of Ford cars throughout the country and his agents, in every city, town and hamlet are requested, we are informed, to secure subscriptions locally for his magazine. A request to them from Mr. Ford is equivalent to an order. The Anti-Defamation League can only hope to offset the injury which he is causing by attempting to reach the same public and to expose to the same public the irresponsible recklessness of the libels the ignorance and gullibility of the man who is perpetrating them and the powers that pull the strings which make Mr. Ford dance to their music. These are the purposes of the present article and those which are to follow.

Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence has evolved two effective means for the legal protection of one unjustly accused of crime. The accused may disprove the testimony offered or he may deprive it of any weight by impeaching the witness offering the evidence.

Even if the witness in the present instance did not impeach himself, Colonel Roosevelt's estimate of him would suffice. But before we have completed this series, the reader will understand better the motives and reasons for the vicious attacks against Jews of the United States, and for similar attacks now being launched systematically throughout the world. These are leading our investigators into strange and devious byways. Facts are being sought in Amerongen and Detroit, Hamburg and Warsaw, London, Magdeburg and San Diego. The League is now conducting an investigation to ascertain why the United States is being flooded with anti-Semitic broad-sheets, pamphlets and books sent from organized propaganda bureaus located in London and other European cities; it is attempting to ascertain what connection there may be between the anonymous distributor of a mass of incendiary literature printed in the United States and the Dearborn Publishing Company—Ford's printing press; it expects to be able to tell who touches the lever which causes the printing presses of Hamburg and Magdeburg to belch forth anti-Semitic handbills by the million in unison with the rotary presses in the Dearborn plant. But all these are questions bearing upon the witness and not upon the evidence he presents.

The main purpose of this article is to expose the systematic effort being made by Anti-Semites in Europe and in the U. S. to arouse public opinion against the Jew and to bring about their social, political and economic ostracism; and to expose the falsity of the testimony they are offering to accomplish these base purposes. No court in the world would accept their testimony. All is based on hearsay, opinion, conjecture, insinuation. The defamers know that the laws of the United States provide no legal recourse where character assassination of a group or class is perpetrated, and they are aware they may proceed to slander and defame the Jewish citizens of this country to their heart's content so long as they do not specifically libel any individual or business. Therefore they set no limit to the recklessness of their charges.

As proof of the contention made in Mr. Ford's paper that the Jew constitutes a world menace, a document has been "discovered" entitled "The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion". (The word "Protocol" as here used means simply a record.) No explanation is offered of the authenticity of the document other than to state that "it was incorporated in a Russian book published by a Professor Nilus who attempted to interpret the Protocols by events then going forward in Russia", and that "It was recently published in England under auspices that challenge attention for it". Let us now examine the "auspices" under which it was published in England, and determine the precise manner in which these auspices "challenge attention". This question Mr. Ford does not and can not discuss. He attempts to evade the issue by stating: "the point of interest for this and other countries is not that a criminal or a madman conceived such a program, but that when conceived, this program found means of getting itself fulfilled in its most important particulars. The document is comparatively unimportant, the conditions to which it calls attention are of a very high degree of importance." The real issue is not thus easily evaded.

A Double Forgery.

Why has Mr. Ford had his own translation made from the original Russian forgery and why has he omitted from his translation whole pages which by their extravagance brand "The Protocols" as the ravings of a Hebromaniac? Why has he omitted entirely the following choice paragraph tracing the progress of the "Jewish Conspiracy" which Professor Nilus states was hatched twenty-four centuries ago and which Ford now states "has been fulfilled in its most important particulars?" The paragraph which even Mr. Ford realized would discredit by its fantasy the other products of Nilus' distorted imagination reads as follows:

"The first stage of the conspiracy was in Europe in 429 B. C. in Greece, where, in the time of Pericles, the 'serpent' first started eating into the power of that country. The second stage was in Rome in the time of Augustus about 69 B. C. The third in Madrid in the time of Charles V in 1552. The fourth in Paris about 1700 in the time of Louis XVI. The fifth in London from 1814 onwards (after the downfall of Napoleon). The sixth in Berlin 1871 after the Franco-Prussian War."

Many portions of the original Russian forgery which brand it as a hoax are omitted from the London edition and the "auspices which challenge attention" can be credited with ingenuousness only when they failed to bluepencil the paragraph above quoted and permitted it to appear in a book which they are attempting to foist upon the public as convincing proof of a Jewish Conspiracy to control the world. Their other tamperings with the original Russian forgery do not permit them to be credited with honesty in allowing that paragraph to stand. It is probable Mr. Ford, although he is confessedly ignorant of history and dynasties, was advised by his "experts" that Louis XVI did not reign in Paris "about 1700" and that Augustus was not born until 63 B. C. The paragraph itself irrespective of the historical inaccuracies which it contains is so powerful a reductio ad absurdum of the entire document that Mr. Ford's "literary expert" bluepenciled it entirely from his translation. Many other instances of paragraphs and whole sections omitted and of others purposely altered could be quoted. Space will not permit us to cite more than one or two other instances where this has been done both in the London edition and in Mr. Ford's edition of the Protocols. The translator has omitted various passages which lay the blame for the French Revolution at the doors of Judaism. He has also omitted those sections in which Nilus alludes to the activities of the Popes of the Roman Catholic church in preparing the way for the coming of the anti-Christ and the contest between the Popes and the leaders of Judaism for supremacy on the ruins of spiritual Christianity. Another passage omitted is that in which Nilus explains that in the Middle Ages the Templars were the instrument employed by the Jewish Sanhedrin (The High Court of Ancient Jewry). He relates that after their destruction by Philip Le Bel, king of France, a new directing center was created by a new Sanhedrin in Scotland, (a reference probably to the Masonic Scottish Rite). We also fail to find the following passages in any of the English translations:

"The root of evil was transported from France to Scotland, and there, under a new name, an alliance was made with united England, for whose benefit the veil covering the secrets (of the Sanhedrin) was raised, and mortal war was declared against the Papacy. These activities continue until the present date, England receiving help in her intrigues all over the world from the capital and the genius of which the Sanhedrin has a super-abundant quantity.

"Why is it that the English State was chosen as a mainstay for Zion? The Sanhedrin does not answer. We are inclined (says Nilus) to think that the explanation is to be found in the insularity of this powerful State, and possibly in the racial relationship between the English and the Jews. It is known that a whole scientific theory exists which proves that the English are one of the ten lost tribes of Israel. But the Sanhedrin ruthlessly directs contemporary science to suit its own ends, inventing the most convenient theories. There are certain very delicate signs in the air that a new theory is already in the making according to which the honor of being related to God's chosen people is to be ceded by the Sanhedrin to America and Japan. Avis a l'Angleterre."

It can be easily understood why these paragraphs were omitted from the London edition. However, a totally different reason explains their absence from Mr. Ford's edition, for he has never been especially friendly to England. Other passages omitted are those in which Nilus insists on the help which England "the faithful ally of Judaism has contributed to the destruction and transformation of every country of Europe", and states that "Orthodox Russia and autocracy are the last surviving defence against the ultimate triumph of the anti-Christ". These are illustrations of the childish twaddle which the American and English translators of the Russian forgery have designedly omitted from the double forgery which they are attempting to foist upon the American public as a bona-fide manuscript.

From Anti-Masonry to Anti-Semitism.

Dr. F. Haber G. Wright, Librarian of the London Library, who is recognized throughout the world as an authority on Russian literature, in an article in the London "Nation" tells us that Nilus is a very common type of Russian mystic and fanatic for whom the spiritual life transcends every other and to whom miracles and visions are of daily occurence. Dr. Wright tells us that Nilus' book, the last chapter of which has been translated under the title "The Protocols", (the balance of the book is totally ignored by Mr. Ford and the other anti-Semitic writers of America and England) is full of mystical ideas of the end of the world. Nilus relates the religious life of divers saintly men and the appearances from the spiritual world which they have had the happiness to witness. The chapters which are untranslated have the record of several dreams which Nilus' friends have communicated to him but of course in no instance is a single name given. Though at first Nilus seemed to be of the opinion that anti-Christ would arise from the Freemasons, he later came to the conclusion that it would arise from the Jewish community. Whereas, other Russian mystics of the same type have said that the Freemasons would produce anti-Christ and that the chief candidate for this post is still an unknown member of the Freemasons, Nilus declares that anti-Christ is not a single person but the whole Jewish community. To prove this, he incorporated in the second edition of his treatise the so-called "Protocols" which set forth the fantastic story that the Jewish people for twenty-four centuries have stirred up sedition by introducing liberal ideas which [illegible] as a poison and have weakened the power of kings and autocracy in order that all power may belong to them and their power be absolute. Dr. Wright states that it is obvious from an examination of Nilus' text that the author only used the Protocols as a literary device to put forward his views.

Mr. Ford, on the other hand, contends that the "Protocols" are in fact what they purport to be, namely: the minutes of a meeting of the leaders of Jewry in which the plans for gaining political, financial and cultural control of the world are set forth and progress reported.

But he has failed utterly to offer one iota of proof as to the authenticity of the document itself. He has accepted it at its face value. His "literary experts" could have easily demonstrated to him the absolute fictitiousness of the document. They could have shown him very easily that this whole conspiracy which he now makes so much of was originally ascribed to the Masons. As Mr. Ford is himself a Freemason, he might have known from his own knowledge how flimsy is the basis for the document which damns the Jewish citizens of this country with every crime in the Decalogue. With no other reason for his campaign than these apocalyptic forgeries, his mouthpiece has been echoing week after week the age old "Hep! Hep!"—the slogan which through the centuries has urged the masses to rapine and massacre.

Shortly after the publication of the London edition of the Protocols, the Morning Post of London, England, which has long been recognized as the organ of the ultra conservative party of England began a series of articles in much the same manner as Mr. Ford's articles; but the circulation of the Morning Post is confined almost entirely to people of education and it was, therefore, necessary to offer some proof for the assertion that the document was a bona-fide one. The result has been that there has been considerable rummaging around in the archives of European libraries to trace the literary and political history of the idea contained in Nilus' book and much has been written on the subject. One of the best explanations is to be found in an article by the eminent scholar, Mr. Lucien Wolf, which was published in the London "Spectator". Wolf shows that the Protocols belong to a type of forgery which was common enough in the 17th and 18th centuries when party passions ran high and the reckless scurrilities of political warfare could not be made effective without the concoction of bogus documents. In our own time, this fraudulent traffic has become relatively rare though the notorious Dreyfus forgeries and the roorbacks of our own political campaigns are known to all.

Nilus' documented "discovery" that the Jews are at the bottom of all the political and religious convulsions and all the social instabilities throughout the world has been devised to bolster up a theory which has long failed to convince. The theory itself is at least three centuries old. It was the staple of the pseudo-apocalyptic literature of anti-Christ and the Wandering Jew which assailed the early years of the Reformation and filled the literary armory of the League during the Thirty Years' War. It took more definite political shape in the tracts and broad-sheets, afterwards collected by the German Clericals under the title of "Anabaptisticum et Enthusiasticum Pantheon", which explained the Puritan Revolution in England as a plot against Christianity and Monarchy contrived by the Quakers, and Freethinkers. After the French Revolution and the upheavals of 1830 and 1848, a fresh impulse was given to the agitation. Meanwhile, the Illuminati had come into existence, and Freemasonry had become known, and they were promptly annexed by the scaremongers and substituted for the Quakers and Free-Thinkers in their new rendition of the "Hidden Hand". A number of blood-curdling works dealing in minute detail with their supposed activities as authors of the Revolutions were published by such writers as Father Barruel (1797, etc.), the Chevalier de Malet (1817), Eckert (1854), Gougenot des Mousseaux (1860), Cretineau—Joly (1863), Saint—Andre (1880), and Chabauty (1883). These books all fell flat; the blood of the public refused to be curdled, and today they are only found in second-hand bookshops, or in the libraries of collectors of Masonic and Occult literature.

The Protocols—The Child of a Yellow Novel.

In 1868, a postal clerk in Prussia, one Herman Goedsche, began to write sensational novels based on contemporary history which had considerable success at the time. Goedsche was a man of somewhat unsavory reputation. He had been discharged from the postal service because of a plot to ruin the Dem [illegible] Benedict Waldeck, who he [illegible] German constitution of 1848. Conspiring with certain Prussian junkers who were untiring in their efforts to defeat rising democracy in Germany he manufactured a letter which Waldeck was supposed to have written to a Jew in Switzerland and then as a member of the postal service, he "discovered" the letter and presented it to the authorities. Among the novels which he wrote about the time of his discharge was one entitled "Gaeta, Warschau und Dueppel". As originally published, it was frankly a work of fiction. Thirteen Jews from all parts of the world, draped in flowing white robes, gather about the tomb of a mythical "Grand Master Caleb, the Holy Rabbi Simeon ben Jehudah" in the Jewish graveyard at Prague, (by the way, a name entirely unknown in that cemetery). The meeting which he says is held once every hundred years by the leaders of international Jewry commences at midnight sharp. Goedsche's novel related that the meeting is addressed by a Chief Rabbi who expounds the plan of Simeon, handed down from generation to generation by which the Jews may secure domination over all the nations of the earth. Nilus closely follows the Goedsche novel.

For some years, this story received no more attention than would any other fantastic yellow novel. With the beginning of the anti-Semitic movement in Germany, some journalist who had a good grasp of the psychology of the masses, utilized it for the purpose of agitation. It first came into prominence in the anti-Semitic paper "Deutsch Soziale Blaetter", February 8, 1891, wherein Goedsche's book is presented under a new title, namely: "Review of Political Events of the Last Ten Years", and in place of Goedsche, we find the work ascribed to an Englishman who is called "Sir John Ratcliff". In this form, the hoax appears over and over again in books, pamphlets and periodicals. As late as 1911, it was reprinted in France. Nilus transfers the scene from the cemetery at Prague to a meeting of Freemasons in Paris and to the first Zionist Congress in Basle (he gives both scenes of action in different editions). Otherwise, the protocols are nothing more than an amplified edition of Goedsche's handiwork adapted to the circumstances of the Russian revolution in 1905.

A Weapon of Autocracy.

It will be remembered that in 1905, Russia was defeated in the war with Japan. On Bloody Sunday, in January, 1905, only the cannons turned upon the crowd succeeded in bolstering up the tottering throne of the Czar. The Czar however was compelled to grant the constitution which gave to the people their first representative assembly, the Duma. Dissatisfied with this concession, the reactionary element worked for the restoration of autocracy and the old Czarist despotism. The Russian secret police stirred up pogroms all over Russia. It was the old game of tyranny to discredit democratic government by branding it as a move which would benefit only the Jews and in this guise it was presented to the Russian moujik. Nilus' work was a useful weapon in this propaganda. According to the propaganda then carried on, the Jews were supposed to have been the only element which desired relief from the Czar's despotism and that otherwise everybody would have been absolutely happy under the rule of the despot.

The first reference to the Protocols in the German press of that period is found in the anti-Semitic "Deutsche Hochwacht" of February 4, 1906. This paper reports from Russia the publication of a Russian book entitled "The Cause of our Misfortunes". It is possible that this is the same book that Nilus had written. But the description given in this German newspaper of the story leads one into the belief that others beside Nilus used Goedsche's yellow novel as the basis for forged documents in behalf of the Russian reactionary propaganda. In the "Deutsche Hochwacht" the documents were stated to be the records of a meeting of Jewish Freemasons obtained by a patriotic lady who sacrificed herself by marrying the head of the Freemasons and who stole them from him in the dead of night.

The role which this document played as a pogrom weapon was not confined to the years 1905 and 1906. Abstracts of them were only recently circulated in Denikin's army. They were printed and distributed by the Union of the Russian People, the successors of the Black Hun- [illegible] horrible massacres of inoffensive Jews and Jewesses which followed in the footstep of Denikin's army throughout South Russia and which according to a report of an investigating committee appointed by President Wilson, resulted in the murder of nearly 40,000 Jews.

It is not surprising that in Russia where 90 per cent of the population is illiterate these preposterous stories are given credence but to insist on their authenticity in America is to insult the intelligence of American citizens.

Who is Frazier Curtis?

A man is known by the company he keeps. Mr. Ford claims that he is not an anti-Semite but he has vouched for the auspices under which the London edition of the forgery was published. Let us, therefore, examine in further detail these auspices. One of Mr. Ford's colleagues operates under the name of Frazier Curtis. This is not the man's real name. A further article will disclose who this man is and what is his connection with continental anti-Semitic propaganda agencies. For the present, we are concerned only with a circular which he had printed and which was published and distributed broadcast in London during the latter part of 1919. The significance of that circular is that it constitutes the first effort of the anti-Semitic propaganda in England and contains the first reference in English to "The Protocols". The circular which bears the facetious title of "Jewry Ueber Allies" purports to be a synopsis of the original manuscript of "The Protocols". The copy of the circular which has come into the possession of the Anti-Defamation League, photograph of which appears herein, was one of those which was sent to the American Legion Posts in this country in envelopes mailed from London. Mr. "Curtis" does not attempt to pose as a reformer for in the many other circulars of a similar nature which were mailed in the same manner and in the same handwriting to American Legion Posts, he declares himself frankly an anti-Semite. One of his later circulars sent last May to this country urged Americans to "vote for General Wood on a straight anti-Semitic ticket". In justice to General Wood, it should be said that in a letter addressed to the Anti-Defamation League, he vigorously denounced those who had sent out this circular and stated:

"I have done everything possible to build up a spirit of national solidarity and to prevent the rise of racial or religious animosity."

The animus which was responsible for the publication of the "Jewry Ueber Allies" circular is therefore clear. The reader will note at the top of the circular the explanation which is offered as to the source of "The Protocols". Mr. "Curtis" is bunglesome in his propaganda. Herzl (not "Hertzel") was dead many years before this alleged meeting. Early in 1920, Mr. "Curtis" started distributing "The Jewish Peril", the London edition of "The Protocols". Photographs of the title page and the first page of the introduction taken from the copy sent by Mr. "Curtis" from London to the American Legion Post at Pittsfield, Mass., appear in this report. Compare the explanations offered as to the source of "The Protocols". Compare the handwriting with that appearing at the bottom of the "Jewry Ueber Allies" circular, sent to the American Legion Post at Butte, Montana, some six months earlier. We agree with Mr. Ford that the "auspices" under which the London edition was published do challenge attention. "Auspices" operating in a foreign country which attempt to cause internal strife in the United States and which urge our four million ex-soldiers to vote only for candidates who will make anti-Semitism a plank in their political platforms as well as those Americans who stand sponsor for their propaganda in this country and aid them in their nefarious activities must and do challenge the attention of every American citizen who loves his country and would not see it defiled.

A Weapon of German Reactionaries.

An article in the London "Spectator" suggests that the circulation of the London edition "is a part of a German intrigue to prejudice the German general elections in favour of the Militarist Reactionaries and perhaps even to justify the forcible upsetting of the present German Government by means of another Kapp Putsch". The German Reactionaries have lately [illegible] heir money on anti-[illegible] on page 13.)

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

General Outlook.

SIR PHILIP GIBBS, writing in the New York Times, of September 20, on the situation in Europe, begins his review with the question "Is Europe dying?" He quotes Anatole France as answering the question in the affirmative, adding, "No man, unless he is blind or drunk with optimism, can deny that Europe at the present time is very sick." Similar is the statement found in the Wiener Morgenzeitung, of Aug. 24. It says: "The balance has been drawn. Victors and vanquished are equally bankrupt. The old Europe buried in Versailles and St. Germain will not resurrect, but the new Europe is also in a state of agony. Czechoslovakia is no less miserable than Poland. The latter country is not only threatened from outside but has to face an acute internal crisis, quite aside from the yet unsolved question of the Jews and the Ukrainians. Nobody must wonder when Czechoslovakia and Poland furnish a fertile soil for communist propaganda. Consequently the old game of the anti-Semites of various colors is being repeated and the Jews are held responsible for the conditions in Czechoslovakia, Poland, Austria and Hungary." The most serious question at present is the outcome of the peace negotiations between the Poles and the Bolsheviki, which began in Riga, September 1. It is significant for the Jews for whom the outcome of these deliberations is of the greatest moment that the transactions were begun on the eve of Yom Kippur. Somebody is going to be the "Kapporah-chicken".

The Land of Promise.

From the point of view of the I. O. B. B. it is quite interesting to learn that the Jerusalem Lodge proposed to establish a Garden City, consisting of two hundred houses with lots of fifty dunam each, to be named for Adolf Kraus, President of the order. Young Judea was quite elated when Sir Herbert Samuel opened the vintage in Rishon le Zion, reciting grace in Hebrew, and still more so when he appeared on the Sabbath of Consolation at the main synagog of Jerusalem and recited the prophetic section in which Isaiah appeals to the people to be comforted, for the measure of Israel's suffering is full. The audience, consisting of Jews of all shades, of whom Jerusalem has an unsurpassed cosmopolitan variety, was especially elated when the High Commissioner recited the prayer for "mercy upon Zion for she is the home of our life". It is also reported that in the closing Kaddish, the custom reported from the time of the great philosopher Maimonides was repeated, and the formula was inserted in the prayer for God's kingdom to come: "may it be realized in your days and in the days of the Nasi of Palestine." Another source of enthusiasm was the order issued by the High Commissioner that the British officials have to rise when the Hebrew national hymn "Hatikvah" is sung. Something tangible in the way of gratification is seen in the promotion of Norman Bentwich to the position of Legal Secretary and of Mr. Nurock as Assistant Private Secretary to the High Commissioner.

A report which will have to be confirmed is the statement that Ezra Sassoon, a member of the great banking house in Bagdad, donated 10,000 pounds for the national fund, and the English government plans a bond issue of 2,500,000 pounds for Palestinian improvements. A Belgian company proposes to make large harbor improvements in Jaffa, which, since the railroad between Alexandria and Jerusalem has been established, has lost considerably in importance. It is also said that Sir Alfred Mond has promised substantial aid for the irrigation of and for the installation of electric works in Palestine.

On the other hand we hear discouraging reports about restriction of immigration. In view of the critical condition in Eastern Europe where so many people will be willing to go anywhere in order to escape the hell in which they are living, one can fully understand such an order against aimless immigration. Yet, the laborers in the harbor of Jáffa have already declared a strike as a protest against this order. Far more discouraging is the strong opposition to the new order of things found in the Arabic paper, "Suria al Junubia", June 29, which says, "we consider recognition of the Zionist claims and the appointment of Herbert Samuel an insult to our rights. We have been told that we were liberated from the Turkish yoke, yet we do not see ourselves free in our own country". The Catholic paper "La Croix" of Paris, a clerical and bitterly anti-Semitic organ, demands a revision of the "barbarous peace treaty" with Turkey, which delivers the Christian Arabs into the hands of the Jews. The fact that two Arabs were recently sentenced to long terms in prison for the murder of two Jews, and that Sir Herbert Samuel demanded the resignation of the Governor of Haifa because of his anti-Semitic agitation shows that there is still considerable room for improvement.

Wilson and the Wunder Rabbi.

Isaac Ewen has for several years been publishing very interesting sketches of the lives of Hasidic rabbis in the New York Yiddish press. These stories, full of pathos and humor, are a [illegible]tion of Jewish folklore. One reader took them seriously as a glorification of the "wunder rabbis", a species which of late has been imported to the United States. He protested on the ground that the supposed miracle-workers have never taken any interest in the terrible sufferings of the Jews in Poland and Ukraine, and when approached to do something on their behalf one of these saints merely "gave a krechz" (sigh) and said "What can I do?" President Wilson in his letter addressed to Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, and published on the eve of the Jewish New Year, says he is "deeply moved by the sufferings endured by the Jews of Eastern Europe". He adds what we know that the Jews loyally served this country, and this government earnestly desires that Jewish persecutions be ended. So it seems that both mystic saints and practical statesmen can only repeat the Talmudic wisdom that in critical times Israel can do nothing but rely on his Father in heaven.

The new Polish Premier, Witos, a member of the labor party, received Rabbi Thon of Cracow, member of the Sejm, and in reply to a presentation of anti-Semitic persecution promised he would do his best to work for a harmonious relation between the various nationalities in Poland. This happened at the end of August, but during the whole month of September we have heard daily cases of murderous attacks on the Jews, pillages, legal discriminations and bitter press agitations, in short, nothing different from what we have been compelled to tolerate ever since Poland was resurrected as an independent state. The pogroms usually occurred when in the early part of September the Poles had to retreat before the Bolsheviki. An unusual horror is the execution of Rabbi Hayim Shapira of Plock, August 27, under the charge that he had given signals to the invading Bolsheviki. As a matter of fact the rabbi was standing by the window and reciting the evening prayer, thus giving to the blood-thirsty Poles an opportunity to claim that his swaying meant a signal to the red army. Similar, although not explained in detail, was the execution on August 15, of Erich Bock, a highly respected merchant in Posen, [illegible] of Poland. It is impossible to give in detail the names of all places where such pogroms occurred, but the attack on the Jews of Seiny which lasted four days and resulted in numerous casualties, shall be quoted as a typical instance, because the place is claimed by the Lithuanians. We heard that the Lithuanians now claim Wilna and a number of other cities where the Poles heretofore merely formed the ruling section of the population. The defeat of the Polish armies which at one time was quite serious, naturally required a scapegoat, and while the Jews were drafted, and as a class denounced for draft evasion, they were not allowed to go to the front, probably for the sake of using this fact afterwards as a proof of Jewish cowardice. In spite of this fact quite a number of Jews volunteered for the army. One Jew of Warsaw gave 1,000,000 marks for national defense, and in Lemberg a "Polish society of the Mosaic persuasion" was formed. This constitutes a grave danger because Lemberg is contested between the Poles and the Ukrainians as we remember from the massacre of November, 1918, and nobody can foresee what may happen next week, making the patriots of today traitors of tomorrow. An attempt to conciliate the Jews may be seen in the fact that three Jewish experts were added to the Peace Commission in Riga. Among them is Prof. Simon Askanazi. Nobody will be surprised to learn that Jews are fleeing in masses beyond the borders. In the city of Miedzyrzec, ten Jews were selected, when the Bolsheviki invaded the town, to collect 1,000 marks from every household. They acted under compulsion, but when the Poles returned they were arrested as traitors. It is, therefore, only natural that they are trying to escape from such a choice between the devil and the deep blue sea. This, however, is again treason, and so the Poles crossing the German border to the territory, whose allegiance is to be decided by the Plebiscite, into Myslowitz, arrested 400 refugees whom they drove across the border into Poland. Neither the French military command which is in charge of the territory nor the German authorities made an attempt to prohibit this flagrant violation of international law. The German authorities, in fact, aided the bitterly hated Poles by deporting a number of Jewish miners who had been employed in the coal mines of the district at the time when, owing to the war, Germany needed hands to do the work of the miners who were in the army.

As a specimen of petty persecution and open violation of the clause in the Versailles Treaty, which protects the right of religious minorities, the following is quoted. Polish authorities prohibited the import of [illegible] as a luxury, which draws money out of the country. An unexpected testimony is that of Immigration Commissioner Uhl, who says that many Jewish immigrants arrive penniless in Ellis Island, because they are robbed on the way by Polish officers in Warsaw and Danzig.

Patients Jewish Hospital, Krakow

Poland's Advocate.

The great international question now is undoubtedly the future of the Soviet government in Russia, which has received a more serious import by the conditions in Italy. It is for this reason that Poland is being treated as a bulwark against the advance of Bolshevism towards the west. For this reason evidently President Wilson addressed his letter condemning Bolshevism to the Italian ambassador. In Italy the Jews can certainly not be held responsible for the spreading of communist ideas. There were, according to the last census of 1910, only 34,000 Jews in Italy, in a population of nearly 40,000,000. The enlarged Italy after the war did not receive any increase of her Jewish population, with the exception of Trieste. Even with the 6,000 Jews of Trieste, the Jewish population of Italy is probably less than one per mill. Southern Italy and the island of Sicily have practically no Jews at all, and the seizure of the large estates in Sicily by the peasants, following the example of the Bolsheviki, is surely a fact for which Jews are not in the slightest way responsible. The expression of sympathy with the struggle of the Italian government to maintain the present order of society did, however, not prevent the London Morning Post from denouncing the Russian Jews of America as responsible for America's coldness in suppressing the Bolshevist movement. The Morning Post has become an anti-Semitic organ, as vehement in its attacks as the old Kreuzzeitung. It seems that this paper is largely responsible for the monstrous charge of an organized Jewish movement to gain control of the world politics. In addition to the stupid "Protocols", it published an old hoax of the anti-Semitic press which claims to be a circular issued by Cremieux for the foundation of the Alliance Israelite. This renewed old hoax deserves elucidation.

It is, first of all, an established fact that Cremieux was not one of the founders of the Alliance. The appeal which called for the formation of such a society and published in various papers of 1860, clearly proclaims as the object of the society, the organization of the Jews of various countries for the protection of the rights of their coreligionists in countries where they are oppressed. It is perhaps better to explain the situation. In 1858, Edgar Mortara, a child of six years living in Bologna, which at that time was part of the sovereign papal states, was kidnapped by the order of Pope Pius IX on the ground that four years previously a Christian nurse-girl had baptized him. This medieval outrage provoked public opinion all over the world, was the subject of interpolations in the British Parliament and led to public mass meetings in the United States and protests in the liberal press all over the world. All this availed nothing and so six young men in Paris conceived the idea of establishing an international Jewish organization for the protection of the rights of Jews. There was absolutely no secrecy about it nor anything which could justify the suspicion of a plot for the dominion of the universe. Cremieux, as stated before, was not a charter member. He joined three years later and indeed was for seventeen years, until his death, the president of the society. How little he dreamed of a Jewish world dominion is proven from the fact that he had his own children raised as Catholics. The Morning Post was asked to produce its authority for the monstrous statement, and in reply, September 14, stated that it was taken from a book by the Russian anti-Semite, Alexis Shmakoff, published in 1906. Anticipating, as is quite natural, that this source would be called spurious, the paper says that the Jews are in the habit of calling inconvenient revelations forgeries. In support of this statement it quotes the revelations of the apostate Jew who wrote under the name of Justus. This authority is a rather poor support of the statement. Justus, who was a Rumanian Jew by the name Aaron Briman, was an all round crook. He had deserted his family, hoboing through Europe as a pious Talmudist with a Hebrew book which was plagiarized, afterwards being converted several times to Christianity, and finally being sentenced to a term in the penitentiary for forgery of documents by a Vienna court. A paper which quotes such authorities will not have to complain when fair-minded people refuse to believe its stories that all the Jews executed in Poland or killed in pogroms were supporters of the Bolsheviki.

The Morning Post is assisted by the Times, which in addition to repeating the charges against the Jews of Poland, declared that the Jews killed the czar. It is quite unfortunate that no definite information on the death of the czar and his family is available, but the Times might know that at one time the British people killed their king. For this crime the pious and God-fearing Puritans were responsible and not a single Jew was then living in England, at least as far as is known. We might also remind the London paper of the fact that some czars had been previously assassinated at the time, when in St. Petersburg, not a single Jew was permitted to live. It might know the cases of Peter III and Paul I, both of whom were assassinated by Russian nobles with the consent of the czar's family. So we must consider the story of one Yankel Judonski, a supposed Russian Jew from Chicago, as the murderer of Nicholas II as not quite proven. We have an interesting specimen of the way in which the Northcliffe papers interpret facts. The Morning Post tells us that a convention of the Jewish radical "Bund" proposed joining the social democratic party but [illegible] opposed the motion on the ground that Jewish socialists have special objects. The fact of the matter is that the Bund made application to join the communist party, but was refused by the committee on the ground that its principles were not pure communism.

Russia.

The situation in the old empire of the czars will not be clear until the barriers [illegible] ion are removed. We [illegible] g with reserve which is said to come from Russia. As proof of our fairness, we begin with the fact, that Rabbi Ginsburger of Geneva reports a statement made to him personally by the Bolshevist leader, Victor Kopp, that the majority of the Russian Jews are opposed to Bolshevism. We would merely state that the probability is on the side of this witness, because of the fact that the great portion of the Jews being shopkeepers find themselves out of place in the new order of economic life in Russia. It is reported in a cable from Warsaw, dated September 29, that the Bolsheviki executed two Zionists in Homel and the prominent Yiddish publicist, Rappaport, who writes under the pseudonym of S. A-Nski reports that eight Jews in Wilna were sentenced to death by the Bolsheviki and two were actually executed. From Paris a cable reports that several Jews were executed in Odessa by the Bolshevik government. If it is true, as the London Times, September 19, reports, that the Bolshevik government rests on Jewish intellect, it can at worst only be a section of Jewry that is in sympathy with the movement. We have also heard recently that Bokhara established a Soviet republic and that another one was established in White Russia. Readers will not feel insulted when they are not supposed to know that the White Russia is a branch of the Russian language standing between the Ukrainian or the Ruthenian and the Great Russian. We confidently look forward to learn that all this is the work of the Jews, although it is more than unlikely that the typical Asiatic Jews of Bokhara, mostly engaged in the export business of oriental rugs and jewelry, and at the same time religious mystics who make their annual pilgrimages to Palestine, have any desire of seeing communism established or have any political ambition at all.

Gehinom.

The conditions in the Ukraine are just at this moment again extremely grave. Wladimair Temkin who attended the World Relief Conference in Karlsbad reported that during the last two years pogroms have taken place in 568 cities and towns and that approximately 138,000 people were killed and 1,200,000 rendered utterly destitute and that there are from 120,000 to 150,000 Jewish orphans that require assistance. Wrangel, the present hero of what is supposed to be the real Russian government, is, to judge from the reports, not better than his predecessors, Denikin and Petlura. The last named is reported as again in the field and again active in his heroic victories over defenseless Jews in Eastern Galicia. Nobody can say exactly what the present Ukraine actually is doing. Is it to be the nucleus of a reestablished Russia as France desires to see it in the interest of Russian bondholders or is it to be an independent republic? The other section of the old Polish kingdom which declared its independence, the Republic of Lithuania, seems to make it a point to manifest a fair treatment of the Jews. Its opposition to both Poland and Russia is shown in the small incident that Jewish members of public corporations who do not know the Lithuanian language are allowed to speak in Yiddish but not in Russian or in Polish. The government appointed two Jews to positions on the bench and has publicly protested against the inhumanity of the Poles. A similar protest was made by the Republic of Latvia which denies that a pogrom ever took place in Riga. It would be presumptuous to believe that we can distill the truth out of the numerous conflicting reports.

Roumania.

There is one absolutely undeniable fact known about conditions in Roumania. The rate of exchange of the Roumanian lei is about ten cents on the dollar. More or less, this condition prevails everywhere in Europe, and in Austria conditions are about the worst, but even for a member of the allied victorious nations this state of affairs is rather ominous. An Associated Press dispatch, published in our papers of September 3, reports that many people from what was southern Hungary and is now annexed to Roumania are fleeing. The crown prince who, following the examples of his "colleagues" in other countries, is touring the world was shown a good time by the Bankers' Club in New York and expressed himself in a very optimistic manner as to the prospects of his country, promising to American investors not merely a cordial welcome which we believe, but also great wealth which is a matter of a somewhat subjective opinion. He declared himself a democrat, a statement which was vociferously applauded, and sounded very good from a Hohenzollern. He also received Dr. Gaster, retired Chief rabbi of the London Portuguese Congregation, a Roumanian by birth, September 10, and assured him that the naturalization law will be passed and the king will see to it that it will be carried out. The assurance reminds one of the story of the Jew who applied to a Christian mission for conversion and incidentally for some material support. The first request was absolutely granted, but the second was conditioned upon a proof of the sincerity of his faith. The prospective Christian said: "You wish me to believe that Jesus died and was resurrected. The first part I believe already. Give me one half of what you promised me." So we believe that the Roumanian parliament will pass the law because it has to, but as to the king's promise to carry the law out in good faith, we would have to hear what Messrs. Cusa and Jonescu will have to say. For the present we hear conflicting reports of the treatment of Jewish refugees who cross the border from the Ukraine. At one time it is claimed that they are admitted, at another time again that they are driven back. The experience of the last forty years has amply proven that there is a difference between theory and practice in this section of Europe.

Reawakened Tartars.

The boycott against Hungary, which was declared June 20 by the Labor Federation of Europe, was lifted August 1, because it was not effective. So the reawakened Hungary has gained a victory over the sympathizers of the oppressed socialist party. We have not yet heard anything about the report of the British Commission. It is claimed that the head of this commission is in sympathy with the White Terror. Even some Jews like Rabbi Kraus of Debreczin deny that pogroms have ever taken place, but the town council of Nagy Koeroes passed resolutions condemning the acts of the White Terror as a disgrace to civilization. The resolution names a number of cities in which many Jews were killed and demands the intervention of the Allies. Paul Reiss, a fugitive who arrived in Vienna, reports terrible atrocities, naming both victims and perpetrators. He quotes the case of a man of 89 years who was tortured to death by two officers, the case of another man who was blinded and of a third man who had four of his fingers chopped off. Similar barbarities are published by the Legal Aid Bureau of the socialist party, and finally it is a fact that at the trial of the murderous ba who attacked a cafe in Budapest, killi two Jews and wounding one seriously six of the bandits were sentenced penitentiary terms, ranging from five thirteen years. The government evidently felt that it had to do something to redeem its reputation. This feeling, however seems to be limited to acts of open outlawry, while as far as legal restrictions are concerned the present government seems to be actuated with a desire imitating Roumania, Budaveny, a member of the parliament, introduced a resolution to draft a law which shall deny Jews the right to own or to lease rea estate, shall refuse naturalization to Jews and expel all who settled after July 1914, confiscating all property acquired by Jews during the war, disbarring them from all appointments to public offic and from teaching positions, refusing them licenses, for managing a theater prohibit them from employing Christian servants, and close all Jewish schools, August 7. The most significant part is that the minister said that while he did not agree with all the points of the motion, he felt that the gentleman had presented material for deliberation in the solution of an important question The Minister of Education of his own accord presented a plan to restrict the number of Jewish students in educational institutions. As to the latter it is significant that the Jewish professors Julius Pikler and Rustem Vambery of the University of Budapest were discharged for supposed sympathy with the Soviet although they are baptized, the latter being the son of the famous orientalist and traveler, Armin Vambery, who himself was baptized, is only a Jew by descent. Many Jewish students have fled to Prague Vienna, Germany and Switzerland with the hope to be able to finish their courses there. A Budapest banker donated 1,000,000 crowns for a Jewish university, but on the other hand it is reported that Jewish bankers as a matter of self-protection have contributed liberally to a fund for anti-Semitic papers. Owing to irregularities in the transmission of mail it is difficult to understand these individual instances of Jewish cowardice. It is reported that the Rabbi of Goedoelloe addressing the dictator Horthy, compared him to Moses, the liberator of the Jewish people. A more comical incident is that of the trial of a Jew who had changed his name from Freystadtl to Szabados The prosecutor each time addressed him as Szabados-Freystadtl. He retaliated by addressing the prosecutor as Aczel-Abeles The prosecutor himself had changed both his name and his religion.

Germany.

Both the Reichstag and the diet of Bavaria heard interpellations on the unending tragedy of Polish refugees who are constantly threatened with expulsion In both instances the representatives of the government denied any anti-Semitic motive but declared that food shortage and unemployment required that undesirable foreigners be kept out. In the diet of Hesse a socialist presented the fact that a professor at the university of Giessen posted in his lecture room an invitation to the students to join the anti-Semitic party of the German Nationalists. The president replied that such illegal acts would not be permitted. In the public press of the anti-Semites and in organizations for anti-Semitic propaganda the old story repeats itself. An analogy to the agitation in the London Times

גן ילדים
ירושלים

Kindergarten, Jerusalem

Technical School, Jerusalem

d Morning Post is a statement found the campaign literature of the anti-mitic Schutz und Trutzbund, that Lasllle had said Jews and capitalists must kept out of the labor movement beuse Jews merely pursue their own jects. Challenged, where this stateent was found in Lassalle's published itings, the executive of this union had admit its inability to give this source it, like the Morning Post, insisted that was genuine. Of the many little incidents le shall be quoted as rather humorous.

trade paper, representing the beermers, complained that the governent gave only two pounds of sugar for ch bee-hive and blamed it on the Jews, ho are responsible for the sugar shortge by profiteering. It quoted a Jew by ame who had boasted that he had made),000 marks in one deal of illegal sale sugar. The paper had to admit upon le protest of the local Jewish community at no such man existed. A clear case owing that the militarists are incorrigie is reported from Berlin. A lieutenant tered the dressing room of a dance ll in Berlin and yelled, "All Jews take f their hats, a Prussian lieutenant has rived". One man laughed and the aliant soldier threw himself upon the an and began to choke him. He was, ith great difficulty, separated from his ictim, who by the way, was not a Jew. s a sign of a better conception of realities the same circle, the case of the antiemitic publicist, Von Gerlach, shall be quoted who came out with a public statenent that the anti-Semitic party is corupt and he would have nothing to do with it any more. The Von Gerlach's are an old anti-Semitic family. One of their number was a bitter enemy of Bismarck whom he accused of sympathy with the Jews. Another comical stunt of an anti-Semite is the assertion made by a professor, Lehmann, of Weimar, who complains that the Roman law is still the basis of the existing civil code and that it will have to be abrogated, as the only means of breaking the power of Jewry. The comical part lies in the fact that the same appeal was made 150 years ago by the anti-Semite Goethe in his Goetz von Berlichingen, where an attorney complains that the people rebel against the Roman law and against attorneys in general whom they consider grafters. This statement was made by Goethe, himself, a law graduate, at a time when not a single Jew was allowed to practice law in Germany. Small annoyances are reported from seashore resorts. In one a gallows was erected with the Mogen David on it. In another one, Jews were taxed higher than non-Jews. This however, was done in the state of Danzig which is a sort of Polish protectorate. From Borkum it was reported that the dock laborers of Emden declared a strike against this seashore resort on the ground of its anti-Semitic agitation. Afterwards, the report was corrected and this correction is quite interesting as a proof of the anti-Semitic charge of profiteering. It seems that the visitors at this resort, taking advantage of special laws, not merely lived in extravagance but sent fats and other rationed food stuffs to their homes, while the children of the laboring population in Emden could not even obtain milk. The case of Professor Einstein against whom a wild anti-Semitic propaganda was started, has been amply reported in the daily press. It is claimed but not yet officially confirmed that he will leave Germany for Holland. An illustration of communal Jewish life is the election of George Minden, successor of Edward Lasker as attorney for a prominent banking institution, as president of the Berlin Congregation. Minden who has just completed his seventieth year is the son of one of the founders of the reform congregation of Berlin, and even the Zionists voted for him while the orthodox members declared they could not give him their votes, but paid a tribute to his Jewish loyalty. The other side of the medal is a strike threatened by all officials of the Berlin congregation from the rabbis down to the grave diggers. The solution has not been announced at this writing, but the trustees declare that inasmuch as the congregation has no compulsory power in raising taxes and must always face the fact that individual members will rather withdraw than pay higher assessments, they could not promise substantial relief. A rather typical sign of the times is the announcement that the former crown-prince of Saxony is engaged to the daughter of the Jewish banker, Heimann of Breslau. The former dynasty of Saxony is strictly Roman Catholic and an uncle of the young man is a member of the Jesuit order. There was also some unpleasantness in the family. The king of Saxony separated from his wife who had eloped with a French dancing master, but still there is genuine royal blood, and it is a pity that Heine could not write a sequel to his poem "Erlauschtes", in which two Hamburg Jews discuss the prospects of their daughters in marrying Christians of high standing, and one warning against raising the price says, for 80,000 marks I could get a pope.

...he hinter dem Hauptbau befindlichen beiden Isolier-pavillons & das Desinfektionshaus mit Waschküche.
Allgemeines jüdisches Krankenhaus Schaaré Zedek, Jerusalem — שערי צדק ע״ה״ק בירושלם החולים הכללי לבני ישראל

Jewish Hospital, Jerusalem

Misery Within Misery.

The poor Galician refugees in Vienna have again received notice that they must leave the city. Of course the question "whither" is highly important, as the latest developments in Eastern Galicia render it more impossible than ever that these people should return to their homes. Meantime the order serves as a campaign issue for the anti-Semites of both colors, the clericals and nationals, who charge the present socialist government with dereliction of duty. The officials of the republic, however, are by no means favorably disposed as may be inferred from one instance. The law permits any German citizen of the former Austrian empire to become a citizen of the Austrian republic by declaration. A Jew, who is a native of Bukowina, tried to avail himself of this legal provision but was told that he had first to prove his claim by his race. The clerical party naturally is the most hostile of the various brands of anti-Semites. The mayor of Maria-Taferl, a place noted for a shrine, posted notices in the town warning hotel keepers against receiving any Jews or else he would issue an order that no one is permitted to stay longer than three days, for—so the ukas continues—Maria-Taferl is a most illustrious Catholic shrine but no Juden-temple, July 27.

Miscellaneous.

The conference for international Jewish relief, held in Karlsbad August 5-13, was not recognized by the Joint Distribution Committee. It claimed that the relief as managed at present was merely interested in emergency and not in constructive work. It demanded that instead of food, raw material and tools should be furnished and even these merely on credit. At the same time trade unions, model workshops, evening schools, children's protective associations and assistance to students was demanded. The descriptions of the terrors in the Ukraine while not bringing us any news, were heartrending.

The new president of the French Republic, M. Millerand, originally a socialist but of late a national chauvinist, is not known in regard to his position to the Jews, but it is a little disquieting to know that he has the ardent support of the two wildest anti-Semites of the French Parliament, Barres and Daudet. It so happened that the first man called to cast his vote in the presidental election was a Jewish Socialist, Uhry, who naturally voted against the president. A belated report tells us of a pogrom which took place in Goletta in the French protectorate of Tunis, July 13. The details are not given but comparing conditions with those of Algeria, we know that the native Arab population sees in the Jews who are more assimilative, enemies of their own autonomy.

The two Jewish deputies of Italy, Della Seta and Modigliani, both socialists, were assaulted by a mob when they left the parliament after a protest of the socialists against the attacks on the building occupied by the socialist paper Avanti. The motives are supposed to be anti-Semitic because other socialists were not molested. It is worth while noticing in this connection, that of the ten Jewish members of the Italian Parliament only three are socialists and of these three, two, the above named Modigliani and Claudio Treves, are so moderate that the socialist party in a three days' session discussed their expulsion on the ground that the third internationale had declared them traitors to the cause of communism.

Hausdorff
Gegründet 5618-1818 durch Selig Hausdorff
Armen und Pilgerwohnungen auf dem Berge Zion in Jerusalem

Dwellings for the Poor, Mount Zion, Jerusalem

A paper, recently received, informs us that the daughter of Thomas Masaryk, the president of the republic of Czechoslovakia, who married the Jew Bondi, was married without a religious ceremony. It proves that Masaryk must be very popular if he can dare public opinion in a largely Catholic country in this way. Masaryk, himself born a Catholic, has declared himself a Protestant, and within the Catholic clergy of Czechoslovakia there is a strong movement "away from Rome" similar to that which some years ago was agitated within the German population of that country.

From Spain comes the report of the legal establishment of a Jewish congregation in Madrid, supposed to be the first in the country after the expulsion of 1492. We heard, however, some years ago of a regular synagog in Seville. It is hard to believe in a change of public sentiment when we consider that about twenty years ago in spite of the constitutional guarantee of freedom of worship, a mob demonstration led by the duchess of Medina Sidonia took place in the Spanish capital when the first Protestant church was dedicated. Far more interesting is the report that the little band of Samaritans in Sichem asked for a Jewish teacher. The Samaritans, a tribe that has dwindled down to about 120 souls, represent the last remnant of the group of Jews excluded by Ezra because of their intermarriage with the Cananites.

It is strange that Hasidism, until lately unknown in America, seems to be receiving quite a following owing to the war which devastated the sections of Galicia and Ukraine, which furnished the largest part of its devotees. One of these wunder rabbis, Elimelech Hurwitz, who recently arrived in New York from Galicia, said to the newspaper men that conditions are very unfavorable at home. The terrible privations compel people to accept the garments sent from America, and so the gaberdine and the fur trimmed hat is being discarded and American food is being accepted without much question as to its kosher quality.

Obituary.

Rudolph Mosse, one of the most prominent newspaper publishers of Germany, died September 8. He was the son of a physician, born in the now Polish town of Graetz, and the Berliner Tageblatt, which he published, is one of the most influential organs of liberalism. He also published for a number of years the oldest Jewish paper in existence, the Allgemeine Zeitung des Judentums.

Edward von Schweitzer, the first Jew who obtained the rank of general in the active service of the Austrian army, died in Budapest at the age of 74. He was raised to the rank of major-general in 1904, and of Lieutenant Field-Marshal in 1908. He was a loyal Jew and member of the Board of Trustees of the Budapest Congregation. In connection with his death an interesting reminiscence presents itself. As colonel of a regiment which was named for the Russian Grand-duke Michael, he represented his regiment at a celebration in St. Petersburg and was received in audience by the czar, at the time when a foreign Jew could not legally enter Russia except under very humiliating conditions.

An equally exceptional case is recalled by the death of William Cahn, who was one of the two Jews employed in prominent positions at the foreign office under Bismarck. Cahn had served as interpreter for the Bavarian legation in Paris in 1870 when the war broke out, and was permitted to remain in the French capital during the whole period of the war, representing the German interests. For his meritorious service Bismarck appointed him councillor at the foreign office after the establishment of the new German empire.

A Hebrew author whose name was connected with a quite interesting controversy was Schulim Albeck, who died recently in Breslau. Many years ago the orthodox rabbi of Halberstadt, B. H. Auerbach, edited a very interesting code of rabbinical law, written by Abraham ben Isaac of Narbonne, in the twelfth century. Albeck claimed that the editor had allowed himself certain liberties with the text because of his orthodox bias. The orthodox side naturally denied this charge vigorously.

Edward Birnbaum, one of the most learned cantors of Germany, died August 7. He was an authority on the history of synagog music, was born in Cracow, 1855, came as a very young man to Germany, and served for many years as cantor in Koenigsberg.

The injustice of generalities in the charges made against the Jews is strongly impressed upon us by the news of the death of Siegmund Adler, professor of public law at the University of Vienna. He was the brother of the socialist leader, Victor Adler, who died just on the day when the Austrian Republic was proclaimed. Siegmund Adler was the exact opposite of his brother, being a believer in a democratic Austria with the German element as leaders and in a constitutional monarchy. Both brothers were baptized in infancy in Rome, the father having obtained the privilege that Pope Pius IX personally perform the ceremony. The latter, at least insofar as Victor Adler was concerned, did not prove an infallible success.

JEWS WILL ENJOY FULL MINORITY RIGHTS IN LITHUANIA.

Vilna (J. C. B. Service).—Recently the Jewish community had its first meeting since the release of its members. Among others present were Dr. Soloweitchik who represented the government, Dr. Jonaines, president of the Jewish National Council, Dr. Rosenbaum, vice-president of the National Council and Dr. Rachmilievitch, president of the Kehillah. In welcoming the guests Wigotsky, who acted as chairman, expressed the joy of the Jewish population of Vilna at the release of the leaders and appealed to the government to mitigate the suffering of the Jews. In behalf of the government Dr. Soloweitchik declared that Lithuania will give national minorities full recognition and that at an early date proper representation in the Jewish Ministry will be provided for. Dr. Rachmilevitch and others expressed the gratitude of the Jewish people in Lithuania to the Jewish Ministry, the work of which was lauded by numerous speakers.

The Anti-Defamation League

By Lucius L. Solomons, San Francisco

THE spectre of anti-Semitism is looming up on both sides of the great ocean. The happenings of the last six years in a disordered, a distracted world, have given us a foretaste, then a full taste, and now a very bitter after-taste of the nauseous repetitions of history. The scapegoat of the ancient world, the pariah of the Middle Ages, centuries of modern civilization have scarcely raised the Jew's relative rank of social and political outlawry; for today—the first time in its glorious history of liberty and liberalism—seeds of race hatred have taken root in the virgin soil of this freest of all free lands. Temperately and without needless alarm, we desire to meet the critical issue; but despite that spirit, let us not delude ourselves with the notion that the recent vaporings of the pseudo-philanthropist and pugnacious pacifist of Detroit indicate a detached gospel of hate, initiated by himself or his hired hack writers. They are in reality distinct features in a program of anti-Jewish propaganda "made in Germany" and deliberately spread through agencies in Europe and America by methods so insidious that neither its origin nor purpose is externally apparent.

This danger to the Jewish cause in our own country was sensed by the Order of B'nai B'rith more than a decade ago. I do not mean the danger lurking in the viciousness of social, commercial or political prejudice and petty persecution. I mean the danger attendant upon our complacent disregard and indifference; the cowardly fear of "answering back"—the utter failure, in short, of either defensive or preventive measures. The agency through which the Order has sought to combat the alarming spread of Jew-hatred—for it is just that and no less—has been known for the last eight years as the Anti-Defamation League, although it existed for more than four years prior thereto under another name. Curiously enough, it was suddenly called into life by such a series of Jew-baiting publications as are at this precise moment spreading flamelike over Germany, France, England and the United States—to say nothing of Central and Eastern Europe, under such labels as, "The Jewish Peril", "The International Jew", "The Jewish Superman". "Jewish Freemasonry", "Down with Jewish Government", and the like. In one sense the sinister literature of twelve years ago was less alarming than the present propaganda, because unlike the latter, it was no part of a world program, but originated here at home; yet from another viewpoint it was for that very reason a matter of even graver concern to American Israel.

The first challenge to us appeared in the early part of 1908 in the form of an unofficial published interview with a police commissioner of New York, in which the Jews of that city were charged—not with constituting themselves a super-empire as now—but rather a sub-empire—a sort of underworld oligarchy—an organized leadership in criminal vice of every variety known to the slums of the great metropolis. He declared that Jews composed more than 50 per cent of the criminal classes of New York City, and that in non-violent crimes, such as sexual offenses, forgery, embezzlement, perjury, fraud, petty forms of thievery—in short, those involving moral turpitude, our contributions to current penalogical history were even larger. As if by prearranged schedule, this extra-judicial dictum of a quasi-judicial public officer—(a naked libel fortified by neither facts nor figures—but badly and boldly asseverated in contemptuous language and spread by the Associated Press all over the world) was seized by several magazines and periodicals as a pretext for distorted stories of Jewish white slavers, procurers, gangsters and underworld denizens who it was claimed (in Chicago particularly) enjoyed a monopoly of proprietorship in all sorts of commercialized vice—profiteers in prostitution, so to say. "McClure's" of New York and "Blackwood's Magazine" of Chicago were the most conspicuous of these publications.

It took three years of patient and laborious research to gather statistics sufficiently authentic to refute the reckless utterances of the New York commissioner; and during those same three years the agency which was the predecessor of the Anti-Defamation League systematically organized and operated by the following:

First: On the assumption that most libels have some elements of truth at their base, we proceeded by discipline of the miscreants among us to clean out our own Augean stables. Operating politically we had laws passed in many States (commencing with Illinois), making many forms of commercialized sexual vice a felony.

Only public agencies, the constituted authorities and the courts were called upon to act; but the directing force, the moral and financial support of the movement and the detail came from the councils of our organization. Neither the Jewish nor the non-Jewish public was openly solicited for aid; but the employment of special prosecutors and investigators was financed by our own membership assisted by Jewish and Christian clergymen and publicists; and certain philanthropic agencies were approached purely upon the ground of civic decency, disassociated from any consideration of race or religion. The resultant clean-up showed that where one Jew was convicted, seven non-Jewish offenders were prosecuted—not always successfully but sufficiently to demonstrate some intimate phrases of the main problem we were facing. The moral shakeup incident to these prosecutions had the effect, as always, of causing a stampede of the offenders, who were either driven from one State to another or voluntarily sought fields where lax laws or non-enforcement gave greater freedom. It soon was apparent that the malignant growth was not being uprooted but merely transplanted. Accordingly the Mann bill was devised, and its enactment into law by Congress followed. Upheld by the highest court in the land, it has been found effectual with the aid of the state laws already referred to in wholly eradicating the external evidences of what has been known (perhaps a misnomer) as the white slave traffic. There still exists commercialized vice, and Jews, in common with other classes, are sometimes identified with it. But what remains of it in the United States today takes to cover; it no longer perches on the housetops. Thus a Nation-wide condition, involving the moral health of the larger communities of the land, was relieved under the secret leadership of a Jewish organization, primarily because our people were charged on slight provocation with sharing the guilt.

After the lapse of twelve years I am betraying no secrets, nor am I indulging either in a confession or a boast on behalf of the league, when I say that the Illinois Congressman, who has so frequently declared he did not originally intend the broad interpretation which the courts have given to the law, could, if he so desired, shift the responsibility for its authorship upon that same executive council which formed the nucleus of the present organization.

Second: The defamation of the Jew eight years ago was general and of multiplied variety. Unprotested and unresented, ridicule, contempt and obloquy were showered upon him from the stage in drama, vaudeville and motion pictures; and be it said parenthetically that the greatest embarrassment confronting the league was the shameful fact that a large percentage of the offenders were themselves Jews. Newspapers in reporting criminal or quasi-criminal news items delighted to emphasize the Jewish origin of the offenders. Hundreds of summer resorts took pains to give publicity to the undesirability of Jews as guests. In the commercial world advertisements appeared offensively reflecting upon our business as well as our social standing as a people. To the observant but uninformed it might easily have appeared that the word "Jew" was synonomous with "pawnbroker", "thief" or "procurer"—possibly all three. During the war "slackers", "deserters", "malingerers", to say nothing of "profiteers", were designations indiscriminately applied to us by anti-Semites here as well as abroad; and that this poisonous propaganda crept insidiously into official reports in some departments of the Government war service the records of the administrative committee of the league will show.

But the records of this same administrative committee which met weekly in Chicago year after year will likewise show that patient, persistent and tactful methods applied unceasingly have in the course of time reduced to a minimum the evils complained of and the dangers attendant upon them. The league has functioned largely through legislative channels. Laws in many States were passed making defamatory publications designed to create race or religious antagonism a species of criminal libel. Appeals were made to the courts, where other methods failed, to keep Bible reading, particularly the Crucifixion story, out of public school rooms and school libraries. We have exposed and removed the false and unjust statistical reports which from time to time found their way somehow into the war service activities. But beyond this—by educational processes, by lectures in schools and colleges, by public addresses before every variety of civic, fraternal and religious organizations, by temperate and scholarly publications in both the Jewish and secular press; and (most vital of all) by friendly and dignified correspondence with each one of the hundreds of defamers, concrete results have been effected. In almost every instance retraction, apology, explanation, or what is more to the point, a promise to desist, has repaid the effort.

Until a few months ago the league was beginning to believe that the greater part of its herculean task had been fairly accomplished. It now appears that it has not even fairly begun.

The principals in the present world-wide conspiracy to disseminate anti-Jewish propaganda are for the time being working anonymously on the European side, as are also their American agents, among them Mr. Ford's editorial scavengers. This much only is known from an investigation in the German senate, viz, that the funds for the campaign are being supplied through Prince Salem and Count Behr, the leaders of the Conservative or Reactionary party. But as to the literature itself, or such portion of it as is intended for non-German consumption, its origin is cunningly camouflaged by being written in the Russian language, translated into English and French and printed in England in the form of books and circulars. This evidence is in the possession of the league with the additional fact that the pretended authorship of the most dangerous portion, viz, that circulated among the membership of the American Legion, is signed, "Frazier Curtis, formerly of the Lafayette Escadrille". Investigations by the league indicate that the name is assumed, the French service records disclosing no such individual; and the purpose is apparent, viz, to have it appear that an American fighting for France against Germany is beseeching the American Legion to drive out of its ranks all Jewish ex-soldiers as traitors, deserters, profiteers, etc., and likewise to Nominate General Leonard Wood "on a straight anti-Jewish platform".

Not all this literature is being published abroad, and not all is officially connected with the European propagandists. As in all campaigns, there are volunteers, camp-followers and stragglers, who seek to attach themselves to the main body for purposes of their own. There are about to be issued from printing establishments in this country several books dealing with multifarious phrases of the "Jewish Question", which outrank in scandalous villification anything which has yet been published in Russia or Austria. Advance copies have been procured by the executive secretary of the league, and the press of America has already been requested by the governing board to ignore these publications in their book reviews. In two separate instances the authors have admitted to our investigators that their sole purpose is profit, and have disclaimed any connection with what is understood to be the common source of the propaganda, although they announce their intention of presenting a copy to every member of Congress. The league, therefore, appeals to the Jewish public not to buy these books. A little calculation will make it self-evident that at least 500,000 people among the Jewish population would ordinarily (either from natural desire or sense of duty) read with interest any book whose subject matter concerns them in any way. The more infamous the contents the greater the concern; but that concern—and even ordinary curiosity—may be subserved without playing into the hands of our enemies by paying them to defame us. They boast that we are ourselves virtually the only purchasers, thus enriching them—nay (paradoxical as it is) subsidizing their libels against us. The exact figures will probably never be known, but undoubtedly the circulation of the "Dearborn Independent", already over a million, has jumped 50 per cent in the last two months principally because the victims of its coarse and clumsy fabrications have rushed to buy each weekly issue. Sober reflection will soon convince one of the vital necessity of applying the boycott method as most effectively administering the ounce of prevention and saving the pound of cure.

I have been long in reaching the main purpose of this article, which is to protest against what I consider a short-sighted attitude assumed by many leaders of American Jewry and likewise by friendly Gentile publicists. They assert that we should treat this international cabal against us with pitying contempt; that if let alone, it will peter out like the piffle that it is; that its own gurgling and sputtering idiocy will choke it to death before long; but that if we dignify it by resentment, denial, protest, we create the universal impression that there is truth underlying it. If this were indeed the view of the outside world we might joyfully cry Amen; but it is so far only the view of Jewish optimists and non-Jewish friends and well-wishers. It may likewise be the view of all intelligent, unprejudiced and informed Gentiles. But how many among the world's population are at once intelligent, unprejudiced and informed upon Jewish affairs? To be sure, we have nothing to fear from those few; and the ignorant and vicious who unfortunately compose largely the rank and file of humanity can not be reasoned with anyhow, or made to understand. They must be born over again through posterity; but there is the crux! We of the older generation can do little else now than write the closing chapters of our lives and prepare to meet whatever further life there may be reserved for us when the eternal question will perhaps be answered. But it is for the little lives that are in our keeping—it is for our children and their children who are to follow us, and who we pray may escape the slings and shafts of prejudice and hostility from which we have suffered. If by so doing we can make this sad and selfish world a little safer, a little happier—a little more peaceful for them to live in—then let us with our dying strength, if need be, strike boldly at bigotry and injustice wherever they rear their hideous heads. To do that, we must nail every lie, however palpable, or it stands admitted before a biased world. We must hurl back every slander in the teeth of the slanderer, however insignificant he be, or how absurd his charge. We must resent and punish every insult, no matter how far beneath contempt may be the vile offender.

The Jew does not ask for power, except the power to breathe and function as a vital organ in the world's economy—as a component element in the anatomy of its body politic. He does not seek for place or preferment — only a place to live in peace — for him and for his children. But he does crave for justice—for common justice—for this he cries out passionately to Christian civilization and offers in return charity and love, service and sacrifice. Has ever any people asked for less or offered more? But no longer as of old, on cringing knees, begging princely boons or supplicating thrones —but "erect and loud as men who ask man's rights".

Whether we be a "super-empire" or only an aggregation of supermen—whether God's prophets or man's profiteers—preferred or common stock of humanity—patriots, pariahs or alien enemies, however they may regard us—Israel's arm shall hold aloft the Torch of Truth until that arm is pulseless; and the undimmed light shall blur into the glistening eye of new-born nations as it has ever pierced the sightless ones of those long dead.

. . . . the slave
Of the Ideal, a pilgrim far and wide,
Cursed, hated, spurned and scourged, with none to save.
The Pharaohs knew him, and when Greece beheld
His wisdom wore the hoary Crown of Eld;
Beauty he hath foresworn and wealth and power;
Seek him today and find in every land
No fire consumes him, neither flood devour—
Immortal through the lamp within his hand.

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, Monday, Sept. 21, 1920.

T WOULD seem that London is gradually becoming the great center for all anner of Jewish activities. The Zionts have long been here; the Mizrachi ovement has likewise set up its abode the English capital; and now we hear at the Agudas Yisroel are about to come London, which they have decided to tablish as their center. Considering ie unsettled state of continental Europe e can understand this tendency, for reat Britain is now literally the "island the blest", where at least people can about their daily avocations without eing in fear of their lives. The economic tuation here likewise makes it a dumping round for appeals of all sorts. Truth to ll, there is not a single one of these ppeals which has not a good motive, and hich does not support a good cause. he War Memorial is still with us; the rst £150,000 (say $750,000) have aleady been collected, and now the prooters of the scheme are redoubling their fforts to make the snow-ball increase. hen, there is the National Fund, which t this time of day requires little explanaion. These are, as it were, the main hannels; side by side with them, there are umberless others, differing in character nd degree, but all having as their aim, elief. Messengers from such bloodtained countries as the Ukraine, or from he Jewish communities in Poland, where ife is one long terror, reach London from ime to time and tell us in eloquent fashion ow much they suffer and how much they eed. They are aided in their efforts by uch bodies as the Association of Ukrainn Jews in Great Britain, which appeals nd appeals again, and which has a splenid ally in the passionate eloquence of r. Jochelman who, by the way, is the oreign Secretary of the London Lodge.

The latest demand in this direction is not o much for contributions of money, as ather contributions of practical sympahy, showing itself in clothing the naked nd feeding the hungry. I refer to the hildren from Vienna and Hungary, who ave been sent over to this country, first by the "Save the Children Fund", and now y the Government itself. A couple of thousand of these innocent victims of the war have reached these shores, and there is a fair sprinkling of Jewish children among them. A committee of ladies has undertaken to find homes for these boys and girls, and it is pleasing to be able to report that while this committee is not officially connected with the London Lodge, as a matter of fact, the great majority of the ladies are also members of the Women's Auxiliary of the London Lodge. So far, their appeals to people to take one or more of these under-fed children into their homes, to treat them as they treat their own, to feed and clothe them, and give them a chance of physical development, have not met with all the success that might have been expected. But then the first appeal came at the holiday season, when most people were either away or about to go away; in the second place, there are many people still here who cannot easily overcome their feeling of hostility to what were lately enemy countries; but it is hoped that humanity and common-sense will triumph over stupid prejudices. The Quakers have done wonders in this work; their achievements cannot be sufficiently highly praised. What Quakers can do, can also be done by Jews, who pride themselves on being kind-hearted children of kind-hearted sires. The committee in its very delicate and arduous work is not hopeless as to the prospects. It is only necessary to see the children for oneself to realize that these little, bent, emaciated, under-fed creatures must be helped unless we are to blush for our own humanity.

Of the general life of the community there is little to tell at this season, for the holidays have just ended and the Holy Days have just commenced. Nevertheless, it is possible to see already the stirrings of the "dead bones". As might be expected it is the youthful element in the community that is moving first. The teachers have just had a successful gathering at Oxford, and while they were there the Inter-University Jewish Federation of Great Britain and Ireland held its third conference, and showed that it was a baby, vigorous in constitution and determined to achieve great things. This Inter-University Federation corresponds very nearly to the Inter-Collegiate Menorah Association of America. You have had Jewish college boys and girls, and many of them, for a long time; we are just beginning to show a fair number of these modern academicians. This tendency for Jewish University men and women to federate is all to the good; we shall, at least, know upon what fund to draw for social and other communal workers. As our problems grow so the demand for workers will grow, and here we have enthusiasm, youth, knowledge, and culture, an ideal combination of which our community stands in great need. The literary societies are also beginning to stir, and the defunct union which did such excellent work before the war appears to be reviving. It has been fortunate in obtaining the leadership of Dr. Charles Myers, who is a keen Jew, and one of the foremost psychologists in the country. Then we have had introduced to us a Jewish Folk-Song Society for the purpose of cultivating traditional and old-fashioned melodies, which might otherwise tend to get lost. Last, but not least, the Jewish Historical Society of England is arranging for a course of lectures to be held shortly, on various aspects of Jewish culture: One on Music, one on Folk-lore, one on Art, one on Science, and one on Heredity. Courses such as these will probably provide information to non-Jews about Jews, for at present the Jew is very much in the limelight, and the Jewish question is topical. "Mrs. Morning Post" is still quixotically tilting at wind-mills. It has been suggested that its only reason for so doing is an intense desire to see its circulation go up. One cannot help hoping, in the interests of the intelligence of the British public, that its circulation will not go up. For the stuff that it furnishes for its readers, judged from an average standard of knowledge, appears contemptible in the extreme. The Church Times recently castigated this journal of feudal conservatism, showing up how false is its history, and how unjust and unfair its charges.

Some observers in our midst declare that as a community we are becoming more religious. Perhaps conforming would be a better word. Certainly one or two facts point in that direction. Quite recently the Beth Din set up a Commission for Kashrus. This body has agreed upon certain requirements to which Kosher boarding house keepers and restaurant proprietors will be expected to submit in regard to Kosher food, Sabbath observance and the rest. Only those who accept the conditions set up will be placed on the list approved by the commission, and the public will be informed by the publication of the list in the press. Many people question the efficacy of this procedure; certainly the restaurants not on the list have by no means had to close their doors; but the list is there, and those who care for Kashrus have at least an opportunity of safeguarding their principles. Ten years ago such a list would have been inconceivable in our midst. We were not yet ripe for it. Today it is regarded as evidence of a move towards the right.

Nor does this stand alone. During the recent Holy Days the Synagogues were said to have been more crowded than usual, and, what was more remarkable, there were many young men in the congregations. Whether it is that Zionism has stirred our young people, or whether they have been moved in some other way, cannot be determined with ease. Anyhow, they are to the fore in the Synagogue, in the friendly societies, even in the Zionist movement itself. Here the great problems are practical; immigration into Palestine must be soundly regulated, and the new settlers must be helped in their economic development. Not money only but business experience is essential for these objects, and a movement is on foot to bring about the cooperation with the Zionist movement of prominent leaders of Anglo-Jewry. Whatever may be said of the attitude of these men to Zionism, it must be admitted that they are fully alive to the importance for Anglo-Jewry of Palestine. We have in Palestine, they say in effect, an experiment which must succeed. If it fails, the blame will rest on Jewry as a whole. It must not fail. It is up to all Jews to see that it does not. We are in honor bound, therefore, to do our utmost to make a success of the Great Adventure. Fortunately the recent Zionist Congress created a piece of machinery by means of which such cooperation can be utilized for Palestine. We refer to the Economic Council, of which Sir Alfred Mond is to be Chairman, and to which it is hoped to appoint some of the men prominent in the councils of Anglo-Jewry, most of whom are not professed Zionists. It is hoped, too, that some prominent American Jews will likewise join the Council.

Negotiations are still in progress, and nothing definite can be reported as yet. But great efforts are being made to ensure the success of the movement, in which many of our younger men are greatly interested. One of them, however, Harry Sacher, is shortly leaving for Palestine, where he will edit the Palestine Weekly and also practice law. Mr. Sacher is a journalist and barrister, and has been a tower of strength to the Zionist Organization during the last year or so. To use the old saying once more: London's loss will be Palestine's gain.

A number of distinguished visitors from America have recently been here. Foremost among them must be placed Dr. and Mrs. Moses Hyamson, who are old friends of London Jewry. Dr. Hyamson is greatly loved and respected by those who know him; his broad human sympathies, his learning, and his personality are bound to retain for him his old friends, as they are bound to win for him new friends. Many still among us regret his loss to Anglo-Jewry; but that is an old story, the ending of which was written years ago. Had Dr. Hyamson remained here, he would have had friends in one hemisphere; his going to New York has carried his fame to two. Another visitor was Dr. de Sola Pool, likewise an old Londoner, who has made his home in New York, and who is now connected with Palestine; and the third is Mr. Nathan Straus, who is sufficiently well known in the States to need no introduction. Mr. Straus came forward in the press the other day with a remarkable letter, remarkable for its tone and its substance. Its tone was vigorous; Mr. Straus spoke of "my people" and came forward boldly as a conscious Nationalist Jew, desirous of having a part in the great work of rebuilding Palestine, and anxious to win for that work the sympathy and help of all people. The substance of the letter was to announce the inauguration of a campaign for pasteurization of milk in this country. His last paragraph expresses a fine sentiment, and is worth quoting:

"It gives me the greatest satisfaction to be in a position to give England the benefit of my experience of a life-time. Every good Jew cannot fail but appreciate the momentous service rendered my people by the Balfour declaration and in the acceptance of the mandate over Palestine. It is little that one individual can do in view of the tremendous debt we owe to your Government. But I am attempting that little with a grateful heart. And I know that the adoption of pasteurization will redound to the greatest benefit of your country in the growing up of a healthy generation, and in the saving of innumerable lives."

One of our London theatres is showing a new version of the old legend of "The Wandering Jew". While the acting is good, the play as a play is written down as somewhat second-rate. It is by E. Temple Thurston, and is described as an historical drama in four phases. But if it is no great play, it is a fine spectacle, beginning at Jerusalem on the day of the Crucifixion, and ending with the Tribunal Chamber of the Spanish Inquisition.

The London Lodge is still in vacation, but when we meet again after the Holy Days we are determined to continue our efforts to establish sister lodges in the country. With Manchester we have already been in communication, and hope to meet the brethren there at an early date; at Liverpool, Leeds and Birmingham we hope to be in close touch with likely people before long. The London Lodge has issued two pamphlets setting forth the aims and objects of the Order; their distribution backed by personal effort ought to bring new adherents to our organization in many parts of these islands.

THE TERRIBLE PLIGHT OF THE JEWS IN SOVIET RUSSIA.

Despite the fact that pogroms are not tolerated in Soviet Russia, and every attempt to incite one portion of the population against the other is strongly suppressed, the Jewish problem in that country has never been so acute, according to an official bulletin of the World-Zionist Organization. It asserts that Jewish party leaders of the Left who at first approved of the Soviet regime now say openly that for Jews there is practically no room in Russia.

"The stringency of the economic condition has created an ugly wave of anti-semitism" declares this bulletin, a copy of which has been received by the Zionist Organization of America.

"The Jewish population was the only section which was ruined almost completely by the nationalization of commerce. The Soviet Government, as is well known, passed measures suppressing all private trade; and the effect of these on the Jews may easily be estimated when it is remembered that before the war about 66 per cent of the Jewish population was engaged in trade and commerce, while the remaining 34 per cent made a living as artisans and factory workers. The greater part of the ruined non-Jewish commercial classes were easily able to find a livelihood in the field of agriculture, but to the Jews this path was completely closed. Every attempt to settle the Jews as farmers in the villages came to grief owing to the opposition of the peasants. It must be remembered that even the Soviet Government has not introduced the nationalization of the soil, that on the contrary the right of property in land has been declared to be still existent for the peasants. These latter, who are jealous of every foot of ground, refuse under any circumstances to admit new settlers, especially Jews. The Soviet Government thought it best not to enter into any arguments with the peasants about the Jews.

"Last March the decree regarding compulsory labor was issued. All so-called 'unproductive' persons without a definite occupation were declared liable to compulsory labor. The neglect of this duty was proclaimed as desertion, punishable with death. Almost all Jews were inscribed in the category of those without occupation, irrespective of whether they knew a trade or not. A terrible hunt began for the Jewish masses, carried out by military groups of the Red Army, with the willing help of all the anti-Semitic mob.

"The only hope of the Jews is now emigration to Palestine. Even in the Jewish Socialist circles, which were always indifferent to the Palestine idea, it is now generally recognized that a solution of the Jewish problem in Russia without a Jewish Palestine is quite impossible. The San Remo resolution consequently was received with the deepest joy and gratitude by the whole of Russian Jewry, which gave expression to these feelings, in spite of all prohibitions and at serious risk in public manifestations.

"The only reference to Jews in the Bolshevist Press is in the perpetual charges brought against Zionists.

"The Zionists are commonly stigmatised as 'British agents,' whose function it is to win sympathy for England among the Jews."

POLISH MILITARY CHIEF WOULD CHECK ANTI JEWISH EXCESSES.

Warsaw (J. C. B. Service).—General Rozwadovski, Chief of the Polish General Staff, has issued an appeal urging that all measures be taken to stop excesses upon the Jewish communities. The General points out that it has been fully established that the Jews of Poland and particularly the orthodox elements have done their full duty towards their country in its hour of need. General Rozwadovski has ordered that the alleged excesses upon Jews in the towns of Viskov and Sokolow be thoroughly investigated.

ROUMANIAN JEWS WILL MEET IN CONGRESS.

Chernowitz, Roumania (J. C. B. Service).—A movement has been set on foot in Bucharest to call a congress representing all the Jews of Roumania, Transylvania and Bessarabia. In all these states, there are over a million Jews. The movement is headed by noted Jewish Deputy Dr. Straucher and has for its object the better organization of Roumanian Jews domestically.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1920
New Moon	November 12
Chanukah, first day	December 6
New Moon	December 12
Chanukah, last day	December 13
Fast of Tebet	December 21
	1921
New Moon	January 10
New Moon	February 9
New Moon	March 11
Fast of Esther	March 23
Purim	March 24
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

WHO IS BEHIND IT ALL?

The Boston publishers of "The Protocols" with the reinforcing introduction and postscript may and may not be willing to reveal the names of those who engineered the publication in this land. Clearly there is an agency at work hereabouts which chooses to do its nefarious business clandestinely. These worthies who have prepared the "copy" are part of an organization supplied with funds and directed by master plotters. We are not dealing here with a few misguided spirits. We are confronted by a concerted movement, by a conspiracy the roots of which are spread far and wide across the Atlantic. The thing has been imported. It did not crop up here and there all at once spontaneously and unconnectedly. We recognize for one thing the sinister hand of Czarist Russia, of that element which in approved fashion, with Macchiavellian unscrupulousness, is fighting tooth and nail to restore the autocracy over the body of the hapless Jew. We are not referring to the forged Protocols themselves, a stupid concoction which has not even the merit of being interesting. Those are professedly Russian in origin; but we mean the American postscript. Right there it is not difficult to discern a Russian author, who finds it convenient to cite so-called utterances by Jews from a work published in the Russian language in Russia! We suspect that this worthy is now in this land. For all we know, he may be the sole author of the entire pamphlet, of the by-work of course with which the Protocols are garnished. He may have allied with him certain representatives of those second rate powers which have banded together to nullify the minority rights clauses in the treaties to which they affixed their signatures. That may and may not be so. For it is quite conceivable that that Russian emissary has with malice aforethought espoused the cause of those powers, knowing full well that he would meet with encouragement from their quarter. Another ally, either actually cooperating with them or cleverly worked upon by the Russian master-mind, is some European power determined to crush Bolshevism. The devilish lie is spread that the Jew, whether in Russia or elsewhere, sympathizes with the Moscow gang now throttling the life of the great empire of but a few years ago. This is not the place to repudiate the charge that because a few Jews, men who have broken with Judaism and have openly disavowed their connection with the Jewish people, happen to be found in the Bolshevist movement, aye, even in leading positions, therefore the Jewish people are behind a movement which spells death and destruction to Jewish life and faith. Nor do we care at this point to indicate how unfair it is to convict a whole people because of the utterances of individuals whom no Jew takes seriously. What we are interested in at present is to lay bare the triple cord in the conspiracy which has been set in motion. It is Czarist-Russian for one thing; it is anti-minority rights in the second place; and it is anti-Bolshevist in the last resort. In order to carry their point, the conspirators have banded together to sow the seeds of discord in this blessed land of ours. The fight is on. It is not of our own choosing. We shall not sit idly by; but for one thing we shall fight in the open. We shall not hide ourselves behind anonymous publications. Our enemies may be unknown to us by name; but we know their ilk, and to know who our enemies are, is half the game won. We challenge them to come out of their lurking places into the open daylight. Will they dare?

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

In casting about for an explanation of the rise of Bolshevism our traducers have spun out of the cobwebs of their imagination a supposed plot on the part of the Jews for world dominion. It has been pointed out again and again that the overwhelming mass of our people in and outside of Russia is opposed to the communistic experiment; that in Russia itself our people are undergoing great sufferings because of it, submit as they must, with other parts of the population under duress. Let the world—not our enemies, who are bent upon slander and malicious perversion of the truth, but the fair-minded among our neighbors whose reason our detractors would becloud—understand the Jewish position. The emancipation of the Jew at the opening of the last century came in the wake of an upheaval which broke down medieval feudalism. Where, as in pre-war England, the line of division between conservatives and liberals was not marked by feudalistic considerations, or, as in this country, feudalism had been defunct at the very rise of the nation, the Jew allied himself with either party according to his individual predilections and the dictates of his reason. There could not be and never was an alignment of the Jew on just one side. The Jewish question did not enter into the purlieus of party politics. That is exactly as it should be. The Jew votes as an Englishman or American, not as a Jew. On the continent of Europe the emancipation was grudgingly yielded by the exponents of feudalism, which had not died. When the Jewish question was dormant and opposition to the Jew was not spread upon party platforms, one might encounter the Jew even on the right wings of the electorate. Had there been no recrudescence of Anti-Semitism in Germany in the seventies and no pogroms in Russia in the eighties, matters would have developed there as with us or in England. As it was, the Jew was forced by the instinct of self-preservation to ally himself to the party which promised to safeguard his rights. So it was in Germany, so it was in Russia after the creation of the Duma. Russian Jewry could not possibly make common cause with Black Hundreds and Czarist autocracy which bent all their efforts upon annihilating the Jew. So much for the Jewish mass. Individual Jews, who under Czarism were excluded from all avenues of professional preferment, who might not practice law for example, it is quite reasonable to suppose, were thrown into the arms of the discontented, and discontent bred revolution. He who forswore his religion was immediately admitted to all honors. A young Jew who submitted to baptism found the doors of the universities and of professional activity opened; just as in Germany baptism led to a university appointment and even to a position in the army. Accordingly, a premium was placed on apostasy. It was the avowed aim of the governing classes to destroy Judaism. The masses clung to the faith of their ancestors; but the intellectuals succumbed. Here was the root of the matter. We invite to it the attention of all thinking men. For the result was a twofold one. On the one hand, where conscience rebelled, though the religious convictions were a little strong, resentment was begotten, and a spirit of hostility to a government trafficking with the highest interests of the human soul was engendered; but the other point is more far-reaching. With the weakening of Judaism engineered from above, there was lost in certain individuals the moral anchorage, and they became an easy prey to all vagaries which the faithful Jew must hold in abhorrence. This it is that explains the presence of this or the other Jew—mind you, not of the mass—in the ranks of Bolshevism or of any other 'ism. Bolshevism is a thing that must and will be crushed; but when our enemies blame us for its existence, it is but fair that we retort that Karl Marx was the son of an apostate and was himself reared in Christianity; that Trotzki and the rest of his ilk are avowed apostates; that the corruption, which for a century has alienated our best minds from Judaism, came from without; that in the face of all obstacles placed in the way of the profession of Judaism the Germans and Russians have only themselves to blame for the conditions that were not of our own making. Religion and morality are intertwined. The proselytizing missionary in our midst is the deadliest enemy to the body politic. Souls cannot be crushed without danger to the moral equilibrium; and where, forsooth, apostasy is dictated by state reason, it undermines sanity of moral judgment, warps the soul and produces revolutionaries. Give freedom to Judaism; let the profession of the ancient faith be no barrier to economic, political or social advancement; and the ranks of the discontented revolutionaries will be freed from the Jewish element. The Jewish soul is not a product of race, but of religion. Keep the religion alive. Keep the Jew to his faith. Do not lure him away from his center of moral gravity. Modernism is not of the Jew, for the Jew, who is left to cherish his religion, is quite opposed to it. Judaism is a conservative force in the world. It is perhaps not too late for the world to recognize this truth. For this truth is the root of the matter.

RABBI MARX HONORED.

On Sunday, September 12, after the service of the New Year's eve had come to a close, the members of the Temple Congregation of Atlanta, Georgia, tendered to their beloved Rabbi, Dr. David Marx, a most beautiful ovation. Mr. Arthur Heyman presented to him on behalf of the Congregation a handsome set of resolutions of thanks, in recognition of the eminent services rendered by their rabbi during the last twenty-five years, accompanied, as a token of love and esteem the members and their families entertain for him, with a more substantial gift, for his personal use, contained in a sealed envelope.

Rabbi Marx, greatly surprised and deeply moved, replied in a most touching manner. Next morning during the services, Rabbi Marx, who had discovered the sealed envelope to contain a check amounting to eighty-five hundred dollars, again thanked the members of his flock for the great honor bestowed upon him but found it impossible to accept their generous gift, which he graciously returned to them, to be used with their consent for a better cause, that of educational purposes. It is needless to say that this act of nobleness made a deep impression upon one and all and that congratulations were showered upon the generous and unselfish man of God in untold numbers.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

An extraordinarily interesting meeting was arranged by the committee of Portland Lodge, No. 65, of Portland, Oregon, held on Tuesday evening, October 5, at the B'nai B'rith building.

JACOB H. SCHIFF.

Mr. Jacob Henry Schiff, noted philanthropist and Jewish leader, departed this life at the age of 73 after a comparatively short illness.

Mr. Schiff was born in Germany and after receiving his education in Frankfurt, his native city, he came to America in 1865 and began his business career as a clerk in a bank. Three years afterward he established himself in the banking business, became acquainted with the business house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and subsequently married the daughter of Mr. Loeb. Shortly afterwards Mr. Schiff joined the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., which has changed its clothing business into a banking concern.

In communal life, Mr. Schiff took an active part. Montefiore Home had the good fortune of having his services as president for over twenty-five years. He dispensed charity with a lavish hand and did not confine his benefactions to Jewish institutions only, as was best evidenced by the numerous gifts made to non-Jewish and non-sectarian institutions.

Mr. Schiff was a devoted Jew, devoid of any narrowness and in the dispensation of his benevolence, he especially favored those institutions which had for their aim intellectual, religious and moral welfare of his coreligionists. Worthy and deserving causes always found in him a promoter and a munificent giver. Through his financial success, he delighted all with his ability and means for the realization of his ideals.

The love and esteem in which he was held was revealed most touchingly by the tributes of regret lavished by thousands to whom he was a benefactor and a friend. He was a loyal American.

As a public-spirited citizen, as a loyal American and as a faithful Jew, his loss is deeply mourned by all those who knew him and even those to whom his was only a blessed name.

GREAT THRONGS HONOR LATE COL. HARRY CUTLER.

Thousands of men and women were unable to gain admission to the Synagogue where impressive funeral services were held for Col. Harry Cutler.

Col. Cutler's body had lain in state at the Temple for a day and thousands had viewed it there.

Rabbi Samuel M. Gup gave the memorial address at the services at the Temple, in the course of which he said:

"We bemoan a terrible loss. Weep, we cannot, our hearts bleed from the weight of the load. Dwelling in the silence of our tortured souls is a gnawing grief beyond compare. In His wisdom and justice, the good God has called to the Academy on High His servant, a favored and favorite captain of the moral forces of humanity, our friend and associate, our own beloved Harry Cutler. His eyes are closed in lasting sleep, and his spirit has gone to join the greater number who have gone the way before him.

"Although cut down in the midsummer of life, the lamented deceased had crowded into that brief pilgrimage a record of achievement that few whose allotted time is three-score and ten equal or surpass. His days were not his own; they belonged to God, religion and mankind. Wealth he pursued not but whatever share of earthly goods were his, he used as a trust to increase the measure of good and happiness in the world. His magnanimity knew no borders, and his munificence no sect. And yet he was a warrior for definite principles, true as the North star, and of inviolable loyalties to his faith and to his people. His enemies respected him; his comrades loved him, and all admited his singular worth.

"Our brother, we mourn thee. We grieve for thy kin whom thou didst love and who loved thee, thou devoted husband, son and brother. Thy days on earth have been well spent. Thy dwelling now is with thy Supreme Maker, who thou didst serve so effectually, and who has called thee unto all eternity."

JEWISH STATESMAN HEADS LEAGUE OF NATIONS ASSEMBLY.

Mr. Paul Hymans, foreign minister of Belgium, has been selected to preside at the first assembly of the League of Nations at Brussels on November 14. Mr. Hymans is a lawyer and has represented the city of Brussels in the Belgium House of Representatives. He was also a Professor of Brussels University. Mr. Hymans was appointed Belgium foreign minister in 1917.

FORMER STUDENTS MOURN.

Dr. Politzer, Famous Aurist, Dies in Vienna.

A three line item buried in the interesting bits of news from near and far, in The Chronicle's "Noosettes" column of last week, brought to Dr. Emil Amberg, Detroit physician, a whole flood of memories. The item recounted the death of Dr. Adam Politzer of the University of Vienna, world famous specialist in diseases of the ear and incidentally Dr. Amberg's best loved tutor.

Dr. Politzer, who was a cousin of Joseph Pulitzer, one of the outstanding figures in American journalism, died recently in Vienna at the age of 85, as the result of an apoplectic attack.

International fame was accorded him first in 1863 on the publication of his method of inflating by air the tympanic cavity of the ear. The success of this delicate operation brought to his clinic thousands of students in the years that followed and made him a pioneer in a new branch of medicine. To him is owing the methodical and scientific investigation of the organ of hearing. He taught the methods of anatomic, physiologic and pathologic investigations of the ear, and by selecting from among his pupils those men who were most able and apt to continue such research work, he founded a real school of otology. Dr. Amberg was one of those to be invited to receive special instruction at Dr. Politzer's home.

Dr. Adam Politzer

Between 1870 and 1900 Vienna was the center of medical teaching and a large proportion of the foreign students came from America and England. The number of English speaking students who took classes with "old Politzer", as he was affectionately styled, amounts to more than 7,000 and they had the advantage of being taught the science of the ear in their own language. The clinic of which he was appointed director in 1870 soon rose to be the principal ear clinic of the continent; at that time this was equivalent to "the world". From his school nearly all the eminent aurists of Europe originated. Alexander, Neumann and Barany, to whom was awarded the latest Nobel prize, are examples.

The journal of the American Medical Association, commenting on Dr. Politzer's death, says, "Of Jewish origin he swept away by his genius the obstacles placed in his way by racial and national prejudices."

After graduating in Vienna in 1859 he went to Germany, where he studied physiology and acoustics with Helmholtz, who has contributed so much to the knowledge of audition and the physics of sound and sound waves. Thence Dr. Politzer went to Paris and London for years of graduate study. He was the author of numerous scientific books and papers and his work on otology is a standard.

Dr. Politzer bequeathed his invaluable collection of anatomic and pathologic specimens to the ear clinic at the university with which he was so long associated, and his great library will, by his request, be added to that of the university collections.

JEWISH ART EXHIBITED IN RIGA.

Riga (J. C. B. Service).—An exhibition of the works of Jewish artists has been opened at the Jewish Peoples University and is attracting wide attention.

The Morning Post and the Jewish Peril

(From the Church Times, London, July 30, 1920.)

IN THE Middle Ages, when a plague, usually the result of bad sanitation, decimated the countryside, the cry arose that the Jews had poisoned the wells, and a massacre followed. It is probable that the persons who made these charges were subjectly honest, but fanaticism had robbed them of their reasoning powers. We have no doubt that the author of the strange articles which have lately appeared in the "Morning Post" on the cause of world unrest is perfectly honest. He has only, we believe, sought the explanation of our troubles in a wrong quarter. The cause lies, we think, rather in the un-Christian spirit that has governed the world for the last three centuries than in any Jewish or Masonic plots. However, he has thought differently, and has given to the world a strange and fantastic history. It begins with the Knights Templar. Somehow, he thinks, they got mixed up with the Jews and were rightly condemned. Their survivors and certain Jews have since that date been mixed up with certain Masonic lodges, particularly one of the Scottish Rite, and after remaining quiet for many centuries began their policy of vengeance by arranging the French Revolution. Since this great achievement they have been struggling to destroy kings and nobles and to bring the world to anarchy, and have lately brought off a big coup in Russia. In preparation for further horrors they are at present starting strikes in England and organizing Sinn Fein murders in Ireland. Later on they will be setting up a King of the House of David. Meanwhile, there are a vast number of good Jews who hold such tricks in abhorrence, and we may add subscribe to the funds of the Unionist party, and also a vast number of good Masons in whose lodges nothing worse is arranged than perhaps a Curragh camp mutiny.

The picture is fantastic, and we feel sure that if the mob took our contemporary seriously it would not draw much distinction between the good and the bad Jew and the good and the bad Mason; but as some of our readers may have been disturbed by the gruesome picture, we shall try and show him or her that there is little foundation for our contemporary's wild history.

To reply to the history of our contemporary would require a volume. The few facts which we shall mention may, however, suffice to show our readers how very doubtful is the history on the subject which this newspaper's authority presents.

1. As to the Templars. It is extremely probable that they were innocent of the charges brought against them by Philip, the Fair. If guilty they were guilty not of apostasy to Judaism but of idolatry. They can therefore have had no connection with the Jews.

2. Whatever may have been the origin of the Scottish Masonic rite, the Scottish Masons were in the early eighteenth century warm supporters of the Jacobite cause. Scottish Masonry cannot therefore represent an ancient conspiracy against throne and altar.

3. The Jews played hardly any part in the French Revolution.

(a) The "Illuminati", of whom the Morning Post says so much, were not connected with the Jews. Their founder, Weishaupt, of Ingolstadt in Bavaria, a pupil and enemy of the Jesuits and a man of loose character, founded an order to spread revolutionary ideas. His order was modelled in point of organization on the Jesuit system, and he assumed the name of Spartacus. His teaching was a kind of philosophic anarchy, but had nothing in common with Socialism or Bolshevism. Every head of a family was to be a domestic king and priest. The foundation of the idea can be traced to Rousseau's theory of nature, and its ideal would seem to be a life like that described in St. Pierre's "Paul and Virginia". Weishaupt admitted to his friend Knill that the higher grades of his order only existed in his imagination. On Knill's advice he connected it with Masonry. In 1785, it was suppressed by the Elector of Bavaria. The order was eagerly run after for a time by fashionable people, but was unconnected either with Judaism or Socialism.

(b) The Morning Post's writer dwells on Mirabeau's visits to Berlin and his attitude to the Jews. If any connection between the French Revolution and the Jews can be made out it must be through the tribune of the people, Mirabeau. Berlin before the Revolution was one of the few places where Jews were really in society. A Jewess, Henriette Herz, kept a salon there, which Mirabeau visited. We learn, however, from Henriette Herz's Memoirs that, while she and her circle were liberal, they turned against the French Revolution after the arrest of Louis XVI. at Varennes, and that they would never have supported the French democrats if they had foreseen the consequences. Here is proof positive that the one group of really influential Jews on the continent had no enmity to the Bourbons, no sympathy with the Jaccobins.

(c) The Morning Post's writer lays great stress on a book called "Memoirs Illustrating the History of Jacobinism", of which an English translation appeared in 1798. The Abbe says nothing about the Jews, and traces the origin of the revolution to Voltaire, Weishaupt, the Masons, and the Illuminati. His prejudice was such that he attributes Polish resistance to Russian aggression to Masonic influence. If we accept his view that Voltaire was the real author of the French Revolution, we entirely acquit the Jews. No man has held up the Jews to greater ridicule than the author of "Saul", who in some measure was the true founder of anti-Semitism. The Morning Post's authority tells us that some years after the book was published the Abbe received a letter from Italy, which he handed to his superiors, telling him that the Jews were behind the Masons in the Revolution. He, however, never altered his book.

There is, in fact, no evidence that the Jews had any serious connection with the French Revolution, and with this view, it may be added, Mr. Hilaire Bellox, who cannot be regarded as an enemy of anti-Semitism, substantially agrees. (See Bellox's French Revolution, Home University Library, page 231.)

4. It is true that the Jews since the general emancipation have generally identified themselves with Liberalism, as they hold that it is to Liberalism that they owe their emancipation. Some Jews did take part in the 1848 Revolutions, but they did not originate them. It is true that many Jews sympathize with the Carbonari and the Young Italy movement in Italy; so did some Englishmen.

5. It is incorrect to attribute the work of Karl Marx, the Socialistic writer, to Jewish inspiration. Marx came of a Jewish stock, but his father was a nominal Christian. Marx lived for many years in London in great penury, and was not supported by the Jewish community.

Enough, we trust, has been written to show that the Jews cannot be fairly accused of being the instigators of the Revolutions of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The one piece of our contemporary's evidence which strikes us as impressive is the wild statement of Disraeli in "Coningsby". One need not, however, take the wild statements there on the Jews more seriously than Disraeli's affected admiration for the High Church party in the same book. The chapters in question were doubtless written to convince English aristocrats that Rothschild, who appears under the name of Sidonia, was a gentleman born. If, however, the statements be accepted as true, they do not help the Morning Post's contributor's contention for we are informed that the "Jews are ever anxious to see the religious systems of the countries in which they live flourish".

It is true that in modern times cosmopolitan Hebrew finance has become an anxiety, and that the influence of the Jews in the Press and in politics and Masonry has often been used in favor of anti-Catholic movements. It is true also that many Jews like Disraeli in the last generation and Mr. Montagu in our own, have shown a sympathy with Mohammedanism which has had disastrous consequences in Turkey. However, as the Morning Post supported Disraeli and never attempted to restore St. Sophia to Christendom, it must share the responsibility. Jews would do well in such questions as Poland and St. Sophia to pay more regard than they do to genuine Christian and Catholic sentiment. To put it on no higher grounds, they would find it good business. Generally, we must add that on most political questions in this country Jews vote and think much like Englishmen, and in war time are not less patriotic.

It is true, however, that in the countries along the Russian marshes a different feeling exists. Here Jewish bigotry, stimulated perhaps by the oppression of the past, is far deeper than in Western lands. Education seems to have made it worse, and in fact we may find an explanation not only of some of the horrors of the Russian Revolution, but of the extraordinary pamphlet of "Sergius Nilus", of which the Morning Post makes so much, assuming, of course, that the pamphlet was not the concoction of the Tzarist police. This Russian Hebraism needs watching, though probably its worst features will vanish with liberty and education. They are, however, only a fraction of Judaism.

Our conclusion, therefore, on the recent revelations is that they do not prove much which was not known before, and that much in them is absurd. In any case, it is the duty of the Christian, while not shutting his eyes to a possible Jewish peril, to protect the Jew from unjust and unfair charges.

LITHUANIANS REPORT POGROM BY POLES.

London (J. C. B. Service).—The Lithuanian Legation in this city has today made public an official report of a pogrom committee by Polish soldiers in Sejni, Poland. The excesses, the report says, lasted four days during the course of which twenty-five ships and 150 houses were plundered, twenty-two women violated and a number of men ill-treated. The soldiers broke into the synagogue during service and deprived the entire congregation, the Rabbi included, of all their garments. The damage is estimated at two million marks.

Samuel Rzeszewsky, the youthful chess player who has astounded the continent and has become the idol of Parisian chess fans, is at present on a visit in London, where he has issued a challenge to the two world champions, Lasker and Capabianca. Sanuel, who is not yet ten years old, is of Jewish origin, born in Poland, and as a master of chess warfare is the marvel of his adult contemporaries.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND REPORTED TO HAVE FALLEN VICTIMS IN UKRAINIAN POGROMS

London (J. C. B. Service).—Continuing his investigations into the conditions of the Jews in Ukrainia, the Kieff correspondent of the "Daily Herald" brings further details of the Ukrainian pogroms. According to his present estimate no less than 200,000 Jews fell victims to pogroms in Ukrainia while an equal number died from starvation and epidemics.

AUSTRIAN ANTI-SEMITES SEEK TO EXCLUDE ALL JEWS.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service).—The anti-Semitic parties have issued a special appeal pleading for the expulsion of all Eastern Jews and demanding that the frontiers be closed against all newcomers.

A report from Budapest states that some very stormy scenes were witnessed in the Town Council during the election of city officers. Deri, who was vice-Mayor, was not re-elected because he is a Jew. The members of the liberal party left the sitting in disgust.

PALESTINE WEIGHTS AND MEASURES TO BE ADJUSTED.

Jerusalem (J. C. B. Service).—Sir Herbert Samuel, the High Commissioner in this country, has called a special conference for the purpose of adjusting the Palestine weights and measures. It is proposed to adopt European standards.

The High Commissioner has appointed an Advisory Council consisting of various members of the community. The Council includes David Yellin, the head of the Jewish Community in this city, and Mr. Kalvarisky, the administrator of the Rothschild colonies in this country.

BUDAPEST MERCHANT DONATES A MILLION FOR JEWISH UNIVERSITY.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service).—M. Hirsch, a wealthy merchant of Budapest, donated one million Kronen for the establishment of a Jewish University in Hungary. Owing to the fact that few Jews are allowed to enter Hungarian or Austrian Universities, Hungarian Jews recently decided to found a university of their own.

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

II.

AN eminent rabbi of New York City has written to me commending my effort under the above caption in a previous number and suggesting that I continue in this strain and elaborate my points somewhat more fully. The timeliness of the subject is obvious. Be it once more said: Whatever may be said of all the other causes which lie at the root of the hatred of the Jew, the religious prejudice is the persisting element. It is an old quarrel, ever renewed. Be it also said without offense that as the account reads in the book sacred to Christendom, as the story is repeated before generations of impressionable children, it must needs beget resentment against the people charged with the crime of deicide. The present writer may be trusted to be familiar with the Christian literature on the subject, ancient and modern. Moreover, he has come in contact with living Christians, among whom he counts his very best friends. And here is the liberal verdict which was dinned into my ears by a philosopher-colleague: The founder of Christianity was the very flower and fruition of your culture, of your religion; and you have rejected him.

The corollary of the indictment is that the Judaism which survived represents an arrested development and its continuance furthers no cause of humanity. Of course, we Jews hold to the contrary opinion, which naturally involves the assertion that if we rejected the Galilean preacher, it was for cause; but I am not minded in this connection to develop this theme. The whole tenor of my first effort was not to widen the gulf that separates, but rather to bridge it over. As a student, I am given to the observation of differences, variant readings as they are called, in manuscripts which are copies of the same text or book. The more I study these divergences, the less I am surprised at encountering them. It is the normal thing for coypists to vary. When once the reason for the variation is detected, the divergences vanish. What is most astonishing is that these manuscripts agree at all. And agree they do by far oftener than they disagree; and so turning to the ancient quarrel, so far-reaching in its consequences, we will not minimize the disagreements. But in calling them a Great Misunderstanding, I have indicated that, no matter how the breach widened in course of time, in its origins it was much less formidable. What matters most is the recognition that primitive Christianity, and especially the attitude of the founder, was near enough Judaism to constitute a mere variety of it. distinguish from it in particulars, indeed, but in all essentials at one with it; and here is the point. In so far as Christians believe that no matter what changes their religion has undergone in its course of history it is essentially what the founder meant it to be, and furthermore as this religion is being threatened by the secularism of to-day, they should welcome Judaism as a worthy ally in stemming the tide of irreligion which is upon us. We do not gainsay for a moment that there is such a thing as a distinct Christian piety rooted in the founder's conception of religion; we concede its value as a complement to Jewish piety which is just as distinct. What we contend is that Christians on their side should be willing to concede the value of the preservation of Jewish piety as complementary to their own, and to recognize that the ancient misunderstanding or quarrel as to the ascendance of the one or the other should make way for an amicable understanding, leaving to each its sphere of influence and investing both with equal potency.

The outstanding feature in that ancient quarrel is inward piety versus outward expression of the religious sentiment. Let the issue be formulated with utmost clarity. Christian scholars grant that the rabbis dwelt on the paramountcy of inwardness; but they say in criticism of Judaism that that inwardness which was demanded with such insistence was apt to be submerged by the multitudinous outward observances which choked the very [illegible] of religion. They will naturally grant that in the Church piety there is much of external observance likewise. But then they claim that that feature was an inheritance from Judaism and foreign to the mind of the founder. Such at least is the Protestant position. The Protestant operates with the notion that the Church as it actually developed and as it now exists represents a step backward from the religion of the founder. Not so the Catholics who reason that the Church could not possibly have become other than it is. In other words, the question turns upon this. A living, religious community must necessarily be organized. It creates its inevitable expressions in the form of institutions or observances. Piety to be effective must be organized. There must be stated hours for prayer; a regular mode of service and stated prayers; a regular clergy and so on. Contrast churches in which these things are wanting or are left to the inspiration of the moment. The difference is simply this, that the one who believes in forms and regularity finds them in conformity with the needs of human nature. The house of worship is there, a building consecrated to devotion. Of course many may enter and perform rites and go through a lip service and be inwardly devoid of any finer religious exaltation. Of course many may leave the house of God and acquiesce on Monday in all the social sins, in the relentless pursuit of business, in the reckless hunt after pleasure. Still the organization is there, that when the penitent mood supervenes a place for communion is ready.

As an aftermath of the war (but it is really of more ancient date) we lament the immorality or immodesty in dress, in gesture, in the pampering of the body now rampant. A clergyman of my persuasion and my city recently upbraided his congregation, on our holiest day of the year, on the subject of moral laxity. I will not reproduce his minute catalogue based, I presume, on personal observation. He contrasted the old-time austerity, how fasting was universal and so forth. Now the prophet tells us that the true fast is attending to the needs of the oppressed and lowly, what we call social justice and charity. We read the prophetic word on the Day of Atonement. This preacher forgot that not quite so many years ago it was customary for rabbis to connive at breaches of observances and at the dinner recess. In breaking the fast in the morning and at noon time the congregation broke with a mere ceremony or observance; but we see now what it all led to. In the days when men and women and the adolescent youth partook of no food on a given day of the year it made for a stiffening of the moral backbone, an inuring to discipline, a lesson in the suppression of the desires of the body. In itself fasting may be an indifferent, external observance, but it ceases to be one when its potencies for steeling the moral fibre are considered. Pharisaism, as a system of discipline, stands approved in the light of the havoc which is now upon us.

What the founder of Christianity set himself against was the danger of externalizing religion. Therein lay the difference which assumed the proportions of a misunderstanding. The religious genius is always one-sided. So sure is he of his moral discipline that he does not require the fulcrum of an external stimulus or safeguard. Humanity, religion needs both. It needs the regulated worship and the well-defined code of laws for daily conduct. The ordinary run of mankind is only too prone to excursions into the forbidden realms. For them the sublimated truths are not sufficient. They require to be trained, held in leash, curbed. Obedience to law is the primary safeguard. Visible institutions and regular religious habits, if we may so express ourselves, are alone conducive to the straight path in morals. We cannot be left all to momentary impulses. Yes, God may be worshipped here or there, in our innermost chamber perchance, but the house of God is the surest place where we may find Him. Organized piety therefore is a necessity. A return to it and to all it implies is the only method to check the prevailing moral laxity. Back to your observances and fasts and penitences and days set aside for cessation from labor. We need at all times the counter-check of the exponent of inwardness lest we forget over the pans and pots and the washing of hands, the weightier matters of religious and moral duty. Both the system which calls for the hedging about of inward piety by all the fences of outward observances—Pharisaism—and the voice which recalls us to that which is central and uppermost in religion, inwardness—such as the voice of the founder of Christianity was, in line with the voices of the prophets who preceded him and with many a voice among the Pharisees of his day and later on—are needful. One is the complement of the other. There cannot be any one-sided supplanting of the one by the other. Acute as the misunderstanding must always be for the time being, it is but a misunderstanding; but it need not be continued for all the ages. At the moment of the clash, it is the spirit versus the letter. In the light of eternity, it means both the spirit and the letter, the principle and the application, the center and the periphery, the creed and the deed. Give them both sway, and the misunderstanding is no more.

CONVOCATION OF CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY IN PALESTINE.

After delays and postponements covering a period of nearly two years, the Constituent Assembly of Palestine to which delegates have been elected by the entire adult Jewish population of the country will convene in Jerusalem on October 7, for the purpose of adopting such legislation as may be deemed essential for the political organization of Palestine's Jewry. The Assembly will also be called upon to establish the status and functions of the Courts of Arbitration and to strengthen Hebrew culture.

The convening of this, the first legislative body in the National Jewish Homeland, has been sanctioned by the British High Commissioner, Sir Herbert L. Samuel, and in this fact the Jews of Palestine see a guarantee that it will not again be postponed. The last prior date which had been fixed for the meeting of this body was May 6, but on that very day Jerusalem was recovering from a bloody clash between the Arabs and the Jews. The military authorities, who have since been supplanted by a civil administration, thereupon forbade the convening of the Assembly, giving as the reason for their act the fear that it would only serve to create more friction and possibly lead to new riots.

The plan for the Constituent Assembly was worked out at several preliminary conferences of representatives of all political parties in Jewish Palestine during the winter of 1918, and it was hoped that its first meeting could be held during the following Spring. But the ultra-religious elements in Palestine's Jewry held that the extension of suffrage to women on a basis of equality with male voters was in violation of tradition. The agitation against universal suffrage was so strong that the Zionist Commission, under whose auspices the preliminary conferences had been held, felt compelled to postpone the elections, making it clear however that it would not yield to the demand that women be excluded from either voting for or being candidates as delegates to the Assembly.

The elections were finally held last April, and the women not only voted in large numbers but several were elected as delegates, two from Petach Tikvah, the oldest Jewish agricultural settlement in Palestine. The result of the election on the whole will give to the labor elements of the land a majority of the delegates. It is not anticipated however that this will result in the adoption of radical legislation for the reason that even the Socialists of Palestine are so moderate in their view that they recently and in most emphatic terms declined, together with the Socialist-Zionists of England and America, to join the Third International. This so-called National Radical party favors among other things the development of cooperative societies and at the same time the encouragement of private initiative. Next in importance among the labor groups is the "Hapoel Hazair" which is also opposed to Marxism. On the other hand, the "Ezra," the so-called capitalist groups, favors profit-sharing and other modern social innovations. All parties recognize the sovereignty of the Zionist Organization, some going so far as to propose that it shall have the veto power over all legislation adopted by the Assembly.

BULGARIANS OPEN BANKS IN PALESTINE.

Constantinople (J. C. B. Service).—With the object of promoting industrial and commercial relations between Palestine and the Balkan States, Bulgarians have organized a large enterprise for the opening of bank offices in each centre of importance in Palestine.

PRESIDENT WILSON URGES JUSTICE FOR JEWS.

In a letter to Rabbi Dr. Stephen S. Wise, President Wilson expressed sympathy for the suffering Jews in Eastern Europe. His letter to Dr. Wise under date of September 16 is as follows:

"The White House, Washington.

"My Dear Rabbi Wise: I am deeply moved by the reports which you send me of the trials and sufferings endured by your fellow Jews throughout Eastern Europe. No American, whatever his racial origin or religious creed, can fail to feel the deepest sympathy with the Jews of Eastern Europe who continue to bear not only the burden of the war, but also the sufferings incident to unenlightened and unjust treatment at the hands of Governments and peoples.

"I am of the hope that those nations with which our own land holds political commerce may do everything in their power to end not only the legal disabilities of their Jewish populations as provided for by the minority clauses of the Peace Treaty, but all the injustices and wrongs which are laid upon them.

"We know in this country wherein Jews of right enjoy entire equality how loyally they serve and how faithfully they support the purposes and ideals of our own nation.

"I should greatly rejoice to learn through you that there has come about an amelioration of the status of the Jews in Eastern European lands. This Government most earnestly desires that Jewish persecutions be ended in all lands and for all time.

"Cordially and sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

A CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

The Anti-Defamation League, in cooperation with other national Jewish organizations, is about to undertake a campaign of education which will go far to set right the minds of the people as to the vicious libels that are being widely circulated in this and other countries about the Jews by certain well-organized Anti-Semitic agencies, behind whom are ranged the forces of fabulous wealth and whose agents, themselves unscrupulous, are playing upon the ignorance and the credulity of the masses.

There will be nothing subtle about the campaign to be waged. From first to last, it will be open and above board and every statement made will be accompanied not by vague insinuations that proofs of its correctness are at hand, but, on the contrary, such proofs indubitable in character will be furnished. In this campaign of education, it will be shown definitely where responsibility for cooking up this Anti-Semitic propaganda must be placed. It will be shown how much of it is due to ignorance; how much to an unscrupulous attempt to divert attention from the real enemies of modern society; how much to German propaganda and to other sources related to these.

The campaign of education to be conducted by the Anti-Defamation League will be along high and dignified lines. Men responsible for attempting to foment massacres and pogroms in this country will not be called fools or knaves even though it may be shown in some instances that they are both. But truth will be told. Some surprising facts will be brought forward as a result of which certain men and certain cliques will be exposed to the disdain and the derision that they deserve at the hands of those whom they unworthily call their fellow-Americans.

For the furtherance of this educational work which the Anti-Defamation League proposes to undertake, large sums of money will be necessary, for printing and publishing cannot be done at small expense in these times. The detractors of the Jew have fabulous wealth behind them, wealth so tremendous that we cannot possibly hope to raise sums that will remotely compare with theirs. But we shall not require so much as they. To foist a libel which contradicts the reason of thinking men and which insults the conscience of upright men, requires far more of effort and of money than does the spread of that truth of which the Anti-Defamation League shall be the sponsor. We have no doubt that when our people are called upon to aid in this important and necessary work, they will respond generously with such means as they may have at their command.—[Dr. Leo M. Franklin, in Detroit Jewish Chronicle.

News from Austria

GERMAN Austria is today more than any other country in the hands of foreign governments. The state and the population are dependent on the aid of foreign countries in public as well as in private life. The Entente has complete control over us. The correspondence which recently took place between the foreign commissions in Austria and our government furnishes us another painful proof for this statement. The whole situation of our country is so depressed that we live merely through the kindness of the Entente and that of neutral and friendly countries. We therefore deeply regret the great harm which is done to the people of Vienna by reports in foreign papers on Vienna and Austria which give an unjust and libelous picture of the life in our city. It is true that safety and sanitations of the city are in a bad shape, but one must not forget the great misfortune which the terrible war has brought over us and that we have so far not experienced any of the blessings of peace. Finally, other more fortunately situated cities are not much better off.

The "Temps", which is surely a respectable paper, described the situation of Paris in a manner which justifies the inference that conditions there are still worse than in Vienna. What should one say of conditions existing in Berlin and Budapest? The desolation of the city seems to have affected the population. It is depressing to every lover of humanity's ideals to learn that the tombs of the great German poets, Schiller and Goethe, were robbed for motives of sordid gain. How deeply have these people sunk who were so mean as to violate the most sacred shrines of the nation! What a terrible degree of degeneracy is here manifested before all the world!

The savagery of the population of Budapest expresses itself in other, by no means more pleasant, facts. Peaceful citizens are not safe at any time of the day. A fashionable cafe was attacked in broad daylight and guests who were believed to be Jews were robbed and murdered. Anti-Semitism there is without any bounds. Our coreligionists are simply outlawed. They find no protection from the authorities who look on without moving a finger when such atrocities are committed. The Hungarian Jew will remember the 7th of August for all times. On that day Mr. Budaveny, a member of the Hungarian Diet, had the impudence to introduce a motion on the solution of the Jewish question in Hungary. This motion was based on the old story that the Jews are responsible for every evil. With all that, the mover showed what he considered generosity. He did not wish a war of extermination and would not suggest a pogrom, but he demands that the Jews be forbidden to own or to lease rural land or to own more than one house. He demands that all property acquired by Jews since the outbreak of the war shall be confiscated and that political rights be taken from them. Naturally, no Jew shall be permitted to hold public office, to enter the army, and of course, hold a commission. All Jews suspected of Bolshevism shall be tried by court-martial and promptly executed. Nobody who knows the principles of "the Awakening Hungary", will be surprised at the fact, but the reply of the Minister is really a disgrace to all modern civilization. This man declared that while he did not agree to all the propositions he was willing to admit that there was a Jewish question and therefore he was willing to see the House enter into a discussion of the motion. This motion will therefore be placed on the calendar of the house, and we shall have in addition to all troubles, an exciting debate on the Jewish question. Let us hope that our Hungarian coreligionists will finally open their eyes and not play the super-patriots as they did before the war, and will abandon their policy of mimicry which made them change their Jewish names into such a Magyar sound, although from all appearances the authorities will pass measures to prevent this.

The population of Vienna cannot enjoy peace. One strike follows the other. At present all employees of the telephone, telegraph and postal service have gone on a strike. The high cost of living is still continually rising, the taxes are so exorbitant that the middle classes are reduced to the standard of proletarian existence and are practically pauperized, yet the Vienna population is still so good-natured that we do not consider it capable of acts such as we have seen in Budapest. On the other hand, the feeling of the population is one of deep depression. Vienna, once so proverbially gay, has become a city of mourning, and this is only too natural. Nearly two years have elapsed since the war was declared to have ended, but it has left the world an inheritance which is terrible. Public life is everywhere marked by acts of violence. Ireland is the center of unrest. From Czechoslovakia demonstrations are reported which are followed by acts of rowdyism. Hungarians invade Austria, rob the arsenals and Russia with her red armies invaded Galicia. Lemberg was evacuated and thousands of fugitive Jews fled to Austria, arriving in large numbers in Vienna where they increase distress and anti-Semitism.

The question of assisting these refugees is a very serious one for the Jews of Vienna. It cannot be solved unless all large Jewish societies in foreign countries are willing to cooperate. We gladly pay our tribute of respect to the Joint Distribution Committee whose activity has again proven beneficial and which everywhere stands in the front ranks when it is necessary to do something for the benefit of our coreligionists. It is self-understood that the brethren of our Order did not stand by idly, and although they did not act officially as members of the I. O. B. B. they are found in all relief organizations, very often heading them and displaying great zeal in assisting the homeless refugees exiled for the second time, with advice and deed.

One of the brethren of the lodge, "Eintracht", is in charge of a clothing relief station which assists the destitute refugees and their children with clothes and linen as far as the means will permit. A committee of the brethren of the same lodge engaged also in this work, collecting among a few brothers and from some benefactors outside of the Order the sum of 300,000 Kronen, which, considering our situation, is not a small matter.

The joint committee of the Vienna lodges took special interest in the case of underfed children. It succeeded with the assistance of the Grand Lodge of Germany and of the "Hilfsverein" to send several hundred under-nourished children of school age partly to Switzerland, partly to Holland, Croatia and Czechoslovakia for some time. The foster parents of these children are doing their best for their wards, and it is truly elevating to read the letters which the little ones send to their parents. We are convinced that they will return strengthened physically and spiritually, and they need both indeed. The Augustin-Keller Lodge in Zurich furnished us a new proof of brotherly love.

It sent us last June a carload of excellent foodstuff for the brothers of the Vienna lodges, and just now it took thirty children to Switzerland for a rest cure at its own expense. We have not words enough to thank our brethren in Zurich and especially their worthy President, Brother Max Weil-Bruell. We can merely hope that in a time not far distant we shall see better days, and then shall be able to prove to our Swiss brethren by acts that we are worthy of them. We cherish the same feelings of gratitude for the Executive Committees of the Order and its beloved President, Brother Kraus. We received for the second time from him 500 food drafts as gifts. Only those who know conditions in Vienna can appreciate the full importance of this act of brotherly love and realize the joy of the brethren and the gratitude with which they received the gifts. The lodge "Eintracht" formed a committee of which ex-President Brother Dr. Shnabel is chairman, for the purpose of coping with the distress existing in our midst by cooperative buying of food for the brethren. A collection for this purpose realized in a few days the amount of 120,000 Kronens.

The serious economic troubles which affect every individual member were increased by the sorrow experienced through the death of our illustrious brother, Professor Dr. Politzer. Both physically and mentally vigorous until the last moment, he was called hence, August 10, at the age of 85 years. In him, who was one of the greatest masters in otology, we lost one of the great men, who as scholar, teacher and physician helped to spread the fame of the Medical School of Vienna which attracted students and health seekers to Vienna in large numbers from the whole world. He was a pathfinder in his branch. His literary work was of the highest importance, his books were translated into various languages They will for all times be considered standard works. The greatest success of Politzer was his activity as a physician, especially the invention named for him which saved many people from deafness. Had he not left anything else except this method it would suffice to make him a benefactor of humanity. His body was carried to the last resting place followed by an immense number of friends and admirers, especially from medical circles. Professor Dr. Sol. Ehrmann spoke in the name of the Vienna lodges feeling words of farewell at the grave, and praised the departed scholar and faithful member of the Order, as Maecenas, as President of the Jewish Museum and as a faithful son of the Jewish community. He was a credit to humanity, and as his end proved "a beloved child of the gods" as the Greeks said, for he died without premonition and pain. May the earth be light unto him.

The 8th of August was a holiday for us. It was the fortieth anniversary of the graduation of our universally beloved President of the provisional Grand Lodge, Professor Ehrmann. Our brother President wished to escape all ovations and therefore had left Vienna to celebrate this day in strictest privacy within the circle of his family in a nearby summer resort. Professor Ehrmann, however, is too prominent and too respected in scientific and social circles to have succeeded in this attempt. Committees of various organizations could not be prevented from calling on him and expressing their heartiest well wishes, and the daily press of Vienna published highly laudatory articles on his activity as a scholar, physician and as a man. May he be spared to us for many years to come in full physical and mental vigor, and continue his activity for the benefit of his devoted Vienna brothers and of humanity.

THE WAR RECORD OF AMERICAN JEWS.

The outstanding features in the remarkable record that the Jews of America made for themselves in the World War may be summarized in six paragraphs:

In actual numbers the Jews of America contributed from 200,000 to 225,000 men to the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

Proportionately, on the basis of population, they have exceeded their quota by at least one third. On Armistice Day, November 11, 1919, the forces of the United States numbered approximately 4,800,000 men. The Jews of America, who constitute but three per cent. of the population, should have contributed about 130,000 men to the service. Actually they have contributed, according to the latest data available, nearly 100,000 more than their share.

The volunteer spirit among American Jews was extraordinary. There were nearly 40,000 Jewish volunteers in the service, according to the best evidence, or practically twenty per cent. of the total Jewish contingent. This is a record unexcelled, as far as now known, by any other element of the American population.

The record of honors conferred upon Jewish soldiers for valor in action is remarkable. The office of Jewish War Records has already listed nearly 800 citations for valor, of which 501 were conferred by the American commands, 223 by the French, 25 by the British, and 75 by various other allied commands. Of the most valued Congressional Medal of Honor—of which only 78 have been conferred to date—at least three were awarded to Jewish soldiers. The Distinguished Service Cross is worn by at least 130 American Jews, the rare French Medaille Militaire by two American Jews, and the Croix de Guerre by 174 Jews in the A. E. F.

There were nearly 10,000 Jewish commissioned officers in the several branches of the service. In the Army there were more than sixty colonels and lieutenant-colonels, more than 350 majors, 1,400 captains, and over 7,000 lieutenants. In the Navy there were over 500 Jewish commissioned officers, the highest rank being that of Rear Admiral. In the Marine Corps there were over 60 Jewish commissioned officers, including one Brigadier-General.

The total of Jewish casualties, according to the latest estimates, was from 15,000 to 16,000 including about 3,500 who made the supreme sacrifice.

FORMER SERVICE MEN CONDEMN RELIGIOUS STRIFE.

Adopt Resolutions Opposing Parochial School Amendment and Attacks on Jews.

Resolutions condemning all efforts to stir up religious animosity were unanimously adopted at a recent meeting of the Private Soldiers and Sailors' Legion, Abraham Lincoln Post No. 1. Letters containing copies of the resolution have been mailed by Roy Ronsom, Secretary, to various Detroit publications. The resolution reads as follows:

Resolved, That the Private Soldiers and Sailors' Legion go on record as opposed to any effort to arouse religious strife and racial animosity, as it is contrary to the principles upon which our country was founded, and the ideals for which we fought in the World War for democracy.

Be it Further Resolved, That we go on record as opposed to the Parochial and Private School Amendment as an infringement upon the inalienable right of parents to supervise the education of their children.

Be it Further Resolved, That we condemn the scurrilous and malignant attacks upon the Jewish race in Henry Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent.

POLISH SOCIALISTS PROTEST AGAINST ILL TREATMENT OF JEWISH SOLDIERS.

London (J. C. B. Service).—The Central Committee of the Polish Socialists has sent the government a resolution of protest at the suppression of the press and the persecution of the civil population. The resolution declares that the internment of Jewish soldiers seriously damages the interests of the state and calls upon the government to punish those officials who are guilty of these acts of persecution.

The "Nowi Dzienek," a Polish publication in Warsaw, gave publicity to the report of Deputy Hartglas about the pogroms in Siedlice.

OFFICIAL RESTRICTIONS FOR PALESTINE EMIGRATION MADE PUBLIC.

London (J. C. B. Service).—According to a Jerusalem dispatch received here, the following conditions just made public by the Palestine administration will govern the entry of immigrants into that country. Each immigrant will have to be possessed of a passport vised by the British Consul of his city, ample proof that he will be able to sustain himself for at least twelve months, and a certificate as to his medical fitness. All Palestine ports of entry will be strictly supervised by Immigration officials who have already been appointed, and every immigrant admitted into the country will have to register with the local police within fifteen days from the date of landing. Failure to register will lay one open to immediate expulsion. Tourists and pilgrims will not be required to register. The British High Commissioner is vested with the right to expel any immigrant within five years from the date of his arrival, if he has broken the laws of the country, or if it is proven to be in the interests of the state. He is also in a position to relax these restrictions in certain instances. The regulations do not apply to individuals who were residents of Palestine prior to the war.

HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT SAID TO SUBSIDIZE AUSTRIAN ANTI-SEMITIC PRESS.

Vienna (J. C. D. Service).—Two million kronen have been spent by the Hungarian government on anti-Bolshevik and anti-Semitic propaganda in Austria, according to some correspondence made public by the local "Arbeiter Zeitung." The correspondence quoted is alleged to have been exchanged between the official press bureau in Budapest and the Hungarian Legation in this city. According to the correspondence, a large amount of the funds was spent on subsidies to local publications.

SOUTH RUSSIAN RED CROSS EXCLUDES JEWISH CHILDREN.

(Constantinople—J. C. B. Service.)

Sebastopol publications received here bring the report that the American Red Cross in South Russia, has received orders not to support Jewish children because the Jewish community is said to be sufficiently well off to take care of its own needy ones.

Anti-Jewish Excesses Have Not Ceased

Report of Morris Rothenberg to American Jewish Congress Gives Shocking Details of New Atrocities

MR. MORRIS ROTHENBERG, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Provisional Organization for an American Jewish Congress, arrived from Europe on Saturday, September 18, and has given to the Congress a statement supplementing the cable which he recently sent from Antwerp regarding conditions in Poland on the basis of which President Wilson addressed a letter to Rabbi Stephen S. Wise. Mr. Rothenberg's statement is as follows:

"Attacks upon the Jews in Poland had at no time ceased since the Armistice. Immediately after the protest meeting was held in New York, which aroused a storm of indignation against the happenings in Poland everywhere, the excesses against the Jews did in a measure diminish. Nevertheless assaults upon persons and property in a smaller degree continued throughout Poland. Gradually they again assumed larger proportions until within the last few months they have grown to such an extent that Jews have found it unsafe to walk in the streets. Beard pulling, robbery, assaults in trains and at railroad stations became so frequent that the Jews determined no longer to walk upon the streets which non-Jews frequented and had almost wholely abandoned travelling in the trains excepting upon most urgent business. Conditions came to such a state that the Jewish Deputies in the Polish Parliament went to Minister of War Pilsudski and Minister President Witos to appeal to them to put a stop to these outrages. The Ministers promised to take the necessary steps but nothing was done. On one occasion Deputy Perlmutter, while on his way to the Minister of War to place before him information of maltreatment of Jews, was attacked by soldiers and had to return home. On a later occasion while again attempting to reach the government offices, soldiers maltreated him and he was so overcome that he had to be taken to his home in a cab.

"At the time of the advance of the Soviet armies upon Warsaw, mobilization of all Jews between the ages of 18 and 49 was ordered. The Jews responded readily and enlisted as volunteers. They were, however, attacked by the Polish soldiers at every step, and not a single officer interfered. They were addressed not by name but by insulting epithets. No distinction was made between the intelligent or unintelligent. All were treated in the same humiliating manner. Such Jews as were regarded fit for military duty were detained and were given the filthiest menial labor, cleaning of letrines and sewages, at the same time being furnished no implements with which to do the work; they were told to use their clothes and their hands. In the course of their work they were beaten and insulted. The three Jewish Deputies in the Polish Parliament, Greenbaum, Hartglas and Prilutzki, went to Vice-President of the Ministerium Council, Daczinski, who belongs to the democratic party. He suggested that a joint conference be held between the Ministerium Council and the Jewish Deputies. The conference was held and it was decided that the Jews should make a public appeal to their people to come to the defense of the Fatherland and that the Government should make a similar appeal to the Poles, asking them to regard the Jews as fellow-countrymen and to accord them proper treatment since they were the same loyal citizens and since it was necessary that all Polish inhabitants should unite at this critical time.

"The Jews immediately made such a public appeal. Jewish students immediately left their universities and enlisted and everywhere Jews responded readily. [illegible] of the War Department published in several Yiddish papers in small [illegible] a few words purporting to be the appeal which was agreed upon and the Poles distributed in the Jewish neighborhoods some handbills containing the appeal. But the masses of Polish inhabitants never saw the appeal and knew nothing of it and the public announcement which the Ministerium promised was never made. The excuse was offered that there was no paper upon which to print the appeal and that a number of the important persons who were to sign the document were away at the front.

"When the Army was formed, battalions of Jews were created which were brought to the railroad stations. There they were met by a representative of the Minister of War who ordered them to fall behind the Polish soldiers. Immediately after the first victory, all Jewish soldiers were driven from the various fronts. This order was given by Sosinkowski. Their ammunition was taken away, their uniforms removed and they were put under guard as if they were offenders. Then they were formed into working battalions to do the work already described.

"In the city of Jablono, Jewish students in the eighth term of their medical course were driven out of the sanitary battalions and sent to the working battalions where they were set to work removing carcasses, cleaning stables, letrines and streets. Those orders had a terrible effect upon the entire Polish people. The Polish soldiers began to regard the Jewish soldiers as criminals. In Jablono six thousand Jewish soldiers were concentrated in a camp without reason. The Jewisn deputies again went to Daczinski and told him of these conditions and the hurtful effect they were having upon the Polish masses. Daczinski said that these were very ugly happenings and expressed himself to the effect that something ought to be done to remedy the situation. He published a short article in his paper about these matters and advised that the Jewish volunteers should not all be treated in the same manner but should be separated into different companies consisting of educated and intelligent soldiers and those who were not such. Even this has not yet been done.

"When the Bolsheviki began to approach Warsaw, the Minister of War ordered that the inhabitants of small towns near Warsaw should evacuate them. At the same time a secret order was made that only Jews should get out. They had to leave with only twelve to twenty-four hours' notice. Among the towns that were evacuated are Novodvor, Pomisuvi, Zahrugy. During the evacuations the property of the Jews was plundered and on their way the Jews were beaten and humiliated. When the Soviet army approached Warsaw, trenches had to be prepared. Jews were indiscriminately caught in the streets, old, sick and boys of fifteen. They were put to work for fourteen consecutive days without change of shift or a chance to change clothes. Many of the old and sick died at the work. When the Minister of War was appealed to to interfere, he answered it was not his order and advised that the appeal be made to the Minister of the Interior, who also disclaimed responsibility for the order. Every time the Poles took a city they killed Jews who came their way. In Palinitzi they drove out all the Jews and killed three. In Promzovitch Jews who were praying had their shawls torn off. A number of old Jews were taken to the woods and shot without trial. The officer in charge afterwards said he killed Bolsheviks. This was a lie. In Owotzk, Jews were robbed and beaten and a number were killed. The Pilaver Zadek was threatened with having his beard cut off and paid a large sum of money to prevent this. He was robbed and beaten. In many cities Torah's were cut and destroyed. In order to cover these outrages the Minister of War issued an announcement that a large number of armed Jewish Bolsheviks were found in many cities. But this information was fed only to the Poles and was not mentioned in the dispatches for the outside world because it was apparent that these statements could not be substantiated.

"In Sedlitz a very large number of innocent Jews were shot. In Wishcof the shooting of a number of innocent Jews charged with being Bolsheviks was prevented by the interference of a Polish Priest. The Jews in Poland expect that when the Poles take the large cities like Grodno and Bialystok, which are not Polish cities and which surely will be defended by all the inhabitants, including the Jews, the Jewish inhabitants will be singled out for special injury.

"Pilsudski and Wito refused to see a Jewish delegation who came to them in Sedlitz to tell them of the outrages committed against the Jews. This made a very bad impression for it became evident to the soldiers and officers that they could do whatever they pleased to the Jews without punishment.

"In Ober-Silisien a large number of Jews were illegally taken and deported to Poland where they were shot for evading military duty.

"An instance of the shocking acts of some of the Polish soldiers occurred in Alexandrova, a town a short distance from the city of Rovno, immediately after the capture of the town by the Poles from the Bolsheviki. The Burgomaster of the town was a Jew named Leibush Kramer. He had a son who was fortunate to have a pair of boots. A Polish officer took the boots away from his son. The Burgomaster went to the officer and demanded the return of the boots. The officer did return them but promised the Burgomaster that he would pay dearly for this. The next morning at four o'clock the officer with several soldiers poured kerosene upon the house of the Burgomaster and set it on fire. When the Burgomaster ran out of the house the officer rushed toward him and stuck a bayonet through him. Then the bayonet was suspended against the wall and the body of the Burgomaster was revolved around on the bayonet a number of times. When the fiendish lust of the Polish officer was satisfied he put a number of bullets into the Burgomaster's body and ended his life. No investigation of this horrible act was made until a day and a half later when several Jewish relief workers entered the town and heard of the outrage, when an investigation was ordered and a report was made to the commander at Rovno. No one has been punished for the outrage to this day.

"The spirit of the Jews in Poland is being utterly crushed by these terrible events and they feel that they cannot much longer bear up unless these terrible excesses are stopped."

Mr. Rothenberg also reported of dreadful persecutions and excesses against the Jewish people in Hungary. "There the officers and soldiers in the White Army are the chief fomenters of anti-Semitism. About 300 Jews have been murdered under the most horrifying circumstances between December, 1919, and June, 1920. A commission of the British Labor Party headed by Captain Wedgewood visited Hungary and exposed the terror against the Jews. As a result a boycott was declared by the International Trades Union Council held in Amsterdam recently. This resulted in the matter being taken up in the Hungarian Parliament and severe orders were issued against pogroms.

"The young nationalists who were largely responsible for the pogroms declared that they were willing to stop them provided laws were enacted which would destroy the Jews economically. This is now being done. Laws have been passed punishing profiteering by flogging. But the producers are not even affected by this law. It is only the middle-men, which means the Jews. Those who are found guilty are flogged and put in concentration camps and exiled. This law was passed last June.

"Another law has been passed which enables the retirement, with a pension so small that it is impossible to live a day on it, of any civil service or government employee, for any political reason deemed sufficient by the chief of department, where any such person was employed. For instance, retirement can be ordered because one is a Zionist or a Socialist on the grounds that that is unpatriotic. There are ten thousand Jewish civil service employees in Hungary. They are all gradually losing their places. Professor Adolf Szilagyi, who was thirty years a teacher in the government commercial school, was dismissed because he is a Zionist. Laws are also being passed specifically directed against the Jews without mentioning them by the following process: license of all persons engaged in commerce or industrial pursuits are revoked and application must be made for new license which may be issued at the discretion of the department in charge. Such licenses are not being granted to Jews, thus utterly preventing them from pursuing their former occupations. For instance, the traffic in alcohol was entirely in the hands of Jews.

"The laws revoke the licenses of all persons engaged in this occupation and Jews will not receive license in the future. Many other similar laws are proposed. Very sad is the law concerning the Jewish university students in Hungary. In Budapest there are 3,000 Jewish students. A law was passed that only those belonging to military formations could be admitted to universities. As Jews are not admitted into these formations and would not belong to them even if they were admitted because they consist mostly of those who make the pogroms and of anti-Semites, the Jewish students are unable to get into the universities. A law was passed that those students may be admitted in the universities who lost three terms in the course of the war. This excludes Jewish students in the high schools who were exempted from military service as students. A law was also passed denying admittance to students in universities unless they present certificates that they were not Bolsheviks during the period of the revolution. These certificates the authorities make impossible for Jews to obtain. By this process not a single Jewish student was accepted in the Hungarian universities and many of them have been compelled to go to neighboring countries in order to pursue their studies and are experiencing terrible want and suffering."

ENGLISH JEWS HONORED FOR DISTINGUISHED SERVICE.

At Buckingham Palace recently the Duke of York, on behalf of the King, invested Colonel Henry Samuel, A. N. C., with the Distinguished Service Order, and Lieut. Ernest Samuel, H. A. C., with the Military Cross. Some days earlier Mrs. Ernest Samuel, the wife of Lieut. Samuel, received the Insignia of the "Medaille de la Reine Elizabeth" from the King of the Belgians in recognition of the assistance she personally rendered to the Belgian refugees during the war. The King invested Mr. Robert Nathan with the insignia of Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India, and conferred Knighthood upon him.

HUNGARIAN MINISTER OF EDUCATION WOULD KEEP ALL JEWS OUT OF SCHOOLS.

Paris (J. C. B. Service).—In the course of a debate in the Hungarian Parliament, the Minister for Education, Haller, eloquently pleaded for the extension of restrictions against Jews. Pointing out that the Jews destroy Hungarian genius, he insisted that all Jews ought to be kept out of schools. Deputy Daner, in defending the Jews, drew attention to the fact that statistics show that a proportionately large number of Jews were killed and wounded in Hungarian service during the war.

POLISH INTELLECTUALS PROTEST AGAINST PERSECUTION OF JEWS.

Paris (J. C. B. Service).—According to advices from Warsaw a group of prominent Poles made public a protest against the internment of Jewish soldiers in Jablona. Those who signed the protest include such well known names as Professor Leon Petrazicki, Professor Iwicky, Professor Podouanu de Courdanni, Dr. Gluski, Stephan Jeromski and Anna Struck. This is the first instance in which Polish intellectual leaders openly voiced their protest against persecution upon Jews.

EAST GALICIAN GOVERNMENT PROTESTS AGAINST UKRAINIAN POGROMS.

(Vienna—J. C. B. Service.)

Ukrainian government in Eastern Galicia has issued an official protest against the recent pogroms which are reported to have been made by Petlura's troops. The protest expresses compassion for the Jewish victims and accuses the Polish authorities of responsibility in these pogroms, since they failed to intervene although they were in a position to do so.

JEWISH COMMUNITIES IN HUNGARY OPEN THEIR OWN SCHOOLS.

(Vienna—J. C. B. Service.)

The Kehillahs of Budapest and Debrezin have opened secondary schools, the Hungarian legislature having recently adopted measures which restrict the admission of Jewish students to public educational institutions.

AN EXPOSURE.

(Continued from page 2.)

Semitism. Their publicity agencies in Charlottenburg and Munich have flooded the country with pamphlets denouncing the present Government as a Judaized Junta, the instrument of a far-reaching Judeo-Masonic conspiracy to ruin Germany and to involve the whole of Christianity in her fate.

This campaign, the article states, has lately become official, and a pragraph has been inserted in the Electoral Manifesto of the German Nationalists—the party of Kapp and Lutzow—formally adopting anti-Semitism as a plank in their platform. One of the aims of the party is to secure foreign sympathy and help, and its members hope to do this by finding a common ground in anti-Semitism. In these circumstances, the publication of "the Jewish Peril" in England (the name given to the English Edition of the Protocols) wears a disturbing significance but it becomes much more disturbing when we find that simultaneously with it a German edition was published by the Charlottenburg Agency under the title, "Die Geheimnisse der Weisen von Zion," ("The Secrets of the Wise Men of Zion") with a dedication appealing not only to the German people but also to "The Princes of Europe". The object was clearly to get English support, and unfortunately the response was not long in coming. On May 8th, 1920, the London Times was inveighed into publishing an article expressing alarm at the revelations of the Protocols and calling for an investigation. The delight of the German Reactionaries knew no bounds. It was voiced by Count Reventlow in a long article in the Deutsche Tageszeitung of May 17th, 1920, welcoming the Times' acceptance of the Jewish Peril as an indication that English public opinion was beginning to recognize the righteousness of Kapp and Co. in their resistance to the Ebert regime and what the Count called the "pax Judaica". Whether the English translators and editors of "The Jewish Peril" have consciously lent themselves to this intrigue, which is part of the German Reactionary plot to upset the Treaty of Versailles, and perhaps to plunge Europe into another war, cannot be said. But assuredly the worst suspicions are permissable so long as these gentlemen elect to shrink from responsibility for their scrubby handiwork.

Very few citizens realize what is going on beneath the surface of governmental affairs in European countries. The so-called Jewish Problem has been used for centuries as a political smoke-screen designed to obscure the true aims of autocracy and demagogy. Nilus' book has well served its purpose. We have shown in what manner it was used to bolster up the autocracy of the Czar. We have shown and expect to show in further detail in what manner it is being used in Germany to bring back the autocracy of the Kaiser. Why is the excellent Mr. Ford using it now in America?

In the trial of the libel suit brought by Mr. Ford against the Chicago Tribune he testified that he was ready to spend a million dollars to arouse public opinion against preparedness for war. Part of his propaganda consisted of booklets and newspaper advertisements which were spread broadcast throughout the country and in which he presented his arguments against preparedness. One of the charges he brought was that a certain clique (unnamed) was conspiring to force the President into declaring war on Germany. We quote from the stenographic report of his testimony to show what basis he had for that charge.

"Q. Do you know of anybody that was trying to drive the country into the slaughter? A. I thought there were many people that were.

"Q. Can you give us the name of one. A. No.

"Q. A single one? A. No.

"Q. You don't know of a single one? A. No.

"Q. And yet you made the statement in this booklet that there was a ring trying to impress the President and force him into war? A. I did say that, yes.

"Q. Without knowing a thing about it? A. No sir, not without knowing a thing about it, no sir.

"Q. What did you know about it? You did not ask him if he knew of anybody who was doing it? A. I did not know any person.

"Q. What did you know about it? A. What I had read.

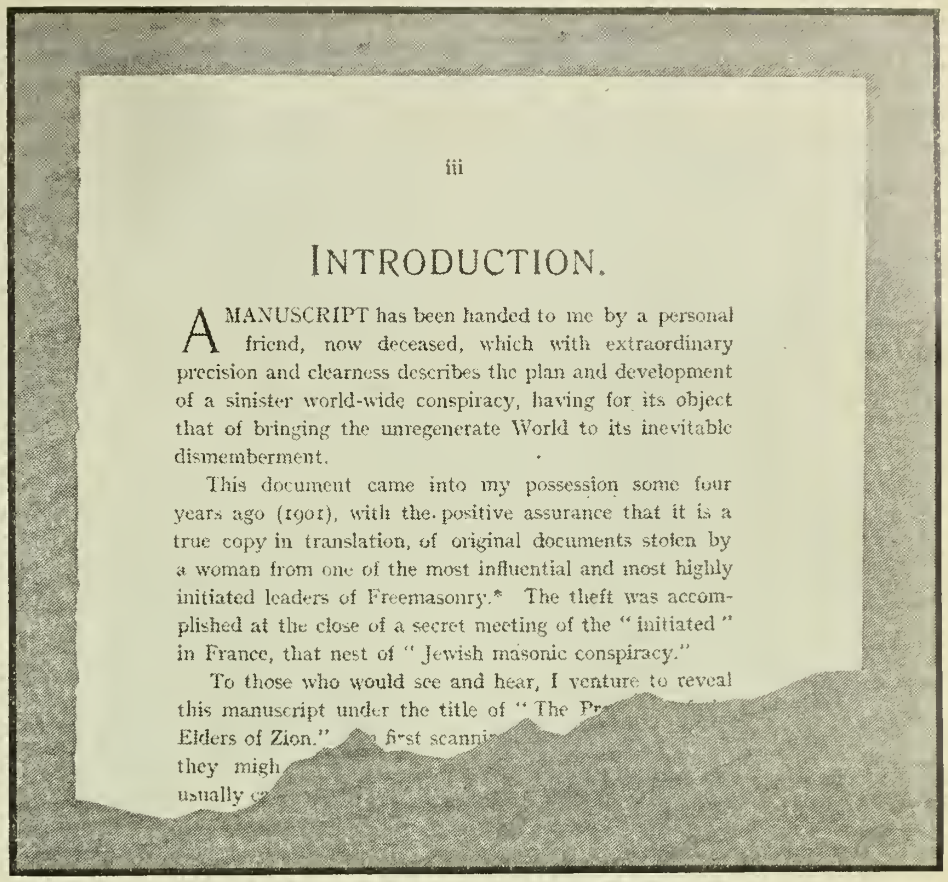
"Q. Do you recall what you read about it, anything you read about it? A. No.

"Q. Not a thing? A. No, sir.

"Q. Do you mean to tell this jury that you had sent out to educate the people advertisements printed broadcast all over this country, and you did not know what was in them? A. I sent out many statements to cause people to think.

"Q. You said that you did not know that that statement was in there? A. I have said that."

Mr. Ford did not know what he was doing when he was conducting his million dollar anti-preparedness campaign, but he assumed entire responsibility for everything that was done. The same irresponsible recklessness which he exhibited then is now being repeated in his attacks against the Jew.



iii

INTRODUCTION.

A MANUSCRIPT has been handed to me by a personal friend, now deceased, which with extraordinary precision and clearness describes the plan and development of a sinister world-wide conspiracy, having for its object that of bringing the unregenerate World to its inevitable dismemberment.

This document came into my possession some four years ago (1901), with the positive assurance that it is a true copy in translation, of original documents stolen by a woman from one of the most influential and most highly initiated leaders of Freemasonry.* The theft was accomplished at the close of a secret meeting of the "initiated" in France, that nest of "Jewish masonic conspiracy."

To those who would see and hear, I venture to reveal this manuscript under the title of "The Pr Elders of Zion." first scanni they migh usually

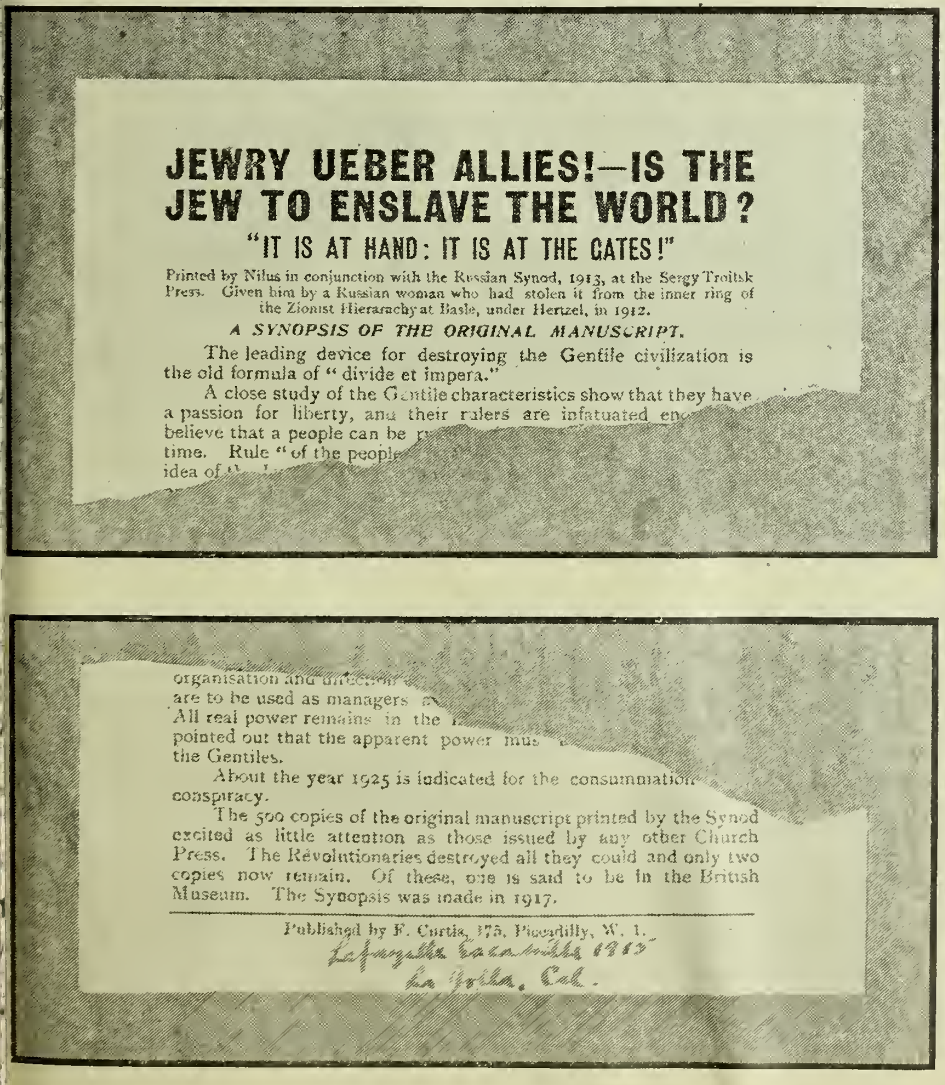
"Consistency, Thou Art a Jewel."

Compare explanation which "Mr. Curtis" offers in 1920 as to the source of Nilus' information with that which he gave in 1919 as shown in the first two columns.



JEWRY UEBER ALLIES!—IS THE JEW TO ENSLAVE THE WORLD?

"IT IS AT HAND: IT IS AT THE GATES!"

Printed by Nilus in conjunction with the Russian Synod, 1913, at the Sergy Troitsk Press. Given him by a Russian woman who had stolen it from the inner ring of the Zionist Hierarachy at Basle, under Hertzel, in 1912.

A SYNOPSIS OF THE ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPT.

The leading device for destroying the Gentile civilization is the old formula of "divide et impera."

A close study of the Gentile characteristics show that they have a passion for liberty, and their rulers are infatuated en believe that a people can be time. Rule "of the people idea of organisation and are to be used as managers

All real power remains in the pointed out that the apparent power mus the Gentiles.

About the year 1925 is indicated for the consummation conspiracy.

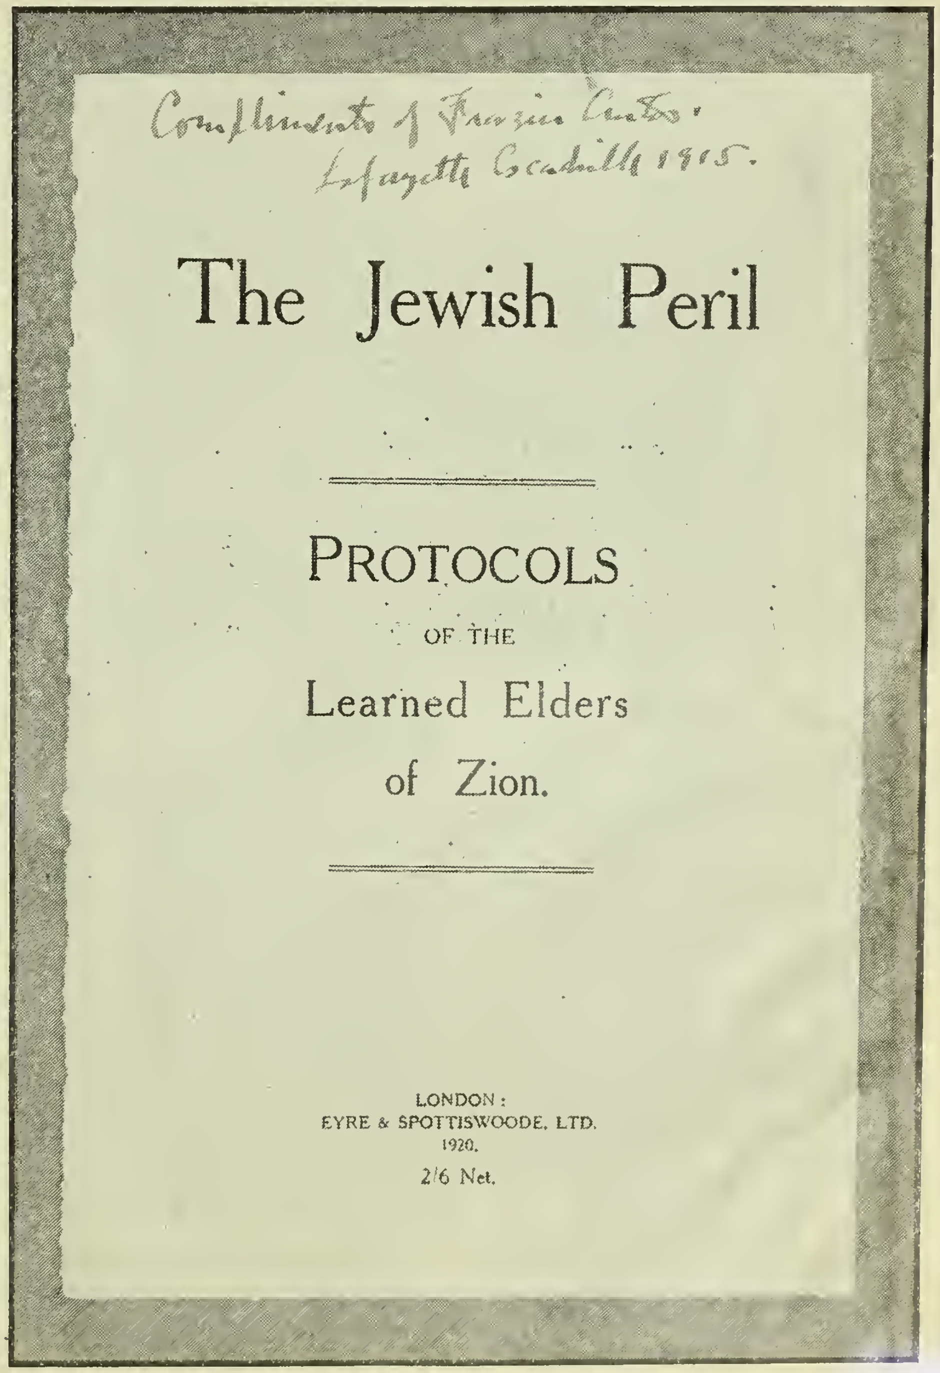
The 500 copies of the original manuscript printed by the Synod excited as little attention as those issued by any other Church Press. The Revolutionaries destroyed all they could and only two copies now remain. Of these, one is said to be in the British Museum. The Synopsis was made in 1917.

Published by F. Curtis, 175, Piccadilly, W. 1.

Lafayette Escadrille 1915
La Jolla, Cal.

"Mr. Curtis'" First Shot.

This circular was mailed in December, 1919, to the American Legion Post at Butte, Montana, in an envelope postmarked "London". Note the explanation the publisher offers of the source of Nilus' discovery. Note the hand-writing at bottom.



Compliments of Francis Curtis.
Lafayette Escadrille 1915.

The Jewish Peril

PROTOCOLS OF THE Learned Elders of Zion.

LONDON:
EYRE & SPOTTISWOODE, LTD.
1920.
2/6 Net.

"Mr. Curtis" Follow-up.

Title page of first English edition of Nilus' book published in 1920. Compare the hand-writing with that at bottom of "synopsis" previously distributed. This book was inspired by the same source as the "synopsis".

What Our Lodges Are Doing

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT BATTLE CREEK, MICHIGAN.

On Sunday, October 3, 1920, Battle Creek Lodge, No. 871, was instituted at Battle Creek, Michigan. The District Grand Lodge was represented by Past Presidents, Brothers Adolph Freund and Bernard Ginsburg of Detroit, A. B. Seelenfreund of Chicago, member of the General Committee, S. D. Rosenzweig of Detroit, District Deputy for Michigan, Edward Lichtig of Bay City. A large number of visiting members of other lodges, numbering more than one hundred seventy-five, came from surrounding cities,. such as Detroit, Bay City, Saginaw, Flint, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Jackson and Kalamazoo.

The Degree Team and the Glee Club of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, were also in attendance and officiated at the initiation of the new members, numbering thirty-one. Brothers Freund and Ginsburg had charge of the institution ceremonies.

At the lodge meeting, after the ceremony, short addresses were delivered by the visiting Grand Lodge officers, all referring to the work of the Order.

In the evening, the members of the new lodge arranged and carried out a most successful banquet, which was attended by over two hundred people at the Post Tavern Hotel. The menu was excellent, service most prompt and the addresses made were varied, instructive and entertaining.

The principal address was made by Brother Milton M. Alexander, who spoke on "The Work of the Anti-Defamation League". Brother Freund reviewed the philanthropic and benevolent work of the Order and Brother A. B. Seelenfreund gave a resume of existing conditions among the Jews abroad, and appealed for support to aid our coreligionists to be rehabilitated.

Rabbis Dr. Steiner of Jackson and Waterman of Kalamazoo made short, but very impressive talks.

The Jewish residents of Battle Creek and the visiting members who attended the ceremonies will remember the day as one pleasantly spent.

AMOS LODGE, No. 121, BOSTON.

At the last regular semi-monthly meeting, September 29, at Beacon Hall, Brookline, there was an attendance approximating two hundred fifty and a class initiation of fifty-four.

Since Amos Lodge has entered its new quarters, which are spacious and pleasant, the large attendance and large class initiations are in regular order.

The Activities Committee, true to its name, has been on the job arranging for one or more interesting speakers for every meeting, sometimes outsiders, but usually from among our own people. This assures those who attend, an interesting, enthusiastic and instructive evening. Unessential debates and reports are being eliminated as the time is crowded with useful and instructive work.

A membership drive, now in progress bids fair to increase the present membership of between five and six hundred to a thousand before the end of the season. The same proportionate showing may be had in any city with the proper kind of interest, enthusiasm and work. Amos Lodge now numbers among its members some of the best, prominent and capable [illegible] men.

A report from their delegate to the general committee, outlining the seriousness and importance of the work of that body, proved of especial interest.

It behooves other and less successful lodges to watch and keep in touch with Amos Lodge and learn how it is being done, and can be done. It only remains to tell a man what the B'nai B'rith stands for and is actually doing and you find him a cheerful and willing recruit.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

The Board of Governors of Huntington Lodge No. 795, of Huntington, W. [illegible] have arranged for a dance to be [illegible] the B'nai B'rith club rooms on [illegible] 14. This is the opening affair of the season and will not be confined to membership of the lodge, but the public [illegible] welcome.

The lodge is endeavoring to make its [illegible] rooms the center of all Jewish activities.

BARNETT LODGE, FORREST CITY, ARK.

Never in the history of the Jewish people of eastern Arkansas has there been an affair which was so perfectly planned, so successfully executed, and so delightfully enjoyed as was the B'nai B'rith dance which took place at Brinkley, Ark., Monday night, September 6.

Barnett Lodge, No. 454, I. O. B. B., of Forrest City, Ark., were the hosts, but as it is the custom of the lodge to distribute the places of their various gatherings, Brinkley was chosen as the scene of this auspicious occasion.

The beautiful and attractive Elk ' Home at Brinkley was selected as the scene for the occasion and that edifice never presented a more brilliant appearance.

The cream of Jewish manhood and womanhood filled the large dance auditorium of the Elks' Home, and the elite of the non-Jewish residents, who had been invited to participate, mingled in social intercourse with their Jewish friends. It was a sight never to be forgotten, and the scene as the dancers tripped the light fantastic was most entrancing. At midnight delightful refreshments were served, and punch was dispensed throughout the evening.

Judge C. F. Greenlea, one of the highly respected and honored members of the Brinkley legal fraternity, made an excellent address, during which he lauded the Jewish people for the part they have taken in the development of civilization. He said everywhere that the Jewish people are, there is prosperity, morality and high ideals. He told of the many ordeals through which the Jewish people had passed for so many decades, and how they had endured persecution for centuries. Judge Greenlea related several anecdotes which were well received, and he was vigorously applauded at the completion of his admirable address.

The participants, of which there were over 200, came from all points in the vicinity of Brinkley, from Newport, Earle, Parkin, Clarendon, Wynne, Holly Grove, August, Cotton Plant, Marianna, Little Rock, Forrest City and Memphis.

DENVER, COLORADO.

An open meeting after the summer recess of Denver Lodge, No. 171, Denver, Colo., was held on Sunday morning, September 12, 1920. Matters of much importance were considered. The first address of the season was made by Ben Claff on the subject, "Jewish Social Service Activities of Denver."

Another well attended meeting of the lodge was held on Sunday morning, September 26, 1920, on which occasion Brother Jacob B. Krohngold, Executive Director of District No. 2, honored the lodge with a visit and delivered an address on the activities of the Order.

The Propaganda Committee of the lodge held a meeting at which an active campaign was outlined for the fall season. The slogan is "One Thousand Members."

The Intellectual Advancement Committee is arranging to present at the first meeting in each month timely and instructive addresses.

Under the auspices of the Big Brother Social Service Committee, of which Brother A. B. Cowen is chairman, holiday services were held at the penitentiary of Canon City and at the industrial school in Golden.

ADOLF-KRAUS LODGE, CHICAGO.

On the evening of September 30, Adolf-Kraus Lodge, No. 72, of Chicago, reconvened after the summer vacation, at which time it had as its honored guest, Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer, of Des Moines, Iowa, President of District No. 6, who installed the officers elect for the ensuing term. At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies, the lodge was favored with an address by President Mannheimer on the subject, "The Summons of the Centuries and the Summons of our Time to the Jews of the World and to the I. O. B. B."

The address was most instructive and entertaining and was followed by a rising vote of thanks extended to the speaker.

At the close of the evening's program,. the members and their ladies were entertained and a social hour followed with dancing and the serving of refreshments.

The Entertainment Committee announced that the affair was a forerunner of a series of interesting meetings during the current season.

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

Judge Michael J. Murray of the Municipal Court of Boston addressed members of Amos Lodge, No. 121, at an open meeting Wednesday, September 15, 1920, at the new headquarters of the lodge. The subject discussed by the judge was "Americanization." The audience welcomed the judge and enjoyed his eloquent and forceful address. The meeting was open to the public.

Those of the members of Amos Lodge, No. 121, of Boston, Mass., who were present at the closing meeting of the season held in the month of June, will not forget the inspiration and enthusiasm created for a bigger and better B'nai B'rith Lodge.

Brother Lucius L. Solomons, of San Francisco, First Vice-President of the Order, delivered a remarkable address that thrilled his many hearers and left them with a clearer understanding of the aims and duties of the Order.

Another outstanding feature was the class initiation of sixty candidates and the initiatory exercises were conducted very well.

The outing, under the auspices of the lodge, held on August 18 at the Mantaska Beach, was attended by about 150 members and ladies. Notwithstanding the inclement weather, that proved to be a most enjoyable affair. The games and races were enjoyed with much merriment and the dance in the evening brought the day to a happy end.

The Entertainment Committee of the lodge is planning to make October 11 ladies' night.

Class initiation is scheduled to be held under the auspices of the lodge at the second monthly meeting, September 29, at which occasion 150 candidates are to be initiated.

The lodge is holding luncheons at the City Club every Thursday and those who are attending are not only enjoying a good meal at a moderate cost, but have the privilege of participating in active B'nai B'rith discussions which are beneficial.

At the recent dinners of the lodge, the forming of an Amos Lodge Orchestra was considered.

DAVID FISH LODGE.

On Thursday evening, September 23, David Fish Lodge held its first meeting of the season at the Covenant Club, at which time officers for the ensuing year were installed. The meeting was an open one, and many members and friends of the lodge were present, including a goodly number of ladies.

After disposing of some urgent business matters, the balance of the evening was devoted to the program which had been arranged by the retiring administration.

Dr. Martin M. Ritter, the retiring president, briefly reviewed the history of the lodge, and the progress made by it under the administration of the retiring officers. His remarks were well received.

Dr. Ritter then introduced Brother Edward Sonnenschein, Vice-President of the District Grand Lodge, who was the official representative of the District Grand Lodge, for the purpose of installing the incoming officers. Brother Sonnenschein paid tribute to the work of the lodge under the administration of the retiring officers, and paid high compliment to the President in particular, and thereupon proceeded to install the new officers in a very impressive manner.

The incoming President, Brother Bernstein, briefly outlined the aspirations of the lodge for the ensuing year, and asked for coöperation of the members and officers.

Brother Leonard Grossman was then introduced by the President as the speaker of the evening, who spoke on the subject, "Defamation of the Jew." The speaker was most eloquent, and his address stirred the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm, and gave all food for thought.

Following the address, a vocal solo was rendered by Miss Baumgartner, which was rendered in truly artistic fashion.

The President called upon the Vice-President, Brother Okin, who responded, making a few appropriate remarks.

Dancing and refreshments were next in order, and consumed the balance of the evening. The program, as a whole, was well received and thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

MENORAH LODGE, BLYTHEVILLE, ARK.

Rabbi Leonard J. Rothstein, Pine Bluff, Ark., addressed Menorah Lodge, No. 832, I. O. B. B., at Blytheville, Ark., Sunday, September 5, 1920, on "Why I am a B'nai B'rith." Rabbi Rothstein elegantly described the activities of the Order, and especially the activities of the Anti-Defamation League, and the noble work that it has contributed to keep the name of Judaism in its true light before the world. "There are many Jews," Rabbi Rothstein said, "who belong to many non Jewish lodges, and when they are approached in behalf of the I. O. B. B. they want to know what they will get out of it, what benefit they will derive from it, as if it was a business transaction," and that is true in many, but happily not very many, cases, for if there is any Order on earth which has the right to ask the Jew to join, it is the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith.

In the afternoon, Rabbi Leonard addressed a public meeting at the Methodist Episcopal Church, which was attended by Jews and non-Jews alike, his theme being "The Good Effects of the War."

After the meeting the Jews present who had come from the surrounding towns remained and a Sunday-school was organized. This is to be followed by similar organizations at Caruthersville, Mo., and Osceola, Ark., both towns being thirty miles north and ten miles south respectively. Caruthersville has already organized a Sunday-school and when Osceola, Ark., perfects its organization the three towns will form a circuit and have a Rabbi to address the different towns on the circuit. In the near future, a Jewish congregation will be organized, and the organization of the Jewish community of Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas will have been completed.

The Jews of the two communities are to be congratulated upon their endeavors at organizing the Jewish community and feel grateful to Rabbi Rothstein for having prompted them in their initial move toward that direction.

HOUSTON LODGE, HOUSTON, TEXAS.

The opening meeting of the season of Houston Lodge, No. 434, of Houston, Texas, drew an unusually good attendance.

Many subjects came up for discussion, at the conclusion of which Dr. Morgenstern addressed the meeting. He left with those who heard him a desire to do something for the lodge and Order and Judaism.

Brother S. J. Westheimer, second vice president of the district, addressed the meeting, and in touching on the assistance all could render the Anti-Defamation League, said that his concern was discontinuing the use of Ford cars and trucks as quickly as they could be disposed of, and knew of other concerns which were taking a like action.

One of the delegates of the recent convention called to the attention of the members present the deficit of the Jewish Orphans' Home and suggested that those of sympathetic tendencies join the Association for the Relief of Jewish Widows and Orphans, with the understanding that such membership was not to interfere with their present subscriptions to the local charities. · About twelve joined.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS.

Under the auspices of Chippewa Valley Lodge, No. 334, of Eau Claire, Wis., religious services were held at the recent high holidays at which coreligionists in surrounding communities within the radius of one hundred miles were invited and participated in large numbers. Mr. Hiram D. Frankel of St. Paul, Past President of District Grand Lodge No. 6, officiated and delivered five addresses during Rosh Hashono and Yom Kippur. He spoke on subjects, "Prejudice," "Penitence," "Trilog," "Repentance," "Prayer and Charity," and used the opportunity to emphasize the work of the Anti-Defamation League in combatting anti-Semitism and prejudice against the Jews in this country.

In connection with the services, a meeting of the lodge was held which gave out-of-town members a good chance to be present at a well attended and finely arranged meeting and thus keep in touch with the affairs of their lodge, which they are unable otherwise to visit.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

NAI B'RITH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

A joint meeting of Golden Gate and emieux Lodges was held on Wednesday ening, September 1, 1920, in honor of r. Louis M. Mendelsohn, of Fresno, lif., President of District Grand Lodge). 4, who paid the lodges an official visit.

At the meeting of the lodge held on tober 6, a smoker was held at the con- usion of regular order of business.

The question of consolidation of Golden ite Lodge with Pacific Lodge is at present e subject of discussion at the meetings. Past President Brother M. M. Baer s offered to bring before Golden Gate dge the discussion of Jewish subjects vital importance to every Jew with a w in mind to have debates among the embers on the various topics.

Ethan Lodge, No. 37, of Sacramento, tended an invitation to the members of lden Gate Lodge to visit them on Sep- nber 7 during State Fair week. A ge number of the members of Golden ite Lodge and their ladies responded to e invitation.

A record-breaking attendance was evi- nced at Golden Gate's entertainment d dance on July 28, again demonstrat- the fact that this lodge is most active d successful in social as well as in other tivities.

August 8 marked a great day, for the mmittee of fifty representing San Fran- co lodges for the picnic given under the spices of the committee eclipsed any ch events of previous years. More than 0 people passed a most pleasant day, of fun and merriment, at East Shore , and all appearances indicate that e picnic was as successful financially as was socially. The proceeds of this tertainment will be used to make im- ovements in the club rooms as well as the gymnasium and to provide social airs throughout the year.

EVELAND LODGE PAYS TRIBUTE 'O MEDAL HONOR MEN.

A estimonial Dinner was given on esday evening, September 28, 1920, at e B'nai B'rith building by Cleveland dge, No. 16, I. O. B. B., in cooperation th the Jewish Welfare Board in honor Congressional Medal of Honor heroes the world war, Sergeant Benjamin aufman and Sergeant Sidney Gumpertz. venty-five ex-service men graced the stival with their presence and many presentatives were in attendance from her parts of the country.

Mr. Drucker acting as Toastmaster, viewed the heroic action of the guests of nor.

Addresses were made by Morton L. avid, Denver, Adjutant of the State of olorado. In his remarks, Mr. David ged the men to obliterate prejudice ainst the Jew and stated that a man ould be honored for his own merits and t for his antecedents.

Brother Leon Schwartz, of Cincinnati, war hero and active worker in the B'nai rith, said that the pledge of allegiance the Order implied those qualities which ake for a good soldier.

Sergeants Kaufman and Gumpertz re- onded to the welcoming addresses and e evening's program was brought to a se with a dance.

The Congressional Medal of Honor en came to Cleveland as guests of the merican Legion during their convention ld in Cleveland recently.

MAHONING LODGE, No. 339, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

On September 19, a very enthusiastic eeting was held at which time a large ass of candidates were initiated into the orks of the Order. Important matters ere taken up and discussed by the mem- ers.

On October 3 another large meeting was eld, at which time a class of ten candi- ates was initiated. Important matters ere discussed in regard to the Anti- efamation League of the Order.

Members of Mahoning Lodge paid an nformal visit to New Castle (Pa.) Lodge f District No. 3 on Sunday, September 6, thus starting a mutual friendship etween the two lodges.

The grand opening dance of Mahoning odge is an event of October 13 to which nvitations have been sent to all neighbor- ng B'nai B'rith lodges. No effort or xpense has been spared in making this vent a success.

PISGAH LODGE, No. 34, DETROIT, MICH.

The finest and most representative group of artists ever gathered into a chorus and offered to the public is that arranged under the auspices of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, and known as the Community Concert Chorus and arranged by the Wolverine Lyceum Bureau. Ten internationally famous artists will appear during the season in a series of seven concerts. The proceeds of the sale of seats for this concert chorus will be devoted to charity.

Recently a baseball match between Pisgah Lodge and Toledo Lodge of Toledo was won by the latter. A large delegation from Detroit attended the game.

The B'nai B'rith club announces a chess tournament to take place within a few weeks.

Simplicity marked the initiation ceremonies of a class of 350 candidates initiated at a special meeting of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, Michigan, held at Temple Beth El. The class was designated as the "Rabbi Samuel S. Mayerberg Class" in tribute to its retiring president, who leaves the lodge and the city of Detroit, for Dayton.

A simple and impressive program was carried out. The degree team officiated at the ritualistic ceremonies. The Pisgah Lodge Glee Club rendered a special musical program. The principal address of the evening was made by Rabbi Mayerberg.

As a further tribute to the retiring president, the lodge gave a farewell gathering at its club rooms on Monday, September 6, which took the form of a stag party and was limited to the members of the lodge only. The program of entertainment began immediately after the close of the lodge meeting.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

Davis Lodge, No. 872, was instituted at Sheboygan, Wis., on Sunday, October 3, 1920, by Brothers O. G. Felton of Chicago, Director of Propaganda of the District Grand Lodge and Alex P. Greenthal, of Milwaukee, member of the General Committee of the District Grand Lodge, representing the district at the institution.

The Degree Team of Gilead Lodge, No. 41, of Milwaukee performed the ritualistic work. After the initiation of a class of new members, election of officers was held and was followed by their installation.

Under the head of the "Good of the Order" the President called upon the visiting brethren for short talks. A number of them addressed the lodge instructively and interestingly upon the work of the Order outlining its object, its purposes generally, its accomplishments and the future aspirations of the Jewish people throughout the world.

After the regular order of business was disposed of, refreshments were served and a social time was indulged in.

There is every promise that Davis Lodge will become an important link in the fraternal chain and that its usefulness will be manifested on many occasions.

NEW CASTLE, PENNSYLVANIA.

About one hundred fifty men gathered in the B'nai B'rith hall on Sunday evening, September 26. to participate in services which ushered in the Succoth Festival. Services were read by Marcus Feuchtwanger, and the gathering was under the auspices of New Castle Lodge, No. 609.

After an address by Mr. Feuchtwanger, a movement was started to raise funds through the community to establish Friday evening services during the coming year.

The B'nai B'rith Religious School, also under the auspices of New Castle Lodge, began its session on Sunday, October 10, 1920.

Henry Freed, Past President of Mahoning Lodge of Youngstown, accompanied by eight members of that lodge, visited New Castle Lodge, No. 609, at a meeting held on Sunday morning, September 26, to witness the initiation of the lodges' degree team. After a number of short talks, the meeting adjourned.

The visiting brethren were banqueted at the Elk Lodge Home.

Brother Freed of Youngstown invited New Castle Lodge members to attend the Past Presidents' Day on October 17, at Youngstown, Ohio.

PORTLAND, OREGON.

The first meeting of Portland Lodge, No. 65, was held on Tuesday evening, September 17. An unusual program was installed for the attending members. Rabbi Dr. Jonah B. Wise rendered a review of events since adjournment and Secretary E. M. Weinbaum gave a resume of the works of the lodge and achievements in the past and outlined the work that is contemplated to be done during the ensuing year.

Prof. S. C. Kohs as chairman of the committee on Intellectual Advancement is planning a literary program for one meeting each month.

A special committee consisting of the Past Presidents of the lodge will be held to devise ways and means to perfect the plan of arrangements for the entertainment of the District Grand Lodge at its coming session in Portland.

Miss Rae Ladenson of Chicago has been secured as a social worker, directing the activities in the B'nai B'rith Building. Miss Ladenson is a cultured young lady, acquainted with Jewish cultural and social work in general.

Portland Lodge, No. 65, held a well attended meeting on Tuesday evening, September 28. The Entertainment Committee carried out an interesting program.

The opening dance of the season under the auspices of Portland Lodge was held on Saturday evening, October 2. Invitations were not restricted to members of the Order and the response was unusually large.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA.

On Wednesday, September 29, 1920, Long Beach, California, reached the milestone in its development and the Jewry of that city made history for themselves.

That day, Long Beach Lodge, No. 870, was instituted and its officers installed. It was indeed a gala occasion and a number of prominent members of the Order from neighboring cities were among the guests who were entertained by the new lodge.

The festivities began with a dinner at the Virginia Hotel to the visiting officers, after which the institution of the lodge was held at the Odd Fellows' hall, where Brother M. Mendelsohn of Fresno, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, officiated. A large audience listened with interest to the impressive talks made by the visiting Grand Lodge officers, Brothers Mendelsohn, Frankenstein and Rabbi Magnin of Los Angeles.

Musical and vocal numbers were rendered and the evening festivities were closed with a supper which was prepared by the ladies of the local lodge.

More than seventy-five members of Los Angeles Lodge were in attendance and the guests were all enthusiastic over the reception accorded them, and the new lodge and its members felt honored by the attendance in large numbers of visiting brethren.

EBN EZRA LODGE, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Ebn Ezra Lodge has acquired, through the efforts of its officers and members, since January 1, 115 new members.

As per request of Brother Adolf Kraus, President, this lodge collected from its members for the orphans in Switzerland $510.00, and the lodge subscribed the sum of $100.00, making a total of $610.00.

At the last meeting of the lodge, held on September 9, an Anti-Defamation League Campaign Committee was organized, to confer with a like committee from Missouri Lodge of this city, to devise ways and means to collect the necessary funds for the campaign. As a nucleus of this fund, nearly $200.00 was subscribed.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

Council Bluffs Lodge, No. 688, held a well attended meeting on September 14, 1920.

The committees appointed to raise funds for the Anti-Defamation League submitted report to the effect that $500.00 had been secured in subscriptions and most of it had already been paid.

The lodge also appointed various committees to look after the Intellectual Advancement features of the lodge as well as inaugurating a campaign for propaganda.

RAMAH LODGE, CHICAGO.

On September 16, the first meeting of Ramah Lodge, No. 33, Chicago, was held after the summer vacation. The attendance was unusually large and a number of visiting brothers from sister lodges were present. A class of twenty-five candidates was initiated by the Degree team of the lodge and the newly elected officers were installed by Brother O. G. Felton, Chairman of the Propaganda Committee of the District Grand Lodge.

The most important feature of the meeting was an address by Brother Judge Harry M. Fisher, who recently returned from his tour in Poland and Soviet Russia, where he was delegated by The American Jewish Relief Committee to investigate existing conditions in those unhappy lands. Judge Fisher gave an extensive review of conditions existing during his sojourn in those lands and recited arrangements made for the relief of suffering coreligionists and outlined a plan for future activities with a view of rehabilitating the war sufferers. He closed his address with a strong appeal for financial support and at the conclusion of his address, a rising vote of thanks was extended to the speaker.

Various standing committees of the lodge were appointed and the Committee on Propaganda has arranged for a conference and dinner to be held on October 7 at the Covenant Club, at which time and place, plans for an extensive, though short, campaign for members will be prepared and decided on. It is contemplating to secure five hundred new members before the close of the year and to initiate them en masse in December and to arrange a program of entertainment in connection with the class initiation.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

In honor of Sergeant Benj. Kaufman and Sergeant Sidney J. Gumpert, two of the Congressional medal of honor men who were in Cleveland during the American Legion Convention on September 27, as guests of the Legion, the service men of the B'nai B'rith gave a dinner on September 28 at the B'nai B'rith building.

The dance committee cooperating with the ex-service men of the B'nai B'rith and representatives of other organizations were acting as hosts to the visiting American Legion delegates and tendered them a dance and entertainment on the evening of September 28 at the B'nai B'rith Club Building.

Last year Cleveland Lodge received requests from various organizations to furnish entertainers for different occasions. The lodge cooperated and made a proper contact with the organizations for the securing of the desired talent.

This year the lodge contemplates the maintenance of an entertainment bureau so that when any organization is in need of talent, they can immediately be put in touch with it through this bureau.

Under the auspices of the Committee on Entertainment, the first dance of Cleveland Lodge, No. 16, was held on Sunday evening, October 10, 1920. The affair was held strictly for B'nai B'rith members and was largely attended. The committee has also arranged for similar affairs to be held the second and fourth Sundays of every month.

The dramatic section of the B'nai B'rith is selecting a list of plays to be read and used this coming winter season.

A meeting of those who formed the B'nai B'rith chess circle last season was held September 30 at the B'nai B'rith building. At this meeting, plans for reorganization of the club and for the organization of a tournament were discussed, also the personnel of a team representing the B'nai B'rith in city-wide matches.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT LODGE, SUPERIOR, WIS.

On September 20, 1920, Theodore Roosevelt Lodge, No. 844, of Superior, Wisconsin, held a well attended meeting at which more than ninety per cent of the membership was in attendance. Arrangements were made by the lodge for the holding of a dance on October 5 and a public meeting on October 19, at which time it is expected the President of the District, Brother Eugene Mannheimer, of Des Moines, will pay the lodge an official visit.

ELYRIA AND LORAIN (OHIO) LODGES.

A joint open meeting of Elyria Lodge and Lorain Lodge was held at the Odd Fellows' Temple in Elyria, Ohio, on Thursday, October 7. The attendance was most gratifying to the energetic officers of these two new lodges.

The meeting was addressed by Alfred A. Benesch, member of the General Committee of District No. 2.

The lodges are planning a joint initiation for November and the degree team of Cleveland Lodge will be requested to exemplify the ritual upon that occasion.

PROGRESSIVE LODGE, NEW YORK.

A regular meeting of Progressive Lodge, No. 841, was held on the evening of September 28.

A number of standing committees, such as Entertainment, Membership, Anti-Defamation League and By-Laws Committees were appointed, with instructions to submit reports of their activities at the meetings of the lodge.

The lodge resolved to carry on social activities within the lodge and to hold monthly open meetings with social sessions.

CONSTANTINOPLE.

Under the auspices of Constantinople Lodge, No. 678, of Constantinople, Turkey, a geography of Palestine has been prepared and published with a view of instructing the children in the geography of the country which has sheltered Judaism since its infancy, and which, after twenty centuries of foreign occupation, bids fair to again become a national home.

JOSHUA LODGE, PHILADELPHIA.

On October 6, 1920, Joshua Lodge, No. 23, of Philadelphia, held an interesting debate under the leadership of Rabbi Edward David on the subject, "Is the Jew Responsible for the Present Wave of Anti-Semitism that is Being Directed Against him Everywhere?"

A large number of the members of the lodge and visiting brethren from sister lodges were present and participated in the discussion. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served.

FARGO, NORTH DAKOTA.

Under the auspices of John Hay Lodge, No. 634, of Fargo, North Dakota, a campaign for the raising of money for the use of the Anti-Defamation League was held and considering local conditions, the same resulted most successfully.

A mass meeting was held under the auspices of the lodge in the meeting room of the lodge, and addresses were made by various speakers and subscriptions were taken up at the same time. After the adjournment of the meeting, committees recently appointed canvassed the community and secured nearly $200.00.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

Ethan Lodge, No. 37, one of the oldest lodges of the Order in District No. 4, has advanced steadily during the past year, as evidenced by the large number of new members added to the roll of the lodge.

Increased membership has inspired the officers and committees to undertake bigger work including educational and social meetings.

On September 7 a meeting of the lodge was held during State Fair week and the occasion was celebrated by a public meeting in honor of brethren from sister lodges. As a special feature of the meeting Mr. Lucius L. Solomons, of San Francisco, First Vice-President of the Constitution Grand Lodge, was the guest of honor and delivered an address which was very much enjoyed by all those present.

MINNESOTA LODGE, ST. PAUL, MINN.

On September 20, 1920, the first meeting of the season was held under the auspices of Minnesota Lodge, No. 157, of St. Paul, Minn., with a large attendance present.

During the course of the meeting, a discussion on the Anti-Defamation League's work was held, particularly in connection with newspaper articles and the Ford publications.

Brother Gustavus Loevinger gave an interesting talk, after which subscriptions were called for from those present, resulting in $340.00 being secured. At the close [illegible] committee was appointed [illegible] nd means of raising funds [illegible] Anti-Defamation League.

OFFICE OF EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, DISTRICT GRAND LODGE NO. 2, INDEPENDENT ORDER B'NAI B'RITH.

B'nai B'rith Calendar for District No. 2.

The General Committee of District Grand Lodge No. 2 has suggested and urged that the following occasions be celebrated by all the lodges throughout the District:

B'nai B'rith Day, between the first and twentieth days of November.

Past President Night, at a regular meeting in the month of February.

Memorial Services, to be held during the month of April.

Flag Day, June 14.

Mothers' Day, the second Sunday in May.

Rituals for the celebration of B'nai B'rith Day, Mothers' Day, Flag Day and Memorial Day services may be had from this office upon application.

Lodges Visited by Executive Director in September.

Mr. Jacob B. Krohngold, Executive Director of District Grand Lodge No. 2, made the following visits during the month of September:

Albuquerque, N. M., September 14.
Las Vegas, N. M., September 16.
Trinidad, Colo., September 19.
Pueblo, Colo., September 21.
Colorado Springs, Colo., September 24.
Denver, Colo., September 26.

Speakers Bureau Planned.

Preparations are now being made to supply each lodge in the District with a regular schedule of speakers for the year. Lodges are requested to communicate with this office, advising us of the dates of their regular meetings and upon what occasions they prefer to have the speakers. Arrangements are also being made to supply speakers for extraordinary or special occasions.

Anti-Defamation League Campaign for Funds.

The Anti-Defamation League has asked the lodges of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith to aid it in the collection of funds for the purpose of combating anti-Semitic propaganda and activities. Judge Rosenfeld, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, has urged upon the officers and delegates of each lodge the need of forming a local committee for the purpose of actively prosecuting this campaign. This work is of the greatest importance and should not be neglected or ignored. Secretaries are kindly requested to communicate with this office advising us of local progress along these lines.

I. O. B. B. Propaganda Literature.

Propaganda booklets, containing addresses by President Adolph Kraus, of the Constitution Grand Lodge, and President Samuel Rosenfeld, of District Grand Lodge No. 2, may be had upon application to this office. These booklets aré splendid material for distribution among prospective members and newly initiated members.

Request For Inter-City Debate.

This office has received an inquiry from Mr. Lewis Drucker, Secretary of Cleveland Lodge, asking us whether we knew of any B'nai B'rith organizations with which he might be able to arrange an inter-city debate in which the young men could participate. We agree with Mr. Drucker that such an activity would stimulate interest and urge that some neighboring lodge take up the challenege.

Cincinnati Lodge Gives Picnic.

We note with a great deal of pleasure that Cincinnati Lodge gave an old-fashioned picnic for its members and their families at Rosedale Park, Ky., August 29. We call attention to this fact because we believe that such affairs help to promote harmony and brotherly love among lodge members. Cincinnati Lodge is to be congratulated upon its enterprise.

Yours for a bigger and better B'nai B'rith.

HUNGARIANS DECIDE UPON FURTHER ACTION AGAINST JEWS.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service). We are telegraphically informed from Budapest that at the last conference of the "Awakening Hungarians" further definite steps for the persecution of Jews was decided upon. Among other steps it was decided to deprive all Jews of their citizenship, to restrict as far as possible their commercial privileges, to prohibit them from editing newspapers and to prohibit them from publishing anything in Hebrew.

B'nai B'rith—A Clearing House

By I. J. Aschheim

I AM asked by the publisher to make my contribution to the "Sum-Total of Knowledge" concerning the Order of B'nai B'rith, without at all being assured that Mr. Sum Total in his self-sufficiency and self-complacency desires his knowledge enriched on that subject. It is thoroughly well understood that the upper tendom takes no stock in anything that interests the average man, but if perchance a drop of the dew does penetrate the ancestral armor, instead of assimilating with his system, it dissolves and evaporates as quickly as a stray California snowflake.

For that reason, I shall not address myself to the readers of Emanu-El indiscriminately, but shall turn to those willing to give me a sympathetic hearing; at least such who would show a friendly attitude.

To speak of the Order as a dispenser of benefits, either material or ideal; to dwell on the moral duty of every Israelite, to cooperate with it and give it his wholehearted support; to present for review a list of its achievements, the result of three-quarters of a century of unremitting service in the cause of Israel, would not only be talking "Shop", but would be repeating things that should long ago have found their way into Jewish text-books. Somewhere there must be another angle to this question. Somewhere there must be an unexplored region. To me, it has for some time been a conclusive proposition, that, had no such an organization been in existence as yet, it would have been the imperative duty of the Jewish genius to create one on just such lines, as is built the Order of B'nai B'rith today.

Without a single word of disparagement of the ponderous organizations founded in this country within the last decade or two and headed by commanding figures in American Jewish life, it may safely be averréd, that the B'nai B'rith is the great Clearing House for the Jewish mind. Here as nowhere is an unrestricted interchange of thought in vogue on all Jewish questions, provided they be sane, practical and above all, realizable. A B'nai B'rith lodge has no time to chase after phantoms, no matter how alluring they may seem. Furthermore, the Order is a great democracy, a leveller of classes, permitting neither the plutocrat nor the proletarian to lord it over one another. Where will the average Jew find himself so unfettered? Certainly not at congregational meetings, where an unblushing and undiluted autocracy holds sway.

Next of paramount importance is the influence the Order exercises on the Jewish youth. It moulds his thoughts and stirs his emotions. It awakens the community spirit in him and henceforth he feels, frequently for the first time, that he is a link in a chain. No young man who has taken the obligation of a Ben B'rith in sincerity and uprightness, will ever thereafter shamelessly deny his origin, or live a life of deceit. And why? Not because of the obligation itself, that is not so soul-stirring and binding, but, because, in the lodge room, if he be in the least degree susceptible to the influence of mind, he will imbibe sentiments during the discussion of questions, which will forever fortify and steel him against the inroads of the insidious. Such schooling he can not get except in a B'nai B'rith lodge. I have been told by men in service in the war camps that whenever a Jewish soldier would take special trouble to find a hut of the Jewish Welfare Board, he would generally prove himself, on closer analysis, to be either a sprig of one of the eastern Ghettoes, or a member of the B'nai B'rith. Young American Jews, who were of neither class, and consequently lacked Jewishness, as a rule paraded, what they were pleas to call their broad-mindedness, or no sectarianism, and sought their diversions with commendable logic and consistency, in the Y. M. C. A. camps.

Next we must emphasize the intense Americanism of the B'nai B'rith lodges Jewish to the core, yet not separatist so-called "Nationalism", a bird of Slav nativity, is thoroughly eschewed. Th only "Nationalism" of any standing i of the American kind. The ritual teache patriotism with as great a fervor as i teaches Jewish ethics and Jewish pride The lodge room is not complete in it appointments, unless it has the U. S. Fla adorning the altar. Take it, all in a there is no better school for the American ization of our foreign element than B'nai B'rith lodge. Americanism is i the air and the foreigner inhales it withou being subjected to the sneers and scoff of the professional patriot and supe American.

Finally I come to the missionary chara ter of a B'nai B'rith lodge in smaller co munities. Thousands of our young peo on the rural districts would become i mersed and be entirely lost to the fol were it not for such Saving Stations plant here and there. I have in mind a numb of towns on the Coast, and I take the as typical of other districts, where t introduction of a B'nai B'rith lodge chang the vista of the young men entir and created a turning point in their v souls. For the first time in their li they stepped out from their isolation i a world, a world of which they had bu faint, and, at best, but a vague concepti In other words, they came back to the selves.

At the last general convention of Order, in Cleveland, O., I counted in tendance at least fifteen young Ameri rabbis, deeply engrossed in the affa of the organization. Those men eviden understood where the interests of synagogue lies. For let me say that rabbi who nowadays fails to recogn the pregnant relationship of synagog and lodge and neglects to cultivate t relationship, not only fails of his first du as a reconciler and a lover of peace, b displays a woeful, almost criminal, la of foresight and leadership as well.

I began this article, forswearing talk of "Shop". I am now constrai however to allude at least to one mod activity in the Order, one that has ta front rank, over-shadowing all oth As a matter of fact, many other activit in essence, finally converge into that cl I have reference to the anti-defamat work, which is carried on by a spe bureau of the Order's executive. In ma respects, the Central and Eastern Pow have contrived to make themselves exe plars for the Allies. Many times have latter flattered the former by copy their methods in spirit and in letter. O more we behold the example emulated the West. Ever since the armistice, poisonous snake of anti-Semitism spread itself from its indegenous soil Germany onto the English speaking wo and is now endeavoring to spew its sa even on the sacred soil of America, dedic ed to justice and equal rights.

A prominent business man in this sends me a very liberal contribution the anti-defamation campaign fund, wh is now being collected, with the follow note:

"I personally, through my exten travels, can see a frightful necessity this work, and therefore fully justify existence of the Anti-Defamation Leag

May all your readers be inscribed the Book of Life on this Rosh Hasha Day.

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE.

Memphis Lodge, No. 35, of Memphis, Tennessee, held its regular meeting on September 26 with a large number of members in attendance.

Among the important matters discussed was the "five hundred membership campaign", which has been launched by the lodge. It is the purpose of Memphis Lodge to increase its present membership to five hundred before the close of the year, and from the number of applications for membership so far received, the lodge seems determined to reach that goal.

[illegible] int matter discussed was [illegible], features to be intro- [illegible] ting of the lodge.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON.

Abr. Geiger Lodge, No. 423, of Spok Washington, held the first meeting of fall season on September 2, 1920. A l attendance was present and the wor the Anti-Defamation League was cussed.

A class of candidates was initiated at the close of the meeting luncheon served, and a program was carried by the Entertainment Committee.

KOVNO CROWDED WITH REFUGE

Kovno (J. C. B. Service).—Fearing possible invasion of Lithuanian territ by the Poles thousands of Jews from provinces are crowding this city in effort to save themselves.

96.05
BN RR

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS
BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII NOVEMBER, 1920 No. 3

"The Poison Pen"

Further Revelations

(Anti-Defamation League of the I. O. B. B., 812 Tribune Bldg., Chicago, Ill.)

AMONG men and women who produce the newspapers of America, a "poison pen" is a person who spreads slander by written or printed words. Usually "poison pens" are not of great consequence as persons. They remain anonymous, afraid to stand sponsor for their canards. But occasionally there comes to light, a "poison pen" who is not precisely true to type.

Such a one is a certain manufacturer who lives near Detroit, Michigan. Although confessedly illiterate, he has sufficient wealth to employ men of considerable literary ability who are willing to sell their talent.

For months the newspaper of which he is owner has been attacking the Jews. Since he is a manufacturer of automobiles, we shall refer to him and to his mercenaries by the general designation of "Mr. Manufacturer."

Individually the attacks are unimportant. Many are so absurd as to warrant no contradiction.

He links, for example, the Jews of all nations in a conspiracy to obtain temporal control of the world, as if it were possible by that stroke of his "poison pen" to obliterate from the pages of history, and the memories of their kin, the names of hundreds of thousands of Jews who died for their respective countries—to uphold opposing patriotic principles: no mean feat even for a man who can accumulate hundreds of millions as rapidly as he.

Other of "Mr. Manufacturer's" charges are merely self-contradictory. He asserts, for illustration, that "Jewish financiers and Jewish bolshevists" have made common cause, thus attempting to upset all established economic conceptions to achieve, in other words, an affinity of oil and water.

If "Mr. Manufacturer" were always so ridiculous, he might not be, strictly speaking, a "poison pen". But by far the largest portion of his charges comprise a skeleton of fact garbed in elaborate and plausible fictions. Unfortunately untruths and misrepresentations do not possess the quality to contradict themselves. And the effect of much unchallenged slander is to give it the effect of reality.

Unless one had "Mr. Manufacturer's" facilities—a newspaper with an established circulation—as well as his wealth, one could not hope to answer each of the canards; for he can utter and broadcast them too quickly. It is possible, nevertheless, to refute the most representative of his distortions with the means at hand; and these having been shown to be inaccurate representations of fact, the inference is warranted that the remainder are no more trustworthy.

And upon that premise the case shall rest for the present. Future articles will consider other phases of the Anti-Semitic propaganda which "Mr. Manufacturer" is sponsoring.

The Jew-Bolshevist Charge

"The Manufacturer's favorite theme is the "Jewish bolshevist." Because the names of certain Jews have been associated with the soviet regime in Russia, he seizes upon that fact and offers it as evidence that all Jews would welcome the expansion of Sovietism.

A typical instance is the following quotation from an article captioned: "Is the Jewish 'Kahal' the Modern 'Soviet'?":

"It is therefore no new thing that has arisen in Russia. It is the imposition by the Jewish revolutionists upon Gentile Russia of a form of control in which Judaism has been schooled from the earliest times of its contact with the world. Soviet Russia could not have been possible had not 90 per cent of the commissars been Jewish".

It is characteristic of "Mr. Manufacturer's" utterances that he quotes no authority. So let us turn away from this bald assertion to a more reliable source of information: and while we are about it, let us look at the fountain head of the Soviet government, where all authority centers.

The facts are contained in an article published in "Le Temps" of Paris dated December 21, 1919, entitled "Bolshevism and the Soviets: Who are the Leaders". It should be borne in mind that "Le Temps" is probably the most conservative paper in France, that it is in effect a semi-official government publication, and that the French government itself is bitterly anti-Bolshevik. The article in "Le Temps" shows that out of the 48 men at the head of affairs in Soviet Russia 11 belong to the old Russian nobility, 29 come from the Russian bourgeoisie, and that by the side of all these personages, all of them Orthodox Christians, there are 8 Jews in positions of authority. In the Cabinet there is only one Jew, Trotsky. The following is a translation of the article:

"We have shown, in our previous articles that Russia is not governed by the Soviets, but by a political party which has been enabled to utilize them, and that the pretended dictatorship of the proletariat is in reality nothing but the dictatorship of a Central Committee of politicians. It is not true that every citizen there is a producer. . On the contrary, the working men are the victims of the Bolshevist revolution, which is carried on wholly for the benefit of the peasants, and against the interests of production. But if the Bolshevist chiefs are not proletarians, from what social status do they emanate?

"The majority of them belonged to the Russian nobility, or are descended from the lower middle class. The following among the old gentry are the most notorious:

"Lenin, Chief of the Government.

"Bontch-Brouewitch, Secretary of the Council of Commissaries of the People.

"Tchicherine, Commissary for Foreign Affairs.

"Lounatcharsky, Commissary for Public Instruction.

"Kolontai, Commissary for Public Assistance.

"Krassine, Commissary for Industry and Commerce.

"Milioutine, of the family of the Counts, Commissary of Agriculture.

"Obelensky, of the family of the Princes, one of the principal leaders of the central Bolshevist Committee.

"Stark, son of the Admiral, Chief of the Central Press Bureau of the Soviets.

"Menjiviski, ex-Commissary of Finance.

"Piatakof, Commissary of Kieff.

"Here are the principal Bolshevists who come from the Russian bourgeoisie:

"Rikoff, President of the Chief Economic Council.

"Lomof, Vice President.

"Newsky, Commissary of Railways.

"Krestinsky, Commissary of Finance.

"Mestcheriakof, Chief Editor of the "Pravda".

"Tzicuroupa, Commissary for Revictualling.

"Serada, Commissary of Agriculture.

"Boukharine, principal Bolshevist theorist after Lenin.

"Noghine, of the Chief Economic Council.

"Rakovsky, Chief of the Bolshevist Government of the Ukraine.

"Smidovitch, ex-President of the Soviet of Moscow.

"Pokrovsky, Professor of History, ex-President of the Soviet of Moscow.

"Krilenko, former Bolshevist Generalissimo.

"Watzetis (Lett), former Bolshevist Generalissimo.

"Kamenief, Acting Generalissimo (Colonel).

"Podvoisky, one of the principal members of the Bolshevist Military Council.

"Lachevitch, one of the principal members of the Bolshevist Military Council.

"Antonof, one of the principal chiefs of the Bolshevist Military Council, Generalissimo of the Southern Front.

"Jourenef, Chief of the Red Guard.

"Djerzinsky (Pole), Boskii, Peters (Lett), Medvedief and Wesselovsky, Chiefs of the Official Organization of the terror.

"Tomsky, President of the Central Syndicate.

"Staline (Georgian), Chief of the Commisariat of Nationalities.

"Latsis, Chief of the Commissariat of Nationalities.

"In addition there are two workmen:

"Kalinine, Acting President of the Executive Committee of the Soviets.

"Schliapnikof, Ex-Commissary of Labor.

It seems to us opportune to place, by the side of these personages, all of them Orthodox Christians, the principal Bolshevists of Jewish origin:

"Trotsky, Commissary of War and of the Navy.

"Zinovief, President of the Soviet of Petrograd.

"Radek, Consultant for Foreign Affairs.

"Kamenief (not to be confused with the Colonel), ex-President of the Petrograd Soviet.

"Litvinoff, former Bolshevist Ambassador in London.

"Joffe, former Ambassador in Berlin.

"Larine, of the Chief Economic Council.

"Stieklof, Chief Editor of the 'Izvestia'.

"If we add that Trotsky, the only Jew who at present holds a portfolio of Minister in the Government, can only exercise his functions in cooperation with the General Staff composed of Superior Officers of the old Tsarist regime, all of them belonging to the gentry, the part taken by Jews in the Bolshevist movement appears to have been singularly exaggerated.

"Moreover, abroad, the role of Trotsky is likewise misunderstood. Always tossed between diverse currents of Socialist thought, sometimes Minimalist, sometimes Bolshevist, he had never been the doctrinaire of the Bolshevist party, the true father of which, the sole inspirer, is Lenin. It is Lenin who completely subjugates the Government, Trotsky included. It is by examining his very curious mentality that we will have an exact idea of that of all the Bolshevist chiefs".

If further proof is deemed necessary, it is to be found in an English Secret Service report published by the British Government as "Parliamentary Paper, Russia No. 1 (1919). That document which was sent to British government officials shortly after the outbreak of the Revolution gives the names of those who at that time constituted the "Central Committee"—the body which according to the Paris "Temps", possesses complete power in Soviet Russia. All but one of the names given in that report appear in the non-Jewish list in "Le Temps".

According to a report in the November 22nd issue of The Chicago Tribune of an address by an eminent Chicago jurist, who recently returned from Soviet Russia, the Jews of Russia are united in their opposition to Bolshevism. They are divided into twelve political parties. The strongest of these is the Zionist party which numbers seventy percent of the Jewish population. These are all under the Bolshevik ban and 107 of their leaders are now in prison in Moscow. Why they were imprisoned and why they have not been liberated is common knowledge in Russia. They had the courage to sign their names to a proclamation issued by the Zionist party, denouncing the communist government and calling upon the other parties to support them. They were immediately arrested.

"Upon my arrival in Moscow", said the jurist, "I was approached by those men still free to see what might be done to obtain liberty for their leaders. I was told that if the Jewish conference would issue a proclamation of loyalty to the Soviet Government, the men in prison would be let go.

"It was decided that the decision lay not with us but with those who were under arrest, and we were permitted to send a delegation to the prison for a conference with them. They told us that their freedom should never be bought in such a way, even though they all be executed. That proclamation against the communists is in effect to this very day".

These are the facts. Let the reader judge for himself whether "The Manufacturer's" Jew-Bolshevik charge and the corollaries he derives therefrom have any foundation.

The Jew and Patriotism.

In an article "Does a Jewish World Program Exist" which deals with the discredited "Protocols" (referred to in part one of this series of articles), the editor makes the following statement with reference to the loyalty of Jews to the country in which they live:

"The patriotism of the Jew * * * is very widely questioned in all countries; you hear it in England, France, in Germany, in Poland, in Russia, in Roumania, and with a shock, you hear it in the United States."

As a matter of fact, according to the latest report of The Office of War Records—31 Union Square, West, New York City, the total number of Jews in the Army and Navy of the United States, during the world war was close to 225,000, more than four per cent of the armed forces of the United States, which on Armistice day numbered 4,800,000.

There were nearly 40,000 Jewish volunteers in the service, or practically twenty per cent of the total Jewish contingent, a record unsurpassed by any other section of the American population.

Eleven hundred citations for valor were conferred upon Jewish soldiers in the American forces for bravery in action 725 were conferred by the American command, 287 by the French, 33 by the British, and 46 by the various other allied commands.

In the whole history of our country only 78 Congressional Medals of Honor have been awarded. In the late war three were awarded to Jewish soldiers. The distinguished Service Cross is worn by at least 150 American Jews, the rare French Medaille Militaire by four American Jews, and the Croix de Guerre by 170 Jews in the A. E. F.

There were nearly 10,000 Jewish commissioned officers in the several branches of the service. In the Army there were more than 100 colonels, and lieutenant colonels, 540 majors, 1,400 captains, and over 7,000 lieutenants. In the Navy there were 500 Jewish commissioned officers, the highest rank being that of Rear Admiral Joseph Strauss. In the Marine Corps there were over 60 commissioned officers, the highest rank being held by Brigadier General Chas. H. Lauchheimer.

The total of Jewish casualties was close to 14,000 including about 2,800 who made the supreme sacrifice.

The proportion in each of the European countries is naturally larger as they were longer at war.

The Jewish Lobby.

In the article entitled "How the Jews in the United States Conceal Their Strength", "The Manufacturer" quotes at length from hearings before the Senate Committee on Immigration and the Immigration Commission to prove its thesis that the government was prevented by "The Jewish Lobby" at Washington from making a complete census. The hearings in question arose from opposition of certain Jewish organizations to the practice of classifying immigrants fom various European countries as Jews rather than as Germans, Russians, Austrians, Hungarians, etc. They took the stand that if this classification were carried to its logical conclusion, Americans of Jewish religious faith going abroad would have to be classified as Jews rather than Americans. Their position was that unless religious belief was in question, the Jew should be classified as a native of the country to which he owed allegiance. The matter quoted in the article is garbled to such an extent, however, that the real purposes of the hearings are entirely lost sight of and "Mr. Manufacturer" summarizes the whole matter by saying "the Jewish Lobbyists had their way". The hearings are reported in the Reports of the Immigration Commission. On page 19, Volume 1 of those Reports the Commission stated its conclusions in overruling the above objections as follows:

"Though both terms (Hebrew and Jew) in question are used interchangeably to designate a religion as well as a race of people, the Commission has employed them only in the latter sense in collecting and compiling data respecting immigrants of the various races".

Rusty Weapons.

There is nothing especially new in attacks upon the Jew, and most of "The Manufacturers'" material (with superficial changes) has been used before.

One of the most popular weapons in [illegible] hands is the charge of acquisitiveness. Von Beguelin, a Prussian official, stated in a report on the conditions of the Jews, that they accumulated money and hoarded it and explained this fact by saying that they were unsociable and, therefore, did not spend their money. At the same time the provincial authorities of Alsace by a report on the Jews stated that they were unsociable and that their extravagance is a consequence of this quality.

Stoecker, the former anti-Semitic leader of Prussia, in an address delivered in the Reichstag December 14, 1904, throws the whole blame for the spread of Socialism on the Jews. Almost on the same date the English labor leader, John Burns, speaking in the House of Commons charged the Jews with "ox-like submission to authority".

In the September, 1917, issue of "The Smart Set", Richmond B. Barratt makes one of his characters say "He is too humble; he is a Jew only in that". In the same issue there is a review of a novel dealing with the negro problem. The reviewer describes the hero, a negro, as displaying an "almost Jewish impudence and obnoxiousness". Incidents of this sort abound in literature and indicate the ignorance which generally prevails of what constitute the true characteristics of the Jew.

In the fall of 1918 when the war seemed hopelessly lost for the Central Powers, the anti-Semites of Vienna were vehemently attacking the Jews on the ground that they were advocating the continuation of the war while the anti-Semites of Berlin were attacking them on the grounds that they were advocating peace.

Before the outbreak of the war one of the Junker backers of the leading anti-Semitic paper of Berlin assailed the Jew, Ballin, for advocating peace with England while a few weeks later another anti-Semitic organ of Berlin declared that the whole war was the work of "Hebrew Jingoes".

Before lending too attentive an ear to traducers of "The Weekly Slanderer" type, it is well to remember that the Jew is an individual, before he is a Jew. Macauley stated the proposition eloquently when he pleaded with the House of Commons on April 17, 1833, to remove from Jews all civil disabilities. He said:

"There is nothing in their national character which unfits them for the highest duties of citizens. In the infancy of civilization when our island was as savage as New Guinea, when letters and arts were still unknown to Athens, when scarcely a thatched hut stood on what was afterwards the site of Rome, this condemned people had their fenced cities and cedar palaces, their splendid temple, their great statesmen and their soldiers, their natural philosophers, their historians and their poets.

"What nation ever contended more manfully against overwhelming odds for its independence and religion? What nation ever in its agonies gave such signal proofs of what may be accomplished by a brave despair? * * *

"Let us do justice to them. Let us open to them the door of the House of Commons. Let us open to them, very career in which ability and energy can be displayed. Till we have done this, let us not presume to say that there is no genius among the countrymen of Isaiah, no heroism among the descendants of the Maccabees".

COOPERATION WITH THE ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE URGED.

After printing a letter addressed to the Jewish press by Adolf Kraus, President of the B'nai B'rith, in connection with the outbreak of anti-Semitism in this country, the "Jewish World" of Philadelphia.

"We gave this letter in full for it shows that the wave of anti-Semitism breaking forth from such a journal as the "Dearborn Independent" originally emanates from European anti-Semites. It is also evident that this anti-Semitic poison is taking root and is gradually spreading over this country. There is an obvious danger unless we take timely measures to prevent it that the venom of our enemies will spread and poison the minds and hearts of the American people, a people who were until now, quite free from hate and prejudice against the Jew.

"Quite some time ago we drew attention to the anti-Semitic propaganda which was being systematically carried on in this country. We said at the time that steps must be taken to counteract this propaganda and we are glad to see that this great Jewish order, the B'nai B'rith, has in the absence of any other body, taken upon itself the duty of counteracting and stemming the tides of anti-Semitism.

"It would be no more than right and expedient that the other Jewish orders of the United States should cooperate with the Anti-Defamation League in order to make a unanimous effort to combat the anti-Jewish propaganda in this country, which is apparently a part of the well-organized anti-Jewish movement in Europe."

The Jew a Public Enemy

Through the courtesy of a friend we have been favored recently with an opportunity to glance at the Dearborn Independent, a periodical which seeks to justify its claim to independence by calling itself "The Ford International Weekly." The copy carried the serial number thirty-one, and we are thereby informed that its life has been short and that its owner, who has a page to himself, has not as yet seen the full fruition of his scheme and must wait a while before he may determine whether to be uplifted or disgusted.

How, we wonder, how does he reconcile his theory that "a better mood is coming upon the people," that "we can have peace if we want to build it on justice," with the finding of space—a considerable allotment—for a bitter article under the caption, "Germany's Reaction Against the Jew"? Somehow it contrives to leave the impression, rightly or wrongly, that this reaction is a development which not only must be taken into consideration by students of existing conditions in Germany, but is one for which much may be said. Thus, in a sort of editorial summary, we find these words, the savor of which is unpleasant and the spirit, to some people, will be detestable:

"The daily press brings fragmentary reports of the strong sentiment which now exists against the Jew throughout Germany. This forms the subject of a very considerable literature in Germany, though not, however, newspaper literature, many of the greater German newspapers being under Jewish control. In an effort to show what lies beneath and behind this arousal of the German mind, this article is offered. It represents a summary of the most reliable declarations on the subject, and includes some amazing charges which are more or less believed to be true by most of Europe."

Now, in the first place, this summary does not quote authorities. Declaring, as to some of the allegations, that "assertion is not enough; proof is wanted," it nevertheless is content for the most part with assertion and nothing else. Insisting, for example, that the Jew in Germany is regarded as only a guest of the people, not as one of the people, the writer—his name is nowhere indicated—proceeds to tell us that the Jew hated the German people, that, in Germany, the "sole winners of the war were Jews," and that those countries dominated by Jews showed the greatest hatred of Germany during the recent "regrettable" war. We have his word for it, that is all.

There follows on this statement a catalog of Jews highly placed in Prussia and throughout Germany. To this is added the charge that they dominated the German side of the Peace Conference and that Jews played a very considerable part in the representation of other countries. That their work was nefarious, if not positively unavowable, may be gathered from the statement that, to get at the truth and discover the traffic, we must read the accounts of impartial non-Jewish chroniclers. These alone were struck by the fact—"the multitude of Jewish writers apparently judged it wise to conceal it." Further along we are told that patriotism is not part of the equipment of a Jew in Germany and we are asked to consider whether that may not throw some light on the Jew's assertion of patriotic loyalty to any other land where he may chance to live. If that does not mean that the American Jew is under suspicion—we need not concern ourselves with the Jew of France, or Italy or England—what does it mean and what is it intended to mean?

That, however, is secondary. The gravamen of the article is, as it seems to us, not only to show us the incredible influence which the Jew has come to exert in the new Germany—entirely by his own efforts, so much is not denied, and clearly because he was best adapted to the work in hand, though this our author does not say—but that such influence is used as a weapon against Germany, as an international weapon that is, that, this most of all, it is scandalously abused. "Go the length and breadth of Germany today, say the reports, study the temper of the people, and you will discover that the abuse of power by the Jews is burned across Germany's memory like a hot iron." Oppression, extortion, sedition, if not treachery, these, he indicates, are the marks of the Jew in Germany. He is fostering anarchy for his own ends, seeking to "break up new fields in which the new Jew may operate." Such, at least, is the picture painted for us by a brush which, if it is not directed by malevolence, succeeds in conveying an inescapable impression of purpose and bias malignant.

From Germany to Russia was an easy transition, a natural step. Was not Kerensky a Jew and, not being sufficiently "red," was supplanted by Trotzky, another Jew? Nor is it otherwise in this country, for, the world over, Jews "supply the energy of disruptive movements." It is they who would "practically abolish the United States." True, though they are vastly wealthy, their attack is directed at "capitalism," but what is capitalism but "the present government of the world by the Gentile"? And this apparent contradiction in no degree boggles the anonymous reviver of Judenhetze. He sticks to his text. His Judenhetze is no longer local to Central Europe, but world-wide.

For, as he tells us, Judaism is the most closely organized power on earth, "more so even than the British Empire." It forms a State. There is an "All-Judaan," and it is the only State that exercises world government—other States are national only. Money and journalism are its weapons. At will it commands anarchy or order. It was good enough to work through the English navy. But its aim is America. And so forth—ad infinitum and likewise ad nauseam.

We do not care to adventure further. When we reach a sneer at American "tolerance" we have more than enough. But we marvel at the inclusion of this anti-Semitic propaganda—what else is it we inquire to know?—in Brother Ford's curious leaflet directed at teaching people how not to think crookedly.

What is the motive, what the purpose? Or does the good man fancy he is spreading the gospel of brotherly love?—[Louisville Herald.

LITHUANIANS WILL GIVE JEWS FULLEST AUTONOMY.

Paris (J. C. B. Service).—At a conference held here between the Lithuanian Delegation and the Committee of Jewish Delegations of this city, the Lithuanian representatives assured the Committee that under the Lithuanian government, the Jews would be enabled to realize the fullest measure of autonomy. A similar assurance, the Committee learned, was given Dr. Rosenbaum, President of the Lithuanian Jewish National Council by Foreign Minister Purizki and the leaders of the three parties in Lithuania.

SWISS PEOPLE WILL DECIDE QUESTION OF SHECHITA.

Paris (J. C. B. Service).—The Swiss government is preparing to take a referendum on the disputed question of "Schechita" (the Jewish ritual form of killing animals) according to a dispatch from Zurich. Considerable opposition to the Jewish form of killing has been raised and the government has been called upon to suppress it, a number of leading men of science and learning have publicly declared that they favor it, and the government has decided to leave it to the decision of the people.

AUSTRIA'S FEAR OF JEWISH EMIGRANTS.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service).—Government instructions have been issued to all Austrian authorities to supervise the strictest control upon Jewish emigrants passing through Austria and to make sure that those will under no circumstance remain in the country. Particular attention is directed to the movement of "Chalutzim". Not only must the "Chalutzim" be kept out of the country but they cannot obtain food even during their temporary stay and must therefore bring their own food with them.

DEVELOPMENT OF PALESTINE REQUIRES HELP OF ALL JEWS, SAYS HERBERT SAMUELS.

London (J. C. B. Service).—In the course of a letter addressed to the Jewish Board of Deputies, Sir Herbert Samuel, the Palestine High Commissioner expresses himself as highly pleased with the present condition of the country, harmony, he says, prevailing in all communities. Speaking of the future development of the country, Sir Herbert appeals to the Board for its support and states that the cooperation of Jews everywhere is required in order to rebuild the ancient land of Israel.

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

The B. B. News and the Torah.

THE rabbis of old when they were embarrassed by some contradiction in the biblical narratives, helped themselves with the principle that the Torah is not written in chronological order. The writer of the Current Events is bound to make a similar plea. The distance from the place of publication, and various difficulties which often work together to delay the publication of the B. B. News make it necessary that, perhaps more than is the case with other monthly publications, the reader will find that the reviewer is occasionally behind time. The last review for October stated that peace negotiations between Poland and Russia had begun. By the time the reader received his paper these negotiations had led to a conclusion. From a Jewish point of view it was interesting that Polish extremists charged the representatives of their government with betrayal of the interests of the nation because they had demanded for the Poles in Russia minority rights which the Polish press considers a dangerous precedent in the case of the Jews. On the other hand Dr. Schipper, member of the Parliament, representing the Poale-Zion, declares that the peace of Riga was a compromise with reactionary forces in Russia. At any rate we see that no party is perfectly satisfied.

Our information is for the present and will be for some time contradictory and uncertain. Mr. Katz, who returned to New York from Poland and Ukraine, October 16, says the Poles are a new incarnation of Amalek. The difficulty of relief work is most vividly brought home by the same man when he tells us that Jews in Ukraine often had to give the money which they had received from the Joint Distribution Committee in order to save their lives and the honor of their daughters. A more important proof of the terrible situation is brought home by the fact stated in an Associated Press dispatch of October 27, that the exodus of the Jews from Poland is constantly increasing and that soon a quarter of a million Jews will have left. The Joint Distribution Committee experiences also considerable difficulty in rendering assistance to the immigrants. The military authorities requisitioned trucks which were sent by the Joint Distribution Committee for the sake of aiding the refugees. Equally important as a picture of the situation is the fact that rabbis and other congregational officials are leaving the former Prussian part of Poland as rapidly as they can.

Under these conditions it is not sufficiently encouraging to read that Dazinsky, the vice-premier, promised a better understanding between Poles and Jews. (Associated Press, Oct. 2). Similar is the order signed by the chief of the army staff, Rozwadwski, who ordered the troops to refrain from mistreating the Jews. It is hard to see how this order can do any good when it says among others that it is a fact that a part of the Jewish population had been hostile "to our state" during the Bolshevik invasion. Similarly suggestive is a report sent out from Lemberg that a conspiracy of Ukrainians and Jews had been discovered. It is futile to express an opinion on the chances of an improvement and impossible to give advice. Rabbi Perlmutter of Warsaw, representing the orthodox Jews, and a member of the parliament, registered as a Pole, which the radical element resents because it wishes the Jews to be recognized as a national group. Professor Asknazi, under the Austrian government professor of history in Lemberg, and now in Warsaw, appeals to the Jews in the same sense, advising that they should waive the minority rights granted to them under the Paris Treaty. The trouble is that nobody knows where the Polish sphere of influence ends. On October 10 a cable from London reported that the British ambassador in Warsaw stated that the Polish government would never occupy Wilna. One day later we read that General Zelegouski had occupied Wilna under the same pretense under which D'Annunzio declared Fiume a free state. The general resigned from the Polish army but everybody understands that this means the territory will be declared Polish as soon as this can be done. The general invited the Jews to take part in his administration which was refused, probably because they do not know how soon Wilna will be Lithuanian again. We can readily believe that their protest against Poland, which was reported by the London Times, October 21, is sincere. They surely have reason for it because the occupation of Wilna by Polish troops was inaugurated with the usual massacre of Jews and the same occurred in Minsk and probably in other cities claimed by Lithuania, for the Jews of Lithuania proper sent out a telegraphic appeal to the Jews of the world for assistance.

The situation is not in the least better in the Ukrainian territory, held by Polish troops, in spite of a supposed enthusiastic reception of the Polish Premier Witos in eastern Galicia which, as the London Daily Telegraph, October 9, reported is to be an independent state under the control of the League of Nations. Ukraine, the home of terror for the Jews, has again been visited by pogroms, the extent of which must have been very large. While the Polish minister of war officially ordered to stop persecutions, a secret circular issued last year was discovered which directed all commands to keep Jews and Germans from military office. Traveling in a railroad car means for a Jew in Poland to take his life in his hands.

View of "Tell Avis", the Prosperous Jewish Colony at Jaffa

As far as can be seen from a distance the present policy of the Polish government is reactionary in order to keep the socialists in the background. For this purpose the parliament passed a bill constituting an upper house which will consist of priests and landed proprietors, the same class which by its monopoly of all power brought Poland to rack and ruin (Oct. 23). The Jews were to be conciliated by the appointment of a chief rabbi for the army. We can readily see that this does not mean that Jewish religious and cultural activities shall be encouraged. A Hebrew culture society in Lemberg was suppressed by the government. The liberal paper "Tog" of Warsaw was suspended and the Israelitisches Wochenblatt of Zurich which receives reports from Poland through refugees who have found their way to Switzerland is excluded from the mails. The sentiment of the Poles may somewhat be judged from a demonstration made by the Poles in Chicago against the Jews on the West Side on Sunday, October 24, whom they ordered to close their stores. A few black "eyeskis" convinced these "gentlemanskis" that Chicago has not yet been annexed to the Polish republic. A public protest meeting planned in New York was abandoned upon the plea of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise who proposed that a committee should have an interview with the Polish ambassador, Prince Lubomirski. It is equally questionable whether this interview will have a tangible result, as it is whether a protest parade would have any influence. The rabbis tell us, that Jacob being informed of Esau's approach, prepared three methods, bribe, plea and defense. The first two methods have been tried repeatedly, but in vain in this case.

Russia and Her Border States.

A Russian paper which is published in Paris contains a letter from the famous revolutionary, Vladimir Burzeff, who emphatically denies the rumor that Jews killed the late czar and strongly attacks the London Times for its policy of creating prejudice by spreading reports of this kind. To us it would seem that if Jews should actually have been so prominently connected with the assassination of Nicholas II they did nothing different from what Puritan Englishmen did in 1649 and French Catholics in 1793, not to speak of the former privilege enjoyed by the Russian nobles or quite lately by their Slavic brothers in the Balkans when they found a king or emperor too inconvenient. In all these cases there were no Jews implicated and it would seem to us that the brutality with which the late King Alexander of Servia was assassinated together with his wife does not make a good record for the much admired King Peter who evidently was the organizer of the plot.

The uncertainty of our reports from Russia makes it doubtful whether the news of anti-Semitism in the Bolshevist army should be accepted as a fact. It seems clear, however, that the vast majority of the Jews as traders and modest property owners would find the Bolshevist government not at all sympathetic, even if, indeed, the charge is true that among the leaders the Jews predominate. Among the delegates to the Riga Conference was, as far as is known, only one Jew, Adolph Joffe, the first ambassador of the Russian republic to Germany, and one converted Jew named Rosenberg, originally from Lodz. There was another converted Jew present as representative of the republic of Latvia who holds the position of Foreign Minister. His name is Mejerowitsch.

The conditions of the Ukraine have been mentioned in connection with Poland. All that could be added is the terribly long list of cities where pogroms took place, the appalling number of victims and the incredible brutality with which murders and rapes were committed. Lithuania presents right now a more serious problem. The Jews greeted the occupation of Wilna by the Lithuanians very sympathetically, but their joy was not of long duration. It seems that of all these new states the republic of Lithuania has most sympathetically solved the Jewish question by the acceptance of the principle of minority rights. The Cabinet Council decided that all nationalities should be equally represented in appointments to offices and directed Jewish congregations to name eligible persons. Such a system is of course not an ideal one from the American point of view, but as the records of the Poles and Ukrainians since their "liberation" from foreign rule has proven, it seems to be the only possible solution of an intricate problem in Eastern Europe.

The Balkan States.

The reports from Roumania are conflicting. It may be taken for granted that the press reports speaking of the prohibition against the admission of refugees from the Ukrainian hell are correct. While knowing Roumania's attitude to her own Jews too well to believe that she would treat foreign Jews with any degree of respect for human rights, one can understand what indiscriminate admission of foreigners to a country which is at present financially in bad straits means. It deserves, therefore, commendation that a member of the Roumanian parliament strongly protested against the persecution of the Jewish refugees and declared it a disgrace to civilization. The Joint Committee on Foreign Relations of the British Jews issued a statement which declared that the condition of the Roumanian Jews has visibly improved. The report comes by cable and we shall have to wait for details before expressing an opinion. From other good sources we learn, however, that hundreds of Jews were kept in prison without a trial for a year under the charge of sympathy with Bolshevism, that during the time that they were in prison they were tortured by the guards and at the end all except four were found innocent.

Another report tells us that Jews were appointed to professorships in universities and high schools. We faithfully record the statement although the removal of Professor Leon Kellner of Czernowitz, an international celebrity on English literature, does not seem to confirm the story. The former anti-Semitic leader, Take Jonescu, now Foreign Minister, announced that he had asked two Jews to accept the position as ambassador to Washington, but that both declined for business reasons. We again have to wait for detailed information, although at first glance, it seems probable that this declination was arranged for so as to offer an innocent opportunity for a show of broad-mindedness in the United States, whose favorable opinion would help the rate of exchange. An incoherent report comes from Jugo-Slavia. It is reported that the university of Agram cancelled the doctor diplomas of three Jews because of their disloyalty. The only explanation possible might be that these men were in favor of the former status which made Croatia a somewhat autonomous part of Hungary.

Hungary—the New Roumania.

The latest papers are full of reports of the trial of the men who assassinated the last premier of the kingdom, Count Tisza, October 31, 1918. It appears that the organizer of the plot was Stephen Friedrich, afterwards premier, the same man whose appearance in New York created such a surprise. The question has not yet been satisfactorily answered why, in view of the official continuance of the state of war and in view of the rule published by the Department of State, that citizens of enemy countries cannot obtain a vise of their passports except in cases of urgent necessity and if their presence in the United States is of advantage to American interests, this assassin and pogrom leader should have obtained such a viso.

It can hardly be doubted but that Friedrich's presence in the United States was intended to whitewash the reactionary government and to explain the persecution of the Jews as an outburst of popular indignation due to the fact that the Jews were exclusively responsible for the communist government. It is therefore valuable to have now exact statistics on the relation between the Hungarian communists and the Jews. During the communist government 329 persons were executed, on which record, by the way, the present government of White Terror has considerably improved. Of these 329 persons thirty-two, nearly ten per cent, were Jews while the total percentage of Jews in Hungary is five. In other words, the Jews suffered twice as much from the communist terror than their fellow citizens.

In spite of this the reactionary organization known as the "Awakening Hungary" is continuing its agitation with unabated fanaticism. A convention of this organization, held in the first part of September in the city of Budapest, indulged in diatribes which make one feel like listening to a debate in the delirium tremens' ward of a hospital. Lieutenant Ivan Heijas, the leader of a uniformed body of cutthroats, said that he accepted the restrictions on the rights of the Jews of which mention shall be made later, merely as an installment. He wants Jews excluded from connection with newspaper publications, Hebrew printing prohibited, all Hebrew signs and posters removed, and in closing he said all the discussions about the restoration of monarchy, reconstruction of the government, improvement of the rate of exchange, etc., are trifles. The only question of importance is the Jewish question, and there is only one way to solve it. The Jews are a tumor in the body of the Magyar nation and this tumor must be cut out. It is hardly necessary to state that the charge of a Jewish international organization for world control, popularized by "The Protocols," also came up for discussion and so Henry Ford can obtain a clear idea as to the consequences of his policy.

The Budapest mob drew the proper conclusions from these harangues and during two days (October 1 and 2), no Jew was safe in the streets of Budapest. Mobs led by officers in uniform assaulted and beat the Jews that they found, stopped a street car in order to drag all the Jews out and when the conductor refused to stop the car he was shot. The ringleader, a lieutenant, was arrested, but when the mob assumed a threatening attitude the police let him go. Similar reports come from the country where mobs of peasants are going from village to village, looting, beating, killing and committing outrages on women. It must be stated that, probably because the assailants were not protected by military uniforms, they were arrested and three ringleaders sentenced to death. Individual instances are too numerous to be mentioned, but as a typical case the following shall be reported. A Jew in Dunafoeldvar had a bill for stationery against the city. He went to the city hall to collect his bill and the clerk refused to give him more than half the amount which his bill called for, and the frightened Jew went home and sent his son. The young man did not return but was found dead in the office, the coroner signing a certificate of natural death. It must be stated that cases of this kind occur very often. As a legal measure the government introduced a bill which was promptly passed, expelling all foreign Jews who came to the country after 1914 with the exception of those who are connected with foreign missions or engaged in an important business. From the latter class, however, Polish and Russian Jews are excluded. Another bill restricts the number of Jewish students admitted to universities in the manner known from czarist Russia for the last thirty years. In spite of this the anti-Semitic students continue their demonstrations and assault their Jewish classmates. Jewish high school teachers were dismissed and the restriction of numbers applies to secondary institutions also. The Jews are trying to meet the situation by the establishment of Jewish high schools but these again are restricted both as to their number and the number of students admitted. In plain words it is the object of the present government to restrict the number of Jews in professions. In this connection it may be reported that Julius Winterberg, a man prominently connected with the Jewish activities of Budapest, left half of his large fortune estimated at eighty million crowns to various charities among which there are a number of educational institutions. The fanaticism which makes itself felt against the position of the Jews in cultural life had an almost amusing sequel in the opera. The Jewish tenor, Rosza, formerly a national hero, was so often rudely insulted on the stage that he left Budapest for more congenial fields. The consequence is that the opera has lost in popularity and the Jews who attend it have declared a sort of strike in retaliation of the insults offered to Rosza and abstain from all applause, which has resulted in a chilly atmosphere at the performances. Another Russian method adopted by the Hungarian government is the treatment of Jews drafted into the army. Every recruit is cross-examined on his political views with the object of discrediting his loyalty. Rabbi Immanuel Loew, who was a victim of such an intrigue, is still kept under strict surveillance in Budapest. A guard with fixed bayonet is placed in front of his home and he is not allowed to communicate with the outside world. As a special favor it was permitted that ten prominent Jews, who had to be vouched for by other citizens, were allowed to hold services on the high holy days in his home. As a comical companion story to all these atrocities the following shall be quoted. The national saint of Hungary is Saint Stephen, the first Christian king of the country, who lived in the eleventh century. The church celebrates his anniversary with a procession at which the arm of the saint, kept in the cathedral as a holy relic, is carried through the streets. This anniversary was this year celebrated with great pomp and the place of honor by the side of this holy relic was given to Aladar Ballagi, president of the university, the son of a converted Jew, Moritz Bloch, who before his conversion translated the Hebrew bible into the Magyar language. One should imagine that this fact should help to awaken awakening Hungary to the absurdity of its conduct.

Austria and Her Heirs.

The cable news of the returns of the elections to the national assembly, held October 17, show that the Christian socialists or in plainer language, the clerical anti-Semites have gained the control of the house, while in Vienna the socialists are still in the majority. The independent Jewish ticket was entirely defeated while the pan-Germans or the racial anti-Semites have very few seats. It means that the new parliament will be controlled by clericals, and this probably indicates a return to the old Austrian policy of a domination by church and aristocratic influences. It does not mean that there are no Jews in the House because there probably will be some Jews who were elected on the socialist ticket in Vienna, but they will not vote as Jews nor take any interest in Jewish affairs. It is reported that the minister of foreign affairs, Dr. Renner, attributed the defeat of his party to the large number of Jews who held prominent public positions. He may be right. The exact situation will not be known for a week or so and will be presented in next issue of the News.

The Austrian situation is particularly complex. As a specimen the following case is quoted although it does not directly concern Jewish affairs. For the first time in history the city council of Vienna appointed an Old-Catholic and a man professing no religion as school principals. This situation cannot be understood unless we go back forty years or more in history. The Liberal School Law, passed in 1868, declared all teaching appointments public offices accessible to every citizen, thus abolishing the former religious test. This, and the increase of schools long neglected under the reactionary system of former years, created a great demand for teachers and a number of Jews were appointed even in country schools, where there was not a Jewish child enrolled. This provoked the clerical element and after considerable agitation a new bill was passed in 1883 which required that the principal of the school should possess the qualification to teach the religion which the majority of the pupils profess. In this way the constitutional clause of equality of all citizens in appointments to public office was evaded. It was meant practically to exclude Jews from teaching positions, especially in the country. The law is evidently still in force and its present application shows a comical situation which the framers of the clerical bill had never anticipated. The teachers in question were evidently Roman Catholics at the time when they passed their examination and received the certificate entitling them to give instruction in the Catholic religion. The law says nothing about one losing this qualification when he changes his religion, for the shrewd ecclesiastic politicians who framed the law never had any idea that such a thing might happen.

The parliament or, as it is officially called, the national assembly discussed shortly before its dissolution the new constitution of the republic. This constitution which does not seem to be more satisfactory to the majority of the population than was the imperial constitution before the dismemberment of Austria, provides for local autonomy. The speaker for the Christian socialists found this autonomy too broad and thought that under the new constitution a republic of Zion might be created in Austria. Judging by the result of the two elections held under the republic, which in the first instance brought only one Jew into parliament and in the second instance none, it does not seem to be very imminent, but the only official Jewish representative, the Zionist Stricker, cleverly interposed that this would not be such a misfortune. It is a pity that this man who is also behind the Jewish daily in Vienna, the Wiener Morgenzeitung, should not reappear in the new House. He was an able and zealous champion of the Jewish cause. One item in the printed report of his activity which he sent out as a campaign document is highly valuable. He proves that eighty percent of the Jewish funerals in Vienna have to be paid from charity funds. In other words, eighty out of one hundred Vienna Jews do not have the means of meeting the expenditure of such an emergency as death in the family. This is a complete refutation of the charges that the Jews control the whole wealth of the world.

A similar illustration is the enthusiasm over the donation of three million crowns for a children's home near Vienna where they would breathe country air and could learn the elements of horticulture. Three millions sound indeed very big, but when we learn from the rate of exchange at the same time that this is less than $10,000 and we remember that in shoes, garments and some other necessities of life a dollar in Vienna does not buy more than the dollar in New York, we may somewhat appreciate the distress prevailing there.

Unfortunately the other charge levelled against the Jews, that they have a cast-iron organization which regulates the acts and thoughts of every Jew in the remotest corner of the universe, does not receive its confirmation from the conditions in Vienna. The last election for the board of trustees of the congregation gave to the Zionists for the first time a considerable minority. In well-approved political fashion a caucus was held as to how the appointments to committees and to the chair should be regulated. The Zionists demanded besides a number of places on the executive committee the position of First Vice-President. They were offered that of the Second Vice-President, which they refused, resorting to obstruction and declaring they would not cooperate with the majority at all. Ecclesiastic differences seem also to influence considerably the situation in the republic of Czecho-Slovakia. We can notice an echo of this movement in the United States when we read that in Struthers, Ohio, a Czech Catholic church was disrupted owing to differences between the Czech and the Slovak members. (Oct. 29.) It seems that the Czechs represent the liberal element while the Slovaks are, both in politics and in religion, reactionaries. This would also appear from a pogrom said to have taken place in the formerly Hungarian district of Czecho-Slovakia. There is further reported a strong opposition to the admission of Jewish students to the universities of the Slavic republic. Here it is very hard to judge because, owing to the exclusion of Jewish students from universities in Hungary and Poland, it is quite likely that if an unrestricted influx of students to Czecho-Slovakia were permitted it would be impossible to accommodate them without seriously inconveniencing or barring the natives of the state. These difficulties are presented in a circular, sent out by the Menorah Association, which describes the terrible plight of the numerous Jewish students in Poland and Hungary who after having nearly finished their course are turned out and find the doors barred in all neighboring countries.

American Red Cross Workers Before Constantinople Palace

Palestine Receives Its High Commissioner

As a typical sign of the times, the establishment of two Jewish elementary schools and one high school in Bruenn may be cited. The capital of Moravia was always progressive and German. The Jews, with very few exceptions, were members of this party which represented, in spite of the charges against the Jews as born anarchists, the bourgeois liberalism of the middle classes. As such they were for non-denominational schools many years ago. Even Jewish private schools could not maintain themselves, but now matters have changed. The Jews of that country are almost as oppressed as are the Jews of Prussian Poland. Intimate information is to the effect that the new Slavic republic wastes its money on military display, on costly uniforms and on soft-job hunters of whom there are so many that all necessary improvements are delayed and the cultural activity is very much below that of the former Austrian administration. The greatest trouble is that upstart attitude of the numerous new officials. Czecho-Slovakia has now custom houses, and so many officials that they are constantly looking for trouble in order to show their usefulness. So it happened recently that a Vienna shoe manufacturer, who from olden times owns some shoe factories in Bohemia, went on business from Vienna to his factories. He took his wife along, and on their return from the journey that may have taken perhaps four hours, their luggage was searched as thoroughly as if they had come from the diamond fields of South Africa. The keen eye of the inspector, dressed in a brand-new uniform with a rich display of gaudy passement work, discovered in the trunk of the woman two pairs of new shoes. He declared this an attempt to smuggle goods out of the country. In spite of the papers which the man produced showing that he is a manufacturer of shoes, and in spite of the fact that the woman was willing to show that she had taken the shoes for her own use from her husband's factory instead of buying them in Vienna, she had to go to prison pending an investigation and the husband, not knowing what might happen to her, could do nothing else but stay with her. It took four days until they obtained a release on bond, but the woman will have to face a charge for smuggling. Our ancestors characterized such experiences with the brief phrase: "auch e Medeenah."

Housing Refugees; One Family in a Corner

The Country of Lessing.

"The nation of poets and thinkers" as the Germans like to call themselves has no reason to be proud of the chastening effect which the war had on it. It may still be called the nation of Goethe and Kant, but only in the sense of the weakest points of these two great men. Like Kant and his successor Fichte, the academic circles of Germany seem to be imbued with anti-Semitism to a degree which leads us way beyond that academic anti-Semitism of which Fichte and his contemporaries at the time of the Napoleonic wars were representatives. Reports of rowdyism of all kinds from the German universities make us despair of the belief in the refining influence of scientific training. Ludwig Plate, professor of Zoology in Jena and the successor of the illustrious Haeckel, utilizes his lectures for delivering anti-Semitic harangues and in reply to protests says that he treats the Jewish question from a strictly scientific point of view. It almost appears that this science, instead of demonstrating how man rose from the state of monkey, will prove the opposite. The rowdyism of which Professor Einstein has been the target makes one feel ashamed of humanity. A public meeting of a society of German scientists was called for the purpose of denouncing Einstein, who with grim humor listened to his scientific execution. Whatever was said there, including the various anti-Semitic attacks on the Jews as self-advertisers and the like, might pass, but it is an eternal disgrace to the ethical standing of the academic youth of Germany to learn that they passed the famous scholar in single file, shouting "sau jud" and threatening to cut his throat. Would Moses Mendelssohn have believed that such things could happen in the "capital of intellectuality" almost a century and a half after his death? It cannot be entirely overlooked that some of the best men in the academic circles of Germany protested against such mob rule, but this can not atone for the fact itself.

Ruins in Zwabil; Large Building on Right is Synagogue

Another event in educational circles is difficult to judge. All through Germany but especially in Berlin a strong protest is voiced against the appointment of Dr. Kurt Loewenstein to a position which is about equal to that of our superintendent of public schools. The appointment was made by the city council which is controlled by the radical socialists who are bitterly anti-religious. It was evidently made with the desire of provoking the religiously minded population. Loewenstein is not a professing Jew. Nobody knows exactly whether he or his parents were baptised, but he belongs to the large and evidently still growing number of religiously unattached (freireligioes) people. The curriculum of the Prussian school, still provides for religious instruction, and the appointment of a man who declares himself opposed to such instruction is considered by the conservative element, including those who are not anti-Semites, a provocation of religious sentiment. There can hardly be any doubt that here as in the case of the election of Ernest Nathan as Mayor of Rome, an additional provocation was seen in Loewenstein's Jewish extraction. It is worth mentioning that Professor Einstein is an emphatic Jew. Being invited to a meeting of the "Society of German Citizens Professing the Jewish Religion" he declared in courteous but unmistakable words that he considers the principles of this society as camouflage and has no sympathy with them. Conditions in Munich are, if possible, even worse than in Berlin. The deterioration of the Hofbraeu has certainly affected the "gemuetlichkeit" of the inhabitants of the Bavarian capital. Professor Magnus Hirschfeld of Berlin who delivered a lecture in Munich was mobbed on the street as he left the hall and was so badly beaten that he had to be taken to the hospital. The Rabbi of Munich, Dr. Baerwald, who appeared in an anti-Semitic assembly in which the rabbinical literature was denounced as immoral, fared little better. He asked for the floor in the discussion and was insulted and his Jewish companions were forcibly ejected. A somewhat comical incident was the protest against playing Max Bruch's Kol Nidre during a sacred concert in a church. Bruch, who recently died in advanced years, was neither a Jew nor of Jewish descent.

The clerical party naturally does not lag behind in this agitation and within it the Roman Catholic brand is as always in the lead. A society of priests of the diocese of Cologne passed a resolution protesting against the insult to the clergy found in a recent play, declaring that this was an attempt of the Jews to drag the Catholic priesthood through the mud. As a matter of fact, neither the author of the play nor the minister of education who refused to prohibit its production on the protests of the Catholics, are Jews. A comforting piece of news is a most remarkable presentation of Judaism in a recent book of the famous theologian, Adolph Harnack. He says that in order to understand Jesus it is far better to study the best parts of the old rabbinic and of modern liberal Jewish literature than some of the church fathers and orthodox Christian theologians. He adds that liberal Jewish theologians are right when they claim that the best elements of Christianity are found in the religious literature of the Jews. One is reminded of Harnack's plea at the beginning of the war addressed to English theologians, who were among his hearers in Berlin, for mutual better understanding, and it is somewhat encouraging to read in the New York Times (Oct. 18) that fifty-seven professors of Oxford addressed a letter to their colleagues in Germany and Austria equally appealing to bury the misunderstandings of the past. Let us hope that we shall live to see a better world.

From Pillar to Post.

Earl Curzon, the British foreign secretary was approached by the committee of British Jews to act on the persecution of the Jews in Poland. He politely replied that this was for the League of Nations to act. The League being promptly approached again replied that it had no machinery to deal with such cases. Earl Curzon made up for his diplomatic delicacy by a cable sent to the British representative in Teheran directing him to take the necessary steps to stop the persecution of the Jews in Persia. There can be no doubt that the Persian Jews need such protection, but kindness like charity, ought to begin nearer home. Another report says that the British government asked Sir Stuart Samuel again to go on a second mission to Poland and that he declined. This is to be regretted in the interest of Mr. Ford who, as he did in the Dearborn Independent of October 30, would find in another report a confirmation of his view that the whole story of persecution is a ruse of the international secret organization of the Jews for denouncing Poland in order to conquer all adjacent countries of the universe. The anti-Semitic movement in England, while not as bad as that of Germany, seems to be making steady progress. The Morning Post, inconvenienced by the stand taken by the labor organ, the Daily Herald, claims that this paper is in the hands of foreign Jews. In another issue the same paper makes the assertion that the Jews are back of the miners' strike. One is rather glad to hear such a statement which defeats itself in the eyes of every rational person. The Jews certainly are only consumers of coal and what they can win individually or collectively by the difficulties created if the strike should indeed paralyze coal production is beyond understanding. Another anti-Semitic journal, The Spectator, comes out with a suggestion which should be welcome to every Jew. It demands an investigation into the plan of the Jews to control the world. The Spectator will have the best opportunity of judging the wonderful machinery for the Jewish world control when it compares the antagonistic attitude of the two leading Jewish journals in England, The Chronicle and The Guardian.

Zionism.

The supposed secret council of Jews working with a well-oiled machinery for achieving the dream of Jewish world dominion is also somewhat sadly illustrated by the latest development in the Zionist camp. The executive committee of the Zionist organization of America, at its meeting held September 29 and 30, passed resolutions which affirmed its belief in the integrity of the international movement, but at the same time provided for a committee which shall study the whole question of the national fund and do constructive work for Palestine. The London Jewish Chronicle (Oct. 15) is very much provoked at the stand taken by the American branch of the movement which it considers disloyalty to the central organization. A similar dissatisfaction is heard from various sources in Palestine. Dr. A. Mibashan, writing in the "Isr. Wochenblatt" of Zurich, feels that the Americans have always been unduly pampered and glorified but that they are not loyal Zionists, being limited to their ideas to business and having no conception of the spiritual aspects of Zionism. The socialist branch of the movement which seceded from the main body and held its own convention developed a split in its own ranks between socialists and radical socialists. Max Nordau, having been asked by Dr. Melamed of Chicago for an opinion, writes a reply which lacks his usual clearness at least in the Yiddish translation in which his letter has been published. He lauds the British government and says it is for the Jews now to show that they are in earnest when they desire a national home. The British government through Mr. Chamberlain stated in the House of Commons, October 21, that the mandate for Palestine would be taken up by the League of Nations. Captain Jabotinsky openly declares that the present situation is unsatisfactory as long as the mandate is not published. The real progress in the movement is the issue under British guarantee of five million pounds in bonds for Palestine improvement, the building of the railroad destroyed by the war between Jaffa and Lud, and the proposed improvement of the Jaffa harbor. The unpleasant feature is the continued hostility of the Arab population which expresses itself in small matters as occasional attacks on Jewish pilgrims but is portentous in view of past troubles.

Difficulties in Relief Work; Ukrainie

Miscellaneous.

We have now a new celebrity of Jewish blood in Alexander Millerand, the President of the French republic, whose mother, Melanie Cahen, is a Jewess. The report found in the Jewish Chronicle seems reliable. France had a number of similar celebrities as the poet Catulle Mendes and probably also Alexander Dumas, the younger. From all appearances the President of France is not influenced by his Jewish blood in his political activity, for at one time he was editor of the anti-Semitic "Lanterne." In addition there are a number of later developments in France which seem to indicate a revival of the anti-Semitic movement. The "Matin," is showing some of the irritation prevailing in France, although somewhat suppressed, against England. This irritation is due to the mandates in the Orient in which France considers herself deprived of her just share in the spoils. Matin presents the usual argument that all the trouble is due to the Jewish advisers of Mr. Lloyd-George. The anti-Semitic sentiment expresses itself in Paris as in Vienna, Munich and Berlin, in animosity against Polish refugees. Only the socialist press protests against the inhumanity, one of the spokesmen being Jean Lang, the grandson of Karl Marx, which will again prove the indestructible sentiment of Jewish world dominion.

The New York Board of Education had a debate of Jewish interest due to protests against the action of the Board which excused Jewish teachers on the high holy days. The statement of Mr. Samuel Stern, a member of the Board, that on these days one-third of the pupils stay away from school and therefore the teaching staff is not fully employed, is

(Continued on page 16.)

Proposed Jewish Representation in the League of Nations Unauthorized

By Max J. Kohler

LAST August the New York Times and other papers published a cablegram, referring to an alleged resolution adopted by the "Committee of Jewish Organization" in Paris (which had been formed to secure equal civil and religious rights for Jews in the countries of their residence through the Peace Conference), in favor of representation of Jews as such in the League of Nations. It has since been ascertained that this cablegram was erroneous, and that the resolution was in favor of representations being made to the League of Nations Council on behalf of the persecuted Jews of Eastern Europe (pursuant to important express provisions in the Polish and other treaties) and did not seek representation of Jews as such in the League at all. However, as so often happens the belated correction was never published in the press, as press associations do not like to concede that they ever err. Meantime, however, interesting letters on the subject of the cablegram, promptly appeared in the New York Times in its issues of August 26, and 30, respectively, written by Rabbi Landman of the "American Hebrew" and Bernard C. Richards, Secretary of the American Jewish Congress Committee, Rabbi Landman ably denounced the alleged nationalistic demand for Jewish representation and its folly, and pointed out that other religious bodies had no representation as such in the League, and that it was merely a league of sovereign states, so that Jews were not entitled to representation as such, but were adequately represented by the delegates of the various countries of which they are citizens. Incidentally, he pointed out that the Paris Committee in question really did not contain any authorized representatives of American Jewery at all (and that American Jewry had not favored such representation), because (even if the American Jewish Congress Committee ever had a right to speak for American Jewry as a whole, which he denied), its authority did not continue after it had been legally dissoulved, and that the rump assembly that continued is not representative, the members having been elected to serve merely till report was rendered on the peace treaties negotiated, and its moral influence as representing American Jewry in general practically ceasing, when men like Louis Marshall, Jacob H. Schiff, and Simon Wolf refused to identify themselves with the new rump body. Mr. Richards, in reply, addressed himself chiefly to the question of the alleged representative character of the newly reconstituted "American Jewish Congress Committee", and very wisely refrained from arguing pro and con on the merits of the alleged proposal for representation of the Jews as such in the League.

An interesting sequel—or rather prelude, chronologically considered—has now come to light concerning such alleged plans for representation of Jews as such on the League of Nations. It is furnished by the leading continental Jewish paper the "Allgemeine Zeitung des Judentums", the issues of which are at length reaching this country again. On February 6, 1920 it published some very interesting and important letters received on this very question by a Jewish journalist of Paris named N. Frank and placed by him at the disposal of the Jewish Central Press Agency of Zurich, in answer to inquiries addressed by him to the distinguished French statesman, Leon Bourgeois, President of the French League of Nations Association (and now president of the League of Nations Council itself), and to M. Albert Thomas, formerly a member of the French Cabinet and leader of the socialists of France. Bourgeois evidently preferred not to answer the inquiry personally, and referred it to the Secretary of the French Association, M. Prudhommeaux, hence only the latter's answer undoubtedly was approved by his chief, whose cooperation was probably the most important influence next to Pres. Wilson's in the adoption of the League of Nations Covenant. M. Thomas answered himself. These interesting letters read as follows, in translated (or rather retranslated) form, for they do not appear to have been published in any other Jewish paper in Europe or the United States so far, for some unfathomable reason.

(Answer of M. Prudhommeaux, Secretary of the "Association Francais pour la Societe des Nations".)

Your letter of December 10 addressed the question to the President of our association, Mr. Leon Bourgeois: Are the Jews juridically entitled to representation in the League of Nations? As phrased, it does not seem to me to be possible to answer your inquiry. The League of Nations will consist of such nations as are recognized as such, as per the article of the Covenant of April 28, 1919, "by at least two-thirds" of the Powers that are already members of the League, and offer actual guarantees that their purpose to meet their international obligations is bona fide. So far the Jews constitute no nation. They are divided up among a certain mumber of nations that recognize them as their subjects, with more or less comprehensive rights, and in consequence they endure, as far as the League of Nations is concerned, the fate of the particular countries, to which they belong. Poland, for example, has joined the League of Nations; her Jews, constituting part of the Polish nation, accordingly belong to the Lague of Nations. As concerns the Polish Jews who, for example, emigrated to the United States, they also will belong to the League of Nations, in as far as they are naturalized citizens of the United States, since the United States belongs (will belong) to the League. That is the rational solution, and the question that engages your attention will have to await its answer, according to my views, till the arrival of that problematical day when Zionism shall have succeeded in establishing, in Palestine or elsewhere, an autonomous Jewish state, recognized by the other states as such. (Signed) Prudhommeaux.

(Letter of M. Albert Thomas.)

You are familiar with my frequently publicly expressed views in favor of the Jewish people. You are directing to me today a rather strange question: Are the Jews juridically entitled to representation in the League of Nations? I think I can answer that juridically. I do not think so. The text of the League of Nations Covenant itself forbids entrance thereto of such nationalities as are not constituted in the frame (repute??) of a modern state. If in Palestine, not merely a Jewish colony, but an actual Palestinian state were established, then the Jews would have a right to secure a place in the assembly of the League of Nations. On any other assumption, this would not be possible. I will add that every other association which is working in the various lands for the League of Nations joins in the unanimous view that for the present at least, all nationalities that are not constituted as states, including even large social groups like the legally organized religions, should be left out. And I believe that they are right. (Signed) Albert Thomas.

The distinguished statesmen whose letters are hereinbefore set forth might even have gone one step further, and pointed out that the Peace Conference itself, speaking authoritatively through its Chairman, M. Clemenceau, had in effect unanimously answered this very question in the negative in the monumental letter of June 24, 1919, accompanying the Polish treaty, addressed by it to M. Paderewski. In dealing with some unpublished "suggestions" made to it by Poland against an earlier draft of this very treaty, in a memorandum dated June 16, and which evidently protested against any alleged effort to recognize Polish Jews as a separate political nationality, M. Clemenceau correctly distinguished sharply between international "guarantees of religious and cultural minority rights for the Jews of Poland"—which were wisely granted, in fact—and recognition of any Jewish political national rights", saying: "In view of the historical development of the Jewish question, and the great animosity aroused by it, special protection is necessary for the Jews in Poland. These clauses have been limited to the minimum which seems necessary under the circumstances of the present day, viz., the maintenance of Jewish schools and the protection of the Jews in the religious observance of their Sabbath. It is believed that these stipulations will not create any obstacle to the political unity of Poland. They do not constitute any recognition of the Jews as a separate political community within the Polish State." Rabbi Landman was quite right in immediately vehemently repudiating the notion that American Jews want any one to represent them in the League of Nations—a league of politically independent states—other than the official representatives of our own beloved country. They are devoted and patriotic citizens of the United States of America, and the claim of an "international Jewish political union" is a figment of the diseased imagination of a Henry Ford and his minions, and of their prototype, the base anti-Semitic forger of vile, fabricated "protocols"! Those who may work and pray for a Palestinian Jewish state, some time to have a seat in the League—however unwise or visionary their dreams may be—do not claim that such hypothetical Palestinian representatives would be the political representatives of the Jews of the United States or western Europe. Nor did certain representatives of the Jews in Eastern Europe who have for decades enjoyed, or rather suffered under, a certain benighted form of Jewish communal autonomy, foisted upon them by intolerant governments, and who would have liked to continue the same under a new more high-sounding name, really seek political rights for an international Jewry, located all over the world, despite the inaccurate misnomer, "national Jewish rights" instead of "Jewish cultural rights"!

But such requests for national minority rights for Jews in certain East-European countries, whatever value they may have had as "historical documents", were, fortunately, chiefly at the instance of the true representatives of American Jewry, stowed away in "old curiosity shops", when the time for action had arrived!

WAR RECORD OF JEWS.

There is reason for every American Jew to be proud of the record made during the war by the Jews of America who were in the service. Some of the figures compiled tell of this service more eloquently than words could. One begins to take notice when informed that in actual numbers the Jews of America contributed between 200,000 and 255,000 men to the army, navy and marine corps. Another eyeopener is found in the fact that, on the basis of population, they exceeded their quota by at least one-third. Another and even more significant fact stands out prominently. There were nearly 40,000 Jewish volunteers in the service, the volunteers being about twenty per cent of the Jewish contingent.

In the matter of honors for valor in action they have a magnificent record. With the list still incomplete, the office of Jewish war records has listed about 800 citations for valor, 501 of which were conferred by the American command, 223 by the French, twenty-five by the British and seventy-five by various other allied commands.

Nor were the Jews confined to the ranks in the service, there being nearly 10,000 commissioned officers among them. In the army there were more than sixty colonels and lieutenant colonels, 350 majors, 1,400 captains and more than 7,000 lieutenants. In the navy there were more than 500 commissioned officers, the highest rank being that of rear admiral.

When sacrifices were being made, the Jews did not hold back. Their total casualties were around 17,000, including 3,500 who made the supreme sacrifice.

Not only should every Jew but every other American citizen be proud of the record made by American Jews on the battlefields of Europe.—[Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, October 20, 1920.

HUNGARY ADOPTS MEASURES RESTRICTING EDUCATION OF JEWS.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service).—The last session of the Hungarian parliament adopted by 57 against 7 measures which will restrict Jews from entering all higher educational institutions excepting in very small numbers. The measure is the result of the efforts of the anti-Semites who were led by Minister of Education Haller. Those measures are chiefly based on Paragraph Three, such recognizes Jews as a special nationality. It was the contention of the sponsors of the restrictions that all Jews will now become Zionists, but as a matter of fact, Zionism is legally forbidden in Hungary.

PALESTINE IMMIGRATION REGULATIONS.

The following is the official text of the immigration ordinance issued on September 3, by Sir Herbert L. Samuel British High Commissioner of Palestine

The Immigration Ordinance has been drafted to give effect to the principles of the immigration policy which was outlined by the High Commissioner before the assemblies at Jerusalem and Haifa. Entry into the country is to be strictly controlled both at the ports and the land frontiers as the conditions and needs of the country may require. A Director of Immigration has been appointed who will have under him immigration officers at the chief places of entry. No person, with the exception of certain official classes, will be able to enter Palestine unless he is in possession of a passport or similar permit which has been vised by a British Consul at the place of departure. Besides having a passport, the person entering will have to show that he has, or is in a position to obtain the means of supporting himself and any dependents entering with him.

He will also be subject to medical inspection in order to ensure that unfit persons are not admitted; and it will be a ground for exclusion if he is suffering from a disease specified by the medical authorities, as rendering him undesirable, or if he is found to be mentally deficient. Arrangements will be made to examine all persons at the port or frontier, and in any doubtful case they may be detained. If leave to enter is finally refused, an immigrant may be returned to the country from which he started by the order of the Director of Immigration.

Any person allowed to enter who has come to reside in Palestine will have to register at the police office of the district in which he will reside full particulars concerning his nationality, family, stay in the country, etc. The registration must be made within fifteen days of the arrival in the country; and failure to register in due time is an offence under the Ordinance which makes the person liable to deportation as well as other penalties. Persons who are certified by the consular "vise" to enter as travellers or in transit to another country—e. g., to Damascus—are exempted from the obligation to register, provided that their stay in Palestine will not exceed three months. If they overstay that period they must register and obtain from the Director of Immigration a permit to remain in the country.

The High Commissioner has power to make an order for the deportation of any person within five years of his entry into the country who has not within that time become a citizen of Palestine, if he has been sentenced to imprisonment exceeding one month for a contravention of the Immigration Ordinance, or for any other offence, or if it is in the public interest that he should leave the country.

Power is given to the High Commissioner to exempt any individual or any class of persons, either wholly or in part, from the provisions of this ordinance. Diplomatic persons and consuls and members of the British Military, Naval, and Air Forces, or of the Palestine Civil Service entering the country on duty, and any seaman landing in Palestine in the course of a voyage are exempted. And special arrangements may be made for parties of pilgrims. The requirements, other than the possession of a passport, do not apply to the persons who have been permanently resident in Palestine since the British Occupation and are returning to the country after leaving it for business or pleasure, or to persons who were permanently settled here within a year before the outbreak of war.

THE AMERICAN JEWISH COMMITTEE.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee was held at the Hotel Astor, Broadway and 44th Street, in the city of New York, on Sunday. November 14, 1920.

The Executive Committee presented a report of its activities during the past year, and matters of vital interest to the Jews of America were presented for discussion.

DANISH JEW ON THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Copenhagen (J. C. B. Service).—The Danish government has appointed George Kahn as one of its permanent representatives on the League of Nations.

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

October 20, 1920.

The community here is at present in the unique position of being without a spiritual head. We have not lost him, but for the moment, and for some time to come, he will not be available; for he has been sent abroad to visit important Jewish centres in the British Empire. Never before in the recollection of living people has any Chief Rabbi undertaken so enterprising a journey; and never before has he been away from his duties for so long a time. In all probability he will not return to London until August, 1921, and the community here is united in the hope that his mission may be eminently successful.

What is that mission? The Chief Rabbi is undertaking this somewhat fatiguing and long journey in order to stir up interest among Jews in outlying parts of the British Empire in the War Memorial. Those who are moving to carrying out the memorial successfully have, one is glad to say, a large vision. They have dreams of cementing more closely the Jewries of the whole Empire in order to fill them with keener, more enthusiastic life than has been the case hitherto. Seeing that immigration into this country is in the future likely to be considerably reduced, it will be necessary for the community as it exists today so to organize itself as to become spiritually self-sufficing. Quite clearly the main demand will be for religious education in its broadest conception. If our children can obtain the maximum acquaintance with Judaism, if our ministers can receive the best training the world can offer at home, it follows that religiously the community will have hope of seeing healthy conditions not only in England but throughout the Jewries of the British Empire.

If all this is to be achieved it is necessary to provide the means, and, as we have already stated here before, one million pounds is to be collected. The communities at home have done, and are still doing what they can, gradually to raise the whole of this sum, but it is desired, and it was the intention from the very first, that the colonial Jeweries should have an opportunity of contributing, too. It is to explain the inwardness of the War Memorial scheme to these colonial Jews that the Chief Rabbi has undertaken the journey, and in his task he will have the assistance of Mr. Albert Woolf, the Senior Vice President of the United Synagogue, and a man who has done yeoman service in the cause of Anglo-Jewry. Mr. Woolf has passed his sixty-fifth year, and an enterprise of this sort is no mean undertaking. Nevertheless, so much does he love the cause for which he has worked during the greater part of his life, that he does not grudge the inconvenience and discomforts of twelve months' travel and the absence from his family which the journey must entail, if only he can help to bring this million pounds one step nearer realization.

Before these two emissaries left the country a communal dinner was given to them at which everybody who was anybody was present. Never before had there been so immense a gathering of Anglo-Jewry, for indeed never before had there been so great an occasion. Mr. Lionel de Rothchild presided over a notable gathering, which included the official heads of all the colonial governments in London, as well as Lord Milner, who represented the Cabinet, and the Lord Chief Justice, who came in his double capacity on this occasion, of highest representative of the law and as a distinguished member of the community. All united in wishing godspeed to the two eminent travelers, and a select few were privileged to see them off at the station when they left for the steamer which was to take them in the first instance to South Africa. From South Africa they will proceed to Australia and New Zealand, and eventually will cross the Pacific to the coast of America. After traversing the whole extent of Canada from West to East the Chief Rabbi expects to visit his relatives in New York, so that this great journey is not without interest to American readers. No doubt a fitting welcome will be his at the hands of New York Jewry when he arrives there.

Meanwhile the War Memorial continues to appeal to Jews here, and the managers of the fund are hopeful that, despite the somewhat adverse present economic position in the country, all the money they are asking for will eventually be obtained. In one respect at least they are able to make a strong appeal, to wit, in the matter of training ministers. This is one of the crying needs of the time in this country, and in the East End of London more especially, there is need for many more resident Jewish ministers. We have in that quarter a large population which requires all the assistance and sympathy it can obtain; yet there are in reality two, or at most three, effective ministers who have to grapple with the local problems. The result is that "some of the sheep go unfed," or, what is worse, go to the missionaries, who stand to gain by the community's lethargy. And yet it is not all lethargy; it is a question of supply. The ministry does not seem to attract many students, and those who do come are not all of the right quality. There is need here for a radical change, a change which will be made possible only by large supplies of money, and this the War Memorial proposes to do as one of its aims.

The Chief Rabbi's dinner brings to mind another which was held on the following evening by a society which many people thought was now moribund, but which seems to have the capacity of coming to life from time to time. We refer to the Maccabaeans, a somewhat loose organization composed for the most part of Jewish professional men. The main object of this society nowadays is to fete distinguished men who, from the Jewish point of view, need to be honoured or thanked. The last dinner of the Maccabaeans was held in honour of two distinguished coreligionists who are about to take up important positions overseas—Sir Matthew Nathan, as Governor of Queensland, and Mr. Phillip Hartog, as Vice Chancellor of the University of Dacca, in India. Needless to say, there were the usual complimentary toasts, and the praises that were sung of both these men were the expression of genuine feeling deeply rooted. Sir Matthew Nathan, in reply to the toast to his health, declared, among other things, that he believed in assimilation. He made it clear, however, that he did not mean assimilation in religion or in race, but complete assimilation so far as modern life was concerned. If we understand him aright he meant to convey that his ideal was that Jews, wherever they lived, should identify themselves whole-heartedly with the life of their country, still remaining Jews by religion and by race. This is a point of view which should not be overlooked in these days of intense nationalism, and we draw attention to it because there is at present in these islands a great Jew from abroad who strongly inclines to this opinion. We refer to Professor Ashkenazy, who has been sent to London to represent Poland on the League of Nations. Professor Ashkenazy likewise believes in the efficacy of complete assimilation. He would like to see the Jews of Poland socially and politically exactly like the Poles themselves. He regards Jewish nationalism as a mistake.

It must be confessed that when this particular view is tested and applied to a country like Poland, it bristles with difficulties. For generations Polish Jews have formed a wheel within a wheel, have lived their own life completely, with their own language, and even their own fashion in clothes. It was through no fault of theirs that they were so moulded. As we know, historical forces have made them what they are. When an old tree, deeply rooted, has grown up crooked, it is somewhat futile to cry that it ought to be made straight. It sounds almost as though facts were not being looked at fairly and squarely. For Poland, therefore, Professor Ashkenazy's plea is a little difficult to comprehend, but perhaps he will explain his ideas more in detail in due course. Applied to England or, indeed, to Western Europe generally, there seems to be no difficulty whatever in appreciating the view-point. The great mass of English Jews are agreed that politically they are British in sentiment, as British as any other section of citizens, who proudly declare: Civis Britanicus sum.

If any testimony were required for this attitude of mind, it would be found in the memorial tablets which were unveiled last month at many of the synagogues in London. Each of them told the same tale, a tale of heroism, devotion, and self-sacrifice in the cause of their native land. One cannot suppress the reflection that there must be memorial tablets of the same kind in a great many synagogues in Europe and America, and that they all bear witness to the warm patriotism of the Jewish citizens of their respective countries. In the case of the London memorials, the service in each synagogue was very simple but very moving; the relatives of the fallen and their friends were present at the ceremony, and it must be admitted that the words which were spoken at each of the gatherings, either by the officiating minister or by the distinguished visitor who had been invited to unveil the memorials, came from the heart and expressed with a moving simplicity the feelings that were uppermost in the hearts and minds, not only of those who were present at the gatherings, but of all Jews who think for one moment on the meaning of these congregational memorial tablets. It is of interest to add that at the Central Synagogue a candelabra has been provided, the whole of which will be lit each year on the Day of Atonement, when the memorial service for the dead is recited, and also, on the anniversary of the day on which each man fell, a "candle of memory" will be kindled and a service held.

It is cheering to relate that in dwelling on the memorial to our own children we have not forgotten the children of others. At the present time we have in our midst an increasing number of Viennese children which also contains a fair percentage of Jewish little ones. The committee which has in hand the arduous task of finding homes for these little visitors is busily occupied week in, week out, to make them as comfortable as possible. Only one criticism has been heard, and that is that while Jews in the East and the North and the Northwest of London have responded admirably to the appeal of the committee for homes, the Jews in the West End have not done all they might to assist the committee to place the Jewish children. Perhaps there are reasons for this, but the fact remains. One can only hope that as the Jewish residents of Bayswater and Kensington wake up to the importance of this work they will set aside all other considerations but those of helping suffering children.

It is asserted in some quarters that the Zionist position is not cheerful. Whether it is that the slump in trade all over Europe is of necessity choking up the channels along which large subscriptions were expected to flow, or whether it is that there is more or less dissatisfaction with the achievements of the movement, so much is certain, that the leaders are passing through an anxious time, and one cannot help feeling that they deserve all the moral support they can obtain. Theirs is a great responsibility. After years of waiting and working they have literally touched the Promised Land, and it is inconceivable that in the long run they should be left in the lurch. The attitude of American Zionists is causing great anxiety among Zionists in this country, and people hope that Dr. Weizman, when he goes to America, as he expects to soon, will bring back with him when he returns a message of hope and cooperation. As for Palestine itself, Jews and non-Jews alike are watching the development of the country with intense interest. One hears of a constant stream of well-to-do visitors proceeding thither to see for themselves what are the actual conditions, and what possibilities there are for helping forward the economic life of the country. One even hears of ships under the Jewish flag which are to sail from British ports direct to Palestine. If this report should be well-founded, it is certain that Jews the world over will regard it with very great satisfaction. The general public in this country has had an opportunity of being informed on the Zionist position by a very capable article in one of the monthlies from the pen of Mr. Ormsby Gore, a good friend of the movement, and one of the few non-Jews who thoroughly understand the question of Palestine and Zionism in all its bearings.

But if this article offers a cheering prospect, some others which have appeared of late in this country make one wonder at the prejudice of their writers. Of The Morning Post it is useless to speak, and it is best not to mention that journal at all. But The Spectator is apparently determined to take up a similar view in regard to the Jews—a view which seems so strange in the pages of that weekly. Many people have expressed the belief that, from their knowledge of Mr. Strachey, the owner and editor of The Spectator, he would be quite unable to express such fanatic and distorted views about Jews, and they are therefore driven to the conclusion that this paper must have changed hands, and that the new proprietors belong to that class, small but loud, of those who are engaging in the devilish practice of Jew-baiting. We do not know how much truth there is in this suggestion, but on the face of it, it may not be without foundation. We have also had circulated during the last month two books of an extreme anti-Semitic character, both of them containing the gist of newspaper articles. The one is a reprint of the articles which appeared in The Morning Post and which attempted to prove that Jews were at the bottom of all revolutions; and the other is a reprint of some articles which appeared in The Times from the pen of Mr. Wilton, who by hook or by crook was determined to show that the Jews planned and executed the murder of the Czar. The first book is clearly a farrago of wild prejudices without the least foundation. The revolutions that are chronicled in the world's history have been accounted for quite satisfactorily without any reference to Jews. The curious thing is that Mr. Gwynne, the editor of The Morning Post, who has written a special introduction to the volume, protests that he is no anti-Semite. Similarly, in the case of Mr. Wilton, all unbiased critics who have examined his evidence are agreed that he has not established his case by any manner of means. The pity of it is that these products of shallow, reactionary and evil minds will be read by people who cannot discriminate between what is true and what is false. But so much is certain: the case of both these books rests on a lie, and if the Englishman hates one thing more than another it is untruth.

BROTHER SIMON WOLF ADDRESSES WORLD BROTHERHOOD CONGRESS.

Mr. Simon Wolf of Washington addressed the World Brotherhood Congress at its session on October 12, 1920, held in Washington. He urged the organization to go on record as protesting against "the outrages and inhumanities being practised against the Jews". Mr. Wolf recited various crimes committed against Jewry in eastern Europe. He said it was most fitting that the Brotherhood should do everything in its power to lighten the burden of the greatly oppressed people.

The Congress adopted the following resolution: "The Congress has welcomed to the platform Mr. Wolf and has taken his brotherly word to heart. In return they assure him and his coreligionists that in the opinion of this Congress, the toleration of persecution, whether social or political, based on religious difference is incompatible with Brotherhood or the essential spirit of Christ".

DEPUTY RABBI PERLMUTTER REGISTERED HIMSELF AS A POLE.

London (J. C. B. Service).—We are informed by our Warsaw correspondent that it has now become known that during the last Census registration Deputy Rabbi Pearlmutter gave his nationality as Polish. The News has created considerable excitement in the Jewish Community.

The Jewish Deputies have taken up with the War Department the case of the Jewish officer Jacob Stein. Stein was serving with the Polish Forces which he joined as a volunteer in November, 1918. He was summarily dismissed from the Army in July, 1920, because he declared that he was a Jew. Soon afterwards he was officially classified in the Army Gazette as a foreigner. The Deputies demanded that Stein should be given back his rank, that those guilty for his dismissal should be punished and that similar breaches of the Versailles Treaty should not recur.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1920
Chanukah, first day	December 6
New Moon	December 12
Chanukah, last day	December 13
Fast of Tebet	December 21
	1921
New Moon	January 10
New Moon	February 9
New Moon	March 11
Fast of Esther	March 23
Purim	March 24
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

REPUTABLE PUBLISHERS.

Publishing is of course a business. So is printing and the manufacture of paper and of all the other things that go into book making. But publishing means more than printing and binding. On leaving the press and the bindery, a book requires an efficient agency to bring it before the public. A book really becomes a book only when it has been taken in hand by a publisher. Otherwise it is merely printed matter, of the kind turned out by the government printing office, consisting of reports of committees, documents, and the like. A book is subject to the favorable or unfavorable judgment of the reading public. It is reviewed by critics in the literary magazines (or in supplements to the Sunday paper). The publisher sees to it that review copies are sent out. He advertises freely. He places the book on the market. Nowadays publishers do not always put their hands into their own pockets to defray the expenses of publication. Authors of lesser renown, of budding fame, untried and unheralded, frequently beguile a publisher to undertake the issuance of their work, and they are willing to put their own money into the venture. The publisher reserves for himself a share in the profits in payment for his imprint on the title page. When the book makes good, when the novel, let us say, proves a good seller, the author comes in for a part of the profits. Naturally the publisher will not risk lending his imprint to a book of doubtful commercial value. He will be wary of enterprises which may turn out failures or prejudicial to his reputation. The reputable publisher will not sponsor a publication which may bring him into collision with the law or jeopardize his standing with the public. The law does not reach far enough. But the moral sense of reading mankind will not condone a breach of etiquette though it be unpunishable by law. But it seems that lately publishers known for their good judgment have seen fit to launch questionable publications apparently solely for the profit they could get out of them. Publishing therefore has become a mere money-making trade, just a trade in conveying anything to the public that anybody may choose to print off and to disseminate broadcast. It will not do for the publishing firm to seek refuge behind a notice that it disclaims responsibility for the views expressed in the publication. As well may he who passes a counterfeit bill exculpate himself on the ground that he received it from some one else and that he does not guarantee its face value. The thing mendacious meanwhile circulates, it reaches the unsophisticated and unsuspecting, it accomplishes its nefarious object only too well. And why, pray, do not the slanderers of the Jewish people handle the products of their poisonous pen themselves? Why do they avail themselves of the services of well-established publishing firms? Apparently they value the imprint because it lends prestige to their concoctions, because the impression is designedly created that there must be substance to their lucubrations or else no reputable house would be a party to their dissemination. Hence, disclaimers to the contrary, publishers who take a hand in spreading what their better conscience tells them is at odds with truth, cannot be absolved from abetting the doings of a group of persons who with intent to injure have set out to inoculate the American people with the virus of Jew-hatred and Jew-baiting. They have chosen to do an unfriendly act, to say the least, so far as the hapless and maligned Jew is concerned; they have done a worse service to their own reputation which stands besmirched.

TWO YEARS SINCE THE ARMISTICE.

The din is still, as it were, ringing in our ears, the din of the multitudes in the streets hurrahing and singing themselves hoarse, first at what proved to be the premature announcement of the signing of the armistice, then with somewhat spent force a few days later when the authenticated message came through. That was two years ago. We then believed that the terrible conflict in which this country at last came to take part was ended for good, and now the era of peace would set in. In due sequel the peace compact was signed by all the former belligerents. Alas, the pacification of the world is still largely unaccomplished. The causes for the delay are many and intricate. The imperialism of certain nations, the unrepentant attitude of the vanquished, the pretentious ambitions of newly constituted states, the upheaval in Russia, the ascendancy of labor toying with the unspeakable Muscovite experiment, the indecision of statesmen, the reaction which latterly has set in this and in that corner, all are contributing causes. Everywhere we may see the smouldering ashes of the great conflagration which make us wary of step. It was not to be expected that so great a calamity as the World War would so easily subside or be effaced. The scars are everywhere in evidence. Nearer home we are face to face with unstable conditions. Fortunes have been made and just as quickly lost. Prices of commodities have begun to fall, though food is still high and men of moderate incomes find it difficult to make both ends meet. And at a distance hunger stalks. The cry of starved children reaches us. We have nobly responded to the call of distress from abroad, but our millions of relief are but a mite.

But worst of all is the fate of the Jew. While the war lasted, we had grown to believe that racial and religious antipathies were no more. Shoulder to shoulder we fought on many a battle field. We had the satisfaction to see our heroic sons decorated for valor in action. We mourned many losses. But we bore them patriotically with our neighbors. In the trenches there was no question of Jew or Christian. Ministers of our faith vied with other clergymen in mitigating the evils of warfare and in building up the morale of the fighting force. How we glorified in the action of that French rabbi who held a crucifix to a dying Catholic! But all these things are forgotten now. We do not exaggerate when we say that the Jewish people in European countries are worse off today than they had been before the war. Where our brethren are most thickly settled, armies are still marching and retreating. No matter who wins out, the Jew suffers. He witnesses a succession of governments and of dominant races. The Jew is secure with none of them. In certain lands there is one continuous pogrom, in others it is periodic but just as deadly. The eternal wanderer must perforce remove the stakes of age-long habitations. But the old question, "Whither?" staggers him at every frontier (and there are so many of them nowadays). Everywhere there is an ominous recrudescence of hatred. A concerted movement is on foot to do us injury. Old slanders are revived, dressed up in new garbs.

Yet, we despair not. As sure as the dawn of the better day is for all suffering mankind, the hour of relief for harassed Jewry will not fail of realization. Our conscience is clear. Our cause is righteous. Wars between nations must cease. Internecine warfare must just as well come to an end. The real and abiding armistice is still for the future, for the nations great and small, for all the elements of one and the same nation. It will at last mean peace among men, across national frontiers, but also within, between class and class and group and group. There is room for all. For the sake of the world, nations must compose their differences peacefully. For the sake of country, men must learn to understand each other and bury their disagreements in the common pursuit of the welfare of the land which they all love with equal ardor.

SIMON WOLF.

On October 28, Honorable Simon Wolf of Washington, Past President of the Order, completed his 84th year. Brother Wolf has deserved well of American Jewry for he devoted his life activities to serve Jewry and his country.

On behalf of the Order and its entire membership, the B'nai B'rith News congratulates Brother Wolf and expresses the hope and prayer that he may be granted the "Meoh Shonim" in the enjoyment of all his faculties in health, prosperity and happiness.

DR. MORITZ HAMMERSCHLAG.

Dr. Moritz Hammerschlag, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 10, Czecho-Slovakia, and member of the Executive Committee of the Order, passed away after a short illness at the age of 73.

District Grand Lodge, No. 10, loses in him one of its founders, its first and present President. Dr. Hammerschlag was also a founder of Bohemia Lodge, of Prague.

During his activities of twenty-seven years in the various offices of trust and responsibility, Dr. Hammerschlag has earned the appreciation and recognition of the Order for services rendered. His devotion to the ideals of the Order was such as to be emulated by others. To his ability as organizer and administrator, the district and the Prague lodges owe their solid foundation and for the propagation of the Order's ideals and the strengthening and maintenance of discipline and order within the district he rendered great and lasting services.

He devoted much of his ability and untiring willingness to work and serve in circles outside of the Order in a manner which brought him universal recognition and esteem.

In Brother-Dr. Hammerschlag, we have lost a leader and one of our best and most esteemed brothers.

His exemplary conduct, his sterling character, his readiness to serve mankind, and his devoted activity for the furtherance of the aims of the Order assure him a lasting memory.

BAPTIST CLERGY PROTEST.

On October 25, 1920, the Baptist Ministers' Association held a meeting at which Rev. Dr. Charles Francis McKoy introduced a resolution of protest against the ill treatment of the Jews in Poland and other countries, which resolution is to be forwarded to the State Department at Washington. Some Polish clergyman protested against action on these resolutions stating that the reports about the ill treatment of the people in Poland are false. The meeting postponed acting upon the resolution until the following week so as to enable Dr. McKoy to present evidence supporting his resolution.

DR. MARCUS BRANN.

A cable report brings us the sad news of the death of Dr. Marcus Brann, professor of history at the Rabbinical Seminary in Breslau. Marcus Brann was born in 1849 in Rawicz in the province of Posen, now Poland again, as the son of a rabbi, studied at the Seminary, and after holding various rabbinical and teaching positions was called in 1891 to succeed the illustrious Graetz as professor of history. Brann wrote, in addition to a very good textbook of Jewish history, and also edited the Monatsschrift which for more than sixty years has been one of the most valuable repertory for history and literature of Judaism. Prof. Brann was an active member of the I. O. B. B.

His death is a serious loss to the cause, especially in view of the fact that the venerable institution in Breslau established in 1846 by the bequests of the philanthropist, Jonas Fraenckel, with a capital which then was sufficient, is now, owing to the depreciation of the money, facing a serious crisis.

PRESIDENT-ELECT HARDING SAYS JEWS COMMAND HIS ADMIRATION.

Mr. Warren G. Harding, President-elect, wrote to Judge Gustav Hartman recently, and in his letter had the following to say on the Jewish question:

"It is gratifying that you and your associates recognize the sincerity of my protests against the outbursts, amounting practically to emotional insanity, which are most often responsible for the pogroms, for massacres of innocent victims in many lands, even sometimes in our own. I do not mean to excuse the perpetrators of such crimes when I ascribe them to periods of temporary insanity, because that would be to admit that the civilization of which we boast is a mere veneer. We fail lamentably where we do not preach effectively tolerance as well as justice and security and respect for the rights of others as much as liberty.

"And while I hold these views as to all peoples, irrespective of race or creed or condition, I am especially earnest in my protests against the frequent reversions to barbarity in the treatment of the Jewish citizens of many lands, a people who have commanded always my admiration by their genius, industry, endurance, patience and persistence, the virtue and devotion of their domestic lives, their broad charity and philanthropy and their obedience to the laws under which they live."

THE ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE.

The Anti-Defamation League was organized in 1913 by the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, to present and abate the defamation of the Jew, and ultimately to end all unfair discrimination against any American citizens. Within the short period of its existence, it has practically eliminated the insulting caricatures of the Jew from the stage and from motion pictures, and has effectively combated vicious references to the Jew in the press. New and serious tasks confront the league at this time. Our country is being flooded with anti-Jewish broad-sheets, pamphlets, and books, sent from organized propaganda centers in Europe. The malicious lies that they contain endanger our safety and threaten the peace of our country. The Anti-Defamation League has undertaken to turn the pitiless light of truth upon these black falsehoods and to expose the motives of the men who fan the flames of religious bigotry and racial hatred. The league is fighting the battle of every Jew as well as of all other patriotic and peace-loving Americans. Every Jew is morally obligated to support the league in the fight for justice.

Have you done your duty?

Your contribution will prove to be an investment.

To convince yourself, read the league's exposure of Ford's attacks on the Jews.

Mail checks to the Anti-Defamation League, 1228 Tribune Building, Chicago.

JEWISH NATIONALISTS DEFEATED IN AUSTRIAN ELECTIONS.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service).—The results of the elections in the Austrian parliament have just been made known and it appears that the candidates of the Jewish Nationalists have been defeated. They previously had one seat.

REACTION AND THE JEW.

A wave of anti-Semitism is once more eeping the world. The Poles in their tionalistic frenzy are trying to extermi-te the three million Jews within their undaries; the Pan-Germans in the tering powerlessness of their defeat are rbishing the old weapons of reaction; virulent British pamphlet, "The Jewish ril," has been insinuatingly presented what passes for the mind of Henry rd, his paper, the Dearborn Independent, nich has diluted it in a series of articles; en letters of any anti-Semitic tinge are ginning to appear in our conservative ess; public anti-Jewish meetings have en held in the streets of Brooklyn, and ergymen of the hectic and sensational pe are at their old game of finding an ti-Christ, and are loudly identifying the dless bolshevik with the Jew.

The chief responsibility for the revival this hoary shame among us in America taches to Henry Ford. His name, like s car, reaches the common man who asons that the multimillionaire mechanic nnot be wholly wrong. Yet it is this test exploit that, once and for all, con-ms and stamps the ethical and intellec-al character of the Detroit manufacturer. e pretends to be a pacifist; he fitted out d set sail in a "peace ship." Today he trays the very spirit of peace and flings other torch into an already blazing orld. For beneath every accidental and mporary cause of human discord lurks e most lasting and malignant of all—the ind and bloody hatred of tribe for tribe, ce for race, the denial of that universal d purely human solidarity which is the e ultimate hope of peace and civilization nong men. Whoever stirs up these cient and barbarous hatreds of race or eed or color, whoever sets Gentile ainst Jew, white against black, the ces of the West against those of the East, proaches mankind with the kiss of the trayer and the dagger of the assassin. here can be no compromise, no shadow wavering on this supreme issue. We e imprisoned upon this little earth; the niversal forces are careless of our welfare; rthquakes and storms tumble down r frail shelters and disease gnaws at r perishable bodies. How shall we fight r way out of the darkness if not as rothers? How shall we build a humane vilization if, in the maze of ghastly gments and cruel superstitions, we ersecute and wound and darken each her's souls?

The common source of Mr. Ford's ropaganda, of the pamphlet "The Jewish eril," and of "The Cause of World nrest," published with sinister anonymity y G. P. Putnam's Sons, is an old and bsurd forgery that is sufficiently and, we ope, finally exposed by Mr. Lucien Wolf the London Spectator. At every reat revolution in human affairs since e days of the Protestant Reformation, is fable of a world-wide Jewish con-iracy against the safety of civilization d the vested interests of the age has een an easy weapon in the hands of the actionaries. The Puritan Revolution England was attributed to "Quakers, ee-thinkers, and godless Jews," and umerous French writers from 1797 to 83 sought to father the French Revolu-on itself on Masonic and Jewish con-iracies. The old forgery known as The Protocols of the Learned Elders of ion" was revamped by a Prussian postal erk who was himself discharged from e service for forgery in 1868. But a ussian edition of his work, attributed a "Professor Sergyei Nilus," was used a pogrom weapon during the Russian evolution of 1905 and a French version the latter was published on 1911. It is e work of this entirely mythical Nilus hich forms the immediate basis for "The ewish Peril," the articles in Mr. Ford's aper, and the more recent "The Cause World Unrest."

The motive for the emergence of these d forgeries and slanders at this moment history is clear enough. The industrial evolution of today is attributed to Jewish onspirators precisely as was the Puritan evolution in England, the French Revolu-on, and the Russian Revolution of 1905. he technique of reaction, whether econo-ic or political, has not changed with the ges. Its essence has always been to ivert the attention of the masses from eal to fancied dangers, and to blind them their true interests by playing upon eir superstitious fears and their tribal rejudices. The czars veiled their iniq-ities by staging pogroms; the Polish nperialists seek to stifle the consciousness by typhus, hunger, and needless warfare by setting the people against their Jewish compatriots; international finance having sown the wind and reaped the whirlwind, finds it easy and useful to point to Eisner, Trotzky, and even to Morris Hillquit, not as to thinkers and revolutionaries, but as to members of a conspiracy undertaken by an alien, dangerous, and mysterious folk.—[The Nation.

DEARBORN INDEPENDENT.

The esteemed Dearborn Independent's disclosures of a world-wide Semitic cabal, for the purpose of holding the financial destiny of Christendom in the hollow of an international Shylock's hand, is confirmed by the passing of Jacob H. Schiff, banker and philanthropist, of New York.

His will bestows upon philanthropies, settlements, education, and art $1,350,000, which of course is only to conceal the fell designs against the universe that the balance of the estate will be devoted to under the direction of his son and daughter.

Jacob Schiff's share in the exploitation of the world is not only international but intercollegiate, inter-denominational and inter-racial. New York University, Harvard College, and the black students of Tuskegee Institute are the victims of his great-hearted benevolence.

As a conspirator Schiff seems to have been audacious and inclusive. It is hard to get his viewpoint, unless one credits him with an earnest desire to serve the age in which he lived, quite unmindful of the calumnies which prejudice, envy, and covetousness have heaped upon his aspiring and thrifty race.—[Detroit Times.

MR. FORD AND ANTI-SEMITISM.

After all has been written and said anent the anti-Semitic propaganda emanating from Henry Ford's magazine and other sources there yet remains a bit of mystery as to the real fountain head, and as to the real purposes of the published attacks upon the Jewish people. Many causes have been attributed to Mr. Ford's anti-Semitic outbreaks. Is it because of his ignorance of the history of the Jewish people, of their virtues, and of their true value to the country of their adoption? Is it because of having been misled by some rabid anti-Semitic who has a grudge to settle with the Jews? Is it because Mr. Ford has a feeling of animosity against some Jewish individual? Or is it possible that it is one of his agents of free publicity? These queries yet remain unanswered.

Relative to other anti-Semitic propaganda in America there is no doubt that much of it has had its incipiency from European quarters. This has been proven through literature that has been spread in this country and the origin of which has been directly traced to sources in Germany, Russia and other European Countries.

It appears that the agitation has not attained as yet its full intended scope. The precise motive behind these exhibitions of anti-Semitism is difficult to define until the origin is fixed, and an intense investigation is now being made to that end. There seems, however, that most of the propaganda has a common source. The propaganda from abroad comes anonymously.

For several weeks an inquiry has been in progress, and the Anti-Defamation League of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith has taken up the cudgel on behalf of the Jewish people, and with the fund now being collected to combat these evil influences it will only be a matter of a short time when not only the sources will be uncovered, but a complete stop will be put to the insidious and vicious anti-Semitic campaign in this country.

The people of Israel, wherever dispersed, condemn the utterances of anti-Semitic agitators, and their indignation is aroused when those Amalekites of the twentieth century accuse us of lack of patriotism and of shortcomings in civic virtue. Whoever is familiar with the activity shown by Jews in all lands where a chance was given to them to identify themselves with public affairs and to serve their country in times of peace and war knows what a falsehood that impeachment is. —[Jewish Spectator.

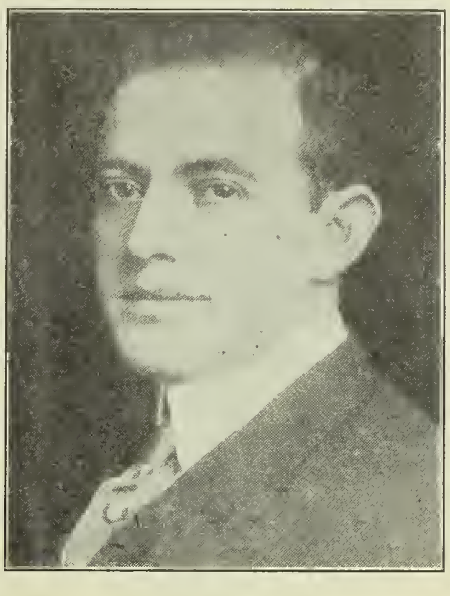
NOTED JEWISH SCIENTIST DIES FROM HUNGER.

Vienna (J. C. B. Service).—Professor Max Margulies, the noted Jewish metrologist, too proud to apply for help, died from hunger. He was sixty-five years old.

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations

With a letter of encouragement from President Wilson to spur their endeavors, one hundred sixty nationally prominent Jews today started a tour of the entire country, to bring the message of regenerated Judaism to all American Jewry. The tourists make up a "flying squadron" of speakers who will officially open the campaign of the Union American Hebrew Congregations for $3,500,000 to carry out a ten-year extension program. President Wilson's letter to the Union, of which J. Walter Freiberg of Cincinnati is Chairman, was made public today and is as follows:

"Your letter of October twenty-second affords me a most welcome opportunity to express my deep interest in the movement which is being pushed forward by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations to set forth the spiritual needs of Israel and to appeal for a stronger and more active Judaism, and also to raise money for a ten-year extension program. I sincerely hope that the efforts the Union is making will be crowned with complete success. (Signed) Woodrow Wilson."



Manny Strauss

Dr. Nathan Krass

The "flying squadron," which is headed by Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, Congressman Julius Kahn, of San Francisco, and Mortimer L. Schiff, of New York, includes leaders in every field of activity—bankers, business men, social workers, philanthropists, rabbis, and well known laymen. Mr. Manny Strauss, chairman of the Advisory Committee of the campaign, with Dr. Nathan Krass, heads the New York delegation. The squadron will address meetings in two hundred of the largest cities of the country, and will explain the Union's plan to bring Jewish education and facilities for worship to farms and ghetto through its extension program and synagogue building loan funds, and to assist further in the development of Judaism through maintaining the work of Hebrew Union College for Rabbis at Cincinnati and creating a rabbis' pension fund. Telegrams and messages which have been received at the New York offices of the Union, 24 East 21st Street, indicate that the tourists will be enthusiastically received in every city. Large mass meetings have been arranged by local committees who have pledged their cooperation to campaign. Felix M. Warburg, of New York, head of many national and local philanthropic movements, was among those who sent messages of encouragement to the speakers. Mr. Warburg said:

"This movement will prove, I am certain, of vital importance to the life of American Jewry. Rabbis and laymen have joined in a movement for the regeneration of Israel. This combination of the two great forces, of clergy and laity in a religious movement, is one of the most significant happenings in modern Jewry. It augurs for the success of the tour, of the campaign, and of the entire movement for a wider observance of and reverence for Judaism in America."

DEPORTATIONS OF ALIEN JEWS IN ENGLAND EXCITES BOARD OF DEPUTIES.

London (J. C. B. Service).—The parliamentary Committee of the Jewish Board of Deputies has established the fact that the conditions under which alien Jews are deported in this country, are highly unsatisfactory. The Committee cites an instance of a Jewish young man named Blum who was forced to leave the country because he failed to notify the Home Secretary that he had changed his place of residence. In another instance a Jew was deported despite the fact that his wife was on the eve of confinement and that there were others who were dependent upon him for their maintenance. All those arriving into the country without the necessary documents are deported even if the court recommends that they be allowed to remain. Very unsatisfactory is also the manner in which deportation cases are handled by the courts. Often aliens are confined for lengthy periods before their cases are taken up or they are released on bail. Considerable excitement prevails among the members of the Board of Deputies because Sabog Montefiore refused to intervene with the authorities despite the urgent request of the Board.

THOUSANDS OF REFUGEES MAKING THEIR WAY TO PALESTINE.

Constantinople (J. C. B. Service).—Thousands of Ukrainian Jews are arriving in this city with the object of reaching Palestine. Many of them are refugees in destitute circumstances and a special committee of leading Russian Jews in this city has been formed in order to render them assistance.

TRANSMIGRATION OF UKRAINIAN JEWS.

London (J. C. B. Service).—In an exclusive interview granted to the Jewish Correspondence Bureau Taku Jonescu the well known political leader of Roumania, declared that while the Roumanian Government is unable to allow Ukrainian Jewish refugees to settle in Bessarabia, the government would facilitate the transmigration of these refugees to America and Palestine if American organizations would undertake such a movement. The Roumanian Minister stated that generally the position of Jews in Roumania has greatly improved. Questioned regarding the persecution of Jews in Transylvania, Jonescu stated that an investigation is being made and that it was his personal belief that the persecutions were chiefly due to the fact that these people wanted to remain Hungarian citizens, non-Jews being also involved. Jonescu emphatically denied that the Jews of Bessarabia were persecuted. The government he said had given its attention to the Bolsheviki in that district, but as far as he knew, there were but few Jews among those connected with the movement. In the course of the interview Jonescu related that he had offered the position of Roumanian Ambassador to the United States to two prominent Jews but both declined the appointment because of pressing personal interests.

GREECE EXPELS JEWS.

Constantinople (J. C. B. Service).—A number of Jewish refugees from Russia who found shelter on the Isle of Lemnos were ordered by the Greece government to be deported to Serbia.

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

III.

IN THE foregoing papers an attempt has been made to show what were the true proportions of the misunderstanding between the founder of Christianity and the contemporary leaders of the Jewish community, lay and spiritual. Had Christianity remained what it was in its inception, or let us say with greater historical accuracy, as it was conceived and taught by the disciples and early converts constituting the Jerusalem church, the initial proportions would never have been overstepped. Whatever the divergences which mark the rise of sects, whatever the animus which initiators of new movements must arouse in their opponents, whatever the bitterness with which it is then met, the secretaries continuing to be and to consider themselves a part of the larger group from which they issued forth remain in some sort of spiritual relation with their very antagonists. The contest is bitter; sharp words are not wanting; but withal the two sides know each other too well to exaggerate their differences great as they may be. But when, as it happened with the Christian sect, it very soon ceased to be a Jewish sect altogether; when it found its strength in attracting pagan converts to the extent that the small Jewish membership was soon submerged by the overwhelming masses form the outside, the differences which obtained at first between Judaism and its offspring were exaggerated and the gulf kept growing wider and wider. As a matter of fact, the center of Christianity had moved away from Jerusalem and the Jews' land; and as the Babylonian center farther East soon overshadowed the Palestinian and at length practically remained the sole center of Jewish learning, even physically Judaism and Christianity became widely separated. The gospels as we have them ascend to an element of tradition which is native. But the authors are themselves not born Jews. They address themselves to those of their own kind. Judaism, Jewish institutions, Jewish beliefs, Jewish hopes are to them something strange, something that requires explanation, translation into their own mode of speech. Translations are always vitiations of the original. The angle of vision is deflected. Thus the burden of the misunderstanding is placed wholly on the shoulders of the Jewish teachers. Moreover, Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, had intervened in the interim. He had never seen the founder in the flesh. What he knew of him came to him by hearsay. He perceived that the strength of the movement lay in its attraction for the outsider. He constructed a picture of the faith in which he had been reared, which is almost a caricature. And this misrepresentation of Judaism was suffered to go into the story of the original cleavage. Paul was a born organizer, a zealous missionary, and a theologian. It is not the first time nor the last in the history of religion that the logic of a theological system obscures the real import of the inward experiences of a religious teacher. Theology is often a strait-jacket for religion. It frequently stifles it, chokes it. Between the founder and Paul there is a gap quite as wide as between the founder and his contemporaries. And perhaps it is even wider.

The early Christians venerated the Hebrew Scriptures without which their own faith was unintelligible. Even Paul did not have his way with the Church when it considered itself as something quite apart from Judaism. The Church could not brook an absolute severance from Judaism out of whose loins it had sprung. It believed itself to be the consummation of Judaism. It considered itself the true Israel, the heir of all the promises of old, from Abraham downward. It brushed aside a school of thought which went beyond even the ideas of Paul. In the philosophic jargon of the day, it discriminated between the God of the Hebrew Scriptures, good enough to create a world, and the God of the New Testament, who was a [illegible] deity. The newer religion was placed on so high a pedestal as to lose contact with its foundations. It was different in kind, something altogether novel, of which no [illegible] was contained in the old. Marcion was the father of this theory, and the [illegible] of history which cuts the ties between Judaism and Christianity is rightly named Marcionism. While the Church resolutely set itself in opposition thereto, Marcionism has been revived at different times. When Schechter arrived in this country and delivered his inaugural address upon his assumption of his duties as head of the New York school, he spoke of Marcionism of the nineteenth century. Few in his audience knew what he was referring to. But he hit the nail on the head.

For there was a recrudescence of Marcionism at the beginning of the nineteenth century, and its expounder was none other than Schleiermacher, the same man who exchanged love letters with a Jewish matron in Hebrew script. Germany under his guidance became impatient of the Jewish tutelage which the Church stoutly acknowledges. The age was one of Teutonism becoming aware of itself. The Grimms were bringing back to latter-day Germans the sagas of their forefathers, the deeds of the indigenous gods and goddesses. Why should the Teuton mind bend the knee to the Palestinian Jehovah, own itself conquered by the culture of the hated Jew? For a century, German theologians, under the spell of Schleiermacher, have been at work substantiating his contention by all sorts of artificial constructions. The sum and substance of their teaching is that the founder of Christianity had a religion so vastly superior to the Jewish that all contact with it is denied. The marvel is, as they put it, that such a genius should have arisen in a community so utterly without preparation for him They have long reasoned themselves out of all belief in the supernatural virgin birth and the like in the life of their master. So this supposed marvel is stamped as supernatural, a shrunken residue of a rich and warm faith underlying the ancient creeds. Born of the virgin—yes and no. But the originality of Jesus born of virgin soil—that must be maintained at all hazards.

It is not for us to argue about the supernatural element in Christianity. The Church, with a truer instinct, will see to that. But when the whole is reduced to a question of originality prepared or unprepared, we have a word to say. We are believers in originality. No great mind is wholly explained out of the historical premises of the time. You cannot construct a Napoleon wholly out of time conditions. The many little ones do not make one great man. Still the time conditions must be taken into account.

Socrates was no doubt an original thinker. But he arose in Athens, and the Athens of a certain period, where philosophic thought had been the vogue, and not in Timbuctoo among barbarians. The latter-day Marcionites would deny that Jesus was of the Jewish race. Of course, this whole theory of racial endowment is a brand new modern heresy. We live in the age of inequalitarianism. Do not the "Protocols" charge us with the invention of the doctrine of equalitarianism embodied in the French Revolution and the Declaration of Independence? Race is what counts, we are told. Of course, the whole theory is to bolster up the claim of the strong races, and of them the Teutonic is strongest, to possess the world and to dominate the weaker nationalities. As a matter of fact, it is not race, but nationality that counts. And no matter what the ancestry of Jesus was, and the Church will place itself on record for the genealogy of the Gospel of Matthew, he was nationally, culturally, spiritually, a Jew of the Jews, at one with his people in all their outlook upon life, upon all the highest questions which exercised the Jewish mind. He had differences with his people, with their leaders. But he was substantially in agreement with them. It is sheer Jew-hatred that denies these agreements. Modern Germany may, if it choose, forswear the religion which their forefathers received at the hands of zealous missionaries who taught them to smash their idols and bend in worship before the God of the Jews. Modern Germany is boasting of a new Bible, of a "Germanenbibel", in which Teuton worthies down to the pagan Goethe take the place of Jewish prophets and teachers. We doubt whether Anglican or Roman Christendom will follow suit. The Bible of Christendom will remain the Old and New Testaments. In the Christian schools, untainted by Teutonic self-glorification, the truth will continue to be taught that the founder was the son of a Jewish mother, nurtured by Jewish teachers, that his highest thoughts were linked to the Hebrew Scriptures, and the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob was his God. Away then with the new form in which his disagreements with his fellow-nationals are caricatured and distorted. Let the substantial agreements stand forth clearly, unmistakably. For we have great need in the world of today of emphasizing these agreements, as we hope to show in the sequel.

OFFICIAL ANTI-SEMITIC DOCUMENTS REVEALED BY JEWISH DEPUTIES IN POLAND.

Paris (J. C. B. Service).—Two official secret documents made public through the Jewish Deputies in the Polish Seim, have stirred up a sensation. The secret documents were issued by the Polish War-Ministry on November 7th and December 7th, 1919, and ordered the dismissal of all Jewish and German officials because they were utilizing their abilities against Polish interests.

News from Austria

By Director Alex. Hecht

IT IS indeed not a pleasant task for a reporter to give a review of the conditions prevailing in Vienna. Vienna will not come to rest. It is in a state of fermentation all over. All classes of its society are dissatisfied. Not a day passes but the papers report some new strike, or predict an imminent strike in the near future. Classes of which formerly no one would have believed that they could be thrown into the strike movement lay down their tools and demand an increase in their earnings.

The most unique strike is the one which we had recently. It was a strike of what you would call in America the Jewish Sabbath school teachers. Nothing could illustrate the demoralization of the Vienna congregation more impressively than the resolution of the Sabbath school teachers to reply to the attitude of the trustees who ignored their demands for improvement of the salary by going on a strike. This resolution was not entirely a surprise. The teachers have for years fought against the ignorance of the majority of the trustees on questions of Jewish pedagogy. They justly criticized the condition that matters pertaining to Jewish instruction are left to the decision of men, most of whom have neither by their life nor by their ideas proven that they are in position to pass judgment on such questions. These men do not have a clear conception of their duty to pay teachers so that they can make both ends meet. No teacher, as conditions are now, can live on his salary, and the natural consequence is that they are compelled to find some other means for earning money which again leads to overwork and to a considerable depression in the struggle for finding the most urgent necessities of life. It is evident that such teachers cannot fulfill their duties with anything approaching ease of mind, and the instruction suffers quite naturally. Therefore they unanimously resolved to withdraw from their activity until their modest demands shall be complied with. Let us hope that it will soon become possible to arrive at a compromise so that instruction can be resumed and the sad picture of discord in the Jewish congregation disappear in the interest of our youth.

In addition to the distress and to the incredibly high cost of living which seems to have come to stay with us, we have to notice the serious mental depression affecting so many families whose relatives are still kept in Siberian prison camps. The heart will burst when you think of these stories of misery which are illustrated in the letters received from this distant land.

A young man writes: "I have constantly the picture of my father before my eyes since I know that he has died, and I feel terrible that he will not meet me when I come home. Dearest mother, wait for me as long as possible. There may be a chance that I shall see you yet in this life". A man writes to his wife: "How long have we lived together before I was conscripted? It was only four years and now I am separated more than five years from you. It will soon be the tenth anniversary of our marriage. What has become of you"?

Another young man writes: "I ca hardly hope to ever resume my studies When I left for the front I was nearly 24 years old and would soon have graduated. When I return, provided that I shall ever return, I will be 30. I have forgotten most of what I have learned and cannot begin my studies again. Here I have spent my time sweeping streets breaking stones, carrying burdens, burying dead, and God knows what else. Whic of these occupations am I to take up i I ever do come home"?

There are still more depressing letter written by friends of prisoners to th relatives, in which you find such phrases "Our poor friend was constantly homesic but he hoped against hope to return hom and to his last breath he spoke of hi home and of his beloved ones. Now hi body is resting in foreign lands far awa from his beloved ones".

It is heart-rending to read these letters We were used to taking the expressio of "a broken heart", especially "dyin of broken heart" as a mere phrase foun in books of fiction, but we have now learne to see the realities of such a phrase. W are seeing it almost daily, how father and mothers, who lost one son, sometime their only son, sometimes all their sons are dying of broken hearts. Others agai walk the streets indifferently, callous t all distress and want, living only for th hope to see once more the son, the husban or the father.

This terrible war has nothing equa in the world's history. Would that thi disgrace should end. Would that th surviving fathers and mothers coul embrace their sons, the lonely wives thei husbands, the children their father Only then shall we be able to think something else, and the brothers an sisters who for years have worried themselves to death with grief for their belove ones will be able to think of work agai

The brethren of the Vienna lodge would be guilty of gross neglect of dut would they not think in gratitude of th activity of the President of our Orde Mr. Kraus, and the Secretary, Brothe Seelenfreund, for the comfort which the sent to the prisoners in Siberia, thus earning the gratitude of their relatives a home. This love and admiration wi never be forgotten. The executive Committee earned the gratitude of all brother also by its generosity in sending us foo drafts. We are glad and happy to acknowedge the letter of the President in whic he informed us that he sent to Vienn food drafts sufficient to protect all brother from want. This letter was a ray of ligh in the darkness of our misery. We ar not merely protected in the gravest emergency but we feel comforted by the promptness with which our brothers on the othe side of the ocean, under the guidanc of the President are remembering us. Th older members were not surprised at thi fact for we know our President personall from his visits in 1909 and 1912 and hav learned to love him. We know he is th right man in the right place. Whateve he begins is done efficiently and prompte by a noble heart.

MUNICH SOCIALISTS ABUSE RABBIS.

Berlin (J. C. B. Service).—At a special meeting organized by the National Socialist Workers Party in Munich, quotations were cited from the Talmud to show that the Jews are taught to hate humanity. Rabbi Bahrwald, a leading Rabbi of Munich, supported by five other Jewish scholars, desired to show the meeting that these quotations were incorrect when they were abused and beaten up by the gathering. The Munich Kehillah has petitioned the government to take measures to safeguard the Jews of the city.

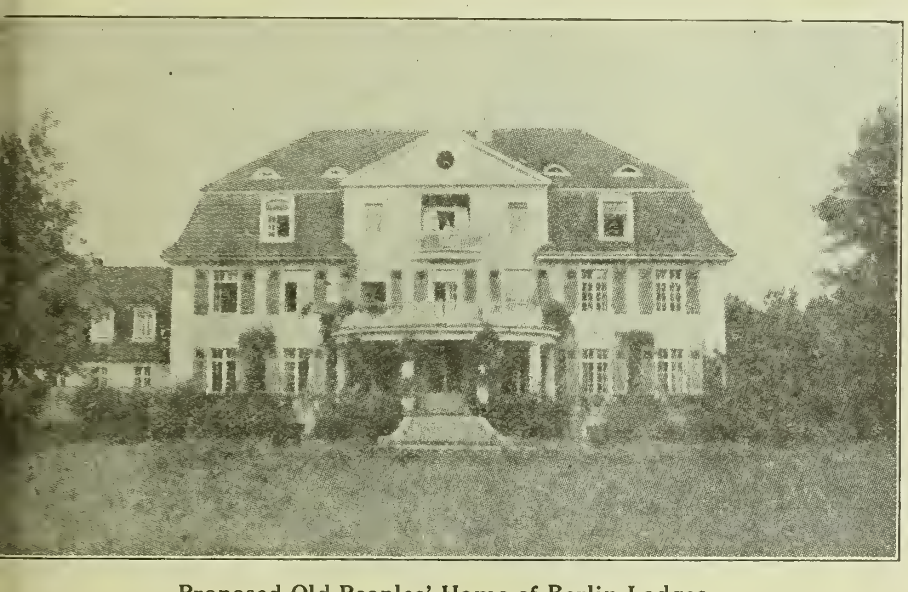
ANTI-SEMITISM CONDEMNED A UNCHRISTIAN AT BERLIN GATHERING.

Berlin (J. C. B. Service).—A mas meeting called by the Central Associatio of German Citizens of the Jewish persuasion was addressed by a number of Non Jewish clergymen who protested at th evident increase of anti-Semitism i Germany. A letter read at the meeting from the Minister of Justice for Hessen condemned anti-Semitism as utterly un Christian. A similar meeting to be addressed by the Catholic Clergy is planne for an early date.

News from Germany

By Brother Dr. Alfred Goldschmidt, Berlin

ANTI-SEMITISM is assuming more repulsive forms as it progresses. ven as brilliant a scholar as Professor lbert Einstein was not immune from mob tacks. A society was recently formed hich arranges public lectures charging lmission, in order to attack the theory relativity which has made Einstein mous. Anti-Semitic students went so r as to insult the great discoverer. He as compensated to some extent by the ception given to him in a meeting of e five Berlin lodges which he kindly nsented to address on this theory. Our rge auditorium could only accommodate rt of those who had expressed the esire to see and hear the great scholar. instein, whose fine features, showing e scholar, strike every one sympaetically, enthused his audience by his ain and sympathetic manner of speakg. In Jewish circles it must not be forotten that Einstein is not merely one f the greatest but one of the most loyal ews of our age. Brother Timendorfer, e President of our district and of the eutsche Reichsloge, gave expression to e sentiment of the brothers with his sual eloquence. It has to be stated that e best elements of the German people ndemn the attacks and insults hurled gainst the great scholar and have taken is part with expressions full of gratitude nd admiration. Among those are the inister of education, Haenisch, and me of the greatest scholars in Einstein's pecialty. They testify not merely to e importance of his scientific achieveents but also to his unimpeachable haracter. We therefore may brush aside he fear that this idiotic agitation might nduce the scholar to accept one of the umerous offers from foreign universiies. Einstein will remain in Germany.



Proposed Old Peoples' Home of Berlin Lodges

The members of the German District f I. O. B. B. do their utmost to accomnodate themselves to actual conditions. The devise of our Order: "Nothing for urselves, all for the cause", had to be omewhat amended. We are now comelled to look more to our own interest han we did in former years. The brethren f the Berlin lodges are contemplating o create a home for aged members of he Order. We have a beautiful little ome in Lichterfelde, an attractive suburb f Berlin, in view, which could be bought or the relatively small amount of 480,000 narks, and which is partly furnished. t was formerly used as a school for donestic science, has twenty-five good rooms esides dining room and parlor. In addiion it has a vegetable garden and orchard omprising one and one-half acres. The nain object of the brethren of the Berlin odges is to provide for aged brothers and sisters who before the war would ive in comfort off the interest of their apital but are now facing a grave crisis wing to the depreciation of money. Any brother or sister who can pay 40,000 marks shall be enabled to spend the remainder of his life free from care and worry. The total capital needed is estimated at 2,500,000 marks and the brethren f Berlin hope to be able to raise this amount.

Another plan of the brothers all over Germany is the creation of a fresh air home for children of the members of the I. O. B. B., because the middle class which composes the bulk of our membership is no more in position to provide for their own children as they were able to do in former years. Such fresh air homes shall be open during the summer, free of charge for the children, and after the season for the members themselves. In this case it will be sufficient to obtain control of the fresh air homes already in existence. The October issue which is a special issue published on the occasion of I. O. B. B. Day, contains a paper on this subject by our brother, Dr. Gruenwald, of Erfurt. In the same issue our brother, Dr. Finkel, gives a historic sketch of the progress of the idea of fresh air and recreation home, and shows how much has been done along these lines by the Berlin lodges. We shall celebrate I. O. B. B. day this year as we did last year in the same simple manner which met with the approval of the lodges. We shall again publish a special issue of our paper, the cover of which shows Michael Angelo's statue of Moses, a replica of which is in the vestibule of our home. This issue contains the following papers: "The Humanitarian Ideal", by our brother, Dr. Alfred Goldschmidt, of Berlin; "Fresh Air Homes", by our brother, Privy-Councillor Dr. Grunewald, Erfurt; "The Participation of the Order in Combating Anti-Semitism", by our brother, Dr. Heinemann, of Breslau; "The Lodge and Economic Activity", by our brother, Councillor Hans Goslar, of Berlin; "The Order and the League of Nations", by our brother, Dr. Paul Nathan, Berlin; "Sanitariums and Fresh Air Homes for Children", by our brother, Dr. E. Finkel, Berlin.

B'NAI B'RITH ACTIVITIES.

A meeting of the General Committee of District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Berlin, Germany, was held on September 28, 1920, with Brother Dr. Berthold Timendorfer, President, in the chair.

In the matter of care of emigrants, it was reported that a number of emigration cases was referred to the District Grand Lodge from the office of the Order in Chicago, but in spite of the fact that the cases require much attention and entail a great deal of labor, the Grand Lodge is more than anxious to do this work of love. It was emphasized by several speakers that conditions have so shaped themselves that a large number of people who formerly were in a well-regulated situation find themselves obliged to appeal to the Grand Lodge for counsel and advice.

The President informed the General Committee that an additional sum of $5,000 was secured from the Executive Committee of the Order for the rehabilitation of members of the Order in Germany and that the Grand Lodge was requested to take into consideration the needs of the members of the Order residing in the territory ceded to Poland.

The question of instituting a lodge of the Order in the city of Fulda was considered, and Ferdinand Gamburg Lodge at Hanau was referred to for its full authority to act in the matter.

Communication was presented from Danmark Lodge, of Copenhagen, Denmark, informing the lodge contemplates during the coming year to renew its activities in the matter of taking care of poor Jewish children during the summer season.

Report was presented of the receipt of an appropriation of $500 from the Executive Committee of the Order for the support of the institution for feeble-minded children in Bielitz.

The relationship between free masonry and the B'nai B'rith was presented for consideration in view of the fact that it was reported that recently a resolution has been adopted to the effect that members of the B'nai B'rith could not secure admission to the masonic fraternity.

A committee was appointed to investigate the matter and submit report to the Grand Lodge at its coming meeting.

The question of aiding Jewish teachers was considered. A proposition was made that for the coming three years every member of the Order be assessed the sum of one hundred mark, which fund is to be used for the purpose of relieving the distress of Jewish teachers. No final action was formed until the next meeting of the General Committee to which the subject matter will be presented, with recommendation of the Executive Board, emphasizing that it is the duty of the Order to look after the interest of Jewish teachers.

Annual subventions for the benefit of the Toynbee Hall, The Central Welfare Institution, and The B'nai B'rith Labor Bureau were allowed.

The matter of handling the rehabilitation fund was considered and a commission was appointed to prepare a set of rules and outline a plan with a view of making it possible to come to the assistance of such members of the Order who have suffered as a result of the war and require aid in the matter of rehabilitation.

COMMUNICATED.

San Diego, Calif., October 18, 1920.
Editor B'nai B'rith News,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

On the 2d of this month I received word over the phone that a young Jewish soldier was down and out, sick and disheartened. I requested that he be sent to my office and I would see what could be done for him. He called and stated he had enlisted at 17 in the Canadian army, served 28 months on the western front, 15 of which he was in various hospitals, claimed to have been gassed in the first gas attack and also that he was on Vimy Ridge at the time it was blown up. Said he was 22, although looks about 19. I took him into my home, dressed him up and secured for him one of the most enviable positions in the city for any young man and in the meantime allowed him to wear a gold watch, a present. He quit his job after working a week and a half, forged a check upon a bank in which he had no funds, skipped out and took the watch with him. There is a felony warrant out for his arrest as well as a petty warrant. His description is as follows:

Age 22. Height 5 ft. 5 1-2 inches; hair black; complexion, very dark; dark eyes and eyebrows; has oblique scar in center of forehead, dim; suit blue serge; hat brown fedora, felt; shoes black; finger nails usually dirty; fairly prominent nose; inveterate cigarette smoker; weight 120 pounds; has deep scar behind one ear. Has decided Southern accent; claims to have been raised in Louisiana. Quick as chain lightning and well mannered.

I felt very proud of this young man and was carrying him with me in my own circle of friends and acquaintances for I thought I saw in him the making of a future B'nai B'rith of which the Order might be proud.

I feel very sorry for this young boy, who goes by the name of Lee Manchell and claims his mother lives in Philadelphia. He is dangerous to Jewry everywhere and our Order should see to it that he is apprehended and returned to San Diego for he will victimize every community he enters.

If you will print the substance of this communication in the next issue of the B'nai B'rith News, we may be able to catch this misguided youth before he brings further discredit upon our people. If located, wire James Byers, Sheriff, San Diego County, California.

Yours truly,
MORRIS BENNARD,
Past President, Lasker Lodge.

NEW YORK IMMIGRANT SOCIETY GUIDES NEWCOMERS.

Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society Has Been Doing This Work for Years Past.

There is many a Jewish immigrant, discharged from Ellis Island and free to enter the gates of the promised land, who would find himself bewildered in the tumult of the large city if not for a friendly tap on the shoulder and a few cordial words of welcome spoken in his native tongue—Yiddish—with an offer of assistance and guidance.

These friendly acts come from the representatives of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society at Ellis Island, as well as at the docks of the various steamship companies. They come from these men because it is their duty and has been for years past, before, during and after the war, to help the new arrival locate his relatives or friends and to take him to his new home in the Land of the Free. All these services are performed without any charge whatsoever to the immigrant or to his relatives.

About 2,000 immigrants have thus been assisted recently, the society maintaining guides at Ellis Island and at the docks to meet incoming steamers at piers where cabin passengers, and lately also steerage passengers, have been discharged. At the docks they take care of the baggage; in case of an immigrant destined to out-of-town points, they send it to the railroad stations; wire for the verification of addresses to relatives and friends, send telegrams to the branches of the society or to its National Directors throughout the country, and provide these immigrants with sufficient food to last them throughout their journey inland.

Other immigrants again are brought to the society's headquearters at 229 East Broadway, where they are kept in the society's care until their friends or relatives are located or employment is found for them. This applies especially to many an admitted immigrant who has lost his American friend's address, and it is for this class that the society maintains a temporary shelter at its headquarters, 229 East Broadway, New York, where the newcomer is accommodated until, through the efforts of the society's Employment Bureau, he finds a suitable occupation and before long becomes a self-supporting American and splendid material for a future United States citizen.

And even after the immigrant leaves the home of the society, he still keeps in touch with it, because it is there that classes in English are maintained, also classes in citizenship and naturalization, the immigrants being assisted in the filing of application for U. S. citizenship and receiving instruction in civics, government and duties. Besides, help of every kind and nature may always be obtained at the society's headquarters by the Jewish immigrant or by those interested in him, for the mere asking.

It was with the object of expanding its Americanization work that the society purchased, last December, the historic Astor Library Building, which is now being remodeled to become a new home for and serve the needs of an increasing immigration.

The new home, when completed, will once more make the Astor Library Building the spiritual center of New York, where immigrants will be prepared to become worthy sons of their new country.

PASSPORT TERMS EXTENDED BY POLISH GOVERNMENT.

Owing to the efforts of the European Commission of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, a great number of Jewish immigrants from Lublin, Bialystok and other cities in Poland, who were about to be sent from Warsaw back to their homes, received permission to remain in the Polish capital until the formalities attending the visa of their passports are complied with.

The stay of most of these emigrants exceeded the terms of their passports, while some of them had no passports at all. Both groups, according to Polish regulations, would have been sent back to their native cities to obtain passports or to have their expired passports renewed.

The society's commission, however, succeeded in securing the consent of the Minister of State to have passports issued to those immigrants in Warsaw instead of having them go back to their native cities.

Story of the Jew Wonder of History

Sermon by the Rev. Dr. Samuel W. Purvis, Philadelphia

Texts: And I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed. Gen. 12:3. What advantage then hath the Jew? Much every way. Rom. 3:12.

As a man of affairs, I want to stop and take notice of one of the most remarkable phenomena of the centuries—the preservation and indestructibility of the Jewish race. Here is a marvelous thing—a bush is burning and is not consumed! "Show me a miracle", said Frederick the Great to his chaplain. "Sire, it is the Jews", answered the man of God. As an ambassador of God, I, too, in a labor of love, would stop and pay a tribute of appreciative recognition to this wonderful people to whom you and I are indebted for so many things, not the least of which is the fundamentals of our own Christian religion.

All the world's a stage whereon not only individuals but nations and races are players. Every nation has played some part, great or small. Each one has had its message for the centuries in which it lived. Rome gave government; Greece, culture; Phoenicia, commerce; the Jew has carried monotheism, the worship of a single God, through the ages. He has played his part and played it well. Where he has faltered or blundered he always paid a fearful penalty. I know of no other that has suffered so much and survived.

When the temple in Jerusalem was destroyed the Jew became a wanderer, a man without a country. There isn't a continent, there isn't a nation upon the face of the earth of which he is not an inhabitant. Innumerable forces of history through many ages have helped to form his destiny. His story is at once the miracle and the romance of human history. None can blot him out, Babylonian captivity, Roman domination, Grecian absorption, mediaeval persecution, modern massacre, have been in vain. Talk about the splendid line of Roman pontiffs on the banks of the yellow Tiber—the Jew has outlived Egypt, Chaldea, Assyria, Persia and the dynasties of the past. While our fathers were savages living on roots in the forest or gnawing a bone in a cave, his were Princes in the house of King David. He of today is nothing more or less than a child of his great yesterday. Though removed from his Asiatic origin well nigh 2,000 years, there's a queer dualism which makes him a creature old and new. He has one foot on the soil of antiquity, the other rests on the foreground of today. His profile is that of Ur of Chaldees, but in Russia his features are Russian, in Italy Italian, in Spain Spanish. There are 50,000 black Jews in Abyssinia, negro Hebrews, while there are even Chinese Jews who observe all the Jewish religious rites and all their dietary laws—yet they have the almond eyes, the flat noses and the yellow skin of Mongolians.

In the Fiery Furnace.

The three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace were forerunners.

In the sixteenth century in Venice was begun the concentration camp known as the Ghetto. Back of the old ghetto, or iron foundry, the Jew had to live in a restricted district. The name was gradually applied to the Jewish quarter of every city. In each ghetto he developed a life of his own—religion, custom, literature, tradition, song, pleasure all his own.

During those Middle Ages he was persecuted relentlessly, bitterly. It wouldn't surprise me if that mediaeval life had not left an indelible impress on him. That past, indeed his any past, is not a mere memory to be cherished and revered, but a hideous, living, ever-present experience, burned on his consciousness. Is he "peculiar"? If he is, circumstances have made him so. Suppose we had taken a few hundred thousand people of any nation 2,000 years ago, set them apart to live in restricted districts, forced them to wear a distinctive garb, forbidden them to engage in agriculture, limited their usefulness to particular trades, only in rarest cases allowed to own property, many other things prohibited under pain of death—wouldn't any people become "peculiar"? Would it be wondered at if long-continued persecution would leave them suspicious? [illegible]

The constant menace of the proselytor would make them no less fearsome than the torture chamber itself—they would soon fear the Greeks when bearing gifts. Each period of oppression would send him back decades, grieved and bewildered.

In spite of all this he has developed a marvelous love for his stepmotherlands. The Jew has always been a patriot of the land which gave him birth. He quickly adapts himself to the country that gives him food and shelter. He soon finds himself. Given the opportunity, he perfects himself in science, music, painting, sculpture, literature, philosophy, sociology, philanthropy, medicine, mathematics, history, astronomy. In all he gave his best, frequently in return he was refused civil privilege, political office, military honor. Their hands were tied and they were blamed for not using them. Persecution, fire, sword, rack and dungeon were his reward. Captive children, murdered men, ravished women were considered his birthright.

How loyal he is may be seen in the strife of the Great War. In England eight per cent of the Jews enlisted to six per cent of non-Jews. America sent between 200,000 and 225,000 into all branches of the service. Their quota, being about 3 per cent of the population, they exceeded by one-third. Of the 800 citations for valor, 174 won the Croix de Guerre, 130 the Distinguished Service Cross, three the U. S. Congressional Medal of Honor, our highest gift, and two the rare French Medaille Militaire. Their casualties were about 18,000. Three thousand five hundred laid down their lives by the side of their non-Jewish comrades under the poppies of Flanders. They, too, had a rendezvous with death. Honor to them. In the great conflict on all sides one-twentieth of the Jews of the world fought with nothing to gain but the opportunity of killing their own martyred race

The Melting Pot.

America spells opportunity for the Jew.

Some one has said: "In this melting pot the Jew will be lost—he is losing rapidly through intermarriage, modernism and infidelity."

No. He will not be lost. If he will only be true to his ancient landmarks he will find himself. You see, he belongs here as surely as the rest of us. He came with Columbus. There were five Jews in the fleet. Rodrigo Sanchez was the overseer of the crew. Luis de Torres was the interpreter. They were of the first to behold and set foot on the new promised land. Abraham and Columbus were men who pioneered westward, not knowing whither. If, as is said, Columbus's mother was Suzanne Fonterosa, a Jewess, then Columbus was a fine successor to Abraham. There is no discovery without faith—both were men of faith. Who can tell whether the hand that has guided the Jew westward from the Euphrates to the Jordan, from the Jordan to the Nile, from the Nile to the Tiber, from the Tiber to the Guadalquivir, did not also lead him across the Atlantic that he might, under God's sun, in a land of freedom, live where he chooses, worship as he desires; no ghetto to wall in him, no restriction to fetter his feet; no tribunal to cow his spirit; free to develop his highest faculties, and in return give the best that is in him to make America the hope of a struggling world? I believe America's noble treatment of the Jew is graven on his heart. He is of a race capable of splendid sentiment and great gratitude. Time will never efface it.

The Jewish Old Testament literature molded Puritan thought. It was the Jew who loaned Washington $600,000 to finance the Valley Forge campaign. The inscription on the Liberty Bell in our fair city is taken from the Jewish Bible. Lincoln's addresses show his inspiration from Jewish Elijah. What a coincidence that the Lincoln penny, the coin of the little child and the common people, is a product of a Jewish designer—Victor D. Brenner. In America the Jew is a patriot without a hyphen. They have never tried to form a "Jewish vote" at election time. He is the average citizen, reaching the heights and depths of human possibility. He is as rich as Dives or as poor as Lazarus. He is Karl Marx the Socialist or Rothschild the capitalist. He is Felix Adler, the law-abiding, or "Ikey, the Gunman". He is a Shylock or Baron de Hirsch. He is a wanderer, and yet he clings to the pale. He is homeless, yet he owns Broadway. The Jew at the lowest was Judas—at the highest he was Jesus.

An American Jerusalem.

Not in Judea, but in New York, is the real Jerusalem.

If there are 15,000,000 Jews in the world, America has about 3,000,000, of which about 1,500,000 are in and about Greater New York. In that city every sixth person you meet is a son of Israel, while on Manhattan Island the proportion is one to four. About one-third of the student body of Columbia University is Jewish, the City College is nearly 97 per cent. New York has the largest high school in the world—the Washington Irving—practically all of its 6,000 pupils are Jewish. The New York telephone directory shows sixteen columns of Cohens and but fourteen of Smiths. In Philadelphia there are two and one-half columns of Cohens to eleven of Smiths. There was a time, a generation ago, when New York was Roman Catholic—today it is Jewish. There is not a Christian church on the east side, but there are 360 synagogues.

Will the Jew go back to Jerusalem? Never, except as a tourist. America is the Jew's Palestine, and Washington, D. C., his Zion. I suspect that if you plant the blue and white flag of Zionism on one side and the red, white and blue of the United States on the other and demand of the Jew, "Choose ye this day which you will serve", there will be but one answer.

This is his country. He is on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, he is in Senate and House of Representatives, he is Governor in three States, he is Mayor of several cities. Two of New York's most successful newspapers, the World and The Times, are works of Jewish proprietors. The business manager of the Hearst newspapers is Jewish. The banking house that stands next to J. P. Morgan Company is Jewish. A Jewish engineer built the Pennsylvania tunnels under the East River.

Will the Jew intermarry? I do not know of the future—but he has and does! August Belmont married a daughter of Commander Perry. The distinguished Dr. Abraham Jacobi married Mary Putnam, Walter Damrosch married the daughter of James G. Blaine, Ossip Gabrilowitch, the musician, married Mark Twain's daughter. Do you know any of the fruit of Christian Jewish marriages? Let me refresh your memory. Did you know that Bret Harte was one? A few others are Sir John Herschel, the astronomer; Francis Turner Palgrave, the critic; Sir John Millet, the artist; Leon Gambetta, the statesman; Sir Arthur Sullivan, the composer, and—now hold your breath—the mother of General William Booth, the youthful pawnbroker's assistant, the glorious Christian saint of Salvation Army fame, was a Miss Moss, a Jewess! Take a look at his picture and see how she bequeathed to him that magnificent Old Testament physiognomy which was such a valuable asset in his public appearance.

Hath Not the Jew a Soul?

Will the Jew become a Christian? I rather think not. Not in appreciable numbers. Do we have grapes of thorns and figs of thistles? Not in this year of our Lord 1920.

The young Jew is causing his elders considerable anxiety religiously. As in all other religious bodies there is much drifting in these days of transition. The young Jew is making money, he is getting an education, he is intense on social problems, many are pronounced Socialists—but he isn't becoming Christian. Not Christianity but Christians stagger the Jew. What he has undergone at the hands of Christians in Europe would stagger us if the condition were reversed.

America is not yet perfect in its tolerance—humanity never will be. But thank God for the American spirit of fair play and a chance. It is ten thousand times better than Russia or Central Europe from which many of the Jews have fled. Give the Jew a Gentile's chance, give the negro a white man's chance, give the woman a man's chance, give the poor the rich man's chance, and they will make good. America spells that chance!

You and I, Christians, worship the Jehovah of the Jews—as Christ came to interpret Him. The Jewish Scriptures, the Old Testament, begins with the story of Man, not with a history of the Jews. Our religion, the Christian religion, was founded on Jews and Judaism. Every book of our New Testament was written by a Jew, with the possible exception of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles. My text was written by a little Jewish tentmaker, he, who, next to Moses, has cut the greatest swath in human history.

It was Simon Peter, a Jew, to whom Christ said: "On this rock I will build My church." Our very calendar is based on the birthday of a Jew, and our greatest, sweetest holiday centres around the manger-cradle of a little Jewish babe! Of the Christians of the world 500,000,000 worship Jesus, a Jew. And 200,000,000 venerate Mary, a Jewess!

But, say, Christian preacher, you haven't told the faults of the Jew. No. That is not now the subject of my story. I know the Jew's faults—I know his virtues—they are both surprisingly like the Christian's—and when I weigh them in the balance I am glad to extend my hand to my intensely human neighbor—the Jew.

THE JEWISH CHAUTAUQUA SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Jewish Chautauqua Society was held this week. Reports of the activities of the work indicate the continued scope and growing usefulness in which the Society is engaged. The report of the lecture course for summer schools in the universities was presented. Forty-seven lectures were given in eighteen universities. It was decided to continue the expansion of this work on a larger basis than ever heretofore, for the need and value of this important activity in which the society has been engaged since 1910 is made evident through the letters received in the office and reports from the Directors of the universities, as well as the teachers, professors and students who were in attendance. No stronger method can be used to combat anti-Semitism, uproot the painful ignorance about and the prevailing prejudice against the Jew, than by teaching a broader, more sympathetic interpretation of the history of the Jewish people.

The twenty-ninth annual assembly, which will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, December 26 to 30, will be one of the most successful in the history of the society. The Secretary returned from a tour in New York state, Connecticut, Indiana and Kentucky, and reported widespread and general interest as well as an assured delegation from these states. She is now on a tour in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Mr. Arthur K. Stern of Philadelphia was elected President to succeed Dr. Jacob S. Goldbaum.

The revised edition of Dr. Julius H. Greenstone's book on "The Jewish Religion" is now ready for general distribution and sale. It has been carefully prepared with a view to its use in Jewish homes and schools, and for the non-Jewish reader as well. The book is embellished with a number of illustrations in sepia.

JEWS OF KOVNO SUBURB ACCUSED OF RITUAL MURDER.

Kovno (J. C. B. Service).—The Jewish community of Schantzi, a suburb of this city, narrowly escaped a pogrom recently. The Lithuanian commander of the city averted a catastrophe by his prompt action which enabled him to take control of the situation very quickly. A Christian girl went into a Jewish store to purchase kerosene. She took the kerosene and walked out of the store without paying for it. The Jewish woman in the store ran after her, demanding her payment. Immediately, the girl was surrounded by a large mob, and in a flash the rumor spread that an attempt had been made by the Jews to kill a Christian child. The Jews in the market place were at once attacked, and stores were robbed. The mob was led by two officers. The city commander sent out a detachment, and when order was restored, it was ascertained that the two officers were Polish nationalists, and that the entire scene had been staged by local Poles. The officers are now under arrest.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

With appropriate ceremonies a class of one hundred was inducted into Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, at a regular meeting held Monday, October 11, at its lodge rooms, 25 Broadway. The degree team, consisting of Joseph Garvett, Chairman; Milton M. Alexander, Charles Rosenthal, Louis Bass and Morris Klein, officiated at the ceremonies.

Three important committees were appointed by President Ginsburg. One, headed by Robert Finn, was instructed to make a thorough survey of the city with a view to finding larger quarters for the housing of B'nai B'rith activities. Louis Frank and Hyman Keidan are assisting Mr. Finn in the investigation. Another committee was instructed to bring in suggestions as to ways and means of financing the plan. A third committee will determine the advisability of promoting the project as a community building or a B'nai B'rith building. Work has already been begun by these committees and their reports will be heard at an early meeting of the lodge.

Mr. Julian H. Krolik gave a splendid address in behalf of the coming Community Fund Drive. He urged the B'nai B'rith to do its share as the biggest and one of the most important single Jewish fraternal bodies in the country.

A $1,000,000 community building, modernly equipped and fitted to house all Jewish communal activities in Detroit, save its Associated Charities, was proposed by the Ways and Means Committee at a record meeting of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, held at its lodge rooms, 25 Broadway, Monday, October 18.

The committee, headed by Adolph Freund, and his coworkers, Adolph Finsterwald, Harry S. Grant, E. M. Rothman and Magnus A. Hirschfield, was appointed at an earlier meeting by President Bernard Ginsburg.

The tentative plans for the new building, as outlined by Mr. Freund, call for a modern edifice containing gymnasium, swimming pools, restaurants and lunch rooms, reading rooms, assembly halls, library, study rooms, bowling alleys, billiard rooms, class rooms, music halls, club rooms and other essential devices necessary in a community building.

Mr. Freund's report was enthusiastically received by the 300 members of the lodge who were present. Mr. Joseph J. Cummins gave a stirring talk in which he emphasized Detroit's need for a Jewish community building. He cited instances of small communities which boast splendid buildings devoted entirely to Jewish activities.

At the same meeting, Judge Harry Keidan, Presiding Judge of the municipal court, explained informally the workings of the new court and its benefits to the city, and urged its support at the coming election.

The B'nai B'rith Club gave its second informal dancing party of the season Sunday night, October 24, in its club rooms. Finzel's orchestra was engaged. A. Bernstein, a member of the Pisgah Lodge Glee Club, entertained between dances with impersonations of Al Jolson.

The club gave a smoker for its members on election night, November 2. A dutch lunch was served and the returns of the election were received by a ticker installed in the lodge rooms, for the benefit of the lodge and club members.

The Pisgah Degree Team officiated at the initiation ceremonies of the Pontiac B'nai B'rith Lodge. The Pontiac Lodge now has a total of forty-five members. A small delegation of Pisgah members accompanied the degree team.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Battle Creek Lodge, No. 871, of Battle Creek, Mich., only recently instituted, is showing marked activity. The lodge has secured a permanent home with club rooms attached thereto, and hopes for continued success. Since the institution of the lodge, four members were initiated at a meeting held October 28. While the field is rather limited, it is hoped that every available coreligionist will find it his pleasure, as well as duty, to join the lodge and help maintain the one Jewish organization in the community that will look after all Jewish interests.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE OF BATTLE CREEK.

An event of far-reaching import in the Jewish communal life of Battle Creek was the institution Sunday, October 3, of Battle Creek Lodge, No. 871. The new lodge was instituted with appropriate ceremonies by Brothers Adolph Freund and Bernard Ginsburg of Detroit, and A. B. Seelenfreund of Chicago, representing the District Grand Lodge. Representatives were present from B'nai B'rith lodges in Grand Rapids, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Flint, Bay City, Muskegon and Saginaw. The Detroit delegation arrived in Battle Creek in a chartered pullman at noon Sunday and were escorted in automobiles to the Post Tavern Hotel, where the delegates gathered.

The initiation ceremonies took place at the Knights of Pythias hall at 3 o'clock. The class of thirty candidates was inducted into the lodge by the Pisgah Lodge degree team. Splendid assistance was given the team by the Pisgah Glee Club under the direction of I. Leonard Braun.

Bernard Ginsburg, President of Pisgah Lodge, addressed the candidates, urging them to make their lodge the center of all Jewish activities in the city. Adolph Freund, past president, in a brief talk, impressed upon the members their duties and obligations as Ben Brith. Saul Rosenfeld was elected President of the new lodge, and I. Rosenberg, Secretary.

Banquet Follows Initiation.

An elaborate banquet for 250 guests followed the initiation at the Post Tavern Hotel. I. Bromberg, toastmaster, called upon Edward Lichtig, State Deputy, of Bay City, who was instrumental in organizing the lodge; Mrs. August Kapp, a zealous war worker and well known club woman of Battle Creek; Rabbi Waterman of Kalamazoo; Rabbi Steiner of Jackson; A. B. Seelenfreund of Chicago, and Milton M. Alexander.

Mr. Seelenfreund, who has recently returned from a visit to Galicia, Roumania, Poland and other European countries in the interests of the I. O. B. B., gave a graphic recital of the conditions abroad. He dwelt on the appalling number of Jewish orphans in the war stricken districts and suggested that Battle Creek lodge adopt one as its own.

Milton M. Alexander, member of the National Administrative Committee of the Anti-Defamation League of the I. O. B. B., spoke interestingly of the work of the league which aims to counteract evidence of anti-Semitism by a program of education.

Pisgah's Glee Club entertained the guests during the program with a well chosen musical program. By request, Mr. Braun rendered two solos, "Eili, Eili," and an aria from Pagliaccia.

RIMMON LODGE, RICHMOND, VA.

At the regular October meeting of Rimmon Lodge, No. 68, held in the auditorium of the temple, authorization was given to Mr. Morton L. Wallerstein, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, to proceed with plans for the celebration of B'nai B'rith Day on November 18.

Some prominent member of the House of Representatives will probably be asked to make an address to be followed by a social progress.

Rabbi Dr. E. N. Calisch, member of the Executive Committee of the Order for District No. 5, reported on national activities. The Social Service Committee, headed by Mr. Herbert T. Ezekiel, reported on valuable work done during the past season.

MENORAH LODGE, No. 832, I. O. B. B., MOURNS LOSS OF BROTHER HENRY SILVERFIELD.

Henry Silverfield, a prominent merchant of Osceola, Ark., passed away in a hospital at Memphis, Tenn., September 26, last. Mr. Silverfield was a prominent merchant of Osceola, where he had moved from Memphis about five years ago. Within the five years resident at Osceola, Mr. Silverfield had built up a large dry-goods business and had won many acquaintances. He was a charter member of Menorah Lodge, No. 832, I. O. B. B., and the lodge greatly mourns his loss. Mr. Silverfield leaves behind him three daughters and one son.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN IN DISTRICT No. 7 MOST SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. S. J. Westheimer, of Houston, Texas, who is making a propaganda trip on behalf of District No. 7, reports that after leaving Waco where he more than doubled the membership of Eureka Lodge, I. O. B. B., he in company with Mr. Victor Hexter, President of the Seventh District, went to Wichita Falls, where they reinstituted Noah Lodge which had been inactive for more than two years, securing 71 new members and which lodge is expected to have not less than one hundred members before January 1.

From this point Mr. Westheimer went to San Antonio, stopping just long enough in Forth Worth to say a few words of encouragement to the leading members there and upon arriving in San Antonio, he found that the lodge had been busy getting members for the last month or so. He, however, assisted by a committee, secured 47 new applications which will increase San Antonio's membership by at least one hundred for the month.

The next stop was Laredo where five new members were added to the roster of the lodge, and actually every Jew in Laredo is now a member of Laredo Lodge, I. O. B. B.

Going from there to Corpus Christi nine names were added to Henry Cohen Lodge. This concluded the trip and will show a total increase in membership of approximately 300.

Mr. Westheimer stated that he was enthusiastically received by the leading members of the I. O. B. B. in all these cities and was assured that additional members would be added to all the lodges he visited by January 1; in fact, he had a letter from Arthur Lyons, president of Noah Lodge, I. O. B. B., Wichita Falls, in which he stated that ten new members had already been added since Mr. Westheimer's departure and that they expect to have at least a hundred members by January 1.

Next Wednesday, November 10, Mr. Westheimer expects to be in Port Arthur to increase the membership at that point and also to explain the functions of the Anti-Defamation League.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

The first week in November was a busy one in the B'nai B'rith Building of Portland. The election returns were received by special wire and Portland Lodge made it a gala occasion. Dancing was indulged in by many, tables for cards were arranged in other rooms of the building, and refreshments were served throughout the evening. The party did not disperse until the early hours of the morning.

Portland Lodge, through its President, issued an appeal to its members to respond liberally and whole-heartedly to the call for funds for the American Jewish Relief Committee.

A very able committee is arranging for the entertainment of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, which will convene in Portland this coming February, and will make every effort to extend to the visitors the hospitality for which Portland is known. The Chairman of the committee is Brother Ben Saling.

Portland Lodge, No. 65, of Portland, Ore., held an interesting meeting at the B'nai B'rith building on Tuesday evening October 19, 1920. Judge McGinn delivered an address on "The Landing of our Pilgrim Fathers." The Ladies' Auxiliary of Portland Lodge held a meeting at the same time and at its conclusion, the members of the Auxiliary attended the lecture.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

At a meeting of Memphis Lodge, No. 35, recently held, initial steps were taken in the matter of organizing a Memphis branch of the Anti-Defamation League. Mr. Joseph M. Samfield was elected Chairman and was authorized to name an Administrative Committee of twenty-five representative citizens to direct the work of the organization.

It is proposed to hold a mass-meeting of Jewish people of Memphis at an early date, at which time a campaign for funds will be inaugurated. Among the speakers at this meeting will be Mr. Nathan Cohen of Nashville, Tenn.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

Honorable Julius Kahn, Congressman from California, delivered the opening address on the B'nai B'rith forum on Tuesday evening, October 19, at the B'nai B'rith auditorium. This was the first of a series of lectures which the committee succeeded in arranging for the winter season. The plan is to have addresses delivered by speakers who have a message to bring to the people of this country. It is the plan of the B'nai B'rith to open these lectures to the public.

The success of the Speakers Club of the B'nai B'rith led the committee to lay plans for the reorganization of this club. The Speakers Club meets bimonthly and consists of earnest young men who gather for the purpose of discussing questions of economic, civic, and political interest. A meeting of the club was held on October 14, at which time plans for the year were discussed.

The opening meeting of Cleveland Lodge was held on Thursday evening, October 21. At this meeting, committees submitted reports covering the year's work and plans for the year's activities were outlined. Following the regular order of business, Mr. C. S. Metcalf addressed the lodge on the subject, "Shall our Taxes be Raised"?

At the meeting of the B'nai B'rith Chess Club, held on October 11 at the B'nai B'rith buildng, plans were made for a season of intense activity. It is proposed to enter the B'nai B'rith Chess Team in the city tournaments.

At the meeting, held on October 6, at the B'nai B'rith building, a B'nai B'rith Bowling League was organized. It was agreed that the league should consist of eight teams and that the schedule for the season should extend for a period of twenty-one weeks.

The first meeting of the B'nai B'rith dramatic section was held on October 17. Dr. Daniel A. Hiebsch as director presented the course he outlined for the season. The selection of plays was discussed and also matters relative to the presentation of plays were considered.

The opening dance of the season, the harvest dance on October 10, was a great success and was duplicated in just as successful a manner on Sunday evening, October 24.

The B'nai B'rith French Club held its first meeting on October 30. It was decided to conduct its year's activities along the lines similar to those of last winter.

HOREB LODGE, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

A characteristic peppy meeting of Horeb Lodge, No. 35, of New Haven, Conn., was held on Sunday evening, October 24, 1920. Special features of the meeting were addresses by Hon. David E. Fitzgerald, Mayor of the City of New Haven, and Colonel Morris G. Osborn, editor of the New Haven Journal-Courier.

The lodge, which was unusually well attended, gave a hearty welcome to the Mayor and to Col. Osborne as they entered the meeting hall, following the business meeting at which a large class of candidates was initiated. The speaker devoted the greater part of his remarks to the efficacy of home rule and was listened to with close interest. At the conclusion of his address, the audience arose in hearty appreciation.

The lodge is still actively engaged in its endeavor to bring the membership of the lodge up to the one thousand mark before the close of the year.

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, Mich., is busily engaged in various kinds of constructive work. The attendance at the meetings of the lodge every Monday evening is wonderfully good. The lodge is very much in need of larger quarters to accomodate the throng and is endeavoring to find a suitable hall.

The Propaganda Committee of the lodge is actively engaged in the work of securing a class of five hundred candidates by December 1. Indications are that it will succeed. The officers of the lodge are deeply interested in the work of the lodge and the Order. Brother Bernard Ginsburg, President of the lodge, is rendering every possible aid, is most devoted to his duties as President, and is deserving of the highest praise for the self-sacrifice and good he is affording.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

BULLETIN NEWS

OFFICE OF EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Independent Order B'nai B'rith
District Grand Lodge No. 2

B'nai B'rith Day to Be Observed Throughout District No. 2.

Preparations for the observance of B'nai B'rith Day have been made by practically all the lodges in District No. 2. Those lodges that have neglected to do so should take immediate steps to observe this holiday which falls between the first and twentieth of this mouth.

Lodges to Be Visited by Executive Director in November.

Mr. Jacob B. Krohngold, Executive Director of District Grand Lodge, No. 2. I. O. B. B., will visit the following lodges during the month of November: Sedalia, Mo., November 1; Louisiana, Mo., November 5; St. Louis, Mo., November 7; Kansas City, Kans., November 14; Paducah, Ky., November 16; Evansville, Ind., November 18; Owensboro, Ky., November 22; Terre Haute, Ind., November 24; Lafayette, Ind., November 28; Gary, Ind., November 30.

These dates are only tentative, and subject to change. So far as possible the date will be made to conform to the convenience of the lodge to be visited if the Executive Director is notified a sufficient time in advance.

B'nai B'rith News.

Complaints have reached this office that the B'nai B'rith News is not being received by all members of the lodge. The fault is probably that of the local Secretary who should send to the office of the B'nai B'rith News, at least once a year, a complete list of the membership with the correct mailing addresses. The B'nai B'rith News is published at 1228 Tribune Building, Chicago, Ill.

Drive for Cleveland Orphan Home.

Brother E. J. Schanfarber, First Vice President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, writes us as follows: "The drive for the Orphans' Home is for the purpose of making up a deficit of about $100,000 in the current fund as the expenses of operation have exceeded the income during the past year or so. This drive is to be conducted through the various B'nai B'rith lodges. The cities which have Federated Charities and which contribute to the Orphans' Home through the federation will be requested to increase their subscriptions and will not be called upon to respond to a general demand for funds."

Executive Director Appreciative.

Mr. Krohngold wishes to express his sincere thanks and appreciation to the members of those lodges he has already visited for their many acts of courtesy and for the fine hospitality that has everywhere been accorded him as Executive Director of District No. 2.

Let Us Help You Increase Your Membership.

Returns which have reached this office, as a result of our letters and propaganda literature to prospective members, have been very gratifying. Let us have a list of the names and addresses of the prospective members in your community and we will write them at once, urging them to become members of your lodge. We will also be glad to write to members who have been suspended for nonpayment of dues, to members who have withdrawn from the lodge, and also to men who have been elected to membership but who have not yet appeared for initiation.

General Committee Meeting in Cincinnati, November 21.

The General Committee of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, will meet at the Gibson Hotel, Cincinnati, Ohio, November 21

A Suggestion.

Although quite unnecessary in most instances it has been found advisable to suggest that lodges having a visiting speaker should make most of the occasion for propaganda purposes by providing a suitable program including some musical or other entertainment and refreshments. All such meetings should be open meetings and special efforts should be made to interest nonmembers and secure their attendance.

Another Suggestion.

A brother Ben B'rith has complained to us that upon a recent visit to a B'nai B'rith lodge in a large city, he was impressed with the lack of hospitality accorded visiting brethren, and how differently one is received in lodges of other Orders. We do not believe that this coldness and lack of attention to visitors is at all general, but take this opportunity of suggesting that each lodge, whenever it has any visitors, put forth its best efforts to welcome them, introduce them to the brethren, and otherwise make them feel at home.

Propaganda Activities of the District Grand Lodge.

The following brethren delivered B'nai B'rith addresses during the past month: Mr. A. A. Benesch, of Cleveland, member of the General Committee, at Elyria, Ohio, and Youngstown, Ohio; Mr. Jacob Myer, Chairman of the Social Service Committee, at Akron, Ohio.

The following assignments have been made by Brother E. J. Schanfarber, Chairman Propaganda Committee, for the month of November and others will be made as soon as the details can be arranged.

Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, of St. Louis, President District Grand Lodge, No. 2, will address Denver Lodge, No. 171, on Sunday, November 14, and Cincinnati Lodge, No. 4, on Monday, November 22. President Rosenfeld also plans to visit several other lodges in Ohio at about the same time.

Mr. Karl M. Vetsburg, of St. Louis, Past President District Grand Lodge, No. 2, will address Gan Eden Lodge, No. 110, Terre Haute, Ind., on November 7.

Mr. Arthur Friedman, of Denver, Colo., Second Vice President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, will address Trinidad Lodge, No. 393, Trinidad, Colo., on November 21.

Akron Lodge, No. 719, Akron, Ohio, leads all the lodges in the district in the number of candidates initiated during the month of October. On October 17, Akron Lodge initiated a class of more than a hundred members and promises to have another class of the same size for the next initiation. Since its awakening Akron Lodge has been steadily forging ahead and for the past five years shows an increase in membership of over three hundred per cent.

Other lodges throughout the district have been showing commendable activity and the gains in membership made during the past month have been very gratifying. If your lodge has been neglecting this very important branch of its activities, urge that it "get busy" at once.

Brother E. J. Schanfarber writes us as follows: "In accordance with directions from the President, Samuel Rosenfeld, of this district, we are inaugurating a membership celebration. All lodges are urged to immediately undertake concerted action in developing their membership and to secure and initiate substantial classes between November 20 and November 30."

Send Us Your Lodge News.

If you will send us items of interest concerning the doings and activities of your lodge, we will be pleased to give them publicity in the bulletin.

Yours for a bigger and better B'nai B'rith.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

An audience that filled the assembly hall of the Y. M. H. A. listened to a program that was full of interest, life, amusement and instruction successfully carried out at the October meeting of Memphis Lodge. It was the first literary program of the season, under the auspices of the Entertainment Committee.

Joseph M. Samfield acted as Chairman. Miss Jessie Lilbott gave a delightful vocal selection, her accompanist being Mrs. Stanley Simon. Mr. Samfield then introduced Hardwig Peres and his brother, Chancellor Israel H. Peres, who debated the question of the "League of Nations." The former argued the affirmative side of the question. The judge gave his views of the negative side.

Concluding the excellent program was a violin solo by Miss Bertie Kohn, her accompanist being Miss Jeanette Miriam Goldberg of Shreveport, La. Both are finished artists and their selection proved a most delightful musical gem. The next literary event of the lodge will take place Sunday, November 21.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PHILADELPHIA.

Joshua Lodge.

The debate on the question of Jewish responsibility for the present wave of anti-Semitism that is being directed against the Jews everywhere, held Wednesday, October 6, under the auspices of Joshua Lodge, No. 23, was a decided success. The hall was crowded to capacity and enthusiastic addresses were delivered by prominent Philadelphians.

Edward Davis, the principal speaker of the evening, elaborated on the woes of the Jewish people in Eastern Europe, and compared their present experiences to the worst periods in Jewish history. The hope of the Jews throughout the world, he declared, rested with American Jewry, and they must not shirk their duty in this hour of need.

Jewish music was given by a selected orchestra, headed by Saul Rabinoff. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening was spent.

Samuel B. Lush, Chairman of the Committee on Intellectual Advancement, presided at the debate.

At the meeting of the lodge held on November 3, in addition to the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, an excellent program was rendered.

Rabbi Mortimer J. Cohen of Logan delivered an address in connection with the work of the Anti-Defamation League of the Order in its fight to combat anti-Semitism.

Lincoln Lodge.

Lincoln Lodge, No. 780, held its first meeting of the season on Thursday evening, October 14. It was a successful meeting from every viewpoint.

Always abreast of the times, Lincoln Lodge at this meeting launched an education campaign to further the efforts of the Anti-Defamation League of the Order, and appointed a committee, with Mr. David Phillips, as Chairman.

In line with the well-known policy of the lodge to have some prominent speaker present at each meeting, the members were addressed by the Rev. Samuel W. Purvis, minister of the Thirteenth Street M. E. Church, and the Hon. Jacob Singer.

Among the visitors present were Mr. David Bortin, President of District No. 3; Mr. Harry M. Platowsky, Second Vice President of the district; Mr. Joseph W. Salus, Mr. William Loewenthal, Secretary of Har Sinai Lodge; Mr. Harry Leinweber and Mr. Joseph Goldstein, also of Har Sinai Lodge.

Another distinguished visitor was Mr. Stalberg, but recently from Petrograd. Mr. Stalberg delivered an interesting talk on conditions as he left them in that city and in that country at large.

An enthusiastic response was accorded the announcement that the first social event of the season will be a dinner-dance on Sunday, November 21, at the Adelphia Hotel.

Har Sinai Lodge, No. 3.

The membership of Har Sinai Lodge has reached 280 and there is a list of nearly 100 candidates to be initiated. This increase is attributed to the work of the Entertainment Committee, which last year arranged a number of enjoyable social affairs and which is preparing to continue along the same lines.

During the past spring and summer, Joseph W. Salus, of this lodge, as Chairman of the Campaign Committee, succeeded in raising about $25,000 for the B'nai B'rith Orphanage and Home for Friendless Children at Erie, Pa.

At a recent meeting David Bortin, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 3, outlined the work which the Anti-Defamation League has in contemplation and showed the necessity for funds to carry on this work. Fourteen hundred dollars were subscribed by those present.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.

Gilead Lodge, No. 41, of Milwaukee, Wis., held an interesting meeting October 14, which was attended by over a hundred members. This meeting was set apart for the initiation of a large class of candidates by the degree team of the lodge. Many favorable comments were made upon the work of the degree team and the Membership Committee presented a number of new applications. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

HONORS FOR VENERABLE LODGE SECRETARY.

At the first meeting for the season after vacation of Etham Lodge of Sacramento in the B'nai B'rith Order, a life membership was conferred upon the venerable esteemed, beloved Secretary of the lodge, Leon Salomon, in recognition of his faithful devoted services as such secretary for the extraordinary long period of thirty-two years. The evening was a gala one, rendered doubly so by the presence of members of the ladies' auxiliary and other visitors, including Mr. Sternthal of Unity Lodge of San Francisco, and the eloquent address of Lucius L. Salomon of San Francisco, who happily referred to the fact that the Salomon family was well represented. Mr. H. A. Binder, President of the Sacramento Temple, who made the presentation in a few well-chosen remarks, referred to the high regard felt for Mr. Salomon and to the fact that his sevice had extended over nearly a generation. The recipient of the honor spoke briefly expressing his appreciation of a manifestation of regard such as had not, he understood, so far been bestowed upon any member of the Order. It may be remembered that genial, simple Mr. Salomon, now in his 84th year, was the subject on the occasion of his eightieth birthday, of a grand celebration in which the lodge, the Temple, the benevolent societies, and the Jewish community in general participated, as well as the Odd Fellows and many in the general community.

Previous to the speaking, on the occasion of the presentation of the life membership to Secretary Salomon, there was a short program of lighter exercises, including a piano selection excellently rendered by Miss Mildred Marks, a life-like recitation in Italian dialect by W. J. Salomon, and an admirable piano and violin duet by Mrs. Edward Goldberg and President Morris Rothholz.

MAHONING LODGE, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

B'nai B'rith Day was celebrated in gala fashion by Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, on October 17. The following program was prepared by the committee in charge:

Opening by President M. Myerowich.
Piano solo by Prof. Ehrenfeld.
Benediction by Rev. Bazel.
Remarks by Past President J. Friedman.
Violin solo by Miss Ruth Scott, accompanied by Miss F. Scott.
Solo dance by Miss Geroff.
Vocal selection by Miss R. Schwartz, accompanied by Miss D. Schagrin.
Clarinet solo by Mr. D. Sacherman, accompanied by Prof. Ehrenfeld.
Humorous recitation by Mr. M. Levy.
Address by Mr. Alfred Benesch of Cleveland, Past President of District No. 2.
Remarks by Past President Mr. E. Hartzell.

Following the program refreshments were served by the committee, and the most successful celebration of B'nai B'rith Day was brought to an auspicious close.

On November 11, Armistice Day, the second day-dance of the season was held to which invitations were sent to neighboring lodges. A fine program for the affair was arranged by the committee in charge.

JOSEPH LODGE, ST. JOSEPH, MO.

Brother Jacob B. Krohngold of St. Louis, Executive Director of District No. 2, paid an official visit to Joseph Lodge, No. 73, of St. Joseph, Mo., on October 20, 1920. On this occasion, a class of twenty-eight candidates was initiated.

After the initiation services, an instructive address was given by Brother Krohngold on the work of the B'nai B'rith, and short talks were also delivered by Brother Dr. Kangisser, President of the lodge, and by Brother Rabbi Garry August, who recently accepted the call to fill the pulpit of Temple Adath Joseph.

Following the regular order of business and the close of the lodge in due form, the families and friends of the members were invited to a reception during which a musical and vocal program was successfully carried out.

Joseph Lodge intends to conduct a vigorous campaign for members, with the hope of bringing the membership of the lodge up to 300.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

UNCIL OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGES IN MICHIGAN.

Bro. Adolph Freund, of Detroit, Mich., st President of District Grand Lodge, . 6, and one of the most active workers Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, Detroit, is leavoring to interest the lodges of chigan in the matter of forming a ncil and has outlined the following us and purposes of such council if called o life:

The B'nai B'rith Lodges, located within e Lower Peninsula of the State of ichigan, hereby agree to form a council, e purpose of which shall be:

1. To promote the welfare of each lge by mutual cooperation, with the rpose of enabling the several lodges to come active and beneficent forces in eir respective communities.
2. To foster social and fraternal rela- ns between the several lodges and their spective members.
3. To aim toward a perfect practice of e underlying principles of our Order.
4. To render support and encourage- nt to District Grand Lodge No. 6, and e Order B'nai B'rith in general.

To this end it is the purpose:

1. To form an Executive Council nsisting of two members from each lge, the functions and duties of which all be formulated and determined by e council itself.
2. To hold at least two meetings in ch year of the combined membership the several lodges, at a place to be desig- ted by the council.

At such meetings, it shall be in order:

1. To initiate into the Order appli- nts for membership in the several lodges.
2. To deliver addresses by members of e Order of subjects germane to the der's work.
3. To engender and promote a fra- nal and sociable spirit among the mem- rship of the several lodges, and their spective families.
4. To take action as may be deemed se to further the cardinal principles our Order.
5. To reaffirm loyalty to our country d its flag, to support its laws and insti- tions and to stimulate our traditional th in Judaism.

ROCKTON LODGE, BROCKTON, MASS.

At the recent meeting of Brockton dge, reports from various standing mmittees were received and acted upon.

The Charity Committee reported doing cellent work, helping many poor and edy. It is now working on a plan for federation of Jewish charities.

The High School Scholarship Committee ported that it is the first time in the tory of the city that a Jewish organiza- n has offered a high school scholarship. is year a hundred-dollar prize was won a Jewish student, and it is noteworthy it is the first time a Jewish student n a scholarship prize in that city. r. Simon Geilich, the winner, is now Dartmouth College. Brockton Lodge s been highly commended for the offering a scholarship, as the same is open to any dent, regardless of race or creed.

The Entertainment Committee has ced the Jewish social standing in Brock- well to the front. The social affairs the lodge are creditable not only to e lodge but to the community at large. rious socials are held each month. The ent of the season is the annual ball, ually held in February, and the coming air is planned to be more elaborate and tter than ever. All proceeds of such airs are devoted to charitable purposes.

Another notable feature of the lodge is e B'nai B'rith luncheons. As many ople as possible meet for luncheon ch Tuesday noon and discuss the topics the day as well as matters affecting the nai B'rith.

HARRISBURG, PA.

The annual banquet of Salem Lodge, . 26, of Harrisburg, Pa., was held at the ks' Home on Wednesday, October 6. r. William Strouse acted as toastmaster d introduced the following speakers: vid Bortin, of Philadelphia, President strict Grand Lodge; Eugene G. Cohen, Harrisburg; Joseph W. Salus, of Phil- elphia; Rabbi Louis J. Haas, of Harris- rg; Rabbi M. J. S. Abels, of Altoona.

KANSAS CITY LODGE, KANSAS CITY, MO.

The spacious and beautiful auditorium of Temple B'nai Jehuda was filled to overflowing capacity at the First Open Meeting of the Season given by K. C. Lodge.

A fine musical program was arranged by Frank Schwartz, chairman of the cultural committee, through the courtesy of the K. C. Conservatory of Music.

The speakers, Jacob B. Krohgold, Executive Director of this District of the Order, and Rabbi Simon Glazer, were enthusiastically cheered by the audience. Mr. Krohngold delivered a very powerful address, explaining the purposes and workings of the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith. He recalled conditions existing but a few years ago on the American Stage, when the Jew was made an object of ridicule to theatre-goers by the unseeming antics of alleged comedians made up to represent Jews and the maligning and defaming of the Jew in moving pictures. The audience heard how moving picture producers were induced to eliminate that evil. Various Boards of Education throughout the country have by the activities of the League been induced to discontinue from the school curriculum the study of books obnoxious and tending to incite ridicule and racial hatred towards the Jew.

Rabbi Glazer traced the origin and existence of racial hatred of the Jew throughout that much persecuted people's history. In his opinion he could not conceive that a liberty loving nation like America, authors of the Declaration of Independence, should become so pernicious and perversive as to destroy and set at naught the rights and liberties of one group of its citizens, just because they profess different religious affiliations. After enthusiastic applause the audience of 1,200 adjourned for sociability and refreshments to the Temple Annex.

DENVER LODGE, DENVER, COLO.

At a well attended meeting of the lodge held Sunday morning, October 10, Robt. H. Kalinsky delivered an address on the subject, "Bolshevism."

At the meeting of the lodge held October 24, a large class of candidates was initiated by the degree team.

The meetings of Denver Lodge are usually well attended. Recently Brother Jacob B. Krohngold, of St. Louis, Executive Director of the District Grand Lodge, paid an official visit to the lodge and addressed it on the work of the Anti-Defamation League, giving a comprehensive survey of its activities and accomplishments. His address was very favorably received. Various other interesting remarks on the subject were made.

During his stay in Denver, Brother Krohngold visited all the local institutions and the industrial school at Golden. He commented favorably on their work and praised Denver Lodge for its activities.

The lodge is making arrangements to observe B'nai B'rith Day during the coming month.

WACO B'NAI B'RITH DOUBLES MEMBERSHIP.

The B'nai B'rith lodge at Waco has the distinction of more than doubling its membership in two days. It all happened during the past week, when Mr. S. J. Westheimer, second vice president of the district, accompanied by Mr. Sidney Strauss, president of Houston Lodge, and Mr. Charles Mendelsohn of Herzl Lodge, assisted by a few leaders of Waco, made a personal canvas of that city. Waco Lodge had a membership of 83; it now has 171.

Marlin was visited and thirteen members were added to Waco Lodge. Some had resided in Waco twenty years and had never been asked to join, and were awaiting such an opportunity. Some professed never to have heard of the B'nai B'rith. However, it was a very pleasant experience for all who participated.

Messrs. Strauss and Mendelsohn returned to Houston Thursday, while Mr. Westheimer went on to Dallas, Fort Worth, Wichita Falls, Austin, San Antonio, Laredo and Corpus Christi. It will be possibly two weeks before Mr. Westheimer finishes his trip.

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

Amos Lodge, No. 121, opened its fall season on Wednesday, September 15, with a business meeting, with Judge Michael J. Murray as the speaker of the evening. His subject was "Americanization," with many side-lights and digressions which enhanced the value to us of his splendid address.

On September 29, the lodge initiated fifty-three candidates, with Rabbi Bienenfeld as the speaker of the evening. His address to the candidates was most inspiring and instructive and will be of lasting value to all those who heard it.

On October 11, the Entertainment Committee provided a ladies' night, the first held in the lodge's new meeting room, Beacon Hall. There is no finer meeting place in the city of Boston. About 450 were in attendance and all declared it was one of the most enjoyable informal parties ever given under the auspices of Amos Lodge.

On October 25, we had a class initiation of 125. Rabbi Lyons of Brooklyn officiated. His subject was "A Call to American Israel," a most stirring and timely address, one long remembered by all present and, without any doubt, of lasting benefit to the Order and to the individual member. Amos Lodge is on the map for good. The lodge was awarded the second prize for increased membership of the district.

On October 25, the lodge stood with 650 enrolled and 175 paid applications in hand for the call to its next initiation which takes place on Monday, November 22.

Watch us grow to over 1,000 before December 31, 1920. —[S. Scheinfeldt.

RAMAH LODGE, CHICAGO.

Despite the inclement weather, a goodly and representative attendance was present at the meeting of Ramah Lodge, No. 33, held at the Covenant Club, Chicago, on Monday, November 8, 1920. More than three hundred applications for membership were passed upon by the various investigating committees and successfully passed the ballot.

The membership campaign is reported as progressing satisfactorily and the committee entertains no doubt that the quota of one thousand new members before the close of the year will surely be reached. The committee was authorized to make all necessary arrangements for the class initiation to be held the latter part of the month of December and to secure for that occasion some prominent and noted speaker. The committee was fúrther authorized to secure the attendance of the glee club of Pisgah Lodge, of Detroit.

At this meeting, two addresses were delivered, one by Mrs. H. J. Joseph, founder and ex-president of the Infants' Aid Society of Chicago, who acquainted the lodge with the work of the society and particularly with its efforts to come to the rescue of Jewish infants and Jewish mothers in the war-stricken countries abroad.

Rabbi Leon Fram, who recently came to Chicago from Portsmouth, Ohio, addressed the lodge on the subject "The Philo Semites" or "The non-Jewish Friends of the Jew." Both addresses were received with marked approval and at their conclusion a rising vote of thanks was extended to the speakers.

DANVILLE LODGE, DANVILLE, ILL.

An unusually well attended meeting of Danville Lodge, No. 568, of Danville, Ill., was held Sunday, October 31. More than fifty members of the lodge were present at the meeting and at the social gathering a like number of ladies was also in attendance.

The meeting was held in the Temple which is a most fitting place for the holding of the meetings. The officers of the lodge are all young men interested in the work and well qualified to carry it on.

A class of twenty candidates was presented for initiation. Brothers Harry Okin and Joseph A. Golde, of Chicago, as representatives of the Grand Lodge, officiated as the degree team in the initiation.

Addresses were delivered by the visiting brothers from Chicago, both dwelling upon the necessity of increasing and strengthening the membership of the Order.

DISTRICT No. 1.

As a result of the membership campaign in honor of Mr. Adolf Kraus, President of the Order, which was held in the early part of the year, prizes have been awarded to the following lodges of the District: First prize, Toronto Lodge, No. 836; second prize, Amos Lodge, No. 121; second prize, Montefiore Lodge, No. 70; third prize, Springfield Lodge, No. 684; third prize, Brooklyn Lodge, No. 753; third prize, Ararat Lodge, No. 13; third prize, Abraham Lodge, No. 89.

The relative standing of the lodges to date having a membership of over 200 is as follows:

Honor Roll.

1.	Horeb Lodge	886
2.	Toronto	492
3.	Amos	485
4.	Montefiore	477
5.	Manhattan-Washington	461
6.	Springfield	334
7.	Ararat	254
8.	Worcester	239
9.	Brooklyn	229
10.	Jordan	201

From time to time the Honor Roll, which will be read at various meetings, will be issued, showing the standing of the lodges in this class. It will be interesting to note the gains made.

Two important meetings were held in the city of New York, one under the auspices of the General Committee of the District Grand Lodge, on October 30, and one participated in by the Presidents of the lodges of the Order in the metropolitan district, in order to bring home to them the need for funds for the Anti-Defamation League.

Both meetings were unusually well attended.

ADOLF KRAUS LODGE, CHICAGO.

At a meeting held by Adolf Kraus Lodge, No. 72, on October 25, the lodge had as its speaker the Director of Intellectual Advancement of the District, Brother Rabbi Samuel S. Cohon of Chicago whose address outlined a course of intellectual advancement work for the coming year.

The lodge unanimously adopted a resolution instructing its Intellectual Advancement Committee to carry out a program as outlined by the Director.

A class of candidates was initiated and much enthusiasm was shown at the meeting. The officers presented a report of a series of interesting and entertaining meetings to be held during the coming months.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE, No. 7, PROPOSES TO ERECT OLD FOLKS' HOME.

A Committee on Old Folks' Home, appointed at the last convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 7, held at Birmingham, Ala., met recently at Memphis for the purpose of arranging plans through which the building of an Old Folks' Home may become an established fact. During the month of January, 1921, there will be launched by the Grand Lodge a campaign for the raising of funds for this purpose. The Home will be located in the city of Memphis at the entrance to Overton Park, with a capacity to begin with of fifty rooms. It is the purpose of the committee to raise $500,000 and speakers will be sent throughout the district who will place before the various communities the need for such an institution and all details in connection with the matter.

DISTRICT No. 6.

At the November meeting of Emes Lodge, No. 67, Springfield, Illinois, held on November 10, 1920, initiation of a class of candidates took place. At the close of the meeting a smoker was held, during which refreshments were served and an entertainment program was carried out.

Emes Lodge has, through its Intellectual Advancement Committee, arranged to have interesting meetings during the present season, so that there will be something doing at each and every meeting of the lodge.

The membership drive under the auspices of the lodge is still on and new members are being secured at every meeting.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

On Monday evening, October 8, a well attended meeting of Springfield Lodge, No. 684, of Springfield, Mass., was held. A large class of candidates was initiated by the Springfield degree team, which boasts of being the best one in the district. Springfield degree team was presented with a loving cup which it won last February at the convention, upon having the best degree team in the district for the year. Presentation was made by Brother Jos. H. Ullman, of New Haven, Conn., Past President of the District Grand Lodge.

Refreshments and smokes were served, and a merry time was enjoyed by all who attended.

During the evening, a photograph was taken of the entire membership and it is intended to publish the picture in the Jewish Advocate and in the local press.

MEMORIAL SERVICE BY MINNESOTA LODGE, ST. PAUL.

The first annual Memorial Service for members of the Order who died while in active war service and such others who had helped the Jewish cause was held Monday evening, October 11, 1920, under the auspices of Minnesota Lodge, No 157, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Mr. Gustavus Loevinger paid tribute to the memory of late Mr. Jacob H. Schiff for his efforts in behalf of the Jewish people in various countries.

Mr. Milton P. Firestone told of the service given by Colonel Harry Cutler who died on his way to France to care for the graves of Jews who had made the supreme sacrifice.

Rabbi Phillip Kleinman recounted the incidents which led to the death of Dr. Israel Fridlander and Dr. Irving Cantor, who lost their lives in Russia while on their mission to aid the Jewish people.

The services were concluded by a rendition of "El Mole Rachamim" by Cantor Eli Kreidberg.

PROGRESSIVE LODGE, NEW YORK.

A regular meeting of Progressive Lodge, No. 841, of New York City, was held on October 26, 1920, at which a number of important matters were brought before the lodge for action.

A class of fifteen candidates was initiated by the degree team of Brooklyn Lodge, No. 753.

The Entertainment Committee of the lodge arranged for the serving of refreshments and the program of vaudeville acts at the close of the meeting.

Under the auspices of the lodge, a dance was held on election night, Tuesday, November 2, during which election returns were received by special wire. This affair was open to the members and their families.

OFFICIAL TOUR OF PRESIDENT WESTHEIMER.

Brother S. J. Westheimer, President of District No. 7, is touring the district paying official visits to the lodges. Sunday, October 10, he attended a meeting in Memphis on the matter of establishing a B'nai B'rith Old Folks' Home.

Mr. Westheimer has on his itinerary the cities of Waco, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, Laredo, San Antonio and Corpus Christi, where he will conduct membership campaign.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, of Youngstown, Ohio, observed B'nai B'rith Day on Sunday, October 17. The largest attendance in the history of the lodge listened to the extraordinary musicale and program.

Addresses were delivered by President J. J. [illegible], Vice-President Emanuel [illegible], Jos. Friedman and Alfred A. Benesch, member of the General Committee of Cleveland, who was the guest of honor at that occasion.

SAAR SHOLEM LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Saar Sholem Lodge, No. 154, of Pittsburgh, Pa., had its date and plans arranged for the holding of a dinner dance on the evening of October 28, but when it learned that the Council of Jewish Women had made arrangements for a similar affair on the same day, Saar Sholem Lodge postponed its dinner dance one week later, November 4, 1920, at Hotel Chatham, so as not to conflict with the Council of Jewish Women affair.

ABR. LIPPMAN LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

The meeting place and club rooms of Abr. Lippman Lodge, No. 672, of Pittsburgh, Pa., have recently been decorated and renovated, making the rooms delightfully attractive.

The lodge will in the near future announce details for an entertainment to be given for the members, their families and friends. Steps are also being arranged for other social affairs to be held by the lodge during the coming winter season.

PONTIAC, MICH.

A well-attended meeting of Pontiac Lodge, No. 850, of Pontiac, Mich., was held on October 13, 1920. A class of twenty-two candidates was initiated by the degree team of Pisgah Lodge, of Detroit, Mich. Brothers Ben Ginsberg, S. D. Rosenzweig and M. Garvett of Pisgah Lodge, Grand Lodge officers, attended the meeting and addressed the lodge.

DANVILLE, ILLINOIS.

At a well attended meeting of Danville Lodge, No. 568, held October 6, the officers for the ensuing term were installed. The lodge resolved to launch a membership campaign and also institute a drive for funds for the Anti-Defamation League.

DES MOINES LODGE, DES MOINES, IOWA.

Des Moines Lodge, No. 330, of Des Moines, Iowa, at its last meeting appointed a committee to arrange for a campaign for new members to be initiated in December and the lodge hopes to add about one hundred members to its membership from this campaign.

B'NAI B'RITH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

The Ladies' Committee of the B'nai B'rith of San Francisco gave a whist on Wednesday evening, September 29, at the B'nai B'rith hall.

A pleasant surprise in the form of a playlet was successfully carried out by the Columbia Auxiliary of the B'nai B'rith at the B'nai B'rith hall on October 27.

SPOKANE LODGE, SPOKANE, WASH.

The regular bimonthly business meeting of Abraham Geiger Lodge of Spokane was held on October 7. Dr. Simonds of the Unitarian Church addressed the meeting upon, "What Unitarianism Stands For." Mr. Samuel Edelstein read the current events of Jewish activities. After the business session, refreshments were served.

DISTRICT No. 1.

A petition signed by prominent Jews of Lowell, Mass., has been presented to District Grand Lodge, No. 1, for a charter for a lodge of the Order to be instituted in that city. The General Committee has granted petition and a new lodge will soon be instituted.

DISTRICT No. 4.

Mr. L. M. Mendelsohn, of Fresno, Calif., President of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, has completed his tour of the B'nai B'rith circuit of thirty-seven cities. He was honored with a magnificent reception at Stockton, Calif.

PAN-GERMANS HOLD CONFERENCE.

Berlin (J. C. B. Service).—A Frankfurt dispatch brings details of a conference of Pan-Germans from Germany, Switzerland, Austria-Hungary, Alsace-Lorraine and Czecho-Slovakia, which is at present being held there. At the conference it became known that the Society of German Knights will henceforth admit no member who is married to a Jewess and that all members at present in the organization who are proven to be of Jewish extraction will be expelled. One of the very first acts of the conference was to proclaim its adherence to the Kaiser.

VIENNA UNIVERSITY NOW ADMITS ONLY 10 PER CENT JEWS.

Paris (J. C. B. Service).—According to a report received here from the Austrian Capital, the Vienna University will in future admit only 10 per cent foreign students. It is understood that under "foreign" Jewish students are chiefly meant.

METHODS AND RULES UNDER WHICH IMMIGRANTS ARE ADMITTED TO THE UNITED STATES.

In response to inquiries concerning the methods under which immigrants are admitted to the United States, the following information and description of conditions at Ellis Island, through which almost ninety per cent of the immigration passes, will be of use and benefit to prospective immigrants:

Every alien must first secure a passport from his own government, which must then be vised by the United States Consul nearest his place of residence, and again vised by the United States Consul at the port of embarkation. The total cost of this vise is $10.00; it does not guarantee that the alien will be admitted. There are more than thirty causes which may disbar a person from admittance, and they cover medical, physical, intellectual, moral, industrial, economic, and educational qualifications.

On reaching the pier, cabin passengers are examined immediately, and steerage immigrants are taken to Ellis Island. The mental and medical examination of immigrants is conducted by officers of the United States Public Health Service. They examine for loathsome and dangerous diseases, or for any disease or physical disability which may in any way affect the immigrant's ability to earn a living, and for possible cases of insanity, idiocy, and imbecility. They report all such cases to the immigration officials for action. Immigrants suffering from temporary illness are assigned to the Ellis Island hospitals for treatment.

After the medical and mental examination, the immigrants appear before an immigration inspector, who has before him a manifest record with the following facts about each immigrant: Name, age, occupation, destination, sex, whether married or single, nationality, last place of residence, final destination, to whom the immigrant is going, whether he has ticket to destination, how much money he has, whether he can read and write, the address of his nearest relative abroad, and his personal description. As each immigrant comes up, he shows what money he has, answers a few questions, and is then asked to read about 40 words printed in his own language, or dialect. From this literacy test are exempt: the father or grandfather if over 55 years of age, the wife, unmarried or widowed daughter of any resident of the United States, or any alien who can prove to the satisfaction of the Immigration Department that he is seeking admission to this country to escape religious persecution. Also an alien who has lived in this country for five years and returns from a visit abroad within six months does not have to pass the literacy test.

The law provides that every alien is to be proved "Clearly and beyond a doubt" entitled to land. When any case is doubtful, the immigrant is detained for further inspection and the case is referred to a Board of Special Inquiry, made up of three immigrant inspectors appointed by the local Commissioner of Immigration. If the verdict is unfavorable, the immigrant has the privilege of appeal to the Secretary of Labor, either individually or through a relative, friend or society. The Secretary's decision is final.

Principal Classes of Aliens Excluded from the United States.

Idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons and epileptics.

Insane persons, and persons who have had one or more attacks of insanity.

Persons of constitutional psychopathic inferiority.

Persons with chronic alcoholism.

Paupers. (In determining whether or not an immigrant is a pauper or likely to become a public charge, the immigration authorities consider among other matters his occupation, including his physical ability to pursue it and his mental aptitude therefor, where relevant, the number of persons either here or abroad who may be dependent upon him for support, his chances of securing and holding employment, and the amount of money in his possession.)

Professional beggars and vagrants.

Persons afflicted with tuberculosis in any form or with a loathsome or dangerous disease.

Persons certified by the examining surgeon as being mentally or physically defective, such physical defect being of a nature which may affect the ability of the alien to earn a living.

Persons who have been convicted of, or admit having committed, a felony o other crime of misdemeanor, involvin moral turpitude.

Polygamists, or persons who pract polygamy or believe in or advocate th practice of polygamy.

Anarchists and similar classes.

Prostitutes, or persons coming into th United States for the purpose of prost tution, or any other immoral purpos

Persons who are supported by or recei in whole or in part the proceeds of prost tution.

Contract laborers. Aliens who hav been induced, assisted, encouraged o solicited to migrate to this country b offer or promises of employment, wheth such offers or promises are true or fals or in consequence of agreements, ora written or printed, express or implie to perform labor in this country, of an kind, skilled or unskilled. Skilled lab may be imported with the permission the Secretary of Labor if labor of suc kind cannot be found in this country.

Persons who come in consequence advertisements for laborers, printed, pu lished or distributed in a foreign countr

Persons likely to become a public charg

Persons who have been deported und any of the provisions of the immigra act, and who may again seek admissi within one year from the date of su deportation.

Persons whose ticket or passage is pa for by a corporation, society, municipa ty, or foreign government, either direct or indirectly.

Persons whose ticket or passage is pa for with the money of another, or who a assisted by others to come, unless it affirmatively and satisfactorily shown th such persons do not belong to one of t foregoing excluded classes.

Stowaways.

All children under sixteen years of ag unaccompanied by or not coming to o or both parents.

Persons coming from the prescrib zone of the eastern hemisphere.

UKRAINIAN REFUGEES DROWNE

Czernowitz (J. C. B. Service).—Repo received here show that tragic conditi prevail at the Roumanian-Ukrainian b der. Hundreds of Jewish refugees flee from Ukrainia try to get across border during the night and are eit shot or drowned by the frontier gua who have recently been doubled. So days ago, Mrs. Obidianik, together w a son and daughter and a Miss Ehrli eighteen years old, were thrown into Dniester river while attempting to across the border. The victims ca from Berditchev and hoped to re Palestine.

CURRENT EVENTS.

(Continued from page 5.)

quite correct as evidence that no seri s inconvenience is caused in the scho s by excusing the Jewish teachers. At e same time it would appear that teach s who feel that for the sake of their relig n they have to absent themselves fr m their posts, ought to be willing to sacri e the comparatively small sum of a da s salary.

The Yiddish press reports the death of Dr. Joseph Chasanowitz of Bialystok. A similar report was published five years ago which proved unfounded. Dr. Chasanowitz was quite advanced in years and is a most notable character in the Zionist movement. He made it the task of his life to establish a library in Jerusalem which should contain all books of Jewish interest. He succeeded indeed in gathering a most remarkable collection, devoting to his ideal all the energy of which his enthusiasm was capable and the not too abundant leisure which a busy practitioner has.

Leopold Hilsner, the victim of an anti-Semitic intrigue in Bohemia, has been heard from again. The poor fellow who spent eighteen years in the penitentiary for a supposed ritual murder of which he was entirely innocent, is now living in Vienna, and supported by charity. A film producer thought his story would make an interesting subject for the movies and engaged him to play, presenting his case. The government soon prohibited the production and the venture prov financial failure. He sued for one hundred thousand crowns, which after all not seem extravagant if we reduce it to the present value of three hundred American dollars, and the matter is still pending. The poor fellow who is mentally defe is certainly in ill luck.

296.05
BN
R.R.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS
BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

lication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post-office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

ol. XIII DECEMBER, 1920 No. 4

JAN -1 1921

Henry Ford—A Condemnation

A Discourse by Rabbi Jos. Krauskopf, D. D., at Temple Keneseth Israel, Philadelphia, November 14, 1920

(Delivered at the request of the Anti-Defamation League of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, District Number Three)

Cobbler Who Did Not Stick to His Last.

APELLES, the most celebrated of the painters of ancient Greece, was in the habit, upon completing a picture of his, to exhibit it in public, and to conceal himself behind it, to hear whatever comments were made respecting it. On one ccasion he heard a cobbler calling attention to a mistake the artist had made n one of the shoes of one of the characters n the canvas, which mistake Apelles forthwith corrected. Flattered by seeing the rtist accepting his criticism, the cobbler ndertook to criticize other parts of the painting, to which the artist remarked: "It is not for a cobbler to criticize aught else but a shoe."

Ford Likened to Cobbler.

What Apelles said to the shoemaker that we would say to Henry Ford, who has recently floundered into journalism, and has undertaken to malign and to besmirch the character of the Jewish people of our and other lands. In a periodical of his, called The Dearborn Independent, he has published a series of articles so virulently anti-Semitic that the like of them has probably never before been published in our land—articles so outrageously malicious and slanderous—that, had they appeared in any other periodical, and been published by any other man than Mr. Ford, they would have given occasion for very serious concern on the part of the Jewish people. Fortunately for us, Mr. Henry Ford has, upon several occasions, within recent years, given exhibitions of such monumental ignorance, that he has forfeited the right of having serious consideration attached by thinking people to anything he may say or publish.

Ford Should Stick to His Motor.

The world gladly and justly credits him with being one of the foremost manufacturers, a maker of a motor than which there is none more efficient for its price; a creator, within a comparatively short time, of one of the greatest enterprises and one that has yielded him a vast fortune. Farther than this the world's admiration of him does not extend. So colossal was the ignorance he displayed on the witness stand, during the trial of the libel suit he had instituted against The Chicago Tribune, where, for instance, he spoke of Benedict Arnold, the arch-traitor, as one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, that the only decent attitude we can assume toward him is that which Apelles assumed toward the cobbler, the only thing we can say in all fairness to him is this: "Henry Ford, stick to your motor. That is about the only thing you know, and know well. When you start tinkering on other things of which you are, and ever will be, hopelessly ignorant, you only succeed in making a sorry spectacle of yourself."

Ford at One Time Taken Seriously.

There was a time when numbers of people, including myself, were inclined to take him seriously. It was when, at the height of the world-war, he proposed acting as a peace-maker between the warring nations. But when they saw him taking a shipful of dreamers and visionaries to Europe to pit them against great statesmen and skilled diplomats and powerful field-marshals, when they saw and heard how these emissaries made a laughing-stock of themselves and of our country, they were at a loss what to think of Ford, whether to think him a madman or a simpleton or a shrewd self-advertiser. There were then, as there are now, many who believed him to be the three in one.

Roosevelt's Opinion of Ford.

We have a statement concerning him by the late Theodore Roosevelt, told in a recently published book entitled "Talks with T. R.", that reads as follows:

"Ford is a pretty good man for making cheap automobiles. He makes a good car for the money, and in his sphere has done a very good work; but he won't stick to his sphere. He would instruct Cosmos. It would not be bad if he knew anything about matters outside of automobiles that he attempts to manage and direct. He does not seem to have the faintest idea of these matters. He knows nothing of world politics, yet he sets himself up, with the aid of an army of press-agents, as the man who must teach everybody. He has no conception of what we mean by Americanism, and has an extreme idea of the importance and power of his money. He is ignorant, yet because he has been so successful in motors, many, many persons, hardly as ignorant as himself, think him wise in all things, and allow him to influence their views. Henry, like Barnum, has been a great advertiser. I do not say his peace-ship was an advertising dodge—I will give him credit for being sincere there, but I won't say that he has not been given credit for a lot of philanthropy that was merely good business. Other of his schemes given much publicity are imaginings that in others would attract no attention.

"He and his son Edsoll make a precious pair. The exempting of that young man was a glaring bit of injustice. Had I had my way, he'd have gone into the trenches, and taken his chances, just as any poor man's son had to go and take his chances. Instead he is safe in Detroit. Cases like his make fine material for demagogues who try to tell the ignorant this is a government for the rich man."

Regarded Now a Self-Advertiser.

As said before, from having, like Roosevelt, believed in Ford's sincerity when hearing of his sending a Peace-Ark to Europe, for the purpose of getting the war-lords to agree upon terms of peace, I came later to doubt his sincerity, to regard the widely-trumpeted affair as a shrewd advertising scheme; and I am sure, had Roosevelt been alive today, and had he who, time and again, had expressed himself in highest terms of the excellence of the Jewish people, read the defamatory articles which Ford has seen fit to publish against them, he would have concluded as I have, that there never could have been even a trace of real and sincere love of peace in the heart of Ford. No man can wish to see peace and good-will established on earth who has it in his heart, at a time of world-wide unrest, and intense racial prejudices, and national hatreds, to publish against a people that has its dwelling place in all lands, and among all nationalities, articles so heinously false that they cannot but arouse in the ignorant, credulous, bigoted, an antagonism so intense that it may inflame some of the ignorant into assaults, outrages, massacres, like unto those that followed upon like publications in Russia, Germany, and Austria.

Ignorant of Harm He Is Doing.

I do not for one moment believe that Henry Ford had any such evil intentions when he entered upon the publication of his anti-Jewish articles; but I do believe that he is too ignorant to understand the malignant power of calumny, the inflammatory nature of religious or racial or national defamation, the readiness of the unthinking, excitable, fanatical mob to believe implicitly what is dished up to them with an air of authority, and under the pretense of shielding their religion and freedom from destruction. I believe that Henry Ford treated the whole affair as a matter of business. As an expert advertiser he knew that these articles could not but arouse intense indignation, loud outcries, plentiful rejoinders, on the part of Jews and some non-Jews—as has really happened—which publicity would gratify as much his lust for fame as his greed for gain.

May Incite Assault Against Jews.

Suspecting such a motive as that, I refused, at first, to heed the many requests that came to me that I answer the outrageous charges raised against the Jews in the Ford publications. I believed in treating them with the silent contempt they deserved. I refused to add material for the lime-light in which the vain-glorious and colossally ignorant Mr. Ford desired to pose as a savior of the American people; but, seeing these articles given ever wider and wider circulation, hearing of vast numbers of them being sent to the agents of the Ford machines with instructions that they be given wide distribution, seeing these articles republished in pamphlet-form, and spread broadcast throughout the land, I have come to the conclusion that Roosevelt was right when he said that "many, many people, hardly as ignorant as Ford, think him wise in all things, and allow him to influence their views". I have come to the conclusion that, since many people entertain all sorts of prejudices against the Jew, and still others, lacking information respecting the crass ignorance and inordinate vanity of Henry Ford, may believe what they read in his publication against the Jew, it will probably be the wiser course to acquaint the public with the nature of these articles, and with the how and why they came into existence.

Charges Jews With Seeking to Overthrow Governments and Christianity.

Before proceeding, however, it will be well for those of you who have not read these articles to have some conception of the villainous libels against the Jews they purport to spread. They charge them with having organized, in a secret conclave, of which even but very few of their own people have knowledge, an international conspiracy, that has for its object the suppression of Christianity, and the overthrow of all governments. They propose effecting this end by pitting Christian nations against each other, thereby causing the slaughter of one another. They propose conquering by obtaining mastery over the commerce and capital of the world. They propose to force the world to their mode of thinking and acting by seizing the press of the world. They propose weakening the nations of the earth by dividing them into separate, hostile bodies, while they constitute themselves into an international organization extending to the ends of the earth. These secret activities of the Jews constitute, according to these Ford articles, the world's greatest problem, and, unless the world arouses itself in time, unless it faces this conspiracy and overthrows it, itself will be overthrown by it.

Specimens of Ford's Charges Against Jews.

This is the gist of the charges that stretch over some nine or ten articles, each filled with a jumble of praise and condemnation, of fact and fiction, of truth and lies, shrewdly designed by the writer to give himself the semblance of fairness, when, in reality, there has probably never before appeared in American journalism anything as rabidly and viciously hostile to the Jew as these very articles, quite equalling, if not exceeding, the worst that has ever been published against him in Russia and Germany.

Listen to a few choice morsels of the hundreds of accusations that are brought against the Jew of our and other lands. He is charged with being the creator of Bolshevism, the destroyer of the German Empire, the real ruler of England by means of the power of gold. He is charged with monopolizing the commerce and finance of the United States, with knowing more of what is transpiring in Europe than do the European governments themselves, with possessing the power of commanding war or peace, order or chaos, with having controlled the Versailles Peace Conference. He is charged with being the most active in all agencies that are destructive of Christianity, such as Bolshevism and Socialism, with entertaining more downright bitterness of religious prejudice against the Christian than was ever entertained by Christian against Jew. We are told that a million Jews will land in this country this year, and that every one of them will bring with him his inherited hatred against Christians. We are told that the Jew lacks in patriotism, that he constitutes a nation within the nation, that he flees agriculture, that a list of property owners of New York reveals only at rare intervals a Gentile name, that he refuses to cultivate Gentile friendships because he regards himself a superior people, that all commissaries of Russia are Jews, that Rose Pastor Stokes commands more power than Debs, that the Jew's record in industrial reform is nil. that he controls the sugar and woolen and tobacco industries, that fifty per cent of the meat-packing and sixty per cent of the shoe-making industries are in his hands, and scores of other delectable morsels like unto these are charged against him.

Charges Undeserving of Answer.

I shall not dignify these base accusations with an answer Their palpable falsehood is their best refutation. Had the inventor of them lied less he might have been believed more.

A writer, who permits his hatred of the one he attacks to carry him far beyond the line of even a semblance of truth, stamps himself an unscrupulous perverter of the truth.

A writer, who tells that the Jew conspires to destroy the Gentile people by means of gold, when the Jew is unable to save one-third of his own people who are dying of starvation in Eastern Europe, a writer who says that the Jew cares only for his own, when Jews, like Julius Rosenwald or the late Jacob H. Schiff, give, in every section of our land, frequent demonstration of princely benefactions to Non-Jewish educational and philanthropic institutions, a writer such as that shows himself not only an enemy of the Jew, but also of truth itself.

A writer, who says that almost all of the real estate of New York is owned by Jews, that Kerensky and all the commissars and most of the Bolshevists of Russia are Jews, that Sombart is a pro-Jewish author, that writer might as well have said that the great capitalists and real estate owners, Ford, Morgan, Schwab, Armour, Rockefeller, Vanderbilt, Astor, Gould, and many hundreds of other like them, are all Jews.

A writer, who says that the press of the world is owned by Jews, when, with the exception of three papers, there is not, to my knowledge, another secular paper or periodical in the whole United States that is owned by Jews, nor a single one of all the great dailies or magazines in Europe, excepting one or two in Berlin, Frankfurt and Vienna, a writer who, in the face of these facts, declares the press of the world to be owned by Jews, might, with equal truth, have declared that the Hearst papers of three or four of our great cities, and the Tribune of New York, the Tribune of Chicago, the Ledger of Philadelphia, the Times of London, the Figaro of Paris, are all owned by Jews.

A writer, who says that the Jew shuns agriculture, without saying, at the same time, that for nearly two thousand years, ever since he was driven from his Palestinian home, where he was nothing but a farmer, he was denied, up to recent days, the right to own an inch of soil or to cultivate it, was, on the contrary, condemned by law to dwell in the crowded ghettoes, and to follow the lowest pursuits; a writer who wholly ignores the fact that, at the present time, the Jew is gradually making his way back to his original farming-pursuit, while half of the former Gentile farmers have deserted the farms for the cities; that, for instance, one of the men in charge of the greenhouses of the son of Mr. Ford, is a Jewish graduate of The National Farm School, a non-sectarian institution almost a quarter of a century old, and where two Ford tractors and a Ford truck are hard at work; an institution founded by Jews, almost entirely supported by Jews, four-fifths of whose students are Jews, and whose hundreds of graduates are giving an excellent account of themselves on farms of their own, or on farms of others, or as dairyists, orchardists, florists, horticulturists, stockmen, poultrymen, or as instructors in agricultural colleges; a writer, who fails to take cognizance of these facts, is guilty either of woeful ignorance or of deliberate malice.

A writer, who accuses the Jews of lacking in patriotism at a time when their heroic valor during the recent world-war is still fresh in the memory of the peoples, when every country engaged in the world-war speaks in unstinted praise of the sacrifice of life and limb Jews made in defense of their respective country, of the streams of blood they shed in common with their comrades of other faiths, of the Jews of the allies and of the anti-allies standing arrayed against each other in deadly combat, of the treasure of money and service that were cheerfully offered by them in behalf of their respective country and their respective cause, of the medals conferred upon them for deeds of valor, several of them upon an American-Jewish immigrant lad, Abraham Krotoshinsky by name, now a student at The National Farm School, who, at the risk of his life, volunteered to save, single-handed in the Argonne Forest, Col. Whittlesey's "Lost Battalion", and accomplished this marvellous feat of valor at the cost of being severely wounded, and who, upon his graduation, will find awaiting him a fully equipped farm, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Straus of New York, a writer who, in the face of easily ascertainable facts such as these, charges the Jew with lacking in patriotism, declares himself an unmitigated rogue and [illegible]

Charges Based on Russian Forgery.

We do not for one moment charge Mr. Ford with the authorship of these anti-Jewish articles in his periodical. His own confession of illiteracy would free him from any such suspicion. Both in content and in style they reveal a writer of considerable cleverness, a writer whose knowledge of Jewish and general history, and of world-affairs, is quite extensive, a writer possessing a rare unscrupulousness for perverting facts, for twisting data to suit his evil purpose, for deliberate inventions to bolster up his accusations. Internal evidence goes far to show that the whole slander is a rehash of a fabrication of Russo-Germanic origin. We hear clearly reechoed in it the pronouncements of a one-time secret agent of the former Czar, who styled himself Professor Nilus, and who, about a score of years ago, published what he declared to be "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion", minutes of the secret international meetings of the Elders of Israel, telling of their conspiracy to conquer the world, overthrow Christianity, and make one of their own King of the Earth, which publication a number of experts proved to be a forgery that was as bold as it was bald, a forgery as vile as was that of the contemptible Esterhazy against Captain Alfred Dreyfus.

Led to Outrages in Russia and Germany.

This infamous forgery led to numerous massacres in Russia, and to shameless anti-Semitic persecutions in Germany. To it the Russian reactionaries charged the people's demand for a Constitution and a Doume and the Black Hundred made it the reason for their Kishineff and other pogroms. On account of it Jews are held responsible for the rise of Bolshivism, and extracts from it were circulated by the Czarists in the armies of Denikin and Kolshak, which incited to the shedding of much innocent Jewish blood.

Republished in England and in the United States.

Next, we hear of the republication of these Protocols in England, under the title of The Jewish Peril. Lastly, we have liberal excerpts dished up to us in the columns of Ford's Dearborn Independent.

Motive Underlying Charges.

It is not difficult to account for the republication in England and in the United States of the infamous forgery, of Protocols, or minutes, of an international conclave that never took place, of Elders of Zion, who never existed, of activities resolved upon that were never as much as dreamed of. As a result of the recent war, the world has, to a considerable extent, become democratic. Czars and emperors, kings and princes, have been brought low, and people from the ranks have been raised to positions of trust and leadership. Among these are a number of Jews, their elevation, despite deep-rooted prejudice against them, having been due, in such a country as Germany, for instance, to intellectual, moral, and patriotic fitness. Already embittered by their own fall, the Czarists, militarists, junkers, and other reactionaries, resent especially their being placed under the authority of Jews, and are determined to rid themselves of it. Frequent use has acquainted them but too well with the weapon that is most baneful to Jews, the weapon of calumny, forgery, malicious invention. And this weapon they have been using without stint. With it they have caused a welter of Jewish blood in Russia, Poland, Hungary. With it they have started anew in Germany anti-Semitic persecutions exceeding those that raged in that land a quarter of a century ago. They have introduced it in England, where it has already found a number of misguided disciples.

How Ford's Co-operation Was Probably Won.

They have brought it at last to the United States. Looking for a paper or a periodical in which to carry on their nefarious propaganda, and for large funds to meet the expense, they naturally thought of the multi-millionaire, Henry Ford and his periodical, and his former effort at ending war, and saving the world, by means of a Peace-Ark. And they thought well. Their appeal to his credulity and vain-glory, their assuring him that, by publishing to the world the conspiracy of the Jews against the governments of the earth, and against Christianity, he will save both from being overthrown by the arch-enemy of mankind, manifestly met with the desired result. He obviously has placed his paper and his purse at their disposal. Thanks to his liberality, the governments of the earth will not be overthrown, nor will Christianity be annihilated by the wicked and conspiring Jews. They will be lowered to the dregs of the earth, while he will be elevated to the stars as the savior of the world.

Ford Doomed to Disappointment.

If such was Ford's expectation, he is doomed to disappointment. The average American is far from being as dense and credulous and vain-glorious as he. Given the choice between the characterization of the Jew by Dr. Purvis, a Methodist clergyman of this city, and that given of him in the columns of The Dearborn Independent, it is not hard to tell which of the two the general run of American people will select. The Jew is not a stranger to the American people. He was one of the discoverers of this continent, one of the first who set foot upon it. He arrived upon Manhattan Island but thirty-five years after the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth Rock. He fought in the American Revolution, in the Mexican and Civil Wars. He furnished a larger percentage of men to the American contingent of the world-war than his numbers required. His industry, thrift, initiative, brain, and brawn, helped greatly in building up the prosperity of our land.

His usefulness is far from being exhausted. He has still much work to do; and he will do it. For that, God has chosen him. For that, God has preserved him from enemies far more powerful than Henry Ford. Let Ford ask the ruins of ancient Egypt, Babylonia, Syria, Assyria, Greece, Rome, and they will tell him. The Jew sets up no claim to perfection. He is neither superman nor underman. As Dr. Purvis says: "The Jew has his faults and also his virtues. They are both surprisingly like the Christian's."

Attack on Jews Likely to Prove a Boomerang.

Ford's unprovoked, undeserved attack on the Jews, at a time when a grief-stricken world is busy with healing wounds which the war has struck, with reuniting bonds which malice and hatred have severed, is likely to prove a boomerang. As the hatred of Pharaoh had for its reward a watery grave for the flower of his army, and that of Haman, a gallows, so is the attack of Henry Ford likely to have for its reward the scorn of the peace-loving, clear-thinking, fair-minded, patriotic, loyal, American people.

POLAND'S TREATMENT OF JEWS.

View of Rev. John P. Galvin of Cincinnati.

As I listened to a few talking the other day about America joining in with the Allies in furnishing Poland with men and arms, my mind pictured for me the huge vessels that slipped out of our harbors under cover of darkness, bearing away the sons of mothers who never saw them return, because they had crossed over the border line of death; and my heart ached. I saw those mothers. They were not dim shadows. They were real, and I saw them. The old pride had departed from their eyes, their heads were bowed, and they have forgotten how to smile. A great blight has fallen upon them. They are like a field of wheat beaten into the earth by an unexpected storm.

The gladness of life has gone from them. And as this vision passed before me there arose the question: Is Poland worth the risk of the shipping of our boys across the sea to fight in its defense, and of increasing the number of our broken-hearted mothers? Would anything done by Poland since it was made free by the Allies justify such action? The answer is in the negative. Instead of the leaders and people using themselves and the borrowed millions obtained from the Allies and America for the building up of their home industries, in making a decent and useful nation, they gave themselves up to a savage land lust. They were not satisfied with the allotment made by the Allies. Forgetting that their freedom was a gift, that they never could in a thousand years, have wrought out Poland's right to be termed a nation unaided, they laughed in the faces of the nations to whom they owed their political existence, and, ignoring their commands, went on with their work of land robbery, very lightly, and accused America of being the prime cause of its present precarious condition. Poland knows, just as the rest of the thinking parts of the world knows, that the prime cause of its present danger was its fool's notion that it was strong enough to do with Russia just as it pleased, and that the Allies and America would back it. It had more than one warning from the Allies that they could not and would not help it to carry on a war of aggression. But the Polish ambition laughed at all advice and went on burning and shedding blood until it bumped its head against the stone wall, then it threw up its hands and wailed it was being punished for fighting in defense of the world's freedom. Now if this was the only reason for not sending one of our brave boys across the sea to fight in Poland's defense, that, we think, is sufficient. If left to our decision, not a dollar should be spent for it, not a man should be sent to it. Poland has demonstrated its ignorance of world freedom. For at least twenty years to come it should be placed in charge of some country who can teach it what a free nation means.

It lacks the sense of right, it lacks a well-balanced judgment, and it is carried away from sanity by an uncalled for pride. And in the second place, Poland is unworthy of American aid, in any shape, because the published report of Captain Peter Wright, an English officer, assistant commissioner, shows that the Jews of Poland and the Ukraine have undergone rape, massacre, regardless of age or sex, looting of shops and homes, desecration and destruction of synagogues; that there is not an outrage that can be imagined that the Poles did not inflict on their Jewish countrymen, even to the extent of torture and burning and burying alive.

We were deeply stirred at the Turks' treatment of the Armenians, yet every mistreatment of the Turks has been duplicated by the Poles. Such acts as these demonstrate that the Poles are unfit for self-government, and that they are on a level with savages. They are an insult to the name of Christian. The lower pit might as well call itself heaven. Yes, indeed, a mandate for its government should be given to some civilized country. It's unfit to function alone. And we are fully convinced that as long as Poland remains in spirit as we now find it, self-destruction is its doom. It has the seed of death in it, and nothing but a complete conversion can save it from political, national extinction. The conscience of the world will not permit it to live. For it, no more American mothers' hearts shall be broken; no more widows made; no children left without fathers. Poland with the mark of the cross made on its forehead with fingers dipped in innocent Jewish blood we abhor, we detest; and if we thought that Poland's idea of Christianity is the true Christian idea, we would denounce it and get away from it as soon as possible. The Turkish gospel is the gospel of the sword, while we have been taught that the Christian gospel is the gospel of love, but Poland declares the Turk is right in his mode, but wrong in his language. With the Turk it's the book or death; with the Pole it's the church or death. Not much choice between them. Yet we have a few among us who advocate our lending aid to these Polish barbarians. Left to us, we would say, no, not one cent, not one man. To ask our American boys to fight alongside such brutes would be an insult, and an everlasting crime and stain against our American conception of liberty. America will not disgrace itself or belittle its Constitution by entering into partnership with a people who daily commit murder in the name of Him who taught that His followers should hate no man, and that his kingdom was not to be upheld by the sword. Such is our faith. It's not to be shaken by a few of our un-American Americans; men who look to other countries for their inspiration. Americans, in this case, will follow and be led by the spirit of America. Even as it led our forefathers from the tyranny of England to the setting up of their own, a proper government.

BISHOP OF VILNA APPEALED TO IN BEHALF OF JEWS.

Danzig (J. C. B. Service).—The "Gazetta Warshawski" draws attention to the fact that when the Lithuanian forces replaced the Polish troops in Vilna, Bishop Matulowitch of that city issued an appeal to the Christian community exhorting them to treat the Jews in a spirit of brotherly love. The "Gazetta Warshawski" says this probably accounts for the fact that the Jews at that time showed themselves so unfriendly toward the Poles and destroyed every Polish emblem and every other mark which reminded them of the Polish administration.

National Jewish Organizations Issue Public Statement

THE declaration was decided upon to be published at a conference held recently in New York as an answer to the charge that Bolshevism is part of the conspiracy of Jews and Free Masons to secure world domination.

The following organizations are signatories of the declaration: The American Jewish Committee; The Zionist Organization of America; Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations; The United Synagogues of America; The Provisional Committees of the American Jewish Congress; The Independent Order of B'nai B'rith; The Central Conference of American Rabbis; The Rabbinical Assembly of the Jewish Theological Seminary, and The United Orthodox Jewish Rabbis of America.

The complete address follows:

To Our Fellow Citizens:

During the war, by secret agencies, a document variously called "The Protocols of the Elders of Zion," "The Protocols of the Meetings of the Zionist Men of Wisdom," and "The Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion," was clandestinely circulated, in typewritten form, among public officials and carefully selected civilians, for the purpose of giving rise to the belief that the Jews, in conjunction with Freemasons, had been for centuries engaged in a conspiracy to produce revolution and anarchy, by means of which they hoped to attain the control of the world by the establishment of some sort of despotic rule. Some months ago this document was published in England. More recently it has appeared in print in the United States and thousands of copies have been circulated with an air of mystery among legislators, journalists, clergymen and teachers, members of clubs, and indiscriminately to the general public. The London Morning Post has given out a series of articles as a commentary upon The Protocols, in which the charge of an unholy conspiracy between Jews and Freemasons is elaborated, and Bolshevism is characterized as a movement of, for and by the Jews and is declared to be a fulfilment of The Protocols. These articles, whose authorship is not disclosed, have now appeared in book form under the title "The Cause of World Unrest." During the past six months there have been sent forth weekly in Henry Ford's organ, The Dearborn Independent, attacks of extraordinary virulence upon the Jews. These assaults upon the honor of the Jewish people are all founded on The Protocols and on the discredited literature of Russian and German anti-Semitism, inspired by the minions of autocracy. Parrot-like they repeat the abominable charges that can only appeal to the credulity of a stunted intelligence—charges long since conceded to be unfounded by all fair-minded men. Ford is employing his great wealth in scattering broadcast his fulminations, regardless of consequences.

When the Jews of the United States first learned of these malevolent prints, they deemed it beneath their dignity to take notice of them, because they regarded them as a mere recrudescence of mediaeval bigotry and stupidity showing upon their face their utter worthlessness. These publications have, however, been put in circulation to such an extent that it is believed that the time has come, humiliating though it be to them, for the Jews to make answer to these libels and to the unworthy insinuations and innuendoes that have been whispered against them.

Speaking as representatives of the Jewish people, familiar with the history of Judaism in its various phases and with the movements, past and present, in Jewish life, we say with all solemnity:

(1) The Protocols are a base forgery. There has never been an organization of Jews known as The Elders of Zion, or The Zionist Men of Wisdom, or The Wise Men of Zion, or bearing any other similar name. There has never existed a secret or other Jewish body organized for any purpose such as that implied in The Protocols. The Jewish people have never dreamed of a Jewish dictatorship, of a destruction of religion, of an interference with industrial prosperity, or of an overthrow of civilization. The Jews have never conspired with the Freemasons, or with any other body, for any purpose.

From the time of the destruction of the Temple at Jerusalem by Titus, the Jews have had no political state. For centuries they were forced to wander from land to land, to flee for refuge wherever they might find it against bitter persecution. They were pent up in ghettoes, were deprived of even the shadow of civil or political rights, and were made the objects of every possible form of discrimination. It is little more than fifty years since the Jews of Western Europe became politically emancipated. Until the outbreak of the World War the Jews of Eastern Europe, constituting a majority of all the Jews of the world, were not even permitted to exercise the rights of citizenship in lands where they and their ancestors had dwelt for generations. The great mass of the Jews were hampered in every way in their efforts to earn a livelihood. Far from desiring to govern the world, they were content with the opportunity to live. Numerically they constitute less than one per cent. of the population of the earth; and more than one-half of them are on the verge of starvation. The suggestion that, in their feebleness, they have been planning in secret conclave to seize absolute power and to dominate the ninety-nine per cent. of non-Jews upon the globe is a ridiculous invention than which even madness can conjure nothing more preposterous.

Where is the habitat of these so-called Elders of Zion, by whatever name they may be called? Who are these hidden sages? Whence do they come? What is the nature of their organization? The distributors of The Protocols are silent on that subject. Whence come these pretended Protocols? There have been various versions. One Serge Nilus, of whose identity little is known, a Russian mystic and an ardent supporter of Czarism, claims to have received them in Russia, in 1901, in manuscript form, from a Russian office-holder, who stated that the manuscript had been originally obtained by a lady, whose name is not given, and who, he said, obtained them in a mysterious way. In what language they were written is not stated. Where that manuscript now is does not appear. Nilus asserts that he submitted The Protocols to one of the Russian Grand Dukes, who, after examination, returned them with the despairing message: "Too late." Apparently there was no room for them in the Russian archives, and they suggested no task for the Czar's ubiquitous police to perform. In 1905, Nilus published at Tsarskoje Selo a second edition of a mystical book entitled "The Great in the Little," the first edition having been published in 1901. Into this later edition he incorporated for the first time The Protocols, which he claimed to have had in his possession for four years. In January, 1917, he published another book under the title "It is Near, at the Door," purporting to foretell "the coming of the Anti-Christ and the Kingdom of the Devil on Earth." In this book he announces that he had only then learned authoritatively from Jewish sources (what they were is not explained) that these Protocols were nothing other than a strategic plan for the conquest of the world, of putting it under the yoke of Israel, "the struggler-against-God," a plan worked out by the leaders of the Jewish people during the many centuries of their dispersion, and finally presented to the Council of Elders by the Prince of Exile, Theodor Herzl, at the time of the first Zionist Congress summoned by him at Basle in August, 1897. He declared that the Protocols were signed by the Zionist representatives of the thirty-third degree of initiation; that they were secretly removed from the complete file of Protocols that pertained to the first Zionist Congress; that they were taken from the secret vaults at the main Zionist office, which, it is said, "at present is located in French territory."

The Protocols as published bear no signatures. The identity of the Zionist representatives by whom they are claimed to have been signed is left untold. The location of the main Zionist office and of the secret vaults from which The Protocols were secretly removed remains a secret. It is, however, a matter of history that the first Zionist Congress was publicly held by Jews who came from various parts of Europe for the purpose of considering the misery of their brethren in Eastern Europe and of enabling them to find shelter in the Holy Land. Theodor Herzl was a distinguished journalist, a man of true nobility of character. He presided at the Congress, all of whose deliberations were held in the light of day. The insinuation that there was a thirty-third, or any other, degree of initiation in this organization is merely a malicious effort to bring the Jews into parallelism with the Freemasons and thus to subject them to all the fanciful and fantastic charges that have from time to time been laid at the door of Freemasonry, oblivious of the fact that fifteen Presidents of the United States, including Washington, and many of the leading statesmen of Europe and America, have been members of that Order.

Nilus and his associates belonged to the Russian bureaucracy. In 1905, through the Black Hundreds, that body sought in every way to crush the Jews and to prevent the liberalization of the government. The time was propitious for the perpetration of a political forgery by a government that habitually resorted to the employment of agents provocateurs, a government which only a few years later, against the protest of the enlightened clergy of the world, ineffectually sought to convict Mendel Beilis on the charge of ritual murder. It is significant that one of his prosecutors has been active in distributing manuscript copies of The Protocols throughout the United States.

Irrespective of this history, bristling with suspicion, an analysis of The Protocols shows that on their face they are a fabrication and that they must have emanated from the bitter opponents of democracy. They are replete with cynical references to the French Revolution, and to the conceptions of liberty, equality and fraternity. They uphold privilege and autocracy. They belittle education. They condemn religious liberty. They assert that political freedom is an idea and not a fact, and that the doctrine that a government is nothing but a steward of the people is a mere phrase. These are the very doctrines that one would expect from the protagonists of autocracy. Nothing can be more foreign to Jewish thought and aspiration than these brutal theories of reaction. That the Jews, whose very life has been a prayer for the blessings of liberty and equality, should hold them in contempt is unthinkable.

The document throughout is farcical in its absurdities. In the Russian original there is a passage, significantly omitted from the translation, to the effect that the English are the descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel and the British Government is violently attacked for its liberalism. If climax there be to all this folly, it lies in the idea set forth in The Protocols that "the world ruler is to spring from the dynastic roots of King David" and that "the King of Israel will become the real Pope of the Universe and the Patriarch of the International Church," whatever that may mean.

It is needless, however, to elaborate, when one considers that the editor of the London Morning Post, in his introduction to "The Causes of the World Unrest," himself doubts the genuineness of The Protocols, and that the anonymous author of that book, after using them as his text, is unable to give them any higher certificate than that they may or may not be genuine. Indeed, he goes so far as to say:

"We have said that this document flashes a blaze of light, and so it does, but whether this document is genuine or not, whether the blaze of light is true or false, can only be judged by internal evidence and probabilities. We may say at once that Nilus advances nothing in the nature of real evidence to prove the document, and that his account of how it came into his hands consists of assertion only, without evidence to support it".

And yet a document, thus discredited by its sponsors, is made the basis of an indictment against an entire people.

(2) The contention that the genuineness of The Protocols is established by the outbreak of Bolshevism in Russia twelve years after their publication, and that Bolshevism is a Jewish movement, is absurd in theory and absolutely untrue in fact. As well might it be said that a forged deed is genuine because twenty years after its date a relative of the person whose name is forged is falsely charged with being a disturber of the peace.

To say that the Jews are responsible for Bolshevism is a deliberate falsehood. The originators of Bolshevism were exclusively non-Jews. While it is true that there are Jews among the Bolshevists, notably Trotsky, they represent a small fraction of the Jews and of the followers of Bolshevism. Lenine, who belonged to the Russian aristocracy and has not a drop of Jewish blood in his veins, was the creator as he has been the motive power of the Soviets. Tehicherin, who has conducted their foreign affairs, Bucharin, Krassin and Kalinin, all non-Jews, are with Lenine, the brains of the Communist Party.

The Bolshevist cabinet, known as the People's Commissars, consists of twenty members, of whom Trotsky and Sverdlov are the only Jews, and they are Jews merely by birth. Of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, including Trotsky, there are four Jews out of thirteen. The so-called Extraordinary Commission, whose function it is to suppress opposition to the Bolshevist regime from within, is directed by a triumvirate consisting of a Pole and two Letts, none of whom is of Jewish origin. Although Trotsky is the head of the War Department, his General Staff is composed exclusively of non-Jews.

In "The Cause of World Unrest" a list of fifty names is given, most of whom are classified as Jews and Bolshevists, in order to establish the thesis that "nearly all of the Bolshevist leaders are Jews". An examination of the list shows that ten of the Jews included in the list are the leaders of the anti-Bolshevist movement in Russia; that a number of those who are classified in the list as Jews are not Jews at all; that a large proportion of those classified as Jews are men who are so obscure and hold positions so inconspicuous that whether or nor they are Jews is not only uncertain but unimportant. They are certainly not leaders.

On the other hand, the leaders of the Mensheviki, who are the sworn foes of Bolshevism, are to a large extent Jews. Among the chiefs of the Constitutional Democratic Party of Russia, who are strongly opposed to the Soviets, are Vinaver, Sliosberg, Pasmanik, Kaminka, Landau and Friedman, all prominent Jews. Among the leaders of the Peoples Socialist, the Socialist Revolutionary, and the Menshevik section of the Social Democratic parties, bitter opponents of the Bolsheviks, are a large number of Jews. The leading anti-Bolshevist newspapers, which of necessity are published outside of Russia, have Jews upon their editorial staffs. An overwhelming majority of Russian Jews have been ruined by the coercive measures of the Soviets. They have submitted to the confiscation of their property and are undergoing unspeakable hardships. The Orthodox Jews, whose numbers preponderate, remaining loyal to the faith of their fathers, regard the Bolsheviks as the enemies of all religion, and, therefore, hold the doctrines of Bolshevism in abhorrence. With comparatively few exceptions the Jews are looked upon by the Bolsheviks as belonging to the hated bourgeoise and as favoring capitalism. The Zionists, who constitute a numerous and important element of the Jews of Russia, have been denounced by the Soviets as counter-revolutionary, and many of them have been cast into prison and threatened with death—Zionists, we repeat, who are the followers of Herzl.

If the Jews are to be condemned because of a Trotsky, who has never in the slightest degree concerned himself with Judaism or the welfare of the Jews, then there is not a people that has ever lived that might not with equal right be condemned because in its membership there were men who are alleged to have advocated hateful doctrines. The Jew has traditionally stood for religion, law, order, the family, and the right of property. It is, therefore, the height of cruelty to charge him with responsibility for Bolshevism, when its doctrines, should they prevail, would inevitably lead to the destruction of Judaism. It is especially a brutal charge when one considers all that the Jew has suffered from the oppressive and discriminatory laws of Russian autocracy and from its effort to suppress every aspiration that the Jew had for freedom. It is a great tribute to the patriotism of the Russian Jews that, in spite of the indignities that they had to undergo, hundreds of thousands of them fought under the banner of the Czar, loyally and gallantly, and in

(Continued on page 16.)

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

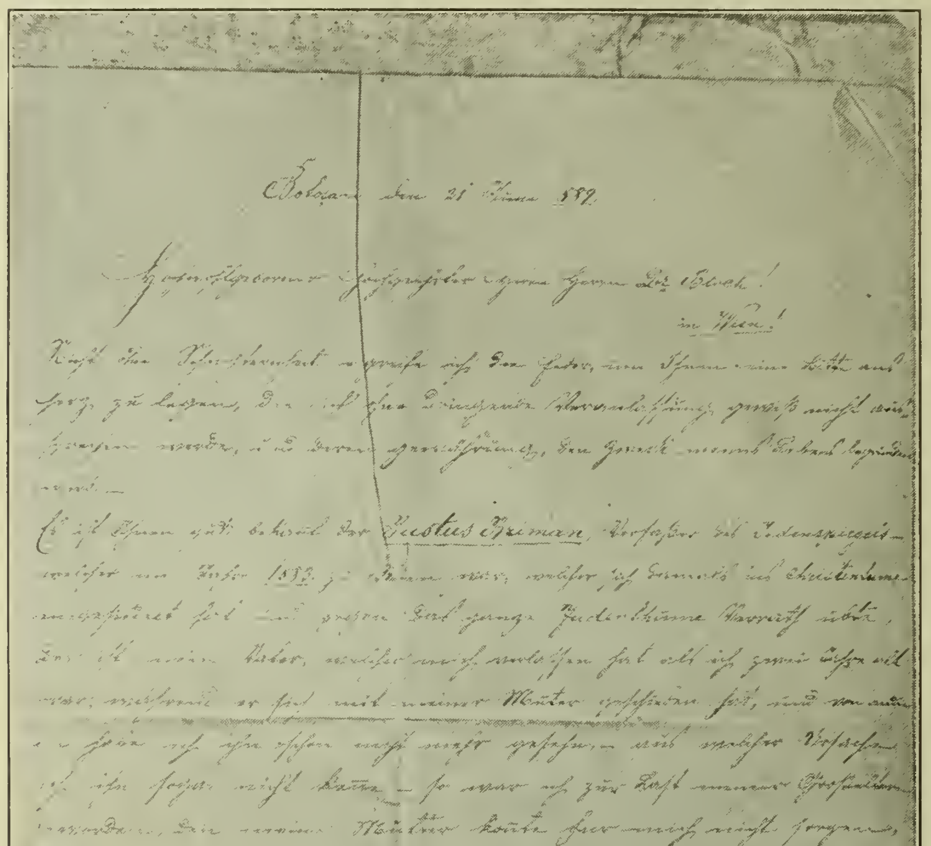
The Jews' Paradise.

WHEN, in 1916, the American Jewish Congress was convened, the leading idea was to create public sentiment which would in turn force the government to act effectively in the case of the Russian Jews. Poland was then not a factor in the world politics, for that Poland which existed then was a vassal state of Germany. In the calling of the congress there was a distinct understanding, generally shared, that the former method of obtaining favorable action by the influence of prominent Jews who would enter into transactions with the various governments, a policy which had been tried at the Vienna Congress of 1815 and at the Berlin Congress of 1878, was not a success. It must be admitted that the congress has not accomplished any tangble result either, and its executive, entering into negotiations with the Polish ambassador, Prince Lubomirski, reverted to the old-fashioned methods. The conference which took place in New York, November 12, between the Polish ambassador and the Jewish committee, consisting of ten members, resulted in the usual courteous generalities. Prince Lubomirski claims that the pogroms which he does not deny, though he avoids the objectionable term, were the result of the popular excitement due to the war. He expresses the confidence that with the reestablishment of normal conditions there would be again a possibility for the Jews to live on good terms with their neighbors. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise voiced to the representatives of the press his satisfaction at the promises of the Polish diplomat and his belief in the latter's sincerity. These are the facts which a conscientious reviewer is bound to state, leaving it to the reader to form his own conclusions.

Meantime we hear constantly some new reports of "disorders" and, owing to the lack of exact information, it is difficult to say whether the excesses took place before or after the New York Conference. We heard that in Wilkomir many people, including women and children, were killed by bombs thrown from Polish aeroplanes, and a list of Jews killed by the troops of General Zieligowski, the Polish D'Annunzio, in Wilna, has been published in the Yiddish papers. We also learn that the sister of the Polish general, Haller, is traveling through the country delivering anti-Semitic addresses to large audiences, to which resolutions are submitted asking for the exclusion of the Jewish member, Gruenbaum, from the Sejm because he discredited Poland in foreign countries by telling the truth of the condition of the Jews. This does not sound very encouraging. The Hasidic rabbi, Isaac Halberstam, the grandson of the famous Hayim Halberstam (1792-1876), the "Zanser Zadik" who arrived in New York, November 5, showed as a proof of Polish kindness to the Jews, his beard that had been cut by Polish patriots, and a Yiddish paper published a facsimile of a permit issued to Rabbi Ezekiel Abramski, of Smolewitz, allowing him to keep his beard if he paid the dues for such permit within six days.

The New York Globe (November 16) discussing the pogroms of Poland, on the ground of the statement of Prince Lubomirski, arrived at the conclusion that, even discounting the reports in the newspapers, there is enough evidence left to show that there is a bitter feeling of the masses against the Jews which is tolerated by the government. The Globe contrasts these undeniable facts, admitted by the Polish ambassador, with the reports from Soviet Russia where the Jews are personally not molested, and advises Poland to change its policy in view of the renewed Bolshevist attacks, feeling that the attitude of the Polish authorities is bound to deprive them of sympathy in foreign countries. The handy excuse that the persecution of the Jews by the Poles is due to their aloofness and to their hatred of the Poles was cleverly answered by Rabbi Nahum Asch in a Polish daily paper of Warsaw. The rabbi replied to a charge made by the priest, Lutoslawski, in the Polish parliament, who declared it an undeniable fact that the Jewish religion teaches hatred of non-Jews. The rabbi proposes a test. He says, let the priest who made this statement go to a quarter of the city inhabited by Jews in his priestly robes and see whether he will be molested. Afterwards he shall try to disguise himself as a rabbi and pass through a section of the city which is inhabited by Catholics at the time when the children are dismissed from a parochial school. He will then see in which school hatred of the other church is preached and practiced.

Another proof of the effectiveness of the Versailles Treaty, protecting the rights of the minorities, is furnished by an order of the government which imposes special taxes on Jewish merchants to which Christian merchants of the same class are not subjected. Those who opposed minority rights claimed that the Jews would in this way form a state within the state and give a justification to the charge that there is a Jewish conspiracy against all governments through the medium of an international organization. It is claimed that the Jew is a Jew first and all the time, regardless of the nationality to which he belongs by political affiliation. The following fact will give any unbiased observer an opportunity to form an opinion on the correctness of the charge. Some Jewish members of the Polish parliament drew up a resolution asking the government to give an explanation of pogroms which had occurred in eastern Galicia. The aged Rabbi Perlmutter refused to sign the interpellation and he also refused to vote against the enforced Sunday rest even for Jews who keep the seventh day Sabbath. He also declared his nationality as Polish, which other members denounced as treason to the Jewish cause. Without entering into the question whether there is a Jewish nationality or not, it is evident that even nine Jewish members of the Polish parliament do not form a united body when it comes to a political attitude. Foreign countries do not seem to be very much interested in the situation of the Polish Jews. The Italian socialist, Claudio Treves, a Jew, protested in his paper against the Polish pogroms and sharply criticized the Jews of France for inactivity in this matter. Another proof of Jewish solidarity. The only tangible action was taken by Leon Bourgeois, the representative of France at the League of Nations, who submitted to the League a memoir on the condition of Poland. It is perhaps for this reason that The Dearborn Independent makes of Bourgeois a Jew and connects him with Paul Hymans, the president of the League, and Alexander Millerand, the president of the French republic, as evidence of the Jewish world government. Of the latter we know that he was at one time editor of an anti-Semitic daily, and of the former who, like Millerand is only a half Jew, nothing is known that proved any interest on his part in Jewish affairs.



Russia's Heirs.

General Von Wrangel upon whom such great hopes had been placed has not proven a success. He preferred a sailing trip to Constantinople to a march by land to Moscow. Another disappointment to those who looked to the annihilation of Lenin's government was General Balachovitch who is also in full retreat. Unfortunately his troops seem to be intent upon winning some laurels, and the sufferers, as usual, are the Jews. The details are horrible. Even supposing that there are some exaggerations, one fact which is given with the name of the place and the victim shall be reported. In Kremno, Volhynia, Mordecai Ingberg was thrown into a burning synagog and when he jumped out of the window he was bayonetted and his body burned. Lenin, in his note to the Allies published in the London Daily Herald, charges the allied governments with direct responsibility for these atrocities because it was their money, their arms and ammunition which made it possible for these "heroes" to enter upon their expedition. It may perhaps have been done for the purpose of creating sentiment that the rumor was spread that the Bolshevists are preparing another attack on Poland. Tchitcherin, the minister of foreign affairs, categorically denies the statement. Nevertheless, the situation is by no means clear and order is far from being restored. It is one of the humorous tricks of history that at this time Kishineff, with its tragic reputation in modern Jewish history should be a place of refuge for the Jews. The city, now in Rumanian possession, is full of Jews who managed to escape from the terrors of the Ukrainian pogroms. Neither Rumania nor any other of the countries contiguous to Soviet Russia are hospitable to the refugees. We learn from Latvia that an old couple, who were to meet their son who had come from Cleveland to take them to America, were charged by the immigration authorities of the republic of Latvia with Bolshevist propaganda, and sent back to Russia. Only the energetic stand taken by the son who threatened to lay the matter before the department of state in Washington, prevented the authorities from carrying out their threat that they would execute the aged couple if they were to come again across the border. A strange fact is reported from Kovno where two American girls connected with the Joint Distribution Committee were arrested under the charge of working for Poland as spies. One should hardly imagine that the Lithuanians would suspect the Jews of Polish sympathies. The minister for Jewish affairs, Dr. Soloweitschik, was recently in Rome where he was received by the local Jewish community with warm interest and with the promise that Italian Jews would lend their support to the cause of the Lithuanian republic.

A Converted Sinner.

From the little that we hear of Rumania, conditions are surprisingly favorable. Jonescu, the veteran anti-Semitic leader, said in a conversation with Mr. Sokolow in Paris, that he has entirely changed his political views. Bratianu, the anti-Semite by heredity, said something similar to representatives of the Jewish press although coupled with the remark that he would not recognize the Jews as a national minority. From this point of view we also understand another report which informs us that the Jewish schools in Bukowina were closed. Finally we learn the regular story which is told of kings and emperors and popes and has been told from the days of Darius and Alexander the Great down to Francis Joseph and Pius X, that the king of Rumania, while attending a concert was told by one of his courtiers that the conductor was a Jew, and his majesty replied, "I do not care what his religion is, but his music is classic." There is at least one point of importance in such stories, that they are a bid for popularity which will prove that Rumania desires to be known as well-disposed toward the Jews.

The Tartar Scratched.

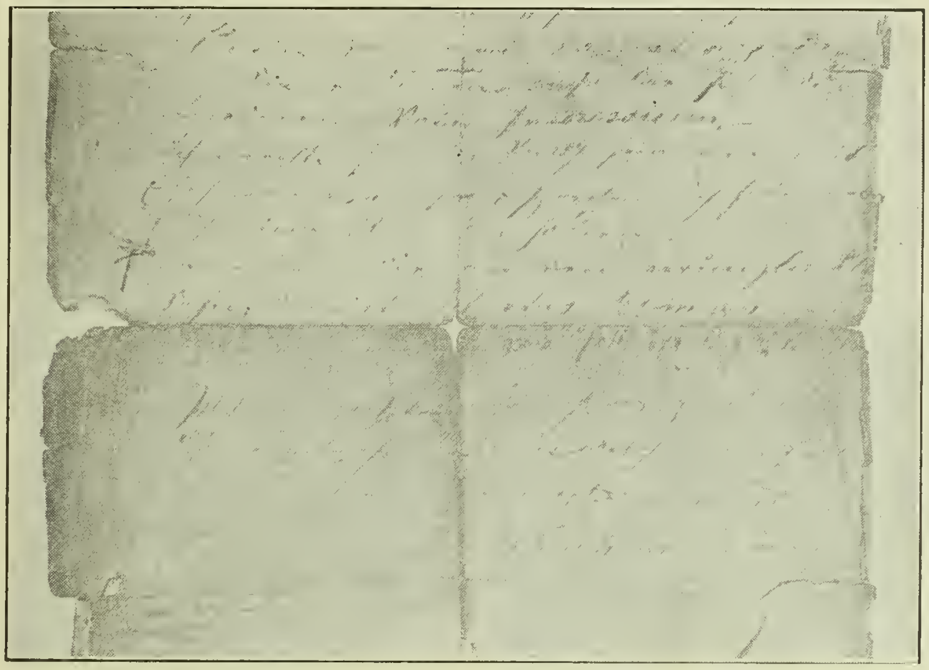
The Magyar chauvinists used to refer to the Jews in the northern part of their country who are more like the Polish Jews, as Chazars, thus indicating their supposed Tartar origin, but their own descent is far from being of undisputed Aryan blood. To them, if to anybody, may be applied the words of the famous statesman, de Maistre, "Scratch the Russian and the Tartar will appear." Their recent acts are a disgrace to all civilization. Reports which at this writing are only known through press dispatches, tell us of a new pogrom which occurred in Budapest, November 10 and 11. To all appearances it was a very serious affair. We had hoped that conditions would be somewhat better after a most atrocious case had been discussed in the parliament, October 19. A highly resepectable Jewish wine merchant, Adolph Landau, was made prisoner by a band of uniformed rowdies led by a noted criminal, to whose extortions Landau would not submit, and he was put to death in a manner whoch would put the Indians of King Philip's time to shame. There can hardly be any doubt but that the government, which is exceedingly weak and depends entirely on the good will of these armed bandits, winks at such barbarities. When, however, the matter was discussed in parliament there was no escape from it because foreign press correspondents are the only power which "Awakening Hungary" fears. The premier had to admit that the in-dent was a disgrace to Hungary, and e, as well as the minister of war promised rict investigation.

So far as can be learned from the meager press dispatches the promise was either not meant seriously or, which is equally probable, was more than the government could carry out. The latest press dispatches, dated December 2, informs us Premier Teleky has resigned and consequently there is more trouble ahead. One of the most important steps, taken by the reactionary party which is in possession of the power at present, is the restriction on Jewish students. The aim of "Christian Hungary" as the party in power calls itself is to lower the status of the Jews. The extreme to which they are ready to go is illustrated by the following fact. The Protestant church planned the building of a palace of Hungarian culture in the capital, intended to show Hungary's achievement in cultural life. A prize was offered for the best plan and this was awarded to a Jewish architect. The building commissioner now refuses to grant the building permit because it should not be said that the builder of this palace which presents Hungary's achievements is a Jew, but the donors insist that they have a right to select their own plans especially since the prize was awarded by a non-partisan jury. Another humiliating proof of the moral suicide which these Christian patriots are committing daily is the fact that Elemer Schwartz, a young medical student only 22 years old, was presented to the academy as the discoverer of an important optical law. As already stated the latest developments will probably give us important information on the actual condition and prospects.

Old Adam.

The Junker class which is by no means limited to the landed proprietors and the army officers is more determined than ever before to regain power by catering to mob instincts. Various individual incidents illustrate this fact. As previously reported one of the heroes, Lieutenant Waltking, entered the vestibule of a concert hall, evidently under the influence of liquor and yelled, "All Jews have to take off their hats. A Prussian lieutenant has entered!" A man present, not a Jew, found the scene so comical that he laughed. The hero threw himself upon this man, nearly choked him to death, swearing in the manner known to us from the "Fliegende Blaetter," and insulting in an unspeakable manner the ladies of the party. It was after some difficulty that the maniac was separated from his victim, whereupon the great hero attempted to retire behind the lines but was prevented by a policeman. In some suspicious manner the report of the police "got lost" until the attorney of the victim brought the matter to the attention of the Minister of Justice and the rowdy was committed to trial. He got off with a very mild prison sentence. Adopting the language of the kaiser who once, in his medieval phraseology said that he was willing to grab the hands of all his subjects be they "edel" or "unfrei" we come to another group of these "nobles" who are represented in distressingly large proportion among the students. The students' fraternity, the old "Burchenschift," at the time of its foundation a bulwark of liberalism, is now entirely dominated by reactionaries. They will not accept any Jews in their ranks, and some professors endorse this principle on the ground that the B. B. lodges also are restricted to Jews only. One of these students, Robert Engelhorn, shot in cold blood the Jewish student, Hans Kahn, in Baden-Baden, without any provocation. He even had not known his victim and probably had intended when he left his house to kill the first Jew whom he would meet on the street. In the trial he denied having any anti-Semitic leanings and claimed to have acted under a fixed idea. The court adjudged him insane. A high school boy in Flensburg started a sensation, coming home with wounds inflicted by a knife and a pistol shot through his arm. He claimed that he had worn the svastika, the emblem of the anti-Semites, and some Jews had attacked him and attempted to tear the badge from his garments. During the struggle he claims to have been wounded by his assailants. Investigation proved that he had invented the whole story and he had inflicted the wounds on himself.

The most important event which agitated public opinion in Berlin has now been finally settled. For several weeks the capital and a great part of Germany were agitated by the appointment of Kurt Loewenstein as superintendent of the schools of Berlin. Loewenstein, it appears, has a certificate as high school teacher but had never taught owing to the fact that as a Jew he found it hard to obtain employment. This was stated afterwards unofficially as reason for the governor who refused to confirm the appointment. The actual reason, no doubt, is the very strong opposition of the clericals and still more, of the Protestant reactionaries against the appointment of a Jew to such a responsible position. One can hardly doubt that the governor acted wisely under the circumstances because the appointment was meant as a provocation of the religious element of the population by the socialists who control the Berlin City Council. The agitation proved again the fallacy of the claim of a united Jewish government. While the official congregation of Berlin ignored the agitation some smaller organization joined in the protest of the Christian churches on the ground that Loewenstein was an infidel. The organ of the Berlin congregation calls this manifestation tactless and incompatible with the honor and self-respect of Jews. Similar in the opinion of the reviewer is the attitude which the lawyer, Hugo Cahn, of Nuremberg, took at the convention of the society against anti-Semitism when he apologized for the Jewish members of the communist government who are eastern Jews from Russia and Galicia while "we German Jews have no patience with the antiquated eastern ghetto conception of morality." These items are respectfully referred to the gentleman who gives every week in "The Dearborn Independent" an anthology of statements made by Jews supposed to prove the Jewish solidarity in political questions.



Letter of Nahum Briman, son of the slanderer and apostate Aaron Briman, ("Justus"), a convicted felon, who is quoted as authority by the defenders of the authenticity of the "Protocols". It states that Briman deserted his family, hoboing through Europe first as a pious rabbi and then as missionary.

The free state of Danzig seems to be willing to preserve its Teutonic traditions by an anti-Semitic policy. The draft of the constitution for the new state excludes Jewish residents who are not German citizens from naturalization regardless of the length of time of their residence and regardless of their character. The situation in Silesia where, according to some reports anti-Semitic disorders had taken place, has been misrepresented. Jewish Chronicle, October 1, told us, undoubtedly on the basis of what appeared is a reliable report in the London papers, that Jewish miners were expelled upon the order of German authorities. German papers inform us that it was not true and that the order came from the commander of the French troops wishing to oblige the Poles who wanted to draft these men into their army. It was a disgraceful act to send these helpless people to the Polish border where again, with wanton disregard of international law, Polish troops crossing the border dragged them to the Polish side. On the other hand, justice requires to state that the British commissioner in Tarnowitz refused to give permission to hold an anti-Semitic mass-meeting. It is above all a duty of justice and gratitude to quote the noble work of Professor Herman L. Strack of Berlin, who recently published an interesting pamphlet entitled Jewish Secret Laws. The valiant champion of Judaism against anti-Semitic slander, shows in his scholarly manner how all the statements recently repeated, and freely invented, about a secret world organization with a secret code of morality, are unfounded. Unfortunately men of Strack's type are not as frequent in the academic circles of the fatherland as we would like to see, not so much in our interest as in the interest of Germany's reputation which has suffered so severely by the events of the war.

Dalles and Passles.

It is an old Ghetto wisdom that destitution is not conducive to high morality. Poor Austria experiences the truth of this statement. The republic is now in a state of transition. The old order has fallen, the socialist government which replaced the old monarchy had to abdicate, and the Christian Socialists or, to speak more clearly, the clericals, have everything practically their own way and will have to try what they can do in order to restore living conditions. The Jews have not even a single representative in the parliament, a fact which never happened once since parliamentary form of government was introduced in Austria in 1848 and after the suspension of parliament reintroduced in 1861. The reason for this fact is that the Jews were disunited. In one Vienna district where they might have carried the election the Jewish candidate was defeated because the majority of the voters preferred to vote against him, casting their votes for the hopeless candidate of the old-fashioned democracy, also a Jew. This is another item which the reviewer of the Ford paper might be willing to use as proof of the cast-iron organization of the secret Jewish world government.

The Solution of the "Wohin" Question.

We might just as well admit it that the next Congress will enact more stringent restrictions on immigration than ever had been enacted before. It is not for us to discuss the question whether, in view of the distress in Europe and the rush of people desirous to leave their homes, this is necessary. We are simply dealing with facts. There are millions of Jews living in central Europe in terrible distress with little hope of improvement owing to the bitter antagonism under which they live. This does not even include the actual constant danger to life and property in Hungary, Poland, Ukraine and some other countries. These victims of tyranny and religious bigotry are looking for new homes. They are compelled to look for them but they will probably find the gates of the hospitable country which is still able to support millions of people, barred against them. England is equally ill-disposed. No government will wish to give new support to the constantly growing anti-Semitic movement. The Duke of Argyll, a relative of the royal family, is now joined by Lord Alfred Douglas who is editing an anti-Semitic paper and thus helping the agitation of the Northcliffe press. The Spectator had again a vehement anti-Semitic attack, and Mr. Claude Montefiore wrote a letter which was published in the paper and in which he "deplores Zionism and nationalism." The Jewish Chronicle which represents the other side claims to have evidence that Montefiore and his sympathizers who once published a letter in the Times protesting against the attitude of the Chronicle are supporting the anti-Semitic Morning Post, and so the Chronicle claims, does Professor Ashknazy the Polish representative at the League of Nations. This is given as a fact without taking issue on the question whether the allegations are true. The fact remains that two representative Jewish bodies are mutually incriminating each other as doing harm to the Jewish cause. Mr. Ford's reviewer has another chance to add an item to his interesting collection showing the clockwork precision with which the secret council of the Jews is acting. Finally we have the old country of refuge for all persecuted for religious and political reasons, the little republic of Switzerand. It seems that according to Swiss law an applicant for naturalization has to first receive naturalization in a city before he can become a citizen. The city council of Zurich recently passed a resolution that Jews from eastern Europe cannot be naturalized unless they have resided fifteen years in the country and shown that they will assimilate to the habits and ideas of the Swiss people. Non-Jewish applicants may be naturalized after ten years' residence. In the debate it was clearly stated that the Jews are an undesirable element and a Jewish member pointed out that even with regard to Jews from western Europe such discrimination is made. A woman who was German by nationality was recommended for naturalization on the basis that she had resigned from the Jewish congregation years ago. Liberalism, as far as the Jews are concerned, is becoming more and more a meaningless label.

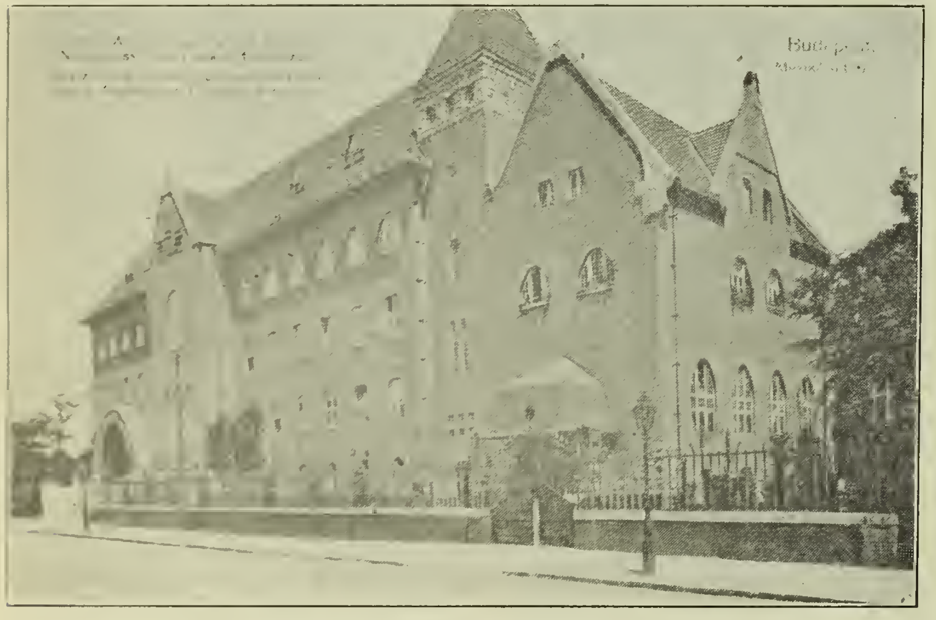
Zionism.

Mr. Harmsworth in a written statement affirmed that the British government will carry out the Balfour declaration and will cooperate with the Zionist organization on the immigration to Palestine. A similar statement was made by Mr. Chamberlain in reply to an interpellation of Ormsy-Gore in the House of Commons, October 21. This statement is not as clear as the Zionists wish it because it is not yet definitely known what the Balfour declaration actually means. In a book recently published by G. N. Barnes, who was a member of the Balfour cabinet at the time when the declaration was made, an interpretation of this declaration is given which will hardly give encouragement to Zionists. On account of its importance it shall be given verbatim. Mr. Barnes says: "This declaration was very carefully worded after much consideration. It does not mean a Jewish state, unless at some distant future the Jews should outnumber the other elements in the population. Nor does it mean Jewish ascendancy, unless such were to come by superior moral and mental qualities on the part of the Jews. It embodies the recognition of a traditional, sentimental, and religious interest on the part of a people long oppressed in a country which is the cradle of their race. It also involves the opening up to modern thought and enterprise of a land which has been so long under Turkish misrule as to have lost the larger part of its population and to have become largely derelict."

The regulation of the immigration to which Mr. Harmsworth alluded is, according to press dispatches, that all immigrants desirous to settle in Palestine who will receive an endorsement from the Zionist executive will be allowed to land, but their number is restricted to 16,500 people for the year. In addition other immigrants, proving that they are self-supporting, will be admitted, but their number is limited to 1,400. In future years the Palestine administration will decide for every year the number of immigrants to be admitted.

It seems that this news did not have an encouraging effect on the convention of the American Federation of Zionists held in Buffalo October 26-28. The reports in the Zionist press do not seem enthusiastic. There is a certain dissension between the majority of delegates and the administration elected by them. The latter wishes to have the officers elected by the convention, while a majority of delegates prefers to have the elections carried on by districts thus giving to those who do not attend the convention an opportunity to vote on their executive. After some hot discussion the matter was postponed for another year. It also was evidently discouraging to the delegates that some of the leading men of the organization as Justice Brandeis and Mr. Nathan Strauss, were absent. On the other hand, the pledge of support given by Mr. Adolf Kraus for the B'nai B'rith was a decided step forward. The presence of the British delegate, Joseph Cowen, was intended to settle the difficulties which have arisen between the American and the British branches of the organization. It is not seen clearly whether this mission was a success. The effort of Dr. Charles Weitzman at a mass meeting held in London, October 25, who denied that there was any difference of opinion, seems to be dictated by the desire to create sentiment.

This sentiment seems to arise from the suspicion that the Balfour declaration and the whole attitude of the British government are inspired by British imperialistic aspirations. This was bluntly stated by Adolph Joffe, the delegate of the Russian soviet government to the peace conference in Riga. One thing stands out clearly. There is serious trouble between the French and the British governments on the division of the spoils in the near east. The French government insists on including northern Palestine within the boundaries of Syria over which the French—as is said in terms of euphemism—received the mandate. These aspirations would take from Palestine some very important water rights which are necessary for the irrigation and the agricultural development of the country. The government of Canada informed the Canadian Zionists that it will strongly back the claims of the mother country. Zionist papers declare that France in her attitude has manifested its hostility to the Jews. So, the tangible achievements up to this time are more of a sentimental value. We are informed that Sir Herbert Samuel has been ordered to issue special coins for Palestine and has asked the Zionist organization to suggest an appropriate symbol. The Jerusalem library, the foundation of the late Dr. Joseph Chasanowitz, appeals to all friends of the cause to send books of Jewish interest to this library which is to contain a complete collection of all such works. Another movement of a similar character is an appeal to collect funds for a monumental building to be erected over the grave of Rachel which at one time Sir Moses Montefiore had planned. An emblem of modernism in Palestine is the erection of modern water works in connection with Abraham's well. This may be an indication of the rejuvenation of Palestine and may repeat Isaac's experience of Rehoboth "For now the Lord has made room for us and we shall prosper in the land."



Institute for the Blind, Budapest, Hungary.

The Progress of Anti-Semitism.

The declaration issued by the various national organizations against the mean forgeries designed to create an anti-Semitic movement in this country are in the hands of all readers of the B. B. News. Its effect, which to some extent is certain, will have to be awaited. It is sad enough that a movement of this kind should have been initiated and it is still sadder to think that its originator could figure on popular sympathy. That such exists cannot be doubted. A very small incident will prove it. A young Jew in New York was charged with an attempt to seduce a [illegible] girl. A mob gathered, yelling "Let's lynch the Sheeney." Similar is another incident reported from London. In a trial of a usurer the attorney for the plaintiff referred to the defendant as a Jew. Lord Reading, who presided at the trial, protested against this attempt to create prejudice. This, however, is only a proof that prejudice exists. We learn even from Mesopotamia that pogroms have occurred there, or at least that the attitude of the population was so threatening that a number of Jews fled from other cities to Bagdad. "The Jewish Peril" has appeared in French translation. Under these conditions it is rather exhilarating to read that the Presbyterian church appropriated $200,000 for converting the Jews of New York. The reverend gentlemen who are interested in such a movement might think of Luther's advice that the Jews should be treated kindly and admitted by Christians on a footing of equality so that they should be able to learn the superiority of Christian life. "Unity" (November 25) properly asks whether the churches have done their own work in such efficient manner that the synagogs must be invaded. One statement of this paper deserves to be quoted verbatim. It says "We are free to say that this proselytizing of Jews by Christians impresses us as a piece of colossal and shameless impudence."

Miscellaneous.

The Joint Distribution Committee has of late been subjected to various criticisms in eastern Europe. The well-known communal worker Bernstein-Cohan of Kishineff, and the Yiddish press of Warsaw are very bitter in their complaints. One can easily understand the dissatisfaction which is due to the colossal task confronting all relief organizations which, no sooner have rendered relief in one place when new pogroms create new problems. It seems that even in itself the misery is so great that only combined efforts of international political action can bring a partial remedy while the total remedy must be a matter of the future.

The Jewish Religious Union of London has started a bitter controversy by its announcement that it will, beginning with November 14, hold Sunday services.

The congregation of Breslau elected Dr. Moses Hoffman of Emden as rabbi of its orthodox section to succeed the lately retired Dr. F. Rosenthal. Breslau is one of the few congregations which succeeded to maintain the unity of the congregation by a compromise between the various parties. In 1840 it called Abraham Geiger as its rabbi by the side of the orthodox Solomon Tiktin. The latter strongly protested and the congregation deposed him. He died soon afterwards and a compromise was effected by which the son of the deceased, Gedaliah Tiktin, was elected rabbi of the orthodox section while Geiger, with equal rights was the spiritual leader of the liberal element. Tiktin presented the traditional view of orthodoxy even in his costume, but his family did not maintain the ancestral traditions represented by three rabbis officiating in Breslau in succession. His son, Heiman, converted to the Greek orthodox church and became professor at a lyceum in Rumania. With Tiktin's death in 1886, a moderately conservative rabbi, Dr. Rosenthal, was elected who is now succeeded by Dr. Hoffmann. The latter is the son of the president of the Orthodox Rabbinical Seminary in Berlin and has made a reputation for himself by valuable contributions to Jewish history, dealing with the economic life of the Jews. Thus the conservative of today would have been a liberal in the opinion of the orthodox rabbi of the old type, who considered all studies other than strictly Talmudic as modernism.

Obituary.

The terrible conditions prevailing in Vienna could not be more sadly illustrated than in the death of Max Margules, a retired professor. He died, October 4, in a suburb of Vienna, of actual starvation. An obituary notice in the Neue Freie Presse by Professor Felix Exner, states the sad fact that the man who was the foremost meteorologist of Austria, and one of the leading representatives of his science in the world, was too proud to beg, and on his pension of 425 crowns a month which at that time represented about $1, he could not exist. The meaning of this will be clear when it is stated that a year's salary would not have sufficed to buy the man a suit of clothes.

Dr. Samuel James Meltzer, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, to whom science is indebted for many important discoveries, died at New York, November 7. He was born in Russia sixty-nine years ago and made his studies in Germany.

Dr. Berthold Fabo, an authority on archeology, died at Budapest, October 28. He was the founder of the Jewish museum in Budapest which has probably the largest and most interesting collection of Jewish antiquities of any institution of its kind.

An interesting character passed away in Siegmund Mayer, who died in Vienna, October 29, nearly eighty-nine years of age. He was a representative of the old-fashioned middle class liberalism which at one time was the leading power in Austria and in Vienna politics. As such he was for a number of years one of the prominent members of the Vienna city council, compelled to retire from public life some twenty years ago when the city administration became anti-Semitic. Mayer published two books which, partly in the form of memoirs, give very interesting contributions to the participation of the Jews in economic life.

Solomon Rappoport, one of the leading Yiddish publicists known by his pen name, S. An-ski, died in Warsaw, November 8, at the age of fifty-seven. His loss is mourned by the whole community to whom, besides his literary work, he served as a zealous worker in social activities.

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF UKRAINIAN JEWS FLEEING PANIC STRICKEN.

Vienna, (J. C. B.)—Reports received here from Roumania and Galicia relate that Ukrainian Jews are fleeing panic-stricken from their own districts in hundreds of thousands. Entire communities are deserting small and large towns, leaving everything behind them in a despairing effort to save their lives, in the face of the new wave of pogroms. They are flocking into Galicia and Bukovina where they are overcrowding the existing communities and adding to the great hardships of the large number of refugees already there.

The Jews of Warsaw are seriously alarmed over the latest developments in Ukrainia. These new refugees are running into Poland, Galicia and Roumania into districts already overcrowded with pogrom victims. Leading Jews are organizing in an effort to render immediate help, but the task is far too great for any single community, and the organized Jews of America alone can render adequate assistance. The condition of the fleeing Ukrainians is beyond all description.

GALICIAN JEWS DEMAND SPECIAL RESTRICTIONS AGAINST JEWISH GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES SHOULD BE REMOVED.

Warsaw (J. C. B. Service).—Dr. Hausner, Ackerman, and Krumon arrived in this city from Lemberg as a special delegation in behalf of official Jewish employees in Galicia. The delegation obtained an audience with Premier Witos and Minister Dashinski before whom they laid the complaint that there exist specially restrictive regulations against Jewish employees in Galicia. The reply of the Government representatives is unknown.

COMMUNICATED.

For the information of the lodges of the Order and Jewish communities throughout the country, we publish herewith the following correspondence:

November 10, 1920.

Mr. S. J. Westheimer,
Houston, Texas.

Dear Mr. Westheimer:

One of our I. O. B. B. members, Mr. I. Goodman, of this city, requests of me that I ask of you a favor. About ten days ago a party by the name of J. D. Glass, who claimed he was residing in Houston, but originally from New York, visited the city of San Angelo, and represented himself to be a B. B. organizer, stating to the Jewish people of that town that he was sent there from headquarters.

He advised the people there he had recently been in Waco and had reorganized our I. O. B. B. Lodge and had assisted in the membership campaign drive, of which you took an active part. He succeeded in getting the confidence of the people in San Angelo and made his headquarters at the business house of Mr. Goodman's son-in-law, Mr. Sam Jacobstein, who is in the jewelry business, and from whom he purchased on memorandum a diamond valued at $800, and also a Corona typewriter valued at $50. He advised Mr. Jacobstein before leaving that he would give him a check for the merchandise received, but without giving notice to anyone he left the city and no one has heard of him since.

Inasmuch as he stated he was from Houston, the writer would appreciate your investigating his whereabouts and wire Mr. Goodman of Waco, at his expense, and would also appreciate your wiring the I. O. B. B. headquarters with a view of locating this party. Inasmuch as he is sailing under false colors, I feel quite sure headquarters will use every effort to locate this man.

Any information or assistance you can render in the above matter will be appreciated by,

Yours respectfully,
ALEX H. SANGER.

P. S. To assist you in locating this party I beg to give you a discription of this man. He is about five and one-half feet tall; weighs about 170 pounds; wears glasses; is a brunette; the thumb on his right hand is deformed. He appears to be a man of about 50 or 55 years of age.

Houston, Texas, Nov. 13, 1920.

Mr. Alex M. Sanger,
Waco, Texas.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I have yours of the tenth in which you give me data on one J. D. Glass who claims to be an I. O. B. B. organizer.

This same man has received money from several Houston Ben B'rith saying he was a staunch member of the Order, out of employment and trying to make his way back to New York.

I am sorry that this has occurred but the only thing that I can do in the matter and shall do is to place the occurrence in the Jewish Herald and also the B'nai B'rith News. I will also send a copy of your letter to me to Victor Nexter, Myron Goldman, A. B. Seelenfreund, and to B'nai B'rith News.

It will be a hard matter to locate a man of his character as he will have a new name in each town, but if he can be located at all, I believe we can do it through the B'nai B'rith News.

Hoping to hear from you again, I remain,

Very truly yours,
S. J. WESTHEIMER.

EXHIBITION OF JEWISH ART.

Chiefly as a result of the efforts of the noted Jewish artist, Herman Struck, the B'nai B'rith of Berlin, Germany, have arranged an exhibition of Jewish art, in which a large number of Jewish artists are participating. The exhibit has attracted much attention and is being very favorably commented on by local art critics. It is hoped that the exhibition will ease the economic condition of some of the artists.

WOMEN MAY BE ADMITTED TO THE PALESTINE BAR.

London (J. C. B. Service).—The Palestine Advisory Council is considering the advisability of admitting women to practice as solicitors in the Palestine Courts, according to a Jerusalem dispatch. Col. Norman Bentwich, the head of the Judicial Department, as well as Sir Hebert Samuel, the High Commissioner, are said to favor their admission.

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, November 17, 1920.

A VISITOR from Mars, coming to this country and studying our communal press with some diligence, would soon arrive at the conclusion that the Jews of England were actively engaged in the output of much energy, particularly in that kind of work usually associated with literary societies, with public meetings, speeches, compliments, and the like. In a sense there would be truth in this impression, for undoubtedly there is a going to and fro and an expenditure of much energy, particularly on the part of our young people. That is all as it should be, for it is with the young that the future lies. It is to capture the young that the Jewish Religious Union will hold services on Sunday mornings, in addition to the regular Sabbath services which they conduct at the Liberal Synagogue. It is to capture the young, likewise, that at Berkeley Street a series of organ recitals will be arranged on Sunday afternoons. And if those of the left wing of the community are straining every nerve to influence young people, those of the right are no less active. The Sinai League is as energetic as ever, and the Mizrachi section of the Zionist movement is striving all it can to bring young people under its influence.

The Jewish Religious Union Sunday Services have, on the whole, not met with a warm reception on the part of the Community at large. People are saying that it is rather deceiving to oneself to point out that these services are additional to those held on the Sabbath. Of course, there is nothing to prevent any body of people holding services on week days, and Sunday is a week day. Nevertheless it seems highly probable that these Sunday services will, in the eyes of those who attend them, become services for Sunday, that is to say, really Sabbath services; and we are reminded of the attempt made many years ago by Mr. Oswald John Simon to hold Sunday services of a similar character. At the conclusion of these people greeted each other with Gut'Shabbos, and at the time their eyes twinkled with mischief. It is said by those who ought to know that this greeting and nothing else killed Mr. Oswald John Simon's Sunday services. Already there are prophets' who foretell a similar fate for this enterprise on the part of the Jewish Religious Union. This, of course, remains to be seen; but it is significant that the attempt is being launched in a most inhospitable atmosphere, and it is perhaps an interesting side-light on the communal development that the community as a whole should not look with favor on any new-fangled attempts, no matter how earnest the motive behind them, of launching out into new ways and new enterprises in the sphere of religion. Indeed, many people here question the wisdom of stressing the kind of spirituality which the Jewish Religious Union offers. After all, it is argued, you do not make people spiritual merely by talking to them. Spirituality must be more deeply rooted than that. All the same, these efforts ought to bear testimony to a keen desire to be helpful to those who need help; and all of them may be written down as an expression of a wish on the part of the community to lengthen its cords and strengthen its stakes.

If this is a true diagnosis of the spiritual health of Anglo-Jewry, it seems a thousand pities that its training college for ministers should be in such difficulties. Some people even go so far as to say that the college is nearing the end of its history, and that before long it will have to close its doors. Perhaps this is too dark a picture. The fact remains that the college is in financial straits, and salvation seems to be far off. Students, too, are difficult to get; and it does seem that the stars in their courses are against the college. Assuming that the prognostications of coming decease are correct, it does not follow that the Jews of England will be without their Rabbinical Academy; for the War Memorial Scheme contemplates the establishment of a High School of Jewish Learning, where students of all theological views will be able to sit side by side and cultivate Jewish studies, and where not necessarily all the students will elect to enter the ministry. Whatever may be thought of the details of such a scheme, it seems to be generally accepted that the principle is sound. But the War Memorial is not yet ready to take action in the matter, and it will be some years, possibly, before the wished-for Academy of Jewish Learning will raise its head in this country. In the meantime Jews' College will no doubt carry on; and it is curious to contrast the position of our Rabbinical Seminary with the Rabbinical Seminary in Breslau. Here there is a full staff and few students and financial difficulties; there the finances are assured, students are numerous, but there are not sufficient teachers to act as guides and leaders. The Breslau College has recently lost one of its pillars of the old school through the death of Professor Brann, and now it is left with a staff of three, one of whom is permanently sick and cannot be relied on any further; while of the remaining two one is a comparatively young man and the other is strange to the traditions of Breslau. So the college is on the look-out for new members of its teaching body, and we understand that it is finding it by no means easy to realize its wishes in this direction.

Whatever may be the future of Jews' College, at any rate for the present it does serve as a convenient meeting place for all manner of Jewish organizations. During this very month we can number not a few meetings of some importance that will be held within its walls. Pride of place must be given to the conference of the Union of Jewish Literary Societies, an after-war revival of a pre-war institution. It may be expected that the union will develop along the old lines, and nothing very extraordinary may be expected from its deliberations. But if the Union represents an old body, Sefatenu is something new. As the word implies, it is the name given to an organization of people interested in Hebrew. The origin of the idea is in Palestine, where those who care for the Hebrew vernacular have banded themselves together to encourage and advance the use of Hebrew as a spoken tongue. But they are not content with a mere Palestinian organization. Realizing as they do that immigrants to Palestine will come from all parts of the world, they are striving to set up branches in all the great centers of population in Europe and America, for the express purpose of cultivating the use of Hebrew among all classes of Jews. Mr. Leon Simon is the soul of the movement in London, and he has already a fair amount of success to his credit in the way of preliminary work. Before long Sefatenu will add to the number of our societies in London, and indirectly will, no doubt, help the extension of Hebrew as a spoken tongue in Palestine.

In that country the position is eminently satisfactory as far as the government is concerned, and everybody without exception is singing the praises of the High Commissioner. No better choice could have been made than Sir Herbert Samuel, and those who made this statement six months ago have been amply justified by the results. The political life is becoming stable, and with it the economic life is slowly making headway. Naturally this will require a good deal of stimulus, and it is not improbable that the stimulus will be forthcoming from the outer world, bringing blessings in abundance to the settlers in the Holy Land. The only cloud on the horizon is the Northern boundary. The French insist on retaining certain rivers which divide Syria from Palestine, rivers the waters of which are of essential importance to the latter country. So far the French Government are adamant, but the position is not hopeless by any means; and those who are negotiating for a suitable economic frontier for Palestine (and that is all it is) may still succeed in convincing the French Government, especially if influence can be brought to bear from America, to whose word the French Government will in all probability pay special heed. Meanwhile, preparations for building operations have already been made, and we are informed that directly the rainy season is over the work of actually building houses will be begun. Those who are best entitled to judge declare that the building will proceed with energy. Indeed, there is a good deal of energy in those anxious to help forward the growth of business in Palestine. Among these must be placed the publishing company which is responsible for the most popular Hebrew daily in Palestine, namely the Hassolel Company, which issues besides an Arabic daily and an English weekly—The Palestine Weekly. The Hassolel Company has opened a branch in London, and there is a good deal of really useful activity in this office. The Palestine Weekly is to enjoy the cooperation of one of our most brilliant journalists in the person of Mr. Harry Sacher, who has gone out to settle in Palestine and to act as Editor-in-Chief of the new weekly. It may be of assistance to form some judgment on the value of this paper from Sir Herbert Samuel's letter, which is in these terms: "The Palestine Weekly occupies a unique position as the only newspaper in Palestine in the English language. Enterprising in its methods and sober in the expression of its views, it is well-fitted to convey the news of the outside world to the English-speaking population of Palestine. Not less important, it conveys the news of Palestine to the English-speaking countries, keenly interested as they are in her present development and her future fortunes".

But if the position of the Jews in Palestine is satisfactory, on the Continent of Europe the words of the Prayer-Book are being literally fulfilled, and Jews are being led like lambs to the slaughter. It is an intolerable position, and perhaps the Ukraine is the blackest spot of all. If in Poland or Hungary or Germany Jews are maltreated, there is at least a government to appeal to; but in the Ukraine there is no government, and the arm of the strongest brutally rules over the weak. All persecuted Jews need help, but the persecuted Jews of the Ukraine need help most. Accordingly the Federation of Ukrainian Jews in London is making strenuous efforts to do all it can to render assistance to the poor, helpless victims of that unfortunate country. The soul of the enterprise is Dr. Jochelman, and his personality acts as an inspiration to those who are cooperating with him. The federation is sending over money, and helping those who wish to get out of the Ukrainain hell with advice and traveling facilities, so that what relief can be rendered is being provided.

We are overwhelmed with appeals just now. The most important is that of the Jewish Board of Guardians, which has really got into low water. The Jewish Board of Guardians, it must be remembered, is our premier charity, and is run on most excellent and approved lines. It makes loans to necessitious applicants, and grants to those who are deemed in need. It looks after the sick, apprentices young people, and is, in a word, the general supervisor of the poor of London Jewry. It will simply have to get sufficient to carry on, but the prospect is not pleasant, for trade leaves much to be desired, and the appeal of the Board does not stand alone. The Communal Scheme, or, in other words, the Jewish War Memorial, is still before the public, still begging, and still growing slowly. One of its latest aids is the Million Shilling Fund, which the Union of Jewish Women has taken in hand, and intends to collect before long. Sir Robert Waley Cohen, who is the soul of the War Memorial, is showing more and more by his wisdom and sound leadership that he is one of the coming men in Anglo-Jewry. Those who have worked with him realize already that his name is destined to play a noble part in the development of the Jewish community in this country. It is worthy of note that all the appeals to which we have referred are for organizations and societies run and managed by the same people, the old stagers with a sprinkling of newer and younger blood. Possibly the multiplication of appeals at this time may teach these same leaders the absolute necessity for centralizing charitable collections as is the case in America; and unquestionably the War Memorial will serve as the great collecting center.

Of matters of lesser moment there are several that need to be chronicled, and some that may be important. If American Jewry, through its excellent Publication Society has provided English-speaking Jews with a Jewish translation of the Bible, Anglo-Jewry desires to provide English-speaking communities with a Jewish commentary on the five books of Moses, the Haftarahs and the Megillot. The Chief Rabbi has taken this matter in hand, and it was one of the last things that received his attention before he departed on his world-tour. The intention is to provide a book giving the Hebrew text, the American Jewish translation, and brief yet adequate notes by way of commentary. The commentary will embody everything of lasting appeal in the old Jewish commentaries and will use modern scholarship to bring out moral and spiritual teaching of the text. The whole work will be popular in character, and parts of it have been allocated to a number of teachers, young and old, so that almost everyone of our ministers are included in the scheme. One must not pre-judge the result before it appears, and it remains to be seen what our Jewish ministers will make of the business. Interesting it certainly is, and we have no doubt that the result will be watched with similar interest on the other side of the Atlantic.

The Jewish Historical Society has been eminently successful in arranging public lectures in the east end of London, and has been encouraged, therefore, to extend its activities to the west end. It was by no means certain how these lectures would be received, and it is therefore all the more pleasing to be able to report that the lectures so far delivered at Hampstead have been satisfactory in every way.

One or two personal notes in conclusion. We have here settled in London Mr. Harold Laski who, though an Englishman (he was born in Manchester) rose to fame in the United States. He is now back in our midst, winning golden opinions for himself as a teacher at the London School of Economics, and a writer for the Liberal press. Mr. Laski is a young man whose career seems destined to produce great things. It is good to be able to report on young men who are distinguished, when distinguished older men are gradually falling out of the ranks. Among these must be mentioned Sir Marcus Samuel, a former Lord Mayor of London, who, it appears, is slowly dying.

The London Lodge reassembled last month after the summer vacation, and picked up the threads of the various activities that have been engaging its attention during the earlier months of the year. Progress has been slow but sure, and there is much still to be done in the near future. In the next letter we hope to give some account of the activities of the lodge. For the present it is only necessary to say that it is in an exceedingly healthy condition.

JEWS WHO PERSECUTE JEWS.

There are Jews who persecute Jews, not by inflicting actual bodily injury, but by hurting their race in an even more damaging way than corporeal wounding. Their actions cut to the very vitals of Jewish reputation and character.

The Jew who bootlegs, puts a sword into the side of Jewish reputation. The Jew who does not pay his just and honorable debts, poisons Jewish credit. The Jew who gambles in public, puts a bullet into Jewish pride. The Jew who is loud and boisterous in public, puts a stiletto into Jewish self-respect. The Jew who abuses the privileges of insurance, puts disease into the vitals of Jewish honor.

The Jew who practices sharp dealings, plunders Jewish prestige. The Jew who in any way commits an unworthy or shameful act, or whose actions savor of bad faith, or whose approach to lawlessness puts him near the border of illegality or even criminality, grievously injures the good name, the honor, the reputation of Jewry as a whole, and puts a canker into Jewish character.

Surely, pernicious acts of Jews themselves, is a form of persecution as destructive in its way as the intolerance, bigotry and abuse of those who deliberately seek or wish our destruction; and it is up to us, B'nai B'rith, to burn the thought into the hearts and minds of our members who will carry the message to their friends and relatives.

BAVARIAN MINISTER OPPOSED TO ANTI-SEMITISM.

The Bavarian Minister of the Interior received a Jewish deputation, and expressed his regret at the continued anti-Semitic agitation at Munich. He promised to instruct the police to prohibit the display of anti-Jewish placards.

The Bavarian Government permitted the establishment of Jewish public schools in Munich and Nurenberg.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1921
New Moon	January 10
New Moon	February 9
New Moon	March 11
Fast of Esther	March 23
Purim	March 24
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

RIGHTEOUS INDIGNATION.

Any fair-minded American who has read the thorough-going and circumstantial rejoinders by the Anti-Defamation League to the slanderous publications recently launched against us, or the protest issued by a number of representative Jewish organizations, will admit that the note struck in these documents is one of righteous indignation. We Jews found ourselves in an extremely humiliating and painful situation that we should be called upon to refute or even to dignify with the slightest attention accusations so preposterous, so out of keeping with what the least informed among our neighbors know of us or of Judaism. Our rejoinder is inspired by the deep chagrin that a plot hatched in darkest Russia should have invaded our own country and here found abettors and sponsors, whether they belong to the malicious sort or to the gullible and easily duped. Some damage most assuredly will result by reason of the flood of invective. As Jews we will put up with it; but with our fellow citizens, we must prevent further attacks which might cause irreparable damage to the fair name of America. It is for her reputation that we feel the deepest concern. America has all that she can properly attend to, her own problems which are many and which require the united effort of all of her citizens. This land must not become a battleground for issues which are distinctly and unmistakably foreign and remote. This is supposedly the season of peace and good-will among men. Yet irresponsible persons for the most part working in the dark and striking out of the dark have attempted to ply their trade of arraying one class of citizens against another, the vast majority against a small minority. All good citizens will join to stamp out these breeders of discord and strife. It is encouraging to note that a recent writer in the North American Review, one who is by no means friendly to the alien, is candid enough to admit that in America "alien propagandists have been relatively few and, except in the instances of sporadic violence, impotent; as for the great masses of immigrants, they have been too ignorant, too hard-working, too much bent upon the week's wage, to give thought to revolution; even in the steel strike, which was essentially a strike of 'new' immigrants, the revolutionary element was negligible; the organizing leaders, were Americans and revolutionists; so everywhere, the radical element which is dangerous consists of Americans born and bred". What is true of America is true of other countries as well. The Jew is not a revolutionary, though individual Jews, who have ceased to be Jews, may be. The sins of individuals must not be charged to a whole people—a people feeble and impoverished, who have borne the brunt of the war and its aftermath, who have suffered as no other people have, and stand to suffer more unless things everywhere are righted soon and law and order are established where now every General is a law to himself and every undisciplined horde turns its fury upon the rightless and defenseless Jew. Our case is before the fair-minded public. We entertain no doubt that other voices will be joined to ours, that at last the plague that has invaded our country will be destroyed branch and root, and that the arch-plotters, whoever they may be, will be sent away to their own home, so that the very air we breathe may not be befouled by their breath.

NON-CONFORMITY.

The tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers which is now being observed in this country recalls to a small number of Americans their physical descent from those worthy progenitors or from the men who founded soon after the neighboring colony at Massachusetts Bay. They are rightly proud of their ancestry. Theirs is the place at the head of American aristocracy. But the bulk of the nation joins with them in giving honor to whom honor is due. All America glories in the noble example afforded by those early settlers of sturdy habits and serious outlook upon life. Our chief reason for bringing back to us of today the deeds of the men of three hundred years ago is the knowledge that the high principles which moved the Pilgrim Fathers to leave their native land for strange parts have stamped themselves on the coming generations and constitute the dominating factor in American life. That body of men stood for nonconformity. Prompted by their conscience to leave the Church of England they preferred exile and the hard conditions of pioneer existence rather than submit. This spirit has entered into the very life of this country. Many thousands of newcomers followed in due course of time. Some came to seek their fortunes, to find an outlet for their energies, to earn a livelihood and to obtain comfort for themselves and their families. But from time to time, not individuals, but whole masses and bodies of men, arrived at these shores, not because they were driven by physical want, but rather because in their home countries they had found themselves in a plight similar to the circumstances which impelled the Pilgrim Fathers to seek a new habitation. They came to escape religious persecution or legal discrimination to which they were being submitted by reason of their stubborn refusal to forswear their religion, or in any manner to be false to their conscience. Despite all appearances we still honor in this land conviction and gladly admit to our midst any man who flees in obedience to the dictates of his conscience. We rightfully demand of all newcomers that they show their appreciation of the boon which this country confers upon them, by their readiness to learn quickly the speech and manner of the native and to fall in with American standards of living. But all this refers to externals. In matters external utmost conformity may be demanded with justice and just as cheerfully given. A gentleman always conforms. There is virtue in following precedent and to a certain extent even fashion. But this conformity must never extend to matters in which one's conscience is involved. Here today as three centuries ago, we must firmly place ourselves upon the rock of nonconformity. The Jew may with good reason enter into the spirit of the celebration. It was not so long after the landing of the Mayflower that the first Jews appeared on this continent and on these shores. They came here because of the bigotry and fanaticism abroad which was satisfied with nothing short of the complete surrender of Judaism. They came in order to find a place where they might worship God according to their own conscience. Everywhere and throughout the centuries, the Jew has been the chief nonconformist of the world. The honor accorded in these days so universally to the dissenters of 1620 should hearten him in the firm determination to cling steadfastly to his faith, knowing that thereby he not merely remains true to his own self, but in addition that in all that the word connotes he is exemplifying the true spirit of Americanism for which the Pilgrim Fathers laid the foundation.

THE MINNEAPOLIS I. O. B. B. LODGE.

Those who the other evening saw the initiation of a class of about two hundred in the Minneapolis I. O. B. B. Lodge, and the large turn-out of the older members to witness the ceremony and to greet the neophytes, together representing a body of about five hundred of sturdy Jewish manhood, could not but feel that there was before them a human force, a Jewish force, capable of great good in the community. There is much that a group of such men, bound together by a fraternal tie, could accomplish in the interests of the community. It could be used in campaigns for raising money for educational and benevolent purposes. It could undertake the building and equipping of a large Jewish center for all Jewish educational, civic, and philanthropic activities. It could inaugurate a course of Sunday lectures in one of the down-town halls or theatres in which the general public should be enlightened on the subject of Ford's hired liar and the pack of curs back of him. It could do many big things if properly guided and stimulated.

It could and should do a small thing, to begin with, which is, however, of the greatest importance to the community. Carrying out the oft-repeated Biblical injunction "ouviarto horo mikkirbecho", (and thou shalt destroy the evil from the midst) let this group of leading Jewish citizens watch the business conduct and the civic behavior of every Jew of this city. Let it try by the use of all lawful means to discourage and to suppress any offending, law-breaking Jew even before he is caught in the toils of the law. We know that the number of such offenders is small, proportionately perhaps smaller than that of any other class, race, nationality or creed, in spite of the noise made about a Jewish law-violator in the sensation-loving and often Jew-hating newspapers; but just because every Jewish offender produces such a stench in the community, and because all Jews are humiliated and suffer in consequence, let us see to it that no Jew ever besmirch and befoul the Jewish name.

That may not be as difficult of accomplishment as it seems. A Vigilance Committee appointed by the lodge may, when its attention is called to the civic or commercial misconduct of a Jew, even though no direct law-violation is involved, or before the authorities get wind of it, give fair warning to the offender to mend his ways, with the threat that the Jewish community itself will mete out punishment for such dereliction, or call the attention of the authorities to the offender. We doubt whether any Jew would persist in a wrong course if he knew that the Jewish community itself would bring about his punishment. What cause for gratulation and rejoicing it would be for us if no Jewish name was ever dragged into the public prints in connection with law-breaking and wrong-doing! And what little harm the barking of Ford's hired cur could then do us!—[American Jewish World.

DR. RUDOLPH BLOCH.

Dr. Rudolph Bloch, attorney of Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, and Treasurer of District Grand Lodge, No. 10, departed from this life on November 2, 1920.

The district and the Order at large mourns in the departed a valuable co-worker who was ready at all times to assist with his extraordinary ability and capacity wherever his services could be most beneficial.

His nobility of character, his sound judgment, his ever ready willingness to freely give of his time and services assures to him a lasting memorial in the hearts of the members of the district, and especially of his brethren of Praga Lodge.

A CRIME AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Dr. Hughes Birckhead, director of the Emanuel Protestant Episcopal Church of Cincinnati, in the course of a sermon condemned Ford's conspiracy against the Jews as a crime against Christianity.

"Any attack against the Jews as a race not only is an offense against the spirit of America," Dr. Birckhead said, "but is a crime against Christianity. Simply because this crime has been constantly committed through 2,000 years makes it one no less today * * * "Why be disturbed over Henry Ford? One reason is that a public statement so atrocious, so utterly against the principle which makes America possible, ultimately may cause bloodshed as well as hatred. * * * In making this charge of a Jewish conspiracy for a Jewish superstate, Ford overlooked two great facts: The history of the Jews shows them brilliant, industrious, shrewd—but lacking in the one great quality necessary for a super-empire, cohesion; the Jew primarily is an individual and always has been a failure as a nationalist. The other fact is that no one ever suffered so from autocracy as the Jew and no one would lose more by the return of autocracy than the Jew. Democracy is gaining slowly throughout the world and you will find the Jew in the forefront. I have this to say to the Jew: America has a right to look to him for wonderful results. In this country as nowhere else the floodgates are open for his suppressed genius, energy, talent and will. Other nationalities are weary of failure and success while in him success is fresh. The opportunity is open to him to prove himself and to uphold high standards, not only of business, art, music and benevolences—as he has done already—but also of inclusiveness. Let him show the Christians how to love. That would be the greatest gift of all."

FORD'S JEWISH BUGABOO.

Naturally It Offends Hebrews, But Is It Worth Serious Consideration?

It appears that Henry Ford dreamed a dream in which he saw the Jews conspiring to devour the world. This would be of no consequence, since no man can stop the subconscious weavings of his mind in sleep, but Ford took the dream for fact and spread it broadcast, thereby deeply wounding the sensibilities of men of the Hebrew race.

Ford's business runs so smoothly that he has time now to concern himself with things far removed from quantity production and he has money enough to pay for printing what he likes. He will probably continue to ponder the world's perils and to pay for publicity, whether through peace ships or pamphlets. But just why any one, Jew or Gentile, should be particularly disturbed by his pronouncements is not apparent. Ford has shown himself an excellent man of business in a certain line, which was peculiarly his line; but that does not necessarily prove that he has the background or the breadth of judgment to pass critically upon the affairs of the world. One would be inclined to give much weight to his opinions on factory management, but that he is equally competent to advise us on international problems is another matter.

Ford's ideas on general subjects are probably no less and no more exact than those of the average mechanic the greater part of whose life has been rather strictly devoted to his trade. He differs from the others in being able to publish on any scale he wishes, but that does not render his opinions more valuable. They should be given the precise amount of attention they deserve.—[San Francisco Chronicle.

A FRAUD ABROAD.

Some two or three weeks ago a man presented himself at San Angelo and pretended to be an organizer for the B'nai B'rith, got an $800 diamond from one of the merchants there and also cashed a check of considerable amount and disappeared.

To assist in locating this party the following description is given: He is about 5 1-2 feet tall, weighs about 170 pounds, wears glasses, brown hair; the thumb of his right hand is deformed. He appears to be a man of about 50 or 55 years of age.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of this man is requested to have him arrested or shadowed and wire Mr. Alex Sanger at Waco or Mr. S. J. Westheimer at Houston. He is a fraud. The above publicity is requested of other papers.

Delegation of American Jewry Meets Prince Lubomirski, Polish Minister to the United States

Resolutions recently adopted at Jewish ectings calling attention to persecutions ainst Jews in Poland were presented to Polish Minister, Prince Casimir Lub-irski, at a conference, called at his in-gation, with the representatives of the ovisional American Jewish Congress and American Jewish Committee at the aldorf-Astoria.

With Prince Lubomirski was Stephen rotowski, Consul General for Poland New York. The Jewish delegation eluded Judge Julian W. Mack, Louis arshall, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Morris othenberg, Cedalia Bublick, Jacob Gins-rg, Solomon Bloomgarten, (Yehoash), illiam Edlin, Judge Gustave Hartman d Bernard G. Richards, Secretary.

The members of the delegations were in-oduced to his excellency, Prince Lub-nirski by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, and he as ell as Louis Marshall, Judge Julian W. ack, and Mr. Rothenberg, Chairman of e Executive Committee of the Provision- American Jewish Congress, made the presentations to the Polish Minister ith regard to the sufferings and indig-ties to which the Jews of Poland have een subjected.

All of the gentlemen present took part the discussion which lasted several ours. The conference began with the ading of the resolution which was dopted at the special conference of the merican Jewish Congress held on October 4, which acted upon the invitation then ceived from the Polish Minister to the nited States. The resolution which was ad by Mr. Rothenberg is as follows:

"At a conference of Delegates of the Pro-isional Organization for the Formation f the American Jewish Congress and of presentatives from other Jewish or-anizations held in the city of New York n October 24, 1920, the following action as taken:

"We have gathered for the purpose of onsidering what may be done for the re-ef of our brethren in Eastern Europe, and articularly to put an end to the indig-ities, brutalities and persecution to which hey continue to be subjected in the Ukraine and in Hungary, and in Poland nd other territories.

"So far as Poland is concerned we desire o place upon record that the Jews of the United States are not now and never have een hostile to that land. On the contrary hey have at all times sympathized with he aspirations of the Polish people for a estoration of their freedom. Because of hat fact and because of our anxiety to romote the welfare of the millions of ur brethren who now live and will continue o live in Poland, whose ancestors have or centuries lived there and regarded it as heir home, we are deeply interested in the erpetuation of the present free and inde-endent republic of Poland. We regard hat whatever tends to make the republic appy, peaceful and prosperous, at the ame time contributes to the happiness of he Jews of that land, and it is equally true hat whatever tends to the amelioration of he condition of the Jews of Poland, in-vitably will lead to the prosperity of Poland. We, therefore, view with satis-action the cessation of the warfare in which the republic of Poland has so long een engaged and we rejoice in the assur-nce that peace may henceforth be main-ained within her borders.

"In giving utterance to these sentiments we would, however, be lacking in candor f we failed to voice our grave concern at he treatment to which our brethren have een subjected in Poland for some time past. With every desire to foster amity it s apparent that so long as the Jews of Poland are compelled to suffer from the unhappy conditions to which we have adverted, those who are kin to them in America must certainly do all that lies egitimately within their power to bring out amelioration. While the Jews of America stand ready and willing to aid in the creation of a prosperous Poland, they feel justified in entertaining the expectation that Poland shall remove all obstacles that stand in the way of cooperation by the Jews of Poland in the attainment of what should be the united purpose of all of the inhabitants of Poland—its social, economic, civic and political development. In order to speed the realization of that purpose, it is our earnest hope that the Polish government may proceed at once to carry out in letter and spirit the terms of the so-called Minority Treaty which was promulgated on June 28, 1919, and which thereafter was confirmed by the Polish Diet. To do this the following action is deemed necessary:

"1. To issue immediate orders addressed to the Polish Army forbidding attacks upon the persons of interference with the property of the Jewish inhabitants of Poland.

"2. To take the necessary steps to bring such orders to the attention of the officers and soldiers of the Polish Army.

"3. To issue similar proclamation addressed to all civilians and to take such measures as shall bring the same to the attention of the entire public.

"4. To prohibit the display or dissemination of all posters, signs and placards and the circulation of all newspapers and other publications that may incite or tend to provoke attacks upon the Jews or that may in any way tend to subject them to violence, contempt or ridicule.

"5. To take such measures as shall be necessary to enforce the several provisions of the Minority Treaty, and especially such as guarantee the racial, religious and linguistic minorities of Poland, freedom from political or economic discrimination.

"6. To take especial precautions during the period of the demobolization of the Army to prevent excesses against the Jews."

At the close of the conference the Polish Minister made the following statement:

"I endeavored to make clear to the conference that for nearly two years, owing to the war with Soviet Russia, an abnormal state of affairs had obtained in Poland and that such things, as those of which these gentlemen complained were held by my government in deepest reprobation. Now that peace has come to Poland, my government in accordance with its traditional good-will to its Jewish citizens is sure to put forth every endeavor in order to prevent any excesses and indignities against Jews such as are inspired in largest part by the excitement incident to a state of war.

"In this spirit, Poland in good faith became a party to the treaty for the protection and equal rights of racial, religious and linguistic minorities and by an overwhelming vote of the Polish Diet, ratified and confirmed that Minority Treaty, and needless to say, will carry out its provisions.

"I know that my government has already taken steps severely and exemplarily to punish those who have been found guilty of violence against the person or property of Jews. I read to the conference a report I recently received from my government, which detailed their execution of death penalties upon Polish soldiers who were taken committing excesses upon Jews.

"The Minister of War, moreover, has issued on October 24, 1920, the most stringent regulations in order to prohibit officers or soldiers of the army from committing acts of violence against the Jews of Poland and these regulations of special importance during the period of demobilization, are if occasion demands, to be strictly and inexorably enforced by court-martial.

"I have no doubt that with the beginning of the regime of peace the state of affairs, called by the gentlemen, "The economic boycott," but which seems to me to have been only an ordinary consequence of war will cease, and that concerning provocative and inflammatory anti-Jewish articles in Polish newspapers, the government will use its whole power to prevent them.

"I heard with much satisfaction the assurance given by Messrs. Mack, Marshall, Wise, Rothenberg and their colleagues that they deeply rejoice in the reparation of the crime done Poland by the partitions, that they have been and continue to be the sincerest well-wishers of the Polish republic. They understand, as I do, that in a free and enlightened republic such as Poland, all elements of the population must work together for the well-being of their common country in the spirit of good will and mutual respect and that the Jews of Poland can and will loyally serve Poland, which is resolved upon such a course of justice toward all its peoples as alone were worthy of its spirit and traditions.

"My government has resumed a series of meetings, interrupted by the war, with the leaders of the Jewish people of Poland and from these meetings will undoubtedly come the longed-for harmony of spirit and unity of action between the various elements of the country essential to its permanent peace and well-being. I shall have pleasure in forwarding to my government the resolutions submitted to me by the gentlemen, together with an expression of my earnest hope that the conference which I summoned may be helpful toward the end desired by all of us—the permanent betterment of relations between the Polish government and its Jewish citizens."

Dr. Wise, to whom the invitation for a conference with representatives of the American Jewish Congress and other organizations was addressed and who introduced the members of the delegation to his excellency, made the following comment on the results of the conference, his statement having the concurrence of the entire delegation.

"My associates and I are persuaded of the sincere desire of the Polish Minister to our country to impress upon his government the importance and urgency of ending Jewish persecutions in Poland, alike from the viewpoint of Polish welfare and the relations between Poland and these United States. However, added Dr. Wise, in view of insult and injury endured for years by our fellow-Jews in Poland, while appreciative of the assurance given by his excellency, we cannot and ought not to remain satisfied until we know that every manner of Jewish persecution in Poland has ceased."

THE SECRETARY AN IMPORTANT OFFICER.

Next to the Mastership, if in fact not fully as important to the lodge, is the office of Secretary. Here in Chicago, Masters are chosen annually, while there are Secretaries who seem to go on forever. The official duties of the Secretary of any Chicago lodge are many and more varied than those designated in the ritual. They vary in their nature from those of priest and pastor to that of lawyer and general factotum. He has the pleasant job of keeping a set of books, which involves hundreds of petty accounts, besides many miscellaneous matters. He is general salesmanager and serves on various committees; he must visit the sick, settle disputes, pour oil on the troubled waters of animosities and petty jealousies between individual members and the officers. He must mix more or less with the brethren and have the law at his fingers' ends. He must be pleasant to those he meets, but he is then termed a mere jollier, whereas, if he is unsociable he is an iceberg. He must guide the widow and orphan, and when he does he is "taking too intimate an interest in them". Duty demands that he confer with the other officers of the lodge concerning their work but in so doing he is "trying to run the whole works" and if he does not, he is letting everything go to the dickens. He is supposed to be always in a good humor, yet if he is, he is frivolous, and if not, he is a grouch. He is the main distributor of the patronage of the lodge and in this he is frequently charged with partiality. But the office of Secretary affords an opportunity for real service not equalled, perhaps, by that of any other position in the lodge.

While there are some Secretaries who their respective lodges would no doubt be as well off without, most of them are efficient and hard working, and merit in the southeast corner should not fail of its reward at election time.—[Masonic Chronicler.

ENGLISH JEWS UNITE TO COMBAT ANTI-SEMITISM.

London, (J. C. B. Nov. 22).—The Jewish Board of Deputies at its meeting yesterday was informed by Lucien Wolf, Secretary of the Joint Foreign Committee of organized Anglo-Jewry, that the League of Nations had accepted the committee's proposals and would in future take effective measures against pogroms. In this connection the meeting was informed, Mr. Wolf proceeds to Geneva tomorrow. The committee heard some shocking reports of the fresh pogroms in Ukrainia and devoted a considerable portion of its time to a discussion on the best method to combat anti-Semitism. At the suggestion of Lord Rothschild, it was decided to found a special committee which should be a representative of the Jewish Board of Deputies, the Anglo-Jewish Association and the League of British Jews, and which should devote itself to offsetting the work of anti-Semites.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY WIEN LODGE, VIENNA, AUSTRIA.

Wien, the oldest lodge in our city celebrated, on the 14th of November 1920, its silver jubilee. It was a celebration worthy of the importance, which Wien lodge has earned by its activities in the communal life of Vienna, and expressive of the character of our Order.

The celebration was held in the central orchestra hall, one of the largest and most beautiful edifices, to make it possible for all the brethren and their wives to attend. It was an appropriate setting for this magnificent family affair, for such it must be considered, as long before the hour set, all the brethren and their wives, dressed for the occasion and in a happy mood, had filled every seat of this capacious hall. The welfare societies and all important organizations who are interested in Jewish advancement and culture were represented by their most active and prominent members. Our fraternity, which is composed of the best and most influential families of Viennese Judaism, and who stand everywhere at the head of the institutions which exemplify the ideals of our Order and all it aims for, were present to witness this splendid festival.

After a solemn organ prelude, the President of Wien Lodge, Brother Dr. Kohn, greeted those present and especially welcomed the Chief-Rabbi, Dr. Chajes, and the delegates of the visiting lodges.

Among those who honored us with their presence were: Brother Dr. Sonnenschein, Past President of Silesia, who represented the Grand Lodge of the Tenth District; Brother Dr. Bollag, representing the Augustin-Keller Lodge of Zurich; and many brethren who formerly were affiliated with the lodges Bohemia, Praga, Philanthropia, Moravia, and Orient of this district.

The President of the Vienna Congregation, with a number of the directorate, were among the assemblage, but they being all members of the Order, needed no special introduction or welcome.

Past President Prof. Dr. Jerusalem's oration was the most brilliant event of the evening. In a thoughtful, earnest, and truly classical style did he picture the activities and accomplishments of the lodge from its very inception, and cautioned his hearers, in a touching peroration, not to lose courage, no matter how dark the moment, but appealed to them to go to the task with added courage, strength, and vigor, to build anew for the future and to accomplish and bring to fruition the high ideals of the Order. Well deserved, spontaneous, and long-continued applause rewarded the speaker for his masterly effort.

Grand President Prof. Dr. Ehrmann presented in his customary thoughtful manner the congratulations of the Grand Lodge.

Past President Dr. Sonnenschein, representing the Grand Lodge of the Tenth District, in a few well-chosen words, spoke of the former Union, and pointed out, no matter how many political divisions may have been created, the inner unity must never be broken nor lost sight of.

Brother Kempler, a Trustee of the Vienna Congregation, in presenting his felicitations, recalled in grateful words the great and immeasurable services of the departed brethren.

Brother Dr. Weiss, President of the Eintracht, spoke then for the other three lodges which first sprang from the mother lodge Wien. Beautiful was his comparison as regards the relationship of the lodges to each other, "as that of a fond mother to her well-bred daughter".

Brother Sonnenschein, the President of the Covenant of Youth (Jugendbund), touchingly spoke of the influence and ideals, which inspired the Jugendbund, whose membership is composed mostly of sons and relatives of our brethren.

Brother Dr. Jepal, the famous singer to the piano accompaniment of Mrs. Leonie Feigl, brought the celebration to a fitting close by singing the "Allmacht" so feelingly and expressively that the hearts of the hearers were deeply moved to the highest devotion, and long after the last peals of the organ had died away, everyone remained spellbound in their seats.

It was a celebration and a festival long to be remembered and treasured by all those who had the honor to take part in it and the pleasure to attend it—a celebration worthy of the meaning and purposes of our much beloved Order.

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

IV.

BEFORE continuing my subject, a remark may not be out of place. Some readers may think the whole subject to be remote from present-day Jewish interest. The wiser ones, I have been assured, consider it eminently timely. But there is a third group, not a very large one, possibly an individual here and an individual there, which has a private opinion about the person of the founder of Christianity, which in fact considers his existence a mere fable, and for anybody to take the story of his life seriously betrays in their judgment a spirit of yielding to our neighbors and a desire to win their favor. It has been said that the Jew has an inherent right to think about the origins of Christianity as he pleases. I do not believe this contention to be a true one. Only the student of antiquity has a right to an opinion. The student, if he is a searcher after truth, should eliminate not only personal prepossessions but also the inherited point of view which comes to him through time-long prejudice whether for or against a subject or person. Now, the scholarship that merits attention is the one which is fully abreast of the times. A question which is perennially studied has many angles from which it may be approached, and newer and fresher minds are constantly wrestling with the ancient problem. To ignore them and to hide behind a scepticism of half a century ago will not further true research. After all, it makes little difference whether the life of the founder of Christianity as depicted in the Gospels was a reality or not, or whether he lived at all. You cannot in sheer obduracy shut your eyes to the picture, to the ideas running through the story, to the controversies with Jewish teachers, to the inimical attitude towards Judaism. Who cares whether the utterances credited to Jesus were made by him?—I believe they were—the fact is that they were made by somebody and that these constitute the great misunderstanding between Judaism and Christianity. And I for one have set myself the task of gauging its true proportions and of presenting it in its true light.

We have seen it said, and said by Christian scholars, that one of the differences concerned the Law, how in the Gospel account the inwardness of obedience to the Law is made the primary object. We saw how from that point of view Jesus is rigorous in matters of divorce and lenient as to the observance of the Sabbath. Let us take up the latter subject first. It is eminently timely and calls for clear thinking and courageous handling.

It is immaterial for our present purposes whether the Jew may be credited with having originated the institution of the Sabbath. I believe on good ground that the world is in reality indebted to the Jew for that boon. What of similarities have been detected elsewhere is of the nature of a rudiment as compared with the finished organism. The Babylonian Sabbath may and may not have occurred periodically every seventh day; but it was regarded as an unlucky day and no labor might be done on that day for this very reason. Contrast the Jewish Sabbath which was a "delight," a pleasure, and the Sabbath rest which was the highest spiritual bliss on earth, a foretaste of the bliss which the righteous are to enjoy in the world to come. Cessation from labor served in Israel from the very beginning a social purpose; "in order that thy manservant and maidservant may rest like thee." Even the dumb animal was to have surcease on that day. Rest on the Sabbath day was a recognition of God as the world's creator, who after his work of six days was done, rested on the seventh. What the Sabbath rest meant to the Jew during the centuries of dark Ghetto existence is well known. The apostate Heine glorified the transformed being who, on the other days of the week, led the life of a dog, of a beast of burden, hunted and humiliated at every turn, a butt to the jests of his tormentors, and on the Sabbath day, in his own dwelling, surrounded by his wife and children, seated at a table with a fresh clean cloth, with candles burning brightly, felt the cheer and restfulness and the mental freedom from care as becomes a human being. He was indeed endowed with a [illegible] soul. How the house of God assumed an aspect of brightness and of joy! The tears of mourning were dried on the Sabbath day. Nothing should mar the bliss of perfect rest. It was a day sanctified. The song of love was recited on the eve of Sabbath, the song of communion of Israel and God. What a beautiful poem the song that bade the Divine Lover meet with Israel the Queen Sabbath! "Enter in peace, thou who art Crown of thy Husband, in joy and exultation, in the midst of the faithful ones of the people of God's own possession, enter, O Bride, enter, O Bride!" And at the table, between courses, hymns and songs of praise were intoned, all the members of the household joining, to thank God for the boon of rest, for His most precious gift. All the Jew's thinking was to be centered in the Sabbath. Religion was not a matter of week-end, only to be forgotten the rest of the week. But all the striving and all the labor of the week was with a view to its cessation on the Sabbath. The goodly, appetizing morsel was reserved for the Sabbath. The best garments were for the Sabbath. Joy was to reign supreme, and all lugubriousness was banished.

Little did the average Jew care for the casuistry of the schools. He longed for rest and rest was no burden. Still the teachers in the schools did exercise their ingenuity in determining minutely the kinds of labor forbidden, what might be worn as an ornament and what might not be carried as a burden, and out of the general prohibition of servile labor, mountains upon mountains of detailed prohibition were heaped up. If we glance into the treatise of the Mishnah or the codes we may find everything forbidden. It reminds us of the everlasting word for which Germany is so well known. Still even the Codes do not go the length of forbidding light amusements which do not entail actual labor. I am far from pleading for the strict observance of the Sabbath which would make a sin of crushing a leaf or of carrying an umbrella or a handkerchief in one's pocket. Jewish life in the Ghetto was circumscribed. The Jewish dwellings were not far removed from the Synagogue. Perhaps an all too strict observance of the Sabbath in modern conditions would entail unthought-of hardships. As a matter of fact even observant Jews are taking the law into their own hands and are permitting themselves many laxities which the time conditions make imperative.

How far the restrictions were carried in the days of the founder of Christianity we know not. We are told that he clashed with the teachers on the subject of strict observance. He is said to have stood for a liberal interpretation of the kind of labor to be abstained from. He made the remark that the Sabbath was given to man and not man to the Sabbath, and that therefore the son of a man, that is man, is lord or sovereign over the Sabbath. We find the exact counterpart in the saying of a Rabbi: To you the Sabbath is given, but you are not given over to the Sabbath. A wise corrective of which we stand in need particularly today. Men who invoke the name of the master, who call themselves good Christians, are just now preparing by dictatorial methods to obtain national and state legislation for a strict observance of Sunday. We sympathize entirely with the spirit. If Sunday rest could be made complete by voluntary exertion of the individual and without detriment to his neighbor, all well and good. But to impose upon the citizens compulsory rest is entirely foreign to the spirit of our governmental life. Churchgoing on Sunday ought to be the Christian's own concern. He should not look to legislatures to force it upon him. Moreover, the men of other faiths like Jews and Seventh-day adventists—and men who though observing Sunday are by no means ready to acquiesce in the banishment of any amusements on that day, ought to be considered. But the one thing which stands out clearly is the total reversal of the founder's own attitude to the Sabbath. It must be remembered that the early Christians gave up the Sabbath, and when the Lord's day was observed, it was really observed as a week day, solely in commemoration of the resurrection. The very service on Sunday is the reverse of the Jewish. There is no emphasis on the notion of rest. The Sunday service is much more like a Jewish penitential service, a miniature Day of Atonement. Penitential prayers are forbidden on the Jewish Sabbath. We know that the Puritans were influenced by the Jewish Scriptures rather than by Gospel in turning Sunday into the Sabbath and in demanding as complete a cessation from labor as possible. We rather commend their spirit. It shows again, and this is the very purpose of this series of papers, how small that great misunderstanding was, which means to say that the corrective to an exaggerated restriction of Sabbath labor is needed at all times, and on the other hand, how essential it is for the organized church to ignore such correctives and to insist on the letter of the law. Of course, what was feasible in Puritan communities of small size may not be found workable in large modern communities of heterogeneous elements. Piety cannot be commanded by legislation. It is of the heart, inward. It is true again that the Jewish notion of Sabbath bliss would be impossible without the other side which seemingly makes for a burden, but in reality prepares the way for spiritual rest. But the point is that such are present conditions that the roles seem to be reversed. Churchmen who name themselves as followers of the Galilean teacher are zealous for an observance of the Sabbath regulated by law and for infractions of Sunday rest to be punished by law, while those of us who hold on to Sabbath observance and to cessation from labor on the seventh day ordained in the Decalogue are feeling our way to a milder interpretation of the law, remembering that the surest way to accomplish the purpose for which the Sabbath exists is to follow the Rabbinic motto prescribed, it is true, for festival days: Half unto you, and half unto God. And we might counsel our Christian neighbors to abide by the same division. Modern conditions demand it, human nature requires it. At any rate we are afforded an excellent concrete example in which the great misunderstanding has lost much of its severity. For after all, on the spirit of the institution we are all united. As to the letter, there is room for individual difference of opinion.

BAPTIST MINISTERS PETITION PRESIDENT WILSON TO STOP PERSECUTION OF JEWS.

Two hundred twenty-five Baptist ministers present at the New York Conference of Baptist Ministers held at the Madison Avenue Baptist Church on Monday, November 1, passed resolutions asking President Wilson to use his good efforts to stop persecution and massacre of Jews in Europe. The resolutions were introduced by Rev. Charles Francis McKoy, pastor of the Greene Avenue Baptist Church of Brooklyn, and were unanimously passed. The full text was as follows:

To the Honorable Woodrow Wilson,
Washington, D. C.

Honorable Sir:

The New York Baptist Ministers' Conference having noted with deep regret the frequent reports in the press of the Jewish massacres in Europe;

Do, on this, the first day of November, nineteen hundred twenty, again place ourselves on record as opposed to the persecution of the Jews. We do not believe in racial persecution nor in religious intolerance. As Baptists we believe in the largest possible measure of religious liberty and condemn most severely those who persecute and murder people of different religious opinions.

We also express our sympathy to those who have suffered as the result of such persecution and assure them that we are ready and willing with all who are seeking to make the recurrence of such massacre impossible.

We also desire to request the President of the United States to use, if possible, his good offices to prevent future massacres of Jews in Europe.

HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT DEFEATED ON ANTIJEWISH MEASURE RESIGNED.

(Vienna, J. C. B. Service.)

In an effort to further curb Jewish commercial effort in Hungary the Minister of Finance Koranyi introduced a measure restricting the establishment of small financial institutions and restraining the growth of those already existing. The Hungarian parliament fearing that such a measure would hurt the commercial interests of non-Jews as well, defeated the project whereupon the government resigned.

EFFORTS BY PRESBYTERIANS TO EVANGELIZE JEWS.

Statement by Mr. J. Walter Freiberg, President, U. A. H. C.

Leading Jews of America united in protest against the announced proposal of the Presbyterian Church to undertake an evangelization campaign among the Jews of New York City. Through the Union of American Hebrew congregations, a national organization of Jewish synagogues, whose New York headquarters are 24 East 21st Street, they issued a statement, calling upon the Jews of New York and throughout the country to reply to the efforts of the Presbyterian Church to convert them, by strengthening their allegiance to their own religion and supporting its institutions more vigorously than ever before.

The fact that the Presbyterian Church has nearly $200,000 available for Jewish proselytizing while the union is at present endeavoring to raise $3,500,000 in ten years for a fund for revival of Judaism among Jews, is stressed in the statement, made on behalf of the union by Mr. J. Walter Freiberg of Cincinnati, President of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

"A few days ago announcement was made that the Rev. John Stuart Cummings had established headquarters at 156 Fifth Avenue and had begun his duties as Superintendent of the Department of Jewish Evangelization for the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions," Mr. Freiberg said. "At first we were inclined to regard this as a piece of impertinence, for the Jewish faith is the mother of all existing Christian sects. It has never endeavored to win proselytes from other sects. Nor has Judaism ever been regarded as a heathen sect, in need of conversion. We have given out belief in a Supreme Being to all the Christian churches of the world; but rather than regard this announcement as an impertinence, we prefer to consider it a challenge. Admitting that some Jews have drifted away in a measure from traditional Judaism, we nevertheless feel safe in stating that they will eventually find the answer to their religious cravings in Judaism rather than in any proselytizing Christian sect. This affront to the Jews of America must be answered in one way, by decisive action that will demonstrate that the Jew desires his faith more ardently than any other; that his support of his own religious institutions is unanimous and whole-hearted.

"We have ourselves recognized the need for more widespread religious activity among our coreligionists and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations is at present conducting a national campaign for a $3,500,000 fund to be used for the development of a ten year extension program, to bring Judaism to every Jew, in farm and city. The Presbyterian Church has seen fit to appropriate nearly $200,000 to bring Presbyterianism to the Jews. We feel that the Jews of America will gladly give many times that amount for the preservation of Judaism, and for its regeneration and growth among Jews themselves."

A "flying squadron" of 163 speakers is now touring the country addressing mass meetings in 225 cities in the interest of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Mr. Manny Strauss and Dr. Nathan Krass head the delegation that is touring the country from coast to coast.

CANADIAN RELIEF BUREAU IN REVAL WILL TRANSMIT MONEY AND LETTERS TO SOVIET RUSSIA.

London (J. C. B. Service).—The relief worker of the Canadian Jews, Saltzman, arrived at Reval, where he is making provision for the transmission of moneys and letters to Soviet Russia, according to a dispatch received here from Reval. The Canadian Relief Bureau, declared Mr. Saltzman, who has just returned from Moscow, is authorized to carry on its activities by the Soviet Relief Committee and the Joint Distribution Committee's relief commission in Moscow. Mr. Saltzman again emphasized the fact that delegates from individual Landsmanschaften will be barred by the Soviet authorities. Prior to his departure from Moscow, Mr. Saltzman met a delegation of Ukrainian Jews who drew a terrible picture of the ruin and disaster which have overtaken Ukrainian Jewry. At an early date Mr. Saltzman proceeds to Ukrainia in order to see how best their misery can be alleviated.

"The Jewish Peril"

Letter to the Editor of "The Christian," London, England

THE appearance of a pamphlet, entitled "The Jewish Peril," will have doubtless come under your notice, and you will have observed that it has given rise to a considerable stir in public opinion. The reflection of this (and the stimulus to it also) in the public press, constitutes in some respects a new feature in this country. n certain quarters evidence and argument are carefully employed to support he view that a group of Jews has been predominant in secret schemes to produce he collapse of Christianity and of the present order of things, by the fomenting of war and revolution; in other quarters his view is confirmed by prophetic teachers on the ground that it corresponds with certain predictions of the close of this age. n the Jewish press again, and in certain secular journals, the idea that Jews should be so diabolical as to plot in this manner s scouted as a nightmare, a new policy of anti-Semitism, an instrument by which, ntentionally or otherwise, a general atack on Jews and their property will ultimately be produced.

I regard the inception of this new phase of the Jewish question as very grave and ominous. It has not been entirely unexpected, and though still in its early stages, t is likely, for many reasons, to persist and mature. It bears the character of hose threatening rumblings and darkenng skies which herald the outbreak of a storm. It is to be observed that the persecution of Jews, sometimes social or political, sometimes popular and brutal, which was practiced in Germany, Austria and Russia, and for which, among other reasons, the judgments of God have fallen so heavily on those empires, were inspired at their commencement in the same way. t was the public discussion of the demerits of certain groups of Jews, which awakened latent prejudices, made Jew-hatred popular, and ripened into insult, brutality and spoliation. The fact that Jews bitterly resented the criticisms levelled against them, and generally retorted n such a manner as to excite rather than allay public sentiment, only accelerated he process. It had the effect also of bringing the whole Jewish community under the odium which but a small section of Jews, if at all, deserved. The modicum of truth in the charges against a fraction of the Jewish population gave ballast to bitter and brutal vengeance on countless innocents.

As to the genuineness or ungenuineness of "The Jewish Peril", which purports to give the minutes of a secret conclave of Freemason Jews in Paris—as to the multitude of data which has since been collected and published to indicate that from the French Revolution onward, and especially at present, sinister forces, predominantly Jewish, have been and are at work to foment strife, political, industrial and social, in order to cause such chaos so that a new form of world government, anti-Christian and autocratic, may be established—there seems to be no means of conclusive proof or disproof. Like many others, I hold definite opinions; unlike others, I can base them on an experience almost if not quite unique, in opportunities of study of the causes and effects of anti-Semitism in Europe; but opinions will not decide the matter.

The great outstanding fact is that the incipient stages of a new Jewish persecution are in progress; that even if the grave charges against certain Jewish conspirators be true, the ventilation of them in public is calculated to excite already existing prejudices into the blind and positive penalizing of a whole race; that it is calculated to infect Great Britain and America with the virus of vindictive anti-Semitism and its baneful effects; and to bring in time the same curse on the Anglo-Saxon race as has fallen upon the Teuton and the Slav.

Whether this fulfills prophecy or not, it is to be resisted by every available means and by everything and everybody that is truly Christian, for it is no creation of the imagination.

I have tried to save your space by the omission of much that demands utterance; and now that excision and compression have been exercised to the full, I submit that the matter is of such gravity, to the country, to the Jews, to the cause of God, as to justify the publication of this letter in the columns of your valued magazine, in the hope that some definite steps may forthwith be taken by means of which Christian sympathy with, instead of antipathy to, the chosen race, may be demonstrated.

Yours faithfully,
SAMUEL H. WILKINSON.

The Tragic Situation of Jews in Poland

A Striking Description by an American Officer

THE New York Globe has the following special correspondence by Major Sanford Griffith, an American officer in Poland:

Warsaw, Poland (By Mail).—"If it were not for American aid a fourth of the Jewish population here in Poland would have starved," a prominent Jewish physician here in Warsaw remarked to me.

"My visits to the Ghetto here and in towns on the line of the Bolshevists advance fully confirmed the accuracy of this statement. There can be no doubt that a large number of the 5,000,000 Jews in Poland would have gone under, and that nearly as large a number who have not the good fortune to have relatives in America are at present in various stages of starvation.

"The immediate effects of hunger are hard to measure. They show themselves in undergrowth, apathy, arrested mental development. These are all characteristic of the Jewish population here. When the Bolshevist forces were pushing on to Warsaw these symptoms of hunger were terribly accelerated as each day herds of frightened refugees, helpless and penniless, increased the back-wash and misery of the city. Already the misery in the Ghetto of Warsaw makes these streets look like alleys in a Turkish village in famine year. The siege of the city, if it had been prolonged, or its capture would have been a death sentence for a large part of the Jewish population.

"The present plight of the Jews in Poland is not the result of any malicious project of extermination, but the direct consequence of the economic chaos created by the war. The force and vigor of the Polish Christian people comes from the land. The future of the nation is assured, whatever the outcome of the present struggle, because 70 per cent of them are on the farms. But the Polish Jews have lived and thrived by industry and trade, on the manipulation of a delicate machinery which has been completely junked during the war. Factories are paralyzed and have been during the greater part of the war. For a time trade continued in a more or less badly crippled way and many Jews adapted themselves to the abnormal conditions and continued to make money. But the masses, less enterprising, have only suffered from closed markets, hindered transportation, and other difficulties. Now most of this irregular trade has ceased. Goods are not to be had. The Poles have become a poor people who cannot buy even where the goods do exist.

"The low state of the Polish Jews makes them particularly helpless to pull themselves out of their present plight. Orthodoxy here has taken its worst forms. A large part of the Jews in Poland know only the organization of their cult, and this most too often has been a narrow, ritualized, strait-jacket which has kept the Jews apart from the Polish population about them. It has tended to keep them illiterate and familiar only with their own language. Above all, it has handicapped them in the present struggle for life. This must be said of the lowest form of Jewish orthodoxy in Poland, without in any way intending to detract from the high attainments of its enlightened representatives there.

"The hatred existing between the Polish Jews and the Christians, whatever form it may take, is at the bottom, largely economic. It is none the less accentuated by the low culture of the Polish Jews themselves. This is most conspicuous in the gulf which separates them from the large number of so-called assimilated Jews, those who have dropped their old Jewish traditions and taken up Polish ones. Many of these assimilated Jews hold positions of wealth and influence; but they are so conscious of the difference between themselves and their old kinsmen, and so eager to seem a part of the new set, that they have not responded so generously as the American Jews to the support of their poor kinsmen here.

"Not only does the economic disorder due to the war make the situation of the Polish Jews a critical one, but the evolution of the economic system in Poland tends to make living impossible for an increasing number of them. For centuries business remained exclusively in the hands of the Jews. But in the last generation an increasing number of Poles have left the land and have taken an active part in commerce and industry. The competition here has become increasingly acute, and unlike other countries, the Jew in Poland has not the training sufficient to hold his ground.

"The combination of factors which makes life difficult for a large part of the Jewish population in Poland has given the entire 5,000,000 the dream that they will go to America. Over 200,000 have sailed. Some 300,000 more are at various stages of preparation for departure. There are at present some 10,000 Jews here in Warsaw who have fulfilled all of the preliminary requirements and who are storming the doors of the American consulate for the necessary vise.

"Of this 10,000, seventy-five per cent are women and children who have brothers and fathers in America who have sent them money and can give them homes. Many of them come from the battle zones in Ukraine and eastern Poland. Their plight is now a real one. Some know that the money was sent them, but in the present disorder have not received it. Others had money, but in the long delay necessary to secure the American vise have spent what little they had and are now on the streets.

"Here is a typical case which I myself have seen, and which has been repeated a hundred times over. A mother with four children from Rovno had $300. Her husband in America sent it and is awaiting her arrival. She could not produce all of her papers, however, because her village is occupied. When finally she overcame this formality her money was gone. Her number on the list for vises is still 2,000 off, and the consulate is only organized to give 250 a day. In the meantime she is on the street. One of her children has died from hunger and another is in a serious condition.

"The reason for this congestion at the consulate, it appears, is a shortage of clerical personnel. The number of demands has been larger than the State Department anticipated. But the present state of affairs has existed for months. The emigrants, it appears, must obtain their receipts from a single stub book, and this takes time. That the government makes it a matter of policy to exclude certain classes of people can be understood; but that people like these unfortunate families starving here, whose bread-winners are in America and who in principle are acceptable to the government, should be excluded because of a clerical shortage is a deplorable situation which could have been avoided.

"American Jews have in thousands of cases come to the relief not only of their immediate families over here, but of entire villages. Blum is a haberdasher in a middle-western city. He came to America a poor Polish Jew and made 'his pile.' As soon as conditions permitted he came to Poland this summer to help his family. He speaks broken English, writes with difficulty, but is full of American push and is an American through and through. He not only brought over his own fortune, but collected funds among his friends for their families and came over with enough dollars to be converted into 38,000,000 Polish marks. I saw Blum after he returned to Danzig from Poland. He had with him forty-eight near and distant relatives. He had put three Polish villages back on their feet, and as he put it, it was 'the kaiser and the whole cheese to them.' When I saw him he had just installed his large family in the Danzig sanitary station to be washed and cleaned. He had chartered a couple of freight cars to get them across Poland, and was now out buying a crate of oranges for them.

"Yesterday I met another of these new Americans who has not forgotten his family in Poland. He has already sent four of his immediate relatives to America and now is attempting to get out two sisters. He spent all his money, and, without knowing me, only that I was an American, implored me with tears in his eyes to help him. I never go to the consulate without some experience of this sort. Among the hundreds who wait outside the doors some walk desperately up and down or gesticulate with the Polish policeman at the door, while others who have been coming for weeks sit dejectedly along the gutters—human tragedies—which can only be averted by the all-powerful little rubber stamp called the vise."

CARE OF POOR JEWISH CHILDREN BY THE B'NAI B'RITH IN SWITZERLAND

We publish herewith a report of Mr. Sol Roos of St. Louis with reference to the use of the money sent by the American lodges for the care of Jewish children by he B'nai B'rith in Switzerland.

St. Louis, November 8, 1920.

Mr. A. Fenchel,
Secy., Ebn Ezra Lodge, No. 47,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I am in receipt of your favor of October 25, and would be only too happy to accept the kind invitation of the lodge to deliver an address at the next meeting, on my travels abroad and especially pertaining to the information I received as to how the money sent by American Lodges for the care of German and Austrian Children is spent, but business necessitates my being out of town the second week in November so it will be impossible for me to be present at the meeting.

May I ask you to submit to the members of the lodge the following information:

While in Zurich, Switzerland, I called on Rabbi Dr. Littman, the former President of the B'nai B'rith Lodge there, as well as on Mr. Max Weil Bruell, the present President. Both convinced me that all money is being put to excellent use and that the children taken care of so far in Switzerland were badly in need of recreation and good food.

I also visited one of the camps which at that time accommodated about sixty Austrian children and my talks with the children and their appearance confirmed the fact that we must do all in our power to give these poor little fellows a new start in life.

Up to now the lodge in Switzerland took care mostly of children of Austrian brothers for the reason that the money at the disposal of the lodge was very limited and they naturally wanted to assist first of all, the children of lodge members. However, Dr. Littman pointed out that there is no definite rule as to this and he would be only too happy to take care of other Jewish children provided the necessary money for their support comes forward.

Immediately after the armistice a good many private families took one or two of these poor children into their household but as time went on these families refused to take further children so that at this time the Zurich Lodge must take care of the German and Austrian children in public institutions. Figures were submitted to me showing that the expense involved in properly taking care of one child at such an institution for six to eight weeks is between $90.00 to $100.00.

Mr. Max Weil Bruell urged me to thank the President of our lodge and through him all the other American lodges, for the money so far sent and he asked me to assure the lodge that any further remittances will be used for the same good cause and that if requested, a detailed account of all expenditures will be furnished. I was informed that our St. Louis Lodge is the biggest individual American contributor and knowing conditions abroad from personal observation I hope that we can continue to make liberal contributions for this worthy cause.

If consistent with our rules, I believe it in order to submit the facts as given above, to the other American B'nai B'rith Lodges and thus impress upon them the necessity for doing the utmost for these poor children.

Fraternally yours,
SOL ROOS.

News from Austria

DIOGENES, so the story goes, once walked through the streets of ancient Athens in broad daylight with a lighted lantern in his hand, looking for an honest and upright man, but found none. Wending his way to the market place, he shouted: "Listen to me," and when the populace crowded about him, he sneeringly called to them: "I called for men, but you are only dwarfs."

The same call is needed today in Austria. We are in need of an honest man, a man of great courage, a man with a prophetic vision. A man with a broad and keen intellect and understanding, who can grasp the real nature of things and not be blinded by the external appearance of things. A man who fully comprehends the magnitude of our misfortune and who possesses the capacity to save our Fatherland from utter destruction.

Such a man we seek, alas, in vain. He is nowhere to be found, so far. As proof, we point to the recent elections; to the candidates who offered themselves as the people's representatives for the Senate (Reichsrat); and mainly in reviewing the events of the recent past.

During the war-years, conditions grew continuously from bad to worse, but the knowledge and hope that peace must finally come kept up our spirits. Peace has been with us now for two years, but what has it brought to us Austrians, and especially Viennese? "Added misery."

We suffer more under this peace than we did in the terrible war-years and we cry in despair: "When will this 'peace' end? When will the time come when we can look again with hope into the future?"

The manner in which the campaign for the coming Congress ("Nationalrat") was conducted reveals in a most shocking way the political degradation of Austria and its legislative system. In the political meetings, there was no discussion of the urgent and pressing questions of the day, such as supplying food for the mass of the people or devising ways and means of stopping the unprecedented and continual rise in the cost of living. Instead, the candidates wasted their activities in petty accusations and insignificant complaints, not forgetting their customary habits of inciting race against race, nationality against nationality, creed against creed, and even professions against professions. And in this wretched business the so-called people's representatives were ably seconded by their press.

Not a single thought was given to the important question of how to extricate Austria from its isolation, nor a single proposal by what method it may be possible to resume relations with the so-called secessionist states, so that the economic conditions may be improved.

Pursuing, precisely as in the past, their favorite subject is brought forth: "The Jew is to blame for it all!" He is directly charged and held responsible for every mishap and misfortune, and where such is not done openly and directly, by innuendos, which have the same result and effect. It is quite instructive and amusing to observe that while some charge the Jews as being against the Union with Germany and supporters of the Danube Federation of States, others again charge them with being mostly to blame for the disruption of old Austria. A strong national policy is being crowded out by such petty party politics, and the worst consequence of it all, sad to say, is an ever rising tide of anti-Semitism.

It is chiefly noticeable in Vienna by the abominable treatment accorded the Jews who were forced to seek refuge here from the East during the war. It is true that some of them have been guilty of smuggling and other questionable acts to obtain wealth, who by their insolent manners arouse disgust and create hatred, but their number, in comparison with the great mass of non-Jewish (Aryan) profiteers and smugglers, is insignificantly small.

The newspapers in their reports of court proceedings prominently feature those cases where Jewish sounding names appear, and keep silent about the others, which naturally misleads the reading public into the belief that the Jews are the only profiteers and are the only ones to blame for the abnormal rise in the cost of living, and thus enrich themselves at their expense.

Under the pretext of ridding Vienna of all usurers, smugglers, profiteers, and other harmful parasites, the government directs its wrath especially against the Eastern Jews by threatening them with all kinds of dire penalties, by compelling them to leave their homes, and thus creates a condition for those pitiful wretches, which virtually compels them to leave the country. But where shall they go?

It should be remembered that at the beginning of the war in 1914 the old Austrian government compelled and forced those people to leave their old homes and come to Vienna. In the meantime their homes were destroyed, and they lost everything they had. As reward for all the misery they suffered, they are now being entirely engulfed by the near-sighted and wretched policies of the government.

These problems must be solved with wisdom and intelligence, otherwise the social-democratic party, at present the dominating power, will be doomed to everlasting disgrace in the sight of the whole civilized world.

Tragic is the fate of the students of Galicia and Bukowina who are now considered foreigners.

Despite the statement of Assistant Secretary Gloeckl, the "Numerus Clausus" is actually being enforced and all alien students of medicine, who are ready to graduate are compelled to sign the following.

"I agree, in recognition of receiving my degree of M. D. at the Vienna University and the diploma entitling me thereto, to the provisions of the ministerial proclamation of the 28th of April, 1912, that should I in future be admitted to the citizenship of German-Austria I will not practice medicine therein.

"To which I agree and attest with my signature."

In the technical colleges the conditions imposed are virtually the same.

The students at the time of their enrollment in a college or university are quizzed as to their religious faith. Non-Jews have the preference. Applications for enrollment made on the 2nd of October were held back and not declined before the 25th of October, which made it impossible for applying to some other college, as the time limit was passed.

In Budapest the same conditions prevail, except that there the Magyars are in the saddle. The following item appeared recently in the newspapers:

"The daughter of an ancient Christian family, whose father is the eminent and well-known scholar and statesman Hegedus, a handsome brunette with dark tresses, aroused suspicion among the students on account of her 'brachial' skull shape and Semitic features, and with a shout of: 'A Jewess! A Jewess!' the students fell upon the girl and beat her up so badly that she had to be assisted from the Assembly Hall with blood streaming from her. Professor Lerant Hegedus is compelled to have his daughter continue her studies at some foreign university, while he himself remains in Hungary as one of the pillars of the Christian system."

The Hungarian government violently attempts to impress upon the outside world that harmony in the internal relations of the various races in Hungary is progressing nicely and that the much desired lawful and orderly processes have come to dominate the country. The facts, however, are that the Christian system only has been consolidated and that among strictly Roman-Catholic lines. They are even antagonizing the Protestants, but they, not being Jews, are exerting a powerful passive resistance, by ignoring the proclamations directed against them.

The Jews, in the meantime, are passing through terrible times. Bloody attacks are frequent whenever they frequent any public places, and they are not free from these molestations from either the "awakening" Hungarians, or the more radical "awakened" Hungarians, both of whom of their own accord continuously are making trouble. As an instance may be cited the attack made a few days ago for the second time on the popular and well-known Cafe, the "Club," where they entered, beat up the guests, and broke up the furniture.

This time the police arrived in time and were more successful than on the previous occurrence in arresting the ring-leaders. Unfortunately, the majority of the Jewish capitalists do not get excited over these incidents. They rather shut their eyes, believing that in doing so, it will be to their advantage, and hope that in doing so, nobody will pay any attention to them, and that they will not be interfered with. They believe that their wealth will land them into the good graces of the bankrupted aristocracy, who, as is their custom, only persecute the poor and defenseless Jews.

The adherents of Horthy in Hungary closely watched the Austrian National election. The result surprised no one. It was evident, that the Social-Democratic party, which throughout its tenure of office amply proved its incompetency and by it lost the confidence of the people, would make the return of the Christian-Socialist party a certainty. It must be regretted that the Jews of the country sacrificed their sole representative, through their fraternal discord.

The Social-Democratic party has decided to become the opposition. Its cabinet-members have resigned. The Christian-Socialist party will most likely form a coalition with the Pan-Germans and thus be assured of full power.

The results are pleasing to the ruling circles in Hungary. It is expected and hoped that the present majority will more readily aid the aims and purposes of the Horthy government, than have the Social-Democrats.

Such are the unfortunate political conditions as they exist today in Vienna. It is to be hoped that the various Jewish factions will finally unite, and be in a position to offer a solid front, which will be effective and forceful enough, to repel attacks made against them.

A few days ago the newly elected representatives of the Viennese Jewish community organized and elected as their President the universally respected Prof. Dr. Alois Pick. During the war he held the exalted position of General on the Medical Staff. We are delighted with the choice. We are proud to call the new president our brother. We heartily congratulate him on his well-deserved distinction, but above all we congratulate the Viennese community that such a distinguished, upright and far-seeing man has been placed at its head, who commands the respect and esteem of all classes of the community. We wish him godspeed and may all his efforts be crowned with success in his trying and responsible office. Prof. Pick will readily obtain the support of all his brethren for they trust him implicitly and will be only too happy to aid him at all times.

The four Viennese lodges are busily at work, especially Wien Lodge, which will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary on the 14th of November. Invitations to this celebration have been extended to outsiders, and it is hoped that it will reflect much credit to the Order, as well as aid in bringing many new members into our fold.

The Economic Committee of Eintracht Lodge is successfully engaged in obtaining food for the members of all the lodges at the lowest obtainable cost.

The two lodges, Wahrheit and Massadah, despite their youth, are extraordinarily active in caring and looking after our philanthropic institutions. Well worth mentioning is the brilliant successes of two brethren of Massadah Lodge, who within a few days collected the handsome sum of 380,000 Kronen with which to establish dormitories for students. Their accomplishment has in a large measure solved the problem, and a near solution is looked for.

Very depressing is the misery that prevails in all student circles. Many of them go hungry and when night comes do not know where to lay their heads. The Massadah brethren have assumed the task of relieving this condition. They will succeed, for where there is a will, there is a way.

JEWISH DEPUTIES DEMAND AN EXPLANATION FOR THE MURDER OF THE TWELVE JEWS AT LUKOFF.

Warsaw (J. C. B. Service).—In the Seim today, Deputies Greenbaum and Hartglass questioned the War Minister as to why the military investigation into the false accusations against the Jews of Lukoff did not convey in its report the true facts of the actual happenings. The deputies called upon the government to clearly explain why twelve Jews in Lukoff were deliberately murdered by Polish soldiers during the Bolshevist offensive.

INFORMATION FOR ALIENS DESIROUS OF PROCEEDING TO THE UNITED STATES.

Attention is called to the fact that new regulations have recently been put into effect concerning the vising of passports of aliens desirous of proceeding to the United States from foreign countries. In order to avoid lengthy delays, the following procedure should be carefully followed.

Many aliens, now living abroad and desirous of coming to the Unites States, have friends and relatives in this country who are anxious that they should come to America. The friends and relatives in the United States should write the aliens informing them of these new regulations and advising them to follow explicitly the following instructions:

1. The aliens abroad should obtain passports from the foreign government to which they owe allegiance.

2. They should present the passports in person to the American Commissioner or Consul in the district abroad where they now reside. At the office of the Commissioner or Consul they should make a declaration or application for a vise permitting them to proceed to the United States. They should take with them three small photographs. It is also advisable for them to present letters or affidavits from friends or relatives in this country setting forth details as to why they desire to come to the United States, what their occupation will be while in this country, with whom they will reside, and a statement (if the aliens are to be supported by relatives already in the United States) as to the ability of the relatives to care for them properly upon arrival.

The fee for preparing the alien's declaration or application is one dollar and the fee for the vise is nine dollars. These fees must be paid by the alien to the American Commissioner or Consul abroad.

The present regulations provide that no alien whose passport does not bear the vise stamped thereon by an American Commissioner or Consul abroad, will be allowed entry into the United States.

Under the new regulations, the American Commissioners and Consuls in all foreign countries have been instructed in detail as to those applicants to whom vises are to be granted and those to whom vises are to be refused. There are certain classes of applications which must be submitted to the Department of State for its decision, but these cases must be submitted by the Commissioners and Consuls abroad after the alien has made application for a vise. The Department of State is unable to render a decision in these instances until the official report from its officers abroad is received.

Therefore, it is important to note that cases should no longer be taken up with the Department of State by persons in this country, but the aliens themselves should make application direct to the American Commissioner or Consul abroad.

EMIGRANTS UNDER PROTECTION OF AMERICAN CONSUL AT PRAGUE.

Stars and Stripes Float Over Community Building.

Vienna, (J. C. B.)—In an effort to protect Jewish emigrants against attacks on the part of anti-Semitic Bohemian crowds, the American Consul at Prague permitted the American flag to be raised over the building of the Jewish community in that city, according to a report received here. Prague is at present filled with hundreds of Jewish emigrants from Poland and Ukrainia who are making their way to America. These gather daily in front of the Jewish Community building trying to get information about their departure.

Bohemian mobs attacked these waiting emigrants and destroyed the passports of many of them. A special delegation called at the American Consulate and obtained permission to put up over the building the American flag. The American Consul also obtained the protection of the police for the building.

PUBLIC LIBRARIES REMOVE ANTI-SEMITIC BOOKS.

The Cleveland Public Library has ordered that the Dearborn Independent be removed from the public rack.

In Worcester, Mass., all books that have anti-Semitic tendencies have been removed from circulation by the public library.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

B'NAI B'RITH CAMP OF TORONTO A BIG SUCCESS.

It has been obvious for quite a time past to all those connected with boy work that a summer camp for Jewish boys was an activity in the social life of our community that was highly essential, and only the lack of funds had prevented those interested in the Big Brother Movement from carrying out the project.

At a meeting of the movement early in March the possibilities were discussed and the only difficulty encountered was the financing of the undertaking. It was suggested that this was the kind of work in which the I. O. B. B. would surely be interested and it was decided that a committee be appointed to wait on them and find how far they would be willing to back up the scheme financially. Be it to the credit of all members of the I. O. B. B. present when the committee carried back to the Big Brothers the good tidings that they could go ahead and establish the camp, I. O. B. B. would foot the bills.

An ideal spot was secured on the Palter farm near Bronte. Tents and other equipments were obtained, and on Dominion Day you could have seen these same young men in their shirt sleeves converting a quiet little nook about one and a half miles from the Dundas road, where usually nothing but the "moos" of the cows were to be heard, into a camp where the voices of twenty-five healthy youngsters were to resound for the next eight weeks.

Arrangements had been made for a permanent camp leader, to be assisted by volunteers. Competent cooks had been engaged, to supply healthy food to the joyous youngsters. In making the selecton of the boys who were to enjoy the privileges of the camp, care was taken that those who most needed the outing should be given the preference. In view of the fact that the Big Brothers were acting as directors quite a number of under privilege boys were handled, most of whom in former years had been unable to withstand the temptations of two months of idleness in the Summer. To these the camp was a God-send.

The daily routine was similar to that of summer camps. Bathing in the creek, hikes, ball games and other sports filled up the day between meal times. After supper those musically inclined could while away the evening listening to the victrola that had been kindly loaned for camp purposes.

Usually the boys remained for two weeks, and every other Sunday a truck conveyed a new lot from the city, after taking back the old ones. It was most gratifying to find so many of the latter begging for a longer stay. In a few cases, owing to exceptional conditions, a boys was allowed to remain for more than one period.

The questions may be asked: Was the camp a success? Was the expense justified by the results obtained? Was it worth the work and energy expended? To all these questions, the answer is undeniably, yes.

Mistakes were made, which will serve for future experience, and it is to be hoped that the 1920 Jewish Boys' Camp will be the first of many others which should year by year be established to the benefit of our less fortunate boys, and to the credit of all those who are willing to give their time and money for the well-being of others.

Thanks to all those young men who so tenaciously worked, giving up their time to this good object. Thanks to those who gave or loaned the equipment. Thanks to the members of the I. O. B. B., whose generous financial support made a Jewish Boys' Summer Camp in the year of 1920 a reality.—[Ed. Blankensee.

EZEKIEL LODGE, NEWARK, N. J.

Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J., held a class initiation on Wednesday evening, November 10, 1920, at the Temple Assembly Hall. About one hundred candidates were initiated. Following the initiation there was an open meeting to which the public was invited and responded in large numbers.

Mr. David Bortin of Philadelphia, President of District No. 3, and Mr. Isadore Rosenthal of Lancaster, Pa., delivered addresses. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

COVENANT LODGE, DULUTH, MINN.

An open meeting of Covenant Lodge, No. 569, of Duluth, Minn., was held for the members and their ladies at the Commercial Club on November 21 at which time the President of the lodge, Brother Albert Mark, was tendered a farewell party. Brother Mark, who has been most active in B'nai B'rith affairs and who has worked unceasingly for the welfare of the lodge is about to leave Duluth to engage in business at Detroit, Mich.

Brother B. Silverstein, on behalf of the lodge, expressed his sentiments and good wishes to Brother Mark and presented him with a silver service, as a token of esteem and love of the lodge and its members for Brother Mark. The evening was brought to a close with the playing of cards and prizes were distributed. At the conclusion of the program a buffet luncheon was served.

On November 9 an open meeting of the lodge was held at Temple Emanuel for the purpose of extending a welcome to the President of the District Grand Lodge, Brother Eugene Mannheimer, of Des Moines, Iowa, who was to deliver an address to Covenant Lodge, but owing to hasty summons by telegram to return home to officiate at a funeral of a prominent member of his congregation, Rabbi Mannheimer was unable to remain in Duluth. Brother Hiram D. Frankel of St. Paul, Past President of the District Grand Lodge, was called by long distance telephone and immediately responded that he would take Rabbi Mannheimer's place. Brother Frankel delivered a very interesting and instructive talk on Judaism, and touched the present wave of Anti-Semitism that is now spreading throughout the country and Europe.

Brother Rabbi M. Lefkowitz introduced the speaker and also made a short talk followed by Brother A. B. Kapplin, Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements.

A farewell party was tendered Brother M. Lefkowitz, Rabbi of Temple Emanuel on November 4 at the Commercial Club, under the auspices of Covenant Lodge, No. 569. Brother Lefkowitz has been a spiritual leader of the congregation for the past fourteen years and has made an enviable record by building up the congregation from a small number to its present large size. Brother Lefkowitz has always been active in B'nai B'rith work, represented the lodge at the District Grand Lodge Conventions for a number of years. Brother Lefkowitz was presented with a handsome gift by the lodge and the presentation address was made by Brother B. Silverstein, followed by remarks by a number of brethren.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

At its meeting of November 9, Toledo Lodge had as its speaker, Dr. Henry Hurwitz of New York City, who addressed the members on the work of the Menorah Society, of which he is Chancellor. A large crowd was in attendance.

Toledo Lodge held its annual B'nai B'rith Day, Sunday evening, November 28. The principal speaker was Rabbi Harry Mayer of Kansas City. There were also prominent local speakers and a musical program. Upon an urgent invitation from the board of Collingwood Temple, it was decided to hold the B'nai B'rith Day program in the auditorium of The Temple.

The lodge also adopted the following resolutions in memory of late Brother Jacob H. Schiff:

Whereas, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed our brother Ben B'rith, Jacob H. Schiff, from our midst, and

Whereas, in the passing of our fellow Israelite, the Jews of America have suffered grievous loss, therefore

Be It Resolved, That Toledo Lodge, No. 183, expresses its profound grief at the loss that all Jewry has sustained, and prays God to send his solace to the bereaved family.

Be It Further Resolved, That Toledo Lodge spread a copy of these resolutions on the minutes of the lodge, and send another copy to the local press and a third to the mourning family and the B'nai B'rith News.

RESOLUTIONS.

At a Quarterly Meeting of Har Sinai Lodge, No. 8, Philadelphia, Pa., held September 15, 1920, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in His infinite judgment and mercy to call to his eternal rest our beloved friend and brother, Berthold Oppenheimer.

And Whereas, By many years of activity as a member of this lodge he endeared himself to all his brethren having also faithfully and honorably occupied every office within the gift of the lodge and represented it in District Grand Lodge, No. 3, where he likewise with ability and zeal served as a member of its General Committee.

And Whereas, His untiring efforts on behalf of the work of our Order in the service of humanity at large have been a source of inspiration not only to the members of our lodge and Order but to the community at large.

Therefore Be It Resolved, That Har Sinai Lodge, No. 8, Independent Order B'nai B'rith, take this means of extending its sincere sympathy to the family of our departed Brother, of recording its affectionate tribute to his memory and of testifying to his unsullied character which will always be preeminent as a shining example of the life of a loyal Ben B'rith, a true and loving husband and a devoted father.

And Be It Further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family of our late brother, that it be spread upon the minutes of our lodge and printed in the various publications of our Order.

HARRY S. PLATOWSKY,
ALBERT A. LIGHT,
WM. LOWENTHAL,
Committee.

HOREB LODGE, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The club rooms of Horeb Lodge, No. 25, of New Haven, Conn., were crowded to the doors Sunday, November 28, 1920, to hear Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, who delivered a stirring address on the subject, "Immigration," and the opportunities which America affords to immigrants.

Congressman Goldfogle took occasion to condemn the attacks made in Henry Ford's paper and some of the recent books, upon the Jewish race. He said that the attacks were the result either of an intense bigotry or gross ignorance that is unpardonable. "They fan the flame of anti-Semitism and they merit the condemnation of all righteous and well thinking men," went on the speaker.

"The Jews, both native and naturalized, have prized American citizenship because its cardinal duty is love and human freedom and the cornerstone of our government is civil and religious liberty. The exercise of the civil and religious liberty were cemented by the ties of common citizenship and brought to fruition by the highest aspirations. The heroism of the Jew in every war conflict in which the country was engaged has been evident and in the recent World War, according to the records, the Jews contributed more than their quota as compared with the rest of the men who entered the service.

He said that an awakening of the Jewish consciousness and religion, as well as the moral spirit which always made a people stronger and better in the sight of men of every creed and every religious faith, was strongly needed. He also deplored the fact that in the large cities there are men and women who had entered into un-American movements. He said that these people, even though they professed to be of the Jewish race, lacked the Jewish spirit and were utterly un-Jewish because if they possessed such spirit they would have lived up to the teachings of the religion that commands "seek there peace of the land wherein ye dwell."

The Order of B'nai B'rith, he said might well take upon itself the duty to bring back, if possible, these unthinking people who have been led astray by false leaders, as well as to educate the new comers of the country as to what constitutes Americanism.

The lodge appropriated $750 to the Y. M. H. A. drive, which is now being held in this city, for the new clubhouse which was recently purchased.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

One of the largest attended and most enthusiastic meetings held for some time by Memphis lodge took place Sunday morning, November 14. President Phil G. Levitch presided and a most unusually large number of members were in attendance.

The feature of the meeting was the initiation of a large number of new members into the lodge. President Levitch gave the ritual in a most impressive manner, assisted by other officers and members.

Samuel Schloss and Seymour L. Lee, two of the oldest members of the lodge, made short addresses, and expressed themselves as being highly elated over the progress the lodge was making, and they paid quite a compliment to the present administration.

Interesting talks were also made by Milton B. Rose, Past President; Clarence N. Frolich, A. Fisher, Herman Blumenthal and P. Levitch. Mr. Levitch is the father of Phil C. Levitch, President of the lodge, and was among the new members initiated at the meeting. This was the first instance in the history of the lodge that a son had initiated his father into membership in the lodge.

Benj. W. Hirsh made a most eloquent and interesting address, and thanked the lodge for the resolution of thanks recently adopted by the lodge, expressing its appreciation of Mr. Hirsh's efforts in securing the location in Memphis of the Old Folks' Jewish Home, but emphasized the fact that he alone was not responsible for the undertaking, and that it would not be just to the many others, some of whose names he mentioned, who had been active in securing the B'nai B'rith institution for this city.

Jos. M. Samfield, chairman of the Anti-Defamation Campaign Committee, reported that the Anti-Defamation Committee would meet this week and formulate definite plans for the mass meeting to be held early in December to combat anti-Semitism, and that Rabbi Lewinthal of Nashville would be the principal speaker.

DAVIS LODGE, SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

The feast of dedication, Chanukah, was commemorated by Davis Lodge, No. 872, in the first social event given by the lodge on the evening of December 5, 1920. The affair was in the form of a reception and dance. At the opening of the program, President H. Davis called the gathering to order, extended a welcome to all guests and introduced Dr. Zabota who lighted the Chanukah candles and while doing so explained the significance of the Menorah and briefly outlined the progress made by the Jewish people during the past centuries. At the close of the ceremonial, Rabbi Zabota spoke regarding the Order, defining its principles and aims.

During the evening refreshments were served, and toasts were given and responded to by various members of the lodge.

In referring to the developments made by Davis Lodge, the President reported that great progress has been made within the past two months and gave a brief outline of the future program of which the outstanding feature is the plan to either purchase a site on which a building may be erected or to secure a building which will be remodeled to have up-to-date quarters for the lodge including assembly room, amusement room and other conveniences.

The organization of a Ladies' Auxiliary to consist of mothers, wives and daughters of members is contemplated and there is good reason to believe that the plan will soon be carried out.

After the ceremonies, dancing was carried on until after midnight.

HERZL LODGE, HOUSTON, TEXAS.

The annual Chanukah Ball, given by Herzl Lodge, No. 608, of Houston, Texas, was held Sunday evening, December 5. Inasmuch as many of the members are merchants, some keeping their places open late in the evenings, the committee in charge got a permit from the city council to hold the affair on Sunday so that all the members were enabled to attend.

The affair proved the largest social gathering of Jews in Houston for many years.

Entertainment was provided for the young folks as well as the elder people.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

B'NAI B'RITH OF PHILADELPHIA.

Har Sinai Lodge, No. 8, of Philadelphia, held an enthusiastic meeting recently. Among the features of it, Brother Joseph W. Salus presented applications for thirty-two candidates for membership in the lodge and also inaugurated a campaign for funds for the Anti-Defamation League, to which a response of $1,500 was made.

Lincoln Lodge, No. 780, of Philadelphia, had the distinction of having Rev. Samuel Purvis, the author of the "Romance of the Jew" address its last meeting.

The President of the district, Brother David Bortin also attended and addressed the lodge.

Joshua Lodge, No. 23, had the first of its open discussions on Jewish questions. The subject was, "Who is the Cause of Anti-Semitism, the Jew or the non-Jew?" Brother Edward Davis opened the discussion and made a splendid address. Brothers Weinstock, Griver and Herbach participated in the discussion. The subject of the next discussion will be "Why a Jew? His Religion or His Race?" which will be opened by Rabbi Cohen.

From a membership of one hundred sixty-five in September of 1919, the lodge has grown to two hundred sixty-five in September of 1920 through the efforts of the Entertainment Committee which met regularly a few times a month during the past season and then styled itself The Boosters. The enthusiasm originating among The Boosters spread to the other members of the lodge and this in addition with the work of the Anti-Defamation League has resulted in an increase of membership each month. The number initiated in November approximated seventy and brought the membership of the lodge to three hundred fifty.

At the October meeting Brother David Bortin, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 3, gave an interesting talk on the work that the Anti-Defamation League is doing. At that time it was seen that the room in which the lodge was meeting had become entirely too small and the November meeting was held at the Majestic Hotel, the attendance there being about one hundred seventy-five. In December the meeting of the lodge will again be held at the same hotel and it is confidently expected that over one hundred members will be initiated.

Arrangements have also been made for a banquet and dance to be held on the evening of December 26 at the same hotel, to which members only and their ladies will be invited as it is feared that there will not be room for any outsiders.

From present appearances this lodge will soon be leading the district in membership.

CELEBRATION AND CLASS INITIATION OF MINNEAPOLIS LODGE.

The most inspiring meeting of Minneapolis Lodge, No. 271, and in all probability one of the most enthusiastic Jewish gatherings ever held there was the meeting of Minneapolis Lodge on Monday evening, November 29, at the Moorish room of the West Hotel. A class of one hundred ninety-two candidates was initiated, and, as if in honor of the occasion, the degree team led by Mr. Arthur Brin, was in exceptionally fine form.

The entertainment program followed, and Rabbi C. David Matt of the Intellectual Advancement Committee acted as Chairman. Musical numbers rendered were Mr. W. Shartin, vocal solos; Abner Rakov, violin solo; "Eli Eli", sung by Mrs. Martin Cohen, assisted by a quartet consisting of Messrs. Kline, Provensen, Tisch and Digret, and Miss Lillian Jeffery, accompanist. Each number was enthusiastically received. Greetings were read from Mr. Adolf Kraus, head of the I. O. B. B.; brief addresses by Hiram D. Frankel and Gustavus Loevinger and Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Des Moines, President of District No. 6. The speaker of the evening was Mr. Henry Monsky, of Omaha, Neb., Vice-President of the district, who spoke on "The Anti-Defamation Work of the B'nai B'rith." The address was very well received.

An unexpected but pleasing feature of the evening was the spontaneous tribute paid to Mr. Jos. H. Schanfeld, President of the lodge, to whom much of the success of the membership campaign was attributed.

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

Rabbi Alexander Lyons of Brooklyn, N. Y., was the guest of the Jewry of Detroit, and particularly of Pisgah Lodge of the B'nai B'rith on Sunday, December 5.

Dr. Lyons occupied the pulpit of Temple Beth El on Sunday morning and the subject of his sermon was "Jew and Christian".

In the afternoon, Rabbi Lyons addressed a large audience at the meeting of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, on which occasion a class of candidates was initiated by the degree team and Glee Club of the lodge.

The formation of the Michigan Council of B'nai B'rith lodges was brought about at the meeting of Pisgah Lodge. Brother Adolph Freund who conceived the idea of the council addressed the lodge and spoke enthusiastically of the benefits that the lodge would derive from the council.

Pisgah Lodge tendered a dinner to the representatives of the lodges of Michigan who are to form the council at the B'nai B'rith Club, 25 Broadway. Following the dinner, a session for the formation of the council was called to order by Brother Freund.

During the work of the lodge and class initiation, the ladies of the members were entertained in the gymnasium of the temple by a selected number of entertainers.

More than $5,000 was pledged to the Detroit Community fund at the "Stag" given by Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, Michigan, held on November 15, 1920, in its club rooms. The amount pledged represented subscriptions of only 120 members.

The feature of the evening was an interesting talk by Dr. I. Kaufman of the Jewish Publication Society who discussed articles appearing in the "Dearborn Independent." He termed them a menace to American Jewry and urged steps to combat them.

A program of entertainment was arranged by Mr. Leon Goldsmith of the Entertainment Committee. Mr. I. Leonard Braun, director of the Detroit Glee Club sang, "Eli Eli." Refreshments and cigars were served at the close of the meeting.

Turkeys were distributed as prizes at a special card party and dance given by Pisgah Lodge in their club rooms held on Tuesday evening, November 23, for the members of the lodge and their ladies.

FORT SMITH, ARK.

Anti-Defamation League exercises in celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims were held under the auspices of Fort Smith Lodge, No. 306, of Fort Smith, Ark., on Sunday afternoon, November 28, 1920.

Following was the program of exercises:

Prelude, "The Star Spangled Banner"—by the audience, with Mrs. Irvin Sternberg at the piano.

Invocation—Rev. Malcolm W. Lockhart.

Introductory—by the Chairman, Hon. Arch Monroe, Mayor of the city of Ft. Smith.

Violin Duet, "Song Without Words," (Tschaikowsky)—Miss Gladys Krone and Miss Gretchen Youmans, with Mrs. Irvin Sternberg at the piano.

By Way of Comparison—Mr. I. J. Friedman.

Address—Rev. P. F. Horan.

Voice, "Eli Eli" (Shallit-Schindler)—Mrs. Irvin Sternberg, with Mrs. Mabel Van Lindsey at the piano.

Oration, "Why I Am a Ben B'rith"—Rabbi L. J. Rothstein of Pine Bluff, Arkansas.

Violin (Rondino-Krisler)—Prof. Maurice Derdeyn, with Mrs. Sternberg at the piano.

Benediction—Rabbi Joseph H. Stolz.

Postlude, "America"—by the audience, with Mrs. Sternberg at the piano.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting in the dining room of the Progress Club.

DISTRICT No. 6.

Dr. Adolph D. Weiner of Chicago addressed a well attended meeting of Racine Lodge, No. 697, on the subject, "Our Order's Duty and the Present Crisis." The meeting was held in Kenosha, Wisconsin, on November 23, 1920.

TORONTO LODGE, TORONTO, CANADA.

The November meeting of Toronto Lodge was one of surprises, delights and joys and every one of the 225 members present expressed themselves as having enjoyed the best evening yet. A class of fifteen candidates was initiated by the Degree Team headed by Brother Birnbaum who performed the ceremony with the usual impressiveness. At the conclusion of the initiatory ceremonies, Brother Max Levy of New York, Secretary of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, addressed the lodge. In his address, Brother Levy discouraged the idea of a Grand Lodge for Canada until more lodges are established in the dominion.

The lodge was informed that it won the $100 prize offered by the District Grand Lodge for the largest increase in membership, and that the prize money could be used for the purchase of a Menorah.

A varied program of musical and vocal numbers, recitations, and vaudeville acts followed, which greatly amused the large audience. Refreshments were served and the surprise of the evening came when Barney Bernard, the noted comedian, entertained the members with hilariously funny stories.

OAKLAND LODGE, OAKLAND, CALIF.

On Tuesday evening, October 26, Oakland Lodge, under No. 252, held a Halloween dance under the directorship of Harold Katschinski, Chairman of the evening, which was one of the most successful events ever staged by the lodge.

The hall was filled to overflowing and the pie eating contests, apple-ducking trials, and ballet dance revue kept the crowd in a constant state of uproar. Couples who were late were unable to get on the floor on account of the large crowd.

On Tuesday evening, November 16, William H. Hollander, a well known member of the legal profession and member of Oakland Lodge, addressed the membership on "Taxation in General," and at this meeting there was a goodly attendance of the membership. His careful preparation of the subject was shown by the masterful address which he delivered, and lots of new points and information were imparted by the speaker which kept the members thoroughly interested. The question was then generally discussed by those present from the floor of the lodge after which the meeting was adjourned.

JOHN HAY LODGE, FARGO, N. DAK.

The officers and members of the John Hay Lodge, No. 634, tendered a banquet in honor of Brother Sol Simon. Mr. Simon, who is leaving our city, has made his residence in Fargo for the past fifteen years.

He has been a good Jew and a good citizen. He has taken part in many worthy enterprises for the benefit of any cause pertaining to Judaism. He has always given liberally to charity. While a member of the John Hay Lodge, he has been very active in B'nai B'rith work.

Brother Simon will be missed by the members of the lodge, as he was ever a very good attending member. His wise judgment was always sought and his decision in regards to any matter that came up in the lodge room, carried always considerable weight.

Mr. Simon has been President of our lodge and it was with due respect that we honored Brother Simon in this way. Mr. Alex Stern, who acted as Toastmaster, called on various members present for short speeches and presented Mr. Simon with an emblem of the Order as a remembrance of the John Hay lodge, No. 634.

The committee in charge of the banquet, consisted of Brother Alex Stern, David Naftalin, William Stern, Herman Wilk and Hugo Stern.—[Harry Stern, Secretary.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

At a meeting of Julius Houseman Lodge, No. 238, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, held Monday, November 15, ten applications were presented for membership.

At the close of the formal meeting, dinner was held under the auspices of the lodge. There were about 170 people at the dinner. All present enjoyed the address given by Rabbi Aaron Cohn.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CHICAGO—

David-Fish Lodge.

A splendid program was carried out at the monthly meeting of David-Fish Lodge, No. 130, on November 15, 1920, at the Covenant Club.

Dr. Jacob Meyerowitz, of Gary, Ind., was the speaker. His subject was "The Jews' Contribution to Civilization."

Miss Elsie Reinhardt and Miss Dorothy Ernestine rendered musical and vocal numbers.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Ramah Lodge.

An energetic campaign for members is being conducted by Ramah Lodge, No. 33, of Chicago, with a view to securing 1,000 new members before the close of the year. The committee having charge of the campaign reported at the last meeting that over 500 candidates had been duly proposed and investigated and the lodge was assured that the quota of 1,000 is in sight.

The committee arranged for the observance of B'nai B'rith Day to be held on Thursday evening, December 23, at the Hotel La Salle. The program includes a banquet at seven o'clock in the evening, and a class initiation to follow the banquet. By special invitation of the Anti-Defamation League, Honorable Wm. Howard Taft, Ex-President of the United States, will be the guest of honor at the banquet and will deliver an address on "Anti Semitism". Another noted speaker will be Rabbi Abba Hillel Silber of Cleveland, who will speak on the work of the Order. The famous Degree Team and Glee Club of Pisgah Lodge of Detroit will officiate at the initiation of the candidates and will render songs during the evening.

The banquet will be held in the Louis XIV Room of the Hotel La Salle and the price per plate will be $5.00. Only members of the Order and their ladies will be entitled to participate in the banquet. Immediately before the speaking, the doors will be opened to the public and as many as can be accommodated will be seated and made welcome.

Members of the Order desiring to participate in the banquet and other festivities of the evening should send in their reservations early as reservations will be booked and considered in order of their receipt by the committee.

Adolf Kraus Lodge.

At the November meeting of Adolf Kraus Lodge, No. 72, of Chicago, Brother Dr. S. N. Deinard of Minneapolis was the guest and speaker. He addressed the lodge on the subject, "How to Combat Anti-Semitism". Another prominent guest of the lodge was Dr. Gotthard Deutsch of Cincinnati who spoke in a humorous way. A number of musical and vocal numbers were rendered and at the end of the meeting refreshments were served.

HERZL LODGE, HOUSTON, TEXAS.

Herzl Lodge, No. 608, of Houston, Texas, gave its annual Channukah Charity Ball at Turner Hall on Sunday, December 5.

While this ball is given primarily as a social affair to bring the members together once a year, the proceeds are given by the lodge to the Jewish Orphan Home, the Leo N. Levi Hospital at Hot Springs, and the Jewish Consumptives Relief at Denver.

Inasmuch as many of the members are merchants, some keeping their places open late in the evenings, the committee in charge got a permit from the city council to hold this affair on Sunday so none would be prevented from attending.

NEW CASTLE, PA.

The New Castle Sunday School under the auspices of New Castle Lodge No. 609, held its Chanukah entertainment on Sunday afternoon, December 12.

New Castle Lodge celebrated B'nai B'rith Day on Sunday evening, November 28. Rabbi A. H. Kahn of Pittsburgh was the speaker of the evening. Miss Florence Weinberg rendered a few well-received vocal solos, accompanied by Mrs. E. Kaplan.

The B'nai B'rith Lodge will hold its annual ball on December 30. Further details will be announced later.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

PROPAGANDA TOUR OF MR. S. J. WESTHEIMER.

Mr. S. J. Westheimer of Houston, Texas, Vice-President of District Grand Lodge, No. 7, who is making a trip in behalf of the I. O. B. B., reports that after leaving Waco where he more than doubled the membership of Eureka lodge, he in company with Mr. Victor Hexter, president of the Seventh District, went to Wichita Falls, where they reinstituted Noah Lodge, which had been inactive for more than two years, securing 71 new members, and which lodge is expected to have not less than one hundred members before January 1.

From this point Mr. Westheimer went to San Antonio, stopping just long enough in Fort Worth to say a few words of encouragement to the leading members there and upon arriving in San Antonio, he found that the lodge had been busy getting members for the last month or so. He however, assisted by a committee, secured 47 new applications which will increase San Antonio's membership by at least one hundred for the month.

The next stop was Laredo, where five new members were added to the roster of the lodge, and actually every Jew in Laredo is now a member of Laredo Lodge.

Going from there to Corpus Christi, nine names were added to Henry Cohen lodge. This concluded the trip and will show a total increase in membership of approximately 300.

Mr. Westheimer stated that he was enthusiastically received by the leading members of the I. O. B. B. in all these cities and was assured that additional members would be added to all the lodges he visited by January 1; in fact he had a letter from Arthur Lyon's, President of Noah lodge, Wichita Falls, in which he stated that ten new members had already been added since Mr. Westheimer's departure and that they expect to have at least a hundred members by January 1.

DENVER, COLO.

On Sunday evening, November 14, 1920, the B'nai B'rith Day celebration and class initiation of Denver Lodge, No. 171, of Denver, Colo., was held with Brother Judge Samuel Rosenfeld of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, as the guest of honor. Judge Rosenfeld addressed the lodge on the subject, "Opportunity, Security and Happiness."

Preceding the celebration a dinner was given in honor of President Rosenfeld at the Adams Hotel.

On Monday evening, November 15, a dance was given under the auspices of the lodge at the Progress Club which affair was for the members and their ladies.

On Sunday morning, November 28, a regular meeting of the lodge was held at which Brother Dr. C. D. Spivak, who is a member of the Joint Distribution Committee and visited Poland, the Ukraine, Roumania and Austria, spoke of his impressions abroad. His address was of much importance and interest to the large audience which greeted the speaker.

COVENANT LODGE, DULUTH, MINN.

On Tuesday, November 9, 1920, Covenant Lodge, No. 569, of Duluth, Minn., held an open meeting at which Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer, of Des Moines, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, was to be the principal speaker, but owing to the fact that Brother Mannheimer was obliged to suddenly return home to officiate at a funeral, Brother Hiram D. Frankel, of St. Paul, was secured as a substitute. Brother Frankel gave the lodge a most interesting talk which was well received. The disappointment at not being able to listen to Brother Mannheimer was very much eased by Brother Frankel's interesting address.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

At a meeting held on Sunday evening, November 7, 1920, under the auspices of Isidor Straus, No. 519, of Fort Worth, Texas, the sum of $1,500 was raised for the use of the Anti-Defamation League and the committee hopes to bring this up to $2,000.

Brother J. K. Hexter was the guest of honor and delivered the address of the evening.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

Before an enthusiastic gathering of members and friends of Memphis Lodge, No. 35, the lodge presented its second literary and musical program in the vestry rooms of the Poplar Avenue Temple on November 28.

In the absence of Gilbert M. Schloss, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, Joseph M. Samfield presided. Phil C. Levitch, President of the Lodge, opened the program with a few appropriate remarks, and then turned the meeting over to Mr. Samfield, who also addressed the audience, emphasizing the fact that the Memphis B'nai B'rith lodge was in the midst of a strenuous membership campaign, and desired the assistance of the Jewish community of the city in securing the desired five hundred members.

Miss Jeanette Miriam Goldberg gave a most exquisitely rendered selection upon the piano, which proved a gem of the evening's program. She was followed by Mrs. Chas. Fried, whose reading was well rendered. She chose for her subject three manners of proposals.

Miss Bessie Alperin delighted those present with a piano solo which proved a gem, and received the hearty approbation of the audience.

Rabbi Fineshriber spoke upon "The Ideals of the B'nai B'rith". He told of the ideals of various ages, and said that every organization has ideals. He laid especial stress upon the fact that the outstanding ideal of the B'nai B'rith was its endeavor to lift the Jewish people to higher endeavors and higher thoughts, and to bind them into a closer brotherhood.

The Entertainment Committee of the Memphis Lodge is preparing for a pretentious program for early in January in commemoration of its annual B'nai B'rith day.

Memphis Lodge has a vigorous membership campaign on and its endeavor is to raise its membership to 500. The District Grand Lodge offers a loving cup to the lodge showing the largest increase in membership up to January 1 and Memphis Lodge is in the race for this trophy.

Brother Jos. M. Samfield was appointed Chairman of the Local Executive Committee of the Anti-Defamation League of the Order. A meeting of this committee was held on November 29 at the Rex Club, at which plans were formulated for the launching of a campaign for funds for the league.

CINCINNATI LODGE, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Brother Samuel Rosenfeld, of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, was the speaker at the meeting of Cincinnati Lodge, No. 4, held on November 29 in the Rockdale Avenue Temple. President Rosenfeld addressed the lodge on the work of the Order, particularly emphasizing the necessity of support of the Anti-Defamation League.

In addition to Brother Rosenfeld's address, the following fine musical program was rendered:

"Letumamassi," from Denzi; vocal solo, Rev. H. Rickel; piano accompaniment by Robert Wagner; violin obligato, Harry Fishoff.

Hungarian Raphsody Number 11—Piano solo, Miss Frances Bejach.

"Eli Eli" (Russoto), "Fear Ye Not, O Israel" (Buck). Vocal solo, Louis Valin; piano accompaniment by Mrs. Louis Valin. Violin obligato, Miss J. Geller.

Italian Aria, selections, Leo Lucas; the piano accompaniment, by Gus Bernard.

ELYRIA, OHIO.

A very interesting address was given by Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, at the meeting of Elyria Lodge, No. 855, of Elyria, Ohio, on the evening of November 24, 1920.

The meeting was well attended by the members of the lodge, together with their ladies and friends. Judge Rosenfeld spoke concerning the Good and Welfare of the Order, dwelling particularly on the necessity of lending support to charitable and benevolent institutions. Concluding the course of the evening musical numbers and recitations were given and at the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

Amos Lodge, on January 21, 1920, had a membership of 215. To-day, it numbers 637 with 143 applicants awaiting initiation.

The first regular meeting of the lodge was held on November 8. A great deal of business was transacted at the meeting so that there was no time to hold the initiation of candidates or to devote to intellectual advancement. The most important of the business transacted was the action on the new by-laws, tentative plan for the consolidation of Amos Lodge with Massachusetts Lodge of Boston. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

Under the auspices of the lodge, a dancing party on Ladies' Night, October 11, was held. It was attended by more than 350 of the members and their ladies.

The Entertainment Committee of the lodge is planning for the first Sunday in January a class initiation in the afternoon and banquet and installation of officers in the evening, to be followed by a ball the next evening.

At the regular meeting of Amos Lodge on Monday, November 22, 400 candidates were invited to be initiated. A large percentage presented themselves and were duly initiated. Rabbi Brother Samuel J. Levinson of Brooklyn, N. Y., addressed the lodge. Nomination of officers for the ensuing year was also held.

DES MOINES LODGE, DES MOINES IOWA.

On Sunday, November 14, 1920, Des Moines Lodge, No. 330, of Des Moines, Iowa, held an initiation meeting and smoker. A class of candidates was initiated by Brother Henry Monsky, of Omaha, First Vice-President of the District Grand Lodge, who was the invited guest of the lodge. He addressed the lodge on intellectual advancement lines. His address, particularly that part relating to the work of the Order, was well received, and was enjoyed by all present. Announcement was made at that meeting of the tentative plans for the membership campaign which is about to be inaugurated.

GILEAD LODGE, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Gilead Lodge has had several very interesting meetings this year, some of which were open to the public. One was the initiation of a large class of candidates by our degree team, another was addressed by the Hon. William A. Walker, on the League of Nations. The meeting of November 11, falling on Armistice Day was celebrated by having with us the Hon. M. S. Sheridan, Judge of the County Court, who addressed the lodge at an open meeting on Armistice Day and Patriotism. All the meetings of Gilead Lodge have been very well attended this year.—[Alex. P. Greenthal.

FORREST CITY, ARKANSAS.

Barnett Lodge, No. 754, of Forrest City, Ark., had the pleasure of listening to an address by Honorable Gilbert M. Schloss of Memphis, who made an eloquent plea in behalf of the Anti-Defamation League. In presenting the aims and object of the league, he emphasized the suppression of the defamation of the Jew in public gatherings and in place of entertainment. His address was a masterful effort and the audience was charmed with his delivery.

Barnett Lodge holds monthly meetings and makes them, by holding them in adjoining cities, social and fraternal ties.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON.

Abr. Geiger Lodge, No. 423, of Spokane, Washington, held its regular monthly meeting in November at the K. P. Hall, at which time nominations for officers were had.

Rabbi Julius Leibert addressed the lodge on "Zionism" and Mr. J. Schiller spoke in opposition to Zionism.

The Ladies Auxiliary met at the same time and officers for the ensuing term were nominated.

At the conclusion of both meetings a joint session was held and dancing was enjoyed after which refreshments were served.

SUPERIOR, WISCONSIN.

A very satisfactory meeting of Theo. Roosevelt Lodge, No. 844, of Superior, Wis., was held on the evening of November 8, 1920. Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer, of Des Moines, Iowa, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, was the guest of honor and delivered the principal address which was well received.

Rabbi M. Lefkovitz and Brother Chas. D. Oreckovsky, of Duluth, also made short addresses.

A class of eleven candidates was initiated and a large number of candidates are still on the waiting list. The initiatory work was performed by the Degree Team of Covenant Lodge. The initiation was preceded by a banquet and followed by a dance.

At the conclusion of the initiatory work President Mannheimer held an important conference with the active workers of the lodge which will, no doubt, contribute greatly to the success and welfare of the lodge.

WATERBURY, CONN.

Melchizedek Lodge, No. 200, of Waterbury, Conn., has of late not been very active and a complete revival took place at a recent meeting held on November 11 at which time a special meeting was held for the purpose of reorganization.

The meeting was presided over by Paul B. Dorfmann and Brother Henry Lasker of Springfield, Mass., President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, was the principal peaker. He addressed the lodge and spoke of his observations and expressed his belief that the Order could build up a strong, influential lodge in Waterbury. Other speakers were Jos. H. Ullman, of New Haven, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1.

As a result of the meeting, a large number of new applications for membership were received and prospects are good for a successful lodge in the near future.

In addition to the addresses, the gathering enjoyed a smoker and the serving of refreshments.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

At a regular meeting of Portland Lodge, No. 65, a Chanukah feast was celebrated with chanting of the blessings by Rev. A. Rosenkrantz and Rev. Abrahamson. Rabbi Jonah B. Wise lectured on the subject of the Feast.

Never in the history of the B'nai B'rith Building of Portland did it witness so large a gathering as attended Portland Lodge's election party held on November 2. It is estimated that more than 1,200 people attended and all available space in the building was taxed to its capacity. The program included dancing and vaudeville entertainments, during which refreshments were served.

Much of the credit for the successful affair is due to Brother Ben W. Rubin, who left nothing undone to make this a success.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

The regular B'nai B'rith dance of Cleveland Lodge, No. 16, was held in the B'nai B'rith building on November 28. The affair was open to members and their families only.

The B'nai B'rith Dramatic Section held its regular meeting Sunday afternoon, November 14. The play, "Sweethearts", which the section read and rehearsed several times with the view of preparing for presentation, was reread and "The Affairs of Anatole" was also read.

DISTRICT, No. 1.

Mr. Charles Hartman of New York, member of the Executive Committee for District No. 1, paid an official visit to the lodges of the Order in Montreal and Toronto.

The annual ball of Toronto Lodge, No. 836, of Toronto, Canada, will be held at the King Edward Hotel on January 11, 1921.

In the big membership drive that was held in January and February of 1920, Toronto Lodge acquired 212 new members, practically doubling its membership. In recognition of this effort, Toronto Lodge was awarded the prize of $100.00 by District Grand Lodge, No. 1.

REPORT OF IMMIGRATION COMMITTEE TO SAMUEL LODGE, 668, I. O. B. B., VANCOUVER, B. C.

Since the last written report of this committee on May 7, 1919, a number of verbal reports have been made, but in order that the lodge may have a proper record for future use of this committee's work it is deemed advisable to submit a written report covering the last eighteen months.

During this period your committee handled five hundred seventy immigrants arriving here on forty-two boats. Of these, eleven were deported, including seven stowaways, for whom it was impossible to do anything, so that actually only four of our cases resulted in deportation.

Included in these cases were sixty-seven appeals to Ottawa and Washington, of which sixty-three were successful.

At the present time we still have on our hands two single men and two families whose cases have not been finally disposed of.

Originally, we were working with Mr. Spring, of the Seattle office of the New York organization. In December of last year he was released and we have since been dealing direct with New York. In the meantime, however, we carried on negotiations with the Jewish Colonization Association, of Paris, with Canadian headquarters at Montreal, and their Canadian manager, Mr. Rosenthal, came to Vancouver to go into the situation with us. He then left for Paris, but to date we have nothing definite from him.

A few weeks ago a new movement started as an offshoot of the Canadian Jewish Congress, known as the Jewish Immigration Committee of Canada. They have opened an office at Quebec and have requested us to join them. Your committee, however, advises that nothing be done in this connection, except to work in harmony with them, until it is ascertained whether or not they are a permanent organization and what their financial stability will be.

The Hebrew Sheltering Society have closed their office at Yokohama, but information has reached us to the effect that the Central War Relief Committee expect to reopen it. From the Immigrants arriving here we have ascertained that a great number of Jews are still arriving at Yokohama and Shanghai, so that we may expect the work to continue for a long time to come.

However, for the past few months the types of cases arriving have been such that practically no money is required by the committee. It simply needs a good knowledge of the work, the confidence of the various immigration offices and the desire to work hard. In this connection I desire to express my appreciation for the wonderful work and assistance of Brothers J. P. Rosenbaum and L. Rosenbaum. They were always ready to give their time to the work, and without them it would have been almost impossible to carry on. Brother Grossman, of course, has handled the legal end of the work, including all the appeals.

In order that the lodge may have an idea of the routine work of the committee it might be well to outline the work on the arrival of a boat. We have an arrangement with the immigration authorities whereby we meet the boat on its arrival and are allowed to board before any one else. It is then necessary to go through the boat and collect all of the Jewish passengers, including those who have come second-class. Their names, destinations, occupations, amount of money, names of relatives, details of passports and other information is then obtained. By arrangement we then take them all and place them in various Jewish homes in the city until they can proceed on their journey. This gets away from their being detained at the immigration shed. The next problem is to locate their baggage and wire their relatives for information or tickets. Food must be bought, sometimes clothes. A doctor is needed now and again A word or two to the immigration officials smooths out small difficulties. Their fears must be allayed and the immigrant must have explained to him the reason for everything that is being done. Some immigrant is held up and a Board of Inquiry must be held with the attendance of an interpreter and counsel Appeals must be filed, the relatives notified, bonds arranged for, the immigrant placed in a proper home and then the ponderous machinery of appeal starts. This is a mere outline of the work.

U. S. Treasury Department

Encouragement for better habits of living and increased prosperity and contentment is seen in the recent announcement of Secretary of the Treasury Houston* that the Savings Movement of the Treasury Department will be continued and intensified throughout 1921. In making public the decision of the Treasury to continue the issue of Government Savings Securities throughout the coming year, Secretary Houston declares that these issues should play an increasingly important part in financing the government but that they have served to unite all helpful agencies, religious, financial, industrial, commercial, and social in a broad campaign to promote sound economic conditions and disseminate sound economic doctrines.

In establishing habits of thrift and saving, the Treasury Movement, he declares, has met a great national need. That need will be met in 1921, according to the announcement not only through the means of the Government savings securities which have been issued in the past and which have become a family word in America but by the addition of two new securities, a $1 Savings Stamp and a registered Treasury Savings Certificate of $25 denomination.

In describing the new securities and their purpose, Secretary Houston says:

"Two new Treasury savings securities will be issued during the coming year, a $1 Treasury Savings Stamp and a $25 Treasury Savings Certificate. The $1 stamp will be non-interest bearing, will be bright red in color, imprinted on a green tint, and will bear the portrait of Alexander Hamilton, the first Secretary of the Treasury. The $25 certificate will be similar in design and terms to the $100 and $1,000 Treasury Savings Certificates, which will also be offered in 1921, to mature January 1, 1926.

"The new securities will supply a $1 unit for saving and a registered Government security in the $25 denomination, which can be conveniently purchased through the accumulation of the $1 Treasury Savings Stamps. More important still, the new securities will complete a most attractive line of Government savings securities, the $1 stamp and the $25, $100, and $1,000 registered Treasury Savings Certificates, and thus place the Treasury Savings movement on a solid peace-time basis. The small denomination war-time securities, the $5 War Savings Stamp, in a 1921 series, and the 25-cent Thrift Stamp, will also be offered during the coming year.

"Notwithstanding the reaction since the armistice from habits of saving, and the natural tendency during the past year to invest funds in Liberty bonds and Victory notes at current market prices, the demand for the savings securities has continued strong in many parts of the country. As the security markets become more settled, Treasury savings securities, bearing interest at 4 per cent compounded quarterly, exempt from state and local taxes and from the normal Federal income tax, and redeemable substantially on demand, should prove increasingly attractive, particularly to the multitude of small investors.

"With these considerations in mind, the Treasury is committed to the continued sale of Government savings securities, and feels that as time goes on continuous sales of savings securities over the counter, at post-offices and banks throughout the country, should play an increasingly important part in the current financing of the Government.

"To end, this the Treasury is also committed to the continuance of the work of the Savings Division, in Washington and in the several Federal Reserve districts. This organization endeavors to promote the popular purchase of Government Savings Securities; develops and protects the secondary market for Liberty bonds and Victory notes and other war issues of Government securities, and unites the efforts of all helpful agencies and movements, financial, industrial, educational, commercial, and social, in a broad savings campaign to make permanent the habits of saving and investment in United States Government securities. Its work along these lines will be intensified in 1921.

"The Treasury Savings Movement has already demonstrated its usefuness by its efforts to promote sound economic conditions throughout the country and disseminate sound economic doctrine. In fact, the work of the Savings Division this year, not only in promoting the sale of Government Savings Securities and in strengthening the secondary market for Liberty bonds, but in establishing widespread habits of thrift and saving, has been frequently recognized as meeting a great national need. That recognition has been strikingly emphasized by the requests of great national organizations that the savings work be continued and by their offers of active cooperation in the movement.

"The American Federation of Labor at its last annual convention expressed itself as heartily in favor not only of the Government Savings Movement but also of Government Savings Securities. It has strongly urged that the Treasury continue to issue these securities in order to provide safe investments for the savings of wage earners.

"Nearly every fraternal organization of prominence in the United States has endorsed the Savings Movement and many have placed their funds in Government Securities.

"Presidents of women's organizations have emphasized the need of the continuation of the Savings work among their membership in 1921.

"The work of the Savings Division has been splendidly successful in the schools, with the children and as well with the leaders of educational thought in America.

"In responding to these demands from great national organizations, the Savings Division will intensify during 1921 its campaign to spread broadcast the essential facts relative to wise saving and spending and investment and the continued development of new capital."

JERICHO LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

An interesting meeting of Jericho Lodge, No. 44, was held on Sunday, November 21, at the Moose Temple where a large number of candidates were initiated by Past-President A. L. Solomon. Nominations for officers for the ensuing term were also held.

A lively discussion took place as to the activities to be carried on by the lodge during the year. An important social function is being planned by the lodge for the latter part of January.

BRADDOCK LODGE, BRADDOCK, PA.

Braddock Lodge, No. 516, of Braddock, Pa., celebrated B'nai B'rith Day with an open meeting on Sunday, December 5.

A very interesting musical and literary program was arranged and was presented by the best talent procurable. The principal speaker was Mr. Richard S. Rauh of Pittsburgh who addressed a large audience on the work of the Order.

B'NAI B'RITH OF DISTRICT No. 3.

Wilmington Lodge, No. 470, of Wilmington, Del., had a big event on Sunday, November 28, which was attended by many of the Grand Lodge officers.

Easton, Pa., had a big event on Sunday, October 24. Brothers H. S. Platowsky, Second Vice-President of the district and Edward Davis were the principal speakers

KANSAS LODGE, KANSAS CITY, MO.

B'nai B'rith Day was fittingly observed by Kansas City Lodge, No. 184, of Kansas City, Mo., on Monday evening, November 22, 1920. Mr. Jacob L. Lowry was the principal speaker.

LANSING, MICHIGAN.

An unusually well attended meeting of Jacob H. Schiff Lodge, Lansing, Michigan, was held on the evening of November 8, 1920. A class of eight candidates was initiated by the degree team of the lodge. Brother Edward Lichtig of Bay City and Rabbi Steiner of Jackson, Michigan, visited the lodge and also a number of members from Jackson. The visiting brothers addressed the lodge on the work of the Order.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

Huntington Lodge, No. 795, opened its session of social activities with a dance held in its club rooms.

The Arrangement Committee with Mr. Sam Samson as Chairman is arranging to have dances every two weeks and will also provide other appreciable entertainments from time to time.

At a meeting of the lodge held on Sunday, October 17, Brother Isadore Sobel of Erie addressed the lodge on "The Need of the Erie Orphanage."

NATIONAL JEWISH ORGANIZATIONS ISSUE PUBLIC STATEMENT

(Continued from page 3.)

large numbers laid down their lives in the allied cause. The rosters of the army and navy of the United States contain the names of tens of thousands of Jews born in Russia who served so faithfully under our colors that they gained the unqualified approval of their officers, and proportionately many of them were awarded decorations of honor by a grateful country.

We have refrained from commenting on the libels contained in The Dearborn Independent. Ford, in the fulness of his knowledge, unqualifiedly declares The Protocols to be genuine and argues that practically every Jew is a Bolshevist. We have dealt sufficiently with both of these falsehoods. It is useless in a serious document to analyze the puerile and venomous drivel that he has derived from the concoctions of professional agitators. He is merely a dupe.

What is the motive of those who have set in motion this new onslaught of anti-Semitism? It is the motive that again and again has actuated autocracy and its adroit supporters—that of seeking a scapegoat for their own sins, so that they may be enabled under the cover of a false issue to deceive the public.

It is an attempt to drive into the solidarity of the citizenry of our country that has been its pride and its strength the wedge of discord, by arousing suspicion and inciting overt acts not only against those of Jewish origin but also against Freemasons, in the hope of discrediting free government in the eyes of the European masses and thus facilitate the restoration of absolutism in government.

The Protocols were manufactured in Russia under the bureaucracy, and the ammunition with which the campaign is conducted has been furnished out of the arsenal of imperialistic Germany and by those who are seeking to restore the Hapsburgs, the Hohenzollerns, and the Romanoffs on their former thrones. Ancient hatred and unreasoning prejudice and a failure to understand and know what the Jew really is are likewise responsible for the readiness with which these falsehoods have been accepted by those who are ever willing to believe evil of their fellowmen.

We have an abiding confidence in the spirit of justice and fairness that permeates the true American, and we are satisfied that our fellow-citizens will not permit the campaign of slander and libel that has been launched against us to go unreproved. There is enough for all of us to do in the great task of building up our common country and of developing the principles on which it is founded. Let not hatred and misunderstanding arise where peace and harmony, unity and brotherliness, are required to perpetuate all that America represents and to enable all men to know that within her wide boundaries there is no room for injustice and intolerance.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Louisville Lodge, No. 14, observed B'nai B'rith Day in the auditorium of the Y. M. H. A. building, Sunday, November 28, 1920. The program which was arranged included addresses and musical numbers. Dr. Jos. Kornfeld of Columbus, Ohio, delivered the principal address. Another speaker was Dr. Jos. Rauch of Louisville. Several musical numbers by prominent local artists were rendered.

AMERICAN FINANCIERS INTERESTED IN PALESTINE BANKS.

London (J. C. B. Service).—Sir Herbert Samuel, the High Commissioner for Palestine, has informed the Advisory Council that he is at present negotiating with English American and Egyptian financiers for the establishment of Credit Banks throughout Palestine and he hopes to see these operating at an early date, says a Jerusalem dispatch.

SAAR SHOLEM LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

At the meeting of Saar Sholem Lodge, No. 154, held on Sunday, December 5, Professor Francis D. Tyson of the University of Pittsburgh delivered an address on "The Question of Constitutional Government in Industry".

On Sunday, December 12, the lodge held memorial services in memory of late Brother Louis Goldsmit. A program appropriate for the occasion was successfully carried out.

16.05
BN R.R.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY
FEB 12 1921

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS
BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII JANUARY, 1921 No. 5

Anti-Semitism in the United States

By

William Howard Taft

Ex-President of the United States

Address delivered in Chicago December 23, 1920, at invitation of Anti-Defamation League

ONE of the chief causes of suffering and evil in the world today is race hatred, and any man who stimulates that hatred has much to answer for. When he does this by the circulation of unfounded and unjust charges and the arousing of mean and groundless fears, his fault is more to be condemned.

Since the Christian era, the Jews have greatly suffered from racial antipathies. Their history has been one long story of persecution, oppression and cruelty directed against them on account of their race. Sometimes the bitterness has been distinctly and purely religious, but more often it has been racial. Liberal Americans who appreciate the liberty and equalty of opportunity that prevails in our icivilization, and under the Constitution of the United States, have prided themselves that here at least there is no ban against the Jews, there is no Ghetto, there is no pale within which they are required to live, there is not the slightest attempt in the law to differentiate between Jews and other residents of the United States, and all the privileges and all the equality of opportunity of any citizen are theirs. That at times social prejudice is encountered by them is to be expected in a country with as many different currents in society as our great amalgamation has; but in no country in the world does the Jew enjoy more perfect equality of opportunity, more certain reward for the many virtues that he has, or greater and more unquestioned liberty than here. Nor is this equality of treatment confined to the law alone. Neither in business nor in professional circles is there any factional effort to hamper or obstruct his progress and success. This has been in great contrast to his actual status in some European countries, where while he is theoretically equal to others before the law, there are constant organized efforts to limit his activities, and to prevent his progress. In such countries there is a distinctly anti-Semitic party, which breaks forth in an attack upon the Jews and uses the press and other publications to foster a hatred and obstruction to their pursuit of their legitimate aims.

Only recently has there appeared in this country an elaborate attack upon the Jews and a studied effort to create an anti-Semitic feeling and movement in the United States. This is greatly to be deplored. When I first heard of it, I was inclined to think the wise course was to ignore it, and that in a short time it would die, for lack of interest and support. I thought that answer and refutation would dignify it, advertise it and serve the purpose of its projector, and I am not sure that this is not still the correct view. But you who know better have come to the conclusion that the matter is of sufficiently serious import to call for discussion and answer. I feel strongly the evil character of the attack, and I do not hesitate to condemn it and give my reasons for so doing.

THE attack is made in a series of articles in the Dearborn Independent. This is the paper which Mr. Henry Ford, the successful manufacturer of the Ford automobile, has founded for the avowed purpose of expressing his views without fear or favor. With the statement that the press is held in subjection by the power of the Jews, the author of the articles seeks to put Mr. Ford on a pedestal of courage and independence in initiating the attack. How much of the article is due to Mr. Ford's initiative, and how much he has yielded to the representations of others in consenting to its publication, one cannot say. But, of course, he is responsible for the effect of them. I have read the articles and the documents called the Protocols, upon which they purport to be based, and after an analysis of them, I find it difficult to discuss them with patience.

The articles are written in an easy flowing style and are deftly composed of a mixture of historical fact and unfounded and unjust generalizations. At times in them is a pretense of fairness and generous concessions to the Jews, with a constant repetition running through them of the meanest incitements to prejudice against the whole race. The writer professes not to be engaged in stirring up an anti-Semitic feeling when what he writes reeks with it. All that he says is directed to sustaining a definite indictment of conspiracy in which he ultimately involves the whole Jewish race. He acquits most of them of guilty knowledge of the ultimate design at present, but he represents their ambitions, their abilities and skill, their unity and power and their other characteristics, to be such that when those now privy to the chief and ultimate purpoes shall disclose it, all will conform to it and become willing participants in the grand and wicked design.

When we analyze the attack, when we consider the charges free from the interweaving of mere appeals to prejudice, when we look into the accusing generalizations without supporting evidence, when we dissect the historical facts out of the mass of gratuitous assumptions, and limit those facts to their true and fair significance, when we look into the only documentary proof relied on, when we consider the naked skeleton of the indictment and contemplate the conditions it foreshadows as a possible and probable historical development, it becomes a presentment utterly unworthy of credence.

WHAT is the charge? It is that there is an inner council of a few leading Jews in the world, who control the money of the world, engaged in a plot, the execution of which may take decades or a century for its consummation to destroy the governments of the world by the disintegrating power of Bolshevism which they are fostering, and then by the all-controlling power of the purse and the playing of one class against another, ultimately to subject to the will of this inner Judaic council the whole world, enabling it to appoint a King of Israel who shall then, as an absolute dictator, carry on the world under his super-government. The purpose of the articles is to give proof of the truth of these charges and to arouse the American people to this imminent danger. This, the articles announce to be the Jewish Question which they are to force to discussion in the United States. No remedy for this conspiracy is proposed of a legal character, no organization is suggested, no definite plan of resistance to the march of this plot, but it is intimated that if the American people have proper warnings through these and other articles of the same tenor, this Jewish political conquest of the world and the governmental absolutism of Israel may be averted.

As already said, the author of the articles is not so foolish as to charge that all Jews, or even those of intelligence, wealth and standing, are privy to this great plot and its purpose. What he first sets out to do is to establish the present enormous power of the Jews over the finance of the world, and their ability through the bond of international unity between them to control the policies of nations, to compel war or peace, to direct the working of economic forces in them, and, if need be, to form and stimulate anarchy and a destruction of government. His argument then is that the small council or sanhedrin of the Inner Circle of International Jews can and will disclose their ultimate political purpose at the appropriate time, and through the essential unity of the Jewish Race and its will to power, it can command allegiance of all Jews, and especially those who have these great powers and thus carry on the conspiracy to the declared end.

The author rejects as having any real effect the economic laws which the history of nations has developed into a science. Adam Smith, John Stewart Mill, Ricardo, Sumner and other great names in the field of political economy and finance, have no terrors for him. He says, "People have lost all confidence that economic conditions are responsible for all the changes that occur. Under the camouflage of 'economic law' a great many phenomena have been accounted for which were not due to any law whatever except the law of selfish human will as operated by a few men, who have the purpose and the power to work on a wide scale with nations as their vassals."

Again he says, "Apparently in the world today is a central financial force playing a vast and closely organized game with the world for its table and universal control for its stakes." He says that "The great masters, the few who see clearly the entire play of the plan, control numerous banking houses and trust companies", that one is used for this and another for that, that there is no disharmony and no competition, but that there is as much unity between the principal banking hours of every country as there is between the various branches of the United States Post Office, and for the same reason, namely, they are all operated from the same source and for the same purpose. He charges this central financial force in its heartlessness of capital with breaking up proper relationship between employers and employees by refusing to allow the former to make just concession to the latter. He repeats and adopts the charge made in Germany that this central financial force controls governments, can make war, can make peace, can command anarchy, can restore order, that it holds the sinews of world power in its hand and apportions them among the nations in such a way as will best support its plans.

No instances of the exercise of this world controlling power is cited as proof. The conclusion of the author rests on his own assertion and the further comprehensive and entirely satisfying assurance that everybody knows it. One might have made such an unsustained generalization with some hope of securing the credence of gullible people before this great war but he is bold indeed who ventures it now. Was it the international bankers and capitalists that brought on Germany's declaration of war? Was it the international bankers and capitalists that drove Great Britain to the defense of Belgium? Was it these world controllers that led Italy into the struggle? What had they to do with Austria's ultimatum to Servia? What influence had they in the action of the Tsar in defense of Servia? Does the author of the articles intend us to believe that these international bankers agreed upon the war, and with a common purpose of control directed one nation against another, and all through their power over national credits? Could absurdity reach a greater height? What could these bankers promise to any one of these powers in the matter of their loans? Their bonds must be taken primarily by their own people and without this source they could not finance their wars. The amount of foreign loans negotiated through international bankers in this war was insignificant in the beginning and was nothing in the end. When one thinks of the mighty forces of national, race and dynastic origin and ambition that brought on this great cataclysm, he may well laugh at the suggestion that behind them all was this scheming circle of international bankers. Yet all this is one of the necessary premises of the conclusion which the author seeks to establish.

THE minor premise of the writer of these articles is that the small group of international bankers and capitalists who control the economic destinies and political fate of the world are Jews. He ventures back in the history of that remarkable race to show how this power developed in their hands and here he uses a modicum of fact. It is true that the cruel limitations put upon the activities of the Jews in the eighteen centuries of persecution forced them out of production on the land into trade and commerce and exchange. The very dispersion to which they were subjected, and the inhospitable reception they were accorded everywhere kept them in deep sympathy with one another and made world trade between them natural and easy, and the world hardly knows the debt it owes to them for this incalculable benefit. Ordinary precaution against the robbery and blackmail to which they were constantly subjected led them to deal not in lands which they could not hold, but in articles of value and small in bulk. This made them custodians of gold and so bankers. With the keen intellects there were among them, and the genius of patience and application, the science of trade and banking grew under their hands and it is true, as the author says, there were in medieval times monarchs who depended much on Jewish bankers to aid them in their loans. To say that even then they controlled kings is a figure of speech and not a fact. And now the Jews do not control all international banking houses. The Gentiles are equally active. There is competition between Jewish houses. The transfer of gold or its equivalent from one nation to another is not the result of the will of one banker or another. It is the calculation of profit on the particular transaction that prompts it and the profit depends on the extent of the demand for it in one country as compared with that in another. The difference in the demand for gold in one country and that in another is due to the internal business conditions in each country as compared with those in another. The money or gold in the current of exchange does not represent a tithe of the capital and wealth in use in each country. The wealth of the country is not in its money, or its gold; it is in its farms, its factories, its mines, and the products it is capable of bringing to market and sale. All the gold in the world is but a small fraction of the wealth of the world, and a very large part of that is not in the hands of international bankers, but is in the treasuries of governments or under their control. Never so little as now would arbitrary control of international exchanges even if it could exist, as it does not, carry with it the control of the business and political affairs of the world. Was it international bankers who had sent the British pound sterling to a discount of 33 1-3 as compared with our dollar? Was it international bankers who have sent the German mark from a par of twenty-five cents to an exchange value of a cent and a half? Was it not economic law which brought this about? Resistance by any banker or set of bankers, however powerful, to such an inevitable result of economic conditions would break them.

THE writer of these articles further seeks to bolster his premise that Jews are the world controllers of finance and so of politics, by describing their business successes in the United States. That the Jews are successful merchants and bankers is of course true. That they are keen in business with excellent judgment, and with never ending patience and application, everyone knows. In proportion to their number, their business success is noteworthy. The same is true of them in the professions and in every field into which their tastes and adaptability may take them. That they are friendly to one another in business as in other relations is also true, and why should they not be? The bond of a common suffering in their history, and an ever-threatening hostile prejudice is likely to produce such a feeling. But it is not true that they do not compete with each other. They are too much business men for this. It is said they are ambitious and have the will to power and that this has led them to be prime movers in the great trusts of the country. This is not true. There are Jews in the trusts, as are other keen business men, but it will be found that those who led the way were Gentiles. There are branches of business in which they are numerous and influential, and the [illegible] would disclose what has often been the purely arbitrary circumstance which attracted them. They are prominent in the business of the theatre, the opera, and music generally. So they should be. They are artistic, they are histrionic, they are naturally lovers of music. But for the patronage and support of the Jews we should not be able to have the theatre, the opera, or the symphony concerts. But what of all this in the matter of world control?

In the effort of the author to connect the Jews with the management of trusts and the control of broad fields of business he gives no names; he only makes assertions and as if to anticipate a demonstration that Gentiles control the industry by reference to the names of directors, he makes reply that it is a common thing for Jews to use Gentiles in the management of their business to present a "Gentile front", as he calls it. He is thus determined to put the Jew in control whether he seems to be there or not. The assertion that the Jew, with his will to power and the love of displaying it, which he attributes to him, should hide his light under a bushel in this way is only one of constant inconsistencies with which the earnest, careful reader is confronted in this issue of broad and unsupported generalizations.

The author of these articles refers to the fact that the Jews in this country have increased in number within the last forty years from less than 500,000 to now 2,500,000 or 3,000,000. That this presents some question by reason of their concentrating in the City of New York, and their indisposition to go to the farm and to the smaller towns, need not be disputed; but it is also true that they present far less difficulty in the matter of taking care of themselves and in becoming a charge upon the community than other immigrants. The fact is that they were driven here by the outrages committed upon them in Russia, in Poland and in Roumania, and one of the reasons why John Hay urged that the United States had the right to interest itself in the treatment of these poor people by those heartless governments was that they drove them to the United States as a refuge and increased the burden of the United States in caring for them. They are gradually through the agency of our public schools and through the equal opportunity that this country offers, fitting themselves to better and better citizenship, and in the small percentage they represent of our entire population they need give no cause for concern such as the author of these articles would like to arouse.

THE next basis for the premise is that the Jews control the world through the press. What does this mean? Does it mean that the Jews own all the newspapers of wide circulation and influence? The author mentions three newspapers in Germany which are owned by Jews. Does that control Europe or even Germany? He could not mention many more than that owned by Jews in the United States. What then, does he mean? He says that through fear of Jewish power to give and withhold advertising, the press is muzzled as to the Jews. Here we come to a broad distinction by utterly and unjustly ignoring which, the author seeks grossly to exaggerate the power and effort of the Jews to secure affirmative control of affairs, by confusing it with their power and effort to protect their people against abuse of their rights. They naturally resent insult, contumely heaped upon Jews because they are Jews, and they are fully justified in seeking in every lawful way to prevent its recurrence. If by reason of their power to control the distribution of their advertising or by exercise of discretion in their business patronage they can restrain such outrage upon the feelings of their race and the stimulation of prejudice, they are entirely right in using it. It is probably true that a wholesome fear of the loss of Jewish patronage does prevent some of the press from giving a vent to the expression of race prejudice and stirring up anti-Semitism. If so, I am glad of the restraint. The same thing is true in respect to the venting of prejudices against other members of our community, and it should be a source of satisfaction rather than complaint. But it is said our Jews control our politics by their solidarity. This is not true. They are Republicans and Democrats and they contend as vigorously for their respective parties as other citizens. In a case where a wrong against Jews in any part of the world needs righting, the broad sympathy of the American people can be easily aroused and this Jews have done. They it was who secured so wide a public demand for the abrogation of the treaty with Russia. They it was with their brethren in Europe who have succeeded in securing a provision in the Treaty of Versailles prescribing the equality of right to be secured to Jews in Poland. This is cited by the editor of the Dearborn Independent as a vicious instance of Jewish world control. Why should not these nations at Versailles, when they were delivering to the Poles a freedom won by the sacrifice of millions of lives and mountains of treasure, exact from them a pledge that the Jews should be free from oppression and be given an equal opportunity to give their children education and to pursue their own livelihood and happiness? Nor is the criticism such that the provision was humiliating to Poland in its specific provisions and in the reservation in the treaty that the Great Powers may enforce it. The experience of the Congress of Berlin with the solemn guaranty of Roumania on this subject and her breach of faith are still freshly in our minds. The abuses to which the Jews had been subjected in Poland gave good ground for additional safeguards. This is not a seeking of affirmative control of affairs by Jews. It is only another instance of an effort of the Jews to protect those of their own race against further outrageous persecution; and we wish all civilization should aid them. I cannot too often refer to the sympathy which one Jew has for another in distress, especially when it arises from racial hatred or prejudice. It is a trait which, instead of being made a ground for attack upon the Jews, should commend them highly to their fellow man. It is not inconsistent with their duty to their country; it is not inconsistent with their duty to their fellow man. The author of the articles continually refers to the Jewish question. The Jewish question is not one calling for protection against the Jews as the writor of the Dearborn Independent articles would make it.

THE real and great Jewish question is how more than half these Jewish people should be rescued from outrage, massacre and all sorts of injustice, as well as penury and starvation brought about by government discrimination and prompted by bitter race prejudice. This question has roused Jews the world over and they have nobly responded. It has led to great organizations which have been unceasing in their efforts to aid their fellow Jews in all of Middle and Eastern Europe, where they have suffered so much. It is this which has developed Zionism and while men and Jews differ as to the exact goal ultimately to be reached in this movement, all concur in seeking the refuge it is hoped it will afford the Jews of eastern Europe from their present awful state. Yet it is these organizations upon which the author of these articles would base his charge against the Jews of seeking world power.

If it be true that the international bankers and capitalists are Jews alone; if it be true that they wield a world power to control governments and nations and wars and peace and economic law, can the author of these articles in the Dearborn Independent explain why it is that now more than half the 13,000,000 Jews in the world are still suffering not only persecution and oppression, but the bitterest penury and starvation? Why is it that if this omnipotence belongs to the Jews, half of them are in the direst misery? One needs to cite no specific facts to refute the preposterous assumptions of this learned writer in the Dearborn Independent because the general facts which refute his every statement can be seen by a wayfaring man, though a fool.

THE author of the articles refers to Germany as a place where the Jewish question so-called, has been prominent, and in which the danger from the Jews and their activities has been demonstrated. The arguments of the anti-Semitic party are, of course, rehearsed, and the prominence of the individual Jews in the government which succeeded the Empire is pointed out and made the basis for the assumption that these Jews are engaged in promoting the power of all Jews and lending themselves to this ultimate Jewish despotism. The author, of course, does not stop to note how natural it is for Jews to be prominent in the new popular government of Germany. The bitter anti-Semitism in Germany had driven the great body of Jews into the opposition to the government, into socialism of the various phases of which Germany is full. The Jew is naturally quick and able and political and his leadership is accepted by the less intelligent and less constructive members of his party, and therefore it is not surprising that among the leaders of these parties are Jews. They appear in support of their party as might be expected and show no common Jewish purpose but only the individual aims and natural leadership that acute intelligence and practical knowledge would give.

On the whole, therefore, there is nothing in the assertions by the author of these articles in respect to the Jews that contain any facts justifying an inference beyond the natural and commendable desire of Jews to get on in the world, to acquire money and comfort and education for their children and standing and influence in the community. Thus the case of the author of these articles fails here. Even if there were a secret council of Jews planning to use the accumulated influence and wealth and power of the Jews to conquer the world and to establish an Israelitish absolutism under a Jewish sovereign, he has shown no such power in the Jews now or in the future which could accomplish such a task, or any likelihood that the Jews of the civilized countries of the world would for one moment join in such a conspiracy.

But we must go on with the author to his attempt to establish the last link in his chain of charges in the indictment, and that is the existence of a secret council of Jews who are now deliberately plotting to destroy the governments of the world by anarchy and bolshevism and to erect on the world's ruins an Hebraic autocracy by the power of the purse. He proposes to find this in the so-called protocols of the Wise Men of Zion.

WHAT are these protocols? They purport to be oral explanations of a Jew to disciples or listeners, of the plot by the inner wise men to establish a Jewish despotism and absolute monarchy under a King of Israel over the world. The bald and shocking and brutal details of the plan as they are justified and explained, create on their face a serious doubt that anyone would avow them to a group of disciples, however depraved he or they might be. They are drawn without exculpatory phases and are made as bald and as revolting as possible and are much better adapted to stirring bitterness and indignation against the author of the protocols than they are to the enlightenment and inspiration of disciples and followers whose cooperation he seeks to instruct and secure.

He begins with the announcement that more men are vicious and wicked than are noble and that we must make that the basis of our practical policy. He says that honesty and fairness are, in view of that policy, vices, and that hypocrisy and cunning are the only virtues which should be practiced. He then discloses his plan. He assumes, as does the author of the Dearborn Independent, that the Jews have all the money in the world under their control and that money enables them to control nations and wars and peace. He refutes the idea that economic laws untimately prevail throughout the world and assumes, as does the editor of the Dearborn Independent, that the Jews with money are able to reverse these laws and create arbitrary results, as if they were not only absolute rulers of the government but absolute controllers of demand and supply, of prices and of wages. With this absolute power over everything that goes to affect the comfort and happiness of the world through the Jewish control of money, he adds the control through other Jews of mobs and the forces of disintegration. He asserts that they control the press of the world and that through the press they are to play upon the feelings of the proletariat and to create a wide antagonism between it and the more intelligent and wealthier classes, so that society is to be broken up and the governments of the world under the Gentile rule are to be weakened until they are really overthrown. This inner circle is to stimulate proletarian distinctiveness by first increasing wages of the workmen and then increasing prices. They are hurrying the world on to a great war, and in the war territorial changes are not to be affected, but the changes are to be financial only. After the disintegration of governments in which the lives of many Jews are to be sacrificed for the purpose of carrying out the plot, the ultimate object is to be achieved; and one of the seed of King David is to be trained to become the universal sovereign of the world. The character of the judges of the civil service and of many details of the government under this descendant of King David are set out at great length together with a plan of taxation. A police system and a method of maintaining absolute government without the show of force and a system of espionage in which one-third of the people are set to watch the other two-thirds are gravely described.

I have read and reread these protocols and the impression they have made on me is that they are the work of one who wishes to hold up to scorn and hatred and condemnation the race in whose behalf they purport to be written. They are drafted by one who had watched, with a cynical eye, the workings of popular government, and who paints in the most lurid colors the defects of democracy when it degenerates into mob rule. The writer was evidently a profound believer in absolutism and seeks here to vindicate its useful possibilities in every sentence, but in attempting to give a practical coloring to the conspiracy, for which he is seeking to make the Jewish council responsible, his assumptions of the power to do the things he describes in pursuance of the ultimate object are grotesque and ridiculous and should make a reasonably intelligent man who reads them impatient.

But how is our author of the Dearborn Independent articles affected by these Baron Munchausen tales of accomplishment or proposed accomplishments? Of course, they accord with his assumptions that the international Jewish bankers control the purse of the world and therefore control the economic phenomena and suspend the operation of economic laws. What is absurd to everyone else cannot, of course, be absurd to him in view of the fact that he makes the same assumptions. But his chief reason for deeming these protocols a real emanation from a Jewish Sanhedrin sitting somewhere in the world to plot the subjection of the world, is in their anticipation of what has since happened in the great war. Let us examine and see how wonderful these are. These protocols are supposed to have been framed about 1905 during the Russian-Japanese war, and they anticipate a world war. Such a prophecy was not unknown at that day, nor was it unreasonable to expect it in view of the conflicting interests of the great powers and the enormous armaments they were preparing. Secondly, he points with eagerness to the plan to increase the price of wages and raise the hopes of the laboring people, then to increase the price of living in order to dash those hopes and arouse indignation at the authorities and cause revolt and disorder as a remarkable identification of the plan with what has happened during and since the war. To his mind it apparenty indicates that these things were due to the working of the Sanhedrin and not due to natural causes, and thus he would prove the genuineness and solid importance of the document as a basis of proof of the conspiracy. This phenomenon of a rise in wages and an accompanying rise in prices is only the natural course in economic law. If wages go up, prices must go up. One is a natural concomitant of the other. It has happened in every war, and it needed no prophet to come and tell us so. Then he finds in the cry of the Socialists and Bolshevists there shall be no territorial changes by the war—a proof that they were working under the inspiration and will of the Inner Circle of the Jews of the Protocol. This is certainly a far cry to identification.

BUT the chief reason for assuming that the developments of this war reveal the genuineness of the Protocols and the plot the Inner Circle is working out, is the fact that there are some Jews in the leadership of Bolshevism in Russia. Here we have in fine relief the iterated and reiterated assumption that if there be a single Jew in a movement, it is complete evidence of his control of that movement and of his control of that movement for distinctly Jewish purposes. According to such records as I have had access to, and the conclusions of Mr. John Spargo, who has devoted himself to a close following of the Bolshevist movement in Russia, the statement that Jews control it is entirely unwarranted. There are Jews in the Bolshevist Cabinet, there are Jews in some important offices, but there are Jews who lead the opposing party of Menshiviki, the moderate socialists, and there are Jews who are prominent in the Cadet movement, a third party of constitutionalists. In a country where Jews were subjected to such bitter cruelty and oppression as in Russia, it is no wonder that they became anarchists and socialists, and took part in the plans for assassination and were made martyrs to the cause of freedom and resistance to tyranny. When the revolution arrived, some became extremists and Bolshevists, other moderate socialists and others conservative democrats or republicans, and divided just as other opponents of absolutism did. More than this, Bolshevism is spread by a propaganda of terrorisn, and if one would escape imprisonment and suffering it is wise for him to embrace Bolshevism for the nonce, and this is what former conservatives and Cadets and Menshiviki have done, and doubtless among them are Jews. The Bolshevist Jews were no more responsible for Bolshevism than the others engaged in it. Lenine is not a Jew, but Trotzsky is, and the facts seem to show that the Jews among the commissions in actual power and control are in a decided minority. But whether they are or not is not important in the consideration of the issue which the Dearborn Independent insists upon making, and that is that Bolshevism is only part of the plot of the Inner Sanhedrin of Jews to disintegrate governments in order to secure the despotism of the Inner Council. In this view it is essential to establish that Trotzky and his fellow Jews who are Bolshevists are Bolshevists in order to establish the autocracy of Judaism the world over. There is not the slightest evidence that they have any such purpose, or that they are under the control of any inner circle of Jews. Not a single fact is pointed out to indicate that they are acting under somebody else's direction or that they have an ultimate object of Judaism. They are engaged in the attack upon all religion. They flout it.

DOES the author of these articles not find enough in the history of Russia and abuses of the autocracy to explain the Revolution and the subsequent phases of it without tracing it to the will of the Sanhedrin of the Wise Men of Zion? In what way was that will manifested? How was it made effective? Really is it not more reasonable to recognize the movement to anarchy and then to proletariat autocracy as due to the violence of the reaction against Tsarism and its abuses than to attribute it to the machinations of an invisible Sanhedrin? Why look for causes in the sky when they are just before us? The reasoning which would make the fact that Jews are some of them leaders among the Bolsheviki proof of the genuineness of the Protocols and a step in carrying out the conspiracy therein projected, is as faulty as that which convicted innocent women of being witches in the seventeenth century.

WHAT is the asserted origin of these Protocols? They are produced by one Sergus Nilus, a man who was a religious fanatic of the Russian Church, and whose whole nature was absorbed in the identification of the church with the autocracy in Russia and whose religion was the maintenance of the divine authority of the Tsar. He was a mystic, and he was contending against those forces which would destroy the autocracy of the Tsar as the anti-Christ. Some had regarded Free Masonry as the anti-Christ because there were politics in the Masonic lodges directed against the dynasty. Others like Nilus attributed to Jews the character of anti-Christ. He said he obtained the protocols from a man who had received them from a woman in Asiatic Russia, who had obtained them in secrecy, and that is all that is known about them. They are not signed; they are not even given the title, "The Wise Men of Zion". This was given them after their publication. Nilus was a dreamer and fanatic. He could himself have conceived in his dreams of such a wild scheme and impossible plot and could publish it for the purpose of arousing indignation against the Jews and justifying the policy of cruelty toward them pursued by the Russian Tsar. The article is calculated to arouse indignation not alone against the Jews but against every movement to unseat the Tsar and his power. It is written in a contemptuous scorn of popular government. The protocols were written by a man who had studied the defects of democracy and who struggled to emphasize them by attributing to this pseudo wise man of Zion the purpose to use demoralization of mob rule to achieve autocracy of the Jews. That these protocols might have fooled the Russians was possible, but that they should be honestly taken up by an American citizen, with ordinary intelligence, and offered as a basis for insisting that there is a Jewish question among us that needs solution, is hard to credit. The course of reasoning by which Ignatius Donnelly and others have established that Bacon wrote Shakespeare by the internal evidence of Shakespeare's plays, is a monument of logic as compared with these. The Tales of Baron Munchausen are the only things in literature that should be classed with these protocols, for they are not more preposterous. It is appropriate that the author of these Dearborn Independent articles should refer with a show of learning to the fact that there were Princes of the House of Israel who continued to exercise titular authority into the Middle Ages among the Jews, and should suggest that the descendant of such exilarche may now be in the keeping of this Sanhedrin and ready to be brought out and proclaimed the King of Israel when the situation shall be ripe.

I HAVE thus considered the substance of the indictment of the Jews by the editor of the Dearborn Independent, and the evidence, or lack of it, upon which he bases it. I have not gone into a discussion of the Jew as a man, or the Jew as a citizen. In an address delivered before the National Geographical Society I attempted to trace the history of the Jew, and to show the effect upon him and his people of the cruel treatment to which he had been subjected for eighteen centuries. I pointed out the remarkable qualities of the race and the wonderful abilities in many lines that they had shown. Wherever they have been given an equal chance, the best of them, quite out of proportion to their number, have forged to the front and became leaders in the fields of their activities, and prominent in the countries of which they have become citizens. It is charged that they cannot become genuine and sincere citizens of any country because they are themselves a nation in dispersion, and that to that nation they owe their first allegiance. I differ entirely with this view, and it has been refuted by the conduct of the Jews in many countries. It is true they retain an allegiance to their race and to their faith, and why shouldn't they? We would not value them if they did not do so. They have a great history to look back to, a great ancestry, and well may they be proud of it. But while they are proud of being Jews, while most of them adhere to the ancient faith, what inconsistency is there in that with their being good citizens of the country in which they are born and live? How does it detract from their patriotism? In what way does it interfere with their allegiance to this government when that allegiance calls for service and sacrifice? They did their part in this great war as Frenchmen, as Englishmen, as Americans. Those of them who made the ultimate sacrifice were in full proportion to their number either as citizens or as soldiers. The exclusiveness with which they have been charged is in porportion to the prejudice exhibited against them and their fellows in any community. It is a meaure of protection. As discrimination against them ceases, as equal opportunity makes itself felt among them, as the rewards for their genius and patience and application come, the differences between them and other people disappear. They become ingrained Americans with us. Their genius, their industry, their skill, their tenacity of purpose, their enterprise make for the prosperity of the community and country, and there is no good object in which they are not willing to do their part. In politics, they do not act as a body. They have their acute differences of opinion as other people have. There are good men and bad men among them, and their good men condemn their bad men with the same emphasis that good men of other religions and races among us do theirs.

There is not the slightest ground for anti-Semitism among us. It is a vicious plant. It is a noxious weed that should be cut out. It has no place in free America, and the men who seek to introduce it should be condemned by public opinion.

"I DWELL AMONG MY OWN PEOPLE."

By Edward N. Calisch, Ph. D., Rabbi of Temple Beth Ahabath, Richmond, Va.

In the fourth chapter of the second book of Kings there is the story of Elisha and the Shunammite woman. The prophet in his travels came often to Shunem. In accord with the custom of Jewish hospitality he was invited to a meal at the house. And as often as he came to the town he broke bread at the house of this woman, who, though unnamed, lives in history. She persuaded her husband to prepare a little upper chamber, on the wall, to place therein a bed, a table, a chair and a candlestick, so that the man of God might turn in thither when he came. Which he did. Wishing to show his appreciation of her thoughtful kindness to him, the prophet told his servant to call the woman to him. She came and stood before him. He said to her, "Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldst thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host?" And she answered: "I dwell among my own people."

Judging from the context we can imagine that the condition of this woman and her husband was that of a contented middle class. They were doubtless not rich, nor yet poor. It appears that she did not, as some women do, aspire to great riches or social position or power. She was happy in her faith, in the love of her husband and in her ability to serve the prophet of the Lord. She wore the crown of contentment, that crown of which Shakespeare wrote:

"My crown is in my heart, not on my head,
Not decked with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen; my crown is called content:
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy."

This contentment came to her doubtless from her faith, the faith shown in her treatment of the man of God. So she said simply, "I dwell among my own people."

To dwell among one's own people, what does it mean? Who are one's own people? First one's own immediate family. How happy he who can say he dwells with his own! There is no sadder sight than that of the members of a household torn apart by dissensions and quarrels—hate being where love should be—discord where harmony should reign—where the hearthstone is not an altar but a battlefield. The psalmist says, "How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Family quarrels are the unhappiest experiences of existence. It is as though one looks for bread and finds a stone. Even where it does not go to the extent of separation, or cessation of intercourse with each other, where there is lack of loving unity, there is lack of happiness. Every member of a family owes it as a special duty to the family as to himself to preserve the harmony of the family circle—to maintain in unbroken integrity this foundation stone of society, of religion and of government. Happy those who can say they dwell among their own people, in loving unity and peace!

Second, there is a wider application, referring to one's own people; that is, to one's class in society and culture. It is a laudable ambition to try to better one's place, socially and materially; to seek a higher plane of intellectual and social life; but most people who are socially ambitious are governed by wrong motives and seek wrong results. Our social classes are graded mostly by degrees of wealth—somewhat only by birth and ancestry. The ladder to the social heights too often is built of gold. The best people, from a purely social viewpoint, are not always the best from an intellectual, moral, civic or religious viewpoint. The scheming and pushing, the intrigues, the petty tricks and devious devices that mark the struggle for social prominence, or power, or prestige, are not calculated to ennoble or to uplift or refine the character. The disappointments and dissipations and delusions, the heartburnings and envies and jealousies, are not calculated to make for happiness, hardly even for satisfaction. For at best that which is sought for so eagerly is but the shadow and not the substance, and its possession is as fleeting and unsubstantial as the uncertain shade of a flitting butterfly. Then, too, how many the homes that are wrecked by people living beyond their means to keep up appearances, the children that are denied the genuine education of heart and soul for the sake of the vapid folly of so-called social accomplishments. Truly this social restlessness and ambition have caused more evil than good. Why should we not realize our place, and be content to dwell among our own people; satisfied to forego the tinsel and tawdry trappings of useless folly and live with our own in peaceful unity and mutual joy.

Third, a still wider application—"Among my own people"—the people of the Book, the people of Israel. There are some among us who would break away if they could, if they dared. There are some who criticize Jewish manners, Jewish customs, Jewish people, Jewish ideals, who would like to enter the society of non-Jews, and be with them, who try to deny or forget, or to cause others to forget, their Jewish parentage and association—who do not live among their own people in spirit, and wish they did not in body. They are cowards, lacking the courage to be either loyal, self-respecting Jews, or openly to enter another confession. They, too, make a sorry mistake. They, too, sacrifice the substance and seek a shadow, an unsubstantial fleeting nothing. And they are not happy when they get it. The claim of ancestral allegiance is stronger than the whim of mistaken vision. How often indeed those who do not wish to live among their own people come home to die among them. Those who will not dwell among them living do dwell among them dead. This, too, is a species of folly arising from social discontent.

JAMES DE ROTHSCHILD TO COME TO AMERICA.

Son of Well-Known Philanthropist of Paris to Come to This Country for Zionist Work.

Major James de Rothschild, son of the eminent philanthropist and chief supporter of the Palestinian colonies, Baron Edmond de Rothschild, will arrive in the United States within a week or two, and will remain over the month of January and the early part of February. He is coming here on matters relating entirely to the development of Palestine.

Major Rothschild is an ardent Zionist, and is deeply interested in all work in Palestine. He has visited that country a number of times, and is intimately informed on all matters relating to its development. During the war, he served in Palestine as a Major in the Jewish Legion which he helped to recruit, and which did such splendid work under General Allenby, conqueror of Jerusalem. He was a member of the Zionist Commission in Jerusalem. Major Rothschild is especially interested in helping to form in America an Economic Council for Palestine to be associated with the one in England, of which he and Sir Alfred Mond, the English financier, are members.

"In Light and In Love Shall Ye Lead"

Address by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, at the B'nai B'rith Banquet, Held in Chicago, December 23, 1920.

MY MASTERS had warned me never to begin an address with an apology; and yet this evening I feel as though I should like to offer an apology, because I feel myself a sort of an anti-climax. I do not know just why the committee found it necessary to invite me to come and speak to you, after having invited ex-President Taft, whose words this evening are destined to remain significant and potent in the annals of American Jewish history.

Perhaps a word from one who is a Jew and a Rabbi, and a Ben Brith on this subject, which is at this hour uppermost in our minds, may not be altogether out of place. It will perhaps be in accord with the little message I wish to leave this evening, "In light and in love shall ye lead."

I would like to have you feel, men and women, as I feel, that the truest answer to every slander of the Jew, is more Jewishness; that the most effective and telling answer to every attack on Judaism is a more and better and nobler Judaism.

I would like to have you feel as I do, that the retort, courteous but crushing, to every mean and wicked charge against the integrity and honesty of our people, and the sublimity of our faith, is another synagogue, and another school, and another agency for the dissemination of our culture and our ideals throughout the world.

I know that some of you have been saddened during the past few months because of these things. I have, too. I know you have been saddened more especially because of the fact that such a thing should take place in this land at this time, after a great war, when our people gave as freely, as eagerly, as generously, to the cause of America in the struggle and to the cause of the Allies as any other racial or religious group. That such a thing should occur at this time, after a great war that was fought for a little more sweetness and a little more light in the habitations of the world, after we had hoped and prayed that out of the tragic welter of blood and tears and suffering there might come a new blessing unto the children of men, that the broken links of human brotherhood might be drawn anew together, that men might have a little more sympathy and a little more toleration toward one another, I say that such a thing should transpire at this time is very saddening to everyone.

It is more especially saddening to me, not because it affects me as a Jew, but because it affects me as an American citizen, because such a thing, is a desecration of the holy of holies of American life. Don't you see if such a thing be permitted to spread, it is bound to destroy that superb and magnificent experiment upon which this land, by God's grace, has been engaged for a hundred years,—the bringing together of men and women from all parts of the earth, with all their ancient antipathies and all their ancient hostilities, the crushing of their particularisms, the destruction of the things that separated them, and the fusing and blending of all of them into one perfect harmony of human brotherhood? Don't you see that these insinuations, these libelous slanders, and charges are undermining and destroying that experiment for which the Jew and all the peoples of the earth had hoped and prayed adown the ages? It is because these men are flushing the sewers of vile European mediaevalism into the clear fresh waters of American life, because it is treason to the spirit of America, to the spirit of the Pilgrim fathers, to the spirit of the founders of this land, to the spirit of Lincoln, because it is treason to the spirit of humanity, that this thing hurts so much. If there is anything, my friends, that this poor, tired and tortured world of ours needs at this time even more than it needs bread, it is a little bit of human love, kindliness, thoughtfulness and considerateness. That is why I sometimes give way to the spirit of depression, and yet I do not become hopeless or crushed because of it. For two reasons!

First, because I have faith in human progress. 'The world does move.' It may suffer intermittent periods of retardation. It does not move constantly and consistently forward, but spirally it ascends all the time. These propaganda and those movements, nurtured by hate, fathered by reaction, are to my mind but so many broken reeds placed in the way of the onrushing tide of human progress. The tide cannot be stopped! The tide cannot be stopped!

I will never lose my faith, because, those of us who have read Jewish history know that these venomous attacks are not new nor unique, and that they cannot succeed where tens and hundreds of similar enterprises have failed. If there is any one conviction that is strong within me, that sustains and inspires me, it is this—that we are an eternal people. The proud hosts of Babylon and Assyria, the winged armies of the Egyptians and Thebes could not destroy us. The grieved hoplites of the Greeks, nor the iron legions of the Romans could break our spirit. The cross nor the crescent, the inquisitions, the exiles, the pales, the ghettos, and expulsion could not vanquish us, for we are an eternal people. Thus was it said of old, and thus shall it be to the end of time. "When thou shalt pass through the waters I shall be with thee. And the rivers shall not overflow thee. When thou shalt pass through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, and the flames shall not consume thee. For thou art an eternal people!"

There are to my mind but two ways of destroying prejudice, not only as between non-Jew and Jew, but as between non-Jew and non-Jew, and as between Jew and Jew. The first is the spirit of true democracy, which expresses itself in love and in service. And the second is the spirit of real education—light—truth.

By democracy I mean not the right of universal suffrage only; not the right of people to decide an issue by the show of hands. By democracy I mean something more basic and fundamental. I mean the right of every child of God to live his own life and develop his own native capacities and potentialities. By democracy I mean the opportunity given to every man for self-realization and self-expression. By democracy and by American democracy I mean not the desire to force all men into one preconceived mould, so that they would all be alike and look alike and act alike, but on the contrary, the inspiration given to every man to develop that which is unique and individual with him. That is democracy.

What holds true of individuals holds true of groups. I believe that America does not ask of every racial or religious or cultural group to destroy itself; to annihilate itself and its identity and its uniqueness, to turn its back upon its vast culture which it has brought over with it to this land. That would mean that America is something already achieved and not something that is being constantly forged and fashioned anew by all the peoples that have come to this land from lands and civilizations much older than ours. I believe that each group can best serve the highest interests of America by developing that which is finest and noblest in itself, purifying it and crystalizing it, and then bringing it as a free will offering and laying it upon the shrine of American idealism. I conceive of America as of a beautiful mosaic, made up of many peoples, of many cultures, of many lands.

That is why I sometimes resent deeply any question of Jewish patriotism and Jewish loyalty, because of the Jew's loyalty to his own faith and to his own people; and I sometimes condemn this constant reiteration on our part of our loyalty and our patriotism. We have nothing to apologize for. We are not guests here. We are not late-comers to be tolerated and to be indulged. Our right of citizenship is not a gift bestowed upon us, but something won by our labors and by the sweat of our brow. The Jew has given to America from earliest time until this day as much as any other racial or religious or cultural group has given to America.

When the eyes of the first white man scanned the shimmering outlines of this hemisphere, the Jew was there; and when the foot of the first white man was placed upon American soil the Jew was there; and when the first challenge was hurled against a tyranical power the Jew was there; and when this nation set out to break the shackles of foreign dominion the Jew was there. When this nation resolved some decades later to break the shackles of millions of slaves and to give them their freedom, the Jew was there; and when in our time and in our own day this nation went forth as a crusader in behalf of the rights of the submerged and the denied peoples of the earth, the Jew was supremely and superbly there; and the Jew will be there when the last sunset will set upon this land in the ultimate cycle of time. The Jew will be there!

I venture to say unto you men and women, that to my mind there is nothing more important at this particular time, than the initiation by somebody of a systematic and comprehensive campaign to enlighten the non-Jew concerning the Jew and concerning Judaism because the non-Jew does not know us. His ignorance is not malicious; it is simply due to lack of contact and lack of information. He does not know us, and where there is ignorance there is fear; and where there is fear, ultimately there is hatred. The non-Jews do not know us. Most of them, and especially those in small towns, still think of us as men and women that have stepped out of the pages of their Sunday School bibles. They think of us as of some mythical, unreal legendary figures, who are here to justify some theologic notions of certain sects. They do not know the achievements of the Jew, the part he has played throughout the ages and all his accomplishments. They do not know, and it is high time they were informed.

Education of the non-Jew, to my mind, ought to be one of the great objects of this organization in the years to come. Spread the light of the Menorah to those who are in darkness concerning us.

And lastly, educate the Jew!

Why is it as I go from university to university, and from college to college I find young Jews and young Jewesses, splendid types of fine Jewish manhood and womanhood, ill at ease, uncomfortable and unhappy, because forsooth certain prerogatives had been denied to them? Why is it that they are unhappy? I will tell you why. Because you and I have not given unto them the fine Jewish substitute for the things denied them, because they do not know the why and the wherefore. They have not been given that sense of dignity, that sense of loyalty which comes from a direct and intimate acquaintance with their people, their history and their achievements all through the ages. We have sent them forth into the world uninformed, unprotected, unarmed. If we can make the young Jew and Jewess of today realize that we are children of a race which has survived the onslaught of the ages; if you can make them feel as we feel the sense of pride and satisfaction that one-half the world is reading our literature and two-thirds of them are worshiping our God; if you can make them feel the pride that comes from a knowledge of our record of martyrdom and suffering, you will have given them something in relation to which all the small denials will seem puny and insignificant. You will have filled their souls with a glow that will sustain them.

It is the duty of this organization to inspire the men and the women of our faith to give unto their children that which their sires gave unto them, their God, their people, their history, their literature, their mission, and their destiny. So that when people will speak to them of conspiracies and plots and counterplots, they will just laugh at them. They will be able to say unto all these maligners and traducers of our people, if it is conspiracy to fight uncompromisingly for truth and for justice, if it is conspiracy to be the crucified people of the earth for thousands of years, to champion the cause of the denied and of the oppressed, the widow, the Orphan, the weak everywhere, to be the servant of God; if that is conspiracy, then the Jew is the arch-conspirator of the earth!

In light and love, my friends, do you lead. Be true to the spirit of love and of service, of brotherhood and brotherly love. You will then be a blessing, indeed, not alone unto yourself and unto your people, but unto your land and unto humanity. Be ye therefore a blessing!

AN INSTITUTION WHICH IS TO HELP BUILD UP PALESTINE.

(Jewish Correspondence Bureau.)

London—Announcement is made that the "Haboneh" has already commenced active work in Palestine. The Haboneh is an organization which proposes to build houses in Palestine. It has a nominal capital of £200,000 and has already acquired all the necessary machinery for its undertaking. In order to insure themselves also with the necessary supply of stones at the right price, the Haboneh has established in Jerusalem and Haifa stone quarries which will be worked on most modern lines.

MINORITY RIGHTS IN JUGO-SLAVIA EFFECTED.

(Jewish Correspondence Bureau.)

Vienna—Permission has been granted by the Jugo-Slavian government for the establishment of a Jewish State School at Gross-Becsherek (Jugo-Slavia), according to a dispatch from that city. In announcing the establishment of this school, the Jugo-Slavian Minister of Education explained that this was being done in accordance with the Minority Rights clauses which Jugo-Slavia had accepted as part of the Versailles Peace Treaty.

ROUMANIAN GOVERNMENT NOT TO INTERN POGROM VICTIMS.

(Jewish Correspondence Bureau.)

Vienna—The Roumanian government has withdrawn its order to intern all Jewish refugees in Bessarabia, says a dispatch from Bucharest. Rabbi Zirelsohn, of Kisheneff, accompanied by Mr. Berland, secretary of the Ukrainian Committee for Jewish refugees in Bessarabia, called on the Roumanian Premier, General Averesco, and after the situation was explained to him, the Premier telegraphically ordered the Bessarabian authorities to stop interning and expelling Jewish refugees, and instead to issue to each, special protective certificates. The Premier also promised that those desiring to proceed to America or Palestine would be given all facilities.

THE RABBI OF KNISMEN THROWN OUT OF A WINDOW OF A RUNNING TRAIN.

Warsaw, (J. C. B. Service)—From the material obtained by Jewish deputies regarding the persecution of the Jews in Poland, it has been established that on the 19th of December Polish officers threw out a number of Jews, including the Rabbi of Knishen, from a running train, using the windows as exits. The train was on its way from Knishen to Bialystok. Some of the Jews were severely beaten before being flung out of the window.

On January 3, Polish soldiers and officers on board a train which was on its way from Kovno to Warsaw, ill-treated all the passengers on the train.

PERSECUTION OF JEWS LEADS TO SPLIT OF HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT PARTY.

(Jewish Correspondence Bureau.)

Vienna—Because the government of Hungary saw itself compelled to adopt a more liberal policy towards the Jews, 13 of the leading members in the government party left its ranks and founded a new party, says a Budapest dispatch. The new party proclaims as its main purposes the consistent and systematic persecution of the Jews and the restoration of the monarchy.

PROBLEM OF VIENNA JEWISH REFUGEES PLACED BEFORE LEAGUE.

(Jewish Correspondence Bureau.)

Paris—A Geneva report states that the representatives of the Jewish Delegations have placed a memorandum before Mr. Calbano, chairman of the League Committee on Minority Rights, covering the situation of the Galician Jewish refugees in Vienna.

RICHMOND, VA.

At the regular meeting of Rimmon Lodge, No. 68, of Richmond, Va., held in December at the Temple, Mr. Morton L. Wollenstein was elected President. Authority was given to the Committee on Program and Entertainment to arrange for a public installation during January at which time addresses by prominent visitors will be made.

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

Poland.

CONDITIONS seem, right now, so critical that a reviewer of current events must apprehend that his reports will be considerably antiquated by the time they reach the reader. A relief worker, who recently returned from abroad, reports that Poland is on the threshold of a revolution which would have broken out before were the people not so utterly depressed by years of misery and lacking all energy.

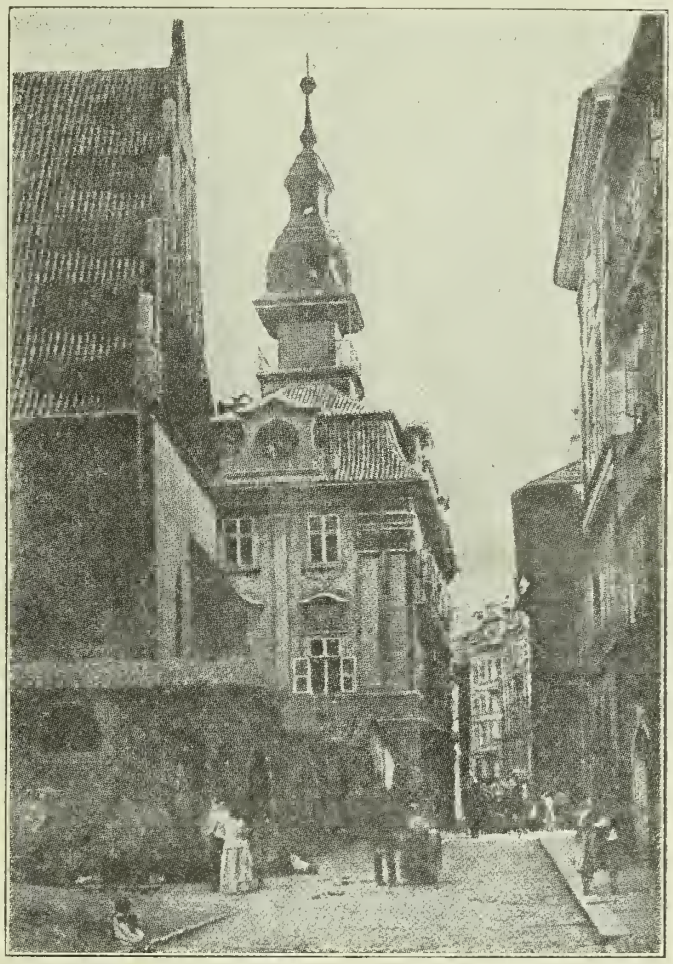
Under these conditions it seems unfortunately probable that the Jews of this unhappy region are again to be made the scapegoat for the country's misfortune due in no small measure to the national chauvinism of the masses and the imperialism of the leaders. Paderewski's paper makes the significant remark: "The Jews talk of Palestine but prefer Poland. If America shuts her gates to Japanese, Poland may shut out the Jews who are worse than Asiatics. If immigration to Poland will not cease, Poland must cease to be the paradise of the Jews".

What kind of paradise it is we learn daily from the reports of outrages committed against helpless Jews who are thrown out of moving trains, who are put in prison without any cause and are flogged there and otherwise scandalously mistreated. The latest cable dispatches at hand inform us that the anti-Semitic cooperative organization, Rozwoj, placarded the streets of Warsaw with posters appealing to boycott Jews and Lithuanians. "Iswestia", the organ of the Soviet government, estimates the number of Jewish pogrom victims as 600,000 of whom 350,000 were the victims of the Polish invasions.

From various sources we learn of the terrible outrages committed by the troops of General Balachowicz, which rival in extent and cruelty those of the Ukrainian band leaders. The facts were discussed in the Sejm by an interpellation of the Jewish member Schipper, but all that Premier Witos had to say was that he will investigate the charges. It is almost comical in this connection to read that the reactionary press of Warsaw protests against the persecution of Polish Jews in Hungary while on the other hand, we learn that the Jews are fleeing in such masses from the formerly Prussian part of Poland that congregational life there is facing a crisis and numerous teachers and other congregational employes are facing starvation. The Sejm passed a resolution not to allow Jews to hold commissions in the army, quite regardless of all treaty obligations. On the other hand, General Zieligowski, the Polish D'Annunzio, presses the Jews of Wilna into the army who naturally are by no means willing to serve under conditions which would make them the just object of hatred for their Lithuanian neighbors who by international treaty are the rightful possessors of the district.

The Socialists are for the present the only section of the community who propose to be just to the Jews. Here it is where critical conditions may develop because the leader of the party, Ignace Daszynski, who had repeatedly warned against the persecution of the Jews as apt to hurt the interests of Poland, resigned from the cabinet. The labor element has also expressed its disapproval of the pogroms by assessing its members for the support of the numerous refugees from the Ukraine who are assembled at the border of Poland.

The minority rights as affecting the cultural institutions are also treated with utmost indifference. The leading organ of the reactionaries, The Kurjer Warszawski, refers in this case also to America, and asks what America would say if the Jews should be exempted from public duties on the Sabbath. The minister of education had promised to carry out that section of the treaty which refers to Jewish educational institutions but all that he did was to reintroduce the old meat tax. American readers will probably not know what this means and therefore, a brief explanation shall follow. From olden times it was customary to impose a tax on the community as a body. In order to raise it, a fee was imposed on every pound of meat sold in kosher butcher shops and on every fowl killed by the shohet. These fees were farmed out to a Jewish contractor who usually levied it with utmost disregard of the condition of the poor population. On the other hand, the fund of twelve million florins (in those days $3,000,000), established by the late Baron de Hirsch for the endowment of Jewish schools, has practically disappeared. A great part was lost by the necessity to invest it in war bonds and the other part is appropriated by the Polish government without any regard for the intention of the philanthropist who created it as an endowment for Jewish schools. The schools are either closed on the allegation that now they are not needed, or the fund, instead of being applied to education and to the support of poor children, is used up by the government for school buildings and similar purposes. The government following Paderewski's advice makes a show of facilitating immigration by an order to all Polish consuls that passports issued to Jews should be promptly vised, but on the other hand everyone who asks for a passport is compelled to sign a statement that he renounces Polish citizenship, which, of course, means a great danger, especially in view of pending legislation in the United States, in case the immigrant should be refused admission. The hostility extends even to the relief actions. It is reported from Warsaw that the milk stations established by the Joint Distribution Committee and now turned over to a Polish committee refuse to furnish milk to Jewish children.



The Historic Jewish "Rathhaus" of Prague looted by Czech Mob, Nov. 17th, 1920

We can, under these conditions, place our own valuation on the statement of Count Pulaski, the new Polish minister to the United States, who upon his arrival in New York, December 22, 1920, declared in an interview with a Yiddish paper that there was no Jewish question in Poland, that the Jews are all Polish patriots and even in Wilna they are anxious to see the city in Polish hands. The pogroms are mere incidents as are the unfortunate concomitants of military operations. This throws a peculiar light on the action of the American Jewish Congress trying to arrange things amicably with the Polish minister and belling the cat by the request that the government officials be prevented from making accusations against the Jews and by demanding the necessary measures for the enforcement of the treaty provision. Poland will probably promise everything but has sufficient experience to know that diplomacy will be satisfied with some nice sounding phrases.

Hungary.

If conditions are critical in Poland they are absolutely hopeless in Hungary. The reactionary party, clerical and monarchial to the marrow of the bone, is still nominally in power but apparently all public activities have been paralyzed. The Premier Count Teleki resigned December 2 and as far as we know, his successor has not been appointed. He felt that the outrages against the Jews cannot continue if Hungary is to be put on a working basis again but his party abandoned him and a certain number left it because the government was not anti-Semitic enough. Shortly before, the trial of the communists was closed but our sources have not yet reported the sentence. It is impossible—and this also is significant—to obtain exact data on the number of Jews involved. The names do not indicate much because Hungarian Jews have to a considerable extent adopted Magyar names, but it is certain that some people prominently connected with the communist government and emphasizing their adherence to its doctrines even in the trial are not Jews or of Jewish descent. Among them is George Nyesztor, a Rumanian peasant. The present writer tried his best to obtain information on the participation of the Jews in the communist government directly from Hungary through friends who are indebted to him for certain acts of kindness. They acknowledge this gratefully but ignore the question on Jews in communism. They are evidently afraid that they will have to share the fate of Rabbi Immanuel Loew who is still interned in his home under the charge of high treason. Nor are they seeing ghosts as is proven from the fact that the government introduced a bill in the parliament which puts heavy penalty on any one who will publish "unfounded" charges against the government.

Some of these unfounded charges have meantime been sufficiently substantiated, as the case of the wine merchant, Adolph Landau, who was murdered after terrible tortures for not yielding to the extortions of the officials who arrested him on a false charge. It so happened that this matter was brought to public knowledge in parliament and therefore could not be smoothed over. Meantime Landau's son is still in jail under a similar trumped-up charge while the murderers of his father have escaped and are defying arrest, although the government knows exactly where they are but it does not dare to re-arrest them, fearing the military bands who, while wearing the uniform of the regular army, are nothing more than armed bandits. Nor are the outrages stopped, and Jews traveling in Hungary are still taking their lives in their hands. They are arrested and simply disappear. The so-called Horthy soldiers who like the janissaries of the former sultans, are the real rulers in the land, march through the cities with a song written for this occasion which, with due apology to Lord Tennyson and others, is rendered here in English. It is entitled Erger-Berger and reads approximately:

Broke I am now, but shan't long be a miser
Because Horthy soon will be our kaiser.
With impunity all Cohens I will kill
And their lucre my pockets shall fill.

The conditions in the university are as bad as they have been all the time. Officers in uniform drive Jewish students from the university, even those who are within the percent limit allowed to Jewish students. The amusing feature is that in this percent limit baptized Jews are included. Rabbi Hevesi of Budapest in a funeral sermon preached at the coffin of a medical student who had committed suicide because he saw no way how he could finish his course after three years of study, appealed to the young people that they should remain hopeful, as conditions are bound to improve. There is, however, no sign of such improvement yet. A prosecuting attorney of a Budapest court, a Magyar and Christian by birth, was discharged after thirty years of service because ten years previously he had written a letter to Max Szabolcsi, the editor of a Jewish paper, in which he expressed his indignation at the ritual murder charge. Rabbi Rubinstein of Szekszard, greeting a new governor, expressed his hope that the new official would contribute to an improvement of the relation between Jews and Christians but was treated to the reply that such improvement would come without any effort if the Jews would improve their own morals.

One can easily imagine how such a government which outlawed its own Jews treats Jews of foreign nationalities. Five hundred Galician Jews were sent to a camp of internment because they cannot obey the order to return to their home which is located in war zones and not accessible. It was noted before that the Polish government protested against it. Some of the difficulties of the Joint Distribution Committee may also be gauged from this fact. The Jewish charitable institutions received some subsidy from American relief money but the municipal administration at once reduced the subsidy which for years it had voted to these institutions while, of course, Christian institutions are not affected by such economy.

Austria and Her Heirs.

For the benefit of the Dearborn Independent which seems to have a careful reader of the Yiddish press the following fact brought to light in a Zionist convention held in Vienna shall be quoted. If representation in the parliament were apportioned according to the actual population the Jews of Austria ought to have from eleven to twelve representatives. Even under the present law which created such a gerrymander that the representation in parliament is unfair, the Jews, if united, might still have four representatives but as it is they have not even one. Mr. Ford's henchman might also take account of the following well established fact. Among the delegates which saw the governor of Lower Austria, the state in which Vienna is located, was the Austrian Jewish Union, a society established thirty years ago for the purpose of combating anti-Semitism. The representatives of this society told the governor that they do not wish to interfere with the order of expulsion given to the Polish refugees. The nature of these orders which have not yet fully been carried out may be judged from the following instance. Joseph Blaukopf of Buczacz in Galicia, who driven from his home by the war, settled in Vienna, occupies an "apartment" consisting of one room and a kitchen where he lives with his wife and four children. Owing to the lack of housing accommodations the city authorities gave him notice to move because he is now an alien. Buczacz in eastern Galicia is right in the center of the fighting zone between the Ukrainians and Poles and it is a physical impossibility to reach the place. The authorities of course, say they do not expel him, they merely had to requisition his rooms because they are needed for Austrian subjects. The economic situation of the local population may be judged from a fact which is a remarkable enactment of a Utopia presented some years ago by our Yiddish humorist, Zevin (Tashrak). The sextons of the Vienna synagogs have organized a union for the protection of their interests.

Conditions in Czechoslovakia are far more serious than those in Austria. The structure erected by the diplomats in Versailles and Paris whose inadequate information was so brilliantly described by Keynes and Dillon, is tottering rather ominously. In Bruenn, which up to the time of the war was a German city—of course only through an unjust municipal election law—the Czech majority confiscated the German theater and closed German schools declaring with cynical contempt for the minority clause in the Paris treaty, we are retaliating for what you have done to us in former years. Young men from German districts appear before the draft boards with German colors or with black flags, refuse to swear the military oath and turn away singing Die Wacht am Rhein. In some cases there was actual bloodshed. The excitement naturally has to turn against the Jews and [illegible] on Jewish business [illegible] pillage of the offices in [illegible] city hall of Prague. In Gaya which is a Czech town the houses of the Jews were defaced with various cartoons and gallows and when a Jewish committee went to the police office asking for protection they were given the "advice" not to provoke the population by talking German among themselves. The correspondent of the London Morning Post evidently is right when he says that the Bolshevist propaganda committee which is welcomed by a large section of the Czech population will do no harm because the Czechs hate the Jews as they hate the Germans. On the other hand, we would have to have better authority than the Northcliffe press before we shall accept the statement that ninety percent of the Soviet delegation are Jews.

Russia and Her Heirs.

With Soviet Russia itself we have as yet no direct communication either by mail or by cable. It is therefore impossible to judge of the probability of a recent report which informs us that there is a great deal of anti-Semitism in Soviet Russia and that it is constantly growing. We are somewhat better informed about the new republics cut out of the old Russian empire. The republic of Latvia seems to be strongly anti-Semitic. The leading Lettish paper of Riga repeats the claim of the anti-Semitic press all over Europe and America that Bolshevism is controlled by the Jews and that the Jews of Riga are in sympathy with it. The government will not allow former Jewish inhabitants who had been driven into the interior of Russia by the war to return, declaring them as aliens. A correspondent to the New York Forward declares that it is as unsafe for a Jew to show himself on the streets in Latvia as it is in Poland.

The republic of Lithuania on the other hand, seems to be in sympathy with the Jews, undoubtedly desirous to obtain their support against the claims of Poland. The Lithuanian mission in America published an appeal to the Jews in which it says that the Jews of Lithuania will have their national autonomy and have now already a minister for Jewish affairs and contrary to the Poles, claim that the Jews of Wilna are in favor of seeing their city annexed to Lithuania. The Jewish Correspondence Bureau telegraphs from Danzig that the bishop of Wilna appealed to the population to protect the Jews when the Polish army entered the city. The subject of Wilna is still under discussion and was discussed by the Jewish representative of Lithuania in London with the ambassador of Poland. At any rate, conditions are far from tending to a peaceful solution of territorial disputes in which the fate of the Jews is prominently involved. Finland which for years had the sympathy of the civilized world in her struggles against Russian tyranny does no more seem to be inclined to do justice to the Jews now than before. From one source we were told that the Finnish delegates would under no condition sign a treaty including minority rights, while another statement claims that the admission of the new republic to the League of Nations was only obtained after such promise.

Jewish Farmers' Life in America.

From Ukraine we have not heard anything for weeks. The New York Zeit representing the Socialist group of the Zionists claims that Emma Goldman visited Ukraine as commissioner for the museums of Soviet Russia and in a letter to a friend acknowledged her mistake that while in America she had never believed that there could be a Jewish question. Seeing the Ukraine she found out that she was mistaken. Emma has repeatedly been reported as a specimen of a prodigal daughter but it certainly must be true that conditions in Ukraine are as bad as ever and the committee of Jewish delegations laid the facts with the names of places in which pogroms occurred and the names of victims before the League of Nations. It remains to be seen whether this step which is certainly legitimate will result in an improvement of the terrible situation.

Rumania.

From what appears to be good sources the news comes that the Rumanian government is actually yielding to the demands recognized in all civilized countries as they have been laid down in the laws of Moses that fugitives from tyranny have the right to claim an asylum. The refugees from Ukraine who managed to cross the border into Bessarabia are now permitted to remain temporarily on Rumanian soil although they will be interned in places assigned by the government. The Jews of Bessarabia, however, are themselves in a state of panic on account of the reports that Russian Soviet troops are soon to occupy the province and that Rumanian troops will evacuate the territory. A somewhat sensational report has it that a Jewish politician whose name is not given was offered a place in the cabinet. A little more definite is the statement made by the anti-Semitic politician Jorga who was taunted in parliament for having had a work of his published by a Jewish publishing house. He replied coolly that this was done because there was no Christian firm which would undertake it. It would be too much to expect that just in this old home of anti-Semitism the movement should have been entirely suspended and therefore we may take it for granted that reports about the publication of anti-Semitic pamphlets and certain troubles at the university of Czernowitz are well founded. Yet it is equally certain that Rumania has abandoned her traditional policy of making the anti-Semitic movement the chief support for popularity seeking politicians.

Germany.

The situation in the German republic is clearly presented by the New York Nation which in its issue of December 1 said: "There is unquestionably a large number of persons who are hoping for better things from the restoration of the monarchy. It is unfortunate that these reactionary tendencies should find their support in the universities." The article closes with the statement that there are symptoms of a change for the better. Among these we may count the declaration of a hundred members of the intercollegiate fraternity known as Burschenschaft, protesting against anti-Semitism as an impediment to the recuperation of the country. Of course signs to the contrary are not missing and in itself it is rather depressing that such protests are necessary. The Burschenschaft was founded more than a century ago as a bulwark against reaction and, as Herman Sudermann in his "Sturmgeselle Socrates" long before the war showed, this organization has become a stronghold of reactionary tendencies. We must not be surprised to find that under the terrible economic crisis a government ground between the two hostile forces of reaction and communism has no sympathy for foreign Jews. As in Bismarck's time, hard working Polish Jews who in the beginning of the war were imported as laborers are now being expelled. It is somewhat reassuring that among those who objected to this measure were some labor unions. The internal conditions of the Jewish congregations are facing a grave crisis. The congregational constitution was always subject to the laws of the states. In this respect Prussia as the largest state, differs from the smaller states of South Germany. The latter usually extended some state aid to the Jewish communities which is now withdrawn. Even in Prussia where the state did not subsidize Jewish congregations nor give legal recognition to its officials the new law which allows everyone to resign from the church without much formality has created immense difficulties under which especially rabbis, teachers and other officials of the congregations are suffering. The old salaries are entirely insufficient and the congregation deprived of its right of compulsory assessment can do very little because the membership has not yet been accustomed to voluntary support of the institutions. The leaders who formerly clamored for state support see now their mistake.

Zionism.

As far as we are aware, the mandate on Palestine has not been published. The only thing which is certain is the announcement that the rivers Litani and Jarmuk are to be French but Palestine shall have the right to use the waters. This is again one of the typical diplomatic compromises known to us for over a century and especially favorites of the diplomatic school which "settled" the Oriental questions every few years. Mr. Balfour declared in the House of Commons, December 23, that the mandate conditions are so moderate that they will satisfy everybody, but at the same time the Manchester Guardian declared that the Zionists are greatly disappointed and this seems to be an absolute fact. Trivial controversies on the use of Hebrew in Palestine to which a member of the House of Lords objected and complaints that the new restoration fund is being supported from Germany and again the assurance by Mr. Lloyd George that Palestine will be a model of justice, do not help us over the situation which clearly is presented in another statement that the autonomy of Palestine will be an autonomy of institutions. In other words, the Jews of Palestine will have no less but no more than their co-religionists possess in all other civilized states. There was great enthusiasm displayed at the wedding of Mr. Edwin Samuel, the son of the Lord High Commissioner of which the details have not reached us at the time of this writing. Sir Herbert Samuel who is an observant Jew, surely possesses the confidence of the Jewish population and in this respect his choice is surely the best that could have been made. After the death of his mother he sent for the leading rabbis to have services held in his executive mansion and the honors of reading the prayers were distributed among both sections of the community, Rabbi Kuck and Rabbi Jacob Meir, each one reading part of the services and the High Commissioner reciting Kaddish.

A cable dispatch, dated London, January 2, gives us the number of Jewish immigrants who landed in Palestine as eight thousand. The schools under the control of the Zionist organization are attended by 11,843 children and employ 600 teachers. The enthusiasm of the new settlers is exemplified in a most remarkable instance. Twelve members of the Zionist organization of Siberia arrived in Palestine having crossed Asia on foot and having under great difficulties traversed the desert of Gobi. Such material will certainly make excellent pioneers in the upbuilding of a country. We also hear of new industrial corporations, among them brick and cement works, which will make Palestine independent of foreign countries in providing building material. On the other hand, the wine industry is facing a serious crisis. Due probably to lack of tonnage, to a certain extent to the prohibition in the United States and to the impossibility of communicating with Russian winegrowers in whose activity the greatest hopes were placed when the colonization movement began, this industry is in a very critical condition.

The relation between Jews and Arabs are reported in such contradictory manner as to make it futile to arrive at a definite conclusion. One source tells us that Arab papers in Palestine have renewed their campaign against Zionism. Definite names and places make it certain that occasional murders of guards in the Jewish colonies are still occurring while again the Jewish

(Continued on page 12.)

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, December, 14, 1920.

THE Anglo-Jewish Community is at last waking up to the need of doing something in defense of the Jewish position. We in this country have not had to suffer from any concentrated anti-Semitic attack on a large scale, but, as you know, one daily newspaper in London and one weekly have led an onslaught on Jews, and they have been followed by a number of gutter journals who thrive on that which is despicable. But even the papers of standing that have entered on this campaign in this country have exercised a certain amount of self-control, and have not dared to go as far as their brothers-in-arms on the continent. Nevertheless, accusations were leveled against Jews, needless to say without the least foundation, and all of them based on lies. For a time the Press Committee of the Board of Deputies made it its business to watch these attacks and accusations. For a long time it was deemed advisable to take no action, because no action was called for, but gradually the feeling grew, not that replies should be made to the anti-Semitic charges, but that our fellow countrymen should be informed as to the Jewish outlook on life, and should be furnished with facts about Jews which would show them in their true perspective. One is glad to be able to say that the idea first emanated from the London Lodge of the Order and a scheme was prepared, negotiations entered into with a publisher, and the whole got ready for launching as soon as the necessary funds were available. Meanwhile the League of British Jews, which everybody thought was dead, either decided on a similar scheme independently, or, what is perhaps as probable, heard of the scheme propounded by the lodge, and decided to make it its own. Accordingly the League proposed to the Board of Deputies that a committee of all communal institutions should be informed for the purpose of issuing a number of booklets which should give information to the English public about the Jews. It is felt that this course would be better than attempting to reply to the absurd and groundless charges of the anti-Semites. It was felt that the anti-Semites would go on their crooked ways whatever happened, and as truth was bound to triumph in the end the general sentiment was to concentrate on booklets of the nature indicated. The Board of Deputies, though a large number of its members dislike the League of British Jews, nevertheless decided, in the interests of communal unity, to participate in the scheme. The Anglo-Jewish Association was also invited and was sympathetic, but as its funds are low it is doubtful as yet whether it will come in. The London Lodge will likewise be invited to join this communal committee, but the London Lodge has not yet had an opportunity of considering the problem, and therefore making clear its attitude. On the one hand there is the consideration that in this matter the Anglo-Jewish community should be united, and it must be admitted that this is an argument of some force; on the other hand, there are many people who dislike the League of British Jews because of its inanity and uselessness, and who feel that by working with it for this purpose they may be giving a new lease of life to an institution which is moribund. It is impossible to foretell which view will prevail; but so much is certain, that it looks as though the Jewish community were waking up to its duty in the matter of defending Jews, and they realize, moreover, that even if their action may not be absolutely necessary in this country, it is bound to have far-reaching consequences on the continent.

As a sign of this Jewish consciousness it is of interest to observe that recently in a case in the Court of Criminal Appeal where the Lord Chief Justice was on the bench with a number of other judges, the pleadings in the case showed that one of the counsel asked a witness when it appeared that one of the parties had got into the hands of money-lenders: "A Jew, I suppose?" In the Higher Court the Lord Chief Justice asked the lawyer who had originally put the question to the witness what the point of it was. The barrister replied: "The answer shortly is that there are certain money-lenders who are Jews, and our information was that he was in the hands of Jewish money-lenders. I did not put it in any way intending to be insulting to Jews." To which the Lord Chief Justice remarked that in his opinion he felt convinced that a question of this sort would, be as it was intended to be, prejudicial to a man on trial, and he deprecated such a question being asked. It was only to be expected that the Lord Chief Justice, who is himself a Jew, should have protested against an obvious piece of trickery. Jewish money-lenders we all deplore, but there are also non-Jewish money-lenders, and it does not seem fair necessarily to associate Jews with money-lending.

Perhaps one way of dealing with this evil is to furnish the Press in this country with accounts of Jewish activities, and this would tend to show that the majority of Jews are not money-lenders, and the Jewish effort in this country is actuated by noble ideals. Accordingly the suggestion has been put forward that a Jewish Press Bureau should be opened in this country to furnish the newspaper with official accounts of Jews and their doings. Such a Bureau would be somewhat expensive, and at present there is very little money available here for anything that has even the appearance of a luxury. Our charitable institutions are all going round cap-in-hand, foremost among them the Jewish Board of Guardians, which is certainly in a bad way, having almost reached the end of its tether. Even if the Board were the only charity in need, it might be a little difficult just now to get money for it. But bearing in mind that the hospitals are asking, the Zionists are asking, the Ukrainian Jews are asking (and these are but a few appeals which are before the public), the chances of the Board of Guardians appear to be small. But something will have to be done, and that quickly. It remains to be seen whether the Anglo-Jewish community will rise to the occasion.

There is rejoicing in the Zionist camp because at length the mandate for Palestine has been completed and the boundaries of the country agreed upon. It must be confessed that neither is satisfactory. We should all have wished to see a better mandate and better frontiers. But in a world where men's nerves are set on edge, where reaction appears to be in the saddle everywhere, it is something to have achieved such a mandate and such boundaries. Both will serve for the present: Both have possibilities for the future. After all, both the mandate and the boundaries are paper arrangements; what Jews will make of Palestine in actuality is the thing that really matters. And here, too, it will be necessary to find money. The administration in Palestine will float a loan shortly, and Jews all over the world must determine to make that loan a striking success. But that will not be the end of the matter. There is the Keren Hayesod, that permanent fund for the development of Palestine, which has been fixed at twenty-five millions sterling. That will have to be got, too. Zionists here passionately desire to let the world know that much might be done already in the Holy Lands if only the means were available. Possibilities are there, labor is there, enterprise is not lacking and only money is required. It is a thousand pities that the present financial situation of the world is adverse to Palestinian endeavor. But two thousand years of waiting have made Jews patient, and it is hoped that, despite the slump, Palestine will get every penny that it requires. Meanwhile the situation there is improving from day to day; the High Commissioner is winning golden opinions from all parties and all sections. Life, while being expensive, is slowly developing. The popularity of the High Commissioner showed itself recently when early this month his eldest son, Edwin Samuel, was married to a Palestinian lady. Jews, Christians and Arabs united in expressing their good will to the young couple and their respective parents.

The appearance of a new book from Mr. Zangwill's pen is always regarded here as an event of some literary importance. "The Voice of Jerusalem." is the title of a collection of essays which Mr. Zangwill has written during the last twenty-five years, and we need only say that their quality does credit to their author. Mr. Zangwill occupies the position of critic of the Peace Settlement and of the present situation in Europe. His is a logical attitude. Like so many people he expected that the war would bring peace, justice and righteousness into the world. As a matter of fact he sees around him war, oppression and wrong; and characteristically he speaks out the thought within him. The powers-that-be in all countries appear to dislike the truth, at present, no matter who utters it; and in many quarters, therefore, Mr. Zangwill is not popular. But that does not lessen the quality of his thought, which is deep, nor the excellence of his style, which is distinguished. But there is no need to sing the praises of the new book, since you in America will have ample opportunities of reading it for yourselves.

An interesting will was published in London during last month. It was that of the late Sir Charles Henry, who declared that he excluded from the benefits of his testamentary dispositions relatives of his who should marry out of the pale of Judaism. This provision is perhaps an indication of the trend of events in this country, and it must be admitted that the tendency for mixed marriages between Jews and non-Jews which was beginning to be marked previous to 1914, received a strong impetus during the last six years.

The London Lodge is now busy thinking of suitable officers for next year, and in due course it will be possible to publish the names of those who have been chosen to carry on the traditions. The London Lodge is growing in years, and one of the things it feels most keenly is the lack of a home of its own. It is a peculiar fact that in this large London community of ours there is no communal building suitable for large meetings, social gatherings and kindred purposes. It is certainly one of the hopes of the brethren here some day to possess such a habitat of their own, which could be used as a general Jewish centre, as well as being the home of B'nai B'rith activities. Another thing we hope to do, though it appears to be somewhat difficult, is to establish lodges in other towns.

But of this more on a later occasion.

NEWS FROM GERMAN DISTRICT.

By Dr. Alfred Goldschmidt

IN THE spacious halls of the Berlin Lodge Building an exhibition of art works by Jewish artists was opened on November 7, 1920, consisting of works in the field of pictorial, graphic and plastic arts. In this exhibit mainly works of such artists are shown as are not yet sufficiently known and need urgently, therefore, this moral and material promotion. Exhibitions of this kind had been arranged already in the year 1914. The war, however, necessitated a long suspension of the sequel. And only now was it possible to resume the continuation of the work. The judges in charge were the following gentlemen: Hermann Struck, painter and etcher, Dr. Ernst Cohn-Wiener, art historian and Jacob Steinhardt, engraver.

Already the first day of the exhibition, the 7th of November, 1920, has lured forth a great mass of brothers and sisters. members of the five Berlin lodges, all of them eager and anxious to view the art works of the young artists. The President of the Deutsche Reichs Loge, who is also the Chairman of the Exhibition Committee, Brother Hugo Wittenberg, opened the exhibition with a short address in which he pointed out that he did not hesitate to state to those present that the judges were actuated primarily by the thought of benevolence. Tzedakah-Benevolence, however, among us Jews, means more than mere benevolence. In a higher sense it means justice. Being that there are so many really good works among the pieces permitted to be exhibited, the judges are in the fortunate situation that they can easily satisfy the demands of justice even from the standpoint of the requirements of art, as only objects of real art have been admitted. Not all of them, to be sure, of absolute perfection for an "art paradise", but many of them of high artistic value, or at least with the promise for future perfection. Moreover, the Judges endeavored to exemplify the principle of brotherly love, in a wider sense, in that they sought to stimulate among the brethren the tendency of acquiring objects of fine arts, especially if such may be bought at a reasonable price, and thus to develop the artistic taste among them in ornamenting their homes. The expensive, showy articles are not always proof of a refined taste. If, therefore, the net result of the exhibition will be satisfaction of the visitors and gratification of the exhibitors, and the buying of the works of the artists, that would then be the realization of harmony of all the interested parties in a most beautiful manner.

Dr. Cohn-Wiener gave in a charming manner a short survey of the several stages the artist has to go through, and pointed out that the visitors would have a chance to see an exemplification of each of such stages.

Thereupon began the tour of inspection through the exhibition hall. It may be stated as especially gratifying that the very first day resulted in a splendid success for the sale of the art works.

Among the various lectures delivered before the circle of the Berlin brethren, the one delivered by the author, Dr. Julius Bab, on "Judaism and Dramatic Art", may claim the interest of a wider circle. The lecturer proceeded from the premise that the first trace of the drama manifests itself as the expression of religious ecstasy. The real drama, however, as an art, dates only from the Shakespearean era. It is charged by our opponents that the Jews control theatrical affairs in a ruinous manner. In the course of history of our own time the numerous municipal and state theatres were never managed by Jews. To be sure, among the directors of private theatres two Jews have decidedly influenced the theatre: Brahms and Max Reinhardt, but certainly not to the injury of the German people and German art. Among the actors and actresses one may find not a small number of Jewish talent of foremost importance. But that the Jews monopolize an undue share of the dramatic art is out of the question. Certainly greed for gain must be excluded as a lure for the stage, as it is beyond doubt that there are better and quicker means to get rich than the stage. Bab is of the opinion that the dramatic art is the only art wherein women—and thus also Jewish women—have attained genius-like achievement. The reason for this scarcity of originality in other fields of art, Dr. Bab ascribes to the fact that women are lacking in the power of concentration. In acting, however, this lack of concentration is of no moment, because the author has already furnished a complete picture of the part to be produced.

Contrary to Dr. Bab, however, the writer of these lines ventures to explain the reason for the high achievement by women in the field of acting on the ground that the strong fascination there is in impersonation of parts, though necessitating appearance in public, is a stronger stimulant to overcome obstacles in the soul-life of women—as timidity before the public—than is found in other lines of art.

A long list of Jewish stars of the drama passed before the view of the audience during the recital of the lecturers: Rahel; Sarah Bernhardt; Bogumil Davison; Sonnenthal; Dessoir; Helen Gabillon; Irene Triesch; Fritzi Massary; Rosa Valetti; Ernst Deutsch; Beerboom Tree; Schildkraut.

The essence of the great actor is not exhausted by merely reproducing that which one has seen. This the variety impersonating artist can often perform to the highest perfection. In him there arises a Napoleon, a Frederick The Great, a Wallenstein, and such like in striking resemblance. But it is impossible to reproduce a King Lear simply by looking at so many types of madmen in an insane asylum. That is liable to produce madness in ourselves. The work of the actor is itself creative. He absorbs within himself the matter which the poet offers him, digests it, and then creates out of it that which he presents on the evening before his audience, a creation of his own. He not only imitates in presenting a life-like copy of that image which someone else, the poet, has formed, but weaves into the picture his own imagine of life.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1921
New Moon	January 10
New Moon	February 9
New Moon	March 11
Fast of Esther	March 23
Purim	March 24
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR BOLSHEVISM.

General Hoffmann's admissions as to how Bolshevism was launched upon Russia should be welcomed by all students of the truth. Bolshevism, still in the saddle in that unhappy country, is a thing rightly dreaded everywhere else. The radical elements here and there and everywhere have been toying with it and in all likelihood supporting it morally and materially. Radicalism is always among us. A spark will set it aflame. The supposed success in some corner of the world will nurture it. We Jews, the great and preponderating mass of Jews, are set against it. We execrate it as loyal supporters of the government under which we live, and as loyal Jews, faithful to the Torah. It is well therefore to have the admission that Bolshevism in Russia was launched by Germany as a war measure to break down the eastern front. The cynical general compares it to poison gas. We hear now of some of the Allied governments building factories for the development of poison gas which is recognized as the most formidable weapon in the future war. Alas that nations should be thinking of a future war, when the wounds inflicted by the last war have not had time to heal. Perhaps the army staffs are also thinking to imitate Germany in producing the mental poison wherewith to break down the morale of the future enemy. For militarism is, as it always has been, ruthless and cynical. Be that as it may, the origin of present-day demoralization in Russia stands revealed. Behold the spectacle of Lenin transported through Germany in a sealed train! The seal notwithstanding, the poison must have penetrated through chinks into the very country which sought to benefit through that measure. German militarism collapsed through the very agency by which Russia was laid low. There is in existence a counter-Bolshevistic propaganda which stoops low to make of the hapless Jew the scapegoat. The Jew will readily lend his aid to fighting Bolshevism. But he will not tolerate the dastardly attempt to unload upon his head the odium of the Bolshevist movement. We have been able to trace the anti-Semitic propaganda in this country right to its source. We know the German hand in this warfare. We see it enlisting the services of millions who little suspect what they are being used for. And perhaps we are too charitable. In other words, they well know that they are being used, and they have their own reasons for being used. Then we know the agents of former Czardom by name and fame who are here stirring up mischief and poisoning the minds of the American public against the Jew. We know by name misguided Americans who, unable to understand the tactics of the master plotters, are abetting the nefarious slanders and assist in the spreading of malicious documents of acknowledged forgery. We know of coteries of American men and women clandestinely meeting and plotting and using whatever agency will lend itself to their machinations in spreading broadcast the lie and sowing hatred of the Jew. We recommend to all of them a study of the German general's admissions. They may serve to open their eyes. And if they remain blinded by bigotry and prejudice, at least the fair-minded American public will not be inveigled into accepting thoughtlessly unfounded concoctions. The true origin of Bolshevism stands revealed. We know who is really responsible for that curse. And we say to the American public just this. You, and we as part of you, have fought successfully German military aggression. Fight with all your might and main this remnant of German militarism and of German propaganda in this country. We stand for America and for American issues and for American ideals. Let not this foreign un-American issue be cast upon our shores. And we know that in Germany itself, among the people, many think as we do. There are right-minded men there who refuse to sanction the tactics of those who brought upon them all the misery and all the degradation. They know the truth and hate the lie. Shall not we in America banish the falsehood? And banish we will surely the ill-founded campaign against the Jew. For the true responsibility for Bolshevism is known and admitted. It was the sealed train carrying Lenin by order of the German military staff.

A CHRISTIAN MINISTER'S THREAT.

The Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts is Superintendent and Treasurer of the International Reform Bureau. The name of the organization is noncommittal enough. Its platform and program, as far as stated in the official letter-heads issuing from the Washington office, is innocent enough. But the real purport of both organization and platform is known beyond misconception. For we have the past activities of the organization and its doughty Superintendent. We remember the part they played and still play in making Bible reading compulsory in the public schools. On the merits of this point we shall refrain from expressing an opinion just now. We have, we believe, expressed it before, and in a manner which Dr. Crafts ought to appreciate. But we know that such like measures are put forth as entering wedges, and that the farsighted aim in by degrees to break down the separation between Church and State and to amend the Constitution so as to recognize Christianity as part of our government foundation. Just now Dr. Crafts is fostering a bill to enforce Sunday rest in the national capital. If its provisions are such as Dr. Crafts avers "that persons who recognize as a day of rest any other day in the week than Sunday shall not be held to have violated the provisions of the first section, making unlawful to pursue any trade or secular business in the District of Columbia on Sunday, if they observe as a day of rest one day in each seven," we Jews ought to recognize this spirit of fair play. Now there exists a Jewish Sabbath Alliance with the avowed aim of fostering observance of the Jewish Sabbath by the Jews and of procuring legislation enabling Jews who keep their Sabbath to do work on Sunday. Apparently the Reform Bureau and this Jewish organization seem to have to come to terms. But Dr. Crafts, according to newspaper reports of his public utterances, is charging Mr. William Rosenberg, the Secretary of the Jewish Sabbath Alliance, of being in league with certain interests fighting the Washington bill. Mr. Rosenberg point-blank refutes the charge. We have thus the word of one man against that of another. If there is evidence one way or another, let it be produced. It is a matter between the two organizations and between the two officials. Mr. Crafts, however, has been reported to have formulated a threat. It is put in some such language as this. Christian Americans who have hitherto been freest from race prejudice, and even some who were never very strict Sunday observers, will come to resent this anti-American program. The Sabbath Alliance is presumed to have thrown out a challenge, and Dr. Crafts, speaking for other true Americans, accepts it. It is here that we may put in a word. In the first place, to say the least, it is undignified and un-Christian for a Christian minister to indulge in threats. We believe Mr. Crafts when he avers that he has been free from prejudice. We hope that that is the case for his own sake and for the honor of the Christian ministry and the Christian faith. If he has done so in the past, he has apparently had no reasons for acting otherwise. Shall a misunderstanding with a Jewish organization, whose purpose is accepted by him in the very framing of the new bill, overthrow all his previous record for fairness? In the second place, Dr. Crafts ought to know that Sabbath observance with the Jew is not a matter of race, but of religion. Why threaten with race prejudice where a religious principle is involved? Once more, be it understood that we take no sides in the controversy between him and Mr. Rosenberg. That is for both of them to settle. Some one has apparently tampered with the truth. Perhaps it is a mere misunderstanding. But we hope Dr. Crafts will come to his senses and refrain from hinting that he is ready to throw his influence on the side of our enemies, the persecuters of our "race". He is surely wise to realize that he is weakening his case, and very likely alienating Jewish support for such measures as Jews along with Christians are interested in for the good of our country by this resort to uncalled for threats. Dr. Crafts, please take back your threat! It is un-Christian and un-American. Do not injure your own cause, not so much with us whom probably you have discounted, but with your own fellow Christians, who will not tolerate a Christian measure to be tainted by what you call race prejudice.

SUPPORT THE ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE.

The non-Jewish protest against anti-Semitic propaganda, which is published on another page of this issue, does honor to the men and women who signed it. It gives us new faith in democracy and in the essential fairness of the leaders of American citizenry. It is with a feeling of renewed courage and confidence that the Anti-Defamation League can continue in its efforts to wipe out entirely the anti-Semitic propaganda and rebuild with even stronger foundations the good will between Jew and non-Jew, which it was Ford's aim to shatter.

For the past eight months the league has been engaged in an effort to mobilize the non-Jewish minds of the country. Although counseled to sit still and breath cautiously, lest it cause a whirlwind, the league had sufficient faith in the leaders of public opinion to realize that they would come forth and take up the cudgels in defense of truth and justice, if only they were sufficiently apprised of the facts. That has been the special function of the league since last May. It started out to gather all the facts there were, to dig them up out of the hidden places and put them before those who have the molding of public opinion. That task is not yet completed. The favorable public opinion which is being aroused by the protest must be galvanized into some form of action. The league must go on until organized anti-Semitism is completely stamped out. Ex-President William Howard Taft's big-hearted readiness to respond to the call of the league, to render a judicial opinion upon the merits of the case against us, was eagerly availed of, and his exposition of the subject, which is also reprinted in this issue, is now being sent broadcast throughout the country. In addition, the league will shortly distribute thousands of copies of a book by John Spargo, which will dispel many of the mental reservations still retained by some of our best non-Jewish friends. Our faith in fair play as an essentially American virtue has thus been justified. It is the duty of all of us to see that no stone is left unturned to bring to a complete victory the league's struggle against anti-Semitic agitators. Every member of the Order who has not already contributed to the support of the Anti-Defamation League should do so at once, and those who have contributed should feel it their duty to make an additional contribution in order that the good work already done may be continued. Only thus can we completely counteract the efforts of those who continue to menace us.

AMERICAN LEADERS APPEAL FOR TOLERATION.

Leaders of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish religions united in an appeal to the people of America to help safeguard religious liberty throughout the world from the menace of bigotry, prejudice and fanaticism. Their appeal, issued through the American Committee on the Rights of Religious Minorities, declared that one of the disappointing results of the war was an era of religious persecution which had been sweeping many lands. The appeal is especially directed toward overcoming propaganda that has been circulated in the United States and elsewhere, accusing the Jews of a conspiracy to foster communism.

Those who signed the appeal are: William J. Bryan, Emeritus Chas. W. Eliot, James Cardinal Gibbons, Herbert C. Hoover, Chas. E. Hughes, Robert Lansing, Alton B. Parker, and William Howard Taft.

We had hoped that the struggle for religious liberty had been won among civilized nations; that the world recognized that the right to worship God according to the dictates of one's conscience is among the most precious rights of man; that the adherents of any and every faith should have unchallenged freedom to endeavor to win converts by persuasion; that everyone has a right voluntarily to change his faith; and that any constraint by either Church or State upon those who prefer their own faith is repugnant to every sane and enlightened mind. The Peace Conference at Paris expressly sought to guard the rights of religious minorities and articles for their protection were incorporated in the treaties.

Among the disappointing conditions that have followed the war, however, is the recrudescence of persecution in a disturbing number of countries. The changes of frontiers have sometimes united separated members of the same nationality or creed into a new State. In other cases these changes of frontiers have broken old ties. Minority groups have arisen which are separated by creed, language, or by nationality from the majority of the people in the State to which they now belong. The protective clauses of recent treaties are, in many instances, being disregarded and minority groups are being subjected to tyranny and oppression ranging all the way from petty annoyances to the most atrocious cruelties. In some cases those whose rights are being restricted are Protestants, in other cases Roman Catholics, and in still others Jews; although in certain lands all three are the objects of persecution.

We are not unmindful that political, economic and racial factors are frequently involved. But we must remember that the alleged interests of the State have ever been the excuse of officials for persecuting a religious minority. As for the excuse that persecution is for economic rather than religious or racial reasons, why is it then that it includes women and children as well as multitudes of men who are not engaged in business? And why does it not include men of other faiths who are notorious for the kind of financial dealings that are objected to? If persecution is primarily racial rather than religious it is none the less reprehensible. Race prejudice and religious bigotry are twins.

Trustees of the public library at Fitchburg, Mass., have removed the Dearborn Independent from its files. The trustees of the public libraries of other cities of Massachusetts are considering similar action.

’resident Wilson Heads Protest Against Anti-Semitism

The undersigned, citizens of Gentile rth and Christian faith, view with pro- und regret and disapproval the appear- ıce in this country of what is apparently ı organized campaign of anti-Semitism, nducted in close conformity to, and operation with, similar campaigns in urope. We regret exceedingly the pub- ation of a number of books, pamphlets ıd newspaper articles designed to foster strust and suspicion of our fellow- tizens of Jewish ancestry and faith— strust and suspicion of their loyalty and ıeir patriotism.

These publications, to which wide cir- ılation is being given, are thus introduc- g into our national political life a new ıd dangerous spirit, one that is wholly variance with our traditions and ideals ıd subversive of our system of govern- ent. American citizenship and Ameri- ın democracy are thus challenged and enaced. We protest against this organ- ed campaign of prejudice and hatred, ot only because of its manifest injustice those against whom it is directed, but so and especially, because we are con- nced that it is wholly incompatible with yal and intelligent American citizenship. he logical outcome of the success of such campaign must necessarily be the divi- on of our citizens along racial and religious ıes, and, ultimately, the introduction of ligious tests and qualifications to de- rmine citizenship.

The loyalty and patriotism of our fellow tizens of the Jewish faith is equal to that any part of our people, and requires no fense at our hands. From the founda- on of this Republic down to the recent orld War, men and women of Jewish ıcestry and faith have taken an honor- ble part in building up this great nation ıd maintaining its prestige and honor nong the nations of the world. There is ot the slightest justification, therefore, r a campaign of anti-Semitism in this u try.

Anti-Semitism is almost invariably asso- ated with lawlessness and with brutality ıd injustice. It is also invariably found osely intertwined with other sinister rces, particularly those which are cor- pt, reactionary and oppressive.

We believe it should not be left to men ıd women of Jewish faith to fight this il, but that it is in a very special sense e duty of citizens who are not Jews by ıcestry or faith. We, therefore, make rnest protest against this vicious propa- ında, and call upon our fellow citizens Gentile birth and Christian faith to ıite their efforts to ours to the end that may be crushed. In particular, we ıll upon all those who are moulders of ıblic opinion—the clergy and ministers all Christian churches, publicists, achers, editors and statesmen—to strike this un-American and un-Christian gitation.

igned.)

WOODROW WILSON,
WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT,
WILLIAM CARD. O’CONNELL.

Lyman Abbott, Editor “The Outlook.”
Jane Addams, Social Worker.
John G. Agar, Lawyer.
Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War.
Ray Stannard Baker, Author.
Charles A. Beard, Author and Educator.
James M. Beck, Lawyer.
Bernard I. Bell, President St. Stephens’ ollege.
Arthur E. Bestor, President Chautau- ua Institution.
Albert J. Beveridge, Former U. S. Sena- or.
W. E. B. DuBois, Editor “The Crisis.”
Mabel T. Boardman, Commissioner). of C.
Evangeline Booth, Commander Salva- ion Army.
Benjamin Brewster, Bishop of Maine.
Chauncey B. Brewster, Bishop of Con- ecticut.
Jeffrey R. Brackett, Social Worker.
Horace J. Bridges, Ethical Teacher.
William Jennings Bryan, Ex-U. S. ecretary of State.
Henry Bruere, Financial Expert.
Nicholas Murray Butler, President Col- mbia University.
Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State.
George W. Coleman, President National ouncil of Forums.
Alice B. Coleman (Mrs. George W.), lub Worker.
Paul D. Cravath, Lawyer.
George Creel, Former Chairman U. S. Committee on Public Information.
Samuel McChord Crothers, Clergyman.
R. Fulton Cutting, Financier.
Olive Tilford Dargan, Poet.
Clarence Darrow, Lawyer.
James R. Day, University Chancellor.
Henry S. Dennison, Manufacturer.
James Duncan, First Vico-President, A. F. of L.
Robert Erskine Ely, Director Civic Forum.
Charles P. Fagnani, Theologian.
W. H. P. Faunce, President Brown University.
Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Novelist.
Irving Fisher, Economist.
John Ford, Jurist.
Raymond B. Fosdick, Lawyer.
Robert Frost, Poet.
James R. Garfield, Lawyer.
H. A. Garfield, President Williams College.
Lindley M. Garrison, Former U. S. Secretary of War.
John Palmer Gavit, Editor “New York Evening Post.”
Herbert Adams Gibbons, Historian.
Charles Dana Gibson, Artist.
Franklin H. Giddings, University Professor.
Martin H. Glynn, Ex-Governor, New York.
George Gray, Jurist.
Edward Everett Hale, University Professor.
James Hartness, Governor of Vermont.
Patrick J. Hayes, Archbishop of New York
John Grier Hibben, President Princeton University.
John Haynes Holmes, Clergyman.
Jesse H. Holmes, President National Federation of Religious Liberals.
Hamilton Holt, Editor “The Independent.”
Ernest Martin Hopkins, President Dartmouth College.
Frederic C. Howe, Publicist.
Henry C. Ide, Diplomatist.
Inez Haynes Irwin, Author.
Will Irwin, Author.
George R. James, Capitalist.
David Starr Jordan, Scientist.
William W. Keen, Professor of Surgery.
Paul U. Kellogg, Editor “The Survey.”
William Sergeant Kendall, Artist.
George Kennan, Journalist.
Henry Churchill King, President Oberlin College.
Darwin P. Kingsley, President New York Life Insurance Co.
W. P. Ladd, Dean Berkley Divinity School.
Ira Landrith, Prohibition Advocate.
Franklin K. Lane, Former U. S. Secretary of Interior.
Robert Lansing, Former U. S. Secretary of State.
Julia C. Lathrop, Chief Children’s Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor.
Ben B. Lindsey, Juvenile Court Judge.
Charles H. Levermore, Peace Advocate.
Frederick Lynch, Clergyman.
Edwin Markham, Poet.
Mrs. Edwin Markham, Writer.
Daniel Gregory Mason, Musical Composer.
Joseph Ernest McAfee, Religious Publicist.
J. F. McElwain, Manufacturer.
Raymond McFarland, Principal Vermont Academy.
Alexander R. Merriam, Theologian.
E. T. Meredith, Secretary U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.
James F. Minturn, Judge.
John Moody, Financial Expert.
William Fellowes Morgan, Financier.
Charles Clayton Morrison, Editor the “Christian Century.”
Phillip Stafford Moxom, Clergyman.
Joseph Fort Newton, Clergyman.
D. J. O’Connell, Bishop of Richmond.
Mary Boyle O’Reilly, Publicist.
George Wharton Pepper, Lawyer.
Louis F. Post, Asst.-Secretary of Labor U. S.
Theodore Roosevelt, Member of New York Legislature.
Charles Edward Russell, Publicist.
Jacob Gould Schurman, Educator.
Vida D. Scudder, University Professor.
Samuel Seabury, Jurist.
Thomas J. Shahan, Rector of the Catholic University of America.
Charles M. Sheldon, Editor “The Christian Herald.”
Edwin E. Slosson, Associate Editor “The Independent.”
Preston Slosson, Journalist.
John Spargo, Author.
Robert E. Speer, President Federal Council of Churches.
Charles Stelzle, Religious Publicist.
Paul Moore Strayer, Clergyman.
Marion Talbot, University Dean.
Ida M. Tarbell, Author.
Harry F. Ward, Theological Professor.
Everett P. Wheeler, Lawyer.
Gaylord S. White, Social Worker.
George W. Wickersham, Ex-Attorney General of U. S.
Charles David Williams, Bishop of Michigan.
Charles Zueblin, Writer and Lecturer

GERMANS TERM ANTI-SEMITISM A “FORM OF ANTI-CHRISTIANITY.”

The Central Association of German Citizens of the Jewish Faith recently organized in Berlin a monster demonstration addressed by Christian clergymen. So great was the attendance that it was necessary to arrange an overflow meeting, which the same speakers likewise addressed.

Dr Bittlinger, a Protestant pastor, opened the proceedings by asserting that Jews had contributed greatly to the welfare of their country There was no difficulty, in his opinion, in proving that Christianity and anti-Semitism were exclusive terms. “No German Christian can hate a German Jew, for we all possess a common spiritual gift of exceeding great value, namely, the Old Testament, which Christian Germany owes to the Jewish people”. This, Dr. Bittlinger said, was a stronger link than any other. Moroover, every candid observer must admit that Jews are characterized by strong family sense, by hard work, sobriety and charity. Anti-Semites are fond of talking of the disintegrating spirit of the Jew. “In my opinion”, Dr. Bittlinger continues, “this statement shows poverty of thought, for it must be remembered that the most successful and deepest critics of the Christian point of view were by no means Jews; I have in my mind Haeckel, Darwin, Nietzsche and Strauss”.

The second speaker was Dr. Dietrich, likewise a Protestant clergyman. He condemned anti-Semitism from the point of view of logic, morality and religion. From Spinzo to Einstein, the Jews had achieved great things. But the greatest of all was and must remain, despite all modern criticism, the Old Testament, which is the foundation of all true goodness. Judaism discovered the individual soul, and so prepared the way for a universalistic conception of morality.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

At the closing session of the quadrennial convention of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America held in Boston on December 6, the following resolution on the question of Anti-Semitism was adopted:

“Whereas, For some time past there have been in circulation in this country publications tending to create race prejudice and arouse animosity against our Jewish fellow citizens and containing charges so preposterous as to be unworthy of credence, be it resolved that the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, impressed by the need at this period of our national existence for unity and brotherhood, deplores all such cruel and unwarranted attacks upon our Jewish brethren and in a spirit of good will extends to them an expression of confidence in their patriotism and their good citizenship and earnestly admonishes our people to express disapproval of all actions which are conducive to intolerance or tend to the destruction of our national unity through arousing racial division in our body politic.”

MOSIR COMPLETELY RUINED. MORE THAN A THOUSAND JEWISH WOMEN ABUSED.

Danzig, (J. C. B. Service)—According to the last issue of the “Neue Leben” of Bialystock, Mosir has been completely ruined and during the course of pogroms more than a thousand women were abused. Among the large number of murdered the report brings the names of Madam Navizka and her daughter.

MESSAGE TO YOUNG MEN JEWISH ANCESTRY BY JOHN SPARGE.

The best message that I can send to young men of Jewish ancestry and faith at this time is one which I could send with equal assurance and fitness to young men of Gentile birth and Christian faith. It is to hold fast that which is good and shun that which is evil. In that sentence the Jew and the Christian can find a common ethical bond.

Tho young American Jew will, if he is wise, hold fast to the essentials of this historic faith of his fathers, and the young American Christian, if he is wise, will hold fast to the essentials of the historic faith of his fathers. Forms and modes of expression may change and fade and die, but the living faith endures. Destructive criticism is easy, but I have never yet known a man, either Jew or Christian, who was not injured and made poorer by the destruction of his faith.

I take it for granted that Young Israel Junior aims at making its members American Jews, and not Jewish Americans. If I were a Jew I should be proud of the fact—proud of the great history of my people, and of its splendid contributions to civilization. But I should be careful to bear in mind that my highest service as a Jew, and the best demonstration of my love for my people, must of necessity be a profound and undivided loyalty to America. There is not—there cannot be—any conflict between loyalty to the historic faith of the Jewish people and loyalty to this Republic. Let the young American Jew keep this truth ever before him: To be a good American is the only way to be a good Jew in America.

Together Christians and Jews laid the foundations of this nation. They shared a common ideal and a common sacrifice. From Valley Forge to Chateau Thierry Christians and Jews have joined their efforts in every crisis in our history. Our conditions are still far from ideal. There are many grave problems to be solved, many wrong things to be made right. We shall right the wrongs and attain the ideal only if, true to the spirit of America, we unite in a common citizenship, Jews and Christians together—not Jewish Americans and Christian Americans, but American Jews and American Christians—aiming at the righteousness by which the nation shall be exalted.

REVIEW OF VOLUME XXX YEARBOOK, CENTRAL CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN RABBIS.

The thirtieth volume of the Yearbook of the Central Conference of American Rabbis has just appeared and contains much of importance. It is the report of the convention held at Rochester, N. Y., and the reports of officers and committees showed the year to have been one of exceptional progress in American Judaism.

Perhaps the most important report, surely, that of most general interest, was a Survey of the Condition of Religion among the Jews of America. The five papers included in this report have been reprinted and can be obtained from the editor by any one interested in this most vital subject.

The Commission on Social Justice presented a statement of the attitude of the Jew on the great social questions which are today agitating all classes of men, and laid down a formula of social justice which Judaism presents to solve much of the misunderstanding which is sending the various classes in America into groups.

One of the outstanding features of the convention was a paper by a layman, Prof. I. Leo Sharfman, of the University of Michigan, on the subject, Religion and the Synagog, which, together with its companion paper, The Problem of the Unsynagoged, by Rabbi Samuel Koch, discussed most fully the great question of the unsynagoged, its causes and its possible remedies.

A paper on The Jew in Economic Life with Special Reference to Poland, by Rabbi Gotthard Deutsch, reviewed the various charges made against the Jew by the Anti-Semites.

The Aim of Religious Education in the Sunday-school, by Rabbi Solomon Foster, gives an excellent survey of the purposes of modern religious education as planned by the reform synagog in America.

All the papers have been reprinted and copies can be secured from the editor of the volume, Rabbi Isaac E. Marcuson, Macon, Ga.

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

IV.

WHILE the founder of Christianity is reported to have been lax in the matter of Sabbath observance, his attitude on divorce is extreme in its strictness. There is, it is true, a lack of unanimity in the reports as to how far his condemnation of divorce went. On the one hand it is made absolute; divorce is ruled out under all circumstances. Husband and wife are mated for life. Jesus reverts to the account of the creation of woman. Adam pronounces the woman, fashioned out of one of his ribs, bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh. Therefore—continues Scripture, or, as the rabbis say, the Holy Spirit—shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh. It is accordingly argued that God has made the twain one. Now divorce is not exactly enjoined in the Torah. It is rather taken for granted. Only that the Torah provides that, once divorced, a woman after a divorce from her second husband or after his death may not remarry her first husband. Such an act constitutes a defilement of the land. But in this casual, by-the-way mention of divorce, the Torah alludes to the cause which leads to legal separation in language none too clear. "If she find no favor in his eyes, because he hath found some unseemingly thing in her." The language of Scripture is not really adequate for purpose of legal statements. It lacks precision. It is often ambiguous. It is simply too rhetorical, and even poetic. Scripture avoids directness when it deals with unseemingly things. It would seem as if the law refers to wifely misconduct, adultery, as the cause of the husband's displeasure. In the Gospel of Matthew, the qualifying clause is added: "save for the canse of fornication." Scholars are inclined to the opinion that the qualification does not go back to Jesus. Accordingly, he stood out for the absolute prohibition of divorce under all circumstances. But as the Church found this attitude unworkable, it added the exception to the rule. That, of course, would show [illegible] that the high principle enunciated by the founder had to be modified as soon as an organized community arose. In other words, it is one thing to moralize on the subject; it is quite another to look conditions squarely into the face.

The Church today finds itself in the selfsame dilemma. Roman Catholicism, which regards marriage as a sacrament, places itself on the side of the absolute prohibition of divorce; a marriage once consummated becomes indissoluble. It interprets the qualification in Matthew to mean that in case of infidelity the wife may be put away, be separated from bed and board; but neither party is free to contract a new marriage. There are other causes, besides infidelity, which lead to the limited separation just described. Nor can we enter here upon the various modes of nullifying a marriage or the Pope's authority to dissolve a marriage not yet consummated. All this, however, no less than the laxity of certain synod decisions, shows how the absolute stand needs to be mitigated. The Protestant Reformers broke with the sacramental notion of marriage. They held that absolute divorce should be granted for adultery and for malicious desertion, and that the innocent party might then remarry. In all countries, where the state has assumed control of marriage, divorce is granted by the courts. We know the conditions in our country, and the lamentable lack of uniformity between the various states. But clergymen, who as agents of the state, perform marriage ceremonies, are also held to their own church laws. And when it comes to officiating at the marriage of divorced persons, the stricter churchmen among the Protestants manifest scruples. The subject has been brought up again and again at church gatherings of the Episcopal branch. Those who are laxer maintain that it is impossible to differentiate between the guilty and the unguilty person. Again, an unmitigated stand like that of the Catholics, it is maintained, leads to [illegible] and clandestine immorality. I have spoken thus far of the attitude of the churches. We must also mention [illegible] which goes farthest [illegible] of facilities for divorce. We have rigidity in some states and utmost laxity in others. Meanwhile, while the churches more or less would stress the necessity of adhering to the principle of the founder, the prevalence of divorce and of remarriage of divorced persons is assuming alarming proportions both in high and low society; for where a clergyman will hesitate, a magistrate is always ready to tie the knot and a court somewhere, and be it in Nevada, to untie it.

The question is acute today. It was acute in the days when the founder of Christianity lived. He was sounded on the question because it was acute and because the teachers were divided in their opinions. There were certain Jewish sects which were strict on the subject of divorce. As a matter of fact, on all questions of law the sectarians were stricter. Even the Sabbath laws were more rigid among the sectarians, so among the Karaites who persist to our own days. But even in the main body opinions were divided. The stricter school of Shammai restricted divorce to one cause, infidelity. Hillel had a milder view. And Hillel's view became law. Legally, therefore, there are many causes for divorce. But as the thing worked out in practice, it was just the reverse of what is happening in modern society. The law is one thing, and the moral pressure of the community and its leaders quite another. The divorce act in Jewish law is so cumbersome that before the final step is taken the door is left open for reconciliation. Where the law grants what is after all a matter of justice, the corrective is provided in the moral suasion of the religious teacher. Divorce is hateful, said the prophet. The altar shed tears over divorces, say the rabbis. Hence, where Jewish life moves in the old traditional channels, divorces are few and far between. It is only in the modern conditions of life that marriage among Jews has become unstable as among our neighbors.

This is already sufficient to indicate how that part of the ancient misunderstanding which centers in the question of divorce has lost its point. For life both in Jewish and non-Jewish circles went its own way. Human nature is human nature. It is well to reckon with it. The hard-heartedness of which the moralist speaks was not confined to the generation or people of Moses. In the end we must recognize that the law must run its own course, but that it needs at all times the corrective of religion and morality. Perhaps that the religious teacher steps in at much earlier stage than when he is confronted with the case on hand. Let him at all times bring home to his fold the sanctity of marriage. Let him cause the people to realize that marriage is ordained for the rearing of children and that the family is the foundation of human society. Marriages are contracted quite often from unworthy motives. Above all, it must be inculcated that two human beings joined for a life purpose must learn to forgive, to bear with one another. None is perfect on earth Duty is higher than pleasure. We are face to face today with a breakdown of all the sterner virtues. Life is to be one round of pleasure, eating and drinking and dancing. Children are nurtured to that kind of life. Play is all right, but play must not be the thing uppermost. The conscientious religious teacher must not adopt the secular attitude of condoning offenses or of blinking at immoralities. People high in the honors of the congregation are often the worst sinners. Even among us, alas, a man may be known to be a profligate. He observes the proprieties, and just as often he flaunts his vices publicly. Yet, when he enters the house of God, once in the year, he is received with honors, for does he not bestow a goodly sum as an offering? Religion is forgiving. God pardons the penitent sinner. But religion dishonors itself by honoring the impenitent. There is too little preaching to the individual conscience. Where is the religious teacher today who may boast like the old-time rabbi that a congregant approached him after the sermon and informed him that he was about to commit a deadly sin but now that he listened to the sermon he would refrain? Right now the world of men and women is morally foundering. A clergyman, who admonished after his wont a couple whom he was uniting in wedlock to eternal fidelity, was reproached by one of the women-guests as being "mid-Victorian!" We may laugh at this exhibition of downright stupidity, were it not a symptom of the mind of the people just now upon the things most sacred. Now is the time not to stand upon the law. Now is the time for the moralist to reiterate the verities of life in no ambiguous terms. No pact can be made with a perverted view. The present disturbance will pass away. We shall regain our equilibrium. The physical and moral seminudes will once more assume the habiliments of decency and the right outlook upon things. But this will come about so much more readily if the religious leader will stand firm as a rock. There are times where he must take an attitude which is something of the heroic. As a corrective it is the only kind of attitude to take. Where it is made into an iron-clad law, as it happened in the communion which calls itself Christian in the question just considered, it will be broken by life and thus made nugatory. Life, the normal life, and the ideal must always work side by side. Then only will follow results which are salubrious. Then all misunderstandings will vanish.

[illegible]

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, spoke on the work of the B'nai B'rith before the meeting of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, held on Monday, January 3, 1921.

Judge Rosenfeld spoke on "Ideals of Justice" briefing the Order's varied activities in this and other countries.

The growing problem of the Jewish orphan in the United States was dwelt on at length by the speaker, with special reference to the homes maintained by the Order. The need of expansion in this field of charitable endeavor and the support of every B'nai B'rith member toward that end were urged by the judge.

A lucid discussion of the Jewish immigration question concluded the stimulating address of the visiting speaker which included in its scope every well-known activity of the organization. Morris Garvett introduced Judge Rosenfeld.

The officers for the ensuing term were installed. A tribute was paid to Mr. Adolph Freund, the daddy of the lodge, who is leaving for Florida to spend the winter.

Dr. Rudolph Kornblith, representative of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, addressed the lodge on behalf of that organization.

A special meeting of the lodge was held on January 10 at which matters of special importance were discussed.

The B'nai B'rith Club held its annual election of officers on Sunday, January 2.

OMAHA, NEBR.

B'nai B'rith Day was fittingly observed in Omaha on December 12th, 1920, under the auspices of Omaha Lodge, No. 354, with one of the largest gatherings of Jewish people ever held in the history of the city. The Fontenelle Hotel ballroom was the scene of activity.

Early in the evening at the regular meeting of the lodge, 41 candidates were initiated by the degree team of the lodge in the presence of several hundred members. Following the initiation, an open meeting was held for the members and their friends and more than 1,000 were in attendance, every seat in the large ballroom being occupied.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner". Rabbi Morris Taxon then kindled the lights of Chanukah.

Mr. Henry Monsky, First Vice-President of District Grand Lodge No. 6, and a member of the lodge, made a short talk on the purposes and aims of the Order and called attention to the different institutions maintained by the B'nai B'rith.

Rabbi Samuel S. Cohon, of Chicago, Director of Intellectual Advancement of District No. 6, was the special guest of honor. He devoted his address to the Anti-Semitic campaign in this country and announced the persons who are writing and printing libelous, untrue and infamous articles attacking the Jew.

Just before the meeting closed, Brother Edward Simon, member of the committee appointed to raise funds for the Anti-Defamation League, made an appeal which resulted in the collection of over $1,400.

CELEBRATION BY ERIELODGE.

Members of Erie Lodge, No. 620, o Erie, Pa., their friends and ladies to t number of more than 150 gathered in t Knights of Pythias Hall on December 1 to attend a special program arranged for the celebration of B'nai B'rith Day.

With an orchestra, speaking program and a buffet luncheon at the conclusion the evening proved a most enjoyable one.

Henry L. Zachs, of Erie District Grand Lodge Representative, was the first speaker and briefly dwelt on the possibilities of the B'nai in the life of the community.

Hon. Louis Schlesinger, Past President of Erie Lodge, addressed the assemblage on the work of the Anti-Defamation League of the Order, and the manner in which the true facts as they bear on the Jewish status in the United States and elsewhere are placed before the public.

District Grand Vice President Maurice Schaffner, also of Erie, was the last speaker, and he eloquently dwelt on the aims of the Order. Mr. Schaffner, after reviewing the work of the district in maintaining an orphanage at Erie, and a home for the aged, and upon the manner in which it initiated what later was developed into the work of the Jewish Welfare Board during the war, drove home the fact that it was this line of work which has been followed since the inception of the Order back in the 40's that has served to make it the foremost Jewish Order in the world.

Mr. Schaffner spoke of the anti-Semitic propaganda that is being developed in this country, denouncing those who are guilty, as traducers and villifiers of the name and the record of Judaism. He closed with a plea for greater unity and definite purpose on the part of all Jewish people to uphold the traditions of the Jew which, the speaker said, have served to make them loyal and desirable citizens in any country where he has been accorded liberty, equality and the right to worship according to his conscience.

REBECCA LODGE, ALEXANDRIA LA.

B'rith B'nai Day was fittingly observed by Rebecca Lodge, No. 240, of Alexandria La., on January 2, 1921. The guest of honor was Judge David B. Samuels of Shreveport, La. The program of the day was divided in three parts.

In the morning the lodge held its regular meeting at the Temple when Judge Samuels installed the newly elected officers and officiated at the initiation of a class of seven candidates. In his talk Judge Samuels made informal remarks regarding his experiences, particularly in the matter of campaigning for new members and instilling an active interest for promoting the ideals and principles of the Order.

Although the meeting was held during the most inclement part of the day, more than fifty members were present.

In the evening the Temple was well filled with members and friends of the Order. A musical program was carried on.

The speaker, Judge Samuels, was introduced by Mr. Geo. Ginsberg. The speaker chose for his theme "The Duty the Jew Owes to the Order." His address was masterly delivered and was well received by the audience.

The singing of "America" by the audience included the intellectual part of the program for the day.

At 9:00 o'clock in the evening more than 100 members and their ladies and guests gathered at the Hotel Bently at the banquet. Mr. S. B. Pressburg presided as toastmaster and toasts were made by numbers of members as well as ladies.

B'NAI B'RITH PROPAGANDA IN ITALY.

On the occasion of the constitution of a literary circle in Venice, November 11 Professor Jakir Behar, a native of Constantinople, spoke of the work of the B'nai B'rith which had first been established seventy-seven years ago in America and then spread to various cities in Europe and eleven years ago established its first branch in Constantinople. He spoke of the merit of this Order which gathers in its midst Jews of different nationalities and has for its scope, not merely to bring relief to brothers in affliction and to give them the means of intellectual advancement, but also assists the unfortunate of their religious denomination, and above all, takes part in the material and spiritual development of the country in which it is established. He closed with the expression of the hope that the Order would soon be established in Italy also.

Convention of District Grand Lodge No. VIII. Germany

Plenary Meeting of the Grand Lodge of the German District the 27th, 28th and 29th of November, 1920.

A SHOW in three acts. That is what the Grand Lodge Convention denotes, which, after an unheard-of pause of seven years, took place in the German District. On Saturday evening first of all the formal routine financial business was transacted. Sunday was the day devoted to the larger vision, aim and scope of the Order, while Monday was devoted to questions of organization of a special character and the consideration of the particular wishes of the individual lodges. Nearly all the 150 delegates of the lodges of the Eighth District were present. The Grandmaster, Brother Timendorfer, opened the session with the significant remark that if he wanted to give an exhaustive report of the happenings of the last seven years, it would comprise an entire volume. Such, however, would be superfluous, as in the reports of the sessions of the General Committee, that took place during the past seven years, all the essentials are contained. He dwelt upon the losses we had sustained. The Grand Lodge lost during the past years fifty ex-presidents and 1,149 brothers to the grim reaper, Death. The membership list increased to the stately number of 10,600. During the elapsed period five new lodges have been added.

It is but natural that in the absence of Plenary Conventions the General Committee had to arrogate to itself a measure of independence and thus there arose a number of decisions and changes of by-laws, which required confirmation by the Grand Lodge. He hoped, however, that in appreciation of the unusual circumstances confirmation thereto would be granted without any further debate. The Plenary Convention agreed to this and therewith accepted also the budget which was presented to the delegates. The election of officers now progressed with great velocity. The officers elect are: Brother Timmendorfer, Grandmaster; three Vice Presidents, Jesselsohn, Kuznitzky and Lisser; Grand Secretary, Goldschmidt, and the Grand Treasurer, Maxmilian Stein. Besides these six Grand Lodge officers there were elected thirty brothers as members of the General Committee and their alternatives. The fact that no neighborly and friendly visitors from nearby districts appeared at any of our meetings this year must be attributed to the conditions of the distressing times. A note of the dramatic was brought into the business proceedings by the appeal to the Grand Lodge from the brethren of the surrendered provinces. They ask for continued care and concern by the German district for the further development of the lodges in the surrendered provinces.

Monday the highest altitudes of the proceedings were reached. Questions pertaining to the life and unfolding of our Order, to the admission of the numerically larger half of mankind, and the equal rights of women in the conduct of the affairs of the Order were discussed. The two main questions: The duty of the Order after the clause of the war and the democratization of the Order were treated jointly by the referees appointed for that purpose, the Brothers Blau, of Frankfurt am Main; Cahen of Coln, Hollander of Berlin and Jesselsohn of Mannheim. The first referee, Brother Blau, laid special emphasis upon that phase which unites and combines us all, as was pointed out by him already in his article published in the supplement to the monthly reports of January and February, 1919. He drew a line between that which concerns us politically as natives of the Vaterland and the international, the latter uniting us only in an humanitarian bond but not in a political unity. This significance touches our outmost duty "to assist the victims of persecution." For our own self there is the duty to check the distress in our own circles, to relieve the suffering of the middle class, in whose condition a great setback has been occasioned as compared with that of the working classes. Strict government will enable us to remedy some of the evils in our own circle.

We should try to harmonize with each other the love for the Fatherland and love for the Jewish heritage of our fathers, so that they should manifest themselves as well recognized Jewish personifications. This would be the best way to work from within. The teachings of our Order should also enable us to effect the best results in our community life. In our efforts, however, we can not dispense with the cooperation of the women.

The second referee, Brother Cahen, emphasized the emotional phases of Jewish soul-life. He pointed to the mystical element, the supernatural, the religious phase, in a dogmatic and non-dogmatic sense. We should strive to muster and gather all the longings and yearnings of the Jewish soul. The influence of the Order, however, must emanate from the individual lodges. It is a mistake to believe that the Grand Lodge can fructify everything. We should, as much as possible, go down to the masses, applying democratic principles for the expansion of the lodge and higher principles for the management of the same. Here aristocratic principles are necessary. The influences which we develop from without, should not be the sole end and aim of the lodge. The lodges should endeavor to work from within, to reflect the inner self to the outside world. The influence which they try to unfold should be in an indirect manner. Brother Cahen insisted, even more emphatically than Brother Blau, upon equal rights for women in the Order, for whom he demanded already in his first review full and unlimited equality. In accordance with the wording of our by-laws there exists not the slightest hesitancy for the admission of women. Where the lodges are not ripe as yet for such there monthly open-meetings should be arranged with a special ritual, without insignia, for the occasion. Evidently, if the motion should be defeated, there should be granted to them, at least in the Executive Committee, immediate, full and unlimited equality.

The election into the committee could be effected by the Board of officers themselves.

Brother Hollander sought to probe in an open manner some of the evils of the activities of the lodges. He asked the question whether we are an association of mere extensive tendencies or a community of a higher usefulness? Are we a college or a public school? The lodge could rather be designated as an institution for the moulding of characters, of leaders, whose function it is to unfold that which is universally Jewish. Brotherly love should not remain a mere theory, but should be practiced. To realize this goal more emphasis must be laid upon the moral and spiritual values.

Brother Jesselsohn demanded the organization of Lodges into closer circles. The total membership of 200 or the most of 300 ought not to be exceeded hereafter. He pleaded for the retention of the older forms of lodge activities, which included, alongside of the educational work, that which was solemn and exalted. All the efforts of the Order should be concentrated upon the endeavor to guide the soul back to Judaism.

Following the conclusions of the four referees there ensued a lively discussion, which at times rose to the highest form of perfection. Brother Dr. Strauss of Frankfurt am Main brought the request of the young people before the lodges. Brother Professor Goldstein suggested to give every newly initiated brother a copy of the Holy Scriptures, the Bible, as a token of Jewish thought and Jewish sentiment. Brother Wolf of Lissa touched upon the distressing circumstances among the lodges in the surrendered provinces, which, owing to the strong emigration, assumed extraordinary conditions. At the closing of the discussions it was decided to submit to the lodges all the theses of the referees, for their attention. The motions for democratization of the Order was disposed of in a manner so that radical changes in the activities and forms of the lodges were refused.

However, it was left to the discretion of the Executive Board or the General Committee to make such necessary changes in the form of procedure as they might deem advisable. Sunday afternoon the woman's question was debated. For the first time in the history of our Order were women admitted to plead their own cause in a kind of an open Grand Lodge meeting. The Mesdames Ella Seligmann, Frankfurt am Main, Ernestine Eschelbacher, Berlin, were invited as referees. On the part of the Grand Lodge the Brothers Cahen of Coeln, Schindler of Berlin and Goldschmidt of Berlin, acted as referees. Brother Cahen insisted upon the fullest equal rights for women in the management of the Order. Brother Schindler elucidated extensively all the reasons that could possibly be enumerated against the entrance of women. Brother Goldschmidt agreed with Brother Cahen in his demand for immediate equality. Should, however, Brother Cahen's motion for immediate equality be defeated, Brother Goldschmidt made a substitute motion that in that event the motion should prevail that, "It is the sense of the Order to work towards the goal of eventually admitting women to full equality." Madam Seligman essayed the logical question as to what was the nature of the Order? And furthermore if it be admitted that it was a man's association, had not the master the power to break the original form? Madam Eschelbacher struck up the emotional note. The conclusions of both women were received with extraordinary delight. From among the lodges Brother Ex-President Basch of Munich contended also for unrestricted admission of women. But in spite of the fact that five out of the six speakers insisted upon the most extensive demands for women, the resultant vote proved almost 2 to 1 against equal rights for women, either at the present or as a goal later. On the other hand it was decided that women may have place and a vote in certain befitting committees. Furthermore, there should be held about every four weeks open meetings. In accordance with the representatives of women's societies separate women lodges will not be organized.

The last day of the convention a discussion about the women's sick nursing societies took place. This question has for many years past divided the brethren into two camps. From Berlin it was insisted upon, for a number of years, to centralize the management of sick-nursing; while the Brothers Feldman and Wolf of Stuttgart advocated a decentralization that is the entire independence of the stations within the different communities. In spite of the fact that there was held the day before a consultation between the members holding to different views, no entire satisfactory solution could be arrived at. It was decided, however, to leave the sisterhood for the sick-nursing remain in its present form and do all that is possible for its promotion. Brother Feldman defended the motions proposed by him, but waived the privilege of discussing or bringing them to a vote, while the Brothers Hirsch and Blumenfeld tried their best to bring the centralization idea before the meeting. And thus will continue the development of sister organizations for nursing the sick in the spirit of the resolutions of the General Committee, that is: In form of financial independence under the protection of the Grand Lodge. It was resolved: Special means shall not be placed at the disposal of the sick-nursing sister organizations. The sick-nursing sisterhood shall be reorganized upon the basis of its already existing foundation. Appeals should be sent forth to the lodges that they should place at the disposal of the sick-nursing sisterhoods the most generous means.

The motion by Brother Steinhardt of Magdeburg to assess the brothers with an annual assessment of 100 Marks for three years each, to relieve the suffering of the teaching profession and the elevation of the Jewish cultural life, was not deemed feasible, being that a very considerable part of the brethren would not be able to carry the burden of such a taxation. The fact of a terrible distress was admitted by all present. With reference thereto the idea was considered whether it was advisable to create, at least, a fund for cultural purposes to relieve, at least in a measure, the suffering. But this thought, too, was dropped as the feeling prevailed that if all were assessed uniformly some of the rich might feel disposed to be relieved of the duty to give more than the average man, even if he were able to. The great majority were of the opinion that an appeal should be sent to all brethren, to all Jewish citizens, and to all Congregations to contribute to their outmost capacity. A uniform taxation would not serve the purpose. Only the outmost exertion alone might help. The new conditions of time will influence also the form of the Grand Lodge Conventions. In reference to this, the following resolutions were adopted:

1. The plenary sessions of the Grand Lodge take place at least once every four years. On request of a third of the German Lodges a special meeting of the Grand Lodge must be called within three months.
2. Every lodge has one vote in the Grand Lodge and one vote more if the membership exceeds 200 for every additional 200 members or a fraction thereof.
3. The actual cost for the maintaining of the Grand Lodge should be raised by a poll tax.

Among the appeals that were voiced on the floor, those of the delegates of smaller lodges for promotion of their spiritual life by more frequent visits by the Grand Lodge officers and the support of their libraries must be mentioned.

Considering the convention as a whole, one must agree with the Grandmaster, Brother Timmendorfer, when he said that the deliberations, most of which rose to a high plane, were highly inspiring and successful. Orientations and admonitions were given, words were exchanged, but words must be turned into acts and the three-act show must assume life. In such a spirit, we are reminded here of the quotation by one of the speakers, "Be generators of the word, not only hearers thereof."

ABRAHAM LODGE, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

(By Harry J. Fox.)

Abraham Lodge, No. 89, I. O. B. B., held their annual election of officers on Sunday evening, January 19. It was the largest attended meeting of the year. Officers chosen for ensuing year were: President, David Feur; Vice President, Mark Rheinstein; Treasurer, Benjamin Weinstein; Secretary, Harry J. Fox; Assistant Monitor, Jacob Ilkowitz; Monitor, Samuel B. Plotkin; Inside Guardian, Benjamin Cohen; Outside Guardian, Herman Goldstein; Trustees, Ben G. Shalet, Lionel Levy, Bannet Blumberg. Representatives to the Grand Lodge, Jacob B. Klein, Henry Greenstein, Max Cohen, and Theodore E. Steiber. Every office was contested for, and the election was very harmonious.

Committees will be appointed for our annual ball at the Hotel Stratfield. Committees were appointed to purchase a site for the future home of Abraham Lodge; Entertainment Committee to arrange a series of lectures by prominent speakers and to organize a degree team to compete for the prize.

Abraham Lodge received the third prize for membership from the Grand Lodge District No. 1. Abraham Lodge has been in existence for over fifty years. Our newly-elected President predicted a banner year for the organization in his address of acceptance. Brother David Feur has done everything in his power to bring about Jewish drives; he is a member of a number of local Jewish organizations, is a prominent business man and will make a leader who will make the rest of the officers step some. Abraham Lodge feels certain that they will succeed under such a leader. They have voted to work to co-operate to make Abraham Lodge one of the leading lodges in the district.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

Houston Lodge, No. 434, held one of the best meetings that has taken place in a long time on Tuesday evening, December 28, 1920, at the Concordiate Club. Arrangements were made for a membership drive and the Committee on B'nai B'rith Day Celebration reported progress.

Election of officers and delegates to the coming Convention of the District Grand Lodge also took place.

Mr. S. J. Westheimer, Second Vice-President of the District Grand Lodge, presided at the meeting.

Herzl Lodge, No. 608, had an unusually well-attended meeting on Tuesday evening, December 14, 1920.

Election and installation of officers for the ensuing term took place, after which the new officers proceeded to initiate a class of twelve candidates.

The Committee in charge of the Chanukah Play reported a big success and that the following donations were made from the proceeds of the affair:

To the Jewish Orphan Homes	$200
To the Hot Springs Hospital	75
To the Denver Consumptives Relief Society	75
For the adoption of a Jewish war orphan	100

A number of members spoke for the good and welfare of the Lodge and the Order.

Current Events

(Continued from page 6.)

telegraph agency reports that the heads of the Arab community of Gilead have officially invited Jewish settlers and again from another source we learn that some Arab papers publish the appeal of Lenin for a Soviet organization and ask for the cooperation of the Jews whose best friends the Arabs are said to be.

The Immigration Question.

The House of Representatives passed with an overwhelming majority a bill suspending immigration for a whole year. The bill is pending in the Senate and this fact that the Senate acted so slowly while the House railroaded the measure through seems to indicate that the bill is not to become a law so soon. Yet, that there is a definite hostility to immigration not only in the United States, is evident. Canada's restrictions went into force in December and they mean practically a prohibition of immigration on account of the demand of $250 from every prospective immigrant. Both houses of the French parliament indulge in vehement invectives against Jewish immigration who can certainly not be so very numerous either, and the anti-Semitic motive of such agitation is seen on the surface. Even the support which Wrangel's army received by French officers points to the same motive. French anti-Semites even now demand the expulsion of the aged Max Nordau while one should have expected that after sobering up from the wild war agitation every cultured Frenchman would be ashamed of the fact that this great scholar and international celebrity should have ever been exiled. The only ray of light in regard to the old "Wohin" question comes from Argentine, from which country, it is reported that a rabbi of Buenos Aires is being sent to Europe to encourage immigration of the Jews.

Internal Anti-Semitic Movement.

The Ford agitation has created a whole literature and the reviewer of the events of last month cannot go into details. However, it may be pointed out that this agitation is not isolated. Mr. Ernest L. Crandall, director of the Bureau of Public Lectures, accepted the resignation of the Presbyterian pastor, Dr. William Carter, who would not heed the warning of the director against his offensive remarks on the Jews whom he called the off-scouring of Europe and other uncomplimentary names. Similar is the case of a minister of Washington, D. C., who declared in a meeting of the International Reform Bureau that the Jews combined with the devil to destroy the Christian Sunday and to corrupt American youth by immoral picture shows.

We might just as well confess it that the Jewish people in the United States are facing a growing anti-Semitic agitation. Mr. H. J. Emerson, member of the House of Representatives, announced a bill which would make attacks on a class of citizens an offense, and Judge Rosalsky announced that he was engaged in drafting such a bill. There can be no doubt that a movement which can only have for its object acts of violence and lawlessness is an accessory to crime. The only question is whether a law can prevent such a movement. The Roman Catholics who have their own experience in this country with persecution see the situation properly and the supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus announced the support of his organization in a fight against anti-Jewish as well as anti-Catholic prejudices. There is no doubt about the sincerity of such an announcement but it is somewhat discouraging to read at the same time in the Catholic press of this country, at least in that section which is published in the German language, statements such as we were used to find in the clerical organs of Germany and France. The Sankt Josephs Blatt of Portland Oregon, Dec 24, 1920, applauding the Dearborn Independent, speaks again of the Jews as the element to which all popular unrest is due, makes Lenin a Jew and repeats the old story of masonry being an arm of the Jewish world dominion. Justice requires that we also mention cases to the contrary as a [illegible] appreciation of Fanny Hurst's "Humoresque" in the St. Xavier Calendar of Cincinnati, November 1920, in which the writer says: 'I am glad that in this [illegible] justice is done to the good simple Jews of the Jewish quarter.'

The League of Nations.

It was certainly not without significance that the British representative to the League of Nations, Sir Eric Drummond, called on the chief rabbi of Geneva although, as far as we are aware, the memoirs presented by Jewish organizations to the League have not led to any definite result except the usual one of Jews fighting among themselves. The Alliance Israelite would not join the committee of Jewish delegations and the Jewish Correspondence Bureau reports that the conviction is general that the Alliance by its objection to the minority rights has betrayed the interests of the Jews. Here is another opportunity for Mr. Ford's clipping bureau to prove the precision with which the Jewish international machine works.

Relief Work.

The criticism of the activity of the Joint Distribution Committee in Poland continues. We hear that the strike of its employees was settled but also that the activities were suspended. The sorest spot in the whole system is Ukraine where regular work is still impossible. W. Temkin, prominently connected with the Zionist movement for years, speaks of the tremendous task before all organizations if they wish to put the economic situation of the Jews in the Ukraine on a working basis. He gives a description of the many families ruined, of schools and charitable institutions which were wiped out and demands constructive work. This is undoubtedly also the object of the Joint Distribution Committee which announced the opening of two hundred loan banks. Of course, in order to do effective work normal political conditions will have to be restored which unfortunately at present does not seem to be on the way.

State Protection for Jewish Religion.

Switzerland which, as reported in the last review, had in one instance abandoned its traditional policy of fairness, has redeemed itself in one instance. The great council of Basel passed an amendment to a Sunday law which allows Jews who observe Sabbath to work on Sundays in offices with Jewish employees. This is also the case in several other cantons and in some states in Germany. If Jews wish to obtain such a regard for their religious scruples to which indeed they are entitled they must carefully avoid creating the impression that their only object in demanding consideration of their religious scruples is to evade the law. Unfortunately there are such sinners. A Toronto paper recently reported a man who smuggled a considerable quantity of whisky and when seized claimed that he had intended this liquor to be brought to the synagog where it is used for religious purposes. He claimed to belong to a "holy society" which consumes liquor in each case of a death when the members watch the body. The mean trick of translating the name of the burial society, Hebra Kaddisha, literally as "holy society" although the meaning really is "honorable society," and the additional misstatement that such exercises which are abuses, condemned by religious authorities, are religious performances call for an action on the part of representative bodies especially in this country where owing to prohibition such misrepresentation of religion may seriously injure the Jewish cause.

Obituary.

From Berlin is reported the death of Dr. Simon Eppenstein, for several years professor of history and Talmudic literature at the orthodox seminary named for the late Israel Hildesheimer. Eppenstein who was a graduate of this institution succeeded the late Professor Berliner and has contributed a number of valuable essays to Jewish historical literature and also edited a volume of Graetz's history. He died at the early age of eighty-six. Shortly afterwards the Jewish community of Berlin sustained a severe loss in the death of Professor Leopold Landau, one of Germany's leading gynecologists. Professor Landau was a native of Poland and obtained a professorship at a time when the opposition to Polish Jews even in business was at its height in Prussia, where appointments of Jews to professorships were always rare. His son is regular professor of mathematics at the university of Goethingen and a son-in-law of the celebrated Professor Paul Herlich. From Riga comes the notice of the death of Joseph Hayyim Tawjow, a prolific author on Hebrew pedagogy.

EMES LODGE, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

On Sunday, December 12, 1920, Mr. Leon L. Lewis of Chicago, Secretary of the Anti-Defamation League, paid an official visit to Emes Lodge, No. 67, of Springfield, Mass.

A class of fourteen candidates was initiated, several of these coming from smaller communities in the vicinity of Springfield. Initiation was followed by short talks on B'nai B'rith work by the officers of the lodge.

Following the meeting, a banquet was held at which Mr. Michael Epstein presided. Mr. Lewis spoke on "Some Recent Developments in Anti-Semitic Propaganda in America." Other speakers were: Rabbi Landman of Springfield, "The Rabbi of the I. O. B. B." Mr. Barney Cohen, Director of Illinois State Department of Labor, "An Americanization Program for the I. O. B. B." Mr. B. A. Lange, "The Young Man and the I. O. B. B."

Address of welcome was delivered by the President of the lodge, Mr. Philip Schlesinger.

The meeting was a most enthusiastic one, and there was a large attendance. Emes Lodge has a membership of very high standing composed largely of young men anxious to do something for the cause. The lodge is now engaged to raise funds for the Orphan Home of Cleveland and has also received a number of contributions for the Anti-Defamation League.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

The golden anniversary of the institution of Minnesota Lodge, No. 157, of St. Paul, Minn., will fall on February 21, 1921.

The committee in charge has made the following arrangements for the celebration of the event:

A class to be known as the one hundred per cent class will be secured which means that the membership campaign now under way must number sufficient to double the present membership of the lodge, which is 325.

The presence at the celebration of the lodge of leading men of the district brought together by a meeting of the General Committee of the District Grand Lodge on Sunday, February 20, 1921.

The celebration is to embrace four days.

1. February 18, Friday evening services at the Temple at which B'nai B'rith ideals and the practical work of the Order will be explained from the pulpits of every congregation of the city.
2. February 19, reception to out-of-town guests and entertainment.
3. February 20, meeting of the General Committee and public meeting in the evening on intellectual advancement lines, by noble B'nai B'rith speakers.
4. February 21, class initiation followed by informal dinner dance in the afternoon and evening.

Minnesota Lodge held its annual meeting on Monday evening, December 27. A class of candidates was initiated and Dutch lunch was served after the meeting.

The election of officers also took place and Brother David H. Ruvelson was elected President of the lodge for the year 1921.

MELCHI ZEDEK LODGE, No. 200, WATERBURY, CONN.

On December 16, 1920, an enthusiastic meeting was held by Melchizedek Lodge at the K. of P. Building.

This lodge has taken on new life and promises to be one of the active lodges of the district.

Officers for the ensuing year were nominated at this meeting and a class of thirty-five candidates was initiated by the local degree team.

Henry Lasker, President of District No. 1, paid an official visit to the lodge, and spoke on the work of the Order and the progress of the district.

Refreshments were served by the Entertainment Committee.

MANSFIELD LODGE, No. 797, MANSFIELD, OHIO.

On Sunday, December 12, 1920, Mansfield had a very busy day. In the morning, Brother Rabbi Freund of Toledo, accompanied by Mr. Mannie Weil of Mansfield, who has charge of the Social Service work at the Ohio Reformatory which is situated in Mansfield, visited the Reformatory and conducted religious services for the inmates.

In the afternoon the degree team of Toledo Lodge initiated a class of eight, after which Brother Sam Messing of Toledo Lodge gave a short talk on "The Duties of a Member to His Lodge." Brother Lou M. Frank, member of the General Committee, District Grand Lodge No. 2, spoke to the members on the Anti-Defamation and Cleveland Orphan Home drive.

Refreshments were served to the members and their ladies, and in the evening Brother Rabbi Freund held Chanuka services in the temple.

Mansfield is a thriving lodge, and other small communities with lodges should follow the example of Mansfield Lodge and try to interest the Jews in the small neighboring cities.

ANNUAL REPORT OF ACTIVITIES OF WORCESTER LODGE

By Mr. Samuel Beeber, President.

During the year 1920, sixty-seven candidates were initiated to membership in the lodge. The degree team of Worcester Lodge exemplified the work well.

During the year the lodge appropriated over $2,000 for benevolent, charitable and philanthropic purposes.

Through the efforts of the Anti-Defamation League Committee of the lodge the Dearborn Independent has been removed from the public library, the Elks Club and the Mayor's office; the Merchant of Venice was removed from curriculum of the high school of Commerce.

The financial status of the lodge is most excellent. Out of a membership of 253 practically every member is fully paid up on the books. All the obligations of the lodge have been paid, and a respectable balance is in the treasury.

At the annual meeting of the lodge held in December, 175 members were present and participated in the election of officers.

MICHIGAN B'NAI B'RITH COUNCIL

The B'nai B'rith Council, embracing the lodges of the Order in Michigan, held its second meeting on Sunday, December 26 at the B'nai B'rith Lodge rooms.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. Adolph Freund. Representatives were present from Bay City, Grand Rapids, Flint, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Pontiac, Lansing and Detroit.

Besides the accredited delegates there were a number of members from the local lodge who took a keen interest in the proceedings of the Council. There was a free discussion of affairs concerning the matters of interest to the lodges within the state.

Arrangements are under way for a general B'nai B'rith gathering at Grand Rapids during February. Isaac Goldberg and Bernard Ginsburg will visit the Jackson and Saginaw lodges within a week in behalf of the Council.

Several letters were received from prominent members of the Order evidencing a live interest in the activities and success of the Michigan Council, the pioneer in the movement.

DES MOINES LODGE, DES MOINES, IOWA.

Des Moines Lodge, No. 330, of Des Moines, Iowa, celebrated B'nai B'rith Day on Sunday afternoon, December 12, with a class initiation of ninety-three candidates, the largest class in the history of the lodge. The lodge still has sixty more candidates who have been elected to membership. With this new class of ninety-three initiated during the celebration, Des Moines Lodge has sufficiently increased its membership during the year so as to make it a formidable candidate for the Grand Lodge prize for the year 1920 for the largest increase in percentage.

There was a large attendance over 150 members being present. The ceremony was conducted impressively by the officers of the lodge serving as the degree team. Brother Eugene Mannheimer, President of the District Grand Lodge, delivered an address on the objects and accomplishments of the Order. Following the close of the program, a buffet luncheon was served to the members.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

RAMAH LODGE, CHICAGO.

B'nai B'rith Day was celebrated in a ost impressive manner by Ramah Lodge, o. 33, of Chicago, on Thursday evening, ecember 23, 1920, at the Hotel LaSalle. he program was ushered in with a banuet, at which more than five hundred embers and their friends were in attendnce.

The affair was a gala affair from all oints of view. Mr. Leonard J. Grossman ho was Chairman of the Propaganda ommittee, introduced the Toastmaster f the evening, Mr. Adolf Kraus, Presient of the Order.

The special guests of honor were: Honrable Wm. Howard Taft, ex-President f the United States, and Rabbi Abba Hillel ilver of Cleveland. Among other guests, he following may be mentioned: Judge amuel Alschuler, Judge Hugo Pam, Rev. ishop Samuel Fallows, Rabbi Eugene annheimer of Des Moines, President of istrict Grand Lodge No. 6, Chas. L. arons of Milwaukee. Dr. Chas. S. Levi f Milwaukee, Mrs. Howe Britton, promient social worker, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. urgess, and Julius Rosenwald.

At the close of the initiation ceremonies, an address was delivered by the President of the District, Brother Eugene Mannheimer.

The evening's program was brought to a close by dancing, which lasted until the early hours of the morning.

The committee that had charge of this affair had many difficulties to contend with, among them the holiday season, which attacked the time of the members of the lodge, making it very hard for some to devote their efforts to the interests of the lodge, and yet, in spite of these handicaps, the Propaganda Committee was successful in enrolling more than 700 candidates in the remarkably short time of six weeks.

Installation of Officers.

The meeting of the lodge held on January 10, 1921, was remarkable for its unusually large attendance, more than 600 being present. A class of eighty-seven candidates was initiated by the degree team and more than eighty new applications for membership were presented.

The Glee Club of Pisgah Lodge, Detroit

At the banquet two addresses were deivered. One by Mr. Taft on the subject, 'Anti-Semitism in the United States," wherein he vigorously attacked the anti-Semitic campaign now being conducted n this country as well as abroad—the other address by Rabbi Silver who spoke on the subject, "In Light and Love Shall Ye Lead." It is needless to state that both addresses were received with demonstrations of a most enthusiastic approval.

At the conclusion of the banquet, nitiation of the largest class of candidates n the history of the lodge took place. The degree team was composed of Brothers Edward Sonnenschein, Otto G. Felton and A. B. Seelenfreund, and 420 candidates were initiated. The degree team, was assisted in its work by the Glee Club of Pisgah Lodge of Detroit, numbering twelve men, who were specially invited to attend for this purpose.

During the ceremonies, a number of Jewish songs were rendered by the Glee Club.

The lodge was honored by a visit from Brother Hiram D. Frankel, St. Paul, Past President of the District Grand Lodge, who installed the officers-elect and delivered an address on "The Work of the Order," particularly congratulating the lodge upon its achievements during the past year.

Brother Leonard J. Grossman, on behalf of the Entertainment Committee and Propaganda Committee, submitted full report, which was received with marked approval, and a vote of thanks was extended to the committee for its laudable work.

An important feature of the meeting was an address by Mr. H. H. Hardinge, on the subject of "Social Assets and Liabilities," which, although consuming an unusual amount of time, was nevertheless received with very much enthusiasm and listened to most attentively.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

SAAR SHOLEM LODGE, PITTSBURGH.

One of the most interesting and best attended regular meetings of Saar Sholem Lodge, No. 154, was held at Moose Temple on January 2, 1921.

Mr. Simon Davis installed the newly elected officers. Four candidates were nitiated by the Degree Team of the odge.

A Propaganda Committee was organzed for the year's activities and an Entertainment Committee has been elected to prepare suitable and interesting programs for the meetings of the lodge.

The next meeting of the lodge will be held on Sunday, January 16, on which occasion the Secretary of the District Grand Lodge, Brother Joseph Herbach of Philadelphia, will pay an official visit to the lodge.

CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE.

A most enthusiastic meeting of Chattanooga Lodge, No. 446, was held on Sunday, December 12, at which officers for the ensuing term were elected.

Report was made of the most successful meeting held October 31, in the interest of the Anti-Defamation League, at which meeting over $1,500 was raised. Mr. Lee J. Loventhal of Nashville, Tenn., was the principal speaker.

A committee was appointed to make arrangements for a large open meeting to be held during the month of January to be known as B'nai B'rith Day, and a special effort will be made to make this meeting a huge success.

The Membership Committee reported that the lodge now has a membership of one hundred fifty, thirty-two members having been secured during 1920.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

At a regular meeting of the B'nai B'rith Speakers Club, held on the afternoon of December 26, at the B'nai B'rith Building, the subject of "Immigration" was the topic of discussion. The discussion was led by Judge Samuel Silbert, who gave an interesting talk relating numerous personal experiences and revealed new points of view and furnished valuable data, all of which should be considered a final solution of the immigration question as it affects the Jew. A general discussion, in which a number of members took part, followed Judge Silbert's talk.

The Speakers Club held a further meeting on January 9, at which the subject of discussion was "The Open Versus the Closed Shop".

At the meeting of the B'nai B'rith Dramatic Group held on January 2, at the B'nai B'rith Building, the play read was "The Skin Game," by Galsworthy. The Dramatic Group contemplates a theatre party to the play, "DeClasse," in which Ethel Barrymore is to star the week of January 17.

Cleveland Lodge, No. 16, gave a New Year's dance on Saturday evening, January 1, 1921, which combined all the good features of the regular B'nai B'rith dances with several New Year numbers. The dance was for members only and admission by card.

The lodge also appointed a Committee on Employment to investigate conditions and consider plans for the establishment of an employment bureau to be operated under the auspices of the B'nai B'rith.

At the annual election of officers of Cleveland Lodge, held on December 16, Mr. Alfred L. Steuer was elected President. Mr. Steuer is an attorney and graduate of Harvard University, and has been active in communal affairs of Cleveland during the past few years.

"Recent Anti-Jewish Tendencies in America" will be the theme for discussion to take place at the series of meetings now being arranged by Cleveland Lodge. The discussion will be led by Cleveland rabbis.

Judge Samuel Rosenfeld of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge No. 2, will be the guest and speaker of Cleveland Lodge, No. 16, on Sunday, January 23. The affair will be in the nature of an old-fashioned B'nai B'rith gathering, similar to the meetings of years ago.

Members are expected to bring their ladies and friends to the meeting, which will start in the evening at six with a dinner. Following the dinner, the new officers will be installed, and initiation of a class of several hundred candidates will then be held.

The B'nai B'rith Dramatic Group selected for its reading on Sunday afternoon, December 19, "The Moon of the Caribees", by Eugene G. O'Neil. The meeting was held in the B'nai B'rith Building. The Dramatic Group this season has displayed a great deal of enthusiasm in its work.

The B'nai B'rith Speakers Club held its regular meeting on Sunday afternoon, December 26.

The B'nai B'rith Chess Circle selected a number of its members to form the B'nai B'rith Chess Team and to represent the organization on the Cleveland Chess League. On Saturday evening, December 11, the B'nai B'rith team played the City Club at the city clubrooms. On Monday evening, December 20, the B'nai B'rith Team played the Cleveland Chess Club at the B'nai B'rith Building.

WORCESTER, MASS.

At the December meeting of Worcester Lodge, No. 600, of Worcester, Mass., Brother Samuel Beeber submitted his report as President of the lodge, wherein he depicted the year of late constructive work.

Brother Beeber is a graduate of Brown University of the class of 1905 and is at present assistant principal of the South High School, which is recognized as one of the finest high schools.

During the year just passed the lodge made a number of contributions for benevolent and charitable purposes. Particularly praisworthy is the college scholarship fund of $1,350 raised by voluntary contributions from among the members of the lodge and which is known as the "Worcester B'nai B'rith Scholarship."

MONTEFIORE LODGE, No. 70, BUFFALO, NEW YORK.

Montefiore Lodge of Buffalo was very successful in its recent membership drive, conducted by Israel Rumizen, director of the drive, which commenced December 15 and ended the 30. Five hundred sixty-five new members were secured. Noonday luncheons were frequently held at the Statler Hotel and reports of the various team captains and their workers showed the progress from day to day.

At the meeting held on January 5, Brother Henry Lasker, President of the District Grand Lodge, No. 1, President Given of Syracuse and President Silverstein of Rochester installed the following officers for the year commencing January 1, 1921: David Rodenberg, President; Israel Rumizen, Vice-President; I. M. Hellwitz, Secretary; Levi Ruslander, Treasurer; Rev. B. Schachtel, Monitor; and M. M. Rosen as Warden. Following the installation Congressman Henry M. Goldfogel addressed the meeting on the important work of the B'nai B'rith. A class of two hundred twenty-nine new candidates were initiated by the degree team, following which a buffet luncheon was served to all the members. As a result of the campaign conducted, Montefiore Lodge has now a membership of nearly eleven hundred and is one of the strongest in the District.

The degree team, composed of Israel Rumizen, Captain, Benjamin D. Reisman, Emil H. Rubenstein, Rev. B. Schachtel and Herman Kahn, will go to Syracuse, N. Y., to initiate a class of candidates on January 13, 1921. The excellent work of the degree team has prompted the Syracuse Lodge to invite it to exemplify the teachings of our Order there. On Sunday, January 9, Brother David Ruslander, Past President and member of the General Committee of the District, and Israel Rumizen, vice-president of Montefiore Lodge, visited the Toronto Lodge and installed the officers there. Presentation of an electric Menorah was made to the Toronto Lodge by Brother Ruslander in behalf of the District. This Menorah was given to them for securing the largest number of candidates during the membership drive held in honor of Hon. Adolf Kraus, President of the Constitutional Grand Lodge.

Montefiore Lodge has taken unto itself a new lease of life and intends to conduct all its activities in the new building which it recently purchased at a cost of $75,000. This building is centrally located and has all the facilities for conducting the work of our Order, such as gymnasium, plunge, Turkish baths, pool rooms, bowling alleys, class rooms, large auditorium and stage and dormitories. It is expected that possession will be had within a few months.

On December 14 last, the first formal ball of the season was held in the beautiful ballroom of the Statler Hotel. About eight hundred members and their lady friends attended. A very successful and enjoyable affair was had.

As a result of the recent membership drive, the Boosters Club of the B'nai B'rith has been organized. Noonday luncheons will be held twice a month, at which prominent men will give interesting talks and also problems of B'nai B'rith will be discussed and action taken. The lodge is also organizing a Ladies Auxiliary, the first meeting of which will take place within a week or two. On February 2, another large class of candidates will be initiated. It is expected that almost a thousand members will be present.

TRI-CITY LODGE, ROCK ISLAND, ILLINOIS.

Brothers Harry Okin and Jos. A. Golde of Chicago, on behalf of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, paid an official visit to Tri-City Lodge, No. 837, of Rock Island, Illinois, on Tuesday, December 14, 1920, and initiated a class of twenty candidates. More than one hundred members of the lodge were in attendance at the meeting, which was an enthusiastic one. At the conclusion of the initiatory work a number of the new members pledged their support to the lodge and their efforts to secure new members. The visiting Grand Lodge officers addressed the lodge, touching upon the work of the Order.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

EMANUEL LODGE, MONTGOMERY, ALA.

(By L. Meyer.)

On November 25, 1920, Emanuel Lodge, No. 103, of Montgomery, Ala., had the pleasure of an official visit of the Secretary of District Grand Lodge, No. 7, Brother Myron M. Goldman, of New Orleans, La. He came principally to advocate the cause of the Anti-Defamation League, its aims and objects and the necessity of liberal support. A special public meeting was therefore called on that day and a fairly good audience attended. To add interest to this meeting, the lodge arranged for a public initiation of a large class of candidates and requested Brother Goldman to conduct the ceremony, which he did in a most impressive and pleasing manner, after the conclusion of which, he made a splendid and interesting talk regarding the Anti-Defamation League, which was well received. In response to his appeal, every Jewish organization of this city appointed committees to take the matter under consideration and devise best plans how to proceed to solicit contributions for this most worthy cause and it is intended to make a thorough canvass during the early part of January for this purpose and which, it is believed, will be liberally responded to. Since then, it is pleasing to report that considerably improved conditions prevail. Over 60 members have been added to our membership and the good work is still going on; better attendance at our regular meetings is noted and more activity and interest in B'nai B'rith matters in general seem to prevail. All this, no doubt, can be attributed to the visit of Brother Goldman and I believe that if the lodges would be visited more often by some good and earnest speaker, more activity, more interest and more life and vim would result in the affairs of B'nai B'rith lodges in general. I trust that favorable reports from Emanuel Lodge can be made from now on from time to time to make up for shortcomings in the last few years.

SEATTLE, WASH.

Dr. Jacob B. Gordon, former associate editor of the Jewish Chronicle, addressed the monthly meeting of Ranier Lodge, No. 627, of Seattle, Wash., on Wednesday evening, December 15th.

Dr. Gordon is a graduate of Oxford and Hildesheimer Rabbinical College of Berlin.

Hildesheimer Lodge, No. 503, of Seattle, Wash., held its election of officers at the December meeting of the lodge. The Emma Lazarus Auxiliary also held its election of officers and the installation of the officers was held at a joint meeting of the two organizations on January 10th.

On December 29th, Ranier Lodge, No. 627, of Seattle, held a meeting at the Educational Center for the purpose of initiating a class of 16 members. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Mr. H. Schochen read an interesting paper giving detailed information of the work of the B'nai B'rith in Germany. Mr. R. Seligman gave a brief review of the work of the Order in America.

Ranier Lodge, No. 627, of Seattle, Wash., at a well attended meeting of the lodge, held on December 15th, 1921, elected its officers for the ensuing year. Over 30 members were added to the roster of the lodge at the same meeting.

LOUISVILLE LODGE, LOUISVILLE, KY.

The annual election of officers of Louisville Lodge, No. 14, I. O. B. B., was held at the Y. M. H. A. on Wednesday, December 29, 1920. This meeting was one of the most interesting and spirited held during the year and was marked by an unusually large attendance.

Before the election two candidates were initiated. Every member present was presented with a lodge emblem, and cigars were provided by the Entertainment Committee.

Executive Director Jacob B. Krohngold of District No. 2 will visit Louisville on January [illegible] and will remain several days. The Entertainment Committee has arranged an open program at which Mr. Krohngold will deliver an address. Several musical numbers and other speakers will appear on the program.

LOUISVILLE LODGE, LOUISVILLE, KY.

Louisville Lodge, No. 14, has again manifested to its members and friends its policy of presenting public programs of the highest calibre. On Sunday evening, November 28, in the Y. M. H. A. auditorium, Dr. Joseph Kornfeld, Columbus, Ohio, was the guest and speaker at the B'nai B'rith Day celebration.

Speaking on "The Fact and Fiction Regarding the International Jew," he charmed his hearers with his eloquence and stirring manner of delivery. He denounced Henry Ford's unwarranted attack on the Jews, which he made in his paper, the Dearborn Independent. Ford's conception of the Jew, according to Dr. Kornfeld, is a person endowed with all the craft and cunning of a satanic creature; one who is trying to gain control of the world by arts and devices almost unheard of. The most pathetic thing about Mr. Ford's conception of the international Jew is that he has been unable to prove the truthfulness of any of his statements.

"The true international Jew," said Dr. Kornfeld, "is not one who is grasping and trying to gain power over everything with which he comes in contact. On the contrary, every Jew is an international Jew because from the time of Abraham, who was commanded by the Lord to go from his land to a distant one to become a blessing, all Jews have become blessings to every country and community in which they have settled."

He cited Karl Marx, the exponent of Socialism, and Zaminoff, the inventor of Esperanto, both Jews, as being international Jews, international because they brought together people and races from all parts of the world through a common medium.

Concluding his remarks, he said that the Jew must be international if he is to justify his high and holy mission in the world.

Rabbi Jacob J. Gittleman, Vice President of Louisville Lodge, spoke briefly on the work of the Order, locally, nationally and internationally, and made a plea for more recruits to the ranks of the Order.

An exceptionally fine musical program was rendered. Mr. Fred J. Zahn, violinist, played "Scherzo," by Atherton, and "Guitarrero," by Drdla, with a technique truly artistic. Miss June Abraham sang the famous traditional Yiddish melody, "Eili, Eili," by Shalitt-Fisher, in a beautiful soprano voice that held her listeners to the last plaintive note of that inspiring selection. Mrs. Sidney J. Meyers was accompanist.

Mr. Louis C. Grossman, Past President of Louisville Lodge, was chairman, and he is to be complimented on the fine program which he arranged.

MANHATTAN WASHINGTON LODGE, NEW YORK.

The annual meeting of Manhattan Washington Lodge, No. 19, of New York, was held on January 8, 1921. The meeting proved of great importance and was most interesting. The proceedings included the initiation of a large class of candidates; a discussion of the report of the Leavitt Committee on Pogroms Abroad and Anti-Semitism here and in Europe; the consideration of a report on the organization of a ladies' auxiliary; amendment to the laws of the lodge increasing the dues to $12.00 a year; consideration of annual and quarterly financial reports; adoption of budget for the ensuing year and allotting contributions for charitable purposes by the lodge to the various Jewish philanthropic and charitable organizations.

On January 26, 1921, the lodge will hold a specially interesting meeting at which the officers will be installed by Brother Chas. Hartman, member of the Executive Committee of the Order for District No. 1.

The Entertainment Committee is arranging for an address by Supreme Court Justice Isadore Wasservogel and the meeting will be enlivened further by the presence of ladies who will consider the formation of a ladies' auxiliary. At the close of the meeting, refreshments will be served and there will be a social hour to promote sociability among the members.

Under the auspices of the lodge, Sunday afternoon dances at the B'nai B'rith headquarters are open to the members and their friends.

The lodge is arranging for the celebration of Purim with a juvenile dance.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

Memphis Lodge, No. 35, at its meeting held on Sunday, December 12, adopted resolutions strongly opposing the passage by Congress of the Johnson bill restricting immigration. The lodge directed telegrams to be sent to the senators and representatives of the State requesting their aid in preventing the passage of the bill.

During the evening, a class of 60 candidates was admitted to membership.

Brother J. M. Samfield, Chairman of the Anti-Defamation League branch in Memphis, reported that arrangements for a large mass meeting to be held on January 16 are being formulated and that the principal speakers will be Rabbi Isadore Lewinthal of Nashville and Rabbi William H. Feinshreiber of Memphis. Officers were nominated for the ensuing term.

The Entertainment Commiteee announced that B'nai B'rith Day will be celebrated with an elaborate program on Sunday, February 6. Not only will the occasion in February be one of the Entertainment Committee's principal efforts but it will be in commemoration of the annual B'nai B'rith Day, although only a tentative program has so far been arranged, but there will be music, and several addresses, dancing and serving of refreshments. It is proposed to invite the Jewish communities of Forest City, Marianna, Wynn, Helena, Brinkley and other cities in eastern Arkansas.

The newly elected officers of Memphis Lodge, No. 35, were installed at the meeting of the Lodge held on Sunday morning, January 9.

In addition to the installation ceremonies, a large class of new members was initiated. President Levitch spoke proudly of the record made by the lodge in the matter of securing new members during his administration.

A Jewish mass meeting under the auspices of the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith will be held at the Temple, Sunday afternoon, January 23.

TOLEDO LODGE, TOLEDO, OHIO.

On the evening of November 28, 1920, an open meeting was held in the Collingwood Avenue Temple, where the program arranged by the B'nai B'rith Day Committee was given.

The use of the temple was kindly donated to us in anticipation of a large audience, which was fully justified.

Brother Chas. J. Freund offered the opening prayer. An organ prelude was rendered by Mr. Fred Church. Mrs. Alexander Houston sang a group of songs which were enthusiastically received. Mrs. Houston was accompanied by Mrs. Herbert Davies. Mr. Herbert Davies rendered a solo accompanied by Mrs. Davies.

At the last minute, the committee was disappointed, owing to the fact that Brother Harry Mayer of Kansas City found it impossible to come and deliver an address, but Brother Sidney Kusworm of Dayton, Ohio, very kindly came to us instead. Brother Kusworm presented in his subject—"The Jew and Americanization"—many interesting facts relative to the part the Jew has played in making American history. Indeed, Brother Kusworm brought an important message to Toledo Lodge, and delivered it in his own inimitable way.

The program was concluded with the benediction by Dr. Coffee. This was one of the largest B'nai B'rith Day meetings ever held in Toledo, and the committee is to be congratulated upon the arrangement of such an excellent program. The committee consisted of Brothers Lou M. Frank and Isidor Silverman; Brother Silverman presided as chairman of the meeting.

McKEESPORT LODGE, McKEESPORT, PA.

McKeesport Lodge, No. 573, at its recent meeting, appointed a committee to raise funds for the Anti-Defamation League. Mr. M. Breyer was appointed Chairman. The committee to raise funds for the orphanage has been most successful and is preparing to start a drive in McKeesport and vicinity for that purpose.

The lodge also appointed an Intellectual Advancement Committee to arrange intellectual and social meetings for the lodge.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

Our B'nai B'rith Lodge is about to close an unusually successful year. During the war, and during the period of debarkation, the members of our Lodge were kept busy with their own affairs, especially since Newport News was a Port of Embarkation and Debarkation.

Though we cooperated with the Jewish Welfare Board, in every respect, the spirit of fraternity among the members of our lodge was neglected, and the work of B'nai B'rith, as such, received very little attention. Due to the noble and untiring efforts of Brother H. A. Morewitz, our lodge was again made a model organization, during the past summer. It was felt, then, that a city like ours should have more than thirty-five (35) B'nai B'rith.

In order to increase our membership, and to revive the spirit of Benevolence, Brotherly Love and Harmony, Captain Julius I. Peyser, of Washington, D. C., was invited to address an open meeting, to be held under the auspices of our lodge. At the end of October, Captain Peyser honored us with his presence, and delivered an address the like of which our brethren here have not heard for a long, long time. The speaker was thorough in discussing B'nai B'rith work, conservative in matters religious, convincing in his arguments, and forceful in his appeal. As a result of that splendid gathering, we have gained forty (40) new members, and we have, besides, twenty-five (25) more propositions on hand, so that we hope to have a membership of one hundred (100) in the very near future.

Newport News has a real goodhearted and liberal Jewish population, and all the members of our lodge are of excellent type. Among the most active members of our lodge are: Brother Sol Peyser, Captain Peyser's "sweet and gentle" brother, whose very heart and soul are in our work, as well as in every Jewish movement that reflects dignity upon our name. Brother E. J. Graff, a Colonel of our local Boy Scout Movement; he is just completing a magnificent Jewish Centre, at his expense, in loving memory of his sainted mother, and his highly esteemed brother, the late Attorney William A. Graff, who, until his death, was a dear, loyal, splendid Ben Brith, and a P. P. of our lodge; Brother A. Rosenbaum, our dear "old" stand-by, our "able" Treasurer; Lieutenant M. J. Mackler, one of the latest additions, with his great zeal, humorous disposition, and grand enthusiasm. Brother Captain Harry Reyner, too, deserves a "B'nai B'rith Medal". Though "too busy" to attend our business meetings, as a rule, he is thoroughly imbued with our Jewish ethics, and acts in private life as well as in public life accordingly. An editorial of one of our local papers, published on December 10th, dealing with "Jew and Gentile in Charity Work", and speaking of Newport News Jewry in laudable terms, contains the passage: "And the Jewish citizens of Newport News are very liberal in contributing to the various charity and civic objects outside their own circle. We have in mind, for example, a Jewish citizen who has been supporting for the past year, very largely out of his own private means, a blind couple of the gentile race in order to keep them off the streets as beggars".

The Jewish citizen referred to is Brother Harry Reyner. This fact was unknown even to the Rabbi of the congregation, of which Captain Reyner is a prominent member.

Brother D. Berlin is our retiring President; he is proud of the work accomplished by our lodge, during his administration.
—[Rabbi M. Speier.

BRISTOL, TENN.

B'nai B'rith Day was duly celebrated by Nat Strauss Lodge, No. 779, of Bristol Tenn., on December 26, 1920, which proved a most successful and enjoyable event. Almost the entire membership of the lodge and their families participated in the exercises of the day, which consisted of a lecture in the afternoon by Rabbi Samuel Kaplan of Meridian, Miss., and a reception at the residence of Brother Jos. Strauss in the evening. Much good was accomplished in the way of strengthening the interest in the work of our noble Order by an address by Rabbi Kaplan.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

INNESOTA LODGE, ST. PAUL, MINN.

eport of Entertainment Committee.

The Entertainment Committee of Minnota Lodge, No. 157, of St. Paul, Minn., hose Chairman is I. Brown, presented report at the annual meeting of the lodge, ving a resume of social and intellectual tivities held under the auspices of the dge as follows:

Washington Birthday dance at the St. aul Hotel.

Entertainment, "Land of Allah," with e assistance of the Ladies' Hadassah the Metropolitan on March 28.

Annual auto picnic at Excelsior, Minn., August 2.

Annual banquet at the Athletic Club November, 1920.

In addition to the foregoing two concerts Jewish music, a watermelon feed, two utch suppers and two smokers were held y the lodge.

Seven open meetings were held at which varied sort of high grade entertainment as arranged, including:

Reading of the "Melting Pot." Dancing sually followed the open meetings.

During the year the following lectures ere held under the auspices of the Inellectual Advancement Committee:

"Jewish Music," exemplified by Victrola oncert.

"Americanization," by Dr. F. G. Elliot.

"Symposium on Zionism," participated by Rabbi C. David Matt, Gus. Loeinger and Miss J. Felsenthal.

"The Melting Pot," by Mr. Kachel.

"The Committee of 48," by Dr. Stanley Rypins.

"Memorial Service for Departed Memers."

"Anti-Defamation and Its Growth," y Dr. Felix A. Levy of Chicago.

AAR SHOLEM LODGE, No. 154, PITTSBURG, PA.

Whereas, Almighty God has removed rom our midst our friend and brother, ouis Goldsmit, and

Whereas, Brother Louis Goldsmit was member of Saar Sholem Lodge, No. 154, . O. B. B., for a period of over forty ears, and

Whereas, During that entire period f time he was a most loyal member of ur lodge, a true Son of the Covenant, a ood Jew, a fine citizen and a loving usband and father, and

Whereas, His work and his life will be is greatest monument, and feeling that in some humble way we should make a minute of his death, be it therefore

Resolved, by Saar Sholem Lodge, No. 154, I. O. B. B., in special session assembled, That we express to the widow and children of our deceased brother our heartfelt sympathy, and do order that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the members of his family, to the Jewish Criterion, B'nai B'rith News and District Number Three Chronicle, I. O. B. B., and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of the lodge.—[Signed: Hyman Goldbloom, President; Dr. Joseph N. Katz, Secretary.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT LOWELL, MASS.

On Sunday afternoon, December 12, 1920, Lowell Lodge of the B'nai B'rith was instituted at Lowell, Mass.

The institution of the lodge took place in the afternoon, at which time a class of candidates was initiated and in the evening a banquet was held in honor of the event. A large number of out-of-town visitors were present, among them Mr. Henry Lasker, President of the District; A. M. Hillman, of Worcester, Mass., Second Vice-President of the District Grand Lodge; Judge Jacob Asher of Worcester, Mass.; E. M. Chase of Manchester; Maj. Jacob Frank; Dr. E. H. Poffscher of Worcester, Mass., and Rabbi Richard M. Stern of New Rochelle, N. Y.

The degree team of Worcester Lodge officiated at the initiatory services.

At the banquet Mr. B. S. Pouzzner acted as toastmaster and the speakers were Messrs. Max Goldman, Bennett Silverblatt, Solomon Baker, Moses Marks, Frank Goldman and Carl Lebowich.

One of the first acts of the new lodge was the appropriation of $50 to the funds known as the "Hoover European Fund."

TENTH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION BY FLINT LODGE.

Flint Lodge, No. 656, of Flint, Michigan, observed the tenth anniversary of its institution on Monday, December 19, 1920.

There was a wonderful crowd, splendid music, satisfying menus and a very live and active committee. In fact the whole affair was a success from start to finish.

Mr. Ben F. Wiener opened the program with an address of welcome and introduced the guest of honor and toastmaster of the evening, Mr. Morris Kobaker, of Toledo, Ohio, who responded to the ovation that was extended to him.

A number of telegrams were presented and among those were greetings from Rabbi Leo M. Franklin, of Detroit; Rabbi S. Mayerburg of Dayton and Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer, of DesMoines, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6.

Short talks were then made by numbers of speakers recounting the achievements of Flint Lodge during its existence of 10 years.

The Glee Club of Pisgah Lodge, of Detroit, rendered several selections and a musical program of varied numbers was successfully carried out.

Dr. A. D. Weiner, of Chicago, as representative of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, and one of its past presidents' delivered the main address of the evening which was both inspiring and to the point. In his address, Dr. Weiner pointed out how the Jew has always been the butt of all countries of the World; that the idea of blaming the Jew for the misfortune that befell the Jews was carried on unsuccessfully in Spain, France, Russia and Germany.

Mr. Milton M. Alexander of Detroit and J. J. Cummins, editor of the Jewish Chronicle of Detroit, spoke briefly.

The banquet was one great marvelous success. It was the greatest of its kind ever given by the Jewish community of Flint. All the arrangements were successfully carried out and the main credit is due to Mr. Ben F. Wiener.

Proceeding the banquet a meeting of the lodge was held at which a class of nearly 50 candidates was initiated by the Degree Team of Pisgah Lodge of Detroit, with the assistance of its Glee Club.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

The Sewing Circle of the Daughters of the Covenant at its initial meeting on Monday, December 13, formulated plans for meetings to be held each Monday afternoon for the purpose of sewing suitable garments for children of the Shelter Home or other needy children.

On Wednesday, December 15, the B'nai B'rith basketball team played the Jefferson high school quintet. The game proved to be a thriller as the Jeffersons are an exceptionally strong team.

On Thursday, January 4, the installation of officers of Portland Lodge of the B'nai B'rith and of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Daughters of the Covenant took place at the B'nai B'rith Building. This was the first meeting of the year and ushered in a season of activity in line with the good work of the past year.

Portland Lodge held its annual meeting on Tuesday evening, December 21, 1920, in the B'nai B'rith Building. All who were present, and there were large numbers, were amazed at the meeting on account of its unusual attendance and on account of the spirit of fellowship and brotherhood that pervaded it, making it a real fraternal gathering. The hall was saturated with activity, the walls being decorated with campaign banners on account of the election that was held, and the contest was limited to minor offices. In commenting upon that meeting of Portland Lodge, the Scribe editorialist said as follows:

"There was a spirited contest for office in the recent election in Portland Lodge, No. 65, of the B'nai B'rith. The significance of this phase of the lodge work cannot be overlooked. It means that young men of energy not only are willing but anxious to fill the minor offices of the lodge with the hope of rising in its service. This means that they are attracted to it and the attraction seems to lie in the fine spirit of real service which gives a real flavor to its meetings. This lodge is a man's organization in every sense of the word".

HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

The fifth annual B'nai B'rith Day was celebrated by Huntington Lodge, No. 795, of Huntington, W. Va., on Tuesday evening, December 14. Dr. H. J. Wolf was guest of honor and delivered an address on the work of the Anti-Defamation League. He also discussed some of the urgent problems of present-day American Jewry.

After the lecture, dancing was indulged in and refreshments were served by the ladies of the temple.

The event was open to the public and it was largely attended, and all present enjoyed a splendid evening.

At the meeting of the lodge held on Sunday, December 19, election of officers for the ensuing term took place.

NEW CASTLE, PA.

The annual ball of New Castle Lodge, No. 609, was held Thursday evening, December 31, and proved very successful. About 100 couples were in attendance, including visitors from Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Duquesne, Beaver Falls, Elwood City, Sharon, Butler, Fairmount, W. Va. and Youngstown, Ohio. Music was served by Marlings Melody Monarchs. At the conclusion of the program, refreshments were served.

Installation of officers was held on Sunday evening, January 9, at which Past-President of the District Grand Lodge, Marcus Feuchtwanger, officiated.

EZEKIEL LODGE, NEWARK, N. J.

The year 1920 was the most successful year that Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J., ever had. From the point of view of membership, its usefulness and services, the lodge has done admirably.

The Entertainment Committee of the lodge is arranging for the coming charity ball which is to take place on February 9. The lodge, through its Immigration Committee, filed a protest with the members of Congress from New Jersey against the proposed Johnson Immigration bill.

At the meeting of the lodge held on December 8, 1920, thirty-nine candidates were initiated by the degree team of the lodge.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

Benj. F. Peixotto Lodge, of Salt Lake City, gave a charity affair at which about $15,000 was netted for the suffering Jews of Europe. The B'nai B'rith Lodge was assisted by the Ladies' Society Club and the Temple Aid Society. The affair was concluded with a ball which was the closing event of the drive started some time ago for the relief of Jewish people made destitute by the war. All denominations gave loyal support to their movements and the B'nai B'rith through its office expressed itself as being pleased with the manner in which the people of Utah have come to the aid of the war victims.

HAGGAI LODGE, No. 132, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

On December 8, 1920, a big public B'nai B'rith meeting was held in the vestry rooms of the Temple Beth El under the auspices of the Haggai Lodge. The speakers were Judge A. K. Cohen of Boston, Mass., who spoke on the work of the Anti-Defamation League. Mr. Leo Lyons of Amos Lodge, Boston, Mass., Chairman of the Membership Drive Committee, Rabbi Samuel A. Gup of Temple Beth El, Providence, R. I., and Henry Lasker, President of District No. 1.

President Lasker presented Haggai Lodge, in behalf of the district, an engrossed resolution on the death of the late Col. Harry Cutler.

As a result of this meeting, fifty new applicants were secured. The meeting was ably presided over by the President, D. Gus Schneider, who is making every effort to make Haggai Lodge a shining light of the district.

HOREB LODGE, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

On Sunday, December 12, 1920, a well-attended meeting of Horeb Lodge, No. 25, took place. Mr. Philip Troup, postmaster of New Haven, delivered an address.

Election of officers for the ensuing term also took place.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Under the auspices of the Anti-Defamation League Committee of Springfield Lodge, No. 684, of Springfield, Mass., a public meeting was held on December 18, 1920, at which Mr. Samuel Dorf of New York delivered an appeal to all Jews to rise like the Maccabees of old and combat anti-Semites.

Other speakers were Nathan Gilman, Dr. Myron Wessler, President of Springfield Lodge, Nathan E. Goldstein, President elect of Springfield Lodge, and Henry Lasker, President of the District Grand Lodge.

Intermission entertainment included the following features: Music by the Junior Young Men's Hebrew Association orchestra, motion pictures of the B'nai B'rith Orphan Home in Cleveland, Ohio, singing by Miss Sadie Schreiber and the Home City quartet, and a piano selection by Miss Sybil Cooley.

DENVER, COLO.

On January 9, 1921, Denver Lodge, No 171, of Denver, Colo., held its regula meeting at which the installation of officers took place. The reports of the outgoing officers were presented and considered and short talks by the incoming officers were made. The lodge will hold a further meeting on January 23 at which time a class of candidates will be initiated.

At the December meeting of the lodge, fifty-four candidates were initiated. Remarkable gains in membership were made during the past year. From the reports of the standing committees submitted at the annual meeting of the lodge, it appeared that much practical, effective and constructive work was done.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The December 28 meeting, under the auspices of Minneapolis Lodge, No. 271, of Minneapolis, Minn., was remarkable from various standpoints. One of the important features of the meeting was th election of officers. President Josepl H. Schanfeld was reelected President b acclamation. Brother Schanfeld has demonstrated that he is an executive of th highest order and that it was largely through his efforts that the lodge has grown to its present strength. Delegates to the convention to be held in Des Moines were also elected.

The lodge further resolved that beginning with 1921, the dues of the members would be advanced to $12.00 per year.

The Executive Committee of the lodge is arranging for another large class initiation to be held at the West Hotel some time in January. The lodge resolved also to hold two meetings each month, one to be devoted to the interests of the lodge and the other to be in charge of the Intellectual Advancement and Social Committees.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

A very enthusiastic and well attended meeting of Houston Lodge, No. 434, was held on the evening of December 28, 1920. Important topics were discussed, namely, the election of officers and an appropriate B'nai B'rith Day celebration. The lodge considered the plan of a vigorous campaign for members to be instituted at the earliest possible time.

Brother S. J. Westheimer, Second Vice-President of the District Grand Lodgee presided at the meeting.

With the enthusiasm and interest manifested at the meeting and the splendid committee appointed to conduct the membership campaign, Houston Lodge expects to increase its membership to double its present size within a very short time.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF THE B'NAI B'RITH IN OMAHA.

The meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Omaha Lodge, No. 354, of the B'nai B'rith was held on Thursday, December 9. Contributions of $200 to the Jewish Federation of Omaha and $100 to the Anti-Defamation League were made. The Auxiliary decided to give a public dance during the month of February.

Rabbi Frederick Cohn spoke on "Why am I a Jew". The rest of the program consisted of two vocal solos by Miss Jewel Tucker of Bridgeport, Conn., accompanied by Miss Helen Dana, and a reading by Mrs. Simon of Duluth, Minn.

MENORAH LODGE, CARUTHERSVILLE, MO.

B'nai B'rith Day Celebration.

Menorah Lodge, No. 832, of Caruthersville, Mo., and Blytheville, Ark., held its B'nai B'rith Day celebration at Blytheville on Sunday, December 5, 1920.

The exercises were conducted under the auspices of the Sabbath-school of Osceola, Ark., under the direction of Brother L. K. Harwarg.

Mr. Russel Winner of Blytheville rendered splendid assistance with his refrains on the violin, accompanied by Miss Minnie Weinberg. The program included opening prayer and introduction, welcome address, violin solos, lighting of the Chanukah candles, with appropriate remarks and addresses.

At the close of the exercises, each child was presented with a box of Chanukah candles and a bag of sweets and fruits.

During the evening, an appeal was made on behalf of the Anti-Defamation League, resulting in the collection of a sum exceeding $100.00.

Menorah Lodge will cooperate with the Sunday-schools of the District on all Jewish holidays.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The first meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Abr. Lippman Lodge, No. 672, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was held on the afternoon of December 14 at the Hotel Chatham.

The President, Mrs. Simon Davis, opened the meeting in a few well-chosen words of welcome to the members and also explained the duties and aims of the Auxiliary.

After a short and interesting business session, a delightful program was given by Mrs. Leo Half, reader; Miss Rose Meitlein, violinist, and Miss Shoup, accompanist.

Mrs. Half's reading of "The Beautiful Story," by Wilde, was given in Mrs. Half's splendid manner, and as an encore Mrs. Half read "Mon Pierre," by Ansbary.

Miss Rose Meitlein, a young violinist of rare talent, accompanied by Miss Shoup, played "A Russian Legende" in a style displaying rare technique. For an encore Miss Meitlein played "A Russian Cradle Song."

Refreshments were served and the afternoon closed with a most pleasant social hour.

FORT WILLIAM, CANADA.

On Sunday, December 26, 1920, Rev. Herbert J. Samuel of Winnipeg, Canada, paid an official visit representing the District Grand Lodge to Lake Cities Lodge, No. 696, of Fort William, Ont., Canada. Brother Samuel found the lodge doing splendid work and in excellent condition. With a membership of only thirty-two, the lodge acquired recently its own building, and Brother Samuel had the pleasure of officiating at the dedication of the building for lodge purposes. The new home of the lodge will also be used for the Sabbath school which is being conducted under the auspices of the lodge. The school is doing splendid work and reflects great credit on the staff of voluntary teachers. The class consists of 125 children.

During the meeting of the lodge and after the installation of officers by Brother Samuel, he addressed the lodge on the work of the Order.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT SCHNEIDENMUEHL, GERMANY.

A new lodge of the Order, the eighty-fifth in the German district, was recently established and named for the well known pedagogue Salo Adler, who died as principal of the Jewish High School Philanthropin in Frankfurt am Main and had previously from 1883 to 1890 been principal of the Jewish school in that city. The lodge was installed by the delegates of the Grand Lodge Councillor Timendorfer and Dr. [illegible] besides the numerous guests from various Germany lodges. The President of the district, Dr. Timendorfer, referred in his address to the life and the activity of Salo Adler as an emblem of the object of the Order which aims to make of its members good Jews, good citizens and good men. He further referred to the important task which will be before the Salo Adler Lodge as a center from which the relations to the brothers in the district lost by Germany will radiate and which is destined to be a link with the [illegible] co-religionists in the east of Europe.

REGINA, CANADA.

Louis D. Brandeis Lodge, No. 833, of Regina, Canada, held a well attended meeting on Sunday, December 26, at which a class of nineteen candidates was initiated. The weather was most inclement, which fact made it impossible for the other candidates to appear for initiation.

The class initiation was arranged in honor of the celebration of B'nai B'rith Day. By special invitation Brother Sam Berg of Winnipeg was present and took charge of the special degree team and his work left a lasting impression to all those who were present.

The following day, December 27, the lodge held a most successful B'nai B'rith Day celebration, consisting of entertainment, addresses, dance and luncheon. Brother Sam Berg was the guest of the evening and delivered a highly interesting address on the general work of the Order, emphasizing particularly its activities to combat anti-Semitism.

OFFICIAL VISIT TO LODGES IN DISTRICT No. 3.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the Secretary of District Grand Lodge No. 3, Brother Joseph Herbach, will make a tour of the western section of Pennsylvania and all of West Virginia during the month of January. He will visit the lodges in the interest of the Anti-Defamation League and likewise in the interest of the district to increase the membership. This will mean work of every character, from visiting localities where no lodges are in existence to places where there are lodges. It means that the Secretary will be obliged to organize whatever movements may be found necessary to bring to the forefront the best possible interests of the Order.

A successful tour like the one contemplated depends largely upon the brethren in the various cities he will visit in creating interest that will prove fruitful. The members of the Order throughout the District are requested to assist in this work.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PHILADELPHIA.

The monthly meeting of Har Sinai Lodge, No. 8, of Philadelphia, was held at the Hotel Majestic on December 15, at which time sixty-five new candidates were initiated. The membership of the lodge is now over 400, and with the large list of candidates now awaiting initiation, it is confidently hoped that the lodge will number over 600 members within a short time.

Delegates to represent the lodge at the convention of the district to be held in Erie were elected, also officers for the ensuing term.

On Sunday evening, December 26, a banquet and dance were given at the Hotel Majestic, at which several hundred persons were in attendance. Judge Horace Stern and ex-Congressman J. Washington Logue were the guests of honor and addressed the audience. Honorable Jacob Singer, member of the Executive Committee of the Order for the district, and Mr. David Bortin, President of the District Grand Lodge, also were among the speakers. The address of welcome was made by Brother Wm. Lowenthal, President of the lodge. Brother Joseph W. Salus acted as Toastmaster.

EMANUEL LODGE—MONTGOMERY, ALA.

The greatest achievement in Jewish affairs of Montgomery, Ala., during 1920, was in a recent campaign for additional members for the B'nai B'rith. Sixty-five applications were secured, increasing the membership of Emanuel Lodge to more than 250.

Mr. Myron M. Goldman, of New Orleans, Secretary of District Grand Lodge, No. 7, recently visited Montgomery and personally conducted the initiation of a class of twenty members, assisted by Rabbi Jacob Mazur. Through the courtesy of the Standard Club, its beautiful ballroom was used for the ceremony which was unusually attractive.

Mr. Chas. F. Moritz, Past President of District No. 7, spoke interestingly of the history of the Order.

LAKE CITIES LODGE, FORT WILLIAM, CANADA

At a regular m[illegible] Lake Cities Lodge, held in De[illegible] Ft. William, Canada, a degree [illegible] formed. A class of seven can[illegible] initiated at the meeting.

Office of Executive Director, Independent Order B'nai B'rith, District Grand Lodge No. 2.

Date for 1921 Convention Set.

At a general meeting, held in Cincinnati, November 21, it was decided that the next annual convention of District No. 2 be held in St. Louis on May 8-9-10, 1921. President Rosenfeld urges that all lodges exert their best efforts to initiate, before December 31, all candidates already elected so that the lodge may have as large a representation as possible at the 1921 convention.

A Menorah Button for Every Ben B'rith.

Brother Leonard Freiberg, Secretary of District Grand Lodge No. 2, informs us that he is now able to supply Menorah buttons to the local lodges for eighteen cents apiece, in base metal, and for $1.20 apiece in gold. All orders for buttons should be sent to the D. Jacobs Sons Company, 811 Race St., Cincinnati, Ohio, accompanied by check or money order for the amount of buttons ordered. Every Ben B'rith should certainly possess a button and wear it with pride. It is suggested that lodges make a practice of presenting newly initiated members with a button.

"Let's Get a Member" Celebration.

Brother E. J. Schanfarber, Chairman of the Propaganda Committee of District Grand Lodge No. 2, has issued a call for a membership drive. He suggests, "Urge every member of your lodge to bring in the application of a new member. DO YOUR PART ALSO." We have observed that there are many men who would be glad to join the B'nai B'rith if only asked to do so. No doubt there are some of these in your community. GET BUSY.

Orphan Home Drive Progressing Nicely.

Partial returns in the Cleveland Orphans' Home Drive for $100,000 to make up the deficit in the 1920 budget show very encouraging results. A number of lodges, however, we have found, have been somewhat slow in getting started in this matter. Those in charge are sincerely urged to make every effort to make this drive a complete success in their respective communities and to DO IT NOW.

Youngstown, Ohio, Lodge Plans B'nai B'rith Temple.

In an address delivered before members of Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, I. O. B. B., Brother Emanuel Hartzell, one of the oldest Past Presidents of Mahoning Lodge, announced recently, at the thirty-seventh anniversary celebration of the organization of the lodge, that plans are under way to build a B'nai B'rith Temple in Youngstown for the use of the local lodge. Mahoning Lodge is to be congratulated. It is today one of the livest and most energetic lodges in the district and for a number of years past has shown continuous, healthy growth. May its good work and splendid example furnish inspiration to its sister lodges.

The Bulletin Wants Lodge News.

Keep us informed of all lodge activities so we can give them publicity in the Bulletin. Other lodges are interested in the activities of your lodge and will appreciate these news items sent in to us. The Bulletin belongs to you. MAKE USE OF IT.

AMOS LODGE, No. 221, BOSTON, MASS.

On December 13, 1920, Amos Lodge held a large, inspiring meeting. About four hundred were present and 152 candidates were initiated.

Henry Lasker, President of the district, paid an official visit to the lodge and complimented the members and officers upon the wonderful growth of Amos Lodge.

Addresses were delivered at this meeting by Rabbi Abrams of Boston and Rabbi Stern of New Rochelle, N. Y.

DANVILLE, ILLINOIS.

Danville Lodge, No. 568, of Danville, Ill., gave a dinner and dance at the Elks' Club on the evening of January 6, 1921. Invitations were extended to nearby lodges located in LaFayette, Ind.; Terre Haute, Ind.; Springfield, Ill.; Peoria, Ill.; Bloomington, Ill.; Champaign, Ill. and Indianapolis, Ind., to participate in the event and a number of them responded to the invitation.

JERICHO LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

At a meeting held on December 17 of Jericho Lodge, No. 44, of Pittsburgh, officers for the ensuing term were elected, as well as delegated to the coming Convention of the District Grand Lodge.

The Activities Committee of the lodge announced that Thursday evening, February 10, had been chosen as the date for the 1921 novelty dance of Jericho Lodge to be held at the Hotel Schenley.

Charles I. Cooper addressed the members of Jericho Lodge, No. 44, of Pittsburgh at its meeting on Sunday morning, January 9, held at the Moose Temple. His subject was, "Some Aspects of the Polish Jewish Situation."

FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

One of the most successful B'nai B'rith Luncheon Club meetings under the auspices of Isidor Straus Lodge, No. 519, of Fort Worth, Texas, was held on January 6th. The luncheon was given in honor of visiting Grand Lodge officers, Mr. V. H. Hexter of Dallas, President of the District Grand Lodge, and Rabbi David Lefkowitz of Dallas, both delivered splendid talks. Mrs. Morris sang, accompanied by Mrs. Weltman. L. F. Shanblum was chairman of the day; David Colton presided, and Dr. George Fox introduced Rabbi Lefkowitz. Mr. Shanblum introduced Mr. Hexter. The committee reported that all the lodges of the state had been wired to ask Senators Culberson and Sheppard to use their influence against the present immigration bill.

HOMESTEAD, PA.

Under the auspices of the Anti-Defamation League Committee of Homestead Lodge, No. 586 of Homestead, Pa., an elaborate program was successfully carried out on Sunday evening, January 2, 1921.

Large delegations from nearby cities, like Duquesne, Braddock and McKeesport, helped to swell the crowd to an unusually large number. The meeting was held in the synagogue and the program included a splendid musical treat by the cantor and choir of the Homestead Congregation.

The speaker of the evening was Rabbi A. H. Kahn, who discussed anti-Semitism and all its phases.

BEAR FLAG, SANTA ROSA, CALIF.

The installation of officers of Bear Flag Lodge, No. 846, of Santa Rosa, Calif., took place at a well attended meeting of the lodge on January 5, 1921.

Two candidates were initiated and several new applications for membership presented.

After the close of the regular order of business, a banquet was served under the auspices of the lodge at which Brother S. F. Rosenberg acted as Toastmaster. A number of short talks by members of the Order and invited guests were made and at the close of the evening a social hour was spent.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

At a meeting of Ebn Ezra Lodge, No. 47, of St. Louis, Mo., held on December 9, officers, trustees and delegates for the ensuing term were elected. Brother Emil Nathan was elected president of the lodge. Installation of officers will take place on January 13, 1921. Collections for the Anti-Defamation League by the lodge are now being made and up to date more than $500 has been secured.

B'NAI B'RITH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

Golden Gate Lodge, No. 129 of San Francisco, installed its officers at the January meeting of the lodge. The Past Grand President, Harry K. Wolff officiated at the ceremonies and at the close delivered an eloquent address. Other speakers were, the Secretary of the District Grand Lodge, I. J. Aschheim and Past President of the District Grand Lodge Henry Newburg and Brothers J. Stein and Nathan Newmark.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Jacob Lodge, No. 91, of Syracuse, N. Y., held a meeting, combined with a smoker, in honor of Mr. Henry Lasker of Springfield, Mass., President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1. Brother Lasker addressed the lodge on the work of the Order and especially emphasized its activities on the line of combatting Anti-Semitism in this country.

§.05
BW
R.R.
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS
BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII FEBRUARY, 1921 No. 6

Justice to the Jew

Sermon Preached by Rev. Hugh Robert Orr in All Souls Unitarian Church, Evanston, Ill., January 16, 1921

UPON a certain yesterday, many centuries ago, so the tale is told, a young man, moved by that ever restless spirit of youth within him, was growing impatient with the narrow vision of his ancestry. He was feeling that sense of over-restraint which the young life always feels where there is no room for the imagination to wander and for the mind to grow beyond the narrow confines of a dead past. He was dreaming dreams that would have dismayed the neighbors he had told them.

One day his father, whose craft was that of an image maker, left his son to keep shop in his absence. When, after an hour, the parent returned, he saw a sorry sight. Every idol in the place had been demolished, save one, the smallest of them all, who now stood grim and mute as ever, but with a weapon of offense in his hand.

"What does this mean?" cried the excited father.

"He did it", replied the son, pointing to the only remaining figure on the shelf.

"Impossible! Impossible!" roared the old man, "You know well enough that no image could ever do any such thing".

"Well, then", responded the son, seeing he was about to accomplish his purpose, "If all these creatures are but impotent, lifeless things why do our people buy them and worship them as gods?"

And then with all the impetuousness of his youthful spirit he told the father how he revolted against the emptiness of the popular religion of his day; how he loathed the superstitions of his people and the orthodox priesthood; how it seemed to him that there must be something better and truer than all this old-time ritualism, something more reasonable to a young mind, and more ennobling than this indolent conformity to outworn creeds.

"We must go", he said, "away from all this, away anywhere, so it be far from this heart-sickening, mind-enslaving worship of falsehood, somewhere to reason, and freedom, and unfettered faith, and life abounding."

And so it was that this young, this heterodox free-thinker, this unbeliever who believed more than they all, and in whose skepticism faith found a higher allegiance, one day gathered up tenderly the old man, took a few others nearest of kin, turned his back upon the little shop with its sun-dried faces, left behind him home and friends and rich lands and what to him was an abominable religion, and turned his face to the wild and crag-crowned hills of Canaan.

They call him Abraham, the faithful. And indeed, whose faith is so great as his who dares cast down all gods of the past to turn his thought earnestly and reverently unto those far fields of unexplored reality, confident that the noble truer God is yet to be found?

But all this was very long ago—so long we do not know how much of it is tradition and how much is history. Yet one thing we do know, that in time the posterity of this early founder grew to be a wonderful people, living in that narrow stretch of land that lies between the emerald waters of the Mediterranean and the sunburnt sands of the desert to the eastward. And here at this crossroads of the world, where passed from age to age the battalions of Babylon, the armies of Alexander, the Princess of Persia and the thundering legions of the Caesars, here came to flower an immoral civilization, only to be crushed again and again by the heel of the mighty, but which, in that crushing and scattering abroad, gave its perfume to sweeten the soul of a domain-drunken world.

For centuries this little race clung to the fastnesses of Canaan's hills, tending their flocks, building their white stone villages, and worshipping a better God than the world had ever known. For centuries their singers sang of the beauty and power of the Eternal in all the works of nature's art. For generations their wise men pondered and shed light upon those eternal questions that lie deep in the wonderment of every human soul. Unafraid, their prophets spoke unto kings and princes as well as unto the lowliest transgressor, and always the great words that rang out unto the guilty nations were, "justice", "righteousness", and "mercy".

What age shall not live to bless the name of Moses the liberator, and of Isaiah for his idealistic fervor, his dire denunciations, and his pleadings that sing themselves as sweet as any mother's song! And then at last, as soon Israel's day would see the shadows of the twilight hour, there came that crowning glory as of a golden setting sun, and Jesus of Nazareth stood with gentle hands outstretched unto the multitudes, speaking those immortal and compelling words of truth and life.

There is a debt far greater than any war debt the world has ever known. It is the debt civilization owes to the Jewish race. The endless millenniums shall never erase it, nor ever shall any historical science be able to tell us the sum of it. Of course, they are a human people and they have their faults and prejudices as well as the rest of us. But every race has its contribution to make unto the good of all, and be it said of the Jew that he, one of the least of all, numerically, has made the finest contribution.

Nor is his glory all ancient history. He is with us today, and that is what some small-minded people do not like. Possessing no longer a land of his own, he is become a citizen of the world and of every country. And in each he is doing his creative work. On every page of modern history his name appears. His genius is familiar to artists of all lands. His poets have ranked high wherever they have sung, and there have been many of them in Russia, Austria, Denmark, Germany, France, England and America.

Among modern men of letters are such as George Brandes. And there is Israel Zangwill, born in a Ghetto hovel, and at the age of thirty-five recognized as one among the very foremost of English novelists and critics. It was he who said, "The mission of the Jew will never be fulfilled until the Christians are converted to the religion of Jesus".

In drama and on the stage the soul of this people has also found itself. The Jewish Rachel was at one time the greatest living actress. And in music the world has been made abundantly richer because of the Damrochs, Offenbach, Strauss, Rubenstein, Rosenthal, Joseph Hoffman, and the great Mendelssohn. When Wagner produced an opera to show the Teuton superiority over the Jew it is said "he was dumbfounded when, on the night of the performance, he discovered that all the first violins were in the hands of Jews".

From Philo of Alexandria down to the present time Judaism has furnished its full quota of philosophers. Upon a certain bust of one of their greatest thinkers of recent times is written this inscription:

MOSES MENDELSSOHN
The greatest sage since Socrates
His own Nation's glory
Any Nation's ornament
He died
As he lived
Serene and wise

The books of science are replete with Jewish names and the annals of jurisprudence and statesmanship know him well. How many times, indeed, he has honored our legislative and judicial offices! As for the pulpit, our whole land knows and respects the names of such as Wise and Hirsch. And in constructive philanthropy and human betterment the Jewish people are teaching us many things.

Yes, it is a very great debt and we could never pay the half of it. But right here comes the tragic truth of it all. In the past Christendom hasn't even recognized that debt. For centuries Christians have been so blinded with ignorant predjudice that they could not realize the truth. Worse than that, they have deemed it their duty to despise and despoil their Jewish brother, yes, to damn the entire race of him they blatantly call their redeemer. And how have they gone about it? Why, true to their barbaric nature, with the sword, of course, and with fire, and the political ban and social ostracism.

Long ago it began and there are some yet so ignorant that they would continue it today. The early massacres which the Christians perpetrated upon the Jews are almost unbelievable and are too horrible to detail. But for the evidence we have only to consult our own Christian records. Here is the way a papal bull reads which was issued by Martin V, February 20, 1422: It sometimes happens that Christians, in order that they may extort money from the said Jews and deprive them of their goods and substance and cause them to be killed, invent and assert (at times of plague and other calamities) that the Jews have poisoned the wells and mixed human blood with their unleavened bread, they say that it is in consequence of these crimes, which they unjustly ascribe to the Jews, that the calamities are caused. Hence the population is roused against the Jews and massacres them and persecutes them and afflicts them in many ways." This is but one of many documents that tell the terrible story. In a letter concerning the massacres at Kishneff, Tolstoy wrote, "The outrages at Kishneff are but the direct result of the propaganda of falsehood and violence conducted by our government and the clergy".

When the Christian Church became dominant in the later Roman Empire, it is recorded, the Christian emperors deliberately deprived the Jews of the right to serve the state, and by the year 418 they were excluded from all public employments that could in any way give them authority over the "true believers". They were not allowed, under penalty of death, to make converts, yet every encouragement was given to Christian efforts to proselyte. Jews were excluded from citizenship in the Roman state. Innocent III adopted a plan of enforcing the Jews to wear a badge of infamy. The callings for which they were eligible were more and more restricted until at length the only methods by which they could earn a living were usury and pawnbroking. It appears that the Christians needed the Jews' money.

For fifteen hundred years these people have suffered insolence, moral segregation and death at the hands of the Christians. And what is it all about? "Why, they are Christ-killers", bellow the ignorant devotees of Christian prejudice. And this has been the only excuse the Christian Church has ever been able or has ever cared to give for the way it has broken Jesus' law of brotherly love and slandered and killed His people.

But men who nave an intelligent understanding of history no longer lay this accusation upon the Jewish people, for they perceive the far greater probability that back of the infuriated mob and the soldiers was the hand of Rome. Even if a few priests did have something to do with the crucifixion they in no wise represent the Jewish people. Jesus was a Jew and we are told that on every occasion the people heard Him gladly. The Jewish people never "rejected" Jesus. They even desired to make Him king, or at least a large number who knew Him did. But these things were Caesars.

"Oh", says the orthodox church, "but the Jews have not accepted Jesus as the divine Son of God". Yes, that is where the trouble lies. The Jew had gone too far in his theology to listen to a borrowed pagan myth about a god miraculously born of a virgin. It was repulsive to him. But to the more superstitious Gentile mind, filled as it was already with many such legends of incarnations and miraculous-birth stories of savior-gods, this absurdity about an "only beogtten" son of God, born in a miraculous manner, was much more interesting than the more reasonable conception of the Jewish people.

And so there came to be what was known as "Christianity". Christianity as a system is not and never was the religion of Jesus. Christianity as a system is an agglomeration of absurd theological dogma, infiltrated with all kinds of pagan superstitions, all gathered about the person of Jesus, so surely obscuring the great teacher, with its falsehoods, that it is only with difficulty that the probable Jesus can be discovered at all.

What Christian theology has done to Jesus is worse for the world than what his crucifiers did. It stole Jesus, the Jew, from Judaism, dressed Him up in a strange and bewildering costume more disgraceful than any crown of thorns, fabled a false pedigree for Him, and then audaciously insisted that the Jewish race must accept this impossible caricature in place of their kinsman of Nazareth. And if the Jews would not fall down and worship this strange pagan Christ that the Christians had substituted for the real Jesus, then they and their children should be sought out and tortured unto death.

Many orthodox Jews, knowing little of the real Jesus, but knowing well how for centuries their race has been excluded and hounded and murdered in the name of one Jesus Christ, have a horror of that name as of some spectral devil who is responsible for all their centuries of suffering. Can you blame them? And whose fault is it?

To be sure, Christianity does profess to embody the teachings of Jesus, and in a way it practices them. That way may be judged in part at least from some of the things I have already pointed to. And true it is that today Christian theology is beginning to divest itself very cautiously of some of its pagan superstition. Some of its younger and better educated ministers do come dangerously near repudiating some of the falsehoods of the Christian theology at times. But when you remove from Christianity all the ignorant superstitions, what do you have left? Why, you have left simply the teachings of Jesus, which are no more Christian than they are Jewish, for they are Judaism at its best. Is it not about time that Christendom should lay aside its superstitions and be converted to the religion of Jesus? When it does it will then realize how far it was from the way of the great Teacher when it was murdering His kinsmen, or ever anybody's kinsmen.

And yet the day of persecution is not entirely past for there are yet some brutally minded folk who worship at the shrine of race prejudice. Many of us have felt since the war that everything possible should be done to foster a spirit of forbearance, racial friendship, and world brotherhood. At least, nothing should

(Continued on page 11.)

The Idea of Humanity

By Dr. Alfred Goldschmidt, Berlin

THE following lines are written as a comfort for those who, seeing the desolation of the morals of life, are inclined to despair of the progress of humanity. The misfortune of the world has brought about a universal hatred of peoples and men: the victors hate the vanquished ones who are "responsible" for the war, the vanquished ones hate the victors, who seek them out in order to make "reparation". In the individual countries the parties are incensed with hatred against each other, each regarding the world upheaval from a different standpoint, expecting different results. The laborer hates the capitalist, the capitalist hates the laborer; and the Jew is hated most intensely by all. Naturally so. The Jews have ever been, in all ages and epochs, the most ready object of attack upon whom the ire and the venom of the masses was ever unloaded; and the impelling force of all this is stupidity and obtuseness or political demagogery which places success of party above the aspirations of humanity.

The Jews, therefore, are deeply interested in the progress of humanity and the elimination of vile passions, which are the natural product of the abjection of the age. The following lines will, therefore, shed especial light upon such phases as shall prove that the idea of humanity did not vanish from the thought of men, but that there are parties and individuals —and they are among the best—who are anxious that it rise to triumphant success.

He who is inclined to consider the world-war, with its devilish attacks on land and sea, in the air and in the depths, as something that cannot be surpassed and outdone in the unchaining of the human passions, needs only to remind himself how war was conducted in olden times, how those bearers of historically famous names tarnished the bright lustre of their fame through the most brutal cruelties perpetrated upon their captured enemies.

[illegible] of antiquity, it was considered to be an immutable law that [illegible] and good [illegible] somata kai [illegible] by all means to the [illegible] Jacob Burckhardt, Griechische Kulturgeschichte). It happened often among the Romans that captives of war were flung into the cage of wild beasts to be torn by them (L. Friedlander "Darstellung aus der Sittengschichte Roms in der Zeit von Augustus bis zum Ausgange des Antonius," Leipzig, 1865). The Byzantian Emperor, Basilius II, caused, in the year 1014, the eyes of fifteen-thousand captive Bulgarian warriors to be gored (F. Gregorovius "History of the City of Athens During Medieval Ages"). Even more cruel tortures were committed by Frederik Barbarossa against twelve Milanesian captives (Alwin Schultz, "Court Life During the Age of Troubadours"). During the times of Frederick the Great, the injured in war could in no wise claim any indemnity from the state.

The time did not arrive as yet when the teachings of Treitschke justifying a double standard of morals, one for the use of the state and another for private use, could be regarded as universally discarded. For the use of private morals, Treitschke would permit the employment of the Kantian categoric imperative. For the state, however, he formulates as the highest moral law: Keep your own ground (H. v. Treitschke, "Politic", published by Max Corniselius, Leipsic, 1897). Might is, according to him, the sole object of the state.

To what results such notions will lead, the world-war has demonstrated clearly enough. Out of a people of poets and philosophers, out of political infirmity and disruption there came into being a mighty Germany. Poetry, art, science, military achievements placed it in the first rank of nations. By an over-estimation of the idea of might it burst. From the political needs for power by our erstwhile opponents, originated the demands for self-determination of peoples, for the freedom of nations, wherewith the role of Poland, as being chained hand and foot by Germany, could be so nicely proven. Hypocrisy, as is well known, is the concession which wickedness will make to virtue. With moral notions, you know, [illegible] operates [illegible], even in political [illegible]. The league-of-nations idea is the [illegible] move forward upon the road of self-determination of nations. We know very well that in its present form it is nothing more than a mere farce. But after the notion has once taken hold of high politics, it can not disappear entirely out of it. Both conquered ones and victors are deeply interested in the maintaining of the idea in its pristine purity. They feel that only then does high politics deserve its name, when it strives after the realization of the aims of humanity.

Says Prof. Walter Geatz, of Leipsic: "Even if we should be rightless and ineffectual for the present in this League of Nations, we must nevertheless prove to the world that the spirit of thinkers and poets, which was admired even by our enemies, is as much alive in the Germany of today as it was a century ago, and that we not alone welcome that which is ideal, but that we are its most ready road-builders. Real idealism and necessity of practical politics are blended here with each other, and it would be again very much to our detriment if the world should suppose us acting only under the compulsion of political conditions. In our short-sightedness we made plenty of mistakes; it is about time that the period of our apprenticeship were ended. How far we may proceed upon the new road is something that is undiscernible for the present. But proceed we must by all means."

We, the eternally disinherited ones of fate, we, who have carried with us and before us the idea of the spirit as the only weapon against a world of force during the thousand year long round of Jewish affliction, we feel most intensively the transient fate of Germany and the necessity of a spiritual restoration of the world.

It is a redeeming feature, giving deep satisfaction, that among the many agitatory institutions that are being organized among us to rend asunder the parties and denominations, there are a great number of associations of a kind that are aiming at a moral and spiritual regeneration. Besides the alliance for the League of Nations, we may mention here the League for Regeneration, in which there are associated a number of prominent men and women. In his announcement "Moral Dictature", Karl Scheffler calls upon all compatriots to bring about a moral course of life in every vocation in order to elevate the standard of the fatherland, avoiding, however, everything that might tend towards disunion.

The Volks-Craft-Bund pursues similar aims under the leadership of the well-known writer, Dr. Bruno Wille. He manifested practical work when he issued thousands of pamphlets against Anti-Semitism. In one little pamphlet, "German Spirit and Jew Hatred" (Kulturverlag, Berlin, W/30-1920), 'Declarations by Non-Jewish Contemporaries,' he has published utterances of well-known personages which, to a no small extent, are refreshingly unprejudiced manifestations. It is also worthy of notice that, contrary to former times, there are among them a great number of clergymen of both Christian denominations.

A Berlin pastor, Franko, of the Holy Cross Church, admits that the Jews have performed an abiding service by many clarifying expositions which only headstrong prejudice can deny. "The Jews have, indeed, taught us to be a little more critical in our habitual over-estimation of the past. For example: Was the life of the German people, during the two thousand years of its existence, ever so worthy in human estimate that we could dare wish something like it for our children's share? Was not the life of the masses rather one of serfdom and hounding, vegetating in misery, in order that a thin layer thereof might present the sometimes tedious, sometimes thoughtless comedy called history? If we disregard the momentary agitation we can readily assert: Our age has higher ideals than the age of our fathers, because ours are more true. And those who have helped us to attain all this are the modern Jews with their peculiar talent for keen, presumptionless thinking, which shirks from no consequences whatsoever. Such talent deserves no scolding, but rather appreciation."

At this instant we remember with gratitude those non-German heroes who fought and suffered for the idea of humanity in spite of being subjected to bitter animosity in their own country, in spite of contempt, scorn and persecution suffered by them. As the foremost of these we mention the Frenchman, Romain Rolland. Who is Romain Rolland? William Herzog thus answers the question: "Less of an artist more of a man of high order. A fighter. Full of brotherliness. A disciple of Tolstoy." During the entire period of the war Rolland fought for peace. He endeavored to get in touch with German minds, sought to get in contact with Gerhard Hauptman. Hauptman did not answer. In France he attracted the attention of the States Attorney General. That did not disturb him. And now his writings are being devoured by thousands in Germany. He seeks to view life as it is—with its miseries and joys—and love it. He occupies himself with the foremost minds which human culture has produced, and it is noteworthy that he does not confine himself to one nation. He, the Frenchman, describes Beethoven, Michelangelo, Tolstoi, the German, the Italian, the Russian.

Next to him Henri Barbusse may be mentioned. His novel "The Fire", of which 230,000 copies have been issued is intented to abolish war by its vivid description of the realities of war. His novel "Clarté", the militaristic hero of which the war has turned into a pacifist, has become the basis of an Association of a similar name with the purpose of uniting the best minds of all nations. The extended hand from France was not grasped immediately. Bernard Kellerman was the first to take up the call. In December, 1919, the Clarté Society sent its secretary, Paul Colin, to Berlin. At a meeting of representatives of the idea of peace, after the address of Colin, Albert Einstein spoke, as the representative of science.

In England, Keynes, disregarding nationalistic advantages, gave expression to manly words against the "treaty of peace", while Norman Angell was threatened by an angry mob at Cambridge. Bertrand Russel and Israel Zangwill of England work in the same spirit. Of Belgium, where the advocacy of the spirit of reconciliation is really not easy, we mention such a name as that of Henri Van De Velde. America furnishes the name of its foremost woman, Jane Addams. In Italy, Roberto Bracco fights; in Switzerland, A. Forel; in Sweden, Ellen Key, Selma Lagerlof; in Denmark, Sophus Michaelis; in Austria, Stefan Zweig. They all fight the gigantic battle of awakening the conscience of the nations.

In this connection we must not forget the philanthropic endeavors of the Quakers food-kitchens, the provision for children, captives of war, and the middle class made by foreigners, especially Americans, insofar as it expressed itself in an elevating manner. The fight for the recognition of all human rights, the idea of humanity, makes but slow progress. This is not surprising at all since it must be waged against all the powers of property, against tenacity. Walter Kinkel ("The Idea of Humanity", study about the promotion of Humanity, published by Fritz Eckhardt, Leipsic, 1908, p. 147) endeavors to explain the tragicalness of the situation in the following words: "The equipped ones do not fight, the fighters are not equipped."

But the idea is marching on. It cannot disappear and will never disappear. What kind of heritage leaves might, mere big, political might? What kind of a legacy? Kinkel (ibid. P. 144-5) refers us to the example of the old classical states of Sparta and Athens. Of the state of Sparta, founded upon might, the "steady war-camp", nothing is left but a memory. Athens, however, lives, because its existence was rooted in eternity. To be sure its outward form, too, fell apart. Yet it lives, because it sought the essence of its soul not in might, but in the beautiful. Its soul lives, is immortal, imperishable. Nearly eight decades our Order strives to spread the idea of humanity, and four decades thereof in Germany. It is part of a larger community which is struggling for the last two thousand years for the recognition of the selfsame idea. When a young student, the writer of these lines, helped organize the first Jewish society to combat Anti-Semitism, the memorial of the young society had the following hopeful words of conclusion: "The genius of the century—it was the 19th—carries before us the torch. The beginning of the twentieth century has nothing to be proud of. The Order and the Jewish community can enlarge upon the hope of our student-years regarding the idea of humanity and exclaim: 'The genius of every century carries the torchlight before us.' "

LATEST FIGURES UPON THE RECORD OF AMERICAN JEWS IN THE WAR.

Extract from Third Report of Office of Jewish War Records, November 14, 1920.

From all present indications the record of Jewish service in the war appears to have been remarkable in these respects:

1. The total number of Jews in the service during the war may be conservatively estimated, on the basis of available evidence, at from 200,000 to 225,000.

2. Proportionately, although they constituted but three per cent of the total population of the United States, they appear to have contributed more than four per cent of the armed forces of the United States which, on Armistice Day, numbered 4,800,000.

3. The volunteer spirit appears to have been the principal factor in this contribution. According to the best evidence there were nearly 40,000 Jewish volunteers in the service, or practically twenty per cent of the total Jewish contingent. This is a record unexcelled, as far as now known, by any other element of the American population.

4. The record of honors conferred upon Jewish soldiers for valor in action is notable. No less than 1,100 citations for valor are on file in the office of Jewish war records. Of these 723 were conferred by the American command, 287 by the French, 33 by the British, and 46 by various other allied commands. Of the most valued Congressional Medal of Honor—of which only 78 have been conferred to date—at least three were awarded to Jewish soldiers. The Distinguished Service Cross is worn by at least 150 American Jews, the rare French Medaille Militaire by four American Jews, and the Croix de Guerre by 174 Jews in the A. E. F.

5. There were nearly 10,000 Jewish commissioned officers in the several branches of the service. In the army there were more than 100 colonels and lieutenant-colonels, more than 500 majors, 1,500 captains, and over 6,000 lieutenants. In the Navy there were over 900 Jewish commissioned officers, the highest rank reached being that of Rear-Admiral. In the Marine Corps there were over 100 Jewish commissioned officers, including one Brigadier-General.

6. The total of Jewish casualties, according to the latest estimates, was from 13,000 to 14,000, including about 2,800 who made the supreme sacrifice.

CHRISTIAN CLERGY COMBATS ANTI-SEMITISM.

On Sunday, January 30, 1921, a resolution expressing faith in the Jew as a citizen and as a patriot was read in every Methodist church in Denver.

This action on the part of the churches followed an address on "Anti-Semitism" which Mr. George A. Levy delivered the preceding week at a meeting of the clergymen of that denomination. Mr. Levy's appeal for a square deal for the Jew resulted in the adoption of a resolution by the clergymen and the decision that each minister should preach upon it and read the resolution to his congregation condemning Anti-Semitism.

The resolution reads as follows:

"At the Methodist Preacher's meeting recently, Mr. George A. Levy, a citizen of Denver, presented the fact that publicity was being given to certain alleged documents, through the Dearborn Independent and otherwise, which were extremely unfair and of such nature as to arouse race and religious antagonism. These documents or "protocols" purported to prove that the Jews in conjunction with the Free-Masons had planned a world conquest and the overthrow of organized government, the Bolshevism of Russia being one result.

"After hearing Mr. Levy it was the sense of the meeting that sufficient evidence had been brought forward to show the alleged documents to be false, the charges ridiculous and really unworthy of consideration. It was therefore authorized that such a statement as this be drawn up in brief form to be read from all the pulpits Sunday morning, as we believe the Christian religion should teach the abolition of religious and race discriminations and must squarely oppose such unfair and false propaganda."

Mr. Levy intends to speak on the same subject before the County Ministerial Association at Fort Morgan, Colo., on February 15, the Commercial Club at Sterling, Colo., on February 16, and before the faculty of the University of Colorado at

News From Austria

December 10, 1920.

IFE at present, in the city of Vienna, reflects the most glaring contrasts. ngside of the bitterest poverty, which nable to provide the barest necessities the sustenance of the miserable life, ades the most luxuriant, voluptuous hes, for which there exists no check, high-cost, knowing no scarcity." Such the preface which the Secretary of Confederacy for Social Administration ected to the wealthy ones of Vienna, inaugurate general activities for aiding numberless thousands of starving ildren. Not Christmas toys does he for them. He would like to provide em with the most primitive necessities life, warm underwear, shoes and ckings, for the cold winter weather.

Foreign countries have taken a very eat interest in our children. The tivities of the American Children's d Society cannot be praised over much. d others, too, are doing a great deal relieve the need. But all that is not fficient, as the number of forsaken ildren has been growing, especially nong the Jews, which owing to the ctims of pogroms, have been increased eatly. To provide for them in the wish orphan asylums is absolutely possible. They are all filled, and the entual vacancies are not enough to elter even the smallest part. To place em in "public institutions," which in uth are Catholic, is equally not feasible, cause, first of all these, too, are overled. Moreover, if perchance they would accepted, the children would be exsed to great indignities owing to their ing Jews. Due to these circumstances forts are being made to place them in ivate families, pay for their board d supply them with the necessary ovisions. It is to be hoped that enough milies will be found to provide in this ay for a greater number of orphans.

Latterly the evil has been growing ore serious, being that the number of nprovided for children was augmented y the steadily increasing numbers of nprovided grown-ups, which are streamg incessantly to Vienna from Poland nd Hungary, either to find an opening to arn a living or making it a stopping tation on their journey to Palestine. ery few, however, have the means to ontinue on their road. Thus most of hem remain in Vienna and thus increase he prevailing misery. On account of he stagnation it is impossible to find work or them and very considerable means ust be provided, therefore, to keep them alf-way above board. The members f the Viennese Lodges are earnestly ndeavoring to relieve the misery, and n conjunction with other Jewish corporations to provide at least the most eeded necessities of life. But in spite f the best efforts the misery remains ery great.

The situation brought about by the war and its social and political results proves clearer and clearer that there is need for a vocational change for our Jewish youth. The efforts of the Jewish national council of this place, to direct the Jewish youth upon agriculture and the trades, finds more and more imitation. A very interesting experiment is being made just now in Czecho-Slovakia. An undertaking based upon commercial foundations is to make possible the beginning of the vocational shift for our Jewish youth. A society with a capital of 10,000,000 crowns, with limited security, is to be organized for the purpose of renting a leather factory in Goltsh-Jenikau. To this factory in which only Jews would be employed there will be attached a Jewish industrial school. It is to be hoped that the undertaking will succeed and find imitators also in other fields of production.

This is very desirable as the conditions in Czecho-Slovakia are by far not as favorable as it was believed till lately. In Prague and other German cities of Bohemia there were quite considerable disturbances in which Jewish inhabitants have also suffered to a great extent. The mob entered into the Jewish Council house and caused a great deal of damage. On account of this the carrying on of the official business is greatly aggravated. The library and the matriculation register were brought again in order, but the valuable archives cannot be used for a long time. Great damage was also done to the venerable synagog-Relics, which are of inestimable value not only to Jews but to the world of culture at large. They were thrown out to the street and there destroyed amidst the derision of the mob. That many Jewish merchants suffered damage is but natural, as such is always the final result of street tumults.

Our brethren in Prague are in deep mourning over the death of Brother Grand Master, Dr. Moritz Hammerschlag, whose work in behalf of the Order was very creditable. It was he who through his outstanding mental talents and his zeal and devotion to our motto has introduced this work of the Order in District X. Owing to his excellent address, delivered by him in March, 1895, he gave the impetus to the organizing of Wien Lodge, and thus introduced the Order into Austria. In him the District loses one of its founders, its first and present Grand Master, and Bohemia Lodge her founder and President from 1894 and 1904. His untiring devotion to duty, his never failing cheerfulness and self-denying work for the aims and interest of the Order, will insure for him an immortal and grateful remembrance.

No less deep is our sorrow for our brother, Grand Treasurer Dr. Rudolf Bloch, who died suddenly two weeks later. For fifteen years he represented Praga Lodge on the Grand Committee. During these years he has not only ministered to his very responsible duties as Grand Treasurer, but devoted his eminent talents to every kind of necessary work for the Grand Lodge in a very successful manner. After he was a member for six years in Bohemia, he was sent by her as a charter member to the newly organized Praga, and after one year he was elected her President, which was one of the most important years.

His purposeful judgment, his readiness and ever willingness for action and his noble-mindedness have won for him the love and honor of all the brethren. The pride of his brother Attorneys he was not less the pride of Jewry and of the Order. He will never be forgotten by those who knew him. Sorrow for the departed brothers is deeply felt in the entire District, especially here in Vienna where we had ample opportunity during the decades of our working together to learn to love and to honor them.

The Viennese Lodges are working diligently in the spirit of the Order. The meetings take place at regular intervals and all of these are replete with earnest deliberations.

The Grand Lodge Committee has inaugurated an agency for the relief of the very seriously menaced middle classes in conjunction with the Viennese Alliance Israelite and the society for saving of abandoned children. A committee was formed out of these three associations, whose business it shall be to provide for those that are engaged in brainwork and clerical work—provision, clothing, underwear and shoes at a nominal price—so as to spare them the humiliation of accepting alms. The committee is now busying itself with the collection of funds and the finding of places where they can buy cheaply in order to make it possible for them to sell to the applicants at a price of about from 40 to 60 per cent of the purchase price. The difference will be made up from the abundant donations they expect to receive. Our brother, Ex-President, Dr. Kohn, is at the head of this committee who, working in cooperation with brother Grand Master Prof. Dr. Ehrman, and brother Ex-President, Dr. Ascher, has already provided more than 300 families of officials and functionaries with clothing, underwear, fuel, etc. It is to be hoped that the donations placed at the disposal of the committee will be much more numerous so that where till now only hundreds have been helped they will be able to supply thousands.

The activities inaugurated by the youngest of our Lodges, Massadah, is not less praise-worthy. She organized the Wika, an association of persons belonging to the middle classes composed mainly of women and young girls, to employ their leisure time in constructing articles of a practical or artistic value and sell them at reasonable prices. An exhibition of the finished articles was opened to the general public during the month of December and the sale of the exhibited objects is now being carried on.

Unusually active is also our brother, the Ex-President Dr. Samuely of Eintracht Lodge. As during the entire period of the war so now, during this season he is also successful in his efforts to supply the hundreds of children that are wards of the day nurseries, with warm clothing, underwear and shoes.

Wednesday, December 8, the Jewish Young Peoples League arranged a splendid Chanuccah feast and treated the children participating in it to a fine luncheon. A more beautiful festival is hardly imaginable. The wives of our brothers sent us rich donations, and so each one of the children received some useful article. Thus not only the Chanuccah lights but more so the sparkling eyes of the children radiated joy, filling the hearts of those present with happiness.

Wahrheit Lodge has also inaugurated splendid activity. She took under her protection the Jewish Museum and has infused into it new life. All the brethren of the Lodge have joined as members of the society for the maintenance of the Jewish Museum supporting it very eagerly and, under the guidance of our brother, the President, Court Councillor Dr. Frankfurter, they are arranging for lectures every four weeks which are attended by the best classes of Viennese Jews.

The four Vienna Lodges have unitedly raised the sum of 20,000 crowns and have appropriated it for necessary supplies for the newly organized Jewish Teachers' Seminary.

FULL TEXT OF PALESTINE MANDATE—JEWS ARE SECURED WITH THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A NATIONAL HOME.

Other Communities Fully Protected—Zionists the Recognized Agents for Jewish People—Jews May Construct Public Works, Develop Natural Resources.

(London, J. C. B. Service.)

The following is a copy of the mandate allotted to Britain by the Supreme Council of the Allies at San Remo. The text was submitted to the League of Nations for confirmation by the Right Honorable James Arthur Balfour on December 6. The text gives the San Remo resolution, embodying these terms of the Balfour Declaration:

"His Majesty's government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

The text then continues:

"Whereas, Recognition is thereby given to the historical connection of the Jewish people in Palestine for the purpose of reconstructing their national home; whereas, the Allied Powers have selected His Britanic Majesty as Mandatory; whereas, the terms of the mandate have been formulated in the following terms and has been submitted to the Council of the League of Nations for approval; whereas, His Britanic Majesty has accepted the mandate and undertaken to exercise it in behalf of and in conformity with the following provisions:

"Article one: His Britanic Majesty has the right to exercise as Mandatory all powers inherent in the government of a sovereign state save as limited by the terms of the present mandate.

"Article two: The Mandatory is responsible for placing the country under such political administrative and economic conditions as will secure the establishment of a Jewish national home and the development of self-governing institutions and the safeguarding of the civil and religious rights of all inhabitants irrespective of race or religion.

"Article three: The Mandatory shall encourage the widest measure of self-government for localities consistent with prevailing conditions.

"Article four: An appropriate Jewish agency shall be recognized as the public body for advising and for operating with the administration in such economic, social and other matters as may affect the establishment of a Jewish national home and the interests of the Jewish population and subject always to the control of the administration to assist and take part in the development of the country. The Zionist Organization, so long as its organization and constitution are in the opinion of the Mandatory, appropriate, shall be recognized as such agency. It shall in consultation with the government secure the cooperation of all Jews who are willing to assist in the establishment of a Jewish National home.

"Article five: No Palestine territory shall be ceded or leased to any foreign power.

"Article six: While ensuring the rights and position of other sections of the population, the administration shall facilitate Jewish immigration under suitable conditions and in cooperation with the Jewish agency encourage the close settlement of Jews on land including state lands and wastelands not required for public purposes.

"Article seven: The administration shall be responsible for enacting nationality laws to facilitate the acquisition of Palestinian citizenship by Jews who take up permanent residence.

"Article eight: The abrogation of capitulations is proclaimed.

Article nine: The judicial system shall safeguard the interests of foreigners and existing religious jurisprudence particularly that of the Wakufs which is being administered according to religious law.

"Article ten: England extradition treaties apply to Palestine.

"Article eleven: The administration is empowered to provide public ownership for natural resources and public works, and the introduction of a land system promoting close settlements and intensive cultivation.

"Article twelve: The administration may empower the Jewish agency to construct public works and develop natural resources so far not undertaken by the administration. All excessive profits to be utilized for the benefit of the country.

"Article thirteen: The Mandatory controls the foreign relations of Palestine and protects diplomatically Palestinians abroad.

"Article fourteen: The Mandatory assumes responsibility for all holy places and the free exercise of worship, the Mandatory being responsible only to the League of Nations. The Mandatory guarantees immunity to the Moslem shrines.

"Article fifteen: The Mandatory will appoint a commission for the settling of all religious claims, the chairman of this commission to be appointed by the Council of the League of Nations.

"Article sixteen: No discrimination shall be allowed in behalf of any race, religion or language, each community being entitled to schools conducted in its own language.

"Article seventeen: There will be no interference with missionary enterprise.

"Article eighteen: The Administration may organize voluntary military forces for the defense of the country. Without the consent of the administration, the Mandatory shall not use such forces for other purposes. The Mandatory is at all times entitled to the use of roads, railways and ports for the movement of troops.

"Article nineteen: The Mandatory may impose taxes and customs.

"Article twenty: The Mandatory will adhere to the international, commercial, postal and telegraphic conventions.

"Article twenty-one: The Mandatory will support the fight of the League of Nations to prevent diseases.

"Article twenty-two: Members of the League of Nations will be free to conduct archeological research.

"Article twenty-three: English, Arabic and Hebrew shall be the official languages of the country, money and stamps being in Arabic and Hebrew only "Article twenty-four: Recognition will be given to the holy lands of all communities.

"Article twenty-five: The Mandatory is to report annually to the League of Nations.

"Article twenty-six: In cases of disputes between the members of the League of Nations regarding the interpretation of the Mandate, a permanent court of international justice shall render decision.

"Article twenty-seven: If the mandatory should propose any modifications, the support of a majority of the Council of the League is to be sufficient.

"Article twenty-eight: In the event the mandate should terminate the League shall arrange for a Palestinian government, which government shall honor the financial obligations incurred by the Palestine administration. The Mandate is to be deposited in the Archives of the League of Nations.

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

Poland.

THE center of interest in Jewish affairs is still in Poland. Conditions are as unsettled as they have been practically since the new republic was recognized by the Treaty of Versailles.

The official correspondence between Mr. Lucien Wolf, the Secretary of the Joint Foreign Committee of London, and the Polish delegates to the League of Nations, dated December 5, does not make conditions any clearer. It is the old story which we have heard many times that all troubles of the Jews were due to war and are temporary. The Jewish delegate to the Polish Parliament, Isaac Gruenbaum, spoke on the subject in a session of the sejm when the appropriation for a Ruthenian University was discussed and in this way opportunity was furnished to speak of discrimination against Jewish students.

A clerical member of the sejm, Lutoslawski, cynically remarked that the Jews received just what they deserve. In Silesia the plebiscite has not been held yet and both parties, Germans and Poles, naturally try to win the aid of the Jews to their cause and assure them that no matter what the outcome will be they shall be safe. This assurance is naturally open to doubt, for Wm. Hard, the correspondent of London Times, surely an unbiased source, says that anti-Semitism both in Poland and Austria is assuming threatening proportions.

The most dangerous form of anti-Jewish agitation is that of economic boycott for which the Cooperative Society Rozwoj stands sponsor. At the same time, acts of open violence, which are tolerated by the authorities and for which usually military and police officials are responsible, are matters of daily occurrence. Respectable Jews are thrown from moving railroad trains by soldiers in uniform and neither courts nor military officials seem to take the matter seriously. One instance is that of a soldier who killed a Jewish woman who attempted to protect her daughter from his fiendish attacks. The man was arrested and tried in court and sentenced to four months in prison. Even this punishment being remitted on the ground that the defendant had served his sentence while the trial was in progress.

The value of minority rights, guaranteed by international authority is rather academic. From all parts of Poland we hear that meetings at which Yiddish is spoken are prohibited and Yiddish signs from stores removed. Perhaps a more serious consideration is claimed by the difficulties of immigration. Numerous immigrants are assembled in Danzig and Rotterdam waiting for transportation and are often prevented from boarding their boats by difficulties in obtaining passport vises and the like. Another great difficulty which the Joint Distribution Committee has to face is the rapid decline of Polish exchange. The money sent by American relatives to members of their families in Poland which, at the time when sent was sufficient to pay the transportation, has so depreciated by the time it arrives, that it is worthless to the immigrants. Judging by the fact that the Joint Distribution Committee has the best advice obtainable on banking, it seems that this condition cannot be remedied.

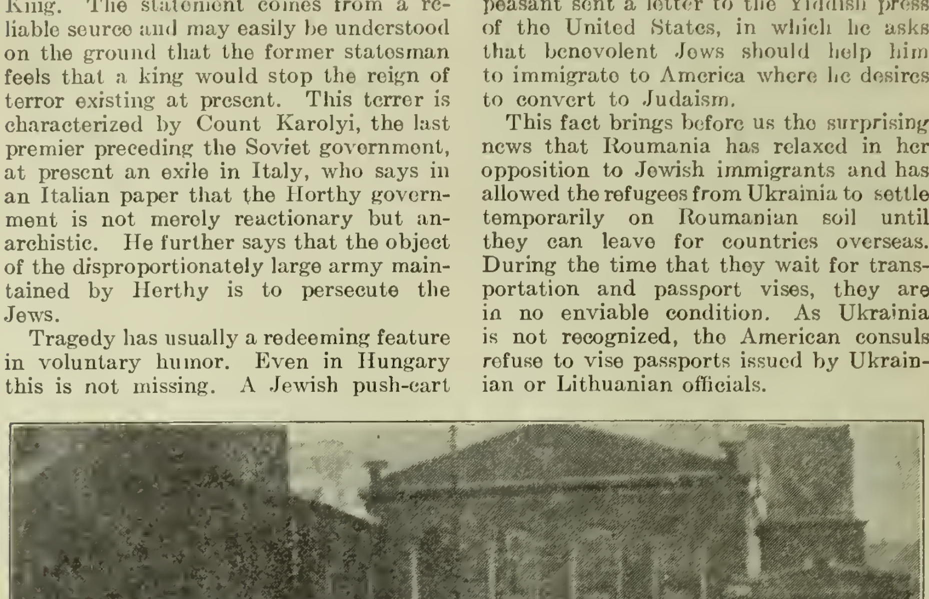
Hungary.

The Polish Jews, persecuted at home because they are not Poles, suffer agonies of the inferno in foreign countries. In Hungary the situation is especially severe. In typical Russia fashion raids are held in the homes of these refugees, some of whom had lived in Hungary before the war. The helpless victims are arrested without warrant, are kept in over-crowded jails together with criminals and prostitutes, are left for days without light, heat and food and then sent to camps of internment where epidemics rage.

While in this case brutality is excused on the ground that its victims are foreigners, native Jews do not fare any better. The latest stunt of the Horthy government is an order which denies to Jews the use of the telephone on the ground that they are not loyal to the country.

It is interesting, in this connection, to observe that Wm. Vazsony, the first Jew who held a position in the last cabinet of the monarchial government, is accused of having plotted for the return of the Empe or, or as they say in Hungary, the King. The statement comes from a reliable source and may easily be understood on the ground that the former statesman feels that a king would stop the reign of terror existing at present. This terror is characterized by Count Karolyi, the last premier preceding the Soviet government, at present an exile in Italy, who says in an Italian paper that the Horthy government is not merely reactionary but anarchistic. He further says that the object of the disproportionately large army maintained by Herthy is to persecute the Jews.

Tragedy has usually a redeeming feature in voluntary humor. Even in Hungary this is not missing. A Jewish push-cart peddler in Budapest was recently arrested for profiteering. The basis of the charge was that he sold a package of toothpicks for one crown instead of the regulation price of eighty hellers. One must bear in mind that the value of a crown is about one-fifth of a cent. The man charged with this "crime" claimed that he was entitled to a higher price because the toothpicks had been blessed by a Wunder Rabbi and, therefore, possessed greater value. The court recognized the plea and dismissed the case.



Young Blood for Palestine—Jewish Youths of Berlin, Departing for Palestine to Inhabit and Rebuild the Land of Their Forefathers.

Ukrainia.

The Yiddish papers continue to publish a list of victims of pogroms of the last two years. Towns, the names of which we never heard before, have lost hundreds of their Jewish inhabitants, who were butchered in a most cruel manner within a few days. Who has ever heard of Pogrametch where 331 Jews were dispatched by Ukrainian soldiers, or of Ladiszonko, where the Ukrainian troops battled for four days against helpless Jews. Naturally all these reports are fragmentary. It is rather remarkable to find an occasional redeeming feature. A Ruthenian peasant in Uman protected thirty-six Jews during the pogrom and fled with them to Kishenev, which, as misery indulges in pranks, has now become a place of refuge for Jews, and which in 1903, or 1905, when this place became internationally known, would have been considered a joke. This Ruthenian peasant sent a letter to the Yiddish press of the United States, in which he asks that benevolent Jews should help him to immigrate to America where he desires to convert to Judaism.

This fact brings before us the surprising news that Roumania has relaxed in her opposition to Jewish immigrants and has allowed the refugees from Ukrainia to settle temporarily on Roumanian soil until they can leave for countries overseas. During the time that they wait for transportation and passport vises, they are in no enviable condition. As Ukrainia is not recognized, the American consuls refuse to vise passports issued by Ukrainian or Lithuanian officials.

Rabbi Graubard of Bendzin describes, in vivid colors, the misery of these unfortunate exiles, who, he claims, are suffering in various camps of concentration, especially in Rotterdam, where the Immigrant Aid Society has no station.

We have not had any reports of recent attacks on the Jews in the Ukraine. This may be due to an improvement in the situation, but also may be due to lack of means of communication. There is a faint hope that conditions have improved, because a number of troops of the Ukrainian "army" have crossed the border into Poland, where they are supposed to be disarmed and concentrated, but move about the cities freely and carry arms, terrorizing the Jewish population. A report that the automobile used by Prof. Israel Friedlander and Rabbi Bernard Cantor has been found in a military depot of Petlura's army gives support to the former belief that the assassins were members of the Ukrainian army.

Group of Russian Peasants from Transcacuasia Who Are Converts to Judaism. They Form a Colony in Los Angeles, Calif.

Roumania.

It was noticed before that history treated us to the surprise that Kishenoff, which in 1903 had become a by-word for medieval brutality, is now a place of refuge for the Jews in Ukrainia, as the nearest place from the border where they can find protection and this is again doubly surprising, because the city is now Roumanian. One who remembers the international sensatio caused by the act of Roumanian border guards who drove Jewish refugees into the Danube River at the point of bayonet in 1872 must indeed feel grateful for the change of times. The situation is rather complex, but may be explained on the ground that the national composition of Roumania has changed. Greater Roumania, as constituted by the last treaties comprises, besides the Roumanians, a large number of Ruthenians, Magyars Germans and Russians, with probably a large bunch of Greeks and Bulgars thrown in for a good measure. The situation seems to be quite critical in the former Hungarian territory, where the Magyars refuse to recognize the Roumanian government and where the Jews sympathize with them in spite of the hostile attitude which the present Magyar government assumes against them.

At Koloszvar Jewish merchants who closed their stores on St. Stephen's Day which is a Hungarian holiday, were severely punished.

At Nagy-Varad a Jewish proprietor o a hotel was flogged by Roumanian soldiers because he refused to surrender Jewish refugees who had come from Transylvania When, after having received twenty-five lashes, he refused to obey the order he was clubbed to death. The rabbi o Nagy-Varad, Dr. Leopold Kecskemeti, in celebrating the thirtieth anniversary o his incumbency of service, at which variou prominent Christian officials and minister were present, said that while recognizing the Roumanian government and willing to respect its laws, his congregation, lik himself, would remain Hungarians. Afte the services, the Roumanian police escorted him to jail where he is awaitin trial.

Germany.

Internal Jewish affairs are very strongl affected by the change of conditions The Union of German Congregations i trying to establish a national organizatio of all Jewish communities, and as is alway the case in an era of transition, the harmonization of tradition and new requirements meets with great obstacles. I seems that the conflict of laws betwee state and federal legislation makes th situation more complicated than ever before. From an economic point of view the position of the Jewish teachers present the most difficult problem arising out o the new order of things in Europe. Mos of the Jewish schools were located in th section of the country which is now bein annexed to Poland. Rabbis and teacher were deprived of their positions or hav exiled themselves voluntarily because thei congregations were disappearing. Th teachers, who according to the law, wer recognized by the state, have a right t ask for appointment to public schools i the new republic on the ground that th republic must take care of its official forced out of positions in the parts of th countries lost to Germany. It seems tha there is a prejudice against Jewish teachers At least this would be the only reason t account for the following almost incredibl act. A Jewish teacher who served in th war was twice wounded; reentered th army after he was cured, serving in th aerial navigation corps and agai wounded and taken as prisoner to France asked for reappointment after his liberation and was refused.

The prejudice against teachers is a par of the general prejudice against Jews a officials and against all manifestations o Jews in public life. It happened that th Socialist party made the Jew, Heilmann its spokesman in the diet on the questio of the property of the Hohenzollern family The Conservative party protested agains a Jew interfering with "The sacred right of the King". Heilmann cleverly replied that if the Jewish lawyer, Loewenfeld, wa good enough to be selected by the Emperor as attorney for his financial interest and if another Jewish attorney was good enough to be retained by the former Secretary of Finance, Helfferich—who is a anti-Semite—he should be permitted t take the opposite stand.

The force of the anti-Semitic movement appears strongest in the novels of a author almost unknown until late, wh is becoming rapidly popular by his books Arthur Dinter, whose novel, "The Si inst the Blood," was a great success, written a sequel called "The Sin inst the Spirit". As in the former presented the theory that intermarriage a sin against the future of the German ple, so he denounces in his last book olution as a sin against the spirit of German people and naturally there er would have been a revolution had ot been for the Jews.

The anti-Semitic spirit found logically very strong support in the student ternities. The historic "Burschen-aft", originally founded for the defense liberal ideas against the reaction follow- the battle of Waterloo, is now a hot- l of reactionary ideas. Its council ssed a resolution to exclude all non-Ary-s. Naturally the students bitterly op-so the present minister of education Prussia, Mr. Haenisch, for a book in ich he advocated liberal ideas in the ools. They called him a tool of the liance Israelite. One of the reasons his unpopularity is the order against e "Swastika", which has become the blem of the anti-Semitic societies. It curious that the same emblem was adopt- ten years ago as the trademark for ofessor Ehrlich's Salversan. Some Jews otested against it and the company ich manufactures this medicine called tention to the fact that his trademark as older than its adoption by the anti-mites. This would seem logical enough, t the Jews still consider the retention of is trademark as a travesty on the mem-y of the great scientist. There is, on e other hand, a certain satisfaction in e appreciation by anti-Semitic papers of e Jewish poets, Julius Bab and Jacob oewenberg, whose poems are praised as ne specimens of patriotic spirit.

A still greater satisfaction is a court ntence, which practically means a fine f an anti-Semitic editor. This man ietrich Eckart, had offered a prize of ,000 marks if anyone would name him a ewish family that had three sons at the ont. Rabbi Freund of Hanover sent im a list of twenty such families from his wn congregation and demanded the prize, hich the editor refused to pay. He arried the matter into court, bringing dditional cases which he had gathered rom other congregations, including some amilies who had seven and eight sons at he front and some who lost three sons in ction. The court compelled the anti-Semitic editor to pay to the rabbi the prize who turned it over to Jewish welfare rganizations. Equally gratifying is the ublication of a statement by Catholic nd Protestant prelates of Munich who protested against the attacks on Rabbi Baerwald by a mob.

Austria.

It might be just as well to give a picture of the conditions in the capital of the old Austrian empire by absolutely authentic facts which will help us to understand the Jewish situation. An official announcement of the mayor contained the information that for the second week of December meat will be sold at the price of 98 to 127 crowns per kilo rationed to 10 deka per capita of the population, which means that the inhabitants of Vienna are entitled to four ounces of meat a week at a price which, from their point of view, is prohibitive.

Another equally impressive fact is contained in the report of a case which came before a court on December 11, 1920. Dr. Knopfelmacher, a political economist of note, who was Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and has to live now on his pension, brought charges against a restaurant keeper who refused to sell him a portion of potatoes because he did not order any meat with it. He claimed that he could not afford to pay the price for meat and potatoes were an indispensable meal to him. He won his point, and the restaurant keeper was fined 100 crowns for refusing food necessary for sustaining the life of a "Regierungsrat" who is happy if he can afford to have a meal consisting of potatoes once a day.

The most important point of interest to the Jews is still the unsolved question of the Galician refugees living in Vienna. The readers are acquainted with the situation of about 70,000 Polish Jews, who came to Vienna when Galicia was invaded by the Russian army, who were, in some instances, directed there by the Government and are now being threatened with expulsion as undesirable foreigners, although they have no home to which they can turn. The chief rabbi of Vienna, Dr. H. P. Chajes, is now in New York in the interest of the relief for these unfortunate people. Their condition was recently discussed in the Vienna City Council, with the brutality strongly reminiscent of the debates which we remember from the time when Lueger was mayor.

One of the anti-Semitic members went so far as to say that if the Galician Jews are not expelled at once, we shall see Jews hanging from the roof of the Stock Exchange. The Jewish member, Ehrlich, replied that all this excitement carried into the Vienna population is devised to make them believe that the expulsion of the comparatively few refugees would restore prosperity to the Vienna population and was due to the embarrassment of the Christian Socialists who after their recent victory have to confess their inability to remedy the situation. The mayor, in reviewing the position of the city administration, made some sensible remarks, claiming that foreigners, including Galician Jews, would not be molested as long as they engage in legal occupations or honest work. While Jews in Vienna are considered anti-German, the excesses which took part in Prague are excused by the people who are ashamed of them by the claim that the Jews, as a body, had provoked the population by their pro-German sympathies.

Zionism.

A friend places at our disposal a letter received from an engineer who, with true Zionist enthusiasm, went to Palestine to devote himself to the work of reconstruction. In the letter, dated December 24, 1920, the writer whose name must be withheld, appeals to his friend for recommendation in order to obtain employment. He says, among other statements:

"A few weeks ago I was given a position as assistant engineer with a concern but my occupation was of such a menial nature and my salary so little, that in spite of my willingness to serve the cause, I could neither keep it nor make both ends meet. Three weeks ago I had a chance to obtain a position with a traveling and transport company but in the last moment the Anglo-Palestine Bank put one of its proteges in the place. The conditions are becoming more and more critical here. People seem to have lost hope in the promise of an industrial enterprise by Americans. As I look upon the conditions the Americans never were serious when they made their offer and they find always new pretexts to excuse their passive attitude. Bolshevists who succeeded in getting into the country are carrying on an active propaganda and, owing to the prevailing unemployment, find many followers. All groups of the population are hostile to immigration. The colonists are hostile because they wish to escape from the moral obligation to employ Jewish hands. The mercantile class and the native labor element fear competition. Besides, the recent immigrant is made easily a victim of labor leaders who sow discontent and in this way make every sane economic progress impossible.

"In individual cases European concerns have established themselves but they are careful to bring their own staffs along, because they know they will not find any reliable material among the local element. This reduces the opportunities for the natives.

"The Jewish laborer is more efficient than the Arab. The rumor to the contrary is being spread by Jewish employers who oppose immigration. I have a clear proof in the fact that Arab employers have in some cases discharged their Arab hands and hired Jewish hands, although they have to pay them higher wages. However, even the Arab labor element begins to organize in the same way as the Jews. Recently there was a riot among the dock laborers in Jaffa. The Arabs, upon a given signal, attacked the Jews and drove them from the docks. There were two persons wounded but the police restored order and arrested the ringleaders.

"It is very much to be regretted that some Jews have arranged Bolshevist strikes in the course of which they committed acts of violence which prejudice the authorities against the Jews as a class.

During the last weeks the more cultured groups of the Arabs began to take a stand against immigration. Mercantile life has improved somewhat in the last months but is now again stagnant. The business in Jaffa is limited to the import of lumber from Roumania and the export of oranges. We are expecting in the near future import of lumber from Lithuania in a round-about way through the Baltic and the North Sea.

"Two building companies, one German and one Rumanian, were recently organized. The President of the Rumanian Society is Dr. Steiner of Bucharest, quite a scholar, who told me recently that his company is a branch of the large company Hebronia in Bucharest which will engage in various kinds of business enterprises. The company, owing to the low rate of exchange of Rumanian currency, plans the import of lumber, flour and coal-oil."

Jerusalem Celebrating Anniversary of Taking of City by Allenby.

This piece of information is somewhat in contradiction with the rose-colored reports we are receiving from other sources and which are given without any comment.

At the meeting held in Jerusalem by the National Council, Dr. Chas. Weizmann, Sir Alfred Mond and Professor Otto Warburg, delivered stirring addresses, speaking in glowing terms of the brilliant prospects of Palestine. Especially Sir Alfred Mond, who formerly was rather cold to all Jewish interests, finds the situation very encouraging. A similar encouragement is given by a statesman of equal sentiments, Luzzatti, the ex-Premier of Italy. We are not surprised at the optimistic views of Dr. Shemariah Lewin, who, at a Zionist meeting held in New York, declared that within five years the Jews will form the majority of the Palestinian population. In order to complete the list of the favorable signs in the Zionist movement, we might add that in Jugo-Slavia, the Zionists won a great victory in all congregational elections. We have, however, to state some unfavorable news also. The boundary line between Syria and Palestine was defined by an Anglo-French agreement of December 23. It divides the sea of Galilee and shows other features which seem to indicate serious troubles in the future.

The Syrian Central Union telegraphed its protests to the London press. Internal affairs, some of them rather comical, may also be considered indicative of future complications. The labor organization in Jerusalem insists on conducting a free kitchen with utter disregard of the dietary laws which provokes the orthodox population, still forming a large majority.

Very comical is an organization formed by Jewish converts to Roman Catholicism who plan the building of a church on Mount Olives from contributions of converted Jews all over the world. It should be the least trouble which the Zionistic aspirations shall have to face.

Miscellaneous.

The latest anti-Semitic joke is a claim found in a cable to the Daily News of London that "the Jewish propaganda" invented the story that Henry Ford works for the Kaiser. The correspondent has at least the good sense to add that the story is amusing.

Revue de Deux Mondes, the leading French magazine, always rather sympathetic to anti-Semitism, publishes an article in which the disorders in Hungary are charged to the Jews and in which among other incredible stories, it is told that the assassination of Count Tisza was directed by a Jewish journalist and that Jewish soldiers danced over the corpse. In this connection, however, it also must be admitted as important that of the new French cabinet, formed under such great difficulties, Senator Strauss is a member and that besides him at least one other Jew was returned to the Senate.

For the benefit of our anti-Semitic friends, who claim that all radicalism is due to the Jews, we would record the fact that at the last Socialist Convention held in Italy, which resulted in a split between the regular Socialists and Communists, the two Jewish leaders of the Socialist movement, Treves and Modigliani, represented moderate views. It may be added that the number of Jews in Italy, even if all of them were on the side of the radicals, is too insignificant to account for the strength of the movement.

The United States is receiving prominent Jewish visitors from abroad, besides Chief Rabbi Chajes of Vienna, previously mentioned, the former Chief Rabbi of Turkey, Haim Nahum, has arrived to make propaganda for the work of the Alliance Israelite, which probably owing to the change of the map of Europe, has lost a great many members outside of France.

Another important visitor is Baron James Rothschild, the son of the great patron of Palestine colonization, Baron Edmond. He reminds us of an interesting little story connecting the Jewish settlement in the United States with the Rothschild family. In 1832, a plain country Jew living in Rodenberg, Hesse, suggested to Baron Amschel de Rothschild, then head of the firm, to buy large tracts of land in the western part of the United States for the relief of Jews in Europe. The Baron refused. He had still the old-fashioned idea which, as he claimed, his father, "Selig", had held, that if the Jews are good and "frumm", God will take care of their troubles. It is more than interesting that now his grandnephew should come to America to enlist aid for the Jews abroad.

Another interesting prospective visitor is Mendel Beilis, the victim of the Kiev murder trial, who arrived recently from Palestine in London, expecting to come to America, if he can find the means of transportation.

The Convention of the Orthodox Rabbis in America held January 11, passed strong resolutions condemning the ideas presented by Prof. Mordecai M. Kaplan before the United Synagogue. The text of Professor Kaplan's address has not been published as far as we know, but judging from quotations is seems identical with the ideas which he expressed in an article which appeared in the Menorah Journal of August, 1920, and which practically contained the program of the early reformers of a hundred years ago, declaring that the intricate Sabbath and dietary laws are impossible for anyone to observe in progressive countries and that our prayer-book contains ideas which are out of harmony with the views of intelligent Jews of modern times. It remains for the future to decide whether this incident is an indication of a slow advance of "reasonable orthodoxy" towards reform.

Another controversy of modern times is presented at a conference of Yiddish authors and journalists which met in Czernowitz.

(Continued on page 11.)

The Work of the Order in Combating Anti-Semitism

By Dr. Heineman of Bresslau

THE above subject, which I was asked to discuss among the reports of our literary committee, is not without a paradoxical, yea, not without a certain piquant charm. For not alone can the Order as such render no positive service for combatting Anti-Semitism and its resulting manifestations, neither by its form of organization nor by its inherent tendency, which strives exclusively for the improvement of character of its members, but quite often the Order is being charged with directly promoting Jew hatred and of making the friends of the Jews skittish. He who had ever so modest a share in the organizing work of our lodges, as did the writer of these lines, he knows the main argument that is constantly hurled against us: "What is the need of this new confederation of Jews, which is bound to widen the gap between us and our neighbors which we should rather strive to remove?" And especially when the order idea was transplanted into Germany, which at the time was very poor as yet in Jewish associations; what a spirited opposition did it arouse, and particularly in the ranks of the restless assimilationists, who would have liked to banish from the lips of their grandchildren the memory of a historical distinction, of which the proud name "Benai Brith" reminded them so plainly, and at that in the very tongue of the fathers

At the bottom of such protestations on the part of our opponents, which have not been stifled as yet altogether, there lies a very distinct conception of our maneuvering in this battle of defence. They consider as the best, yea, as the only means to combat Anti-Semitism the gradual, steadily progressing, de-Judaization of Judaism, in the systematic killing off of everything that separates us from our neighbors through our holy memories, through the inner and outer expression of our religious life. And right herein lies the merit of the lodge, which can not be over-estimated, since it proclaims: "This road of combating Jew hatred is not the right one, as it leads to the decomposition of Judaism, a condition which, considering its historic mission, is far more detrimental than the open hatred of its opponents. If our ostensible advantage would really depend upon surrendering of our Jewish Soul, should our community really ever be placed before the painful alternative to choose between temporary interests and historic loyalty, as has, alas, so often been the case with some of its members, the genius of Judaism will have to go the road of duty without consideration to other consequences.

But has the road of assimilation, which honor and conscience forbid us to travel, indeed proven to be the right way for combating Anti-Semitism? If that were so, we Jews of the German Vaterland should have enjoyed glorious times long ago. For large sections, very large ones, followed that road, not only from practical reasons, but because they were dazzled by the apparently superior non-Jewish culture. And has Anti-Semitism turned less frequently against the homes in which the Christmas tree and the baptismal font were placed—if not for the son, at least for the grandson—than it has turned against the masses in the East? And do they not today—as they did formerly—blame us for our religion; reproach us now for our lack of religion, or at least some of those innerly long ago assimilated publicists and politicians? He who has not been undeceived as yet by such manifestations, he must have been convinced by his own experiences in the trenches or the stories related to him by his friends, that the inner estrangement of the Jew from the historical bases of his existence will not dispel the hatred of his opponents but will, at best, turn it into contempt.

Thus, therefore, the road of the modern Jew is different from the one which false friends have pointed out to him in former generations. And the Order takes a leading part on this new road. Not de-Judaization, but rather the intensifying, the deepening of the Jewish class-consciousness, are the aims which we strive to reach—not only, to be sure, as the goal [illegible], but also as a hope to invalidate [illegible] objections raised against us and essentially to disinfect, if not to heal, the wound which race hatred has engendered in the German people.

Nothing affects so painfully the non-Jew as the uncertainty of the Jew regarding his own religion. Such a really unprejudiced man as Rade deplored the fact that it is so very difficult for the Christian to get information from the Jew as to what religion, the Jewish religion, means to him. And who can deny the fact that to many Jews a religious conversation with a non-Jew is painful, must be painful, because they were never able to give to the world in which they lived an explanation about themselves as Jews, to come to a clear understanding with themselves as to what Judaism could signify to the modern world, what Judaism could give to the world from the fountain of its eternal verities. (See my paper: "Zeitfragen im Lichte Juedischer Lebensanschauung, Frankfurt, 1920.) How much more clear the value of our spiritual religious heritage (in its ethical and aesthetical side) has become to us through the application of modern conceptions about the Bible. It is the function of the lodge to bring about such a synthesis between Judaism and the modern life. The Order teaches us by thoughtful address and free conversation to consider as Jews whatever we experience in daily life and in literature. It thus gives us the power not only to stand up against Anti-Semitic prejudice, but helps us also, as far as in its power lies, to maintain a proud self-assurance and removes that disruption which is bound to create in others a feeling of doubt and embarrassment.

But such reflections about highest cultural values, which the noblest of our tribe have proclaimed for their grandchildren and for humanity, directs our vision upon high, eternal aims; gives to our life meaning and value, and helps us to remove the deplorable contrast between spiritual poverty and material affluence, worldly polish and the lack of genuine culture, which, alas, is not very rare in our circles and which may lead many who otherwise might not have been biased to become more or less strongly prejudiced against our community. The reference to Jewish arrogance is no doubt one of the favorite weapons in the armory of our opponents, and, verily, not one of the least effective ones. It is used not altogether to arouse the feelings of jealousy. A really tastefully furnished villa, a genuinely fashionable society in the Jewish home, have surely not harmed us, certainly not more than our material rise as such. But the vain, ostentatious parading of external splendor, the crowding to that which I should call spiritual pomp and tinsel, concerts, theatres, lectures, not because of its intrinsic value, but because the seeing and to be seen belongs to "higher society", all this is bound to arouse reflections of an extremely painful nature. And how utterly did the old method of assimilation fail here! The same ladies who, in order not to be noticed, are afraid to read the "Allgemeine Zeitung des Judenthums" in the street car, the selfsame ladies would never mind the gaze of scrutiny which their sparkling diamonds might occasion among their more modest neighbors. Just where adaptation would be most in place, there it is practiced the least.

And this is not even remarkable, because such feelings of enmity to which we referred are essentially the result of the very justified reflections on the part of the non-Jewish observer that such ostentations are evidences of a sheer frightful lack of depth of spirituality. And it is just these men who, as a cure against Anti-Semitism, advocated assimilation of the Jews and the renouncing of the traditional religious-moral values, amounts to that, they, next to the economical conditions, which we cannot discuss here, are to blame to a very great measure for the moral impoverishment which came along with our material ascendency and for the despiritualization which caught a great part of our men and, alas, a still greater part of our women, which leads inevitably towards that tragicomical flimsiness.

With this diagnosis we are giving the therapeutics. We must not rest satisfied in our combating of the overbearing to point out to him—praiseworthy and indispensable, no doubt, as such may be—that every increase in the ammunition of the Anti-Semite may result in immeasurable consequences for all our coreligionists. We must rather stop the source of the evil, and instead of the superficial joy in silly exhibition of pomp, strive after higher ideals of life as it behooves us as men and as Jews. We must restore the old iron and the old warmth of the Jewish blood to our national body, which has become morally anaemic by unfavorable historical conditions and by the false cure of assimilation. Poverty was always considered to be the mother-soil of all failings, more so of spiritual than of the material ones. The ostentatious man is a soul impoverished being who sets flimsiness as the goal of his ambition only because he knows none other. To fight against arrogance, his ambition, which we neither want nor can eradicate, must be directed upon worthier endeavors not only theoretically so but, what is more important, in a practical way. Such are the high aims which our lodge points out to us, aims, before the true splendor of which the glitter of gew-gaw tinsel must fade away. She teaches us to measure the value of a brother without consideration for his outward station, only by standard of his attitude to our ideals. Naturally, the entire success of our self-educational work can be attained only gradually, especially when these, our lodge values, will affect more energetically the world of womankind than this is possible for the present. But the very recognition of the aim is of high value, and the intensifying effect can be retarded by none whosoever that has been truly impressed by the spirit of our work. Inclining, however, towards the true ideal teaches us necessarily to overcome that which is false; the dancing around the golden calf must cease as soon as Moses, who disappeared temporarily, reappears to his people.

Real pride—as I tried to point out in my necrology for our departed brother, Rabbi Dr. M. Horovitz—engenders necessarily that self-assurance and nobility which distinguishes the noble-minded man from the plebeian. How much the lack of such pride has hurt us our reflections today have proven sufficiently; it has undermined both our inner worth and our external position as well. It is the noblest problem of our Order to reestablish that true pride which never degenerates into self-conceit. The mightiest prophets of Jewish greatness are the very ones who at the same time were the keenest critics of the humanities of their people. At the same time, however, it fills our life with strength and greatness through the consciousness of our historical mission, and teaches us to get rid of all our faults, the old and new ones, not indeed, from fear for others, but from reverence for ourselves (in the sense required by Goethe) from the nobility of our blood and the greatness of our problem.

ANTI-SEMITISM AMONG GERMAN STUDENTS.

The German Student Societies, at a conference in Eisenach, passed resolutions in which the race aspect was throughout accentuated. Only German students of Aryan origin will be admitted to membership of the societies which are instructed to educate their members so that marriage with a Jewish or colored wife will be unthinkable. The contracting of such a marriage will mean exclusion from the societies. The societies are also resolved to refuse "satisfaction by duel" to all but "honorable" students—students of alien races, of course, not belonging to this catagory. A further resolution forbids any member to belong to any international or separatist party and those who do so will cease to be members from that day forward. The German Liberal papers declare that these resolutions, if enforced, mean the termination of all that the democratic Societies of Students stood for when they were founded in 1848.

POLAND BANS AMERICAN AND CANADIAN PUBLICATIONS.

(Warsaw, J. C. B. Service.)

The Post Ministry has made public a list of foreign Jewish publications from the United States and Canada which are not to be admitted in Poland. The list includes one Jewish daily from Montreal, two Jewish dailies and one Jewish weekly from New York, and one Hebrew daily published in Jerusalem.

JUSTICE TO THE JEW.

By Rev. H. A. Keck, Champaign, Ill.

I hold no brief for the race of Israel. On occasion I would say for other races what I now say on behalf of the Jew. A studied and persistent effort is being made today to create suspicion and prejudice against the Sons of Israel. The movement is organized and seems to be abundantly financed. Within a fortnight hundreds of pamphlets have been distributed in Champaign county, the sole aim of which is to engender hatred of the Jew. By distortion of certain facts, by suppression of certain other facts, by deft phrase and innuendo, the attempt is made to poison many minds. The "Protocols of the Elders of Zion" of which so much is made are forgeries and are shown to be such on their very face. Edmund Burke said long ago "You cannot indict an entire race." There are good Jews. And there are bad Jews. Just as there are good Gentiles. And there are bad Gentiles. Character is personal. Even if it could be shown that there is a larger percentage of rascals among the Jews than among other races, we still would be duty bound to accord justice to those Jews who are upright and God-fearing. Race prejudice is born of ignorance and selfishness. It battens in the dark. It shuns the sunlight of fearless investigation. It bodes no good to this Republic. When we drop such offensive epithets as Sheeny and Dago we shall be a great deal nearer the realization of American ideals than we are today. As one American citizen I wish to register my protest against the vicious propaganda that is being carried on today. We who are so deeply indebted to Israel ought to be swift to do justice to the children of Abraham. The Christ whom many of us profess to worship was a Jew on the human side. The most cherished ideals of humanity came to us through this people "to whom were committed the oracles of God." The venerable Schleiermacher once held a copy of the New Testament in his hand as he said to his class in the university: "Gentlemen, this little book contains more that is of value to humanity than all the other writings of antiquity put together." Be it remembered that every book in the New Testament was written by a Jew. We are finding today that much of our best light on the social questions of the hour comes to us from the Hebrew Prophets. I would be the last to excuse or condone the faults of any Jew. But I do insist that vices are not race-lined. They are human. The Jew would resent pity. He does not need charity. Today he does need and we ought to give him justice.

BOY GIVES PRIZE MONEY FOR RELIEF.

Starving children in central Europe have a generous hearted little friend in Lawrence Rudner, aged 12, a pupil in the Liberty school.

Lawrence was the seventh grade winner in the city wide essay contest of the Canton Real Estate Board. When the prizes were awarded at the Central High School Master Rudner was given his choice of a bicycle or $40.

"I'll take the money," he told H. E. Buehler, secretary, "you see the children in Europe need it for food worse than I need a bicycle." He turned the money over to the Herbert Hoover relief commission. Young Rudner is of Jewish descent.—[Canton Daily News.

BRITISH MANDATE IS SOVEREIGNTY OVER PALESTINE.

London, Feb. 4.—The British draft of the mandate for Palestine, which will be submitted to the council of the league of nations at its next meeting in Geneva, provides in its first article that the mandatory nation (Great Britian) shall have all the powers inherent in the government of a sovereign state, according to the text of the draft printed by the Jewish Chronicle here today.

Among the outstanding features of the twenty-seven articles of the mandate are stipulations that the widest measure of self-government for localities consistent with prevailing conditions shall be encouraged and that the mandatory shall be responsible for maintaining such political, administrative, and economic conditions as shall secure the establishment of a Jewish national home and the development of self-governmental institutions.

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, January 19, 1921.

THE great event of the month in this country has been the appointment of the Earl of Reading to be Viceroy of India. It may be a little difficult for people outside of England to realize how important is this position, the occupant of which takes the place of the King-Emperor in India. The appointment of Earl Reading is in an especial degree a red-letter day in Jewish history, and a particularly important landmark in the history of Anglo-Jewry. Distinguished Jews have served the state in this country in many capacities. They have been ministers of the Crown, brilliant civil servants, leaders of the Army, and Governors of colonies. This is the first occasion when a Jew has reached one of the very highest positions in the empire. And yet, why should this be remarkable? The capacity of the Jewish citizen is placed whole-heartedly at the service of the state, and this whole-hearted service gives the lie to the allegation of the International Anti-Semites that the Jew cannot be a full citizen.

It must be remembered that Earl Reading is making a great personal sacrifice in going to India. Any man may rest content to die the Lord Chief Justice of England. That position is not only honorable but distinguished to a degree. Even the most ambitious must be satisfied to be one of that long list of great judges who guided the English judicature. Yet when the call came to Earl Reading, like a true citizen, and setting a fine example of civic duty, he accepted it, although he must have realized, as everybody in the country realizes, that his work will be extraordinarily difficult, and will have nothing of the leisured ease of the judicial bench in London.

Needless to add, our friends the Anti-Semites in this country, were up in arms directly the appointment was noted. Their excuses were idle. They said that Earl Reading is a bad administrator and an unsuccessful negotiator, and instanced in their support his mission to the United States. Readers in America will not need to be told how groundless is this last accusation. In fact it is a lie. Earl Reading's American mission was an unbounded success, as the Government knew only too well, and the Government was the best judge of the matter. But then Anti-Semites live on lies. Nor was this all. Another favorite argument of theirs against the appointment was, that it would alienate the sympathies of the Mohammedans in India. Those who know India best assert the very contrary opinion, alleging that the appointment of a Jew to the office of Viceroy will please the Mohammedans greatly.

Apart from the yelps of the Anti-Semites, the British Press, and certainly the press that counts, was enthusiastic about the appointment. The Times welcomed it whole-heartedly, The Daily Telegraph described it as the best possible appointment, The Westminster Gazette declared that his Vice-Royalty may beome memorable. Perhaps the most interesting comment of all was a letter printed in the last-named journal from a correspondent who quoted a number of definite opinions expressed by individuals in one of the London Clubs. Everyone of them was extremely favorable, not to say complimentary. Perhaps the most interesting was this: "To have left a bed of roses to wear a crown of thistles marks the self-sacrifice of the man." That self-sacrifice was insisted upon in the farewell address given by the Attorney General in the law courts, which was a magnificent effort, culminating in a hearty wish in these terms: "My Lord, your Lordship is about to pass from here to the color, the variety, and the mystery of the East, and there is not a member of the Bar who does not sincerely wish you Godspeed and a happy and prosperous rule." Earl Reading's reply which was delivered in moving tones was perfect in diction and sentiment. He declared that he would go to India determined that justice shall remain the supreme guiding-factor in the destinies of that great country. It was a conclusion worthy of a Jew.

Lord Reading was the first Jew to be the English Attorney General, the first Jew to be Lord Chief Justice of England, and the first Jew to be Viceroy of India. He is in his sixty-first year.

The Anti-Semites in this country have been pretty active of late, and Earl Reading's appointment was only a peg on which to hang complaints and barks. But they have had a resounding blow in the publication by Mr. Lucien Wolf of a little booklet, entitled "The Jewish Bogey," in which he shows, in a manner to convince all fair-minded people, that the "Protocols" are forgeries, and those who are manipulating them rogues. Mr. Wolf's booklet was published by the Press Committee of the Jewish Board of Deputies, on which committee tho London Lodge has three representatives. It has been publicly stated that the representatives of the lodge are the most active members of the committee; but the lodge has been energetic in this direction on its own account. We have felt for a long time, and our view was supported by the action of the Order in America, that what is requisite just now above all else is to disseminate information about Jews and Judaism. The lodge, therefore, set to work to consider this proposal, and great credit is due to Brother S. Gilbert for his activity and enthusiasm in helping the scheme along. Very soon a program was drawn up which provided for the writing of a number of small booklets on facts about the Jews, what the Jews have contributed to civilization, on great Jewish artists, and musicians, on the ideals of Judaism, and on kindred subjects. The next step was to arrange for the publication of these booklets, and before long we found a publisher of standing and repute who was quite enthusiastic about the idea and ready to undertake the issuing of the publications in question. The final step was to collect money, and this has also been taken. Already a small amount is in hand, and more will be forthcoming. We are certain, that when the booklets appear, they will appeal to American readers no less than to readers in this country.

Now for an interesting sidelight on this enterprise. One fine day we learned through the press that the League of British Jews, which everybody thought was dead, had been filled with a sudden desire to issue a similar series of booklets, either by itself, or with the assistance of other communal bodies. They, therefore, approached the President of the Board of Deputies, and at a meeting of this body a hurried vote was taken which expressed the willingness of the Board to cooperate with the League on this enterprise. Some people who know the ins and outs of the story put forward a suggestion that the League got to hear of the proposals of the London Lodge, was struck with them, and immediately attempted to profit by the ideas of the lodge. There may be something in this suggestion; on the face of it, it is by no means unlikely. The London Lodge is not in any way perturbed by the move, for the London Lodge cares only that the work shall be done. If the League of British Jews and the Board of Deputies and other communal bodies, including the lodge itself, will succeed in setting up a special committee for carrying out the project, all of us will rejoice with all our heart. But so far the omens are not propitious. It must be admitted that the vast bulk of Jews in this country still look upon the League as a tasteless joke, and therefore cannot take it seriously. It is doubtful whether such an omnibus committee as the League proposes is likely to come into existence. So far there is little sign of success. If it does not come into existence, the lodge will procced with the proposal of which it was the author, and we hope to receive assistance from the Executive of the Order to make the venture a success. But whoover is responsible for it, it is quite clear, that the work is urgent, and will contribute materially to close the mouths of the Anti-Semites whose international plot to hurl lying accusations against Jews over the faco of the earth shows no sign of abating.

For somo time past it has been felt in London that Zionist efforts in Palestine should be helped to success and fruition. There has been much talk of setting up an Economic Council at the head of which was to be Sir Alfred Mond. But as is usual on such occasions, there has been much talk and little work, principally because it was necessary to agree about the exact status of the Economic Council. Now it is obvious that one important party in the final decision of this question must be Sir Herbert Samuel, and as correspondence is a cumbersome method of dealing with so important a question, Sir Alfred Mond wisely decided to proceed himself to Palestine, with Dr. Weizmann, in order to discuss the whole question with the High Commissioner. Dr. Weizmann and Sir Alfred are expected back shortly, and it is hoped that they will bring with them so complete a basis for an understanding about the Economic Council that this important body may be set up almost immediately. There will be much for it to do. The economic development ot Palestine will call for the solution of many problems, and the administration of the Foundation Fund, which the Zionists are collecting, will also be a difficult and responsible job. It is pretty clear to most observers that the present managers of the Foundation Fund are unable to cope with the work adequately. The Economic Council will be able to do it, and it is hoped that there may be one or two members on the Economic Council from the United States.

Many people will doubtless have heard of the Agudas Israel. This society is a Jewish international organization, the centre of which hitherto was at Zurich, but has now been moved to London. The organization was established in 1912, and in the words of its leaders has for its object "the solving, in accordance with the teaching of the Torah, the Jewish problems which arose from time to time in the Diaspora and in Palestine." In a word the Agudas Israel is the organization of orthodox Jews, principally in Poland, to a certain extent in Germany, and to a less extent in England. That the organization has done good work is an undoubted fact. That it means well is unquestionable. That it has high ideals is obvious. But many people are asking, why does it stand by itself? The Mizrachi movement within the Zionist camp is also an association of orthodox Jews, also desires to settle Jewish questions according to the guidance of the Torah, also has high ideals, also does good work. Why cannot the two unite? The Agudas Israel puts the blame on the Mizrachists; these put the blame on the Agudas Israel. An unprejudiced observer cannot help noticing that the desire for personal glory does seem to actuate some of the leaders of the Agudas Israel. They do not, perhaps, believe in a united front with as much passion of their soul as they ought. If they did, would they have attempted to negotiate separately with the High Commissioner of Palestine? Would they have gone to the British foreign office, as it is said they have done, in order to ask that they also should be recognized as an authority to regulate immigration into the Holy Land, knowing as they must have done that the British Government had been negotiating with the Zionists for a very long time, and that the Zionist organization was named in the mandate for Palestine? The unprejudiced observer might well see that possibly there was good reason for this policy of the Aguda. But he would also see that this policy was not quite playing the game. He might argue that even more important than extreme orthodoxy was the idea of a united Israel. Internally every large body of people must tolerate, and even welcome, differences of opinion. But to the outer world, in foreign affairs as it were, it would be fatal to have division. There a united front is most essential, and this the Agudas Israel do not appear to understand aright. The unprejudiced observer cannot help carrying away the feeling that one or two energetic people in the Aguda wish to be leaders in their own way, wish to strike out a new line wherein they may find personal glory. The unprejudiced observer may be wrong, but his opinions cannot be ruled out altogether. Certainly the policy of the Agudas Israel will, in all probability, tend to lay stress on the differences within the Anglo-Jewish community, and, therefore, to divide it still more, at a time when it needs union more than ever—union which the War Memorial is striving to establish.

For one thing the War Memorial has succeeded in setting up a communal committee for religious education. All interests and all sections are represented on this committee, and it is hoped that the committee will work out a satisfactory scheme for the advancement of Jewish religious education in this country. Meanwhile the Chief Rabbi is continuing his progress through South Africa, collecting funds for the War Memorial and meeting with a warm reception. More than ever his journey is showing him that it is absolutely essential for Jewish communities to have ministers of culture and education. It is fair to say that here one of the marked weaknesses of Anglo-Jewry shows itself, and the War Memorial Committee is right in laying stress on this point as among the first on its program.

There died recently in London, Mr. Isidore Gluckstein, a simple man to meet, and yet a business genius of rare quality, of the type often found among Jews. Jews were the pioneers of cheap catering in Berlin, one thinks at once of Kempinski. In London the firm of Joseph Lyons will be thought of in the same connection, and of this firm the late Mr. Gluckstein was one of the pivots. What he did in establishing popular tea shops, he also did, in extending cheap tobacco retail shops. The firm of Salmon & Gluckstein must be known to all visitors and residents in London, because it seems to be ubiquitous. Mr. Gluckstein started his commercial career in a very small way, but the genius of the man soon brought him very much to the fore.

We have in London at present a distinguished visitor in the person of Dr. Chajes, the Chief Rabbi of Vienna, who is proceeding from here to the United States. There is, therefore, the less reason for enlarging on his news from Austria and Hungary, seeing that Dr. Chajes will be delivering it himself in person across the Atlantic, but we should like to express a welcome to him here.

It is always pleasing to see merit recognized, and many of the friends of Mr. Paul Goodman will be delighted to know that on the completion of twenty-five years' work as Secretary of the Spanish and Portuguese congregation he was presented with a testimonial and a gift. Mr. Goodman is a man of many-sided activities, not the least among them being his membership of the London Lodge. He has been a member of the committee, he has been an excellent Secretary, and in 1919 he filled, with distinction, the office of President. Of him and of the lodge it may be said that they go from strength to strength.

AUSTRIA WOULD RID HERSELF OF EASTERN JEWS AT ANY COST.

(Vienna, J. C. B. Service.)

The Budget Commission of the Austrian Diet yesterday devoted considerable time to a discussion on the disposition of the Eastern Jews. The Christian-Socialists again protested at the government failure to have them expelled. Chancellor Myer defended the government and explained that the matter is not simple. The Polish government he stated already intervened a number of times in behalf of these refugees. Moreover, the Peace treaty provides that foreigners should be treated with the same consideration as one's own citizen. Nevertheless, he promised that everything would be done to rid the country of them. The suggestion that the Jewish refugees be interned was not favored by the Minister of the Interior Glantz who insisted that expulsion was the only proper step. The probability of the refugees appealing to the League of Nations was mentioned and the chancellor said that a proper explanation would be found if the League called for explanation.

POLISH GOVERNMENT PLEDGES SOLUTION OF JEWISH PROBLEM

Polish Bureau of Information in New York received the following cablegram from Warsaw:

Ministry of Approvisation,
Warsaw.

Lucien Wolff of the United Anglo-Jewish Committee has addressed a letter to Askenazy and Paderewski concerning the condition of the Jews in Poland. Our delegates declared that the Government will spare no effort or sacrifice in its attempt to establish social peace. Aware that relations between Jews and Christians are not what they should be, the Government will endeavor to solve the problem loyally, and in a manner satisfactory to the civilized world. Minority rights have been ratified by Parliament and have legal force in Poland.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1921
New Moon	February 9
New Moon	March 11
Fast of Esther	March 23
Purim	March 24
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

THE REACTION IN OUR FAVOR.

The protest against the anti-Semitic propaganda in America, made public by John Spargo, the author, and bearing the signatures of President Wilson, ex-President Taft, Cardinal O'Connell and 116 other widely known men and women of Christian faith, may be taken as a welcome sign that the nefarious campaign against the Jew which was set in motion in this country by agencies known and unknown has reached its crest and is now on its decline and that a reaction in our favor has set in with the American people. Of course, the ignorant thousands and tens of thousands who were deluged by certain publications linked to a business concern will not be immediately reached by this document. But if we remember that all anti-Semitic movements, and in particular the present one, have been engineered from above, we may well be satisfied with this check to the progress of the pernicious onslaught among the intelligent middle classes, who neither love us nor hate us, who are awed by the printed word, who may think that where there is smoke there must be fire, and who now will be brought back to their senses by the weighty testimony of the signatories to the Spargo document. What is most important is that the step taken by these Christian men and women was entirely of their own initiative and that all of them were alive to the deep shame which the agitation means for America. Germans and German sympathizers had been gloating over the rise of anti-Semitism in Great Britain and in this country, of the thing that formerly was what Germany fostered and for which it was mercilessly flayed by the Anglo-Saxon world. It were invidious among so many notable names to select any; but we must comment on the presence of the name of Theodore Roosevelt, worthy son of his eminent father. We are certain that had this great American been alive he would have stepped into the arena with his usual vigor, his fighting blood roused by this dastardly blow to American prestige. For it is not a question of friendship for the Jew. We do not claim President Roosevelt to have been a Philo-Semite any more than he could have been an Anti-Semite. He was most uncompromisingly American. And this thing that is rearing its [illegible] was imported from [illegible]. We have now the testimony of [illegible] Lansing that the Protocols were submitted to him some two years ago and that he immediately considered them to be without the least foundation; in fact, but forgeries circulated for malicious purposes Let us hope now that the conspirators, hiding as they are in the dark, will now realize the futility of making headway with their dastardly business to besmirch the fair name of America and to do injury to the Jewish people. Let them slink back into silence and oblivion. As for us, while eternal vigilance must be the price of Jewish tranquility, it behooves us to let the matter rest where the Spargo protest leaves it. We have taken up the quarrel in a manly, dignified fashion. Here and there irresponsible persons may have been misled into a mode of warfare, which the clear thinking among us never sanctioned. Defend ourselves we must, but without offense. The conscience and intelligence of America has spoken and it has made clear beyond peradventure that the Black Hundreds and the White Terror can as little ply their trade with impunity under the stars and stripes as the Reds and their ilk. Americanism was put into jeopardy; Americanism has issued triumphant.

OUR NEW RENEGADES.

We have had apostates in all ages; but apostasy in the past meant going over to another faith. That kind occurs to-day likewise. It is immaterial what the motives are. We do not even deny that occasionally sincerity plays into the act; but in our time we come across an entirely new species. It is the Jew who does not join the church, who nominally stays where he is, but who announces himself as out of communion with his brethren. In the first place we have the Internationals. They declare that, though born Jews, they are neither Jews nor Gentiles, they are just men, members of an international communistic organization, world citizens and what not. Our enemies still reckon them to us—but that does not matter. For they hold to the new-fangled theory of race persistence. However, if you ask the leaders of the Reds themselves, those of Jewish extraction, they will aver that they are not and do not consider themselves to be Jews at all. Then we have the Jew who may not be a sympathizer of the Reds, but who on philosophical grounds has reasoned himself out of Judaism. If this happens in the case of a Jew who is a Jewish nationalist, the tie with the body of Israel loosened at one point is fastened again at another. Many a Jew who grew lukewarm in religion was retained in the fold through nationalism and ultimately won back to Judaism. But when a Jew has lost faith in monotheism and at the same time cannot ally himself to the nationalists he steps down and out—he becomes a detached member. Now this throwing overboard the monotheistic belief is rooted in some modern philosophic heresy which appears to be in vogue now. Why believe in one power, when there may be many powers? Some years ago a Jew by birth objected to the monarchic idea in monotheism. He was generous enough to surround the Deity with a parliament of divine assistants. We have no quarrel with the vagaries of philosophy. Men have a right to reason about God in speculative terms; and the God of the philosophers is never the same as the God of religion. A man has a right to excommunicate himself. An individual may become a renegade; but the compact Jewish body will steadfastly abide by its heritage. The "social heritage" someone called it the other day. This is also a new-fangled term. We, who are plainer folk, speak of inherited beliefs. And among them stands supreme the belief in one God. That belief which we all thought so safe, which even the lukewarm among us felt to be the pride of Israel, must now be restated and reaffirmed. The individual Jew may think that he has outgrown it, but the mass unconsciously is permeated with it. It is the backbone of our faith in ourselves, that which gives us the right to exist. By it we have conquered the world spiritually. The gods of Greece—where are they? The modern poet may be hankering after them. It is the Jew who put them into the museum where they belong. The strength of Greece was inexorable reason. The Jew has lived by his intuition. And the meanest Jew knew long before the thinkers of Athens what the central power of the universe was. We are and remain, our renegades notwithstanding, a people consecrated to the belief in the One. Everything else is a corollary to that supreme theorem. We may not be conscious of it, but it rules our every action, it dominates our every thought, and when we come to measure the two great influences in the world, the Greek and the Hebrew, we are reminded of the admonition of the poet-philosopher in the dark middle ages that Greek wisdom is but a flower, but no fruit, and that while we may be grateful to the Hellenic mind for all the embellishments of life, the substantial verities by which mankind lives to-day come from Jerusalem and the revelation on Mount Sinai.

SOLOMON MARX.

Mr. Solomon Marx, the best known citizen of New Orleans, passed away on January 29, 1921, at the ripe age of eighty-six years. Mr. Marx was the last surviving founder of the Touro Infirmary, organizer and first president of the Harmony Club, one of the founders of Temple Sinai, and the oldest Ben B'rith in New Orleans, having been identified with the Order for sixty-four years.

Mr. Marx was beloved by the people of New Orleans because of his unusual generosity and gentle heartedness. He was a friend of every one and the enemy of none. He endeared himself to all by his kindness of heart and sympathetic nature. He was a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word. He was especially a friend of the orphans. In his passing away, New Orleans lost one of the oldest and best loved residents of the city; the country, an exemplary citizen; Jewry, a staunch and loyal follower, and B'nai B'rith, one of its best members.

CHICAGO CHURCH FEDERATION DENOUNCES ANTI-SEMITIC AGITATION.

At the Union Ministers' Meeting held on January 31, 1921, at which Rev. Howard Agnew Johnston presided, and which was attended by four hundred ministers representing most of the six hundred Protestant churches identified with the Chicago Church Federation, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, a wide-spread anti-Semitic agitation is being encouraged throughout the country, and various publications are seeking to foster suspicion and distrust against our Jewish fellow-citizens; and

Whereas, we consider all such agitation entirely unprovoked and undeserved, utterly intolerant and un-Christian,

Therefore Be It Resolved, that the Union Ministers' Meeting, gathered under the auspices of the Chicago Church Federation, denounces all such agitation most earnestly and calls upon all of its members to repudiate the same as foreign to our spirit and purpose, since we seek only the most cordial relations with all loyal people in our American citizenship

BAVARIAN GOVERNMENT IS AGAINST ANTI-SEMITISM.

Munich (Jewish News Service)—Having finally come to the conclusion that anti-Semitic pogrom agitation is dangerous for Bavaria itself, the government has now taken steps to combat the anti-Semitic movement.

An order was issued to all police officials not to permit the distribution of anti-Semitic proclamations urging hatred of Jews. The same rule applies to the conduct of the police at meetings where anti-Semitic propaganda is readily to be resorted to.

As a last step the government decided to confiscate an anti-Semitic book entitled "The Jew of the Nineteenth Century."

Since the defeat of the Bolsheviki in Bavaria, a tremendous anti-Semitic propaganda has been going on in the country, and it looked as though Bavaria would follow the footsteps of Hungary. Now the government has come to the conclusion that such agitation would not help it in any way and would not tend to promote peace and order in the country, and therefore undertook the above steps to check the growth of anti-Semitism.

HENRY LASKER.

At a meeting of the General Committee of District No. 1 held in the city of New York on Saturday, January 8, the administration of District No. 1 under the leadership of Brother Henry Lasker of Springfield, Mass., President of the District Grand Lodge was reviewed.

Brother Charles Hartman, addressing the meeting in his official capacity, as member of the Executive Committee of the Order, said that in his opinion work well done by an official of an organization such as ours should be accorded recognition promptly upon performance, instead of postponing all expression of appreciation until the close of the official's term of office, as such recognition of valuable service was not only due, but would besides greatly encourage, strengthen and aid the official in the further performance of the functions of his office. Moved by this spirit Brother Hartman stated that as a member of the Executive Committee he desired to express the high appreciation of that committee, and in so doing he felt certain he was also voicing the sentiments of the members of the General Committee of this district of the exceptionally splendid and successful work that Brother President Lasker had done during the few months since his induction into office, and of the measures for further advancement of the prosperity of the District which he is now vigorously carrying on. He stated that the large increase in membership, in enthusiasm, activities and general progress throughout the District were in large measure due to the initiative, leadership and active persistent labors of President Lasker; that his energetic spirit had been an inspiring force which penetrated and animated all sections of the District, producing the most gratifying results; that he had in fact created a new era of activity and progressive tendencies in the district. Brother Hartman stated that President Lasker surpassed all his predecessors in indefatigable devotion of time and efforts to the affairs of the district and in getting things done and purposes carried out. He extended to President Lasker congratulations upon his past success and the earnest wish of all his colleagues in B'nai B'rith work for continued beneficent achievement during the remainder of his term of office.

JOHN SPARGO ANSWERS ANTI-SEMITIC PROPAGANDA.

Harper and Brothers will publish in the near future the best answer that has thus far appeared to the anti-Semitic propaganda. The book is written by John Spargo and will be on sale some time in February. No one is better fitted than Mr. Spargo to write a book of this character. He is a Socialist who is not afraid of avowing his Socialist faith, but who cannot possibly be under suspicion of being pro-Bolshevist. He is one of the very few Americans who can write from intimate knowledge of the role of the Jews in the Russian movement. Finally, he is not a Jew. His book is a crushing exposure of "The Protocols," and covers thoroughly the entire question of the alleged Jewish conspiratory character of Socialism and Bolshevism.

Mr. Spargo deserves our deepest gratitude because of the initiative which he has taken in mobilizing non-Jewish public opinion against the organized anti-Semitic campaign. It was he who secured the indorsement of President Wilson and 118 other leading Americans to the recent stirring denunciation of anti-Semitism.

THE "MORNING POST" IS STILL ON THE WARPATH.

(London, J. C. B. Service.)

The Morning Post today editorially deals with a report of the Joint Foreign Committee and points out that in June, 1916, the Committee placed a memorandum before the British government requesting intervention in Russia, Roumania and Palestine in behalf of the Jews. Balfour after some months replied that the government could do nothing. Shortly afterwards the Russian revolution took place and Balfour was influenced to grant the Jewish claims upon Palestine. The writer in the Post construes this to indicate that the Jewish world policy directly conflicts with British interests. The writer then severely attacks the Poalei-Zion, who he claims support the revolutionary movement in England.

he Story of a Chicken Which Laid a Golden Egg

By "Hayim the Customer Peddler"

Translated from the Yiddish by Gotthard Deutsch

HERE was once a little chicken called America which laid a golden egg. h, yes, gentlemen a wonderful story it as. The chicken has now for a long time ased to lay her golden eggs. She has en ceased to cackle. But nobody will er forget the golden egg which she laid rmerly. For many years people will tell e story of this golden egg which was laid y the chicken called America.

Mr. Shafran, the secretary of our conegation, Temple Jacob, is one of the felws who missed the lucky moment when e chicken laid the golden egg. One time, any years ago, he was a man who had a nsiderable fortune but he lost every cent hich he had in a real estate boom. That appened about twenty years ago and since at time Mr. Shafran became simulneously a poor man but also a very wise llow. He ceased to believe in hens which y golden eggs. He even ceased to believe all fortunes. When he met a man who as fortunate in speculating in lots or in ouses he ridiculed him just as one would idicule a greenhorn, because Mr. Shafran as paid for his experience and a fellow ho in his younger years has paid tuition a college is apt to consider himself a cholar.

A few years ago there was a great boom houses and lots and people made thouands of dollars by just turning property ver from hand to hand. Shafran, howver, was smart and would not budge. hile people right within his sight made ig fortunes starting without a penny, hafran was afraid to risk a dollar. The ouse in which he lived was offered to im for $5,000 with a deposit of merely 750 but Shafran did not fall for it. "It vill last a while," he said, "but in a short ime a collapse will occur just as it hapened once in Brownsville."

Meantime, somebody else bought the ouse. The new proprietor had barely igned the deed when somebody else ought it from him at a profit of $1,000. The second man took possession of the ouse, painted the roof, fixed the steps of the porch and sold it for $11,000. The third man who bought the house of him was a carpenter and he added another floor with a separate porch, made some small repairs inside and outside, and got $20,000 from a speculator who, three weeks later, sold it for $24,000. The fourth proprietor had barely time to move his furniture into the house when he was offered $28,000 but he simply laughed at the offer. He had just lived in the house two weeks when he was offered $30,000 but he said, "If this house is worth so much to the other fellow, it is worth the same to me." He even refused an offer of $35,000.

Poor Shafran walked the street like a fellow who had lost his mind. I believe that there were many like him. Seeing right under his eyes golden eggs rolling in the streets and others pick them up, Shafran consoled himself by his old statement, "It will end as it ended in Brownsville."

"Beware of sin, Mr. Shafran," said I to him. "Our rabbi said 'Do not give Satan a chance.' Your words may strike an unlucky moment."

"God forbid", Shafran used to say in a tone of apology. "I wish nobody any ill but I paid for my lesson and I know what I know". Days and weeks passed and the hen called America suddenly stopped laying golden eggs just as if someone had cast an evil eye on her. Mr. Shafran who, during the whole period of prosperity, walked the streets in visible depression with a feeling of melancholy, all at once changed and looked happy. Every bankruptcy of a Croesus of Blottetown, every announcement that the value of a house dropped seemed to have added strength to him. Once he came to me fairly radiant and said, "Did you hear the news? The house in which I lived and for which the owner refused $35,000 is now offered for $25,000 and finds no bidder. Nobody has got any money. I bet you that the house will not bring $15,000. I knew that long ago".

A week later Mr. Shafran comes to me with another story: "Pupikovitz has announced an auction sale of all the new houses which he has built. He is already resigned to lose from $75,000 to $100,000. He won't be able to stand it. He is a dead one. The poor fellow thought he would make a fortune in the sale of these houses". A few days later again he comes with another story. "Did you hear of Mr. Kaban? He laid in a large stock of woolen goods. Everybody thought he would become a millionaire and you know what people say now? He is almost down and out. He wants to sell his house and to move to Mosquitobush. I don't believe it but it is enough that people talk in this way".

I looked at Mr. Shafran and I noticed that he must have gained about ten pounds in weight. Next morning he comes again and tells me: "Goggelech is nebich in trouble. His customers became insolvent. In his New York tenements, the tenants strike and he has got troubles by the carload. He wants to sell the houses but if he does he will lose every cent he has. People tell me that he is about to lose his mind. See, that's the end of all the great fortunes. I knew it all the time that it would come so".

"Don't worry about him", said I, "Goggelech has got still more than both of us together".

For a moment a cloud appeared on Shafran's face but he soon regained his composure and said, "Do you know Sheinin of Mosquitobush? You know he worked himself up from a poor shop worker to a man of great wealth. He lived in the most beautiful house of Mosquitobush, had a bedroom suite for which he paid $6,000, three limousines, one for himself, one for his wife and one for his children. Last week a collection was made for him in the Mosquitobush synagog. Now you see the inside of the great fortunes".

"Very sad," said I with a sigh. "I heard a similar story told of Benny Feifrovitch of Ziegville".

"Tell me, tell me, please", said Shafran grasping my coat as if I had made an attempt to run away. "There is nothing to tell", said I. "He saw how prices went up and he put in a large stock and now since prices fell fifty per cent he must give away all that he has to satisfy his creditors".

"Do you know more about him?" said Mr. Shafran punching me in the side. "Tell me all that you know".

I looked at Mr. Shafran and said, "Excuse me, Mr. Shafran, I fail to understand you. Are you no Jew? Have you got no heart? How can you be happy when you hear that your fellow Jews are in trouble?"

"I will tell you", said Mr. Shafran in explanation. "If the good times should have lasted a little longer I should have died of heart trouble. My old woman would nag me day and night, pointing to so many people who became wealthy while I remain a poor man. 'Everybody', she said, 'fairly shoveled money and you are too lazy to take a shovel in your hand'. My gall would burst when she talked to me and told me so many stories of fortunes which other people have made. This fellow made half a million, another one a whole million. I felt that she was right. I am a shlemiehl who does not deserve to live. Now, however, since the wheel began to turn the other way and every week you hear a story of a new failure of a rich man who became poor, my old woman stopped nagging me and as soon as I hear such a story, I tell it to her, so she shall see that I am smart. Of course I have sympathy for my fellow Jew who had a bedroom suite for $6,000 and three limousines but I also deserve sympathy. I would rather lose $100,000 than be constantly day and night scolded by a woman. Now you understand me, Mr. Karp?"

"Of course, I understand you full well. I also have an old woman; may she live and enjoy health".

Editor's Note.

This sketch is one of a series published every Friday in the New York Daily News by Israel Joseph Zevin, who writes under the psuedonym of "Tashrak" humorous comments on current events which he places in the mouth of a fictitious "Hayim the Customer Peddler", an installment dealer living in the fictitious city of Blottetown. The author deserves, with more right than the late Salomon Rabinowitsch (Shalom Alechem), to be called the Yiddish Mark Twain, because his theme is taken from American life.

The So-Called Jewish "Protocols"

A THREE-COLUMN public statement, addressed "To Our Fellow-Citizens" and signed by ten national Jewish societies, which was widely published in the press on December 1, brings to our attention sharply two things—the so-called "Protocols of the Elders of Zion" and the menace of Anti-Semitism in America. Had not the danger of this manifestation of racial and religious prejudice, alien to America and a threat to our national solidarity, been a very real one, these societies would not have concerned themselves thus seriously with the pamphlets in question, and they have opportunely brought into the field of public discussion a matter that is of quite as grave concern to the non-Jewish elements of our population. Anti-Semitism has been one of the historic curses of European society and is one that now impedes reconstruction. To allow it to gain a foothold here and poison our body politic and give the lie to all our protestations of civil and religious liberty, is unthinkable. The problem is one that calls for immediate combined action on the part of Jews and non-Jews alike, frankly examining causes and taking wise measures to meet the issue.

The so-called "Protocols," which called forth the public statement, is an amazing document, full of mystery. It purports to be the protocols or records of a secret Jewish council, but mentions no names, dates, or places. It was first published in Russia in 1905, as a chapter in the second edition of a book entitled, "The Great in the Small", which purported to have been written by one Sergey Nilus. What is said to have been the fourth edition of this work was produced in the printing office of the Monastery of the Holy Trinity, near Moscow, in 1917, on the eve of the Revolution. All these editions disappeared very quickly and it became difficult to obtain a copy. A copy of the 1905 edition is in the British Museum, received there in 1906. A copy of the 1917 edition was brought to America in the fall of that year, and typewritten copies of a translation were rather widely circulated in Government and literary circles with an air of mystery and concealment. Last spring a clumsy translation from the British Museum copy was published in London by Eyre & Spottiswood, under the sensational title of "The Jewish Peril". Recently two different editions have appeared in America; the one, entitled simply "The Protocols," by Small, Maynard & Company, Boston, and the other, "The Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion", by The Beckwith Press, New York. The former volume devotes more than half of its pages to the setting forth of material by which it seeks to show the parallelism between the doctrines of the Protocols and the policies of the Bolsheviki, and the Jewish connection with the latter. The Beckwith edition presents a much better translation. It includes the prologue by Nilus, and the commentary which follows is more restrained and judicial.

It is difficult in limited space to give a comprehensive idea of the contents of the "Protocols" and the political doctrine they expound. Briefly they purport to set forth in detail a scheme for attaining a world-wide domination over governments and peoples, and the methods to be employed in the conspiracy. The political basis upon which the scheme is founded is one of such unmitigated cynicism that compared with it the writings of Machiavelli are childlike and idealistic. The theory announced is that might makes right; that people with evil instincts are more numerous than those with good ones; and that therefore the best results in governing are obtained by intimidation and violence and not by academic argument. Law is only brute force in a masked form. Political freedom is an idea and not a fact, and it is therefore necessary only to infect people with principles of freedom or so-called liberalism in order to weaken government, preliminary to seizing it. Furthermore, it is possible through a bought press and by demagogues, to sow distrust of leaders and institutions in the minds of the people, and at the opportune moment seize power and destroy all opposition by force and terror. Starting with this theory, methods are worked out in detail through some twenty-four chapters, dealing with such topics as controlling the press, influencing public opinion, organizing disorder, manipulating finances and credit, provoking war, and inculcating blind obedience. Every one must be struck by the resemblance of this to the actual conduct of the Leninite despotism. Much of the phraseology used in the "Protocols" is that of Jewish writings, and the plan purports to be an organized scheme of an inner circle of Jewish leaders; and in spite of the total absence of any evidence to this effect, and of the inherent absurdity of the assertion, it is the opportunity thus opened up for attacks upon the Jews that gives to the document an importance which would otherwise be lacking.

As to the origin of the documents, various theories have been advanced. One is that of Lucien Wolf that they were a Russian fabrication based upon similar writings by a certain German, Goedsche by name. Other investigators believe that the documents were fabricated in a Russian Government department, with the assistance furnished by a certain violent French anti-Semite, Martin. They further assert that Sergey Nilus, whose name appears on the Russian publication, is a myth, and that certain persons of that name in Russia had nothing to do with it. On the other hand, internal evidence indicates that the "Protocols" were not written originally in Russian, but were translated from the French; and there is something to be said for the view that Nilus, who published them as a chapter in his book, valued them not as anti-Semitic propaganda but as evidence in support of the premillennial religious theory with which he was obsessed.

It is to be hoped that investigation will finally solve these problems, but after all they are quite beside the main point. Whatever the origin of the "Protocols," the notion that there is, or ever has been, a Jewish conspiracy for the promotion of any such plan as they lay down may unhesitatingly be dismissed as both baseless and absurd. The Jews in general belong to the so-called bourgeois class; many of them are leaders in finance, and they are fully represented in every department of industrial, commercial, and intellectual activity. Among no people is the institution of private property more deeply ingrained, and it is inconceivable that they should foster a movement so suicidal. Furthermore, the very people in Russia upon whom the Bolshevik regime bears most heavily are the Jews themselves, with the exception of those renegades who have risen to place and power by the oppression of their own race. That there are certain individual Jews who share these vicious political theories is undoubtedly true, and it is further true that the very nature of the Russian revolutionary movement and the relations of the Jews in Russia thereto tended to swing an undue proportion of Russian Jews into the Bolshevik phase of it. But one has only to point to the activities of such non-Jews as Upton Sinclair, John Reed, and Max Eastman in this country, and their congeners in England, Italy, Germany, and Russia, to show how unjust and baseless is the charge that places Bolshevik agitation at the door of the Jewish people.

It is well that the "Protocols" have now been published. Circulated surreptitiously, with dark hints and malicious insinuation, they tended to create a popular obsession of a racial plot, and it is one of the weaknesses of human nature that people should lend themselves so easily to this particular kind of delusion, as witness the monstrous Popish-plot obsession in which the infamous Titus Oates was the leading figure. Such delusions thrive upon secrecy, and their devotees find on every hand confirmation in the most innocent transactions. In this connection must be mentioned the publication of a series of articles in the London Morning Post, which have now been reproduced in book form under the title of "The Cause of the World's Unrest". Here are set forth suspicions for which no one assumes responsibility or gives authority, and inferences which are transparently puerile; and yet the effect upon the prejudiced or uncritical mind is to give standing to the theory

(Continued on page 11.)

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

VI.

WE HAVE dealt in two examples with the attitude of the founder of Christianity towards the law. We saw that he was no friend of a "blue" Sabbath, and on the other hand a foe to divorce in all cases but perhaps one. Now among the contemporary Jewish teachers, as ever after, there were those of milder disposition and lenient in the application of the law and those of the sterner and stricter kind given to uncompromising rigorism. We all have heard of Shammai who, when his daughter-in-law was delivered of a man-child on the festival of Tabernacles, had the ceiling opened so that the infant boy might dwell in a booth; and we know that he held strict views on the subject of divorce, confining it to one cause. He and his school were opposed by Hillel and his, and it is recorded as an exception that in three instances only Hillel maintained against his rival the rigorist view. It might, therefore, be said that in the matter of divorce Jesus ranged himself on the side of Shammai, just as in his saying that man is sovereign over the Sabbath he falls in with a teacher by the name of Simeon ben Menasia. But all this is not quite to the point, as Christian scholars, who are fully aware of the parallels, still insist that the antagonism between their master and the Jewish teachers remains, that the position in each case is of a different type.

The question before us is the interpretation of law. Law is law, whether it is adjudicated by a judge in court or by ecclesiastical authority. It is in the essence of law that it is unbending. So long as the law is on the statute books it must be obeyed, and certainly when the book in which the law is laid down is divine. But the law must needs be expressed in language, and once it has been so framed it is subject to interpretation. Interpretation ultimately rests on common sense. When our own highest court in the land renders a decision, it will be found that it is not so much a matter of the knowledge of law, but rather of its meaning. The court simply defines the meaning of the law, and it makes use of a reasoning process intelligible to the layman. Where a divine law is recognized, there must be a body of teachers competent to define it in plain terms. The matter is not quite so simple. In the first instance the codified law, and be it ever so specific, cannot possibly cover all new cases. Here there open up the floodgates of casuistry, that subtle reasoning which finds similarities and dissimilarities. An ingenius interpreter will always detect a new angle. There will naturally be division of opinion. What a modern lawyer can do by way of argument we all know. The rabbis would have, as members of the highest court, men so deft at reasoning that they will argue that a thing clearly and unmistakably forbidden is quite lawful, and that by a hundred fifty arguments. One need only read the well-known literature of "responses", ancient and modern. You will find that the questioner and the respondent, both versed in the law, both acute reasoners, pile up arguments upon arguments, cite multifarious precedents from all corners of the juristic literature, and they all turn upon the one question, "Is the present case on all fours with them?" In other words, interpretation of Jewish law is not merely a matter, to speak of modern conditions, for the professor or expert who merely knows his sources. It is more than that. It requires argumentative power; and in that side men will differ. In fact, the layman may just as well know it, scientific interpretation, which is of the simplest kind, is one thing, and legal interpretation quite another. Ultimately it is a question of authority. Thus, for instance, authority is vested in this country in the Supreme Court. It is also a matter of majority vote. The minority may dissent; but the majority must be obeyed. And so in Jewish law it is not the verdict of an expert that counts, but the decision of an authoritative person, a rabbi in Israel holding office, a bishop not ordained, but accepted as such by his compeers and the laity.

[illegible] authority is requisite in order to [illegible] whether a new case is covered by [illegible] law, it is still more indispensable [illegible] the new case is seen to arise [illegible] conditions. The law cannot be abrogated. That is quite true. The apostle Paul cut the Gordian knot by breaking with the law entirely. Jesus, we are told by competent Christian scholars, did not abrogate the law. He came to "fulfill" it. In other words, he used the method of reinterpretation. That is quite another thing than interpretation. It is not enough to know the law. That is simply a matter of school knowledge. It means a good memory and betokens long application. Wherever a system of law obtains, changed conditions make it necessary to go back to the intent of the law. All lawyers and all judges know what is meant by circumventing the law. It is not worship of the letter that brings us to this pass. It is the serious consideration that respect for the law must be maintained at all hazards. It is at the root of the stability of human society. But the law must be humanized. We must recognize that times do change. Hillel recognized it when the law cancelling debts in the seventh year was made nugatory by the refusal to lend money. Hillel did not abolish the law. He could not; but in the changed conditions he found a way out. The law remains in force, and yet it becomes inoperative. And so it has happened again and again in the history of Jewish law. Here was requisite above and beyond mere learning, the sympathy with the needs of one's own kind, and an understanding of modified conditions of life. We might cite cases from most recent decisions by Jewish rabbis in high authority, where in defiance of the strict letter of the law a way out was found. But it must be a man not merely in authority, but a man who by virtue of his office, not a teaching office, but a pastoral office, is in touch with life. Such a one may indeed assume sovereignty over the law. For the true leader will always remember that an unbending attitude will force the people to take the law into their own hands, and then the whole system will topple over.

The Jewish teacher who places Jewish law squarely upon the codes, stretches it out full length—until it expires, does a disservice to Judaism. The method is farthest from the procedure of all times. Moreover, the rabbi is not merely knower of the law and its authoritative interpreter. By virtue of his pastoral office he is preacher. What he cannot accomplish by mere teaching, he does encompass by preaching to the conscience of the individual and of the people at large. He is moral guide as well as defender of the majesty of law; for higher than law is the human conscience which deepens with age while the law remains static. No rabbi in Israel will gainsay that "fulfilling" the law means reinterpreting it in every age to suit altered conditions. Not the law is sacred, but the purpose behind the law. Christian scholars claim that Jesus deepened the law by leading it back to first principles. The rabbis at all times in their allocutions to the people did likewise. Mechanical piety was not sufficient. What counted was the inward piety, the piety of the heart; but the danger existed that the enthusiasm engendered by eloquent and solemn appeals to first principles might cool down, and then when once weaned from the strict discipline of the reign of unquestioned law men might become lax in quite ordinary obligations. The history of the Church in its early career shows that where the Pauline movement was followed out grave offences against morality occurred. The organized Church understood too well what the tutelage of the law meant in the way of discipline. It did not restore the Mosaic code, but it did incorporate a good bit of it, and at last it created its own code. Even a Christian casuistry came into being. How it operates will be shown in the forthcoming paper which will treat non-resistance to evil. Casuistry results out of changed conditions to which an ancient law or an ancient saying of an authoritative person is being applied. Back of it is the reverence for the rules and verities by which mankind has lived, and the fear that when impaired in one point there will ensue a loss of equilibrium which will unseat the holiest and dearest. Such is the attitude of all organized religion, whether among Jews or Christians.

Jews and Apostates in the Russian Opera

By Joseph Winogradow, an Opera Singer

Translated from the Yiddish in the Vorwaerts

AFTER my first appearance in Odessa before the illustrious Anton Rubinstein I was engaged for eight years as singer under the celebrated opera manager, Kartawow, of Wilna. We used to make tours with our manager all over Russia and besides I used to go occasionally to Italy for training, during the summer in the first years of my career.

Kartawow, a Christian, was a noble and kind character, also an excellent artist. He always had Jewish members in his company and treated them very kindly, having a truly broad-minded Russian soul. While we were traveling one summer our good and noble manager died suddenly in Cherson. His death was a terrible loss for the young striving artists, whom he always tried to encourage. He, indeed, had an especially warm spot for Jewish artists who were persecuted by the police and whom for this reason Kartawow took under his protection like a true father.

The years, which I spent as a member of his company in Charkow, were the happiest of my life. There was only one trouble which disturbed my happiness and this was the epidemic of apostasy among the Jewish artists. It required truly an iron will to resist the temptation of apostasy. The situation of the Jewish members of an opera company was always precarious. Within the Jewish pale there were no regular opera houses and in the large Russian cities which possessed operas and theaters a Jew was not permited to live. In order to make his way and to earn a living, a Jewish artist needed a special permit of residence outside of the pale. Usually the managers of opera houses were men of influence with connections in the highest circles of Russian society and through these connections it became possible to obtain from the police authorities, by all sorts of tricks, a special permit for Jewish artists. It was not so easy as the thing reads. Many Jewish artists lost patience owing to the constant persecutions of the police and their never-ending fears of a sudden order of expulsion and in their despair they made an end of it, having a few drops of water sprinkled on their head and thus getting rid of all troubles. These apostasies became a sort of epidemic. Every case made my heart beat in fear. With every report of the baptism of a Jewish artist we were trembling in the apprehension who will be the next. Everybody understood that not a single one of these unfortunate people had taken the step with a light heart. It was as if we would watch the flies drop from the ceiling on a cold fall day.

I remember just offhand a few names of those who in these days abandoned their religion. There was the brilliant Medvediev, the father of Jacob Medvediev who, having returned to Judaism and having become a Yiddish singer in New York, died there in poverty. He was the son of a rabbi of Bielozerkov. There was the baritone Martakov, the son of a poor tailor of Rostov. There was his townsman, Maxakov, and Lubimov, a great tenor and manager of various excellent opera companies. There were others who, while standing high, remained Jews in spite of all temptations. Among them were Kamianski, Davidoff and I. We stood by our Jewish conviction and would not budge.

Poor Lubimov met with the most tragic end. His original name was Brandhendler and he was the son of very pious people from Brest Litovsk.

During the summer he would sing as tenor in various opera houses, and would organize his own opera company of high class artists, with whom he would appear in various Russian cities on the Wolga River.

I once asked him boldly: "Tell me Vladimir Ivanowitch, what made you embrace Christianity"? He looked at me with an expression of terror and said "Please do not ask me. This recollection is undermining my health".

Indeed, when I put the question to him I did it with trepidation. I saw constantly similar cases and I was afraid for myself. Each time when I got a new engagement I presented to the managers an ultimatum. They either must get for me a permit of residence outside of the pale or I shall not sign the contract. Therefore, I wanted to know from Lubimov, whether there was a way by which one could avoid apostasy. I told him my reasons for the question and he told me his story.

"I was born", he said, "in Brest Litovsk. My father was a rabbi. Up to the age of sixteen I studied Talmud in the Yeshibah, was a zealous student and felt perfectly happy and contented in spite of my poverty. My misfortune was that the Lord had afflicted me with a love of music. The city, the Yeshibah, my father's parsonage and my whole environment became too narrow for me. I felt a longing for the world outside. I wanted to sing and to study. At any hour of day or night I would stand in front of the houses of the rich when there was an entertainment with singing and piano. My parents, fearing for my health, and desiring to save me from what they considered a mental aberration, married me when I was sixteen years old. I had never seen the girl whom I married before the day of our wedding. My home also was too narrow. I felt as if I were choking and, in order to save myself, I openly violated the laws of religion and committed all sorts of scandalous acts. It was the only way in which I could hope that I would be driven from home. I was not driven out, but constantly persecuted and with all that I submitted two years, until I could not stand it any longer and ran away to Moscow where I entered the conservatory.

"In Moscow I arrived, a poor boy without any education outside of my Talmudic studies. Charitable Christian people took an interest in me and assisted me in obtaining a musical education so that I could reach my goal and become an opera singer. I did everything which my benefactors asked me to do. I converted to Christianity and adopted the name Vladimir Ivanowitch Lubimov. For a while I shook off all recollections of my former life and rose from step to step until I became a prominent member of the imperial opera. While I was studying in the conservatory I fell in love with another student, a beautiful Christian girl. We married but our married life was not happy. She constantly taunted me with my Jewish birth and finally we separated.

"This made me feel miserable. I considered my life a failure and devoted myself to music exclusively. Yet, even this could not heal the wound of my heart. My soul is crushed beneath a terrible burden. I am constantly looking with a feeling of jealousy upon every Jewish singer who remained true to his faith. I am haunted by the fear that I may die a Christian."

In this way Lubimov revealed to me his innermost heart. He was constantly terrified by the idea that he would die without shaking off the lie of his life. He died ten years later and I was standing at his death-bed and could watch his terrible agony that he would die a Christian.

Lubimov's health began to fail and as he never was a good financier he soon lost all that he had and lived in dire want. I was sitting in a restaurant with Medveviev and Tartakov, both of whom were apostates like Lubimov, when someone entered in a hurry, telling me that Lubimov was seriously ill. I hastened to his bedside. He was lying in a room which presented a picture of direst poverty. Its furniture consisted of a few worm-eaten chairs, a shaky table and a bed. Lubimov was lying in his bed with a deadly pallor on his face, more dead than alive. An old Christian woman attended him. There was no medicine nor food. The poor patient was really suffering from starvation and neglect. When he saw me he was overjoyed. He embraced me and said with sobs, "I want to tell you something in secret". I sent the old woman away under a pretext, giving her money that she should buy some milk and call a doctor.

When she had left the room Lubimov said to me with a weak voice, "I know that I am going to die". He added, constantly interrupted by sobs, "For God's

(Continued on page 11.)

SILVER JUBILEE CELEBRATION, WIEN LODGE, VIENNA, AUSTRIA.

THE jubilee festival arranged by Wien Lodge, the oldest lodge of our city, in celebration of her twenty-fifth anniversary took place November 14, 1920. This was a celebration in keeping with the important place which the Lodge has made for itself in the community life of Vienna, and in harmony with the standing of our Order. To make it possible for all the Viennese brethren and their ladies to attend these ceremonies one of the prettiest and largest halls of Vienna, the Concert House, was rented for the occasion. It was a beautiful picture worthy of the splendid family feast, for such it was, since almost all of the brethren and their wives were in attendance. Long before the appointed hour a jovial crowd in festive attire filled the place. The great humanitarian Associations and not less so those eminent organizations which have the promotion of the cultural interests of Judaism as their aim each sent their prominent representatives. Considering that our brethren, who are recruited from the foremost circles of the Viennese Jewish community, are everywhere at the head of those associations which, working in the spirit of the lodge ideal, have for their aim the elevation of the social standard of our coreligionists, we can readily say that whosoever among the Viennese Jewish community rightfully claims to be entitled to honor and dignity, was present at these festivities. The President, Brother Dr. Edmund Kohn, after a solemn organ prelude, welcomed the attending visitors, among which were the worthy Grand Master, Professor Dr. Sol. Ehrmann, the representative of District No. 10, Dr. Sonnenschein, and delegates of the Augustin Keller Lodge of Zurich, of Bohemia, Praga, Philantropia, Silesia, and Moravia Lodges of District X, the representative of the Orient Lodge, and of the Jerusalem Lodge. Especially noteworthy was the presence of the President of the Viennese Congregation with the Chief Rabbi, Dr. Chajes, as delegates of the Alliance-Israelite of Vienna, Dr. Braun and other delegates of the many Societies under the auspices of Wien Lodge.

The culmination point of the feast was reached with the masterful address by the esteemed Ex-President, Professor Dr. Jerusalem, who reviewed in a superior, classical manner the activities of the lodge. Concluding his address, which was often interrupted by vigorous applause, he exhorted the audience, in heart-stirring words not to get discouraged by the depressing times, but to continue working for the realization of our ideals with renewed effort in the future as they did in the past, in the spirit of the founders of the lodge. Tumultuous applause was the reward of the masterful address.

Prof. Dr. Ehrmann presented thereafter the congratulations of the Grand Lodge in his usual brilliant manner. Likewise did Ex-President Dr. Sonneschein, the delegate of District X, give expression in eloquent terms to the former intimate connections pointing out that although there exists now an apparent political division, the old-time intimate relationship continues as heretofore. Brother Kempler, Vice President of the Viennese Congregation, conveyed the greetings of the Board of Directors. He recalled in affectionate manner the great service rendered by the departed brothers of Wien Lodge, who in their capacity as directors of the congregation, have earned for themselves a grateful remembrance.

Brother Dr. Weiss, President of Eintracht Lodge and its delegate, addressed us in the name of the three Viennese Lodges. In a genial manner he compared the relation of the two lodges to that of a tender-hearted mother and her prospering daughter.

Dr. Sonnenschein, President of the Jewish Young Peoples League, gave expression to sentiments of gratitude which filled the hearts of its members for the lodge. These are mostly sons of lodge members and their relatives. Brother Dr. Bollag conveyed in well chosen words the greetings of the Augustin Keller Lodge, of Zurich, Switzerland, while the Grand Orator expressed the greetings of all other lodges that were not represented by special delegates.

This was really a festival in the noblest sense of the word, and will not soon be forgotten by those participating therein —a festival worthy of the importance of our beloved Order.

THE SO-CALLED JEWISH PROTOCOLS.

(Continued from page 9.)

of a great conspiracy. Of a similar character are a series of articles published by Henry Ford in his weekly, the Dearborn Independent. Because of this, the public declaration of the ten national Jewish societies is timely and will clear the atmosphere. Not the least of the services done by the statement is its exposure of the utter falsity of the charges which identify the Jewish people, either in Russia or elsewhere, with the cause of Bolshevism or of anti-patriotism. It is only by shutting one's eyes to all the evidence that points the other way that one can be led to entertain any such belief. The signers of the statement—many of whom are themselves fine examples of sterling American citizenship and public spirit —point with justified indignation to that evidence, and we believe that they are equally justified in the assertion of their "abiding confidence that the spirit of justice and fairness" which animates the American people "will not permit this campaign of slander and libel to go unreproved."—[The Weekly Review.

JUSTICE TO THE JEW.

(Continued from page 1.)

be done to stir up racial antipathies.

But apparently that is not the feeling of a certain well known automobile manufacturer in our country, who within the last few months has launched a violent Anti-Semitic campaign of poison propaganda in the face of the American people. It seems quite a moral relapse, this step from his ill-fated peaceship to the deliberate and well planned attempt to stir up racial prejudice between American citizens. Failing in his heavenly peace mission, will he now prostitute his profits to the service of the infernal demon of race hatred? Will he deliberately stir up strife among his countrymen?

Mr. Ford talks about the "Jewish-Bolshevist" and would have us believe the Jews are at the bottom of the trouble in Russia. He does not seem to know that the Jews are almost solid against Bolshevism; that the Zionist party, which comprises seventy per cent of the Jewish population, is under the Bolshevist ban and one hundred and seven of its leaders are in a Moscow prison. But, as always, somebody has to be the scapegoat and Mr. Ford is informing us that he has chosen the Jew for that purpose.

The manufacturer openly voices suspicion of the loyalty and patriotism of the Jew in this country. That is a hard thing for a man to say of 225,000 Jewish lads who were ready to give their lives to protect his home and his business, especially when they received their full proportion of citations for bravery, and as great a per cent of them were volunteers as of any other section of our people.

Surely, Mr. Ford is having a hard time finding ways of spending his money if he must hire the brains of other men, who are willing to sell themselves to such a task, and set them to work upon a defamation campaign against our Jewish citizens. There are many high-minded, public-spirited Jewish citizens in this country whose splendid example in works of social betterment could suggest to Mr. Ford how he might scatter his superfluous ducats in such a way as to make for public good rather than for race hatred.

And it might be interesting to know what Mr. Roosevelt had to say of Mr. Ford. I quote from John J. Lear's recent book "Talks with T. R." "Ford", said President Roosevelt, "is a pretty good man for making cheap automobiles. He makes a good car for the money, and in his sphere he has done a very good work. But he won't stick to his sphere. He would instruct Cosmos. It would not be so bad if he knew anything about the matters outside of automobiles that he attempts to manage and direct. He does not seem to have the faintest idea of such matters. He knows nothing of world politics yet he sets himself up, with the aid of an army of press agents, as the man who must teach everybody. He has no conception of what we mean by Americanism and he has an extreme idea of the importance and power of his money. He is ignorant, yet because he has been so successful in motors, many, many people, hardly as ignorant as himself, think him wise in all things, and allow him to influence their views."

But the thoughtful people of the world know that peace and harmony can come only after we are all willing to rise above the old racial antipathies. And from all such attempts on the part of narrow minded individuals to propagate their strife-begetting prejudices we must turn once more to the Jew of Nazareth and hear again his words of tolerance, fellow-sympathy, universal brotherhood, and that all-abounding good will wide as the farthest horizons, and impartial as the over-arching sky.

Who tamed your lawless Tartar blood?
What David bearded in her den
The Russian bear in ages when
You strode your black, unbridled stud,
A skin-clad savage of your steppes?
Why, one who now sits low and weeps,
Why, one who now wails out to you—
The Jew, the Jew, the homeless Jew.

Who girt the thews of your young prime
And bound your fierce divided force?
Why, who but Moses shaped your course
United down the groves of time?
Your mighty millions all today
The hated, homeless Jew obey.
Who taught all poetry to you?
The Jew, the Jew, the hated Jew.

Who taught you tender bible tales
Of honey-lands, of milk and wine?
Of happy, peaceful Palestine?
Of Jordan's holy harvest vales?
Who gave the patient Christ? I say,
Who gave your Christian creed? Yea, year,
Who gave your very God to you?
Your Jew, Your Jew! Your hated Jew!
—[Joaquin Miller, to Russia.

JEW AND APOSTATES.

(Continued from page 10.)

sake, see to it that I shall be buried in a Jewish cemetery covered with a Tallith". I promised it, of course, although I knew just as well as he did that it would be impossible because the Russian law would not allow a converted Jew to be buried in a Jewish cemetery, but I felt that this lie was pardonable because I saw that he was dying and he hardly had strength enough to talk. Then he asked me to recite with him the death-bed confession. To tell the truth, I did not remember well the Hebrew words and said as much as I was able to recite from memory. The poor man was barely able to repeat the words after me in a whisper. Then, unable to speak, he pointed to a Hebrew amulet which he wore on his breast and which he had taken along from his home and kept all the time. It contained the ten commandments in Hebrew. He handed it to me and asked me to place it in his coffin.

While I was talking to him the old woman returned and brought a Russian priest. It seemed that the parson had stood outside of the door for a while and had listened while I recited with the patient the Hebrew death-bed prayer. He blurted out that he would have me arrested for attempting to entice a Christian from "the only true religion", which is a serious crime. Naturally I would take no chances and ran away as fast as I could, leaving poor Lubimov in the hands of the priest and the old woman attendant who would not call a doctor but rather a priest. Returning to the restaurant I told my companions the story and we sent doctors at once, but the poor man was beyond help and when I returned late in the evening I saw that he was in his death throes. He barely could whisper to me, "Recite with me the Shema". I did so while he cried bitterly and still summoned enough strength to repeat the two words, "Shema Yisroel", and then he breathed his last. I took the amulet from his breast and, pretending to see the suit in which he was to be buried, I placed that amulet in the pocket of his coat. Then I left the body of the former Talmud student and descending the stairs I met the priest again, who came to get the fear-haunted Jewish soul, which he wanted to bring to a heaven for which the poor martyr never had cared.

LEAGUE SHOULD TRY GENERAL BALAKHOWITCH.

(Paris, J. C. B. Service.)

M. Hindes, one of the Russian representatives on the Committee of Jewish Delegations, which is now meeting in this city, proposed that the Committee should call upon the League of Nations to bring General Balakhowitch before a tribunal of justice in connection with the pogroms in Poland and White Russia for which he is said to be responsible.

CURRENT EVENTS.

(Continued from page 5.)

It was proposed to establish a standard of Yiddish orthography and expression. The scheme has just now some good prospects in Roumania, where the government is willing to allow Yiddish as the language of Jewish schools.

A cable recently received anounced the death of the celebrated astronomer, Professor Wm. Foerster of Berlin, who died at the age of 88. He was one of the oldest champions of the Jewish cause against anti-Semitism and only recently protested against the resolution of the student fraternities to exclude Jews from membership.

An unconfirmed report tells of the assassination of the apostate and international crook, Ignatius Timothy Tribich Lincoln, whose extradition to England from this country created a great sensation at the time. Men of his type are apt to arise from the dead, although according to the Talmud, the wicked are already dead while they are alive.

STATE DEPARTMENT SAYS VIENNA REFUGEES NOT BEING EXPELLED.

The Provisional American Jewish Congress received a communication from the State Department, Washington, D. C., giving the result of the investigation which the American Commissioner in Vienna has made into the matter in accordance with the request addressed to the Department.

This statement came in response to the representations made to the Department of State by Mr. Rothenberg and Dr. Stephen S. Wise on December 2 on the basis of a cable that was received from Dr. Stricker.

The letter received from the Department of State is as follows:

January 22, 1921.

Mr. Morris Rothenberg,
Chairman Executive Committee,
American Jewish Congress,
New York City.

Sir:

Referring to your telegraphic inquiry of December 2, 1920, addressed to the Secretary of State, and the reply of the State Department dated December 9, 1920, both relative to the reported intention to expel Galician Jewish refugees from Vienna, the following information just received from the American Commissioner in Vienna is forwarded for your information.

There would seem to be no intention on the part of the Vienna authorities to expel indiscriminately Galician Jewish refugees. Certain Jewish societies in Vienna have, on the other hand, themselves voluntarily offered to find suitable dwelling places in Poland for about four thousand Galician families now residing in Vienna. This operation, it is anticipated, will not take place suddenly, but will extend over a period of three or four months.

It is further understood that the Polish Minister in Vienna is cooperating with Jewish societies and Austrian authorities and has promised to facilitate the granting of visas for Poland in order to enable these people to proceed to their homes, notwithstanding the fact that Poland has hitherto been unwilling to aid in the repatriation of her nationals.

Your obedient servant,
For the Acting Secretary of State:
ALVEY A. ADEE,
Second Assistant Secretary.

The telegram addressed to the State Department on December 2 was as follows:

Hon. Bainbridge Colby,
State Department,
Washington, D. C.

We are greatly disturbed by most urgent dispatches from Vienna beseeching us to intervene with our government to avert the tragedy of expulsion of tens of thousands of Galician Jewish refugees from Vienna. We believe that an appeal from us through the American Mission would avail to prevent inflicting this added calamity upon a terribly stricken, helpless population who have fled to Vienna as only refuge from persecution hunger pogroms.

SIX MILLION TYPHUS SUFFERERS IN RUSSIA.

(Constantinople, J. C. B. Service.)

Statistics issued by the Health Commissariat of Russia show that there are at present six million cases of typhus according to advices received here from the Crimea.

A Tribute to Portland Lodge

Portland, Ore., December 23, 1920.

To the General Committee,
District No. 4, I. O. B. B.,
San Francisco, Calif.

Brethren:

I presume you know I have during this last year affiliated with Portland Lodge, although I have not been able to attend very often. They had an election last Tuesday evening, and I attended. I am trying to find words in which to picture to you the astonishment with which I witnessed the most remarkable meeting of the kind which it has ever been my privilege to attend, and I felt it would do you all good to receive my report about it, so will tell it to you in about the sequence in which I received my own impressions.

Prior to the meeting, I received from Brother Jess Rich the enclosed postal notice, reminding me of the election, and announcing his candidacy for the office of Outside Guardian. It caused me to smile, as I did not imagine that there would be any real contest for this office, the lowest on the entire list. In my day, which seems now like ancient history, we usually had to draft men to serve in these humbler stations. I, therefore, assumed that Jess was slated to take this office, and that this was just his way of shooting a little pep into the situation.

I got to the lodge a little late, and found a record-breaking attendance already on hand, with more coming by every car, and the entire stairway pre-empted by eager partisans soliciting votes for different contestants for two offices, Inside and Outside Guard. This was my first intimation that a real contest was raging, and when I got into the lodge room any doubts I may yet have entertained on the subject immediately disappeared, because while I was yet in the act of respectfully saluting the President from the altar, in due and ancient form, I was vaguely aware of a number of my more intimate acquaintances trying to "wireless" me for my attention.

These "wireless" messages, however, did not quite reach me, because my entire attention became fixed upon what I might designate as the "motif" of the decorative scheme for this particular meeting. It consisted of banners, pendants, placards, etc., bespeaking for the different candidates the favor and suffrage of the assembled electorate.

It was exactly the same stage-setting as we used to witness in the old days when the political convention as an institution was honored in the land, except that in those conventions men struggled desperately for success, because success meant jobs with real salaries and possible promotion in the public service. Here it could mean only the opportunity to serve and to sacrifice, in the humblest of all the stations. Yet here was this remarkable contest going at fever-heat, with partisanship almost beyond description, and noisy, eager manifestations, punctuated with band music, college-yells, etc. It made me feel young again.

Just as soon as I had taken my seat, I was importuned on all sides to vote for each and every candidate, and before I got down to actually casting my ballot, I was genuinely sorry not to be able to vote for each of them, because they were all such good material, all practically equal in merit, and all such good sports. They all shook hands before and after the vote, and the losers all moved to make it unanimous, and pledged anew their loyalty and continued service. It was the kind of thing that made one proud both of the Judaism and the Americanism thus jointly manifested.

I then learned that this contest had been going on for several weeks, with organized committees, campaign managers, etc., and I again marvelled to account for it all, but I can understand it better now. It simply means that Portland Lodge has become one of the really notable B. B. Lodges of the country, and these young men consider it an honor and an opportunity to get into the line of promotion that leads ultimately to the Presidency of the lodge and to membership in the Grand Lodge. We used to see that sort of thing in Masonic Lodges, but I submit to my old colleagues whether this is or is not something refreshingly [illegible] B'nai B'rith affairs.

[illegible] the election proceeded I received [illegible] the different candidates, [illegible] the last two, were elected by acclamation. Practically all of these men are college graduates, one in fact being a college professor, and all the young men who were eligible had seen service during the late war. I felt like getting up and giving three cheers every time one of their names was mentioned.

How many do you imagine were in attendance? A quorum, I can assure you, and then some. Why, when the tellers were counting the votes, ballot by ballot, it sounded like a national convention was in session. The total showed 215 members present and voting. The contests were very close, showing that all the candidates were nearly equal in merit and following. After the election, the successful candidate for Outer Guard distributed choice cigars absolutely gratis, and would have provided them just the same if his opponent had happened to win.

I may mention also as a fine evidence of delicacy and chivalry, that Jess Rich particularly requested that the cigars be not distributed until after the vote, so as not to appear to be influencing, or attempting to influence with complimentary cigars, the vote of any of the members. Your poets and bards may sing their songs of chivalry, but in real life I have seldom encountered anything more delicate than this generous thing that Jess Rich did, and in a flash it illumined for me what fineness there is in his make-up, beneath his jolly, smiling exterior.

It was altogether a wonderful meeting, and a fitting valedictory for Brother Sig. Lipman, the retiring President, because the whole meeting might be deemed in a sense as the climax of his indefatigable personal efforts, not alone of the year past, but also of all the intervening years since the two lodges were consolidated. Sig is a veritable human dynamo, and has "a way with him" that is irresistible. He probably has influenced more men to join here than any other men—much more. I know he "got" me, and I can judge from this how successful his methods must have been with others. He will be a welcome and valuable addition to the Grand Lodge.

Now just a personal word. Circumstances have been such as to prevent me for years from being active in the B'nai B'rith work, but I got so enthused and inspired by this recent meeting of Portland Lodge that I publicly pledged myself to attend more or less regularly, and I hope that I may find opportunity now and then to contribute again something useful and helpful to the program of the Order. By the way, do you remember what a fine session we had in Portland the last time? Well, don't be surprised if you find this session even finer. With all of this rambling talk, I did overlook to mention that Portland Lodge always has an attendance of from 175 to 225 at their regular meetings. That's going some. What?

Fraternal greetings to all, and here's hoping you will all be with us at the session of 1921.

Yours in B., B., L., and H.,
GEORGE N. BLACK.

JACOB B. ULLMAN LODGE, STAMFORD, CONN.

At one of the largest attended meetings, held on January 26, 1921, Judge Joseph G. Shapiro, chairman of the State Board of Deputies of Connecticut, installed the newly elected officers of Jacob B. Ullman Lodge. The regular business of the meeting was conducted with much enthusiasm and it was with much pleasure that the gavel was turned over by the retiring President to Judge Joseph G. Shapiro for the installation of the newly elected officers.

Jacob B. Ullman Lodge has made fine strides during the past year and is planning a very active program for the remainder of the season.

After the installation, the ladies had prepared an informal buffet lunch and the enthusiasm among them was even as great as among the men and they seemed to regard their lodge and the Order itself as the finest type of representative Judaism and one they were proud to be associated with.

Arrangements were made for several auto parties to come to Bridgeport on February 6, when Harmony Lodge is to give a reception and dinner in honor of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York.

It is also expected that a number of members will attend the District Convention to be held in May.

HAR SINAI LODGE, No. 8, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Har Sinai Lodge entertained its members and their ladies at their annual banquet, which was held at the Hotel Majestic on Sunday evening, December 26, 1920.

This annual banquet is one of the social events in the B'nai B'rith circles of Philadelphia and is always looked forward to by the members of Har Sinai Lodge. Over four hundred guests were present and participated in a very enjoyable evening.

The lodge had invited as its guests the members of the Grand Lodge residing in Philadelphia and as its special guests its life members, who are elected to that honor after having been a member of the lodge for fifty years. This distinction is held by three members of whom Abraham Aschenbrand and Gottfried Levi were present, while the third, Joseph W. Loeb, was unable to attend on account of illness but sent his greetings.

Joseph W. Salus, Esq., Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 3, presided as toastmaster and the toasts were responded to by David Bortin, Esq., President of District Grand Lodge, No. 3; Jacob Singer, Esq., a member of the Executive Committee of the Constitutional Grand Lodge; Edward Davis, Esq., of Lincoln Lodge, and Hon. J. Washington Logue, a former member of Congress.

The speakers were heartily received and their talks gave plenty of food for thought concerning the current Jewish topics that are at present confronting our people.

Following the dinner, the guests participated in dancing and the affair was conceded by every one to have been the grandest social success of this lodge in recent years, and the "Boosters" of the lodge, who were the committee in charge, received the praise and congratulations of everyone present for having arranged so successful an evening.

Since the organization of the committee known as the "Boosters," Har Sinai Lodge during the past twelve months has increased its membership over one hundred and fifty per cent. and from present indications before long will rank as the leading lodge of District No. 3, not only as to its activities but also in number of members on its roster.

One of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by this lodge took place on Wednesday evening, January 19, at the Hotel Majestic. A class of sixty candidates was initiated by the degree team and there was a total attendance of about two hundred members.

The address to the newly-initiated candidates was made by Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, United States Circuit Judge of St. Louis, who is also President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, I. O. B. B. Judge Rosenfeld also addressed the lodge and gave an interesting resume of the work of the Order, paying particular attention to the Social Service work and the efforts of the Anti-Defamation League. The Judge also installed the officers of the lodge in a most unusual and pleasing manner.

Brother Albert A. Light, the new President, outlined some of the work which he intends to carry through during his administration and has been promised the hearty cooperation of a large number of the members.

A short but delightful entertainment was supplied by Mr. Joseph H. Moss of the Cafe Beaux Arts and all the members seemed to enjoy both the entertainment and luncheon which followed it.

The membership campaign is moving along steadily and surely, two hundred members having joined the lodge within the last three months and an additional number being now on the waiting list.

The Boosters Committee intends to arrange for another delightful affair to take place during the spring.

For the meeting on Wednesday, February 16, it is proposed to have a prominent speaker address the gathering.

JACOB H. SCHIFF LODGE, No. 694, LANSING, MICHIGAN.

On Sunday, January 16, 1921, Mr. Leon L. Lewis, Secretary of the Anti-Defamation League paid an official visit to Jacob H. Schiff Lodge and addressed the open meeting on the subject, "The Anti-Defamation League—Its Past and Future." There were about 150 present, including practically the entire Jewish community of the city. The officers for the ensuing year were installed at the same time [illegible] Brother Edward Lichtig of Bay City, as a representative of the Grand Lodge.

LAKE CITIES LODGE, FORT WILLIAM, CANADA.

The principal guest for our B'nai B'rith Day was Brother Rev. H. J. Samuel of Winnipeg Lodge, No. 650, who had kindly consented to address our lodge for the occasion. Rev. Samuel has also consented to inspect the Sunday School children, under the auspices of Lake Cities Lodge, Independent Order B'nai B'rith. The school has been organized over one year and it is one of the best things the B'nai B'rith has accomplished in the cities of Fort William and Port Arthur. The school consists of seven classes, of which five are conducted in Fort William and two in Port Arthur. The teachers have kindly consented to devote their time gratis. Upon the arrival of Rev. Samuel, the children were assembled in the Shaarej Shomajim School. The inspection was made by the Principal, Mr. D. Breslove, followed by Rev. Samuel. All the Jewish community of Fort William and Port Arthur assembled in the school to see the progress of their children. Rev. Samuel was more than pleased with the result of his inspection. After the inspection Rev. Samuel made a short address to the children. Rev. A. Katz of Fort William followed Rev. Samuel with an address in Yiddish in connection with the good work of the B'nai B'rith.

Another great accomplishment for the local B'nai B'rith is the purchase of a building of their own, and the opening was arranged for the very same day. After the addresses a general sale of the cornerstone and opening of the building followed. The cornerstone was purchased by Brother J. W. Kasler, and the key for the opening of the building was purchased by Brother S. Shaffer, after which other numerous things were sold. Brother E. Basowsky purchased the first entrance to the building, and kindly consented to honor Rev. Samuel with same. The afternoon program ended by playing the Hatikvah.

A public installation of officers was arranged for the evening program and Rev. Samuel acted as Installing Officer.

An address was given by Brother A. N. Fox, the retiring President, giving a full report of the activities for the year 1920. Rev. Samuel then installed the newly elected officers, and followed with an address on the cardinal principles of the Order, "Benevolence, Brotherly Love and Harmony" (see address of Rev. H. J. Samuel). After Rev. Samuel's address, a short address followed by the newly elected President, Brother S. Shaffer.

We were also honored by the presence of His Worship, the Mayor of the city of Fort William, Mr. A. H. Dennis, and Dr. R. J. Manion, M. P., who addressed the audience. A musical program ended the program.

Great credit is due to Brethren M. Slobodsky, E. Basowsky and L. Sosowsky, who worked hard to have the building completed for the day. Credit is also due to the Entertainment Committee, Brethren D. Gurevich, S. Shaffer and B. Hollenberg, who arranged the musical program for the evening. Further credit is due the Sunday School teachers, Mr. D. Breslove, Brother I. L. Shaffer, Brother R. B. Cohen, Brother J. Gurevich, Mr. M. Fox, Miss Mollie Helper, and Miss R. Shaffer, who are devoting their time in connection with the Sunday School.—[J. Gurevich.

MESABA LODGE, No. 673, VIRGINIA, MINNESOTA.

B'nai B'rith Day was fittingly observed by Mesaba Lodge on Sunday, January 23, 1921.

Celebration was ushered in by a meeting of the lodge in the afternoon, at which a class of eight candidates was initiated.

Rabbi Herbert J. Samuel of Winnipeg, who was the guest of honor, officiated at the initiation of candidates and at the conclusion of the ceremonies delivered an address to the candidates relating the aims of the Order. In the evening a banquet was held under the auspices of the lodge, which was largely attended. Rabbi Samuel made the principal address during the banquet.

A number of out-of-town members and guests were present from Eveleth, Hibbing, Chisholm, Buhl, Aurora and Duluth.

According to a report published in last night's Evening Standard, Premier Lloyd George has accepted the invitation of Sir Herbert Samuel, the Palestine High Commissioner, to visit that country and will take a trip to Palestine during the coming spring.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

BAY CITY LODGE, BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.

Sunday, January 23, was a day long to be remembered in our local B'nai B'rith circle. In the afternoon a class of forty candidates was initiated, which is quite a record for our small Jewish community, a great portion of the credit for which we can attach to a certain Joe Hirschfield. The initiation was followed by installation of officers and an address by Rabbi Rudolph Lupo of Flint, who was the guest of honor. A smoker and a vaudeville program, furnished by a local theatre, completed festivities for the afternoon.

An open meeting in the evening filled the hall with members and friends, who enjoyed a pleasant program furnished by the Glee Club, interspersed by remarks from President Pearlman, who outlined a very bright future for the coming year and complimented Past President N. Speiseberger for his good work during the past year. Also, addresses by Ed. Lichtig and Rabbi Lupo of Flint were greatly enjoyed.

Much of the enthusiasm has originated through a spirited friendly rivalry with Flint Lodge and although they have a considerably larger Jewish community, we are giving them quite a race up to the present time, and we are not going to stop until we have made every prospect an enthusiastic Ben B'rith.

We have heard several authentic rumors that Saginaw Lodge has a prospective candidate in view. It looks to us just now as though they were in a state of hibernation for the winter.

Bay City has quite a rival in the sports line and otherwise with Saginaw. We suggest that the same would greatly benefit the Order if the same friendly rivalry could apply to our respective lodges. We realize they have a smaller Jewish community but that is not holding us back from giving Flint a merry race.

Our Entertainment Committee has staged several successful affairs in the last few months and has several in view now that promise some very good times for this winter.—[A. A. Immerman.

GILEAD LODGE, MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.

1920 was a year in which Gilead Lodge strained all its efforts with a view to increase the membership of its lodge. At no less than six meetings did we have large classes for initiation, who were taught the lessons of the Order by our degree team, who memorized the work and rendered it with credit to themselves and to the Order. Due no doubt, to the degree team, the attendance of the lodge at all of its meetings showed a great increase in comparison to any of the preceding years. The degree team has promised to continue its work during this year.

At several of our meetings we had men there to address us on some timely subjects, and at other times members of the lodge, under the subject of Good and Welfare, would deliver short addresses, which helped to enthuse the newly initiated, so that they went forth as messengers of the Order and procured many to join our ranks. The year has been a very successful one for the lodge; whether this large membership will help the Order or not is a thing which the future will have to decide. We are looking forward to a very successful year this year, have elected men who are instilled with the teachings of the Order. —[Alex. P. Greenthal.

ADOLF KRAUS LODGE, CHICAGO, ILL.

A joint business and social meeting of Adolf Kraus Lodge, No. 72, of Chicago, Ill., took place at the Covenant Club, Chicago, on Monday evening, January 24. The second reading of the compilation of the new by-laws constituted a special order of business. A class of candidates was initiated by the degree team of the lodge and the officers for the ensuing term were installed by Brother Benj. J. Samuels, Past President of District No. 6, on behalf of the President of the District.

A musical program of various numbers was successfully carried on and at the close of the evening dancing was indulged in during which refreshments were served.

LOUISVILLE LODGE, LOUISVILLE, KY.

(By L. M. Roth.)

An open meeting, which was interesting and well attended, was held by Louisville Lodge, No. 14, in the Y. M. H. A. Auditorium on Sunday evening, January 23, 1921, in honor of Jacob B. Krohngold, St. Louis, Executive Director of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, Independent Order of B'nai B'rith.

Rabbi J. J. Gittleman, President of Louisville Lodge, presided. In his introductory remarks he welcomed Brother Krohngold to our city and expressed his pleasure at having such a fine attendance. Mr. Wm. B. Schwartz, a senior at the Hebrew Union College, who has delivered several sermons at Temple Brith Sholom, was one of the speakers. Speaking on "Loyalty to Ideals", he said that the B'nai B'rith united all sections of Jewry, and that it remained for the Jew to live up to the ideals for which the B'nai B'rith stood.

"The Best Answer to Our Defamers" was the subject of Rabbi Krohngold's address. He read specimens of pamphlets and letters sent out attacking the Jewish people in this country.

"There is a concerted plan to sow the seed of religious prejudice in the United States", he said. "It is not in the open, it is secret and conducted through subterranean channels." The speaker mentioned the Dearborn Independent, owned by Henry Ford, which has been running articles on "The International Jew." He added that it was not a fight like Ford is conducting that must be met, but the secret propaganda methods that are used over the country. He advocated an intensive system of education carried out through the press, magazines and motion pictures.

Violin selections were played by Gregor Balough, and Madam Cara Sapin sang several songs, notably among them "Yahrzeit", by Rhea Silberta, sung in Yiddish, which was very well received. Mrs. Sidney J. Meyers accompanied on the piano.

After the meeting refreshments were served, and every one participated in a social hour in meeting the guest of the evening.

Several meetings of the officers and committees of Louisville Lodge were held during January at which times an outline for the year's work was arranged, and the newly elected officers are hard at work perfecting the program.

EMES LODGE, SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Election Held by B'nai B'rith Lodge.

(By D. S.)

Emes Lodge, No. 67, Independent Order B'nai B'rith, has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, David S. Benjamin; Vice-President, Joseph Hammerslough; Recording Secretary, David Saligman; Financial Secretary, Harry Greenstone; Treasurer, Ben Meyer; Monitor, Phil Schlesinger; Assistant Monitor, Benedict Weinberg; Warden, Sol Landman; and Trustees, B. A. Lange, Chairman, Eli Lilienstein, and Michael Eckstein.

Just a few lines from one of the oldest Lodges in District, No. 6. I am sorry to report the loss of one of our loyal members by withdrawal, this Brother has been with us nearly three years, and we surely miss him, yet there is this stisfaction to know that "what is our loss is Ramah Lodges gain." He came to us from that lodge and he goes back to it. This Brother is Barney Cohen. We all know Barney. Had it not been for "Small" he would have remained with us. Emes Lodge is doing great work, just look at our roster! We are going up and can't be stopped, More anon.

ELYRIA LODGE, No. 855, ELYRIA, OHIO.

Elyria Lodge had a well attended meeting on January 13, 1921, at which officers for the term were instituted by Mr. Alfred A. Benesch of Cleveland, member of the General Committee of District No. 2. Addresses were delivered by Brother Lewis Drucker, Secretary of Cleveland Lodge, and Brother Benesch, the former dwelling principally on the work of the Cleveland Jewish Orphan Home and the latter on the Anti-Defamation League.

ABRAHAM LODGE, No. 89, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

In the presence of over three hundred members, their families and friends, including a sister lodge, the newly elected officers of Abraham Lodge were installed in the lodge rooms of the Liberty Building. There were present Brother Henry Lasker, President of District No. 1; Brother Max Levy, Secretary of the District; Brother A. Benjamin Werby, President of Amos Lodge, Boston, Mass. Brother Jacob B. Klein, assisted by Brother Max Cohen and Henry Greenstein, installed the following officers: President, David Feur; Vice-President, Mark H. Reinstein; Treasurer, Benjamin Weinstein; Secretary, Harry J. Fox; Trustee, Benjamin Shalet; Monitor, Samuel B. Plotkin; Assistant Monitor, Jacob Ilkowitz; Inner Guard, Benjamin Cohen; Outer Guard, Herman Goldstein; Jacob B. Klein, Henry Greenstein, Max Cohen and Theodore E. Steiber as representatives to the Grand Lodge.

The address was delivered by Brother Samuel Rosenfeld, President of District No. 2, Judge of the Circuit Court of St. Louis, Mo., who spoke on the general workings of the Order and on Americanization and Immigration. Judge Rosenfeld said that for the seventy-seven years that the Order has been in existence it has been seeking to bring about a union of Jewish people. He spoke of the orphan asylums, hospitals and homes in this country under the jurisdiction of the I. O. B. B. He said that the hospital for consumptives in Denver, Colorado, consists of twelve buildings; he told how the families are taken care of by the Order, etc. Brother Rosenfeld was warmly received, the entire audience standing, continuously applauding.

Brother Lasker spoke of the rapid increase in membership in the Order throughout the country and called special attention to the organizations of women lodges in many cities.

Brother David Feur, the newly elected President, said he was proud to be President of Abraham Lodge. It would be his utmost desire to cooperate with everyone to promote the welfare of the Order. In detail his plan is to make Abraham Lodge one of the foremost in this part of the country.

The program included a violin solo by David Greenspun, solos by George Bly, motion pictures showing the work of the Order and dancing.—[Harry J. Fox.

HAR SINAI LODGE, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

At a meeting of Har Sinai Lodge on Wednesday evening, January 19, at the Hotel Majestic, a class of sixty candidates was initiated by the degree team and there was a total attendance of about two hundred members.

The address to the newly initiated candidates was made by Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, President of District Grand Lodge, who gave an interesting resume of the work of the Order, paying particular attention to the social service work and the efforts of the Anti-Defamation League. The Judge also installed the officers of the lodge in a most unusual and pleasing manner.

Mr. Albert A. Light, the new President, outlined some of the work which he intends to carry through during his administration. A short but delightful entertainment was supplied by Mr. Joseph H. Moss.

The membership campaign is moving along steadily, two hundred members having joined the lodge within the last three months, and an additional number being now on the waiting list.

The Boosters Committee intends to arrange for another of its usual and delightful affairs which will take place during the spring.

On Wednesday, February 16, it is proposed to have a prominent speaker address the meeting.

EBN EZRA LODGE, No. 47, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Ebn Ezra Lodge at its December meeting elected officers for the ensuing year and delegates to District Grand Lodge convention. Installation of the officers was held at a public gathering on January 13. The committee appointed by the lodge to secure subscriptions for the Anti-Defamation League reported that so far more than $500 has been collected.

MINNEAPOLIS LODGE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Minneapolis Lodge Gala Meeting.

Tuesday evening, January 25, was a red letter day in the history of Minneapolis Lodge, No. 271, made memorable by the visit of Sigmund Livingston and the initiation of one hundred and eighty-four candidates. The meeting took place in the Hebrew Reform Temple, and the large auditorium and much of the balcony was occupied by the members and initiates. The degree team headed by Arthur Brin was in exceptionally fine form, and brought out the real beauty and impressiveness of our ritual, which every Ben B'rith gets to love more each time he hears it repeated.

Brother Sig. Livingston spoke eloquently and interestingly of the work, problems and needs of the Anti-Defamation League, and brought home to the eight hundred or more in the audience the splendid work the League is doing for Jewry. In addition, a splendid musical program was carried out, in which prominent parts were taken by Mrs. Martin Cohn (vocalist) and Mrs. Marion Baernstein Bearman (violinist). Short responses were made by I. H. Ruben and Jos. H. Schanfeld. Rabbi C. David Matt presided.

With the class initiated on Tuesday evening, and almost two hundred candidates voted in and ready for initiation at future meetings, the membership of Minneapolis Lodge is brought up to well over a thousand. Yet only a year and a half ago the membership was barely three hundred. The splendid growth in numbers is attributed by the members to the energy and inspiration of the President, Jos. H. Schanfeld, and to the renewed activities of the Order, especially the Anti-Defamation League.

Now that the lodge is holding two meetings a month, it is probable that the Intellectual Advancement Committee can arrange for a big attractive meeting every month that will deepen the attachment of the members to the lodge and make it even more potent a factor for good in everything Jewish.—[C. D. M.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION OF LODGE OF SHREVEPORT.

The fiftieth anniversary of the institution of Louisiana Lodge, No. 107, of Shreveport, La., was celebrated on Monday evening, January 24, 1921, with an appropriate program of addresses and music. The celebration was held at the Temple which was filled to its capacity.

The speaker of the evening was Rabbi David Lefkowitz of Dallas who recently came to District No. 7 from Dayton, Ohio. He spoke on "The Higher Loyalties", and stressed the duty of the Jewish people for unwavering fealty to the United States.

Mr. Victor H. Hexter of Dallas, President of District No. 7 was also one of the speakers.

Mr. Earnest R. Bernstein, Past President of the District Grand Lodge, and a resident of Shreveport was master of ceremonies.

At the completion of the program the audience was invited to the Sabbath school room where refreshments were served. A band of twenty composed of young people of the organization furnished music for the occasion. The following was the program of exercises: organ solo, Mrs. Jos. Silverberg; invocation, brother Rabbi A. Brill; vocal solo, Mrs. S. L. Florsheim; violin obbligato, Mrs. A. B. Freyer; greetings, Victor H. Hexter, President District Grand Lodge No. 7; vocal solo, Brother E. M. Leman; introductory remarks, Brother E. R. Bernstein, Past President District Grand Lodge No. 7; jubilee address, "The Higher Loyalties", Brother Rabbi David Lefkowitz, Dallas; vocal solo, Mrs. L. F. Kern; benediction, Brother Rabbi A. Brill.

TYLER, TEXAS.

Annual B'nai B'rith Day celebration of Edward Lasker Lodge, No. 347, of Tyler, Texas, was held on Sunday, January 10. An interesting program of readings and music was rendered by the children. The speaker of the evening, Dr. A. B. Rhine of Hot Springs, Ark., addressed the audience, pointing out the merits and achievements of the lodge and the Order. Refreshments were served and dancing completed the evening.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

EZEKIEL LODGE, NEWARK, N. J.

About a year ago Brother Jonas Schuchat was elevated to the Presidency of Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J. He promised the lodge that during his administration the membership would be increased to 800. This promise has been realized in full as the membership of the lodge plus elected candidates numbers over 800. This increase was phenomenal and many and much appreciation is due to Brother Schuchat for his untiring efforts in behalf of the lodge.

The President for this year is Brother Jacob Fischer. He has announced that at the close of his administration the membership of the lodge must be increased to 1,200. With the assistance of the workers there is no doubt that this goal will be reached.

At a meeting of the lodge held on Jan-. uary 12, the officers for the ensuing term were installed. Brother Frederik Jay, Past President of the District Grand Lodge, presented in the name of the lodge to the retiring President, Brother Schuchat, a smoking set as a token of the high regard and esteem in which he is held by the members of the lodge.

The installation ceremonies were conducted by Brother Dr. E. S. Pollock of Jersey City, Past President of the District Grand Lodge. He also addressed the lodge.

At the last meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary election of officers took place. The Ladies' Auxillary is emulating the example of the members of Ezekial Lodge and increasing its numerical strength. The auxiliary is planning to make itself more useful and of greater service than ever. At the last meeting forty new members were elected.

CINCINNATI LODGE, No. 4, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Cincinnati Lodge, No. 4, B'nai B'rith, installed its new officers with special exercises under the direction of the Grand Lodge, Monday evening, January 10, 1921, at the Rockdale Avenue Temple Annex Building.

Harry J. Levi was the installing officer, with Milton Hurtig and Harry Friedman as Marshals. Two hundred and fifty members attended. Louis Weiland, the retiring President, gave a brief resume of the wonderful progress of the lodge during his term of office.

Samuel I. Lipp, who was reelected Financial Secretary, is a member of the Lower House of the State Legislature, and the new Warden, Philip A. Cohen, is a son of Alfred M. Cohen, former State Senator, and President of the Hebrew Union College. Chauncey D. Pichel, the new Assistant Monitor, is an Assistant City Prosecutor.

The officers installed were as follows: President, Philip L. Herschman; Vice-President, Milton T. Plaut; Recording Secretary, Isaac Bloom; Financial Secretary, Samuel I. Lipp; Treasurer, Moses Schwab; Assistant Monitor, Chauncey D. Pichel; Warden, Philip A. Cohen; Guardian, Joseph Mayer; Trustees, B. Freiberg, Moses Schwab, B. Dettelbach.

Representatives to the District Grand Lodge were chosen as follows: Alfred M. Cohen, Harry H. Friedman, Harry J. Levi, Max D. May, Abe Trost, Arthur L. Frank, Milton Hurtig, Samuel I. Lipp, M. Schwab, Louis Weiland.

MELCHIZEDEK LODGE, No. 200, WATERBURY, CONN.

On January 6, 1921, Charles H. Shapiro, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, visited Waterbury, Connecticut, where he installed the newly elected officers of Melchizedek Lodge.

This lodge has made a remarkable gain in membership during the past few months and is likely to be a promising contender for the prize offered by the District.

The meeting held at the Y. M. H. A. rooms was largely attended and at the close of an interesting session a collation was served to the members who were present.

The newly elected degree team of Melchizedek Lodge initiated a class of eleven members, making a total membership of over one hundred which the lodge has at the present time.

Arrangements are being made for several open meetings during the remainder [illegible], at which noted speakers are [illegible] addresses.

B'NAI B'RITH OF DETROIT.

Speaking on "Ideals of Justice" before a meeting of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, Michigan, on January 3, Judge Samuel Rosenfeld of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge No. 2, extolled the work of the Order briefing its various activities in this and other countries. The growing problem of the Jewish orphan in the United States was dwelt on at length by the speaker. A lucid discussion of the Jewish immigration question concluded the address. Officers of the lodge were installed by the visiting Grand Lodge officer from District No. 2. Another speaker at the meeting was Dr. Rudolph Kornblith, representative of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society.

The entertainment program included Mr. H. Santrey who appeared at one of the local theatres during the week and who was the principal entertainer at the stag party that followed the meeting. Refreshments were also served.

On Monday evening, January 31, a smoker and stag praty was given under the auspices of the lodge. The entertainment was furnished by Pisgah Lodge Glee Club and vaudeville features from local theatres. At the close of the evening refreshments were served.

What promises to be the biggest social event ever held by Pisgah Lodge is the informal dance scheduled to be held on February 17.

The Intellectual Advancement Committee of the lodge has announced an open debate among club members, the first of a series to be given soon on the subject, "Resolved That Immigration Be Restricted".

At the meeting of Pisgah Lodge held on February 7, Mr. David L. Fink, Professor of the University of Michigan addressed the lodge on the subject, "The Psychology of International Peace."

The debate on immigration has been announced to take place on Monday, February 14. Julius Deitelbaum will speak in the affirmative and Samuel Rogoff in the negative.

JOHN HAY LODGE, FARGO, NO. DAK.

The installation of officers and annual B'nai B'rith celebration of the John Hay Lodge, No. 634, of Fargo, N. Dak., took place Sunday, January 16, 1921. The John Hay Lodge was fortunate in securing Rabbi Philip Kleinman of St. Paul.

The regular monthly business meeting was held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon in the A. O. U. W. Hall and a class of candidates was initiated by the local degree team with the assistance of Rabbi Kleinman. The installation of officers took place in the evening at 8 o'clock, before an audience of members, non-members and ladies.

Rabbi Kleinman installed the following officers: President, William Stern; Vice-President, J. H. Goldberg; Secretary, Tobias Naftalin; Treasurer, Abe Solow; Warden, Hanis Rubel; Guardian, Sam Zuckerman; Trustee, Abe Joseph.

Rabbi Kleinman addressed the audience on the subject of "What the Immigration Problem Means to the Jewish People of the United States." The subject was very well received and appreciated by all present. After Rabbi Kleinman's address, a dance followed and refreshments were served.

The committee in charge consisted of Harry Stern, Robert S. Lewis, Philip Greenberg, J. P. Katz and Tobias Naftalin. —[Harry Stern.

NEW CASTLE, PA.

At the last regular meeting of New Castle Lodge, No. 609, held in the month of January the officers for the ensuing term were installed by Brother Marcus Feuchtwanger, Past President of the District Grand Lodge.

An open meeting was held under the auspices of the lodge on January 23 in honor of the Secretary of the District, Brother Joseph Herbach, who paid the lodge an official visit. The meeting was presided over by A. Levine and a class of candidates was initiated by the degree team of which Brother Marcus Feuchtwanger was the chairman. After the initiation, Brother Herbach delivered an inspiring address. A musical program of various numbers was successfully carried on HARMONY LODGE, No. 711, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

The Charity Ball Committee of Harmony Lodge, I. O. B. B., is arranging the details of the eighth annual ball to be given under the auspices of Harmony Lodge at the Stratfield Hotel, Lincoln's birthday night, February 12, 1921.

This affair is given annually by Harmony Lodge for the benefit of a number of local charitable societies, who distribute the funds received to the worthy poor of the city. There has been a great demand this year for additional funds for charitable purposes, due to the unemployed in the city at this time.

While all the sub-committees have not yet been appointed, the General Executive Committee is very busy working out the plans of the affair under the direction of Bernard Rubenstein, Chairman; Maximillian Stein, Treasurer, and Henry Spitz, Secretary.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York City was the guest of Harmony Lodge at an informal reception and dinner which was tendered in his honor on February 6, 1921, at the Hotel Stratfield. After the dinner, Rabbi Wise delivered an address which was very well received.

Mr. Jos. H. Ullman, of New Haven, Conn., Past President of District No. 1, installed the officers of Harmony Lodge at a meeting held on January 25, 1921.

Mr. Ullman addressed the lodge on the activities of the Order. Reports were also received from committees in charge of the reception and dinner given in honor of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York on February 6 and from the Charity Ball Committee regarding the affair to be held on February 12.

MANHATTAN-WASHINGTON LODGE, NEW YORK.

An open meeting was held under the auspices of Manhattan-Washington Lodge, No. 19, of New York at the B'nai B'rith Building on January 26, 1921. Officers for the year were installed by Mr. Charles Hartman, member of the Executive Committee of the Order. A class of new members were initiated under the new ritual by the degree team of the lodge. Among the new members was the Hon. Isador Wasservogel, Justice of the Supreme Court, who addressed the lodge during its meeting. At the close of the program a social hour was spent by the members and their ladies during which refreshments were served. This was the first public meeting since the new ritual went into effect and was unusually well attended.

A meeting under the auspices of the lodge was held on Monday, January 31, at which the wives, daughters and sisters of the members attended for the purpose of organizing a Manhattan-Washington Ladies Auxiliary.

On Wednesday, February 9, a regular meeting was held and which also consisted of a Lincoln's Day celebration. Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Mr. Isaac Fuld and Mrs. D. Solis Cohen related some incidents in the life of Lincoln. On Saturday, February 12, under the auspices of the lodge, a Lincoln's Day reception and dance was successfully carried on.

COVENANT LODGE, No. 569, DULUTH, MINN.

Covenant Lodge held its annual installation of officers Tuesday evening, January 11, in the Elks' club, the ceremony being followed by a dance for the members and their friends.

Charles D. Oreckovsky, member of the General Committee of the District Grand Lodge, acted as installing officer, assisted by A. B. Kapplin, both of the Duluth Lodge. The 1921 officers installed for the year follow: S. B. Copilowish, President; D. P. Fieldman, Vice-President; Samuel Nides, Secretary, and Dave Miller, Treasurer. Covenant's delegates to the District Grand Lodge include Charles D. Oreckovsky, A. B. Kapplin, Dr. M. Lefkovits and Albert Mark.

Beginning in February, Covenant Lodge will move from the vestry rooms of Temple Emanuel, where it has met for the last twelve years, to its new quarters in the Lyceum building. A membership drive now on will culminate with a big initiation and house-warming in the new lodge rooms the latter part of next month.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

The B'nai B'rith Dramatic Circle held its regular meeting on January 16. The play read was Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln."

On January 9 the B'nai B'rith Speakers' Club discussed "The Open versus The Closed Shop." Mr. Lutringer of the machinists' union led the discussion on behalf of the closed shop. After his talk discussion was thrown open to the members of the club.

January 23 another meeting of the Speakers' Club was held and the subject under discussion was "Business and Business Ethics." The discussion was ushered in by Mr. Charles Eiseman, President of the Federation of Jewish Charities.

The B'nai B'rith Chess Circle held its regular meeting on January 17. A match engaged in by the B'nai B'rith Chess Team with the Cleveland Athletic Club Team took place on January 13.

On account of the B'nai B'rith dinner and class initiation held on January 23 the usual weekly dance which was to be held on that evening was postponed and was held on Saturday evening, January 27.

An old fashioned B'nai B'rith gathering was held under the auspices of Cleveland Lodge, No. 16, at the B'nai B'rith Building on January 23, 1921. Judge Samuel Rosenfeld of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge No. 2 was the guest of honor and principal speaker. In his address he emphasized the fact that the opportunity of the Jewish people to aid immigrants of Jewish faith to become Americanized was never greater than now. He compared the B'nai B'rith to an industrial clearing house and urged the members to do all in their power to aid Jewish immigrants. Another address was delivered by Rabbi Solomon Goldman on the subject, "How to Meet Anti-Semitism."

Officers of the lodge for the present term were installed by Judge Rosenfeld and at the close of the meeting a dinner was served.

A meeting of the B'nai B'rith Dramatic Circle was held on January 30. "Beyond the Horizon" by E. G. O'Neil was read.

WORCESTER LODGE, WORCESTER, MASS.

(By J. Friedman.)

Worcester Lodge, No. 600, I. O. B. B., held a very enthusiastic meeting on January 26. Twenty-five applications for membership were received and many more are expected at the next meeting.

President Alfred G. Isenberg with the assistance of several of his active members is planning to add at least 150 good members to the lodge during his term of office.

Both the Junior and Senior degree teams are to enter the District No. 1 degree team contest, and Worcester Lodge feels certain that one of their teams will carry off the prize as they have in the past. There is so much interest taken in the work of the two degree teams that a third team is already being formed,

The lodge also donated $100 to the annual drive for funds that is being carried on now by the United Hebrew Charities of Worcester. The second Vice-President of District No. 1, Attorney Archibald Hillman, is President of the United Hebrew Charities.. Judge Jacob Asher, ex-President of Worcester Lodge, No. 600, is campaign manager of the drive. Judge Asher was very successful as leader of the last two campaigns for funds for the Jewish war sufferers, and from all indications this campaign will also be successful.

MINNESOTA LODGE TO CELEBRATE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

The fiftieth birthday of Minnesota Lodge, No. 157, of St. Paul, will be celebrated on February 21, 1921. The lodge was organized in 1870 when there were but a handful of coreligionists in St. Paul. Minnesota Lodge started its career of activity for the promotion of the Jewish communal life of that city. To celebrate the anniversary properly, Minnesota Lodge is engaged in a campaign for one hundred per cent increase in membership. The celebration will culminate with a meeting of the General Committee of the District Grand Lodge, bringing men from all over the district, a public installation of officers, and a celebration on the evening of Monday, February 21.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

DANVILLE LODGE, No. 568, DANVILLE, ILLINOIS.

One of the best affairs given by Danville Lodge was held on January 6, 1921, at the Elks' Club. The event was arranged in honor of the lodge going over the top with 131 per cent increase in its membership, which was the result of the drive recently completed.

A splendid seven course dinner was served at the Elks' Grill, followed by a dance and entertainment. A number of out-of-town guests were present, bringing the attendance to over 100. Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goldman of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. H. Block of New York; Mr. Sam Levy of Chicago; Miss Hazel Siegel of St. Louis; Miss Helen Rappaport of Muncie, Ind.; Mr. John Chatz of the University of Illinois; Mr. Wallace Blumberg of the University of Illinois; Mr. Jerry Sholem of Urbana, Illinois.

Danville Lodge had the smallest membership of any lodge of the District until recently and results achieved in the membership drive evidence the fact that it is an easy matter to interest men in the work of the Order if its aims and accomplishments are properly put before them.

The lodge, through its various committees, is preparing plans for its activities for this year and among such it is contemplated to carry out a May fete.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Edar Lodge, No. 211, had an interesting session at Lockhart on Sunday afternoon, January 9, for the purpose of initiating a class of candidates into the lodge.

Messrs. S. C. Eldridge, Past President of the District Grand Lodge, Leon Baer and L. N. Lee, members of the General Committee, accompanied by the President of the lodge, Leo Rubin, A. Soslowsky, and A. Arnstein, Treasurer, and a number of other members of the lodge from San Antonio attended the meeting. Almost all the leading Jew citizens of Lockhart joined the lodge.

Arriving at Lockhart about eleven in the morning, the party was met by a committee and were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Weinbaum where refreshments were served. Luncheon was arranged at the Carter Hotel at which thirty-two guests participated.

In the afternoon the visitors were taken to the home of Mr. L. Schwartz where joined all the Jewish people of Lockhart and some representatives of San Marco. The parlors were arranged in a lodge room and the initiation ceremonies were impressively executed by the officers of Edar Lodge. After the initiation refreshments were served and interesting talks were made by the visiting brothers.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

Annual B'nai B'rith day was duly celebrated by Chattanooga Lodge, No. 446, on January 23, at Mizpah Temple. A large initiation took place in the afternoon which was most beautiful and impressive, and at night a large open meeting was held. Brother A. B. Freyer, of Shreveport, La., was the speaker and gave a most interesting address. After the meeting, a musical program was given and refreshments served. Plans are being made to have another large open meeting on February 20 which will be in the form of a public initiation. Rabbi Jacob B. Krohngold of St. Louis, Mo., will assist in the initiation and be the principal speaker of the evening.

Plans are being made to have monthly open meetings and outings in order to bring about a closer relation amongst the Jews in Chattanooga.

MOSES ATLASS LODGE, ASHLAND, WIS.

On Sunday, January 9, 1921, Milton P. Firestone, of St. Paul, as representative of the Grand Lodge, paid an official visit to Moses Atlass Lodge, No. 862, of Ashland, Wis., and installed the officers at a public meeting in the afternoon and also delivered an address on the "Activities of the Order" which was followed by a social program. The meeting was well attended by members from adjoining communities. This lodge has a good record, having a membership of over seventy, although instituted only a few months ago. All of the original officers were reelected. The best of spirit and interest prevails.

TRI-CITY LODGE, No. 837, ROCK ISLAND, ILLINOIS.

On January 18 Tri-City Lodge had a well attended meeting, on which occasion Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Des Moines, President of District No. 6, paid an official visit.

A class of thirteen candidates was initiated and after the initiation an open meeting was held, during which the installation of officers took place, Rabbi Mannheimer officiating.

After the installation services, Rabbi Mannheimer delivered a stirring address on the subject, "The History of Israel and its Connection with the B'nai B'rith Order." At the close of the address, which was received with marked approval, refreshments were served and a social hour was spent by the members and their friends.

DAVID FISH LODGE, B'NAI B'RITH, OF CHICAGO.

On Monday, January 17, 1921, David Fish Lodge, No. 130, held a well attended meeting. The following is the program, which was successfully carried out: Installation of officers; address by Dr. Gotthard Deutsch, of Cincinnati, on the subject "Causes of Present Day Anti-Semitism"; solo, Frances Levine, accompanied by Mrs. Dorothy Bernstein. The meeting was attended by the members of the lodge and their ladies and at the close of the program refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

DISTRICT No. 5.

Affairs in District No. 5 are brightening from day to day. The lodges of Newport News and Augusta have both about doubled their membership.

The General Committee, through its officers from Richmond, Va., are putting on a membership campaign and prospective lodges are in sight in the cities of Roanoke, Va., Miami, Fla., and Greenville, S. Car.

As a result of the efforts of Brother Chas. Rosenthal, member of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, Detroit, Mich., temporarily sojourning in Miami, Fla., a lodge of the Order is soon to be instituted in that city. It is expected that Brother Adolph Freund of Detroit, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, who is enjoying a vacation in that city, will assist in the institution of the lodge.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

On Sunday evening, January 9, at the B'nai B'rith Building, Mr. Jos. Genss, ex-legionnaire of the famous Jewish Palestine Batallion gave a most interesting talk under the auspices of Portland Lodge No. 65, on the subject, "A Tour through Palestine". Slides were presented representing conditions now existing in Palestine. The meeting was also addressed by Mr. D. Solus Cohen.

The first lecture of the B'nai B'rith forum was given on January 10, by Mr. W. F. Woodward on the subject "Vice and Virtue". The lecture was presented in an unusually thorough manner and those who attended were well repaid.

The second lecture of the forum was given on January 24 by Mr. Dan Malarkey on the subject, "What China Can Teach Us".

Members of the Daughters of the Covenant Auxiliary to Portland Lodge decided at its last meeting to adopt one of Europe's little war orphans.

The committee, composed of members of Portland Lodge and its Ladies' Auxiliary, the Daughters of the Covenant, met to complete arrangements for serving luncheon and other courtesies to the delegates who will attend the three day session of District No. 4. The program includes "A Trip to the Highway", luncheon and a banquet.

District No. 4 will convene in annual session in Portland on Sunday, February 13, and the sessions will take up three days.

OMAHA, NEBR.

An important meeting of Omaha Lodge, No. 354, of Omaha, Nebr., will be held on February 17 at which time Brother Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Des Moines, President of the District Grand Lodge will pay the lodge an official visit.

COUNCIL BLUFFS LODGE, COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

On Wednesday evening, January 26, 1921, Council Bluffs Lodge, No. 688, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, held a splendid meeting with a capacity attendance. Honorable W. R. Orchard, editor and publisher of the Non-Pareil was the guest of honor and speaker of the evening. Brother O. Hochman presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker, whose subject was "Americanism". In his address Mr. Orchard touched upon the anti-Semitics propaganda now being carried on in this Country and deprecated such attempts to instill class hatred in the minds of the American people.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN IN PITTSBURGH.

The movement to consolidate the B'nai B'rith Lodges of Pittsburgh started some time ago and has been favorably acted upon by all the lodges. Arrangements are being made for a campaign of 2,000 new members. Mr. I. W. Jacobs, as chairman of the consolidated membership committee, sanguined that the goal will be safely reached.

Another active worker in the matter of securing the connection of one lodge so as to enable it to accomplish more constructive meetings is Dr. S. H. Goldenson.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

One of the most interesting and largely attended meetings of Memphis Lodge, No. 35, was held on Sunday morning, January 23, 1921, in the Y. M. H. A. Hall. More than one hundred members were in attendance, and following the regular routine of business, a class of fifteen candidates was initiated by the Degree Team of the Lodge headed by Rabbi Wm. H. Fineshriber. Rabbi Isadore Lewinthal of Nashville, who was a guest of the lodge, made an interesting address, which was highly appreciated and enjoyed.

A further address was made by Dr. F. Feibish who spoke in Yiddish.

MAIMONIDES LODGE, NASHVILLE, TENN.

An unusually well attended meeting of Maimonides Lodge of Nashville, Tenn., was held on January 6 and proved a very successful one.

The lodge had as its speaker, Rabbi Wm. S. Feinschreiber of Memphis and his address was most interesting and instructive. A class of fifty candidates was initiated at the meeting which was held in the way of a get-together meeting to increase the membership of the lodge. A Kosher supper was served to all present. At the close of the meeting an appeal was made for funds to aid the Anti-Defamation League in its work.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

On Tuesday, January 1, Rabbi Martin Zielonka of El Paso delivered a lecture in Temple Beth El before a well-attended meeting under the auspices of the local B'nai B'rith of Fort Worth. Rabbi Zielonka has been touring the southern states under the auspices of the Order and has made addresses before the B'nai B'rith of Amarillo and Wichita Falls.

One of the best attended meetings of the B'nai B'rith Luncheon Club of Fort Worth was held on January 27th at which Mr. Hugh N. Fitzgerald of the Fort Worth Herald delivered an address on the "Jew of America". Mrs. Dan Brown and Miss Hugins furnished the music.

ROANOKE, VA.

As a result of efforts of Brother Dr. Edw. N. Calisch of Richmond, Va., and Rabbi J. L. Hahn of Roanoke, a lodge of the Order is to be instituted in the near future in the city of Roanoke. So far forty-five applicants have affixed their names to the petition for a charter. The date of the institution has been fixed for February 17 and it is expected that Dr. Calisch will be the installing officer representing the Grand Lodge.

DISTRICT No. 3.

The General Committee of District No. 3 is arranging for the institution of a B'nai B'rith Lodge in the City of Cannonsburg, Pa.

JERICHO LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

A novelty dance was given under the auspices of Jericho Lodge, No. 44, of Pittsburgh at the Hotel Schenley on the evening of February 10. The affair proved to be one of the gala events of the season. At the close of the evening's program, luncheon was served and dancing was indulged in until the late hours of the morning.

LINCOLN LODGE, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A large, enthusiastic gathering greeted Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, at the meeting of Lincoln Lodge, No. 780, held on Thursday evening, January 13, at the Philadelphia Hotel. Those who attended felt well repaid, for Judge Rosenfeld gave an interesting and entertaining address.

Officers for the current term were installed by Brother Jos. W. Salus, Past President of the District Grand Lodge.

Elaborate plans have been made for a big annual February meeting celebrating the birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln.

JOHN HAY LODGE, No. 634, FARGO, NO. DAK.

Under the auspices of John Hay Lodge, B'nai B'rith Day was fittingly observed at a well attended meeting held on January 16, 1921. Rabbi Philip Kleinman of St. Paul was the guest of honor and the representative of the District Grand Lodge.

The program of exercises included a business meeting, at which six new members were enrolled, and this was followed by a public meeting at which the installation of officers was held, with Brother Rabbi Philip Kleinman officiating. Rabbi Kleinman delivered an address on the work of the Order, emphasizing especially its efforts to combat anti-Semitism. At the conclusion of the program, refreshments were served and dancing was indulged in.

CHARLOTTE LODGE, CHARLOTTE, N. CAR.

An unusual meeting of Charlotte Lodge, No. 733, of Charlotte, N. Car., was held Sunday, December 19, 1920. The election of officers was the principal matter acted upon. The lodge reelected four of its principal officers.

Charlotte Lodge is making good progress and expects to report much activity during the ensuing year. The attendance at the meeting was unusually large. As an evidence of the desire to put the lodge on a solid basis, an amendment to the laws was unanimously adopted, increasing the annual dues per member to $12.

The lodge appointed a committee to raise funds for the Anti-Defamation League and expects to secure a handsome sum.

JOSHUA LODGE, PHILADELPHIA. PA.

An added impetus was given to the Anti-Defamation League work of the B'nai B'rith of Philadelphia and Judge H. Stern was elected to membership of Joshua Lodge, No. 23, of Philadelphia. Installation of the newly elected officers also took place at the meeting held in the month of January. A class of candidates was also initiated by the degree team of the lodge with Brother David Bortin, President of District Grand Lodge No. 3, in charge of the ceremonies.

Retiring President L. C. Glass was presented with a testimonial in appreciation of his faithful services.

JACKSON, MICHIGAN.

At the monthly meeting of David Heuman Lodge, No. 807, of Jackson, Michigan, held in January, officers of the lodge for the ensuing term were installed. A beautiful desk was presented to Mr. Chas. Heuman, Secretary, in appreciation of his twelve years' faithful service to the lodge.

Rabbi Steiner addressed the lodge on the subject, "Benefits and Opportunities of the B'nai B'rith," and commented most favorably on the work of the Anti-Defamation League.

After the installation ceremonies, dinner was served, which was participated in by the ladies of the congregation.

MEMPHIS JEWRY PROTEST AGAINST ANTI-SEMITISM.

Before an audience that filled the large auditorium of the Poplar Ave. Temple of Memphis, Tenn., on Sunday afternoon, January 23, 1921, a vigorous protest was made against the present anti-Semitic propaganda in the United States. The Anti-Defamation League sponsored the gathering and the committee in charge had every reason to feel proud of its achievements, as approximately eight hundred people were present representing every Jewish group in the city of Memphis.

Mr. Phil C. Levich, President of Memphis Lodge, opened the meeting with appropriate remarks. He then introduced Mr. Jos. Samfield, chairman of the Memphis branch of the Anti-Defamation League, who congratulated the Jewish community of Memphis for the active interests it manifests in this issue. Mr. Samfield then introduced the speakers which included Rabbi Wm. H. Fineshriber, Rabbi Lewenthal of Nashville, Jos. Newburger, President of Congregation of Israel, Mr. A. Simon, President of the Baron Hirsch Congregation, Mr. Jos. Hanover, President of the Beth El Congregation.

Before adjourning the meeting, Rabbi Fineshriber made a final appeal to the audience to make liberal contributions to enable the League to stamp out the anti-Semitic campaign. As a result of the appeal nearly $3,000 was subscribed by those present.

The committee in charge of the meeting consisted of Messrs. Jos. M. Samfield, Rabbi Fineshriver, Phil C. Levich, Gilbert M. Schloss, Julius Alperin, H. J. Lewis, C. N. Frolich, Louis Levi and M. B. Rose.

SPOKANE, WASH.

Abr. Geiger Lodge and Ida Bloom Auxiliary held a joint installation of officers at the K. P. hall on January 20. Mr. A. Hertzger officiated.

Rabbi Leibert and the incoming officers gave short talks. A musical program rendered by the juvenile orchestra and solos by various artists were successfully carried out. After the program the evening was spent in dancing during which refreshments were served.

BRADDOCK, PA.

Reports received from Braddock Lodge, No. 516, of Braddock, Pa., show that the lodge is not asleep but is doing things. The lodge initiated from one to six members at every one of its four meetings and the meetings are well attended and interesting. A special meeting of the lodge was held on December 5 in the interests of the Anti-Defamation League, and a sum exceeding $600 was collected and forwarded to the Anti-Defamation League.

ZION LODGE, No. 60, COLUMBUS, OHIO.

A well attended meeting of Zion Lodge was held on January 10, 1921. A number of applications for membership were presented.

The Entertainment Committee, of which Brother Jeffery Lazarus is Chairman, reported progress in the matter of arranging Intellectual Advancement meetings and social entertainments for the present year.

An amendment to the By-Laws was adopted, making it obligatory on the part of the officers to commit to memory the ritual of the Order. Election of officers was held for the ensuing year, also delegates to the convention of the District Grand Lodge. Short talks were made by the newly elected officers.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A meeting in behalf of the Inner East Relief was held under the auspices of the B'nai B'rith of Philadelphia on Sunday afternoon, January 23, 1921. Mr. Jos. [illegible], Secretary of the District Grand Lodge, presided. Mr. Fullerton L. Waldo, editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, was the speaker. Pictures depicting conditions in Roumania were shown at the meeting.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Under the auspices of Minneapolis Lodge, No. 271, of Minneapolis, Minn., a meeting was held on Thursday, February 3, 1921, for the purpose of forming a B'nai B'rith Glee Club and B'nai B'rith orchestra. It is the aim of the lodge to make these two activities the pride of the Jewish communities of Minneapolis.

OMAHA, NEBR.

The first of a series of monthly open meetings under the direction of the Intellectual-Advancement Committee of Omaha Lodge, No. 354, was held on Thursday evening, January 26, at the Lyric Building. The large hall secured was filled to its capacity, the general public having been invited to attend.

The address of the evening was made by J. R. Cain, Vice-President of the Peters National Bank. There was an interesting musical program.

ACTIVITIES IN DISTRICT No. 3.

Dr. S. H. Goldenson of Pittsburgh delivered an address before Huntington Lodge, No. 795, of Huntington, W. Va., on December 28, under the auspices of the Intellectual Advancement Committee. Dr. E. Goldman is announced as the speaker to address Wheeling Lodge, No. 615, of Wheeling, W. Va.

Lancaster Lodge, No. 228, of Lancaster, Pa., is arranging for a course of lectures to be held under the auspices of the Intellectual Advancement Committee. Among the speakers will be Dr. Margolis, Dr. Krass, Dr. Goldstein and Dr. Kohut.

AKRON LODGE, No. 719, AKRON, OHIO.

On Wednesday evening, January 26, 1921, Mr. A. A. Benesch of Cleveland, member of Executive Committee for District No. 2, addressed a public meeting under the auspices of Akron Lodge, No. 719, at the temple. The meeting was well attended and at its close refreshments were served and dancing brought the evening to a close.

THIS PUBLICATION CANNOT UNDERSTAND WHY EINSTEIN AND HARDEN ARE TOLERATED.

(Berlin, J. C. B. Service.)

The Strassburger Zeitung publishes a bitter attack upon Professor Albert Einstein and Maxmillon Harden, both of whom are prominently identified with a new organization known as Neues Vaterland. The writer expresses much surprise that after two million Germans sacrificed their lives in the late war for the Fatherland, there should not be a solitary patriotic individual to rid the country of these scandals and traitors. Anyone shooting these men, the writer declares would be a benefactor to the entire German people.

MONTAGUE SLATED FOR HIGH POST IN CABINET.

London.—There is a strong probability that Hon. Edwin Montague will resign as Secretary of State for India to accept the finance portfolio in the British cabinet.

The proposed change is said to be due to the anti-Semitic outcry that with the appointment of Lord Reading as Viceroy, India has passed completely into Jewish control. Sir William Meyer, the Indian High Commissioner, is also a Jew. Montague's resignation is expected as soon as Lord Reading's appointment will be officially announced.

PADEREWSKI PERSISTS IN HIS ANTI-SEMITIC METHODS.

(Paris, J. C. B. Service.)

According to a report from Warsaw, Paderewski's organ Reszpopoliti has undertaken a bitter campaign against the Keren Hayesod. The paper demands that the Polish government should restrict what it terms, the imposition of a tax for Palestine, an act which is distinctly anti-Polish in the estimation of the publication. Local Jewish circles take this to be an evident sign that Paderewski proposes to continue his anti-Semitic agitations, agitations which were set in motion at the Geneva Assembly of the League of Nations.

TEUTONIC FOES OF JEWS PLAN WORLD LEAGUE.

Vienna, Jan. 31.—Plans for an international anti-Semitic conference to be held in Vienna in March under the auspices of the German-Austrian Protective anti-Semitic association were announced today. Invitations have been sent to all the nations to send delegates to the conference or to nominate permanent Austrian delegates.

At the recent Greek elections three Jewish deputies to represent Salonika in the Greek Chamber were returned. They are Isaac Sciaky, President of the Corporation of Jewish Federations, Peppo Mallah and Dr. Alhanati.

UNION OF AMERICAN HEBREW CONGREGATION.

One thousand reform Jewish rabbis and prominent laymen and women will come together from all parts of the country in Buffalo, N. Y., on May 24, 25, and 26 to discuss the condition and future of Judaism in America. Extensive preparations are being made to entertain the visitors, who will be delegates to the annual convention of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and its affiliated body, the Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

The convention will give much of its time to discussion of the problems of anti-Semitism in America, the extension of synagogue and religious school facilities to enable all Jews everywhere in America to participate in Jewish activity, the establishment of a pension fund for rabbis, and the success of the revival and financial campaign conducted by the Union. Reports will be given on the work of the Hebrew Union College at Cincinnati for the training of rabbis.

POLISH MINISTER PROTESTS AGAINST AUSTRIAN EXPULSION OF JEWS.

(Vienna, J. C. B. Service.)

In an interview granted to the Warsaw correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse of this city and appearing today, Prince Sapieha, the Polish Foreign Minister, strongly condemned the policy of the Austrian government in expelling Jewish refugees. The Minister pointed out that although Poland was also subject to unfavorable conditions, the government considers it its duty to find room for the Ukrainian Jewish refugees.

AMERICAN REPRESENTATIVE REFUSES TO VISE PASSPORTS OF JEWISH EMIGRANTS.

(Vienna, J. C. B. Service.)

The American High Commissioner in this city now refuses to vise the passports of Jewish emigrants even when these come prepared with all necessary documents. Local Jews believe that the intervention of American Jewry at Washington is essential.

LORD READING, VICEROY IN ENGLAND.

Reports from London substantiate previous statements issued to the effect that Lord Reading is to become Viceroy in England and that the appointment is to become effective April 1.

Lord Reading now holds the important office of Chief Justice of England. While serving as such, he was appointed British Ambassador to the United States three years ago. In 1912 he was made member of the British Cabinet. As Attorney-General in 1913 Sir Rufus Isaacs was appointed Lord Chief Justice and has held the position continuously up to the present.

JEWISH DOCTORS IN POLAND ORGANIZE TO HELP COMMUNITY.

(Warsaw, J. C. B. Service.)

Local Jewish doctors have organized for the purpose of raising the standard of health of the Jewish population which is at present very low. In addition to personal service and medical supervision which the doctors will render, efforts will be made to provide greater medical and sanitary facilities for the Jews of Poland. The movement is headed by the well known physicians, Geldflam, Bichowsky and Lewin.

VIENNA ANTI-SEMITISM DANGEROUS, AMERICAN DECLARES.

(London, J. C. B. Service.)

The Times today publishes a contribution from William Hart, an American journalist, in which he declares that anti-Semitism in Vienna is assuming dangerous forms. He relates that a Hungarian friend of his would not enter any shop if he thought it was owned by Jews. The contributor recently completed a trip through Europe in the company of an American Senator, and states that in Poland anti-Semitism is also exceeding all limits.

"PROTOCOLS OF ZION" APPEARS IN FRENCH.

(Paris, J. C. B. Service.)

A French edition of the Jewish Peril has just made its appearance here. It is edited by the well known anti-Semite Revien Veille, France.

THE JEWS TRANSLATE THE BIBLE

The Voice does not have space f advertisements not even of books b once in a while a "find" gives us so mu pleasure that we are compelled to sha our information about it.

The Hebrew Bible has never been tra lated officially by the Jews, and Hebr being a picture language, contains tho sands of words that only the Hebre born can see. It is a matter of a hundr times more importance than the publici it has received would indicate that f the first time Jewish scholars have gott together and have rendered the Hebr Bible into luminous and beautiful Engli and after twenty-five years of work up it the Jewish Publication Society America has published "The Holy Scri tures."

We have read the volume through durin the year, pen in hand to mark the strikin improvements; and we soon found th we had "to mark it all up". The boo can be secured through our Methodi Book Concern, and any preacher wh reads it will be lastingly grateful to u for calling his attention to it. It follo the style of the King James version a revised by the American revisors, pu it in more correct and up-to-date Englis and fathoms the meaning of numero Hebraeisms, which were "all Greek" t Gentile translators.

We could copy from our marked Bib 5,000 illustrations, but the 90th Psal and 3rd verse must suffice: "Thou turne man to contrition; and sayest: Retur ye children of men."—[The Voice, De cember, 1920, The Methodist Episcop Church.

POLES IN AMERICA SUPPORT ANTI SEMITIC INSTITUTIONS.

(Warsaw, J. C. B. Service.)

Reports in the local Polish press sho that among other moneys subscribed b Poles in America for the support of loc institutions half a million marks wa donated for the work of Archbisho Theodorowitch and twenty-five thousan dollars for the anti-Semitic organizatio Rozvoy. The local Jewish daily, th Haint, expresses astonishment that Amer cans should support reactionary and ant Semitic organizations of the kind me tioned.

RABBIS REQUIRED TO BE ROU MANIAN SUBJECTS IN NEW TERRITORIES.

Bucharest (Jewish News Service).— Great hardship is experienced in man Jewish communities in provinces recen ly incorporated in Roumania by th new order of the government requirin all rabbis to be Roumanian subjects an likewise all directors or executive mem bers of the Jewish communities. Rou manian is to be the official language i all Jewish communities, and no Jewis community can be organized without permit of the Ministry of the Interio

NATIONAL JEWISH HOSPITAL, DENVER.

Mr. Nathan L. Dauby of Clevelan Ohio, was elected President of the Na tional Jewish Hospital for Consumptive of Denver, Colo., at the annual meetin of the institution held in Cleveland o January 30, 1921.

AS USUAL JEWS IN POLAND ARE A THE END OF THE LINE.

(Danzig, J. C. B. Service.)

According to a report appearing in th Warsaw Haint, the government store selling food and provisions to the publi not only discriminate against the Jews b compelling them to wait in a separate lin until all non-Jews have been served, bu are actually given inferior products.

FREIHEIT SCORES GERMAN ANTI SEMITIC MINISTER.

(Vienna, J. C. B. Service.)

The Socialist organ, Freiheit, has com forward with a severe criticism agains Minister of the Interior Koch of the German Reichstag for his anti-Semitic tendencies.

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND NEEDY JEWISH ORPHANS IN RUSSIA AND UKRAINIA.

(London, J. C. B. Service.)

There are no less than 300,000 helpless and needy Jewish orphans in Russia and Ukrainia, according to a Moscow report received here.

.05
N
RR.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS
BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII MARCH, 1921 No. 7

The Mystery of the Protocols

By John Spargo

We are publishing in this issue a single chapter from "THE JEW AND AMERICAN IDEALS," (Harper & Brothers, Post 8 vo., cloth, 160 p.). This book is a defense of American ideals and institutions against a vicious un-American propaganda. A review of the book, which contains ten chapters and an appendix, will be found on another page of this issue. The book exposes the numerous ramifications of the anti-Semitic movement in America and in England. Every Jew and every non-Jew who calls himself a true American should read the book, for the real American today is vitally concerned with this world problem of anti-Semitic propaganda. He can find no clearer or more stirring recital of the facts and their significance, than is to be found in this new publication. The author of the book, MR. JOHN SPARGO, was a leader among those non-Jews who took the part of Dreyfus many years ago. It was he, also, who took the initiative recently in drafting the most remarkable pronouncement on the subject of race hatred which has ever been written, and secured thereto the signatures of President Wilson, ex-President Taft, Cardinal O'Connell and many of the most prominent men in American life. That document, which was published in our last issue, will stand out in the history of this nation as a definition of the attitude of American leaders on the subject of racial hatreds.

FIRST of all, then, what do we actually know about the origin of these protocols? In the year 1903 a book was published at Solotarevo in Russia, entitled The Great in Little. The reputed author of the book was one Professor Sergei Nilus, concerning whom we have no abso'utely reliable information. Author of a book which has made an enormous sensation in many lands, and became the subject of furious controversy, he is quite unknown. No responsible person in or out of Russia has ever positively identified Nilus, so far as I have been able to discover. From what he says of himself, it is practically certain that he was in the service of the infamous Secret Police Agency of the late Czar Nicholas II. For reasons which will presently appear, I am disposed to believe that the very un-Russian name Nilus is really a pseudonym.

In a second edition of his book, published in 1905, Nilus gives a brief autobiographical account of himself. He says that he was born in 1862 of Russian parents, who held liberal opinions, and that his family was well-known in Moscow, its members being educated people who were firm in their allegiance to the Czar and the Greek Church. This is hardly what a Russian of the period would describe as holding "liberal opinions", but let that pass. Nilus claims to have been educated from Moscow University and to have held a number of civil service posts, all of them, so far as his specifications go, connected with the police and judicial systems. He went to the Government of Orel, where he became a landowner and a sort of petty noble. He entered the Troitsky-Sergevsky Monastery, near Moscow, or so he says. Although numerous efforts have been made in Russia to find this Sergei Nilus, none has succeeded.

It is true that a number of persons have testified to the existence of Sergei Nilus, but in each case a different person has been referred to, though Nilus is not a Russian name or one commonly found in Russia. The present writer learned of two men, father and son, each bearing this very unusual name. First information led to the belief that at last the mysterious author had been discovered. The father was of about the right age, and was said to be a writer interested in religious subjects. Further inquiry elicited the information that this man had died in 1910, whereas the Nilus we are interested in was alive as late as 1917. Greatly enlarged editions of his work, with new personal matter added, appeared in 1911 and 1917. Obviously, therefore, the man who died in 1910 was not our author. The anonymous editor of an edition of the protocols issued in New York toward the end of 1920 says that "A returning traveller from Siberia in August, 1919, was positive that Nilus was in Irkutsk in June of that year". No clue is given to the identity of the editor who makes this statement. And here let me remark in passing, that it is a remarkable fact that all the editors of the numerous editions of the protocols, both here and abroad, are very shy persons and hide under the mask of anonymity. Nor is any clue given to the identity of the traveller from Siberia. Another report, also by a traveller returned from Siberia, who may possibly be the same person, makes it appear that the Nilus who was at Irkutsk is the son of the man who died in 1910, and is himself too young to fit the autobiographical sketch of the man born in 1862. I can only add to the foregoing, which represents all that I have been able to find out about Nilus, that there was an edition of the protocols published in Kishinev in 1906, the name of the author of the book in which they appeared being given as "Butmi de Katzman".

Now with respect to the protocols: No reference to these documents appeared in the first edition of the book in 1903. If the reader will kindly bear this fact in mind it will help to an understanding of what follows. A second edition of the book, greatly enlarged, appeared at Tsarskoye-Selo, near Moscow, in 1905, the added matter being given the title, Anti-Christ, a Near Political Possibility. This additional matter consisted of (1) an introduction written by Nilus himself, (2) twenty-four documents purporting to be disconnected portions of the report of a secret conclave of an organization of Jews called the Elders of Zion, and (3) some commentaries thereon by Nilus. Now, it is very significant that Nilus himself has given different accounts of the history of these documents—accounts which differ so radically that they cannot be reconciled. Let us examine these accounts very briefly: In the introduction to the edition of 1905 Nilus tells us that in 1901 he came into possession of the alleged protocols. He says that at the close of a series of secret meetings of influential leaders of this conspiracy, held under Masonic auspices, a woman stole from "one of the most influential and most highly initiated leaders of Freemasonry", certain documents which turned out to be disconnected portions of the proces-verbaux of lectures or reports made at the aforesaid meetings of the Elders of Zion. He says that the protocols were "signed by representatives of Zion of the 33d Degree", but he does not give the names of such signatories. This is, of itself, a suspicious circumstance, but a close reading of the text reveals that it is only one of several equally suspicious facts. Nilus does not claim to have seen the actual stolen documents, the original protocols. On the contrary, he tells us that what he received in 1901 was a document which he was assured was an accurate translation of the stolen documents. His own words are: "This document came into my possession some four years ago (1901) with the positive assurance that it is a true copy in translation, of original documents stolen by a woman from one of the most influential and the most highly initiated leaders of Freemasonry". Nilus has not seen the original manuscript, nor has any other known person. We have only the word of Professor Nilus that somebody gave him assurance that certain manuscripts were true and accurate translations of stolen documents of great international importance. So far as Nilus himself knew, or cared apparently, the manuscript given to him might well have been a forgery.

We do not even know the date of the alleged secret meetings of the Elders of Zion at which the lectures or reports, or whatever they were, recorded in these protocols were made, and, presumably, considered. We do not know the name of the "most influential and most highly initiated" leader of Freemasonry from whom the documents were said to have been stolen. Neither do we know the name of the thief. We do not know the name of the author of the alleged protocols, though obviously it would make all the difference in the world whether these are summaries of statements made by a responsible leader of the Jewish people, or the wild vaporings of such a crank as infests practically every conference and convention. We do not know who translated the alleged protocols, nor in what language they were written. Moreover, not one word of assurance does Professor Nilus give on his own account that he knows any of these things. He does not appear to have made any investigation of any kind. In view of the rest of his work, we may be quite sure that had he done so, he would have told us. He does not even tell us, in this edition of 1905, that the person from whom he acquired the "translation" was known to him as a reliable and trustworthy person. He does not profess to know anything more than I have already quoted from him. No one knows Nilus himself. So much for the explanation of 1905.

Before I pass on to consider a later and different explanation made by the mysterious Nilus, a few brief observations upon the story now before us may not be out of place, especially since the Dearborn Independent has accepted it and made it the basis of its propaganda. How is it possible for any person possessing anything approaching a trained mind, and especially for one accustomed to historical study, to accept as authentic, and without adequate corroboration, documents whose origin and history are so clouded with secrecy, mystery and ignorance? And how can men and women who are to all appearances rational and high-minded, bring themselves to indict and condemn a whole race, invoking thereby the perils of world-wide racial conflict, upon the basis of such flimsy, clouded and tainted testimony? No decent and self-respecting judge or jury anywhere in the United States would, I dare believe, convict the humblest individual of even a petty crime upon the basis of such testimony. Serious charges made by a complainant who does not appear in court, and is not known to the court, an alleged translation of an alleged original, not produced in court, alleged to have been stolen by an anonymous thief, not produced in court, from an alleged conspirator not named nor produced in court, and not a scintilla of corroborative evidence, direct or circumstantial —was ever a chain of evidence so flimsy? By comparison, the discovery of the Book of Mormon is a well attested event.

Now let us consider another very different story told by Nilus. In January, 1917—the date is important—another edition of the book, so greatly enlarged and rewritten as to be almost as new book, appeared in Russia bearing the name of the mysterious and unknown Nilus. The title of this book is It is Near, at the Door. It was published at Sergeiev, near Moscow, at the Monastery of Sergeiev. I have said that the date of the appearance of this volume is important and here is the reason: The overthrow of Czarism occurred in March, 1917. Toward the end of 1916 the revolutionary ferment was already apparent. What else could be expected than that the provocative agents of the Czar's Secret Police and the Black Hundreds should strive to divert the attention of the people to some other issue? And what more natural than that they should conclude that a wide-spread movement against the Jews, great pograms over a wide area, would best suit their purpose? The first publication of the alleged protocols took place in 1905, also at the beginning of a popular revolution, and it did have the effect of creating a considerable anti-Jewish agitation which weakened the revolutionary movement. The trail of the Secret Police and the Black Hundreds is plain. And now for the new version of the history of the protocols. On page 96 of this new book, which is a violent diatribe against the Jews, Nilus says:

"In 1901, I came into possession of a manuscript, and this comparatively small book was destined to cause such a deep change in my entire viewpoint as can only be caused in the heart of man by Divine Power. It was comparable with the miracle of making the blind see. 'May divine acts show on him'.

"This manuscript was called, 'The Protocols of the Zionist Men of Wisdom', and it was given to me by the now deceased leader of the Tshernigov nobility, who later became Vice Governor of Stavropol, Alexis Nicholaievich Sukhotin. I had already begun to work with my pen for the glory of the Lord, and I was friendly with Sukhotin because he was a man of my opinion, i. e., extremely conservative as they are now termed.

"Sukhotin told me that he in turn had obtained the manuscript from a lady who always lived abroad. This lady was a noblewoman from Tshernigov. He mentioned her by name, but I have forgotten it. He said that she obtained it in some mysterious way, by theft, I believe. Sukhotin also said that one copy of the manuscript was given by this lady to Sipiagin, then Minister of the Interior, upon her return from abroad, and that Sipiagin was subsequently killed. He said other things of the same mysterious character. But when I first became acquainted with the contents of the manuscript I was convinced that its terrible, cruel, and straightforward truth is witness of its true origin from the 'Zionist Men of Wisdom', and that no other evidence of its origin would be needed".

Is it necessary, I wonder, to waste words in exposing this pious fraud? His own statement comes pretty close to convicting him of being, as I have suggested above, a hireling of the Secret Police, an agent provocateur. Sukhotin, from whom he now claims to have received the manuscript, was a notorious anti-Semite and a despot of the worst type. Sipiagin, to whom, it is alleged, the manuscript had been previously given, was also a bitter anti-Semite and one of the most infamous of Russian bureaucrats. He was notoriously corrupt and unspeakably cruel while he was Minister of the Interior. He was assassinated by Stephen Balmashev, in March, 1902. Even if we credit this revised version of the way in which he came into possession of the manuscript, Nilus is closely identified with the secret agencies of the old regime. Let us take note, however, of other pecularities of the canting hypocrite, Nilus: He names Sukhotin and Sipiagin only after they are dead and denial by them is impossible; he has "forgotten" the name of the "noblewoman from Tshernigov", the person alleged to have stolen the original documents; he suggests that the documents need no other evidence than their own contents. Truly, a very typical criminal is the mysterious, elusive, unknown "Professor Sergei Nilus"!

Now let me call attention to two other very interesting facts in connection with this story of 1917: the first is that Nilus omits the very important statement made in the edition of 1905 that the alleged protocols were "signed by representatives of Zion of the 33rd Degree", without offering the slightest explanation of that most important omission. The second fact is even more conclusive as evidence of the man's absolute untrustworthiness. Having told us in the edition of 1905 that the friend who gave him the protocols assured him that they had been "stolen by a woman", and in 1917 that it was Nikolaievich Sukhotin from whom he received the documents, who not only told him that they had been stolen by a woman, but told him also the name of the thief, which he has forgotten, unfortunately, he proceeds, in the Epilogue of the 1917 edition, to tell a very different story. He says in this epilogue that the protocols "were stealthily removed from a large book of notes on lectures. My friend found them in the safe of the headquarter offices of the Society of Zion, which is situated at present in Paris".

Was ever perjurer more confused? First, we have an unknown woman stealing the documents from "one of the most highly initiated leaders of Freemasonry"; next, we have a "noblewoman of Tshernigov" as the thief and Sukhotin as the intermediary through whose hands they reached his friend Nilus. Now, finally, Nilus says that his friend—i. e., Sukhotin was the thief, and not a woman at all! Instead of being stolen from the person of "one of the most highly initiated leaders of Freemasonry", they are "found" in a safe in Paris! The woman has disappeared; the highly initiated Freemason has disappeared. Now it is Sukhotin who is identified as the thief, and he is pointed out as having robbed a safe in Paris. So much for the perjury of Nilus. I may add that I am assured—though I cannot vouch for the statement—that Sukhotin was not outside of Russia between 1890 and 1905.

But it may be argued, as it has been argued in the Dearborn Independent—following the suggestion of Nilus—that the authenticity of the protocols, and the reality and seriousness of the Jewish conspiracy, are sufficiently demonstrated by internal evidence. I confess that I do not find in the documents any reason for reaching such a conclusion, though I have studied them with all of the patience and care I could command, and have read the principal arguments made in their defense. I find not a scrap of evidence to show that there exists, or ever has existed, such a body of men as "The Elders of Zion" or "The Men of Wisdom of Zion", or any similar secret body of Jews. That such a secret conspiratory body exists has been charged from time to time during more than a century, yet not a particle of evidence to sustain the charge has ever been produced. I am quite well aware of the capacity of the human mind to believe whatever accords with preconceived prejudices, suspicions or impressions, even in the face of evidence to the contrary, and, correspondingly, to reject the most conclusive evidence when it runs counter to such prejudices, suspicions of impressions. Laying upon my own mind the warning implied by this knowledge, and guarding myself against the danger of rejecting, or ignoring, or undervaluing unpleasant and unwelcome facts, I am bound to say that those who find in these alleged protocols a sufficient basis for bringing the Jewish race under indictment, seem to me to have brought preconceived suspicion and fear of the Jews to their study of the documents themselves. Personally, I can find nothing in them which suggests any highly organized intelligence, such as the leaders of the Jewish race represent and command in abundance; rather, they seem to me to clearly indicate the disordered mind and distorted vision of a very common type of mono-maniac, the genus—"crank".

I believe that historical study is not one of Mr. Ford's strong points, but even so, he must be aware of the fact that it is one of the commonest things in history to encounter charges of conspiracy directed against religious and political sects, supported by more or less plausible arguments and believed by considerable numbers of people. Were it necessary to my purpose, and did time permit, I could quite easily fill a considerable volume with illustrations of this fact. For example, there exists a great literature devoted to the object of proving that the Vatican is the headquarters of such a conspiracy to bring about or to attain world domination. Thousands of books and pamphlets have been written to convict the Jesuits of such a conspiracy, many of them far more convincing than these protocols. Pamphlets aiming to convince the American people that the Knights of Columbus is an organization aiming at the overthrow of the American Republic and the establishment of the temporal sovereignty of the Pope over the United States have been circulated by the million. It is a matter of court record that this charge has been supported by the publication of what purported to be exact copies of oaths pledging the members of that organization to the end stated. Let me say that I do not credit these sensational stories and charges. I have confined myself to charges made against one of the two great sections of Christianity for reasons which seem to me peculiarly cogent: The charges made against the Jews have produced the most terrible results in the countries where the Roman Catholic Church is strongest, and no leader of the Christian religion has such strong reason for denouncing such appeals to prejudice and hatred as the head of that church.

Belief in widespread conspiracies directed against individuals or the state is probably the commonest form assumed by the human mind when it loses its balance and its sense of proportion. I venture to hazard the opinion that of all the cranks who have pestered Mr. Ford since he has attained a conspicuous position, those who imagined themselves to be the victims of conspiracies have outnumbered all the others. These protocols are either preposterous forgeries deliberately wrought for the purpose of fostering anti-Semitism in Russia, or they are the pitiable ravings of a familiar type of mono-maniac.

Concerning the authorship of the protocols, there has been much conjecture, especially on the part of those who have seriously regarded them as an authentic expression of Jewish opinion. It has been whispered in those places where the so-called Jewish question is discussed, that it was the work of the well-known Zionist leader, Dr. Theodor Herzl. This is the theory which Nilus himself advances in the introduction to the edition of 1917. He says: . . ."my book has already reached the fourth edition but it is only definitely known to me now and in a manner worthy of belief, and that through Jewish sources, that these protocols are nothing other than the strategic plans for the conquest of the world under the heel of Israel, and worked out by the leaders of the Jewish people . . . and read to the Councils of Elders by the 'Prince of Exile', Theodor Herzl, during the first Zionist Congress, summoned by him in August, 1897, in Basle".

This is the first time Nilus has so much as hinted at the date of the alleged secret conclave of the Elders of Zion, at the close of which, according to the story of 1905 so elaborately contradicted in 1917, the protocols were stolen by a woman. It is perhaps as well to remark in passing that the first Zionist Congress was held in the open and its proceedings freely reported in the press. Now, Herzl stands among the foremost of the intellectual Jews of modern times. All his known work is characterized by clear, clean-cut reasoning and direct and forceful statement. All his known writings are characterized by these qualities. Whatever we may think about Zionism, it must be admitted that the great Austrian journalist and critic never lacked the courage of his convictions, as may be seen by anybody who will take the trouble to read his writings or the evidence delivered by him before the British Royal Commission on Alien Immigration, in 1902. If Herzl wrote these documents he adopted the disguise of the style and method of a much inferior mentality.

Unless we are to believe that he deliberately adopted a style of writing and method of reasoning entirely unfamiliar and unlike his publicly acknowledged work, for the express purpose of hiding his authorship of the protocols—which, if we credit the story that they were presented to a secret conference of the leaders of the alleged conspiracy, is an impossible hypothesis—we are warranted in saying that whoever wrote them it was not Theodor Herzl. It would be as reasonable to ascribe a Walt Whitman chant to Emerson, or a Bernard Shaw satire to Jonathan Edwards, as to ascribe these crude meandering pages to the crystalline intellect of Theodor Herzl. I do not find in them any suggestion of the trained mind of a scholar and writer of Herzl's attainments; rather, they seem to me to belong in about the same intellectual category as the ordinary propaganda literature of the numerous sects, ancient and modern, based upon peculiar interpretations of biblical prophecies. Since the outbreak of the World War in 1914, and throughout the whole chapter of revolutionary events following thereupon, there has been a steady flood of such literature. Even the much discussed forecast of Bolshevism does not in any material respect differ from many similar "prophecies" that have appeared in recent years.

It cannot be denied that Bolshevism actually conforms in a notable degree to the specifications contained in the protocols, which I have already summarized in the preceding chapter. Shall we then conclude that the charge is proven and declare the case closed, or is it necessary to examine the evidence further and more critically? I think that a very brief period of honest reflection will convince any fair-minded and intelligent person of the injustice of the rendering of a verdict holding the Jews responsible for Bolshevism upon the basis of such evidence. Let me direct the attention of my readers to a coincidence of dates which once more directs suspicion against Professor Sergei Nilus and against the alleged stolen protocols: I have already pointed out that in 1903, in the first edition of his book, Nilus did not use the alleged protocols, though he claims that they had been in his possession for two years prior to that time. That this is a suspicious circumstance will, I think, be readily conceded by the open-minded. In 1903 the Russian Social Democratic Party was split into two factions, and the word "Bolshevism" came into use as the designation of the policy of one of these factions. In 1905 the first Russian Revolution took place. In the period between the split in the Social Democratic Party in 1903 and the outbreak of the Revolution in 1905 the leaders of the Bolsheviki had been active in formulating and propagating their theoretical and political views. During the Revolution a sharp conflict occurred between the Bolsheviki and other factions of the Russian Socialist movement and the Socialist press gave much space to the controversy.

It will be seen from this brief historical sketch that when Nilus published a second edition of his book, late in 1905, he could find in the Russian Socialist press all the materials for such a general description of Bolshevism as that contained in the protocols. Of course, if we believe that the documents are geniune, that they are authentic translations of documents actually stolen in 1896, delivered to Nilus in 1901, and by him first made public in 1905, we have simply a coincidence of dates. I submit, however, that there is not a shred of credible evidence that the documents were so obtained by Nilus, or that they existed in 1896, 1901, 1903, or at any date earlier than 1905, the year of their first publication. I submit, furthermore, that it is highly probable that the passages in the alleged protocols which are now hailed as conclusive evidence that that Bolshevist policy had been formulated as early as 1896, were in reality written after 1903 and in the light of already published accounts of Bolshevist theories and tactics. There is not a thing that we know about these documents and their history which does not point directly to the conclusion that they are forgeries.

When I was in London in October, 1920, an English journalist of distinction, well-known and influential on both sides of the Atlantic, with great earnestness and evident conviction sought to impress me with the serious importance of these alleged Protocols of the Elders of Zion. He was quite convinced that the documents were genuine, and that they proved beyond reasonable a doubt the existence of a world-wide Jewish conspiracy. With great solemnity and manifest sincerity he sought to enlist my cooperation in defense of what he called "Anglo-Saxon Civilization", which he seemed to regard as synonymous with Christian civilization. He was quite astonished when I directed his attention to the fact that a well-known French writer, Louis Martin, had published as far back as 1895, a book in which he attempted to prove the existence of such a world-wide Jewish conspiracy. My friend honestly believed that the existence of this conspiracy had never been known or suspected prior to the publication of the work of the mysterious Sergei Nilus. He was still more surprised when I told him that in his book, L' Anglais Est-Il Un Juif?, Martin had attempted to prove that the people are a part of the Jewish race, and that the British Government is the principal directing power of the conspiracy; so that the world-wide Jewish conspiracy must, according to Martin, be understood as a secret compact between the British Government, as a Jewish organization and the leaders of Jewry in all other lands. Thus is the theory of a world-wide Jewish conspiracy reduced to absurdity. I confess that at that time I was not aware that in the original Russian of the 1905 edition of the work of Nilus this absurd theory of Martin had been reproduced, but carefully omitted from every English translation published in this country and in England. The reason for the omission is obvious: had the passage been given it would have made a laughing stock of the protocols. I submit, however, that the omission of such an important passage from the text of Nilus without any reference to or explanation of the liberty taken with the text, places those responsible for the several translations in a very unfavorable light.

In closing this chapter, it is perhaps well that some record should be made of the sinister use which was made of these alleged protocols during the World War. Not long after the United States had begun active participation in the war against Germany, it came to my attention that typewritten manuscripts, purporting to prove that the war was part of a great conspiracy of international Jews, were being circulated. On at least three different occasions, early in 1918, I was asked about this charge. I was told then that the British and American Governments were in a special sense the agents of this Jewish conspiracy. In July, 1918, in Paris, a fuller account of the documents was given to me by a loyal Socialist, to whom they had been shown. There was not then, as there is not now, the slightest doubt in my mind that the pro-German propagandists resorted to this trick in order to weaken the morale of the principal allied nations.

ELECTION REFORMS IN ROUMANIA THREATEN TO EXCLUDE JEWISH REPRESENTATION.

(Vienna, J. C. B. Service.)

A measure introduced into the Roumanian Parliament by the government and said to have for its aim the reform of the present election methods threatens to exclude Jewish representation, according to a dispatch from Bucharest. It is the purpose of the measure to rearrange the voting districts so that the cities will merge with the country. Jewish organizations in greater Roumania have appealed to the Premier to secure the Jewish population with some representation by having the districts in the larger cities apportioned in accordance with the location of the different nationalities.

UKRAINIAN JEWS STILL SUBJECT TO POGROMS RELIEF WORKER REPORTS.

(Paris, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

Dr. Frank Rosenblatt, a representative to the Joint Distribution Committee, who arrived here from Moscow, reports that the pogroms upon the Jews in Ukrainia have not stopped and are still a regular feature of the lawless life of Ukrainia. Dr. Rosenblatt will participate in a conference of head-workers of the Joint Distribution Committee taking place here now after which he will proceed to the United States.

LEAGUE WILL CONSIDER QUESTION OF JEWISH CITIZENSHIP IN DANZIG.

(Paris, J. C. B. Service.)

The council of the League of Nations at its meeting in this city will consider the question of the naturalization of alien Jews in the city of Danzig. Jews are at present finding it difficult to obtain citizenship in Danzig, and the Local Committee of Jewish Delegations has brought the matter before the notice of the league.

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

The Devil Indisposed.

IGNATIUS PADEREWSKI, the ex-president of the Polish Republic, arrived in New York, February 13, and talked freely to reporters of the Yiddish press. He does not deny that Jews suffered in Poland but there is no anti-Semitism. There is only an economic question, and the young republic is suffering from slight infant diseases, but all this will pass, the government making every effort to fulfill the treaty obligations. Such an infantile disease is a railroad strike the details of which merciful press associations keep from our overstrung nerves, and occasionally one can get 1,000 Polish marks (instead of 4) for an American dollar. Paderewski, sailing from New York, November 23, 1918, with the exuberant feeling of the realization of the Polish battle hymn: "jeszcze Polska nie zginela", told us that the Jews of Poland will receive a square deal. He may be an optimist, but he was something considerably worse than an optimist when he declared in Paris on May 27, 1919, after the atrocities of Lemberg and Pinsk that the Polish pogroms were a German invention. Similar "inventions" committed by Polish soldiers in Lublin were the subject of an interpellation in the sejm in the middle of February.

What's a Treaty Between Allies?

The sejm passed, on February 7, a constitution which provides that the president of the Polish republic must be a Roman Catholic. To the unsophisticated mind this appears a clear violation of the Treaty of Versailles to which Poland agreed, June 30, 1919, and which provided for the full equality of racial and religious minorities. It is true that no one expected that Rabbi Perlmutter or even Prof. Aszkenazi had much of a chance, if he were to run for the presidency, but just for this reason it would seem unnecessary to flaunt this cynic disregard of treaty obligations in the face of the Allied and Associated Powers who were so willing to overlook little pranks of Europe's enfant terrible. It is therefore absolutely unnecessary to record such trifles, as the exclusion of the Yiddish press from the sessions of the sejm or an attack on a Jewish funeral by hooligans in Warsaw in good sixteenth century fashion. We will receive a better picture of condition, if we hear two eye witnesses, both recently arrived from Poland, on their own experiences.

A Yom Kippur in Staszow.

Rabbi L. Graubarth in Toronto left Poland a few months ago. He was rabbi in Staszow, not far from the former borders of Austria and Prussia, when the war broke out in the fateful year 5674 A. M., symbolized by the Hebrew chronostychon: He looketh upon the earth and she trembleth (Ps. 104, 32). In August during Israel's fateful month of Ab, the first Austrian troops entered the city. The Poles, knowing that their fellow nationals in Galicia had things their own way, greeted them as liberators. Yet they took precautions. When the coming of the enemy was announced, the leading Poles invited Jewish leaders to join them in offering the incoming troops the traditional friendly greeting of bread and salt. The Jewish representatives asked the rabbi's advice. They do it in these backward countries. The rabbi warned emphatically. You know their sentiments, he said. They do not mean to honor you, but they are afraid that things may go wrong, so they will have the fact that Jews took part in this delegation as a convenient excuse for themselves when the Russians shall return to whom they will denounce you as the instigators of the idea.

"As He Interpreted It, So It Came to Pass".

The Austrians took possession of the city, were greeted by the "starosta" and other representative Poles, the Jews remaining away. Their first act was to call a meeting of prominent citizens, representing all classes of the population for the sake of forming a local administration. "Der Herr Rabbiner" who was also invited, declined. We are bound by our oath, so he declared, to the czar, and until we are released we can only obey such of your orders as are dictated by force. After a few hot words about martial law the matter rested. The population followed its usual occupations until a few weeks later, just a few days before Rosh Hashanah, the Russians returned. The commander of the returning troops was told at once that the Jews had greeted the enemy with delight, had served as interpreters and guides and as spies. On Thursday, September 17, while people made preparations to go to the midnight services (Selihot) rumors of pogrom were heard. The rumors were soon substantiated. The Russians had broken into Jewish houses, pillaged shops, raped women, and brutally assaulted men. There were no casualties, but numerous victims had to be taken to hospitals. The incident spread terror among the Jewish population. A few Jews who lived in surrounding villages and a man who had charge of a lumber camp in the neighborhood, living with his family in a shack in the woods used to come to town for the high holydays. They considered it unsafe to leave their families behind and equally risky to leave their houses unprotected. So they decided to remain in their homes and to hold services in the centrally located lumber camp. During the night of Yom Kippur a fire broke out in one of the villages, and the house of a peasant was destroyed.

Professor B. Schatz, Head of the Bezalel Art Institute in Jerusalem, Making a Plaque of Professor G. Deutsch.

"The Bearer of Our Diseases Whose Grave Is Among the Wicked".

A woman, trying to save her household goods had her hands badly burned. She went to the city the next morning to be treated in the hospital. On the way she stopped at the house of a shoemaker. The latter asked her whether she had any suspicion of incendiarism. She had not. So he suggested that the Jews might have laid the fire. Thinking of it she thought that was quite possible because on the preceding Thursday night, she had guided the pillaging Russian soldiers to the houses of the Jews. The shoemaker told her it was her duty to report this suspicion to the military commander which she did at once. There the suspicion became a certainty. A squad of soldiers was sent to the cabin in the woods. All the eleven male adults were arrested, taken to the city, ten of them shot and the eleventh hanged. The news spread in the city, but nobody dared to ask for an explanation or a confirmation of the rumor at military headquarters until next day (October 1, 1914) when the Russians again had to evacuate the city, retiring before the approaching Austrians, and it became clear that the commander needed a story of Jewish spies to "explain" his defeat. The martyrs had been interred on the place of the execution, and it was the wish of the families to give them a decent burial but this was again fraught with danger. Should the Russians return, the Poles would be quick to inform them that the Jews had celebrated the executed "spies" as martyrs and had given them a solemn funeral. But the long years of experience with Russian law made the Jews resourceful. So some one suggested to the sanitary officer of the German army that the burial of the victims in this place was a menace to the health of the city, and the "order" was given to disinter them, and they were buried in the Jewish cemetery on the Sukkoth festival. "You can easily imagine", said Rabbi Graubarth in telling the story "what a Day of Rejoicing we had".

Galician Refugees in Kanitz, Czechoslovakia, with Rabbi Dr. H. Flesch and His Wife in the Center. The Congregation Is Reduced to Sixty-Eight Souls But During the War Had to Care for 260 Refugees.

Dumb Witnesses.

The apprehended event came to pass. The Russians returned in the spring of 1915 for a short time, and the first act was a proclamation against "Jewish spies". In order to safeguard the Russian army, some representative Jews, the rabbi among them, were to be exiled to the interior of Russia to be held there as hostages and to be immediately executed if any Jew should be found guilty of treason. The rabbi expostulated with the commander. "You might think", he said, "that I can be responsible for the doings of every member of my community although this is obviously illogical, but even you will have to admit that I am without any influence on them when I am a thousand miles away. Of course, all remonstrations were futile. The order had been given by the commander-in-chief, grandduke Nicholas, which was true, and in addition the commander was certain that the Jews were spies. The rabbi calmly replied: "The only spies whom you found so far are dead which is a good thing, for they can not answer the charges." Nevertheless all that the rabbi could obtain was a suspension of the sentence until after the Passover Holydays (1915), and then he was sent to Chernigov, of course paying his own way and that of his guard who for a substantial consideration consented to travel in civilian clothes so as to avoid sensation. From Chernigov Rabbi Graubarth succeeded in obtaining permission to go to Moscow where he remained during the various revolutions, being unmolested except that under the soviet government he had to register as a laborer in a factory which was not so difficult, as the soviet police maintains the traditions of the czarist "tchinovniks", accepting documentary evidence when accompanied by adequate cash. He succeeded in obtaining permission to return to Staszow in 1920 but found the city in ruins and his congregation disorganized and impoverished, so he was glad to accept a call to Toronto where some of his flock had settled years before.

Civis Polonus Sum.

Miss Helen Fuehrer, at present in Louisville, is a native of New Sandec in Galicia, known by the Jews as "Zans" and as the seat of the famous "Wonderrabbi", Hayyim Halberstamm (1792-1876), whose grandson, Isaac, arrived last November in New York to continue in the practice of miracles in which business there is now considerable competition. Miss Fuehrer is an intelligent young woman with a high school education, speaking some English and a perfect German. Her father, a resident of Greenville, Miss., had sent for his family just before the outbreak of the war but the money did not arrive in time so they remained in their home, tasting all the terrors of hostile occupation, epidemics during which two members of the family died, and the troubles of Polish reconstruction. The Austrian government, knowing the hostile sentiment of the Poles, tried to win them over by great concessions to their national aspirations. A Polish volunteer legion was formed with uniforms of their own, with Polish command and Polish officers. Yet as long as Austria existed, matters were tolerable. As soon, however, as Austria collapsed (November, 1918) the legionaires became a regular terror. Under the claim of searching for hidden arms they entered Jewish homes, took all "contraband of war" such as clothes, bedding, kitchen utensils and foodstuffs along, leaving the inhabitants destitute. A special pastime of the legionaires is to test the loyalty of Jews traveling in a railroad car by the demand that they shout "Long live Poland", and as many Jews speak the Polish language very indifferently, their mispronunciation is evidence of disloyalty, and the "traitors" are beaten to insensibility, their money is treated as alien enemy property and confiscated and often they are thrown from the running trains. Incidentally, they occasionally die. Miss Fuehrer has witnessed such scenes very often. When asked how people under such conditions dare to travel, she said they have to. It is simply a choice between sure starvation at home and a chance of finding an opportunity for earning a pittance. Asked about her own feelings on such a journey, she said a woman is reasonably safe. The Pole prides himself of his chivalry and unless a woman tries to interfere with the soldiers, protecting her husband or her father, she will not be molested. One is reminded of Gustav Freytag's story in "Soll und Haben" of the Polish revolution in 1846 when on the plea of a besieged party of Germans to save the women in case of surrender the Polish legionaire proudly replies: "Mein Herr, ich bin ein Pole".

The Front Pew for the Penitent Sinner.

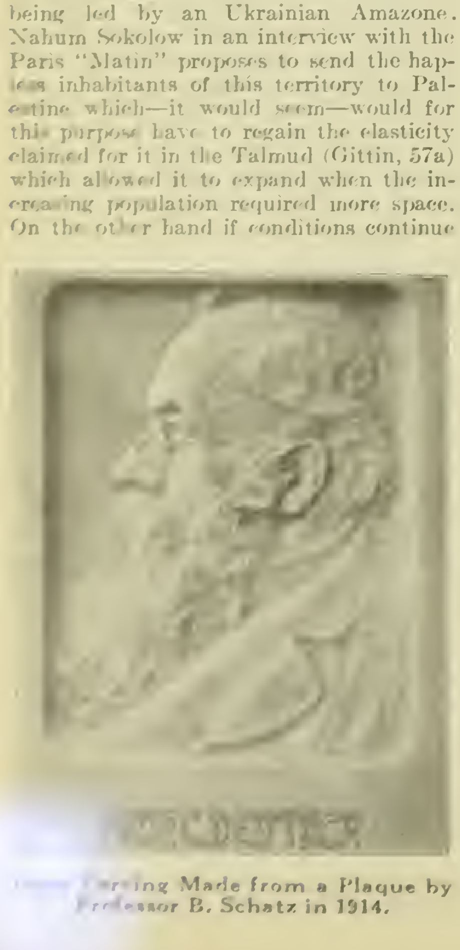
Mr. Oscar Leonard, the superintendent of the St. Louis Charities, who just returned from Rumania where he represented the Joint Distribution Committee, brings the most favorable reports of conditions in this country whose persecution of the Jews was for half a century an international scandal. He is unable to account for this change of heart which may be due to the fact that Rumania profited by the "self-determination of peoples" to the extent of annexing territories with foreign nationalities, bitterly opposed to their new ruler, which makes the Jews a more assimilative and therefore more desirable element. Mr. Leonard, himself a native of Rumania and speaking the Rumanian language perfectly, had unequaled opportunities in watching the press of the country and meeting all classes of the population. A report of a renewed anti-Semitic campaign on the plea that the Jews sympathize with Bolshevism is emphatically denied in the London "Times" (February 10). Another report that representatives of the Ukrainian aid society doing relief work among the Ukrainian refugees in Rumania were arrested, was received by the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society in New York. Another report states that Rumanian Jews asking for passports can not receive them unless they sign a statement that they waive their claim on Rumanian citizenship which is a clear violation of international law, creating, like the rule executing the Berlin treaty, a class of citizens without any nationality.

The Danubian Tartars.

Clerical and monarchial reaction have full sway in Hungary. Political leaders like Count Apponyi talk frankly of their "legitimate king". Clericalism has sunk below the level of medievalism. In the Jew-charters of the middle ages we find invariably the inviolability of cemeteries guaranteed. Recently the Budapest city council refused to the Jews additional ground for the extension of their cemetery because the Jews might bury their dead in a corner of the Catholic cemetery. Jewish soldiers are treated like enemy prisoners, being compelled to do the lowest menial labor, though they hold commissioned rank and have won medals for bravery at the front. Paul Sandor, member of the parliament who still holds to the old idea of Magyars professing the Jewish religion, was insulted by the minister of commerce when he exposed some graft in the railroad administration, and the minister of foreign affairs announced that no Jew shall be given a saloon license because every Jew is dishonest. The extent of the relapse of the Magyars into the habits of their predecessors of Attila's times may be judged from the fact that a Jewish child was hanged by Christian neighbors in Budapest.

The Tartars at Home.

The publication of Elias Heifetz's book on the slaughter in Ukraine will soon require an enlarged edition. New massacres have been reported from the government of Kiew, especially from Tolnaje where Jews who tried to bury the victims of a massacre were buried alive, the mob being led by an Ukrainian Amazone. Nahum Sokolow in an interview with the Paris "Matin" proposes to send the hapless inhabitants of this territory to Palestine which—it would seem—would for this purpose have to regain the elasticity claimed for it in the Talmud (Gittin, 57a) which allowed it to expand when the increasing population required more space. On the other hand if conditions continue as they are according to a report from Berdyczew, where the population is decimated by epidemics and starvation such will not be necessary. The refugees who succeeded in escaping to Rumanian territory and are interned near Kishineff are said to suffer terribly in the camp which is lacking the most elementary requirements of sanitation and where they are compelled to share the limited space with the interned Ukrainian "heroes" of Petlura's army who are beating them most mercilessly. It is now established that the murderers of Prof. Friedlander and Rabbi Cantor were members of this army, for the automobile in which these martyrs had traveled was found among the abandoned stores of one of Petlura's divisions. The difficulties are not ended, for the Bolsheviki demand a plebiscite in the districts formerly held by the Ukrainians which means evil for the Jews, no matter what they do or not do. The latest reports of growing anti-Semitism in soviet Russia can, owing to the lack of communication, not be substantiated. A report in the Palestinian daily, "Ha-Arez", by one who fled from Petrograd with the lately deceased Yiddish publicist, Rappaport (An-ski), when the soviet rule was declared does not substantiate the assertion of the Ford-Northcliffe press that the soviet rule is but a camouflaged Zionist Action Committee. The republic of Latvia has not forgotten the Czarist tradition. A little ritual murder charge, fortunately owing to the recovery of the "victim" without serious consequences, and persecution of the Yiddish press, prove that the Letts like the Poles understand liberation from foreign rule as an opportunity to take their turn in persecuting others.



[illegible] Etching Made from a Plaque by Professor B. Schatz in 1914.

Hermann L. Strack,
Protestant Theologian, Professor at the University of Berlin, Noble Champion of Judaism.

The Home of The "Edelrasse".

The wisdom of the Talmud is once more vindicated. "The handing over of Ahasverus' ring to Haman did more for Israel's unification than all prophets combined" (Megillah, 14a). The long desired national organization of the German Jews finally became an accomplished fact when on January 23, 1921, in a meeting, called by the "Gemeindebund" in Berlin, a "Gesamtorganisation" of all German Jews was established. The president of the Gemeindebund, Prof. Solomon Kalischer, is the first president of this organization. Zionists and orthodox cooperated with their former antagonists representing the liberal and the anti-national elements. The main differences were few. The Zionists desired in the first section which defines the object of the organization a clause inserted which would recognize Zionism, and the orthodox opposed woman's suffrage on the ground of the opinion rendered by Professor Hoffmann, the president of the Berlin seminary. In both cases the liberals won. As far as one can judge from a distance the ebony type of German orthodoxy is still pouting. "Der Israelit" declares that the mere recognition of "Richtungen" in Judaism is treason to the cause and so are fraternal feelings towards the liberal seminaries, the fountain heads of "Tum'ah". Professor Kalischer who teaches electricity at the Berlin polytechnic, and is 75 years old, is the grandson of the illustrious pioneer of Zionism, Rabbi Hirsch Kalischer of Thorn (1795-1875) who with all his orthodoxy was a believer in the principle of "Kelal Israel", promulgated by his grandson on this memorable occasion. One of the most needed objects of the new organization is the assistance of the small congregations which seem to dwindle more rapidly than ever before. A typical instance is reported from Ober-Ingelheim. A Jewish teacher was to be appointed. The Board of Education objected because, while the Protestant and Catholic teachers would have over 50 children each to instruct, and the "freireligioese" (unchurched) teacher 28, the Jewish teacher would be appointed because of the religious instruction of only two children. Anti-semitism was not mentioned in this connection but it is growing rapidly, especially in educational institutions. A new international alliance of anti-Semites was founded of which the Berlin professors, Langhans and Kloss, are the leaders, and in the elections of the Berlin student body the reactionary element, composed of national chauvinists and monarchists, all of whom are also anti-Semites, won a decisive victory.

Two Heads Are Less Than One.

In the Talmudic definition of trefah (Hullin, 58b) it is ruled that an animal having e. g. five legs is just as trefah as if it had three. The two heads of the Eagle in the old Austrian coat of arms were often the subject of a joke. The republic which succeeded the empire is just as trefah. It has not even one head. Socialists and Christian Socialists (clericals) are contending for power, and either party is in the relatively fortunate position of blaming the critical condition of the country on the other. The main issue is still the presence of the Galician Jews in Vienna which at the moment of this writing is placed before the League of Nations for decision. Exact figures have never been published but the highest number stated is 60,000 whose deportation could surely not solve and hardly affect the shortage of houses and food in Vienna, the only place in Austria where the presence of these Jews is any question at all. An internal question of serious importance is the strike declared by the teachers of religion in the public schools which according to the latest advices received has lasted for over a month. The Austrian law makes instruction in religion part of the curriculum, the state furnishing school room facilities and the Jewish congregation paying for the instruction. So at least it seems to be the case under the republic. The teachers demand that they be placed on a footing of equality with the teachers of secular subjects, and the latter threaten to go on a sympathetic strike, if this demand is not granted. In all probability the refusal is not due to tyranny, but to the financial crisis which has affected everybody and to changed legal conditions which make the support of the church voluntary. A report which is not yet quite clear informs us of regular riots, due to the production of Arthur Schnitzler's drama "Reigen". The papers that have reached us by mail speak in a very unfavorable tone of this play as erotic to a degree which even the naturalist must consider beyond the limit of propriety. Some time ago Schnitzler published a novel, entitled "Casanova's Love Affairs", in which sensuality of the crudest type is about the only excuse for the publication. The reason for the public demonstration is not clear from the dispatches, but if it should be due to an overemphasis of the sensuous, the admirers of the poet whose drama "Professor Bernhardi" and whose novel "Der Weg ins Freie" have treated the Jewish question in a manner, both poetic and courageous, should regret his decline.

A Check Payable in Messianic Times.

The outstanding event in Zionism is the publication of the Mandate, known to the readers from the last issue of the "News". While essentially a paraphrase of the Balfour and the San Remo declarations, and not yet passed upon by the League of Nations its meaning is quite clear. Palestine will be a British colony except for the name and Jewish immigration will be encouraged so that on the ground of local autonomy there will be a Jewish homeland where a sufficient number of Jewish immigrants will make it so. The value to the British empire is apparent from the adjustment of the Syrian territory between the French and the British which will allow a railroad to be built through the Syrian desert, connecting with the Bagdad railway and through Bosra to India, construction already having begun. Beneath the surface matters are not as smooth as they are presented in the draft of the Mandate. "Zeit", the Poale Zion organ of New York, claims that the French are intriguing in Syria and that a French official harangued the Arabs, telling them that the French are not going to take their lands away as the British do in Palestine. We know this trick of colonial policy that expects to win the natives by appealing to their savage instincts. It is a tradition of French imperialism known from the ambiguous position of Thiers and the unambiguous position of Ratti-Mentone in the Damascus affair of 1840 down to the Algerian riots of 1899.

Jeremiah.
A bas relief by Professor Boris Schatz. Its motto is Jeremiah viii, 23.

The Birth Throes of the Messianic Era.

The sentiment among Zionists seems to be expressed in the significant phrase of the London "Jewish World" that the Mandate does not re-echo the Passover cry: "Next year we shall be in Jerusalem". The confiscation of the Poale Zion organ of Jerusalem for an article on the Mandate by order of the High Commissioner is another sign of dissatisfaction. Yet while the radical Zionists express their disappointment, the Arab population voices its protest against the policy of the British government which sold out Palestine to the Jews both in press and public meetings. Prince Feisal protests against the Mandates over Palestine and Mesopotamia as king of Hedjas, and the "Morning Post" publishes a cable from Cairo that the Arab population of Palestine is threatening to join the Bolshevists, if the Mandate is not withdrawn. Noting the undeniable friction between British and French interests in the Orient it is rather surprising that Baron James de Rothschild should just at this time have come to this country from Paris to advocate the cause of the Palestine Restoration Fund. It is the first time that a Rothschild has come to this country in the interest of a Jewish cause, and it suggests an interesting recollection. In 1832 a plain country Jew, Bernard Behrend of Rodenberg in Hesse, appealed to the granduncle of Baron James, Baron Anselm Mayer von Rothschild, to acquire a large tract of land in what was then the northwestern territory of the United States for a settlement of the oppressed Jews of Europe. Now America shall help elsewhere. Baron James is the son of Baron Edmond, the generous supporter of the Palestinian colonization and the great grandson of the founder of the house. His name possesses a charm and he succeeded indeed in interesting prominent anti-Zionists like Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, Judge Irving Lehman, Hon. Oscar S. Straus, and Mr. Louis Marshall in this work. His appearance at the Zionist convention in Montreal (February 1) aroused an equal enthusiasm and a million dollars was pledged for the work. In Palestine itself the appearance of Prof. Chaim Weitzman and Sir Alfred Mond created a great deal of enthusiasm. What is needed is a large and self-supporting Jewish immigrant population. The latest report gives the number of Jewish immigrants who arrived in 1920 as 10,000 but does not say anything about emigration which can not be an entirely negligible quantity. Nor is the condition of the country economically satisfactory, for the Jewish hospital of Jaffa had to close its doors, and the Haham Bashi of the city, Benzion Uziel, accepted a call to Salonica.

Miscellaneous.

The Dillingham bill with its restrictions on immigration failed to become a law, owing to President Wilson's opposition. It will prove a boon to those who wish to escape from the terrible conditions of central Europe, but the high rates of transportation and the passport difficulties will in themselves act as a bar to immigration. The sufferings of the immigrants are illustrated by an unquestionably typical case of the suicide of a girl on board the Baltic. The excitement of the vise difficulty, the quarantine and immigration troubles had proved too much for her. Yet the Dearborn Independent would make us believe that all the Jews of the world are on their way to U. S. on the ground of a concerted plan of the symbolic serpent whose head is to be transported to America. This snake story which is part of the "Protocols" and "The Jewish Peril" received quite lately a new illustration, not through the highly suspicious story of a supposed princess Radziwil which, if the authoress and her story were genuine, would not mean anything, but through the positive statement of a German paper that the original Russian book whose date and number of accession to the library of the British Museum is given with such emphatic accuracy is not found in that library. Of course, it would not mean very much if indeed a member of the Russian secret service had tried to earn his money by telling in 1905 such a story of a Jewish world conspiracy and putting it over on the mentally defective czar, but it becomes more and more probable that the whole thing is an invention of the former Russian ambassador Bakhmetioff and his colleague in London who, while living on the misspent charity of our department of state tried the recipe of Yelizawetgrad, Kishineff and Odessa to stage a pogrom as the best method of covering their inefficiency and corruption.

Achievements.

The comments of the press and of leading statesmen on the appointment of Lord Reading as viceroy of India are almost unanimously favorable. Even "Times" greeted it with enthusiastic approval. Only "Morning Post" in the comment on a letter, written by Lucien Wolf declares it is willing to face Haman's lot rather than change its policy. An incomplete press dispatch reports the appointment of a Jew to a prominent position on the government's service in Mesopotamia.

Another incomplete report tells of a pogrom in Tunis where similar disturbances occurred in July, 1920, in spite of the fact that Tunisian Jews had distinguished themselves at the front.

A recollection of one of the worst misdeeds of czarism is the visit to this country of Mendel Beilis, the victim of the ritual murder intrigue of Kiew in 1911. Palestine where he lived since his liberation does evidently not spell the land of promise to him.

A picture of the effects of the war is the latest report of the Breslau rabbinical seminary, issued on Founder's Day (January 27). The institution which has been hit very hard by the depreciation of its sinking fund is attended by 19 students and has after the death of Marcus Brann only three professors.

The latest census informs us that Geneva has now 2,773 Jews, while in 1888 it had only 701. The Calvinist Rome had for a long time rigidly excluded the Jews, but the duke of Savoy in order to compete with the prosperous republic allowed Jews to settle in Carouge right across the border, and in the course of time Geneva opened her gates to Jewish settlers but under considerable restrictions. As late as 1842 the council refused them the right to hold services but the city which erected a monument to Michael Servet who was burned at the stake by Calvin for his rejection of Trinity could not keep up this narrowness. On the other hand the canton of Aargau which in 1860 numbered 1,538 Jews has now only 690. Two villages in this canton, Endingen and Lengnau, were until recently the only places where Jews were permitted to live in Switzerland, having been first received as fugitives from the neighboring section of Germany during the War of Thirty Years. The freedom of movement since the Jews were admitted to full citizenship which in Switzerland did not take place until 1878 has like elsewhere depleted these villages. The Talmud once cleverly remarks: The wisdom of Providence divided the world into so many states, else the Jews would never have been able to survive.

FRANCE HONORS JEWS WHO AIDED HER DURING THE WAR.

(Paris, J. C. B. Service.)

For special service rendered to the government during the war, France has recently awarded special honors to a number of Jews among others being the following: Arnold Netter, Vice President of the Jewish Colonization Association, has been made a Commander of the Legion of Honor. Louis Seligman and Albert Kahn, the latter a member of the "Alliance Israelite", have been made officers of the Legion, while Eugene Dreyfus, Albert Schwap, Albert Wallineau and Theobald Nathanson, who, during the war turned out twenty-six thousand shells daily, have been appointed Chevaliers of the Legion. The same title has been bestowed upon Baron Jacques Ginsburg of Petrograd for financial services.

JEWISH COURT FOR PALESTINE—SUPREME RABBINATE TO BE CHOSEN.

(Jerusalem, J. C. B. Service.)

By order of the Palestine Administration, seventy-one Rabbis and thirty-five representative laymen were to meet at a conference on February 22, in order to elect a Supreme Rabbinate and a Jewish Court of Appeals which will have legal jurisdiction. The conference also intended to deliberate upon the question of adapting the Jewish legal code to modern times and particularly concern itself with the position of women.

Do Not Bar the Immigrant—Guide Him!

By Rabbi H.Raphael Gold

THE question of the advisability of closing the doors of the United States to immigration, now agitating our country, must never be construed as a Jewish problem. It is an American problem. The undue emphasis laid by Chairman Johnson of the Immigration Committee on the Jewish element of the emigrating masses of Europe is an unjust, and surely not a traditionally American discrimination. Representative Huddelston of Alabama sought to straighten out this dog-eared page of congressional history, and almost bent it in the other direction. In his impassioned humanitarian appeal he pleaded the cause of the hungry and cruelly-hunted Jews who have a prior claim upon the hospitality of these shores.

But we do not ask for any special privilege, nor for anything beyond that which has been granted by America in the past. Every loyal Jewish citizen knows that the interests of the body are more important than those of any of its limbs. Should we feel that America is ultimately endangered by this new wave of immigration, we ought to vote against their admission, even if our hearts were breaking within us for those who are left out in the cold.

But it is hard for us to believe that this country, which has been founded, built, and developed by European immigrants, should now recoil in horror before the coming of a new wave of the same class of immigrants, as if it were an invasion of some strange hordes from dark Scythia. As long as America is not suffering from over-population, as long as there remain millions of acres of virgin soil untouched, there will be a need for the sturdy land settler of northern Europe, the patient day laborer of southern Europe, and the battling initiative of Jew and Gaul. Thus the state of Wyoming is about ten times as large as Massachusetts in square miles; but in population Wyoming cannot even claim five per cent. of the number of inhabitants of the Bay State. There are a dozen other states in the Union showing a similar disparity of area and population. Even the very large and industrially flourishing state of Ohio, including metropolitan centers like Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Dayton, falls short of the population of New York City. For this phenomenon there may be a great many economic and sociological interpretations, but the conviction that America still has a great deal of elbow room remains unshaken.

It points also to another truth, namely, that the evil of immigration is not over-population, but congestion. The deafening cry raised by the enemies of immigration that the great influx of aliens results in unemployment and radicalism, fails to explain the particular cause of those evils, and surely offers no humane remedy. It is a mere truism to say that unemployment is caused not only by an over-supply of labor, but also by the immobility of labor. This means, that there may be a congestion of one type of immigrant workers in an eastern city, and yet simultaneously there may be a scarcity of such "hands" in the Middle West and the Pacific. Similarly, radicalism is not inherent in the immigrant, but results from the crowding together of great masses of fiercely struggling human beings, to whom the better organized society turns a deaf ear and cold shoulder. Radicalism thrives on mob psychology, and in the high temperature of a crowded district.

The immigrant should not be suspiciously watched, but purposefully guided. Thus far we have contented ourselves with criticizing his ideas and ridiculing his manners. And the much-advertised Americanization movements continued to feed him fourth of July orations on every day of the calendar. When the outworn immigrant proceeds beyond the "Gate of Tears", commonly known as Ellis Island, having passed "third degree" examinations, and numberless quarantine regulations and rules, he is left to himself, and to his struggles. He should be directed to. the great opportunities lying beyond New York City and the generally congested Northeast.

In the special field of Jewish immigration sporadic attempts have been made to control the distribution of immigrants. About twenty years ago the very influential and widely branching Independent Order of B'nai B'rith sought to divert the stream of Jewish immigrants fleeing Roumanian oppression away from New York City to the interior. A little later the Industrial Removal Office began to function, and was directly responsible for the establishment of numerous Jewish settlements in distant states, which served as concentration points for other immigrants and their relatives. The Jewish Territorial Organization ("Ito") headed by Israel Zangwill, indirectly relieved congestion in the East by disembarking Jewish immigrants from South Russia in Galveston, Texas. I have personal reasons to feel thankful for the latter tendency in immigration. Indeed, it furnished an important element of the membership who constituted my Jewish congregation in the city of Memphis, Tennessee. If those men had landed in the port of New York, they might have gone as far as Pittsburgh, but hardly as far as the banks of the Mississippi.

However, all these desperate attempts to cope with the problem represent a maximum endeavor of only a handful of people, through such frail instruments as lodges and benevolent societies. The powers and untold resources of the United States government have not as yet been placed behind these plans and efforts. Our Immigration Bureau does the proper work of excluding the undesirable immigrant. But what is being done for the admitted immigrant to see to it that he stays thoroughly desirable?

Control of immigration does not, therefore, involve the building of a Chinese wall around the United States, but it calls for careful and painstaking distribution of the immigrant population. Only in this way may we hope to retain the pioneer energy of the world for our own undeveloped regions instead of diverting it to Brazil, Tasmania, Rhodesia, and other "new lands". Then we shall also retain our great moral prestige as the haven of those who flee the wrath of tyranny, and pant for the breath of a land of freedom.

Their longing for America is not a romantic representation of the sordid desire to get to a land of "easy money". This much is generally admitted, that very few Jews emigrate from countries where living conditions are at all tolerable. Those who come here regard America as the "Liberator". There is a trenchant truth in their characterization as "full-fledged Americans even before landing". I recall from personal experience in Russia, that during the Spanish-American war Jewish little boys were playing "soldiers" in the recess hour of the "Cheder School", and the captain of the Spanish team could not persuade any one to join him. They all wanted to defend the American position. These little boys have grown and later emigrated to America. I am confident that the same boys ranked highly in the lines of the "Lost Battalion" of the Argonne recruited from the East Side of New York. They have been surely numbered somewhere among the 200,000 Jewish youths in the embattled American army and navy. They were among the bravest. Why shouldn't they have been? Some of their brethren would prefer dying for these United States than being barred from them. The American public may still remember the accounts of Jewish young men who jumped overboard when refused admittance beyond Ellis Island. They chose the bosom of the grim ocean in preference to the vale of tears and blood in pogrom-ridden Europe.

Indeed, we need not strain our imagination to view the world as shipwrecked by the catastrophe of the war. America is the one great life-saving craft afloat. The European survivors are clambering its boards. In their life-and-death struggle they may tip the boat. We are alarmed. But before we decide upon the brutal necessity of stunning the heads, and bruising the arms of the strugglers with our oars, let us look about twice, and ask ourselves: "Is the boat really overcrowded"?

News from Austria

AMONG the most popular German folk stories are those of Wilhelm Busch. The favorite of these again is "Max und Moritz", which in a humorous manner presents the pranks of two naughty boys so well told that the most determined pessimist is bound to laugh. Each story ends with the words: This was the last "streich" (trick) but the next one shall follow. My report from Vienna might begin with the same sentence except that I should make the slight but sad change, this was the last strike, but the next one will follow at once. We have just gone through a crisis. In my last report I mentioned the strike of the teachers of religion but it hardly was ended when the extensive strike of the employees of the mail, telephone, and telegraph service began. One may imagine what it means when a city of two million inhabitants is left without mail, telephone, and telegraph service.

If one needed a physician or had to prepare for an emergency operation or needed assistance for a woman in childbirth or had to report a fire or an accident requiring immediate action he was compelled to resort to the immensely expensive messenger or taxi service. The strike which paralyzed all activities lasted for three days. The population breathed easier, as if awakening from a nightmare when the letter carrier again appeared, the telephone bell rang, and the telegrams were again delivered. The strike was absolutely unnecessary. One can understand that people in their distress take extreme measures when hunger necessitates a strike but it is unintelligible that a whole population shall always suffer because questions of power or internal management arise which those interested wish to force to a solution.

Some hundred thousand people were puzzled for they could not understand that terrible conflict and did not consider it possible that a question of internal administration should destroy our economic life and paralyze the activity of a city of two millions. This strike made us realize that we are no state any more and we cannot become a state because we were ruined with well-intentioned design.

We have neither money nor raw material nor food nor a leading personality nor courage to live. For two years we have been vegetating in misery. We are living neither in peace nor in war. We are not fed nor completely starved, neither living nor buried.

The people are longing for peace, for stability, for moral restoration and therefore, the desire for a union with Germany is constantly growing. We wish to emerge from our misery and we know that Germany will again rise because the moral force which is inherent in this strong people cannot for all times be stifled.

On the other hand, we cannot help ourselves out of our own power. We need help and support urgently just as the blind man needs a guide, the lame a staff if he wishes to walk. We are living through hard times which are growing harder every day. We have now, unfortunately, reached a stage when a ride on the street car costs five crowns. The same amount before the war was sufficient to buy a ticket to the Semmering (Foothills of the Alps), which is a railroad journey of nearly sixty miles. For this amount one could buy a ticket for the theater with wife and child or could buy an abundant meal such as today only the rich can obtain by evading the food laws. There is no satisfactory answer to the question how people who have to live from the labor of their hands, or those still more unfortunate, who have to live by the work of their brain, shall be able to bear the new burden. In addition, the letter rate is to be substantially increased. A loaf of bread is to rise in price from six to fifteen crowns. Cigars and tobacco shall be increased by two hundred per cent in price—indeed a terrible outlook. There are already rumors of new strikes current at this time; the professors of the high schools are to begin their movement to stop work. They are unable to make both ends meet and are in a state of despair. The whole population, with the exception of a handful of war profiteers, are dissatisfied and the patience of the people is tested very hard. So far it has stood the test. Everything is moving within the limits of the law. Conditions as they are represented by a recent court trial in Hungary are impossible in our country. "Magyar Hirlap", a serious and widely read paper, reports the following case from a court trial in Satoralja-Ujhely which, for considerations of space, we can only report in condensed form. The postmaster, Alfred Geroe, was sentenced to twelve years in the penitentiary for inciting acts of violence against the authorities. The penalty for such a crime is severer but the court in rendering the sentence took into consideration the extenuating circumstance that Geroe was permanently injured during the course of the trial.

The reader will be dumbfounded by the question how it was possible that a man could become permanently injured while he is in jail awaiting trial, but one must remember that in Hungary everything is possible. At any rate, in answer to the question it may be said that it was established in the course of the examination that Geroe, a man of delicate constitution and in poor health for years, was mistreated by Lieutenant Turanszky, the leader of a band of uniformed rowdies in a most brutal manner. One of the tortures to which the poor victim was subjected was that officers danced on his body while he was lying on the floor and in the course of this amusement they broke his legs with their spurs.

Alfred Geroe was really lucky for had it not been for these extenuating circumstances he would have been sentenced to imprisonment for life. The fiends who tortured him were given the benefit of the extenuating circumstance that their victim was a Jew. The terrible crime which he committed consisted in the fact that he remained at his post during the communist government, attending to his duties conscientiously, without taking part in politics. This is a specimen of what the new course in Hungary means. This is called justice and it is announced to the whole world that in Hungary all men are equal before the law and that the citizens are living in a civilized country.

We are happy to record that France, although still filled with hostility to us, presents a gratifying contrast. It honors its citizens regardless of their religious affiliation. On the occasion of the semicentenary of the French republic a large number of French and Alsatian Jews were decorated. Our coreligionist, the brave General Camille Levi, received the highest distinction, being made a commander of the Legion of Honor and his native town named a street for him. Such distinctions are an honor not merely to him on whom they are bestowed but also on those who bestow them. They are so much the more meritorious as it is still rather an exception that the services of Jews to their country are properly recognized.

In Austria such a distinction would even today hardly be possible. An anecdote which originated in Galicia tells such a story of comparatively recent years. A Jewish colonel, in spite of his excellent record of services, had to wait for years for his promotion to the rank of general. On every occasion when promotions were published he was told that he would also have been promoted if his records would not show that a baptismal certificate was missing. The colonel however remained steadfast and would not barter his faith for the general rank. Once he was assigned to duty with the emperor when the latter attended a church service on a solemn occasion.

The priest in his sermon referred repeatedly to Beelzebub whom he called the "Oberst" (chief) of the devils. When leaving the church the colonel asked the emperor: "Majesty, is Beelzebub, the 'Oberst' of the devils a Jew"? The emperor, surprised, asked: "What makes you ask this question"? The colonel answered: "It is already twenty years that I always heard the talk of the 'Oberst' Beelzebub. Having learned today that he is still 'Oberst' I take it for granted that even in hell promotion to a higher rank depends on race". The emperor smiled but took the hint and in a short time the Jewish colonel was promoted to the rank of general. Many circles still regard the Jews as inferior, indeed as the pariah of society and consider it a disgrace to grant him social equality. The last annual meeting of the Alpine Society furnished such an example.

This society which has for its purpose the promotion of tourists' interests, raising funds to make the mountains more accessible, to erect shelters on the summits of the mountains where tourists find food and lodging and receive support to a large extent from Jews, has now also been infected with anti-Semitic ideas. The Section Austria of this society introduced a motion to exclude Jews from membership. In spite of a lively agitation on the part of the Christian Socialists who tried to pack the meeting, the attempt was not successful because the opponents had come in such large number that the balcony was considered unsafe and the meeting was closed on the ground that the building was unsafe. The anti-Semites had to leave the hall without having obtained their object.

It is sad that mutual hatred will not die. Just as individuals hate each other and find satisfaction in attacking their fellow men so it is the case between groups divided on the ground of religion and nationality. Only relentless hatred of the Germans could have suggested to the Peace Conference of Paris conditions of indemnity such as were now published. The words of the French ministers breathe the delight of a hunter who has hit his game. The representative of Great Britain had mentioned 43,000,000 marks in gold as the limit of Germany's liability for war damages to all powers. France succeeded in raising this amount to the staggering sum of 226,000,000. It would take too much space to present the conditions of payment in detail and besides they are undoubtedly known to the readers from the daily press. Their only object is to keep Germany in bondage for half a century and to render its economic recovery impossible. This attempt will not succeed because Germany will not accept these conditions.

After two years since the war began the frenzy ought to end, and if peace does not come from above it is bound to come from below because all nations are yearning for peace and conciliation. Their last hope is Washington, for Harding and Hoover cannot desire that Germany shall be reduced to slavery and that the present terrible misery should continue, that commerce in central Europe shall remain paralyzed, that hundreds of thousands of children should die of disease and starvation or become invalids for life because the chauvinism of France demands it in its fear of the possibility of Germany's recuperation.

Convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 4

The fifty-eighth annual convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, of the B'nai B'rith was held in Portland. The first meeting was called to order on Sunday, February 20, at 10 a. m. in the B'nai B'rith building, Grand President Louis M. Mendelsohn, of Fresno, California, presiding. Rabbi Samuel Koch of Seattle opened with prayer. Delegates from the entire district were in attendance and a large representation was noted. The meeting adjourned to Temple Beth Israel where a service was held, Rabbi Julius Leibert, of Spokane, delivering an impressive address on "An Antidote for Anti-Semitism". The meeting closed with a salute to the flag, led by Mr. D. Solis Cohen, and a prayer by Rabbi Alexander Segel of Fresno, Calif.

During the three days of the convention luncheon was served at the B'nai B'rith building, which greatly facilitated the work of the convention.

The report of the Grand President was read at a public meeting on Sunday afternoon. The report was a resume of the work of the year and showed a fine growth and a remarkable extension of activities. On Monday, the work of the lodges was reviewed and a large volume of routine business transacted. In the evening an initiation of a large class was held at Temple Beth Israel. The impressive work conducted by the degree team was commended most highly by those present. Lucius L. Solomons of San Francisco delivered a fine address to the class.

On Tuesday morning, the lodge celebrated Washington's birthday, with a thoughtful address on George Washington, by Rabbi Alexander Segel of Fresno. Prizes for the Kraus Honor Class Campaign were awarded to Phoenix, Los Angeles, Oakland and Portland Lodges. The limitation of new lodges to one in a town hereafter was decided on. The support of the Jewish classics was resolved on.

A report on defamatory matter and laws of libel was presented, and funds for anti-defamation work asked. The participation of the lodges in local charities was urged in cooperation with all local bodies or in their absence doing this work themselves. The Publicity Committee was recreated. The adoption of war-orphans was urged on the lodges.

The following resolution was passed:

"The fifty-eighth annual convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, hears with profound pleasure of the acceptance of the mandatory for Palestine by Great Britain. It feels that all Jews can conscientiously assist in the preparation of Palestine for the support and maintenance of those members of our faith who will feel called on to migrate to the land of Israel's great traditions.

"The Independent Order of B'nai B'rith including as it does Jews of all shades of opinion, does not presume to dictate in the matter of policy regarding the best use of the opportunity which is offered to many Jews in Palestine, but it sincerely welcomes the opportunity for generous support and fraternal encouragement of our people of all shades of opinion in the rehabilitation of the land of Zion and the opening of honorable avenues of life to those who shall there make their homes.

The work of the committee on legislation was particularly heavy and many changes were made.

Mr. D. Solis Cohen was elected President, after an ovation which lasted for a period of several minutes. The other officers elected were:

First Vice-President, Maurice Finkenstein, Los Angeles; Second Vice-President, Edgar C. Levy, San Francisco; Treasurer, Joseph Goldsmith, San Francisco; Secretary, I. J. Ascheim, San Francisco; General Committee, Edmund Tauszky, Abraham Jonas, Harry B. Wolfe, Richard Gutstadt, Isidore Golden, Leo Garfinkle and Milton Meyer; Sergeant at Arms, Herman Levy; Messenger, Sam Flyshaker; District Court, Henry Schwartz, George Samuels, George Lipman, Leon E. Prescott and Arthur M. Jonas.

The lodge adjourned on Tuesday evening, to meet next year at Sacramento, Calif. The delegates were entertained at a banquet in the evening at which addresses were made by retiring Grand President Mendelsohn and by Grand President David Solis Cohen.

Daughters of The Covenant.

An accomplishment of the B'nai B'rith Convention on behalf of the women's auxiliary was the establishing of a Central Committee which is to communicate with all branches of the Daughters on the Covenant and help them in cooperating more thoroughly. This committee will act in a sense similar to the Central Committee of the Grand Lodge of the B'nai B'rith, laying particular stress on extension work and organization of women's auxiliaries in every city of District No. 4 in which there is a B'nai B'rith Lodge, since it has been demonstrated beyond a doubt that the auxiliaries are indeed a great aid and influence to the order.

The luncheon given by the D. of C. at the Benson Hotel on Monday was attended by 250 women. Mrs. Isaac Swett presided and called on the President, Mrs. Joseph Shank, who delivered an address of welcome to the visiting ladies, in whose honor the luncheon was given. After the luncheon the guests were taken to the Orpheum Theatre.

Monday evening was ceremonial night, the ballroom of the Multnomah Hotel having been engaged for this event. Fifty-five members were initiated into the Order, the work of the degree team being most impressive. After the initiation, a reception was held for the newly inducted members, followed by a social hour in charge of Mrs. Z. Swett.

Tuesday night the banquet at the Multnomah Hotel tendered the visiting delegates to the B'nai B'rith Convention was also attended by the members of the Daughters of the Covenant and their visitors, thus making a fitting end to the activities of the three days.

JEW ELECTED TO OFFICE IN PARIS.

(Paris, Jewish Telegraphic Agency, March 1, 1921.)

In yesterday's local elections, the Jew Sauvarino was elected in the Second Sector.

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, February 16, 1921.

PALESTINE and its problems were the centre of interest during the past month in Anglo-Jewry. In the first place Sir Alfred Mond proceeded to the Holy Land in order to discuss on the spot a number of questions connected with the Loan and the formation of the Economic Council, about which much has been heard in the last few months. In the second place the terms of the Palestine Mandate were published through the journalistic enterprise of The Jewish Chronicle. Of the Economic Council little can be said that is definite. It appears that Sir Alfred Mond is destined to be the Chairman; yet there is this curious anomoly about it, that at the time of writing it does not actually exist, but there is a very great probability that it will come into being before long, and will be placed on a proper legal basis to enable it to become a strong influence in the upbuilding of Palestine. The Zionists themselves realize that they are impotent to carry on practical work; and since Palestine is no longer a matter for Zionists but for all Jews, it is needful that prominent Jews in England and America should come forward and take in hand the execution of practical policy. This the Economic Council proposes to do. The men who are members of it are what is termed in America "big men" with big ideas, a big outlook, and much daring. Mr. James de Rothschild, who has just returned from his visit to the United States, has made efforts to get prominent American Jews interested in the Economic Council. By the time these lines are printed we shall know the result of his efforts. At present only a few brief newspaper reports have come through.

As for the Mandate, on the whole public opinion regards it as more or less satisfactory. There are some people who expected a great deal more than the Mandate contains; there are others who are agreeably surprised that the Mandate contains so much. One or two small matters are being generally criticized at the moment. It is said in some quarters that there need not have been any attention in the Mandate of safe-guarding the rights of missionaries. Why should there be missionaries in Palestine? In any event, their work need not have received official or semi-official, sanction in the Mandate. But after all, this is a small matter, and thinking people are of opinion that whatever the character of the Mandate, whether it be regarded as a good document or not, Palestine will become what the Jews make of it. Nothing succeeds like success, and if the commonwealth in the Holy Land shows success produced by hard work, a government which is scrupulously just, social conditions which may be a model to the rest of the world, then those who are interested in the welfare of Palestine will have reason to rejoice. On the other hand, if we had a Mandate as perfect as could be conceived, that in itself would mean really nothing.

These ideas represent the swaying thought in the minds of the Anglo-Jewish community in regard to Palestine. That is one topic of general interest. The second still continues to be the Jewish War Memorial, which, though it is not making the speedy progress that was expected of it, is yet in a very healthy state and is taking its program very seriously. The chief problem of moment is what to do with Jews' College. The college is in want of funds, and a suggestion has been made that it should be taken over in its entirety by the War Memorial. This the War Memorial will not do as yet, seeing that such a course might tie its hands, and it would be obviously unwise at the present juncture to wed itself to any scheme or to any institution. Nevertheless, since the college is starving the War Memorial has made it a grant in order to tide it over a difficult period. It is quite clear that the college is in a state of flux and its ultimate destiny is as yet uncertain. Some institutions, like some men, appear to be placed under an unlucky star. Our Theological College in London seems to be one of these. The public has not always been satisfied with its governing body, the governing body has not always been satisfied with the students, and the students have not always been satisfied with the teachers and the teaching. It is a thousand pities, because the institution has great possibilities for good. Among other things it possesses a magnificent library, but nobody wants to use it.

As a community we do not appear to care very much for libraries. Another case in point is the Mocatta Library, the seat of the Jewish Historical Society of England, which is not utilized to anything like the extent that its founders expected. And yet, on the other hand, the White-chapel Public Library is frequented to an enormous extent by Jews, particularly of the younger generation. In regard to other great libraries it would not be going beyond the mark to assert that Jews are among their keenest patrons. But if libraries do not draw, lectures do, especially in the East End. The experience of the Historical Society in its courses of Extension Lectures on Jewish History at Toynbee Hall has continued to be so promising that this year another course is in preparation, this time on the sixteenth century. These lectures have become an important feature of the educational work of Toynbee Hall, and demands have actually been made that they should be repeated in other parts of London. Another promising lecture is this year's Arthur Davis Memorial Lecture, which is to be delivered by Professor Samuel Alexander, a very distinguished Jew, who occupies the chair of philosophy in the University of Manchester, and who is regarded by those who are entitled to judge as one of the foremost philosophers of the age. The chair will be taken on that occasion by Viscount Haldane, whose philosophical studies command respect, and whose political achievements, when the historian of the future weighs them up, will be written down as eminently great.

———

From time to time we have received news of our itinerant Chief Rabbi, who has passed through South Africa, where he has collected a fair sum for the Jewish War Memorial. He is now on his way to Australia, where it is hoped another large sum will be forthcoming. The work of collecting the money in South Africa was by no means light, but both the Chief Rabbi and Mr. Albert Woolf have spared no pains to make the "drive" as successful as may be.

———

It is whispered that the Sunday services recently organized in London by the Jewish Religious Union have not proved altogether successful. Those who foretold a debacle are not sorry at this result. The most that one can say is that a deep seriousness actuated the people responsible for the move. But perhaps a deep seriousness by itself is not always an advantage. However that may be, the services are still advertised, but it cannot be long now before they will be discontinued. Perhaps the interest aroused by Palestine has tended to make people more conservative, more inclined to hark back to the old practices and conditions, and more sympathetic to what is vaguely termed the orthodox point of view. Certain it is that the study of Hebrew has received a great impetus in this country, and young and old are vieing with each other in their devotion to the acquisition of the elements of the language, and the desire to speak it. There are several classes open to the public where living Hebrew is taught by Palestinians, and these are supplemented by classes privately arranged where a number of friends meet together regularly in order to cultivate conversation in the ancient tongue. This is a healthy revival, and whatever may be thought of Zionist policy and achievement, this, at least, is one solid fact which bears testimony to the truth of that old adage that man does not live by bread alone.

———

It was recently reported in this column that a committee was about to be formed for the publication of booklets on aspects of Jewish life. The impetus for this committee came from the League of British Jews, and the invitation was sent to the Board of Deputies and the Anglo-Jewish Association. When it was first mooted, the scheme was painted in most gorgeous colors. It would capture the imagination of the English public. It would achieve un-heard-of success. Incidentally it would bring about the unity of Anglo-Jewry. But from the very first there were sceptics, and it has turned out that the sceptics were right. The first enthusiasm is waning; the committee is not going to be a publishing committee at all; it will merely become a Press Committee—whatever that may mean. But as yet it has shown no sign of life, and in all probability will die an unmourned death. This makes it all the more incumbent on the London Lodge to push on with its original plan for the issue of publications, which is only held up by lack of funds. The booklets in the minds of those who formulated the lodge scheme ought to make an appeal in England and America, in fact, in all English-speaking countries. The lodge is determined to go ahead with the program and before long more may be heard about its intentions.

———

As usual at this time of year the London Lodge has elected its new officers. Brother Isaac Landau is the new President, and in his experienced hands the affairs of the lodge will be securely looked after. For Vice President, the Lodge has chosen Dr. I. Feldman, a young medical man of whom all those who know him, and they are many, have formed golden opinions. The Lodge is proud to have him as their Vice President for the year. Brother Strowe is the new Treasurer. He has done yeoman service in the cause of the needy in Vienna. The lodge is confident that he will show as much enthusiasm for the work of Treasurer of the London Lodge as he has done for that of Vienna relief. Last, but not least Brother Isaac Levy is the new Secretary. He is another young man who gives exceedingly great promise of splendid achievement. The lodge was fortunate in its last Secretary, Brother Henry Samuels, who was a tower of strength in a difficult year. We believe that Brother Levy will even surpass the achievements of Brother Samuels. For Honorary Foreign Secretary, we have Brother J. Greenbaum, last year's Treasurer. As in previous years the lodge has succeeded in making the Council partly composed of more experienced men in the work of the lodge and partly of younger men. We pride ourselves on giving a warm welcome to younger men throughout all our activities.

DOES FATE PURSUE WITNESSES IN FRANK CASE?

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 11.—Does a Nemesis pursue witnesses in the Leo Frank case—once the most-talked-of trial in the nation's history, but now a closed chapter in Atlanta court annals?

It is a strange freak of fate, at least, that those who figured most in giving testimony in the noted trial are victims themselves of the hand of the law. Sidelights are interesting at any rate.

The latest figure to suffer punishment is Newport Lanford, a detective. Lanford has been convicted of the charge of bribery, his license revoked and his pension discontinued by the Police Board. He was chief of detectives when Leo Frank was convicted and took a prominent part in the case. The bribery charge was in connection with a liquor case at Columbus.

Some days ago Sam Manor and a confederate plead guilty to robbing a Jew named Pries at the point of a pistol. The convicted men were sentenced to the penitentiary from five to ten years. Mrs. Manor, who collapsed in court when her husband was sentenced, was formerly a star witness for the state in the prosecution of Leo Frank. Two years ago she was arrested in Chattanooga for playing the badger game by going disrobed into various rooms in a hotel. She is now under bond in Atlanta for aiding in the robbery.
—[La Grange (Ga.) Reporter.

ANTI-SEMITISM WICKED.

A man's religion is a private and sacred relation between himself and his God, inviolable by any third party. How utterly unreasonable, therefore, the anti-Semitic propaganda. It is as un-American as it is un-Christian.

There is no doubt but that there are some bad Jews, just as there are some bad Catholics and some bad Protestants of all denominations; but, unless one is willing to condemn all Christendom on account of its black sheep, he can not turn his thumb down against all Jewry.
—[The Catholic Telegraph.

A RAY OF LIGHT FOR GERMAN JEWRY.

Writing editorially under the above head, the "Jewish Daily News" in a recent issue said:

"The famous professor of the Berlin University, Otto Von Gierke, the great German expert on jurisprudence and one of the leading personalities of the new Germany, stepped out from the so-called 'German Nationalist party' which is as a matter of fact, the old military party under a new name and has joined the Liberal German Folks' Party. The bitter anti-Semitism of the 'German Nationalists' has caused this celebrated scholar and leader to withdraw from their midst and dissociate himself from their policies. Together with his resignation Professor Gierke made public in the German press, a statement which has caused quite a sensation.

"Professor Gierke warns the German Nationalists that if, as they assert, they are a party of patriots and have as their purpose the reconstruction of Germany, they must not be a party of anti-Semites, for anti-Semitism and patriotism cannot possibly go together. A German patriot, Professor Gierke says, must work for the unity of all German elements, for Germany's salvation lies in unity only. An anti-Semitc on the other hand, is an individual who seeks to create differences and conflicts between German citizens and such an individual cannot be a patriot in the opinion of Professor Gierke.

"This is a most important declaration and will, no doubt, not be without its favorable influence for the Jews in Germany, especially so in view of the prominence of the speaker who is known throughout Germany as one of its greatest men. Professor Gierke's stand against German anti-Semitism is the first bright ray which has fallen upon the unfortunate Jewish situation in 'free' Germany where anti-Semitic has come to be a popular passion and where race hatred and persecution of the Jews is made the basis upon which national and political questions are fought over by the reactionary parties.

THE JEWISH FORUM,

The February issue of The Jewish Forum, the third anniversary number, is full of articles of especial interest to all lovers of good Jewish literature in English. In it Rev. Dr. Bernard Drachman attacks Prof. Mordecai M. Kaplan views on Judaism, and a symposium is begun on a question of vital concern to every Jewish institution in the country, entitled "What is Lacking in Our Communal Work?", in the discussion of which Dr. Maurice H. Harris, Mrs. Joseph Fels, Mrs. Frederick Nathan, and Rev. Dr. M. Hyamson participate. This issue also contains poems by Edwin Markham, entitled "The Blood Cry"; by Alter Abelson entitled "The New Heaven"; by Elvira B. Smith entitled "To The Jewish Forum"; and by Aaron Metchik entitled "Fathers and Children". It also contains an article on "The Euphemism in Yiddish", a study in Folk Psychology and Philology, by Prof. A. A. Roback of Northeastern College and Harvard University.

The serial story of "Akiba's Courtship" is concluded in this issue, and the Library Table containing book reviews, is continued.

Editorials treat of Major James De Rothschild, The Jewish Woman, The Third Anniversary Celebration of The Jewish Forum, and The Torah's Martyr.

Copies may be obtained by writing to The Jewish Forum, 5 Beekman Street, New York City.

THREE NOTED JEWS ELECTED TO SOUTH AFRICAN PARLIAMENT.

(London, J. C. B. Service.)

Advocate Morris Alexander, Colonel David Harris and Mr. Harry Graum have been elected to the new South African parliament, according to a Cape Town dispatch received here. Advocate Alexander is a son-in-law of the late Professor Schechter and is a leading figure in Jewish public life in South Africa.

PALESTINE ARMY COSTS FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND POUNDS MONTHLY.

(London, J. C. B. Service.)

Replying to a question, Sir A. Williamsohn in the House of Commons recently stated that the estimated cost of maintaining the present British military force in Palestine was 500,000 pounds monthly.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kahle Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1921
Fast of Esther	March 23
Purim	March 24
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

THE NEW ADMINISTRATION.

The readers of this paper are distributed among the two great national parties exactly as the readers of any other paper not devoted to politics. Some went to the polls last November as Democrats, some as Republicans. The winners were naturally elated and the losers depressed; but Americans are good losers. The game had its fascination while the issue was dark. When the result of the election became known, the Republicans made ready to take over the government and the Democrats to renew the struggle four years hence; but whether Republicans or Democrats, we are all Americans, first and foremost. The gentleman, who is now occupying the White House, was chosen by an overwhelming majority. For the time of his occupancy of the highest office in the land he is the representative of American interests and American patriotism. The election was fought and won on a question of international politics. It at least commanded the foremost attention. Nevertheless we are safe in maintaining that on international questions no nation can be divided, and that in whatsoever manner our relations to the world will be settled the interests and the honor of this nation will suffer no detriment. There is nothing that unites Americans quite as effectively as a supposed danger lurking in some corner or an affront to our national dignity by any power, great or small. Friends or foes of the League of Nations in our land are quite agreed that this nation is too great to be bullied into any action by any outward influence. We shall probably come in under President Harding in some form, but we will come in in our own good time and as best befits our interests. The [illegible] notwithstanding, the war-like spirit has not been laid down. It is rampant here and there and everywhere. It is safe to say that America will never be the aggressor; but if sinister designs are entertained anywhere, it behooves us to be prepared, and the country has full confidence in the new administration that it will stand sentinel over our safety. We extend our good wishes to the new President. He will have knotty questions in plenty. He has surrounded himself by eminent advisers and not a few of them are known for their lofty Americanism, which is above mere party interests. Loyal support of the new administration is incumbent upon every citizen. That is not meant that those who differ may not express their opinions freely in and out of Congress; but mere obstructionism, we hope, will not raise its head; and loyalty to the present administration will not prevent the American people from honoring the man who has just stepped out. His administration is now a closed chapter. Mr. Wilson may be assured of a just verdict on the part of history, which will not spare his faults if he had them, but will just as honestly and objectively lay bare his great gifts, his patriotic intentions, and above all a great measure of tangible good which it was given him to accomplish. This country has not quite found out what to do with its ex-Presidents. They retire into private life, yet they are by virtue of their former position more than private citizens. Mr. Wilson is a sick man. The whole of the American people hope, that now that the cares of office have been removed, he may speedily recover. He is a bookish man. He will probably take to writing. The history of his own time from his gifted pen will be a work most eagerly read; and we are sure it will be written from the higher American point of view. A patriot has left office and a patriot has entered office. This is the great pride of American politics.

SCIENCE AND POLITICS.

It may be questioned whether history is a strict science. The men who are devoted to pure science may deny it; but for our present purposes we will maintain that history within its limitations may be studied scientifically, that is, according to reasoned method and with an objective spirit. This objective spirit is not always easy to maintain. For, where the data are scanty and imagination is allowed free play, the subjective personal equation of the interpreter of the past obtrudes itself. An unimaginative historian is hardly an historian at all; but there is one auxiliary science, which the historian may resort to and which is quite objective and matter of fact. It is archeology. The archeologist digs his spade down below the surface to uncover tangible objects of lost civilizations. As long as he stays underground and labels and classifies and describes faithfully, his services to knowledge ought to be appreciated. Now scientific men are apt to forget all interests but their own. Archeologists would like to sequester all ground where the outlook for finds is greatest and surest and are jealous of any construction on the top likely to cover up the traces of chosen sites. They forget that the present civilization has a right to the earth's surface, which cannot be ignored. But much worse it is when the archeologist leaves the spade rest and concerns himself with present-day doings above ground. If he comes from a foreign land, he surely ought not to abuse the hospitality of the place he visits by meddling with political affairs in that locality. He returns and reports. His opinions on his own subject will be listened to with deference; but when he overstops his subject and pronounces opinion, not on matters of the past but on those of the present, he speaks no more as an expert, but as a private individual. Naturally he has a right to his opinions; but the average reader mixes up the man and the specialist. Hence, it is necessary to point out quite emphatically the difference. In his own realm beneath the ground he is master and only those who can match his knowledge and skill have a right to judge whether it is right or wrong. But when it comes to his reports of things and conditions and policies above ground we have a right to tell him that he has listened perchance only to one side, that he took with him preconceived opinions and these he brought back with him, that, and this is the worst, he misused his stay in the country by directly or indirectly instigating one element of the population against another. Above all we are free to point out to him where he has erred by lack of sympathy or downright antipathy. We Jews are quick to detect an inimical attitude, though it be disguised by scientific interest. We resent, not only as Jews, but as Americans, all threats, that if we do not do as some people would wish us to, we shall suffer. It is not always, of course, the same people who are telling us that we have no rights in Palestine and none wherever else we may happen to be; but the aggregate opinion is that they do not want us anywhere. We maintain on the contrary, that our rights are clear everywhere. We are for peace; but when open or insidious war is declared against us, we shall stand ready to defend our position. It does not take long for the "scientific" attack to filter through to the masses. Whatever is libelous we shall seek to dissipate, manifest itself as it may openly and above board or under the guise of "scientific" reports. Of the two we prefer the open attack. We are lovers of honest investigation and of honest investigators; but we shall ask them most courteously not to meddle with politics, and that in the interest of science, which they serve.

AN APPEAL TO THE JEWISH PRESS OF AMERICA.

The condition of the Jews in Poland presents the most serious problem of Jewish life at present. There are approximately three and one-half million Jews in the present republic and their situation may involve at any time that of their coreligionists in the neighboring states of Russia, Lithuania, and Ukraine.

It is obviously impossible, in spite of the malicious perversion of The Dearborn Independent, that emigration will solve the question. Only a comparatively insignificant fraction of the three and one-half million Jews will emigrate overseas. The vast majority will remain at home and, unless compelled to leave it, wish to stay there.

The I. O. B. B. has a number of very active lodges in that section of Poland, which was formerly either Austrian or Prussian. These lodges combine in their membership the most intelligent and socially most prominent element. In time, their number and their influence are bound to grow. These brethren inform us that their work becomes very difficult, owing to the provocation of the best-intentioned circles in Poland at the way in which the American Jewish Press treats the new republic. We consider it our duty to counsel moderation. We know that during the last fifteen years or so, especially since the terrible pogroms of 1905, the sobriquet "court-Jew" and the like, has been hurled by all who offered a similar advice. However, it is quite easy and absolutely safe to use the most offensive and vituperative language in a safe office building in the United States. It is, however, a wrong committed against the safety of our brethren abroad. In addition, this is not merely a question of expediency but one of ethics.

Nobody will palliate the crimes which were committed against our brethren in Poland. We especially refer to the terrible slaughter of Pinsk on April 5, 1919, in which case the government is absolutely bound to share the responsibility. On the other hand, we must not forget that even in a well-established country, like ours, the government is not always in position to prevent race riots, labor riots, or bloody excesses at elections. We, therefore, must give to the republic of Poland, with its lack of traditions and its inexperienced officials, the benefit of time and patience. We feel confident that the best intellect and the most patriotic statesmen of Poland are animated with the desire of meeting the situation. We ought to make it easier for them, and certainly we owe this duty to our brethren.

In addition, we must not forget that while the situation of the Jews in Poland was by no means always a happy one, it provided in the Dark Ages refuge to them, when the countries of western Europe drove them from their homes. Gratitude has always been recognized as a Jewish virtue.

JEWISH UNIVERSITY IN POLAND CLOSED.

(Warsaw, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

The Jewish Teachers University recently opened in Tchenstochov, with the permission of the Minister of Education, has been closed by the District Superintendent because Yiddish had been employed as a medium for instruction.

NOTED JEWISH LEADER RAPS FORD CHARGES.

By Otheman Stevens.

Henry Ford has done many interesting and amusing things besides making cars and money by the million.

Recently he has added to the entertainment his career and ideas cause in reviving the vogue of the Nick Carters and Theodore Kremers of a past literature by publishing a series of articles in his "Independent" paper relating the melodramatic charge that the Jews are in conspiracy to rule the world and to place on a throne of the world a descendant of King David.

At the Ambassador Hotel is Adolf Kraus.

Kraus has been for sixteen years President of the B'nai B'rith Society, an organization of Jews devoted to the alleviation of suffering and the prevention of religious and racial persecutions.

He was formerly president of the Chicago Board of Education and of that city's civil service commission, and also served as editor and publisher of the Chicago Times.

Discusses Ford.

As a highly qualified and distinguished man of the race Ford has dramatized with scene plots of red fire and creepy music, Kraus was asked yesterday to express himself on the flivver magnate's theory.

Kraus did so with expedition and directness, saying:

"Mr. Ford has been a wonderfully successful manufacturer of cheap cars.

"His success has made him believe that he can do things which others could not do; the result is that his actions remind me of the animal which according to the Bible spoke to Balaam.

"On the anti-Semitism issue ridiculous things have been published in his paper—so ridiculous are they that I do not deem it necessary to reply to them seriously. The fact that President Wilson, ex-President Taft and Cardinal Gibbons, over their signatures, have pronounced them ridiculous is sufficient.

"I have seen in a newspaper of this city in its issue of last Saturday an interview with Mr. Ford, in which he says he is not an anti-Semitic. He says in this: 'It is my desire to bring about world peace; this cannot be until the international Jewish bankers cease from providing money for wars'.

"There is no such thing as international Jewish bankers. If Mr. Ford's statement were true that international Jewish bankers furnish the money for the war they must now all be bankrupt. Probably less than 5 per cent of the bankers of the world are of the Jewish faith.

Richest of All.

"And Mr. Ford reports that he sold 1,250,000 of his cars last year, therefore the report that he made $100,000,000 last year may be believed.

"Now if you count eight hours to the working day, Mr. Ford made $40,000 an hour.

"It is funny to hear him talk about Jewish bankers when he made more in a year than any Jewish banker in the United States is worth.

"He makes the charge that Jews the world over are in conspiracy to down Christianity and elect a descendant of King David to rule the whole world. If any one believes that 3 per cent of the world populaton can rule the other 97 per cent, it should call for an examination as to sanity.

"My opinion is that Mr. Ford has been thoroughly hocused by some one".—[Republished from Los Angeles Examiner.

FRENCH OFFICIALS IN SYRIA AGITATING AGAINST ENGLAND AND THE JEWS.

(London, J. C. B. Service.)

According to a Beirut report received here, the acting French High Commissioner in Syria, Robert De Caix, in the course of a statement to press representatives, declared that the Arabs in Syria have nothing to fear from the French. Unlike the British in Palestine, where the Jews are permitted to buy land and to capture the wealth of the country with the idea of ignoring the natives, the French have no desire to colonize Syria or to rob the native population of any of its wealth. The Arab organ, "Lesamel-Arab", commenting on the statement declares that it is clear that England has sold the Holy Land to the Jews, who will only exploit the native population.

THE JEW AND AMERICAN IDEALS BY JOHN SPARGO.

Review by Rev. Hugh Robt. Orr, Evanston, Ill.

Anti-Semitism has been called to a severe accounting, and the inquiring American public will now have a chance to know the facts concerning the vicious propaganda being conducted chiefly by the Dearborn Independent, which is, in truth, turning out to be more anti-American in its policy than anti-Jewish in effect so far as thoughtful readers are concerned. The matter has been carefully gone into and thoroughly exposed by Mr. John Spargo, in "The Jew and American Ideals", Harpers, March, 1921.

It is no partisan defense of the Jew, much less a pro-Jewish argument that the author gives us. It is an independent and original investigation of the facts, a defense of American ideals and institutions as opposed to anti-Semitism, and a plea for Christian civilization.

The writer's authority is based upon original investigation and first-hand information derived from recent efforts he has personally made in Europe and America. In place of the falsely alleged "great Jewish conspiracy" we are brought face to face with the real fact, which is a great anti-Jewish conspiracy. Upon certain alleged "protocols" anti-Semitism largely bases its theory of a world-wide Jewish conspiracy. These "protocols" purport to be the statements of an alleged secret society called the "Elders of Zion". Mr. Spargo shows that there is not the least evidence that any such society ever existed. The author goes further and shows how extravagantly the alleged discoverer of these "protocols" has perjured himself in his self-contradicting stories of how he came into the possession of them. It becomes apparent that these documents were but preposterous forgeries designed to anti-Semitism in Russia.

Mr. Spargo speaks with authority as to the Jew and Socialism. He points out how absurd is the ignorant attempt to prove that Socialism is a Jewish conspiracy, since Socialism originated not in Judaism but with the Anglo-Saxons, and has had its greatest growth among non-Jewish peoples. In answer to the Dearborn Independent's statement that "Every commissar in Russia today is a Jew", Mr. Spargo who knows many of the Russian leaders personally proves that of the seventeen commissars only one is a Jew. As to the Dearborn Independent's attempt to make the Jew responsible for "Bolshevism" the author produces documentary evidence to show the monstrosity of such falsehood. Bolshevism is not only not of the Jew, by the Jew, nor for the Jew, but it is the Jewish people who have both opposed and suffered from bolshevism more than any other people.

The actual program of anti-Semitism in England is exposed as such an unjust and unhumane scheme of racial discrimination as can hardly be believed by an American. It would deny naturalization to the Jew, as well as forbid him the citizen's property rights. It would even discriminate against Jewish students and permit only a small percentage of them to enter the institutions of higher learning. These are some of the milder phases of the anti-Semitism abroad, for which the Dearborn Independent is sowing seeds in America.

Mr. Spargo pleads for loyalty to the democratic principles of Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt, for that true Americanism which does not discriminate against a loyal citizen on account of race or creed. He shows how plainly the anti-Semitic propagandism is in effect an attack upon the ideals and the spirit of the American nation.

K. OF C. BEGINS NATION FIGHT ON ANTI-SEMITISM.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 1.—Denouncing an alleged anti-Jewish movement in southern parts of the United States, Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty of the Knights of Columbus announced at his home here tonight that he had called upon 2,200 Knights of Columbus lecturers in the United States and Canada to combat anti-Semitism.

"An attack on one religion or race may easily develop into an attack on any religion or race", his message to the lecturers read.

"The Knights of Columbus will oppose the anti-Semitic movement because it is un-American. There are undesirables of every race in this country, but that does not justify proscription of any race".

AUGUSTIN KELLER LODGE, No. 648, ZURICH, SWITZERLAND.

An Appeal on Behalf of the Suffering Jewish Children.

January 19, 1921.

To the Lodges of the I. O. B. B.:

The Secretary of the Executive Committee, Brother Alex B. Scolonfreund, transmitted to us $4,455.50, as the contribution of American lodges and individual donors to our relief action for the benefit of suffering Jewish children from foreign countries, who are cared for in private homes and in sanitariums of Switzerland. We express our heartfelt gratitude to all the noble donors.

This fund helped us to cover the expense of a fresh-air colony consisting of twenty-three children of Vienna, who were sent to us by Brother Hecht, the Secretary of the Vienna Lodges, which required the sum of 14,000 francs, and the cost of caring for Hungarian Jewish children who were sent here for rest, causing an expenditure of 3,000 francs. We have besides, to care for one tubercular child, which remained behind after the Vienna colony returned and is now in the Jewish hospital of Davos. We still have 8,000 francs on hand.

The Augustin Keller Lodge collected a sum for the celebration of its tenth anniversary, which has now reached 75,000 francs with which we hope to build a sanitarium for children in an altitude which will guarantee all the benefits of a vacation and recreation Home.

We expect to take care of poor Jewish children of the local community during the months of July and August, as we have done for the last ten years, but shall this time be in a position to place them in a Home of our own. During the rest of the year the Home and its personnel shall be placed at the disposal of Jewish children from foreign countries and our lodge will take upon itself to do all the work necessary in the way of administration. We are, however, unable to pay for the necessary expense and hope that our American brethren will assist us. Every child cared for in the home costs us about $100, which includes the expense of transportation, and of the acquisition of the most indispensable linen and garments.

Dear brothers, the Augustin Keller Lodge does its utmost to relieve the terrible suffering. However, how little is that which it does compared with the indescribable misery existing all around us. Thousands of Galician, German, Austrian and Hungarian children are facing starvation. Hundreds will not live to the end of the year, if assistance does not come soon.

We, therefore, appeal to you dear brothers in America. Send us further means to render it possible for many of these poor creatures to spend a few weeks for recreation in Switzerland. At a comparatively small sacrifice many a young life may be saved, which otherwise is bound to slow starvation.

Lodges from various parts of Europe appeal to us and call—"Help our undernourished children". We reecho this call and will be grateful to you if you reply quickly informing us whether and to what extent we may count on your contributions to continue the work for the salvation and for the lives of the children, who may be cared for in Switzerland in a healthful location and with wholesome food.

We anticipate with certainty, that we shall receive your cooperation in this noble work, and ask you to interest the individual brethren of your lodge in this task. Lodges and individual brothers will receive more than $100 worth of satisfaction from a donation which will save the life of one child.

CONVENTION OF DISTRICT GRAND LODGE, No. 2.

The next convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, will be held May 8, 9 and 10. Responses, already received from various lodges in this jurisdiction, indicate that this will be one of the largest and most enthusiastic meeting in the history of the organization.

The Local Executive Committee, of which Jos. M. Michaels is Chairman, and Jos. Stampfer is Vice Chairman, are actively engaged in perfecting arrangements for the entertainment of our guests.

Mrs. A. Waldheim has accepted the Chairmanship of the Ladies' Entertainment Committee and is surrounding herself with a representative group of energetic workers. The Statler Hotel has been selected as headquarters for the business meetings and social events.

REV. CLARKE OF MEMPHIS SCORES ANTI-SEMITES.

Says Jews Are Blessing Rather Than a Menace.

Criticism of recent magazine articles written in the disparagement of the Jew and alleging a Jewish movement to dominate the world, was contained in an address delivered at the Majestic Theatre, recently by Rev. William E. Clarke, minister of the First Unitarian Church, who spoke on "The International Jew—a Menace or a Blessing?" The minister criticized these articles as placing upon the entire race the blame due only to a few of its members, and urged that Jew and Gentile should join hands in the task of making this a better world.

Dr. Clarke traced the history of the Jewish race, showing how the Jews were driven by persecution to become traders and to move to all parts of the world, and how, although widely scattered, they had never lost the love of race. He spoke also of the many modern business methods which resulted from the ingenuity of the Jew, including the use of checks as legal tender and the establishment of banking systems.

Quoting from the article under discussion, Dr. Clarke said:

"There are no stronger contrasts in the world than the pure Germanic and the pure Semitic races; therefore, there has been no harmony between the two in Germany; the German has regarded the Jew strictly as a guest while the Jew, indignant at not being given the privileges of the nation family, has cherished animosity against his host.

"Now with that attitude of Germany against the Jews, this sermon has nothing to do", said Dr. Clarke in discussing the quotation. "If Germany wishes to follow in the footsteps of Spain and drive her finest business men into other countries, that is Germany's business and it would ill become an American to interfere; but when the fight started by the Middle Age Lombard bankers against the Jews is brought to America, then, as an American, and as one who tries to follow Christ, I do have something to say, because this agitation against the Jews will result in an era of un-Christian activities; that is to say, it will result in the creation of hatred that will break out in physical persecution—in robberies, in spasmodic murders and, eventually, into moral and spiritual decay.

"In other words, if the Gentiles of America and the world would join in the age-old Lombard bankers' fight against the Jew, then the international Jew would become a menace; but if we refuse to follow the example set by the Lombards, if we continue to treat the Jew as a citizen on equal terms with every other citizen, then it is my belief that the international Jew will remain a blessing".

SHAMEFUL PERSECUTION OF JEWS.

(From The New Age, a Masonic Magazine (Scottish Rite), published at Washington, D. C.)

One of the appalling reactions of the times is a renewal of anti-Semitism in Continental nations. There have been shameful persecutions of the Jews in Eastern Europe. Even in this country—the land where hatred expires—sporadic attempts to blacken the name of Judaism have been recently made by irresponsible persons. Says the Literary Digest: "In book, magazine and pamphlet the story is being circulated that the Jew seeks world domination through the agencies of press and purse, and to this end he is covertly fomenting war and revolution and attempting the general downfall of established government". These publications claim that there is a vast Jewish plot to procure the collapse of Christianity. "In the Dearborn Independent", says the Digest, "have appeared many articles asserting the existence of the so-called Jewish peril". It is high time that these vile slanders should be scotched. It is the bounden duty of all geniune Christian organizations to denounce these tissues of lies. Freemasons especially should rise in their might and defend their Hebrew brothers.

BEZALEL ART EXHIBITED IN PARIS.

(Paris, J. C. B. Service.)

The efforts of the Bezalel Art School in Jerusalem have just been exhibited in the Louvre in this city and has drawn considerable attention.

PERSECUTION OF JEWS RAPPED BY METHODISTS.

Hebrew Faith Has Been Necessary to World Civilization, Ministerial Conference Is Told, and Leads Against Bolshevism.

Origin and persecution of the Jewish race was traced by Dr. William W. Shenks of Grace M. E. Church, principal speaker at the session of the Methodist Episcopal Ministerial Conference held at Wesley M. E. church, Minneapolis, Minn., recently.

"The Jewish faith has been necessary to the civilization and welfare of the world", he said. "Although persecuted and driven from their worldly possessions, the Jewish people have attained a high degree of culture and learning through the high caliber of their minds and intellect. The Zion Protocol, on which is based the persecution of the Hebrews, is a forgery and a lie. Its source is a book called 'The World's Unrest', by an unknown author. It was written by supporters of the Russian and German aristocracy.

"The Jews are charged with being delinquents and agents for Bolshevik propaganda. As a matter of fact their religion is the most powerful agent for law and order, next to Christianity. They are leaders in the fight against the Bolsheviki".

TESTIMONIAL DINNER TO DR. STEPHEN S. WISE.

By Harmony Lodge, Bridgeport, Conn.

Preceding the forum address Rabbi and Mrs. Stephen S. Wise and their son James attended a testimonial dinner given in honor of Rabbi Wise, at the Stratfield Hotel, by Harmony Lodge, No. 711.

Among the guests present on this occasion were Honorable and Mrs. Henry Lasker of Springfield, Mass., President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1; Judge Joseph G. Shapiro, Chairman of the Connecticut State Board of Deputies; S. Kronholtz, Past President of Jacob B. Ullman Lodge, of Stamford; Charles H. Shapiro, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1; and visitors from adjoining cities.

Samuel N. Schnee, President of Harmony Lodge, introduced Mrs. Walter Loewith, President of Bridgeport Council of Jewish Women, who presided at the dinner at which Rabbi Wise delivered a notable address on "Jewish Problems in the World Today".

ANTI-SEMITISM IN ROUMANIA DISAPPEARING, ROUMANIAN MINISTER DECLARES.

(Vienna, J. C. B. Service.)

Addressing a Jewish delegation, which recently called on him, the Roumanian Minister of Justice, Antonescu, declared that anti-Semitism in Roumania was fast disappearing, the government taking every possible measure to suppress all anti-Semitic manifestations. The minister added that the status for the Kehillahs in Bukovinia and Bessarabia are about to be submitted before the Roumanian parliament, in accordance with the representative basis adopted by the Jewish congress. In Siebenburgen, the government has instructed that the Jews be permitted to register as belonging to the Jewish nationality in the forthcoming census.

TO AN ANTI-SEMITE.

You may darken the roads with your little tin toads,
You may work, you may scheme, you may plan;
You may build to the sky, 'til the day that you die,
And you still will be less than a man.

You may gather your gold, and your millions untold—
May buy all that mere wealth may procure;
But when all's said and done, 'spite the fortunes you've won,
You still will be poorer than poor.

You may quibble and prate in your language of hate;
You may shatter the Faith men hold dear;
You may mock, you may rant, and the seed that you plant
May grow up to a spectre of Fear.

But the form you create in your spasm of Hate,
Shall breed Malice, and Terror and Strife;
'Twill revolt and revile you, disturb and defile you,
And fall like a pall o'er your life.

—[Milton M. Alexander.

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

VIII

WE HAVE so far examined the misunderstanding on the side of the questions pertaining to the law, its validity, its application, its reinterpretation. There were other aspects in the teaching of Jesus which brought him into conflict with the people. His home was Galilee. There are modern writers who would make us believe that the Galileans were of a different race as compared with the Judeans, and that Jesus was, therefore, not a Jew by race. It is all part of a newfangled theory that all we are and all we do is predestined by our pedigree, by our racial antecedents, which determine not only our physical appearance, but also our mind. This race theory has been overdone. It is begging the question in the first instance that Galileans and Judeans were descended from different races. It is all guess-work. All we have reason to believe is that various races from times immemorial were intermixed in Palestine. Fusion was going on constantly. The Galileans, being exposed to northern influences more readily, had a slightly different dialect, and their speech betrayed them; but substantially they spoke the same language. They had the same religion, the same outlook on life, the same culture. It is strange that when non-Jews write about Jews, about the Jews of to-day, they can only discern two lines of cleavage, race and religion. When they find a Jew who is lax in religion, they immediately speak of him as a race Jew. It is quite true; we have this variety of race Jews. Such Jews have turned their back upon the ancestral faith, but retain a measure of attachment to the race. But there is certainly a third class of Jews, in the Palestine of to-day. Whether right or wrong, they consider themselves Jewish nationalists. They may not visit the synagogue, but they cherish the cultural traditions of their people; their mind is steeped in our great literature; they take part in all the questions affecting the welfare of their people; they impart to their children a Jewish education. An American may belong to diverse races and religious affiliations, but he shares in the common national heritage, to which he is linked by a thousand threads. The Galilean in those far-off days was religiously and culturally a Jew. Jesus was brought up exactly as any other Jewish child, in his day and in the thousands of years that followed, was brought up. He read his Bible. He visited the synagogues. He prayed. He taught. Galilean he was by dialect and possibly by race. That is of small moment. Religiously and nationally he was much like any other Jew, in the North or in the South.

Galilee was the hotbed of the revolutionary party. Down south at the capital, where the men at the helm of the state lived, where the families of great fortune and standing in the community had their home, Rome was not liked, but Rome was feared, and it was known that it was foolhardy to attempt an unequal struggle. There was too much at stake. Prudence dictated the peace policy at Jerusalem. In the North, however, was the seat of the rebellion, and from there it spread to the capital, until at length Jerusalem was taken over by the insurgents. The war was declared ultimately at their bidding. The attitude to Rome was a question that agitated the minds of Galileans. They were the super-patriots, the zealots. Jesus was forced to declare himself. He, who was engrossed in preaching repentance because of the Kingdom of God which was soon to come, lived in an entirely different atmosphere. He counseled giving unto God what is God's and unto Caesar what is Caesar's. This teaching proved useful to the Church in its early days, and at times quite awkward. In sequel it meant leaving the worldly power to its devices and created a barrier to the Church's influence in mundane affairs. The Church, it is true, set up the doctrine that it was sovereign in all matters lying outside of faith. But again and again it was thrown back upon its own churchly sphere, and very often it ended in submerging the Church and rendering it subservient to the state.

Moreover, Jesus, as is the wont of re- [illegible], took up what we should [illegible] a pacifist attitude. He preach- [illegible] resistance to the oppressor. He [illegible] your enemies'. His imme- [illegible] understood only too well that he discountenanced armed resistance to Rome. From his point of view of a messenger of the Kingdom of God he was in no wise different from a host of others in his day, both in the official religious leadership and outside of it. Daniel in Holy Writ said the same thing when Judah, the Maccabee, organized the revolt against Syria. The visionary said, "Do not fight; sit still; God will miraculously bring about the destruction of the oppressor." Daniel would have opposed the war with Rome under Vespasian or the revolt under Hadrian. The teacher Akiba supported Bar-Cochba; but the majority of the teachers protested. And for that matter in still earlier days Isaiah was of the same opinion as Daniel. Official Pharisaism, nurtured by Isaiah and Daniel, did not favor the war. Not because of any prudence, but purely and simply on religious grounds. The arrogant kingdom would come to an end by direct intervention of God. Then the Lord would reign alone. Jesus may have couched his counsel in paradoxical language; but he was no friend of Rome. He was no friend of any sovereignty but God's. If he preached that the Kingdom of God was near, that implied that the days of any other Kingdom were counted. His interest was centered in bringing on the Kingdom of God through repentance. Repent; be worthy; everything else will follow suit. He, as well as the rabbis, held that the Kingdom of God cannot be forced, but that it comes spontaneously, of a sudden, when one least expects it. The attitude of Jesus very likely brought him into collision with the patriotic party; but it was not on the score of his doctrine of non-resistance, that is, non-resistance to Rome, that the Pharisees clashed with him. As a matter of fact, he was most Pharisaic in this doctrine.

The Church to this day has had great difficulty in adjusting itself to the letter of the founder's injunction. The Quakers hold to the letter and abhor war of all kinds. We remember their attitude in the great war. Such as could not subscribe to their interpretation withdrew from the fold and joined other churches which do not condemn all war. Tolstoi in our own day made the non-resistance feature the basis of his creed. He offered the religious background for anarchistic doctrine. In other words, Jesus, as we have shown, was much in accord with the prevailing temper of the Pharisee and of the orthodox Jew of today, who would not raise a finger to hasten the redemption, for God will bring it about miraculously in His own day. The misunderstanding between Jesus and Judaism disappears; but in the bosom of the Church that calls itself by his name the misunderstanding persists to this day. The churchman who sanctions war, defensive war against a wanton aggressor, must needs sacrifice the letter. For one thing, he does not love the enemy of his country, he prays that his own country may be victorious, which, of course, involves the destruction of the enemy forces, the slaughter of so many human beings. Official religion during the war was very little in evidence. The Church upheld the cause of the state, the cause of patriotism. It ought to understand the attitude of the Galilean patriots with whom Jesus clashed. If we go to liberal circles, in the Church or in the Synagogue, we shall find that the notion of a miraculous coming of the Kingdom of God from the clouds is not entertained at all. Rather it is held that the betterment and perfection of human society must proceed slowly, step by step, and before the wished-for goal is reached many wars will be fought and much blood spilt. The orthodox Jew of to-day would not go to the length of the pacifism of Jesus. But he does believe with Jesus that we owe duties to Caesar, to the state. He entertains the hope of a future restoration; but with Jesus he believes that the Kingdom of God will come through repentance, through becoming worthy in a moral and a religious sense, but not through political negotiations and diplomatic bargains. Wherever the improvement of mankind is conceived as an evolutionary process, Jesus is misunderstood; but wheresoever a pious soul looks for the Messiah, the representative on earth of the perfected state of society called the Kingdom of God, to come to-day or to-morrow

(Concluded on page 12.)

District Grand Lodge No. VIII Germany

A MEETING of the General Committee of District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Germany, was held on December 28, 1920.

The Secretary, Brother Dr Alfred Goldschmidt, presented an exhaustive report on propaganda activities throughout the district, particularly with reference to the establishment of a lodge in Schwedt. A committee was appointed to take care of this matter.

Dr. Berthold Timendorfer, President of the District Grand Lodge, has consented to pay an official visit to the B'nai B'rith Lodge at Dortmund on the occasion of its twenty-fifth anniversary celebration on April 3, 1921. Brother Dr. Katzenstein of Cassel was delegated as representative of the Grand Lodge on the occasion of B'nai B'rith Day in Thuringia on which occasion a class of six candidates will be initiated.

A series of lectures to be held in the lodges by Professor Goldstein of Darmstadt was suggested to the General Committee and received favorable consideration. The lodges and district associations will be circularized in the interest of a harmonious plan for such lectures.

The pamphlet, "Race and Politics", by Professor Goldstein treats in a popular manner, intelligible to all classes of people, the questions which form the main issues of the anti-Semitic controversy. The Grand Lodge resolved to distribute a number of copies of the pamphlet for the information of the public.

Mamreh Lodge of Beuthen requested detailed information with reference to the establishment of a fresh-air home. The idea of the establishment of such a home for children of the members of the Order found a sympathetic echo in the circle of our lodges. The sums raised in response to the appeal by the District Grand Lodge are, however, entirely insufficient. The General Committee hopes that the lodges and members of the Order will support the project of fresh-air homes.

The Grand Lodge advised that the organization, known as the Union of Jewish Soldiers, who served at the front, desired to come in close contact with some national Jewish organization. This union has the warm sympathy of the lodges and of its members, and yet the Grand Lodge felt compelled to refuse to cooperate with this organization in the fight against anti-Semitism publicly, because such participation would not be in harmony with underlying principles of the Grand Lodge.

The Executive Committee of the Grand Lodge is empowered by the District Grand Lodge to introduce changes in the operation and management of lodges with a view of democratizing the work of the lodges.

The B'nai B'rith Lodge at Munich suggested legal proceedings against the German Schutz und Trutzbund for its slanderous attacks against the Jews. The General Committee, for very good reasons, declined to entertain such suggestion.

The Secretary of the Grand Lodge, Brother Finkel, submitted a report with reference to the Jewish Popular University.

Inasmuch as the Hochschule for science of Judaism also began lately a course of popular lectures, the Jewish Popular University entered in negotiations with that institution for the sake of a combination, so as to avoid duplication of efforts. It is hoped that these endeavors will find hearty support, so that the well-known and prominent lecturers like Elbogen, Baeck, Hochfeld and others will thereby be enabled to do better work for the Popular Jewish University.

The meeting of the Executive Committee of the District Grand Lodge was held on January 11, 1921. A report was presented that on the occasion of the tombstone dedication for the President of the District, Brother Fenchel, a celebration was held on January 9, at which representatives of the District Grand Lodge and representatives of Berthold Auerbach Lodge delivered addresses.

The Provisional Committee, for the establishment of a sixth lodge of the Order in Berlin, has already begun its propaganda.

Silesia Lodge of Liegnitz organized an information bureau in the railroad station, for the benefit of members who are proceeding to Upper Silesia to take part in the plebiscite. A prominent sign with the inscription, "Information Bureau of the I. O. B. B.", is placed in the depot and brothers of the Order passing through the depot at any time during the day or night will be taken care of by a representative of the lodge. Arrangements have been made to provide the visiting brothers with all possible comforts and accommodations for their welfare.

Various members of Veritas Lodge of Hindenburg have expressed their willingness to accommodate the visiting brothers in their homes. In addition, the lodge rooms will be kept open during the time that the polls are open and kosher meals will be served by the ladies of the lodges.

A number of lodges have reported gains in their membership, Frankfort Lodge, 22 members; Duesseldorf Lodge, 15 members; Leipzig Lodge, 30 members; Berg Lodge, 18 members; Julius Plotke Lodge, 12 members; Montefiore Lodge, 12 members; of which latter number ten are sons and two are sons-in-law of present members.

Saxonia Lodge of Chemnitz, in view of the persecution of Jews in eastern Europe, submitted the following resolution, adopted by the lodge:

"Resolved, that the Grand Lodge in cooperation with other organizations appoint a committee to devise ways and means for the improvement of the condition of our oppressed coreligionists; that the committee issue an appeal and collect funds to assist those who desire to emigrate to Palestine or who are compelled to look for a new home, and that while this movement be with the cooperation of the Zionists, the control of the funds and its disposition be retained by the Grand Lodge".

After the close of the discussion, it was moved that the Grand Lodge declare Palestinian activity as an aim of all Judaism in general and express its readiness to participate in strictly humanitarian work.

After an extensive debate, participated in by nearly all of the B'nai B'rith leaders, it was resolved that the advancement of humanitarian objects connected with the emigration of Jews to Palestine is a matter which concerns all Jews.

A meeting of the General Committee was held on January 28, 1921.

Mamreh Lodge presented a report with reference to the dedication of its new B'nai B'rith home on February 6, and requested the presence of Dr. Timmendorfer on that occasion.

The trustees having charge of the disposition of the B'nai B'rith Loan Fund to members, submitted a report of loans made to a number of members and inquired whether an appeal of a widow of a brother for a loan should be favorably considered. It was resolved to ascertain first from the Executive Committee of the Order its wishes in such a case.

With reference to the poor economic condition of Jewish students, it was reported that an appeal will be issued for the relief of Jewish students and that such an appeal will be supported and signed by all large Jewish organizations, and it was resolved that the District Grand Lodge join in the appeal.

Regarding the tubercular institute in Meran, correspondence was submitted with the committee representing the lodges of the Order in Vienna, containing the suggestion that the German Grand Lodge, in cooperation with the Grand Lodge of Czecho-Slovakia undertake a continuation of this asylum, especially so in view of the fact that the institute during its existence has taken care of a large number of poor sick Jews of Germany and of the former Austrian monarchy.

Brother Dr. Baeck submitted a report of an official visit paid by him to the lodge as Duesseldorf and that on the occasion of initiation of a class of fifteen candidates, the sum of 300,000 marks was secured for the creation of a B'nai B'rith home for the lodge.

With reference to the Kultur Fund, suggestion was made to inaugurate an agitation to the end that 100,000 Jews, residents of all countries in the world, be induced to contribute an annual sum of 300 marks for a period of three years so that the threatened destroyal of the kultural and spiritual institutions of German Jewry be averted.

The Jew in the Natural Sciences

Address delivered by Mr. Jacob Feld at the meeting of the Cincinnati Chapter, Yud Kof Tof Fraternity, January 9, 1921

THE Jew in the United States constitutes some three per cent of the population. Is he taking his full part in the scientific and technical world? That is the question which I undertook to answer. I am making engineering my life work and am therefore personally interested.

Most people say: "The Jew, in going into Engineering, is wandering into strange paths, over which few Jews have safely trod". We hear of very few Jewish engineers and scientists. Are we doing our share in these fields?

The Jews in Biblical times were not creative scientists; the same may be said of the Jews up to very recent times. In the Mediaeval ages, the Jew translated the sciences from the Arabic and Hindustani to the Hebrew and then into the Latin. He therefore, was acting as an intermediary between the East and the West. With the exception of the works of Euclid, all the great ancient scientific texts were translated into European languages by Jews. But the Jew did not produce anything independently. True, he saved much information that might have been lost; he taught Europe the Arabic Arithmetic, the Egyptian Geometry and the Indian Algebra and Astronomy; but he invented none of it himself.

The Jew, living among the Saracens, imbibed all the mathematical sciences then known. Especially interested was he in Astronomy, for he had to work out his own calendar. In 1070, Jewish astronomers aided the Saracens in producing a complete set of astronomical tables. Later, the Spaniard King, Alfonso, hired Isaac Ibn Sid to compile the so-called Alfonsine Tables, merely a repetition of the Saracen work. This task was assigned to Jews year by year, and in 1492, Abraham Zacuto, teacher of Astronomy at Salamanca and royal astronomer to the King Emanuel of Portugal, compiled the tables used by Columbus in his epoch-making voyage. So, we can truthfully say that the Jew aided in the discovery of America. But all this astronomical work was based on the Indian tables and rules translated into Hebrew by Abraham ibn Ezra.

Throughout the later Mediaeval period, the Jew passed this astronomical infor-. mation from generation to generation. A few new steps were made. Levi ben Gerson (1340) wrote 136 chapters on Astronomy, a summary of all the information handed down by his ancestors. He also invented the Jacob's Staff, a device to measure the right ascension of the sun and of the stars, which was in common use until displanted by Hadley's quadrant, (1731). Necia and Cresques, both Jews, were noted map-makers of this period. Bonet de Latis (physician to Pope Alexander VI) invented a system of astronomical rings to ascertain the planetary orbits. And other small advances were made up to the beginning of the nineteenth century.

I was struck by what seems to me the logical explanation: The Jews in the period up to 1800 were very active in disseminating the scientific knowledge of one part of the world among the other parts, and only made a few inventions and original additions to the sciences. But these additions occurred in those countries where they were not persecuted. The Jew in wandering does not get a chance to collect his thoughts and to create. How can we test this hypothesis? The Jew in America now should be creating new ideas; and I maintain that he is. And a short sketch of the activity of the Jew in Europe during the nineteenth century will clearly show that, wherever he was given peace, he repaid by creating new ideas

In what follows, I refer to the Natural Sciences only. Of course the Jew has added much to the various medical and philosophical sciences, but I am dealing only with Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry (not including the several medical branches of Chemistry), Architecture and Engineering. In collecting this material, I noticed two things: The absolute lack of definite knowledge, and the ignorance of many authors on contemporary Jewish history on what the Jews are doing in these lines. For example, the Jewish Encyclopedia in its summary, does not give the names of a single Jewish engineer, and gives only a handful of the present day scientists, and absolutely disregards some of the greatest of these.

The history of mathematics in the nineteenth century is full of Jewish names. I mention only a few and none of those whose right to be classed as Jews is doubtful. It is a sad fact that a rather large percentage of these men, especially those in Germany, renounced their religion in rather early life.

Sylvester, Jacobi, Levi, Slonimski, the recognized greatest mathematicians of the nineteenth century of England, Germany, France and Russia, were all Jews. Some may claim that this is mere coincidence, but in each country there were others close on the heels of the members of this quartet for first place. The greatest mathematician of Italy was also a Jew.

John Jacob Sylvester, born in England in 1841, a student at Cambridge, and was refused his degree because he was a Jew. Later in life he became revenged—he refused to accept an honorary degree offered him by Cambridge. In 1837, at the age of 23, he became professor of Mathematics of the University College in London; then came to America and was Professor at the University of Virginia and at Johns-Hopkins. He founded the American Journal of Mathematics and won world-wide fame. Upon returning to Europe, he was made an officer of the Legion of Honor by France, won all kinds of honors in England, but never forgot his treatment at Cambridge. He is recognized as the greatest mathematician England ever produced. He refused to have his bust placed in Westminster.

K. G. Jacobi, born in Germany in 1804, a master-mind in applied mathematics, and a founder of the elliptic functions, was professor at Berlin. Upon graduation he became converted under force of circumstances, but upon death he was buried in a Jewish cemetery.

His successor, Leo Kronecker, born in Germany in 1823, and professor at Berlin in 1883, was also a convert. He is the greatest German mathematician of the latter part of the century.

Two other German mathematicians stand out in this period: Georg Canton, Ph. D. at Berlin in 1820, who developed the theory of irrational numbers and gave a definite concept of the quantity called infinity. Also his brother, Moritz Canton, Ph. D. at Heidleberg, in 1829, who is recognized as the greatest scientific historian of his time; his work on the History of the Mathematical Sciences is often quoted. He founded the Feitschrift für Chemie, Physik und Mathematik.

In England, B. Gompertz, a relative of the Rothschild family, applied his mathematics to finance and developed the largest insurance company in England. His additions to science include the mathematical laws of human mortality.

France had two soldier-mathematicians. Maurice Levy, Engineer and member of the Institute, was at one time President of the French Academy of Science; also a member of the Royal Academy of Science of Rome. He wrote on almost all of the natural sciences, applying the mathematics to developing rational theories of the phenomena of nature.

George H. Halphen, Major in the Army, won the chief mathematical prize of the Academy in 1880 for his work on Elliptic Function. Though he was most active in the war against Germany, this work of his was crowned by the Royal Scientific Society in Berlin.

Even Russia has its Jewish Mathematicians. H. Selig Slonimski was a rabbi-scientist, born in 1810, a most orthodox Jew, who was the first to teach modern science to his own people. He translated many books into Hebrew, inventing a vocabulary for the new words; he even published a scientific paper in Hebrew. His greatest invention is the adding-machine. For a while, he was also head of a Seminary in Russia; but when the government closed this school, he gave his full time to his mathematics.

At the present day, the authority on the theory of numbers is Minkowski, a Jew in Russia.

There are a host of others in the history of mathematics, but these few will show what the Jew contributed. Just as glorious a record was made in the field of Astronomy.

Sir William Herschel, the son of a Jewish father, was born in England in 1738, and at an early age became Astronomer to the King. His improvement of the telescope, resulting in the discovery of the planet Uranus, and his charts of the northern skies gave him a well deserved place in the Hall of Fame.

H. Goldschmidt, born in Germany in 1802, was the discoverer of fourteen minor planets, and won the Lalande prize in eight successive years. In 1857, France gave him the Cross of the Legion of Honor, and later pensioned him for life.

Maurice Loewy, born in Vienna, became the Astronomer of the University of Paris in 1860, distinguishing himself by the development of new astronomical instruments and careful photographs of the moon.

In chemistry, Lassar Cohn, Ph. D., 1880, from Munich, made many contributions to the Annalen, and wrote several standard works. Victor Meyer, born in Germany in 1848, at the age of 23 became Assistant Professor at the Stuttgart Polytechnical School and discovered many new organic compounds. R. Meldola, born in London in 1849, a member of the very noble Jewish family of Meldola, contributed to the science of coal-tar dyes and to the chemistry of photography. He became a Fellow of the Royal Society.

In mineralogy,.the Jews were represented by Armand Levy, born in 1820, and professor at the College Charlemagne in France.

Germany produced two great botanists, Ferdinand Cohen, Ph. D., of Berlin and professor at Berlin, and N. Pringsheim, born in 1823, became Professor at Jena in 1864, and founded the German Botanic Society in 1882. He was repeatedly elected President of this society from its beginning to his death.

In the Applied Sciences, the Jews had not a single engineer as far as I could discover. There were three architects in Austria, who became well known.

Fleischer, born in 1841, designed the Vienna Town Hall, which still carries his bust over the doorway. Most of his life was spent in designing synagogues and tombs.

William Stiassny, born in 1842, up to 1905 had designed 140 palaces, schools, synagogues and hospitals. He was an active member of the Board of Trustees of the Jewish Community in Vienna.

Oskar Marmorek, born in 1863, attracted attention by his designs of the fountain at the Forestry Exposition and by the music hall in Vienna.

That is the record of the contribution of the Jew to Science in Europe during the nineteenth century.

Albert Einstein, born in Germany or Switzerland, in 1875, of Relativity fame, should not be forgotten. He is the greatest of them all, but his worth is not yet fully known or appreciated.

In America, there were too few Jews during the nineteenth century to make any mark in the scientific world. Among the present scientists in America, the great majority are either native born or were brought to this country at an early age. There are a few exceptions, and all of these won their fame in the theoretical science. Jewish engineers of any worth at all, are usually native born, though chiefly of foreign parentage. May we not, therefore expect to see more Jewish Engineers in the next generation? I shall show that the tendency among Jewish students is slowly drifting towards the practical. This is not recognized by most writers. Benjamin Harrow, in an article written for the Menorah Journal, entitled "Jewish Contributions to Science", dwells almost entirely on the biological phases, where of course the Jew has contributed. He also takes up Michaelson and Einstein, but makes no mention of the many Jewish builders in this country.

From various sources, including "Who's Who in America for 1920", the American Jewish Year Books for the past few years' etc., I have collected the names of forty-five Jews, active in recent years (most of them still living) in the Natural Sciences. Each of these has distinguished himself in his line. Two remarkable things are noticeable, the extreme young age at which many of these men won fame, and the absolutely new inventions and ideas contributed by them. The Jew is no longer translating the work of others, but is composing new methods of harnessing the forces of nature. I shall bring out a few of these ideas. These forty-five names include: four mathematicians, two biologists, one anthropoligist, twelve chemists, two bacteriologists, eight civil engineers, one physicist, two geologists, six electrical and mechanical engineers and seven architects. The number is about evenly divided between the theoretical and the practical men, with the younger men leaning toward the practical side.

As before, the Jew is well represented in Mathematics; Fabian Franklin, born in Hungary in 1853, became Professor at Johns-Hopkins in 1879, at the age of 26. He later became editor of the new York Evening Post, and is a constant contributor to the Mathematical Monthly.

Norman Wiener is professor of Mathematics at Harvard.

Abraham Cohen, 1870, Baltimore, is professor at Johns-Hopkins, and has been a co-editor of the American Journal of Mathematics since 1916.

Edward Kasner is professor at Columbia born in New York City in 1878. He has done some wonderful work in the subjects of invariants, conformal geometry and dynamics. In some new theory or series, recently published, he used letters of the Hebrew alphabet to represent certain forms of series.

Passing over into Chemistry, which seems to attract the Jew more than any other science:

Arthur Lachman, born in San Francisco in 1873, and a graduate of the University of California, studied in Germany, Ph. D. at Munich, and became Dean of the College of Science at the University of Oregon at the age of 27. He is now a Consulting Chemical Engineer and the author of a standard book on Organic Chemistry.

Sol. D. Benoliel, born in New York City in 1874, invented new processes for making pure caustic potash and hydrochloric acid. He is now manager of the International Chemical Company at Camden, New Jersey.

Samuel A. Goldschmidt, born in New York City in 1848, is now President of the Columbia Chemical Works, Ph. D. of Columbia.

Martin A. Rosanoff, born in Russia in 1874, for a while Assistant Research Engineer to Thomas A. Edison and later Professor at Clark University, now holds the chair of Chemical Research at the University of Pittsburgh.

Jerome Alexander, born in New York City, 1876, author of several works on Colloids, Glue, Gelatine, etc., is Chemist for the National Glue and Gelatine Works and during the war was adviser on Colloid Chemistry for the National Council of Defense.

Moses Gomberg, born in Russia in 1866, a Major in the Ordinance Department during the war, while he was Consulting Chemist for the Bureau of mines, is now Professor of Chemistry at the University of Michigan.

Peter Fireman, born in Russia in 1863, a Ph. D. of Berne, was Professor of Chemistry at the Missouri School of Mines in 1901-2 and is now Chemist for the Elmer A. Sperry Electro-Chemical Research Laboratory, Washington.

Louis Edward Levy, born in Bohemia in 1846, a photo chemist, is the inventor of many photo-print methods, including the "Levy line screen", the Levy type, etc. His brother, Max Levy, has worked in microscopic photography and photo engraving. His work won gold medals at the Exposition in Chicago, 1893, Paris, 1900; Buffalo, 1901; and St. Louis, 1904.

Meyer Edward Jaffa, born in Australia in 1857, settled in California and is now Director of the State Food and Drug Laboratory and Consulting Nutrition expert for the State Board of Health.

Phoebus Aaron Levine, born in Russia in 1869, at one time Assistant in the Rockefeller Institute and recently Chemist for the Tuberculosis Camp at Saranac Lake, is now a Lecturer in Chemistry at New York University.

Wolfram E. Dreyfus, born in Germany in 1864, a Ph. D. of Munich, taught at Columbia and is now Consulting Chemist for the Bellevue Hospital in New York.

These twelve men cover almost every phase of chemistry.

The greatest Physicist in America, Albert Michelson, is a Jew. He is now head of the Physics Department at the University of Chicago, and has the honor of being the only American who has won the Nobel Physics Prize. His main work has been in the subject of light; his first great discovery was an apparatus to measure the velocity of light, and recently he has announced the development of a new apparatus to measure the diameter of stars. He is now [illegible] years old.

Erlich (1854-1915) the discoverer of "606" Cure for Syphilis, applied Chemistry to giving immunity from diseases. One of his assistants George Raysis, also a Jew, is now working at the University of Pennsylvania as a Research Professor, following in his master's footsteps.

Jacques Loeb, head of the Biological Research Department at the Rockefeller Institute, has succeeded in producing the artificial fertilization of the female cell of the sea urchin, by use of chemicals. What this discovery will lead to, we can hardly guess. Loeb is now 61 years old.

Jacob G. Lipman, born in Russia in 1874, a graduate of Rutgers College, and later the Dean of Agriculture at his Alma Mater, is now at the New Jersey Department of Soils, Soil Bacteriology and Agronomy. He is an author of various books on the subjects of Bacteria in Soils and the Fixation of Nitrogen.

Albert Edward Woolf, born in New York City in 1846, Electrician and Inventor. has made his name in Water Sanitation and Bacteriology. In 1893 during a typhoid fever epidemic, he sterilized the New York City water supply. During the Spanish-American War, he disinfected the city of Havana to eradicate the yellow fever. He was the first to use hydrogen peroxide as an antiseptic.

Morris Bien, born in New York City in 1859, has been in charge of the Reclamation Service in the United States Geological Survey since 1902. Angelo Heilprin has also been heard of in the field of Geology.

Even in the Science of Anthropology, we have our representative. Franz Boaz, born in Germany in 1858, explorer of Baffin Land, has been professor at Columbia since 1899. He has written many books on exploration.

We now come to the field of practical science, engineering. In civil engineering, Jews have won fame in building railroads where others have failed, in passing obstacles of nature by tunnels under the water and by bridges over them.

Mendes Cohen (1831 Baltimore—1915) became president of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad and in 1892 became President of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the highest honor which a civil engineer can receive in America.

Abel M. Bienefeld, born in San Francisco 1873, assistant engineer for the Southern Pacific Railroad, has constructed many miles of railroad in California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas, over mountains and through deserts. During the Spanish-American War, he was assistant in construction for the United States Army.

Gustave R. Tuska, born in New York City, in 1869, has been Chief Engineer for the Panama Railroad, President and Chief Engineer of the Atlantic Construction Co., American Power Company and the Atlantic Fisheries Co.

August Mordecai, born in Philadelphia, in 1847, has been a railroad engineer all of his life and now is Assistant Chief Engineer for the Erie Railroad.

Andrew Rosewater, born in Bohemia, in 1848, is now city engineer for Omaha, Nebraska, and also President of Public Works.

Perhaps the greatest and most wonderful was Charles M. Jacobs, born in London 1850 and died in London 1919. He is known as the Tunnel Engineer. He was called to the United States to advise about building sub-aquean tunnels between Brooklyn, New York and Jersey City. In 1892 he designed and built a tunnel for the East River Gas Company, a most formidable and bold task, the real beginning in tunnel construction. As Chief Engineer for the New York-New Jersey Railroad Company, he built the tubes under the Hudson River between Jersey City and Morton Street. Later he built four more tunnels under the Hudson River for the Pennsylvania Railroad. Besides this work he also designed tunnels for the French government and for the subways under the Seine River in Paris. He died at the age of 69 years.

A young man who has attracted considerable attention in the civil engineering world is David B. Steinman. Born in New York City in 1886, and educated in the city college, he finished his work at Columbia and at the age of 24 became Professor of Civil Engineering at the University of Idaho. He later built up the engineering department of his Alma Mater, after getting his reputation in the design of the Hell Gate Arch Bridge, a new chapter in bridge design. He also designed the Sciotoville Bridge, the longest continuous span in the world.

Bernard Bienenfeld, born in New York City, in 1861, has been developing the oil and asphalt industries of the Pacific coast and of Alaska. He is now President and Engineer of the Standard Asphalt Company.

Recently the Jew has taken an active interest in the construction field. He is now building with his hands, as well as with his mind.

Abram M. Feldman, born in Russia in 1863, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, was Professor of Mechanical Engineering at Armour Institute of Technology from 1894 to 1900. He is now in private practice. Another professor of Mechanical Engineering is Frankel of Kentucky State University, who, after twenty years of teaching, went into private practice last year.

The Jewish Electrical Engineering has taken a full share of the honors in the recent electrical developments:

Elias E. Ries, born in Germany in 1862, is an inventor and a consulting electrical mechanical engineer. He is the discoverer of the automatic electric signaling system, now so universally used; the alternating current electric railroad system, used in many cities; the electric welding of tracks; the talking motion pictures, where the sounds are produced directly from the film, and in all is the owner of some 200 patents.

Max Osterberg, born in Germany in 1869, a graduate of Columbia, was Editor of the "Electric Power" and during the period of ten years, 1894-1903, delivered over 800 public lectures

Alfred Norton Goldsmith, born in New York City, is now professor of Radio Engineering at the college of the city of New York and Research Engineer of the Marconi Wireless Co. He has done some wonderful work in the line of wireless telegraphy and telephony, though still a very young man.

Emil Berliner, born in Germany in 1851, is the inventor of the telephone transmitter, also of the disk phonograph record. He is now experimenting in aeronautics and was the first to use the now standard aeroplane motor, the revolving cylinder internal combustion engine.

Ernest Julius Berg, born in Sweden in 1871, for a while an electrical engineer for the General Electric Company, is now Professor of Electrical Engineering at Union University.

The Jew has produced many architects in recent years, and a few of the more prominent are as follows:

Albert Kahn, born in Germany in 1869, the architect for the Aircraft Construction Division of the United States Army during the war, has to his credit the designing of many automobile factories, including the Packard Car Company, Hudson Company, Chalmers, Lozier and Ford Car Company plants.

Arnold W. Brunner, born in New York in 1857, has designed the Mt. Sinai Hospital, the Custom House and Court House of Cleveland, the City College Stadium and the Monument Bridge at Toledo. He is now a member of the Art Commission of New York.

Simon B. Eisendrath, born in Chicago in 1869, is now the building expert for Cook County, Illinois. He has designed several hospitals in New York and Chicago.

Henry B. Herts, born in New York in 1871, studied abroad in all the big centers of architecture. His design of college buildings, as shown at Smith and Bates College; and of theatres, lyceums, New Amsterdam and Liberty, of New York, serve as models for the American students.

Charles H. Israels, born in New York, 1865, has specialized in designing hotels; examples of his work are the Arlington and Warrington in New York.

Other men worthy of mention are Ben Judah Lubschecz, Dankmar Adler, Chicago, and there are many others.

This list of men in the scientific and professional fields is far from complete. From time to time as new names come to my notice, I shall add them to this list and hope, at some future time, to give a more complete record. But, I believe that these men, though few in number, testify to the fact that the Jew is realizing that the technical field is not closed to him.

Let us look to the future. The following figures of Jewish students in technical schools are taken from the American-Jewish Year Book 5861, 1920-1. The Jewish students in professional schools in 106 universities, colleges and technical schools, number 14,800 or 9.7 per cent of the total registration. The percentage of these Jews taking engineering is 16.3; while the percentage of the non-Jewish registration taking engineering is 30-9. There were 1,325 Jewish engineering students in 1918-19 out of a total of 22,275, about four per cent; whereas the percentage of Jews in all professional schools and courses combined is ten per cent. In other words, the Jew is not giving his full quota to the engineering school; most of the Jewish professional students take commerce and medicine. But I believe that the percentage in the technical pursuits is fast increasing, and with some of the men afore mentioned as examples, the Jewish engineering student is going to be heard from. The Jew has made no mean record in these professions in the last few years, but I look to a still more glorious record in the next few years.

ACTIVITIES OF SOLIDARITAET LODGE, KRAKAU, POLAND.

In the meeting of February 3, 1920, the new officers were solemnly installed by Brother ex-President, Dr. Osias Thon. The following were the officers: Mentor, Brother ex-President, Dr. Leon Ader; President, Brother engineer, Dr. Joseph Weinberger; Vice-President, Brother Dr. David Suesskind; Recording Secretary, Brother Dr. Adolph Gumprich; Financial Secretary, Brother Isaac Potok; Treasurer, Brother Samuel Schaechter; Marshal, Brother Dr. Joseph Steinberg; Guardian, Brother Dr. Leon Duldig.

In the beginning of the year our organization numbered one hundred and thirty brothers. Of these two brothers, Jacob Brummer and Baruch Springer were unfortunately taken from us by death. We shall remember with loving devotion the departed brethren who always took faithful part in our work. For this sad loss we obtained compensation by a substantial accession of newly initiated brethren. Ten brothers were initiated and eight new members are proposed so that the total membership at the close of the year is 138.

The total assets of the organization rose during the past year to 98,249 Polish mark, of which the funds for widows and orphans participated to the amount of 43,978 and the fund for the building of a lodge home, 22,144.

The lodge held fourteen regular meetings which the brethren attended in large numbers. The meetings were stimulating in their effect to which especially the following lectures and addresses contributed: Brother Dr. Joseph Steinberg, "Our Tasks and Aims"; The same on "The Work of the Relief Committee for Polish Jews"; Brother ex-President, Dr. Osias Thon, "Keren Hajessod"; Brother Hipolit Frommer, "International Commerce and the Rate of Exchange".

Our brothers participated in the work of the Relief Committee for Polish Jews which, under the capable administration of our brother, Dr. Raphael Landau, is trying to relieve the terrible distress of the Jews and to improve their chances for self-support.

Our lodge also subsidized substantially various cultural and charitable societies from its own means. We donated for the relief of the victims of the pogroms in the Ukraine 5,000 Polish marks.

It was resolved to establish a Jewish museum in Poland for which purpose a committee was appointed which shall take the initiatory steps. On the 26th of February, 1920, we celebrated the seventieth birthday of our President, Brother Adolf Kraus, to whom we sent an address. We further resolved to start a collection among our members for the Palestine Restoration Fund.

We resolved to establish a Jewish library in connection with the lodge and a society to promote knowledge of Judaism. The constitution of this society was already approved by the authorities.

In addition, we had a social gathering every two or three weeks for the brothers and their families.—[Joseph Weinberger.

THE GREAT MISUNDERSTANDING.

[(Continued from page 10.)

or at any time, but always through no human effort, unless it be repentance and such-like spiritual preparation, there is Jesus understood, and there truest Pharisaism is revealed.

JEWISH WORKERS IN RUHR DISTRICT TO BE INTERNED.

Seventeen thousand Eastern European Jewish workers in the Ruhr district were discharged and will be interned under the terms of an order issued by the government on November 17, 1920. These workers were all taken by the government to the Ruhr district during the war when there was a serious demand for workers in Germany but now, owing to unemployment among Germans, the government decided to carry out the order immediately, in spite of the fact that many Hollanders and Poles continue to be employed in the district. Maximilian Harden, in a recent issue of "Die Zukunft" prints a strong protest against the order and demands its revocation by the government.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CHICAGO.

Adolf Kraus Lodge.

A well attended meeting of Adolf Kraus Lodge, No. 72, was held at the Covenant Club on Monday evening, February 28. The earlier part of the evening was devoted to the business affairs of the lodge and a great deal of routine business was disposed of, including the initiation of several candidates.

After the regular order of business, the doors were thrown open to the many ladies and friends of the members of the lodge to listen to an address by Honorable Hugo M. Friend, Judge of the Superior Court of Chicago, who addressed the audience on the crime situation. At the conclusion of his address, the same was discussed by a number of the members present.

Ramah Lodge.

A very large audience was present at the meeting of Ramah Lodge, No. 33, held on Monday evening, March 14, at the Covenant Club hall. During the earlier part of the session, the business of the lodge was transacted, a large class of candidates was initiated, and a number of applications for membership were presented. After the close of the executive session, the doors were thrown open and the hall became filled to capacity with a number of ladies and friends of the members of the lodge who assembled to listen to the address of Colonel Nathan Horowitz, of the United States Army, Fort Sheridan, Illinois, who spoke on the subject, "A Regular Fellow". Colonel Horowitz is the possessor of the medal of the French Legion of Honor; he also was a member of the American Mission in Budapest, Hungary. In his talk, he recited the many experiences gathered by him during his official career abroad, both as a military man and as a diplomatic representative of this government.

At the close of the address, dancing was indulged in, during which refreshments were served.

Central B'nai B'rith Council.

A large attendance was present at the monthly meeting of the Central B'nai B'rith Council, held on March 7. The various Sub-committees, such as Intellectual Advancement, Social Service, Ways and Means, Boys' Camp, presented preliminary reports.

Active preparations are being started for the operation of the B'nai B'rith Boys' Camp during the coming summer and it is hoped that last year's capacity will be exceeded. The management and operation of the B'nai B'rith Free Employment Bureau has undergone a material change, insofar as the direct control of the institution is now vested in a Board of nine Directors instead of seven as heretofore, of which number four are elected for and on behalf of the Associated Jewish Charities of Chicago and four by the Central B'nai B'rith Council, the eight thus elected choosing the ninth. The name of the bureau has been changed so that it will hereafter be known as the Jewish Free Employment Bureau of Chicago, under the auspices of the B'nai B'rith.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

The annual celebration of B'nai B'rith Day by the lodges of Houston, Texas, was held on Sunday, March 6, Rabbi David Lefkowitz of Dallas was the principal speaker and guest of honor at the reception, at the conclusion of the program. The subject of Dr. Lefkowitz's address was, "Higher Loyalties and the Order". The affair was largely attended by the members of the lodge and their friends.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

TORONTO LODGE, TORONTO, CANADA.

Toronto Lodge, No. 836, is enjoying continued activity along all lines. The first meeting of the new term took place the first of the month. In the beautifully artistic setting of the new lodge quarters, Empire Room at the Prince George Hotel, a most impressive initiation was carried out. Following this an informal dance, thoroughly enjoyed by some 400 people, brought the meeting to a successful close.

The newly elected officers are: A. Cohen, President; N. Phillips, Vice President; A. Levy, Treasurer; C. Benjamin, Financial Secretary; H. Pullan, Secretary; M. Fisher, Monitor; B. Luxenberg, Assistant Monitor; I. Brodey, Guardian; M. Draimin, Warden.

On February 7, Dr. Deutsch honored the lodge with an address at a splendid dinner. Some 200 B'nai B'rith attended and were deeply impressed by the speaker's appeal for stronger ties of benevolence, harmony and brotherly love. His rebuttal of Henry Ford's bigoted attacks brought forth much applause. Due publicity and prominence was given by local newspapers to the interesting lecture.

Brother Birnbaum's initiation team was called upon to officiate at the institution of I. O. B. B. Lodges at Ottawa and Hamilton. Their work was well received by the newly initiated. Brothers Levy and Lasker of the Grand Lodge honored the young lodge by their presence. After a most hospitable reception the degree team proceeded to Hamilton. Dr. Dover, President-elect of Ottawa Lodge, reports an encouraging start and a good field for progress.

At Hamilton, the team was joined by a large delegation of brethren from Toronto Lodge, Viceroy, Reading, and Hamilton Lodges, who were deeply impressed by the work of Toronto's degree team. The initiation was followed in the evening by a sumptuous banquet. Addresses were delivered by many Hamilton and Toronto brethren, among whom were Rabbi Berger of Hamilton, Mr. D. Sweet, President-elect of Hamilton Lodge, Rabbi Brickner of Toronto and A. Cohen, President of Toronto Lodge. Brothers Lasker and Levy greatly moved the gathering in their charge to uphold the principles of benevolence, brotherly love and harmony.

Although Toronto Lodge has extended thus its work to adjacent fields, it has not neglected its local activities. Preparations are now being made for a Purim celebration and also fitting festivity for its second anniversary on March 9.

The membership continues to grow and the light of our new Menorah seems to be attracting large numbers to our fold.

Here's to a 1,000 membership in 1921 for Toronto Lodge, No. 836.—[B. Vise.

MINNEAPOLIS LODGE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Minneapolis Lodge, No. 271, held another big initiation and rally on February 22 at the Moorish room of the West Hotel. Almost a hundred initiates were on hand, bringing the membership of Minneapolis Lodge above the thousand mark, a gain of about 100 per cent since September. The majority of the members of the General Committee of District No. 6 was on hand to make the meeting memorable. The initiation was in charge of Brothers A. F. Mecklenburger and A. B. Scelenfreund of Chicago and proved of much interest to those present.

The speakers of the evening were all in fine mettle; the large number of candidates, the distinguished coterie of out-of-town visitors, and the date, Washington's birthday, all combined, made the occasion memorable. Addresses were delivered by Brothers A. F. Mecklenburger and A. B. Seelenfreund of Chicago; Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Des Moines; Alex P. Greenthal of Milwaukee; J. H. Schanfeld of Minneapolis and Dr. I. L. Rypins of St. Paul. Rabbi C. David Matt presided. The lodge is now looking forward to the many important projects made possible by the newly attained large membership.

The first social reunion of the membership was at the dance arranged by the Social Committee, under the chairmanship of Brother Herman Weil at the assembly room of the Radisson. Upward of five hundred attended and the verdict of all present was that the affair was eminently successful.

KRAKAU, POLAND.

On February 8, Solidaritact Lodge, No. 427, of Krakau, Galicia, Poland, held an important meeting on which occasion ten candidates were initiated and the new officers for the year 1921 duly installed.

Preceding this important meeting, memorial services were held at the temple in honor and in memory of the departed members of the lodge, at which services ex-President Brother Dr. Thom delivered the memorial address. The installation ceremonies were conducted by Past President Dr. Thom and at the conclusion of the ceremony, Dr. Thom, as a member of the Polish Parliament, delivered an address to the lodge on the economic and social condition prevailing in Poland.

RACINE LODGE, RACINE, WIS.

A meeting of Racine Lodge, No. 697, of Racine and Kenosha, Wis., was held on March 1. The attendance was the largest that the lodge ever had since its existence. Brother A. P. Greenthal, of Milwaukee, a member of the General Committee of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, who was the official visitor, installed the officers for the ensuing term and assisted in the initiation of six candidates.

As a result of the fact that the larger percentage of the membership of the lodge resides in Kenosha, it was resolved after an extensive debate to change the present name of the lodge, so that it will hereafter be known as Israel Lodge.

Brother Greenthal addressed the lodge on the subject, "Our Neighbors and Ourselves". In addition to the address of the evening, a general discussion was held with reference to the present Anti-Semitic propaganda. A social hour was spent at the close of the program.

HAR SINAI LODGE, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The monthly meeting of Har Sinai Lodge was held on Wednesday evening, February 16, at the Hotel Majestic, and was attended by nearly 250 members. Continuing the good work of the past several months, a class of fifty men was initiated, among them being Rabbi A. J. Feldman, of the Temple Keneseth Israel, who, in the course of the evening, was called upon to speak and delivered an excellent address.

The membership of the lodge is 520, and it is proposed to carry on the membership campaign in a more intensive manner within the next month. The members present pledged themselves to propose nearly 1,000 members before the meeting on March 16. About 100 met for dinner at the Majestic on Monday evening, and there, in organizing, made plans for the campaign which is now in progress.

One of the entertainment features of the evening was the violin playing of Master Jacob Savitt, who played in a most capable manner.

DISTRICT No. 1.

Home for Aged and Infirm, Yonkers, N. Y.

Mr. Sigmund Eisner of Red Bank, N. J., subscribed the sum of $1,000 to the Patrons Fund for the maintenance of the Home for Aged and Infirm of Yonkers, N. Y., under the auspices of District Grand Lodge, No. 1.

The Board of Governors, at a meeting held on February 20, passed a unanimous resolution whereby donors of $1,000 to the Patrons Fund be accorded the honor and distinction of life and honorary membership. Mr. Eisner was enrolled as an honorary and life member of the Home.

The General Committee of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, is arranging for the institution of new lodges in New Bedford and Lynn, Mass. It is expected that the first one will be instituted March 3 and the lodge in Lynn on March 7.

DISTRICT No. 5.

As a result of the efforts of Brothers Adolph Freund and Chas. Rosenthal of Detroit, Michigan, temporarily sojourning in Florida, a B'nai B'rith Lodge has been organized at Miami, Florida, and the officers of District No. 5 are making the necessary arrangements for the early institution of the lodge.

SHOLEM LODGE, LEAVENWORTH, KANSAS.

The year 1921 is beginning to loom as the greatest of all years in the history of Sholem Lodge, No. 68.

Starting off the year with an election of officers, the gavel is now in the hands of Sam Peltz. Our old standby, Morris Abels, is still "secretarying", as he has done so faithfully and capably during the years gone by. Vice President, A. Goldman; Monitor, Ed. Winnig; Assistant Monitor, Julius Abeles; and Warden, Sol Cohen, the officers, are making diligent efforts to make this a rustling, bustling, year for old Sholem.

As the poet might say, "we have prisons to the left of us, prisons to the right of us", etc., etc., which gives us opportunity not afforded to other lodges to do real welfare work in the prisons. Within a half hour's ride is the Kansas State Prison, Federal Prison and Disciplinary Barracks. Our Rabbi, Dr. Ellinger, has charge of this work, with the active support of all the members.

Socially, things are humming. Every now and then, a dance is given in the spacious annex to the temple and the younger Jewish people trip the light fantastic, with real gusto and enjoyment. But not only is Sholem Lodge being entertained with social and welfare work; they are also planning a series of lectures by local and imported talent, which the writer will be pleased to review as time passes.

As we already have 99 per cent of the eligible people in our fair city as members, our slogan is "Watch Old Sholem Shine". —[Sol Cohen.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

On March 6, 1921, Kadimah Lodge, No. 881, of Springfield, Ohio, was instituted with a charter membership of 45.

The lodge was organized by Brother Sidney G. Kusworm of Dayton and the installation was under the direction of Brother E. J. Schanfarber of Columbus, Ohio, First Vice President of the District Grand Lodge, who was assisted in his work by Brothers Kusworm, Schulman, Klein and Leonard H. Freiberg, Secretary of the District Grand Lodge.

After the formal ceremony of the institution of the lodge and installation of officers, addresses were delivered by Brothers Schanfarber and Kusworm.

The lodge bids fair to be one of the banner lodges of the district.

ANNUAL LINEN SHOWER FOR LEO N. LEVI MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

The annual linen shower held by the Little Rock section of the Council of Jewish Women for the Leo N. Levi Hospital, under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Gus. Blass, assisted by Mesdames Epstein Back, Heiman, Myron Lasker, Lenz, Green, Isa Navra, Jess Thalheimer, Harry Lasker, E. Ellenbogan, Fox, Schott and Schoenfeld, resulted as follows:

Cash contributions from Helena Ark., $25; Jonesboro, $25; Brinkley, $20; Camden, $20; Coway, $10; Forest City, $5.

Wynne, Blytheville, Conway and Clarenden sent donations of linens. Total Cash Contributions, including local donations were $193.00, out of which $143.00 was expended for linens and the balance of fifty dollars was sent to the hospital.

The linens sent amounted to the following: Spreads, 5 1-2 dozen; sheets, 15 dozen; pillow slips, 15 dozen; bath towels, 24 dozen; face towels, 4 dozen; one bolt of 44 yards Indian Head for table cloths; one piece, 8 yards, Indian Head for tray cloths.—[Mrs. Yetta Rose Schoenfold, Chairman of Philanthropy, Council of Jewish Women.

SASKATOON, CANADA.

Rev. H. J. Samuel of Winnipeg, Canada, paid an official visit to Saskatoon Lodge, No. 739, of Saskatoon, on Sunday, January 6. A special meeting of the lodge was held in the afternoon and a public meeting, under the auspices of the lodge, in the evening.

Brother Rev. H. J. Samuel delivered an interesting lecture on the work of the Order. His visit will, no doubt, be most beneficial to the lodge and will lead to an increase in its membership.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

Rabbi Jacob Krohngold, Executive Secretary, District Grand Logde, No. 2, spoke at the services on Friday evening, February 18, at Mizpah Temple. This service has been designated as B'nai B'rith night by Chattanooga Lodge, No. 446. The subject of Rabbi Krohngold's address was "The Anti-Defamation League". There was also a special musical program arranged for the occasion.

A meeting of the lodge was held on Sunday evening, February 20, at Mizpah Temple. A class of candidates was initiated and Rabbi Krohngold assisted in the initiation. After the ceremonies, a reception was tendered to Rabbi Krohngold during which refreshments were served.

B. F. PIEXOTTO LODGE, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

The retiring officers submitted their various reports for the past year, showing the membership to be over 250 with prospects that this will be increased to over 350 members before the close of 1921. All meetings of the past year have been well attended and keen interest in the activities of the lodge has been manifested by the entire membership at all times.

The greatest task successfully planned and accomplished by the lodge in a number of years was the B'nai B'rith Charity Fair, held at the Odeon Hall on November 10. Through the able and untiring efforts of J. Findling as Director General and his willing assistants and the aid of the Jewish organizations of the city nearly $15,000 was secured for the suffering Jews of Europe. Contributions to the fair were liberally given by all denominations from every section of the state, clearly demonstrating the sympathy entertained for the suffering Jews of Europe.

Delegates to the District Grand Lodge, No. 4, have been elected and specifically instructed to use their best efforts to secure the next Grand Lodge Convention for Salt Lake City, and in this plan Salt Lake City requests the earnest support of all the sister lodges of this district, and plans are already being formulated for the comfort and entertainment of the anticipated visitors who are sincerely promised a reception and hospitality that they will long remember.

If negotiations now pending are accomplished the Salt Lake City Lodge will soon acquire full possession and sole ownership to the B. B. Hall, which has been owned jointly by the lodge and its members. It is anticipated that within sixty days the lodge will enjoy a legal title to the building and a great entertainment will be offered the members and their friends in appreciation of their support to the lodge in securing the title to the lodge property.—[S. J. Friedman.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT MIAMI, FLORIDA.

A lodge with about sixty charter members was instituted March 2 at Miami, Fla., under the jurisdiction of District Grand Lodge, No. 5.

Brother Adolph Freund of Detroit, Mich., Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, who is temporarily at Miami, was delegated by the officers of District Grand Lodge, No. 5, to institute the lodge. The organization was made possible by the efforts of Brother Charles Rosenthal of Detroit, Mich., who was given charge of the initiatory ceremonies. Brother Freund was assisted by Brother Martin Emerich of Chicago and Brother Jos. I. Lovy of Ashland, Wis.

Many visiting members of the Order were present and took a deep interest in the proceedings, which were most impressively rendered by the brethren representing the Grand Lodge. Most excellent men, leaders in professional and mercantile affairs of Miami, comprise the list of officers elected for the ensuing term of Miami Florida Lodge, which augers well for the usefulness and strength of the new link.

The officers elected were: President, Isidor Cohen; Vice President, Daniel Cromer; Treasurer, David Afremon; Secretary, Jake Brown; Monitor, Louis Fine; Assistant Monitor, A. L. Marks; Warden, M. Goldenblank; Guardian, Sam Davis; Trustees, M. Plinkansky, Saul Abenson and O. P. Wolfson.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

ST. JOSEPH, MO.

At a banquet, given by Joseph Lodge, No. 73, at St. Francis Hotel, January 18, 170 guests were present. Dr. J. Kangisser was Toastmaster. The principal speaker of the evening was Mr. Jacob Lorie of Kansas City, who laid great stress upon the importance of putting forth every effort to enroll every Jew as a Ben B'rith. The other speakers of the evening were: Rabbi Garry August, Mr. Simon Binswanger, Mr. Louis Kramitz, and Mr. Basil L. Kaufman.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, installed its 1921 officers at a meeting, held January 2. Dr. I. O. Philo spoke on "Loyalty to the Order." On January 16, Mahoning Lodge observed Past Presidents' Day. Brother Henry Fuerst of Akron, Ohio, was the speaker. Mahoning Lodge raised $3,500 for the Cleveland Orphan Home in the recent drive.

BAY CITY LODGE, BAY CITY, MICH.

On Sunday, February 20, practically our entire membership turned out to see our degree team put on second degree work, a novelty we have introduced to enliven our initiations and meetings.

The second degree work was in charge of Brother Joe Hirschfield, who with his able body-guards, kept the members in a continuous uproar of hilarity—the poor candidates having to suffer indignities too horrible to mention.

Brother Abe Roman, one of the assassins on the degree team, suffered severely from humiliation in that he mixed the rifles and instead of shooting the quaking and defenseless candidate with a stream of water, he used the gun that shot in the reverse, thereby perpetrating the crime upon himself. Abe says, "It will not happen again." We agree with Abe, one is plenty.

Following our degree work, a bounteous repast was served, "a la Serve Self" which included delicacies too numerous to mention.

Brother Abner Goldman creditably rounded out the entertainment with solos on the piano.

Our membership drive has received considerable impetus from a most liberal offer by Brother M. Speiseberger of an electric menorah on reaching the goal of 200. Our next initiation should bring us over the top. How about it, Joe?

Brother Louis Harrison recently called a meeting of his Intellectual Advancement Committee and reports he intends to have well-known public men of our city and state address our different meetings.

It is our aim to make our meetings spicy and interesting, which is bound to produce results for any lodge.

Brother Ben Wiener, President of Flint Lodge, is due an apology from the correspondent of Bay City Lodge, for his negligence in not mentioning his name in the program of January 23, which was published in the B'nai B'rith News. Especially, in view of the fact that it was through Ben that we were enabled to secure our Speaker of the Day, Rabbi Lupo of Flint. Brother Wiener's address and remarks were highly appreciated as were those of Rabbi Lupo.

We also wish to state at this time that Ben and Flint Lodge have surely found a soft spot in the hearts of Bay City Lodge, (especially the degree team who recently initiated one of their frequent classes) for the royal manner in which we were entertained both "spiritually" and otherwise.—A. A. I[illegible]merman.

DENVER LODGE, DENVER, COLORADO.

A well attended meeting of Denver Lodge, No. 171, was held on February 13, 1921, at which the special order of business was the consideration of a motion to define the duties of the Committee of Twenty-five.

At the meeting of the lodge held February 27, a boy scout demonstration was the special feature.

During the year 1920, Denver Lodge initiated 260 candidates, closing the year with a membership of over 900.

The new officers of the lodge have taken hold of affairs with energy and enthusiasm, which all goes well for a successful administration.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

Portland Lodge, No. 65, in regular session assembled, had the privilege of listening to a splendid talk by Judge Tucker of the Circuit Court on the subject of "Abraham Lincoln", on Tuesday evening, February 15, at the B'nai B'rith building.

In honor of the fiftieth annual session of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, Portland Lodge presented a class for initiation at an unusually well attended meeting held on Monday, February 21, at Temple Beth Israel. The initiatory work was conducted by Portland Lodge's degree team known throughout the district

A committee of the Daughters of the Covenant, ladies' auxiliary of Portland Lodge, has been hard at work preparing in carrying out arrangements for the program of entertainment and social features in honor of District Grand Lodge, No. 4.

The program outlined for the comfort and entertainment of the delegates to the District Grand Lodge Convention included the following: Highway trip by automobile and tea at the Chanticlear Inn, Sunday, February 20; Monday noon, luncheon at the Benson Hotel and following the luncheon, matinee at the Orpheum Theatre; Monday evening at the Multmunah Hotel, where a class initiation and reception for the newly elected members was held; Tuesday, February 22, the guests were taken for a view of the city by automobile; a housewarming and tea at the B'nai B'rith building followed the drive. The climax of all the festivities was a banquet and dance given by Portland Lodge. Lunches were served the delegates at the B'nai B'rith building every day during the session.

A well attended meeting of the Daughters of the Covenant, ladies' auxiliary of Portland Lodge, was held Tuesday evening, February 15, at the B'nai B'rith building. Miss Thal addressed the gathering on the subject, "The Jewish Shelter Home". A number of musical numbers were rendered and the Literary and Musical Committee served refreshments.

LITTLE ROCK LODGE, LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

On Sunday, February 13, 1921, B'nai B'rith Day was fittingly observed by Little Rock Lodge, No. 158, of Little Rock, Ark.

In the afternoon, a special meeting of the lodge was held, at which time a class of candidates was initiated by the degree team of the lodge. In the evening at 8 o'clock at the temple, a program of exercises was arranged to celebrate B'nai B'rith Day. Brother Alfred G. Kahn addressed the lodge, welcoming the guest of honor, Brother Victor G. Hexter of Dallas, Texas, President of District No. 7. Brother Hexter addressed the lodge on the work of the Order.

The attendance of members was the largest in the history of the lodge. The Committee on Membership is still at work and promises to have another large class of candidates to be initiated in the near future.

MISSOURI LODGE, ST. LOUIS, MO.

The second meeting of Missouri Lodge, No. 22, of St. Louis, Mo., under the administration of President Simon Ostfeld was held Sunday, February 20, at Harburger Hall, and judging by the enthusiasm of all members present, Missouri Lodge is set for an old-time year of success. Routine business was transacted, attended by a spirited debate in which many of the members took part. It was decided to adopt a Jewish Orphan from the war-stricken territory and the fortunate waif was selected from a number of worthy cases brought to the attention of the lodge by Judge Moses Hartman. He is Abraham Ozerowicz, eleven years old, whose father, a merchant, was killed in the recent war, as a result of which his mother became insane and finally died of tuberculosis. Abraham is a quiet boy and shows promise of musical talent. He resides in Krakau.

Eight candidates were initiated and the work was done in the usual Missouri Lodge fashion.

A very interesting, brief address was made by Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, President of District No. 2, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the brethren present.

HAR SINAI LODGE, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

On Wednesday evening, February 16, the monthly meeting of Har Sinai Lodge was held at the Hotel Majestic and was attended bynearly two hundred and fifty members. Continuing the good work of the past several months a class of fifty men was initiated, among them being Rabbi A. J. Feldman of the Temple Keneseth Israel, who, in the course of the evening, was called upon to speak and delivered a very excellent address.

The membership of the lodge at the present time is five hundred twenty and it is proposed to carry on the membership campaign in a more intensive manner within the next month and the members present pledged themselves to propose nearly a thousand members before the meeting on March 16.

In line with this those who are more actively interested to the number of nearly one hundred met for dinner at the Majestic on Monday evening and there, in organizing, made plans for the campaign which is now in progress.

One of the entertainment features of the evening was the appearance of Master Jacob Savitt, who rendered some difficult violin selections in a very capable manner to the enjoyment of all present.

MINNEAPOLIS LODGE, No. 271.

Nineteen twenty-one will probably be the biggest year in the history of the B'nai B'rith in Minneapolis, in the point of activities and accomplishments. It is predicted that before the year ends Minneapolis Lodge will have started plans for a building for the housing of all Jewish activities of the city. A conference has been called of the members of the lodge, at which the subject matter will be fully considered.

The meeting of Minneapolis Lodge held on January 25, at the temple, was a splendid one. More than 700 members were present.

An interesting business meeting was held on February 8, at which reports of all standing committees were presented and acted upon.

Brother Rabbi C. David Matt as Chairman of the Intellectual Advancement Committee is hard at work arranging the social and intellectual features of the meetings of the lodge.

A B'nai B'rith Glee Club has been brought into life and its membership recruited from the members of the lodge. Rehearsals are being held regularly at the Gymal Doled club rooms.

The committee, with Brother David Phillip as Chairman, appointed to arranged for the establishment of a boys' camp, is actively at work making the necessary preparations.

Many members responded to the call of Brother D. Jeffrey for the organization of a B'nai B'rith orchestra. The first rehearsal was held recently at the Gymal Doled club rooms.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Under the auspices of the Publicity Committee of which Brother Jos. W. Salus is Chairman, a membership campaign is being carried on in Philadelphia, which is proving to be the greatest ever undertaken in that city.

Har Sinai Lodge, under whose auspices the campaign is being conducted, has increased its membership from 135 to 515 and the present campaign has already brought pledges of over 1,100 members. The committee expects to have the largest lodge of the Order in Philadelphia within a very short time. A class of 500 candidates is expected to be initiated during the month of March and representatives of the Executive Committee of the Order have been invited to participate in this class initiation and to address the newly acquired members.

NEWARK, NEW JERSEY.

Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J., held a regular meeting on the evening of February 23, 1921. A short business meeting was followed by an address by Dr. Jos. Hyamson on the subject, "What I Saw in Lithuania and Poland". Dr. Hyamson has just returned from an extensive trip abroad where he investigated conditions on behalf of the American Jewish Relief Society and his message was of very much interest to the members.

LIMA LODGE, LIMA, OHIO.

A big initiation meeting was held under the auspices of Lima Lodge, No. 786, at Mitchell Hall, on March 1, 1921. Seven candidates were duly initiated by the degree team of the lodge.

The members of Lima Lodge have embarked upon a new venture, by the issuing of a new bulletin called the B'nai B'rith News of Lima Lodge. Its object is to encourage and stimulate the attendance at meetings of the lodge and also to serve as an educational feature to interest members in the work of the Order.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF FRATERNITY LODGE GIVE PLEASANT MUSICALE.

About one hundred members of the Women's Auxiliary and the male members of Fraternity Lodge attended a well arranged musicale at their lodge rooms, Odd Fellows block, recently.

The "Syncopated Four" Orchestra, composed of Miss Emma Kaufman, Miss Fannie Lubchansky, Miss Mae Sokarl and Mr. Arthur Davenport, furnished music during the evening.

The program consisted of two charming selections by Mrs. Kurby, contralto, "Ave Maria" by Miss Rebecca Milson, piano selection by Miss Fannie Lubchansky, clever folk dancing by Miss Goldie Cohen and two exceedingly well rendered selections by Mrs. Joseph Fine, elocutionist.

Refreshments were served, followed by an hour's dancing to the lively strains of the "Syncopated Four".

DISTRICT No. 1.

A B'nai B'rith Lodge, to be known as Twin City Lodge, was instituted on March 6 at Lewiston, Maine.

HARMONY LODGE, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Harmony Lodge gave its annual Washington's Birthday Party on the afternoon of February 22. In addition to over 200 children of the members, twenty-five children of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum were guests. A jolly program was followed by orchestral music to which the children present enjoyed social dancing. Holiday's ices and favors were distributed.

To Mr. B. Rubinstein, as Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, the success of the affair is, in a large measure, due.

Harmony Lodge Charity Ball a Brilliant Success.

With the scintillating lights on handsome jewels, the vari colored paillettes and sequins, in gowns fashioned in the whole gamut of bright colors with silver and gold brocades, the annual charity ball given by Harmony Lodge, No. 711, of Bridgeport, Conn., in the ballroom of The Stratfield surpassed all events of the lodge.

DAN LODGE, CHARLESTON, S. C.

Dan Lodge begins the year of 1921 with the largest membership in its history, approximately 125, and with the renewed interest that has been manifested by the members it is probable that the present membership will be largely increased during the year. At the annual meeting in January, officers were elected and installed.

The February meeting of the lodge was the most enthusiastic and interesting held in a long time, and there was a large attendance. Interesting questions were discussed, and refreshments were served. The Entertainment Committee appointed by the new President undertook activities at once, and is arranging for a ball to be given during March, while other entertainments will be given to interest the members and friends of the lodge. The indications are that Dan Lodge will find 1921 one of the best and most flourishing in its history.—[By M. J. Rubin.

BELLINGHAM, WASH.

Bellingham Lodge, No. 756, of Bellingham, Wash., held a public installation of officers on January 23, 1921, on which occasion the lodge had the biggest turn-out in its history. A delegation from Ranier and Hildesheimer Lodges was in attendance.

A Propaganda Committee has been appointed by the lodge to increase the membership and from indications, it appears that a 100 per cent increase will be realized.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

THE CINCINNATI LODGE, No. 4, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Cincinnati Lodge, No. 4, listened with great interest on February 14 to an address of Jacob B. Krohngold, Executive Director of District Grand Lodge, No. 2. Rabbi Krohngold gave special attention to the campaign against the defamation of the Jew and his remarks invited a very interesting discussion among the members. The President, Philip L. Herschman announced the appointment as Chairman, of the Publicity Committee of Chauncey D. Pichel, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of Cincinnati, and also appointed an Entertainment Committee and Membership Committee for the year 1921 as follows:

Entertainment: David Rosenbaum, Chairman; Ben Rothstein, Jos. Wallenstein, Phil. A. Cohen, Chauncey D. Pichel, Milton T. Plaut, Louis Weiland, Clarence M. Salzer, Jacob Hirschberg, Noah Davis, Leo Lucas, Ben Ducken, Jos. Friedlander, Herman Jacobs, I. B. Eyer.

Membership: Milton T. Plaut, Chairman; Samuel I. Lipp, Louis Weiland, Philip A. Cohen, Chauncey D. Pichel, Arthur L. Frank, Jos. H. Levi, Ben Friedman, Herman Jacobs, Sidney L. Rosin, Milton Hurtig, Dr. Dan S. Heyn, Harry H. Friedman.

Announcement was made by David Rosenbaum, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, that the committee had under consideration the giving of a ball late in March at the Hotel Sinton in Cincinnati for the purpose of raising additional funds for the 1921 charity program of the lodge. There is a feeling in the lodge that charitable endeavors of the organization should be increased, and the charity ball is to be given to enable the lodge to enlarge its activities in that direction.

A large number of new candidates were balloted upon and elected to take their degrees at the next meeting.—[Chauncey D. Pichel.

ELYRIA, OHIO.

An open meeting, under the auspices of Elyria Lodge, No. 855, of Elyria, Ohio, was held on Thursday evening, February 10, at which an unusually excellent program was presented. The program was in charge of Mr. Otis Altfeld.

A large number of members and their families attended the meeting, which was presided over by Mr. Alex Altfeld. An instructive and interesting address by His Honor, the Mayor of the city, evoked much applause.

Musical and vocal numbers were successfully carried and those who participated were: The Misses Rosalyn Lees, Hilda Mendelson, Elsie Altfeld, Sylvia Klein, Mrs. Philip Schultz and Mrs. Otis Altfeld. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Announcement was made of a dance to be held on March 16, at the Eagles' hall.

DISTRICT, No. 6.

A public meeting was held by Calumet Lodge, No. 502, of Hancock, Michigan, on Sunday, February 6, on which occasion the officers were installed.

Brother E. H. Wollstein addressed the meeting on, "The Work of the Order".

As a result of the event, several applications for membership were received.

Winnipeg Lodge, No. 650, of Winnipeg, Can., is arranging to observe B'nai B'rith Day with a public meeting to be held the latter part of the month of March. Rabbi S. S. Cohon of Chicago, member of the General Committee of the District Grand Lodge, has been delegated to visit the lodge on that occasion for the purpose of delivering an address.

At the recent class initiation conducted by Bay City Lodge, No. 178, of Bay City, Michigan, thirty-seven candidates were initiated.

PROPAGANDA ACTIVITIES IN DISTRICT, No. 2.

United Cities Lodge, No. 533, of Joplin, Mo., celebrated B'nai B'rith Day on Sunday, February 13, and was addressed by Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, President of D. G. L. No. 2 whose topic was "Opportunity, Security and Happiness."

Wichita Lodge, No. 857, of Wichita, Kans., held its second social dance at the Shaw Academy, where quite a crowd enjoyed the evening.

HUNTINGTON LODGE, HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

That "mighty oaks from little acorns grow" is evidenced by the flourishing condition of Huntington Lodge, No. 795. Starting in 1916 with a membership of about 25, it boasts today of having over 160 members, and considering the local conditions, it is regarded as phenomenal, for we have almost every available person enrolled.

Our club room has aided us in our efforts. It is the hub from which radiate all social activities of the Jewish folk in Huntington and vicinity. It has been the means of getting the people together in social intercourse, thereby creating a community spirit that has even taken our Rabbi by surprise. He said recently had any one told him a year or more ago that the B'nai B'rith Lodge would accomplish what it has, he would not have thought it possible.

The crowning event of our career was the social affair we had in our clubrooms on February 6. Joseph Herbach, the Grand Lodge Secretary, and Leon B. Stein, a Grand Lodge officer, came down to Huntington for the purpose of assisting in the initiation of forty-three candidates, the largest class ever taken into a B'nai B'rith lodge in West Virginia. These officers said it was one of the most inspiring events they ever witnessed in any town of the size of Huntington. The talks by the newly initiated members were expressive of their interest in the work of the Order. A smoker was held after the initiation and an address delivered by Joseph Herbach, which was very masterly and appreciated by the membership. A feature of the afternoon's session was the "side degree" put on by our Assistant Monitor, "Lou Goodman", ably assisted by Ed Meyerson, Stanley Gold and Sam Wormser. Our Grand Lodge visitors had never seen this "put on" in any of the B'nai B'rith Lodges, and one visitor from Buffalo, N. Y., was so impressed and delighted with its amusement, that he is going to encourage his lodge to adopt it.

In the evening, a special musical program was arranged, and the biggest crowd of Jewish folks ever assembled under one roof in Huntington, was present. Refreshments were served and the evening's sociability was one not soon to be forgotten.

The crowd at this entertainment so enthused the officers that plans are presently being considered to build a B'nai B'rith Lodge and clubrooms of our own and a committee of the most prominent members has been appointed. Brother M. K. Hirschman is the Chairman of this committee, and his enthusiasm in the work of the Order, together with his appreciation of the functioning of the B'nai B'rith in Huntington, is sure to inspire the other members, and good results are bound to follow.

In Huntington the B'nai B'rith leads. There is no other institution or organization elsewhere, doing similar service. The functioning of the B'nai B'rith is the embodiment of all Jewish activities. That is why every Jew in Huntington and vicinity is proud of belonging to the Order. You can look for greater things from Huntington.—[Sam Abrahams.

NEW YORK ISAIAH LODGE, No. 1, NEW YORK.

At the regular monthly meeting of New York Isaiah Lodge, No. 1, held on February 14, the following resolution was offered by Brother Harry F. Mela and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we disapprove of the proposed law introduced in the State Legislature to make anti-Semitic attacks a criminal offense, as we believe that any such law would do our people no good and might react and do us harm, and we express our belief that anti-Semitism can better be fought by the spread of intelligence and education than by any criminal statute, and

"Further Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the General Committee of District No. 1."

President Loebenstein intends to invite a well-known speaker to address us at each of our meetings, which will enliven the gathering and cause increased interest in the work. We are also commencing a membership drive, which will, we expect, greatly increase our membership during the coming year.—[S. V. Eltinge.

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

"Actual Conditions in Europe Today" was the subject of an address by Mr. Edward A. Filean to the members and guests of Amos Lodge, No. 121.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the lodge for the first time participated in the exercises. The speaker was introduced by Mr. A. Benj. Werby, President of the Lodge. Mr. Filean said in part:

"The issues at stake in Europe are not merely European issues, but world issues, about which it is our duty to know as much as possible, so that we may be better equipped to bring them our most constructive thoughts.

"We may think we are 3,000 miles away from the European muddle; but today mere mileage cannot separate the parts of the world so that unfavorable conditions can be isolated. Finally the prosperity of our own country must rest on our ability to dispose of our surpluses. The result of the war in this country was the creation of a large amount of producing power. We cannot now scrap that power without a large amount of unemployment, and we cannot keep on using it unless we can dispose of our surpluses.

"Europe's vicious circle may be described about like this: Too little money to provide food, too little work to provide money, too few factories to provide work, too little fuel to run factories, too little output to export, too little export, too little credit or money, and you come back to no-money-no-food."

The speaker told of his many visits to Europe and the real conditions he found there.

Class Initiation.

One hundred fifty-one applicants were initiated at a meeting of Amos Lodge, held on the evening of January 24, 1921. The attendance of the members was one of the largest in the history of the lodge, almost 500 being present, including representatives from lodges of nearby cities.

Appropriations were made by the lodge for the relief of European Orphans and also to the Hoover Fund.

Judge A. K. Cohen referred to the good work the lodge is doing all over the country; David A. Lourie of Chelsea had for his subject, "The Progress of the Jew"; Alexander Brin, Editor of the Boston Jewish Advocate, told of the "Jewish Conditions of the World"; Leo J. Lyons spoke of the plan for a new building for the lodge.

The annual Purim Ball will be held in the Hotel Somerset, the evening of March 24.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT EVELETH, MINNESOTA.

A lodge of the Order was instituted at Eveleth, Minn., on Sunday, February 27, 1921, with 28 charter members. Brothers Chas. D. Oreckovsky, Hiram D. Frankel, and Gus. Loevinger, officers of the Grand Lodge, officiated at the ceremonies on behalf of the District Grand Lodge. The lodge has prospects of a considerable number of additional members. In the evening a banquet was held at which 200 coreligionists from Iron Range and their families participated. Officers were installd by Brother Oreckovsky who also addressed the audience on the work of the Order. Brother Loevinger spoke on the "Social Side of Our Order's work" while Brother Frankel spoke on the "Spiritual Side of the Order's Work". The Grand Lodge officers who instituted the new lodge consider the same well organized and prepared to assist in the work of the Order. The lodge is composed of active members imbued with the desire to carry on the work of the Order and its ideals.

LINCOLN CITY LODGE, LINCOLN, NEBR.

On Wednesday evening, February 16, Lincoln City Lodge, No. 377, celebrated B'nai B'rith Day. The guest of honor and speaker of the evening was Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Des Moines, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6. A class of candidates numbering fifteen was initiated at the business session of the meeting, which was followed by a banquet, in honor of the distinguished visitor. A number of members of the Order from Omaha attended the celebration.

B'NAI B'RITH CELEBRATION BY DALLAS LODGE.

Annual B'nai B'rith Day Celebration of Dallas Lodge, No. 197, was held at Temple Emanuel on Sunday, February 27, 1921. Dr. Wm. H. Fineshriber of Memphis, Tenn., was the guest of honor and the principal speaker. In his address he emphasized the fact that the overcoming of the present agitation in some parts of the country against the Jewish people could be brought about only through education and a more intense realization of religious principles.

Dr. Fineshriber traced the growth of anti-Semitism from its birth in Germany and its spread to Russia, then to France in the time of the Dreyfuss case, thence to England and over to America. He declared the Jewish people to be in the minority in the Bolshevik movement in Russia.

The work of the B'nai B'rith was praised and Dr. Fineshriber asked for the cooperation of the members.

The meeting was in charge of Arthur L. Kramer. The program, besides Dr. Fineshriber's address, consisted of an organ solo, "Overture to Stradella" (Flotow), by Mrs. J. H. Cassidy; introductory remarks by Victor H. Hexter, president of District No. 7, I. O. B. B.; a violin solo, "Hymn to the Sun" (Rimsky-Korsakov), by Mrs. Walter J. Fried; an aria, "Lend Me Thine Aid," from "The Queen of Sheba," by Mrs. David Lefkowitz, and the benediction by Dr. David Lefkowitz.

Dallas Lodge is actively engaged through its various committees in making arrangements for the convention of District No. 7 to be held in that city during the coming May.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

On Sunday morning, February 13, Memphis Lodge, No. 35, held one of its most interesting and largely attended meetings of the lodge for many months. Following the routine of regular business, a class of ten candidates was initiated by the degree team of which Mr. Emanuel Klein presided. Mr. Klein had the honor of initiating his father as a member of the lodge.

The report of Mr. J. M. Samfield, Chairman of the Anti-Defamation League Campaign, showed that nearly $3,000 had been subscribed to the funds of the league.

Mr. William Gerber, on behalf of the Entertainment Committee, reported that preparations were under way for an elaborate celebration of B'nai B'rith Day in March.

A resolution was introduced, expressing the sorrow of the lodge upon the death of late Brother Solomon Marx of New Orleans.

BRADDOCK, PA.

Braddock Lodge, No. 516, held an open meeting on Sunday evening, February 13. The occasion of the meeting was the celebration of Lincoln Day. Mr. S. Levin delivered an address reviewing the life and accomplishments of President Lincoln. A musical program was also successfully carried out before a large audience.

AKRON, OHIO.

Akron Lodge, No. 769, gave a ball and entertainment on March 1, for the benefit of the Jewish Orphan Home of Cleveland. A considerable sum was realized for the Home. The lodge was fortunate in enlisting the cooperation of every Jewish organization in the city.

LORAIN, OHIO.

At the meeting of Lorain Lodge, No. 863, held on February 14, 1921, Mr. Maurice Krohngold addressed the members on the work of the Order. A large class of candidates was initiated. The lodge is planning to have a dance on Purim eve, March 23. The lodge has gained an increase in its membership of over 100 per cent since it was instituted last fall.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

B'nai B'rith luncheons, under the auspices of Isidor Straus Lodge, No. 519, of Ft. Worth, Texas, are growing more popular week by week. At the luncheon held on February 3, 1921, Dr. Emanuel Toomin delivered an interesting talk on "The Jew in Modern Medicine."

CHATTANOOGA LODGE, CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

Friday night, February 18, was known as B'nai B'rith night in Chattanooga. Special services were held and Rabbi J. B. Krohngold of St. Louis, Mo., gave a very interesting lecture on the work of the Anti-defamation League. A large crowd was present.

On Sunday night, February 20, Chattanooga Lodge, No. 446, held a class initiation at Mizpah Temple. A large audience was present. The degree team putting on the work consisted of the officers of the lodge with the assistance of Brother Krohngold. Brother Krohngold spoke on the work of the Bnai B'rith which was enjoyed by all.

After the initiation ceremonies, a public reception was held in honor of Rabbi Krohngold. Preparations are being made to hold another large initiation on April 9 next, at which meeting we expect to have with us Brother Archibald A. Marx, of New Orleans, La.—[L. D. Cohn

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

Under the auspices of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, Michigan, an informal dance was held on Thursday evening, February 17, which proved the biggest social event of the year.

Dr. David Harold Fink of the University of Michigan gave an interesting address before the members of the lodge on Monday evening, February 7, on "Psychology of International Peace".

Under the auspices of the Social Service Committee, a concert was given on Thursday, February 10, at the Marine Hospital. Another concert was given at the House of Correction on February 13 and one at the tuberculosis sanitarium on February 24. Members of the Glee Club and other professional entertainers assisted in the program.

The Johnson Immigration Bill recently passed by the United States Senate was discussed and explained in the course of a debate held on Monday evening, February 14, between Julius Deutelbaum and S. J. Rhodes, under the auspices of the Intellectual Advancement Committee of Pisgah Lodge. Mr. Deutelbaum upheld the affirmative side in the argument, favoring the shutting of the gates to all immigration, except as provided in the Johnson Bill. Mr. Rhodes opposed the bill. Mr. Bernard Ginsburg, President of the Lodge, presided. In addition to the debate, musical numbers were successfully carried out.

"Ford's Anti-Semitic Propaganda" was the topic of an address by Mr. E. J. Pipp, former editor-in-chief of the Detroit News and Editor of Pipp's Weekly, before a large audience of Pisgah Lodge members at the B'nai B'rith rooms on Monday evening, February 28. In view of the fact that Mr. Pipp was the first editor of the Dearborn Independent, he is well acquainted with the views of Henry Ford and as a result thereof, had most interesting information to impart concerning Ford's Anti-Semitic connections.

Plans are now under way by Pisgah Lodge to secure larger quarters, so as to accommodate the big membership gatherings and attendance at every meeting.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT CHEYENNE, WYO.

Cheyenne Lodge, No. 883, was instituted on Sunday, February 6. It is the first lodge of the Order in Wyoming, and is under the jurisdiction of District Grand Lodge, No. 2. It starts with a membership of forty. The degree team of Denver Lodge, composed of Brothers Arthur F. Friedman, [illegible] P. Zeetow, Simon J. Heller, David F. Herlein, Milton L. Anfenger, who is Chairman of the Propaganda Committee of the district and to whom much of the credit for the establishment of the new lodge is due, and President Percy S. Morris went to Cheyenne to initiate the candidates and install the officers.

Cheyenne Lodge will undoubtedly prove a worthy accession to our fraternal family, and we extend to it our sincerest congratulations.

GARY, IND.

Lake Lodge, No. 831, on January 18 installed its new officers with an attendance of 300 members. Dr. Weiner of Chicago, Ill., was the guest of the lodge and spoke on the "Social Unrest." The lodge contemplates a drive for the Cleveland Orphans Home and the Anti-Defamation League.

B'NAI B'RITH OF BOSTON.

Mr. Edward Felaine addressed the meeting of Amos Lodge, No. 27, of Boston, on Monday evening, February 14. The meeting was open to the public and was unusually well attended. Mr. Felaine twice visited Europe since the war, for the purpose of investigating conditions abroad. His address was an interesting portrayal of actual conditions in Europe today.

The lodge tendered an informal reception to Brother Lucius L. Solomons of San Francisco, First Vice President of the Order, during his visit in Boston on Sunday, January 23. Those who were present were certainly thrilled by Mr. Solomon's address.

A committee of eighteen women met at the Lenox Hotel on January 11 for the purpose of organizing an auxiliary to Amos Lodge. A further meeting was held on February 25, which was attended by fifty-seven ladies and the auxiliary was organized and officers were elected.

Brother A. K. Cohen addressed Amos Lodge at its meeting January 24, relating his experience during his recent trip to the Pacific Coast. Judge Cohen mentioned as of greatest importance to him during his trip the high esteem in which he found Jews held throughout the western states.

Short talks were also made by David A. Lurie, who spoke with reference to the recent appointment of Lord Reading to the viceroyalty of India.

Mr. Alex Brin, Editor of the Jewish Advocate, appealed to the members to be alert and ready to meet the many various problems that are facing the Jews today.

Amos Lodge is endeavoring now to organize a Glee Club to function at initiation ceremonies, as well as to render selections at social meetings of the Lodge.

The annual grand ball of the lodge will be held on Purim Night, Thursday, March 24, at Hotel Somerset.

Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, was guest and speaker at the Weekly City Club Luncheon on January 20.

The lodge adopted a Jewish war Orphan in the person of little five-year-old Boruch Hersch Katz of Lemberg, Poland.

OWENSBORO, KY.

One of the most enjoyable affairs given by the Jewish community of Owensboro was a supper in the Vestry Rooms of the Temple on Sunday night, February 20, 1921, when the members of the B'nai B'rith were the guests of the sisterhood. Before the supper, a short muscial program was given by Mrs. E. A. Schloss, of Lincoln, Nebr., and the Misses Lula Rosenthal and Blanche Feuerlicht.

Mr. E. Starrels of the Hebrew Union College acted as Toastmaster and addressed the gathering on the work of the Order.

During the afternoon, at the meeting of the lodge, nineteen candidates were initiated and the election of officers took place.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA.

The first monthly open meeting, under the auspices of the Intellectual Advancement Committee of Omaha Lodge, No. 354, was held on Thursday evening, January 27. The large hall in the Lyric Building was crowded to its capacity. Mr. J. Cain, Vice-President of the Peters National Bank, was the principal speaker. Open meetings of the lodge will be held on the last Thursday evening of each month.

Visit by President Mannheimer.

Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Des Moines, Iowa, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, was the principal speaker at a meeting of Omaha Lodge on February 17. He addressed the lodge on the work of the Order and particularly emphasized results achieved by the Order through its Anti-Defamation League.

FOUR COMMUNITIES SEEK B'NAI B'RITH LODGES.

Officers of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, are in receipt of signed petitions requesting that charters be issued for B'nai B'rith lodges in each of the following cities: Springfield, Ohio; Hamilton, Ohio; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Ashland, Ky. A petition was also received from Hutchinson, Kas., without, however, the requisite number of names. Kokomo, Ind., and Hammond, Ind., are likewise planning to submit petitions for a charter in the near future.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

A meeting of the B'nai B'rith Speakers Club was held on Sunday afternoon, February 6, at the B'nai B'rith building. The subject for discussion was "Modern Business Outlook".

The Program Committee of Cleveland Lodge held its first meeting on January 25. The Committee is of the opinion that a greater attendance can be gained at B'nai B'rith meetings, if an interesting program would be provided for the regular meetings. It was agreed that the first meeting of the lodge take the form of a business session while the second be devoted to social entertainment and intellectual advancement.

Mr. Edward Lasker, former chess champion of the United States gave an exhibition at the B'nai B'rith building on Sunday afternoon, February 6, 1921. As a result of the recent interest taken in the chess activity, the B'nai B'rith Chess Circle has been augmented and in addition to having the city champion on its roster has also a number of well-known artists of the game.

On Thursday evening, February 23, the Program Committee arranged for a dramatic presentation by the B'nai B'rith Dramatic Circle, which has been in existence for a number of years, under the leadership of Dr. Emanuel Huebsch.

The Entertainment Committee arranged for a dance on Sunday evening, February 13, which was not devoid of the usual features, characterizing the B'nai B'rith dances. Admission was by presentation of membership cards only.

In an effort to cope with the considerable amount of unemployed, the B'nai B'rith Employment Committee has arranged a campaign with a view of cooperating with other organizations of the city. The committee hopes to raise sufficient funds to successfully carry on this work.

The B'nai B'rith Dramatic Circle held a reading of Eugene O'Neil's, "Beyond the Horizon", at the meeting held on Sunday afternoon, February 13.

Under the auspices of the Program Committee, the first open meeting of Cleveland Lodge was held on Thursday evening, February 16, when Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver addressed the lodge on the subject, "Prejudice—How to Meet It." The meeting was by far the largest attended one in the history of the lodge and those who were fortunate enough to attend, heard a most eloquent and logical presentation of the subject. Rabbi Silver outlined the history and development in the anti-Semitic European countries and its relation to European politics. He also dwelt at length on the various causes of anti-Semitism in those countries. He was of the opinion that the most effective method of procedure in meeting the anti-Semitic propaganda was a systematic process of education to enlighten Gentiles as to our principles and ideals.

Rabbi Louis Wolsey of Cleveland delivered an address on Thursday evening, Mar ch 10, before Cleveland Lodge on the subject, "The Answer to the Charges of the Anti-Semite". The meeting was unusually well attended by the members of the lodge and their friends.

The Entertainment Committee has completed a task of preparing its material for the presentation of the B'nai B'rith Follies and its grand Frolic which is scheduled to take place some time in the middle of March. The play itself is the work of Stanley Koch and David Warshawsky. Lyrics and songs will be one of the features of the production.

B'NAI B'RITH ACTIVITIES IN DISTRICT NO. 3.

Brother Edward Hemple, former Secretary of the District Grand Lodge, has volunteered to organize lodges of the Order. He contemplates visiting the cities of Williamsport, York, Allentown and other cities. His experience in the past warrants the belief that he will be most successful in his undertakings.

At the meeting of Hudson Lodge, No. 295, held on January 26, some 300 members enjoyed the address of Mr. David Bortin of Philadelphia, President of the District Grand Lodge.

Joshua Lodge, No. 23, at its meeting on February 22 had as its guest of honor, Mr. Bernard A. Rosenblatt, of New York, President of the American Zion Commonwealth, who just returned from Palestine. Mr. Rosenblatt spoke on "The Economic Upbuilding of the Jewish Commonwealth".

Bradford Lodge, No. 745, entertained its members with an enjoyable banquet on January 9, following which the installation of officers took place.

ANNUAL REPORT FOR YEAR 1920 OF WINNIPEG LODGE, WINNIPEG, CANADA.

During the year, 1920, the lodge has devoted its energies chiefly to Social Service and Anti-Defamation work, and in both these directions is able to report satisfactory progress. The activities of the Social Service Committee have been continuous. Close touch has been kept with the Juvenile Court, and proper attention has been given to all cases requiring such. While this involves a large amount of time and personal trouble it is not possible to give a comprehensive account, as the nature of the work is various. Over eighty Jewish cases came before the Juvenile Court during the year, by far the lowest percentage of any nationality or religion, and in every instance where such was sought the assistance of one or other of the Social Service Committee was freely given.

The success of the Summer Camp in 1919 was repeated this year on a larger scale. A site was secured at Boundary Park, on the shore of Lake Winnipeg, and one hundred seventy boys and girls were afforded a good holiday. The cost of operating was about $3,000, towards which the District Grand Lodge contributed $1,000 and the lodge $500, the balance being raised by subscription among the members.

The lodge has leased for ten years a site, three acres in size, upon which permanent buildings will be erected, so that a larger number of children will be accommodated in future at much less expense, especially as the equipment purchased this year can be used again.

A moving picture of the camp was secured through the generosity of some friends and this is being exhibited for the purposes of propaganda.

The Anti-Defamation Committee has been continually active. Early in the year the committee undertook a campaign of advertising which brought good results. Meetings were advertised and a statement was published on the principles of Judaism and the aims and objects of the I. O. B. B., a copy of which is appended.

Instances of discriminatory advertising, prejudicial "letters to the editor", and objectionable news items have occurred during the year, but in every case they were met with prompt action and dealt with to our satisfaction.

The growing habit on the part of the Canadian Lodges of referring Anti-Defamation matters to the committee of our lodge, led to the calling of a conference of Canadian Lodges on November 7, last. This was attended by delegates from all the lodges of District No. 6. Toronto, Vancouver and Victoria Lodges of Districts 1 and 4 were unable at the last minute to send delegates, but intimated their support of our project. The result of the conference was the establishment of a Canadian Anti-Defamation Committee of the I. O. B. B. with headquarters for the time being at Winnipeg. The official report of the conference is appended hereto.

We are able to report a net increase of fifty-one members, with about fifty candidates waiting for initiation. The attendance at meetings remains good and a steady interest is taken in our work. The second meeting in each month has been regularly devoted to intellectual and social gatherings with much success.

B'nai B'rith Day was held on May 16, when the lodge had the privilege of having as guests, the President and Vice President of the District, Brothers Dr. Harry Kraus and Henry Monsky, who spent two busy days with us during their Canadian tour, and whose inspiring addresses were greatly appreciated.

On November 21, a large initiation was held, at which a class of forty-two was admitted. Brother Gustavus Loevinger of St. Paul was the visitor for the occasion, and in addition to welcoming the new members with a lofty message on the purpose of the Order, he addressed a large meeting of University students.

Four members were removed by death—Brothers Myer Zeriff, Haim Finkelstein, Simon Good and E. R. Levinson. Brother Levinson was a past President and took a keen interest in the lodge. He was for several years President of the Jewish Orphanage, to which he untiringly devoted his best efforts, and in respect of which he has left an undying memory. His services to the community were many and varied, and he was dearly loved for his genial personality.

96.05
BN R.R.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

BENEVOLENCE — BROTHERLY LOVE — AND HARMONY

LIB.
MAY 1921

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII — APRIL, 1921 — No. 8

Anti-Semitism in England

A Study of European Antipathies

By Claude G. Montefiore

(Reprinted from the Hibbert Journal, London, England.)

THE growth of anti-Semitic feeling in England is one of the painful by-products of the war. Bitter things are said about the Jews now which would, I think, have been unheard of in any respectable quarter twenty years ago. One or two of the great London daily newspapers, and one of the most sober and venerable of the London weeklies, often indulge in disagreeable anti-Jewish observations and remarks. A famous monthly is even more openly and virulently "anti-Semitic". The causes of these phenomena are numerous and various; some are even inconsistent with others. But if you once heartily dislike anybody or anything, any stick will serve with which to beat the dog.

Racial, religious, and economic causes all contribute to the undesirable result. I cannot investigate these causes fully, for to do so would take far too long, and I should not be allowed the space. Moreover, I want to look at the matter in a somewhat different way.

European anti-Semitism largely depends upon the actual presence of Jews in the countries of Europe and upon their claim to, or their possession of, complete civic, religious and political equality. Let us assume that all the Jews of Europe chose to leave Europe and settle in an empty province of China, or in a large empty island in the Pacific Ocean. Let us assume that not a single Jew, whether by race or religion, was left behind. Anti-Semitism would obviously decrease. It would hardly come within practical politics. The hatred of the Jew is due to his contiguity and ubiquity; to his claim and desire to be a European, and to his actual presence in Europe. (For the sake of simplicity I am taking no notice of America). Few people hate the Chinese, so long as they are in China, and stay there. But if there were seven million Chinese who wanted to live in Europe in the same way, and on the same terms of perfect equality, as the Jews now live, or claim to live, in Europe, the feeling of Englishmen as regards the Chinese would undergo a change. So, too, if the same thing were to happen in the case of Zulus or Hottentots. Then, in spite of all the grand phrases which are used about the brotherhood of man, universal philanthropy, or the love of enemies, there would probably be much hostility, bitterness, and even hatred.

Now, hatred is one thing, but hostility is another. Hatred of persons is, perhaps, never justified; but there may, perhaps, be justified hostility. Let us set out some of the reasons why, in the assumed case of Chinese, Zulus, or Hottentots, such hostility and bitterness would arise. First of all, there would be the question of color. And with that would go the dislike of a large group of men and women of a lower or inferior race living within our midst and claiming civic and political equality. For it would be said that these men and women have other ethical ideas and ideals than ours, and that ours are higher than theirs. They have also other religious ideas and ideals than ours, and ours are higher than theirs. Again, if they marry exclusively among one another, they are an alien body in the State, whereas the citizens of a given State should, as far as possible, be homogeneous. If on the other hand, there is any mixture of races, the result is even worse. The progeny may, like enough, have the vices of both parents and the virtues of neither. Economically, the presence of the alien group is bad, because they tend to undersell, and to work under evil conditions. Moreover, they would probably have a lower standard of comfort, and would tend to become in numbers as the years went on. France, for the French; England for the English. There is now, in the most literal sense, no room for generosity to the alien.

Such would be the arguments. And can we say, with complete candor, that there is nothing in any one of them? A book such as Stoddart's "Rising Tide of Color" may be exaggerated, but that its fears and its opinions are wholly negligible, he would be a bold man who would assert.

The question, therefore, presents itself: Can the case of the Jews be rightly regarded as on all fours with the assumed case of the Zulus and the Hottentots, or even with the assumed case of the Chinese? Are the Jews to be rightly put on a level with those others? If so, there seems something to be said for anti-Semitism and for the anti-Semites. Hardly, indeed, is there much to be said even then for the bitter hatred, and for the often hardly yielded incitements to pogroms in Eastern countries, which distinguish the most rabid of our western anti-Semites. But there would be a case for the dislike of having large bodies of Jews on equal terms, and on footings of complete freedom, in European countries.

Writing as a Jew, am I to suppose that Jews are as different from Europeans as the Chinese, and as inferior to Europeans as the Hottentots?

Let me briefly go through the reasons which, in the assumed incursions of Zulus, Hottentots, and Chinese, would cause a more or less justified hostility.

The color reason falls to the ground. Jews are no less "white" than their fellow-citizens of other creeds. They are neither yellow nor black, neither brown nor red. Then comes the question of race. It is very doubtful how far the Jews of Europe, can be regarded as all belonging to one and the same race. It is doubtful what percentage of them, and what percentage of the blood of any one of them, could rightly be described as purely Semitic. Whether, however, the races, whatever they be, of which they are today composed, are lower in the scale of excellence than the "Alpine" or the "Mediterranean", not to mention the great "Nordics" themselves, I cannot discuss. Nor can I touch on the possibility that, among the infiltrations into the original Semitic stock that have happened through the ages, there are not, among existing Jews, some strains of all these various European races. What I think we may safely aver is that, be the original race or races of European Jews what they may, their blood has not prevented them or does not now prevent them, from acquiring the virtues and the faults, the ideas and the ideals, the capacities and the limitations, of the Europeans among whom, for such a very large number of generations, they have continuously dwelt. The difference of race need make no material difference in mental endowment or in ethical outlook. It would seem to be true to say that the original or basic Jewish race was not so far removed from the original race or races of Christian Europeans as to prevent Jews from being, or becoming, as good and valuable citizens of the European States as those in whom no trace of Semitic blood could be discerned.

Let us, however, look at the matter in a less theoretic and much simpler way.

It is possible that it may be accurate to speak of the Jews as possessing certain faults and certain virtues, but it is very doubtful how far these virtues and faults are due to race, and not far more due to environment, circumstance, or education. It is certain that both special virtues and special faults tend to disappear where the Jews live in a continuing environment of liberty and emancipation. In such an environment the Jews tend somewhat rapidly to acquire both the faults and the virtues of their neighbors, so that not only do French Jews tend to become different from English Jews, English Jews from Italian Jews, and so on, but French Jews tend to become much more like Christian Frenchmen than like English Jews, English Jews tend to become more like Christian Englishmen than like Italian Jews, and so on.

It is doubtful whether the Jew is by "nature" more of a materialist, and less of an idealist, than the European Gentile. His "materialism", when it exists, is due to other causes than to blood. The long-continued persecution, degradation, and ostracism, from which an enormous percentage of European Jews have suffered for so many generations, have produced effects in character which cannot be effaced in a year. It is indeed, wonderful how rapidly, in the sunshine of equality these effects—the bad ones frequently, and occasionally, alas! the good—tend to disappear. There are special virtues and special vices which persecution, degradation, cruelty, and hatred are calculated to produce. At the one end of the scale, you get heroes; at the other end, you get scum. When the immensity of Jewish sufferings is considered—for no people, no religious community, has suffered as they, and yet survived—the marvel is that the scum is as small as it is, and that the spirit, courage, capacity, and joyousness of the "race" have not been broken and dulled forever.

It is needless to specify the vices generated by persecution: the hunted, hatred, and despised animal tends sometimes not to show towards his tormentors the virtues of truthfulness and affection. Even when the persecution is relaxed, the human nature may be warped. It is the next generation only who can acquire the virtues of equality. But if active persecution is supplanted by active hatred, it is more difficult for these virtues to spring up. Anti-Semitism causes the very evils of which it then proceeds to complain. The alleged materialism of the Jews, their "loudness", their vulgarity, their love of money and jewelry, their ostentation, are also largely, though not entirely, the result of secular persecution and degradation. The Jew had only one idealism, his religion. Besides this he could have no other ambition, no other joy, no other relief from misery, than money and "external goods". When emancipated, and more especially when his religious belief is weakened, his unbroken spirit tends to rush to the full enjoyment of material things. But this tendency will disappear with better education, continued equality, the full participation in all other human idealisms and creations of the spirit, and, above all, with a religious revival. It is possible, though not certain, that the European Jew needs religion even more than the European Gentile—needs it, I mean, even more in order to keep pure and "spiritual" and simple and sweet. That is why the present writer is so tremendously keen on Liberal Judaism. That, however, is another story. But even as things now are, few will venture to say that the Jews as a whole are "morally" inferior to their Gentile neighbors. Nor are they physically degenerate. Give them a chance and they soon become fond of athletic exercises and games. And if there is one native and indelible tendency in the Jewish race, it is their affection for their children and the willingness of the parents to make sacrifices for their offspring.

Anti-Semitic writers and newspapers in England today make great capital of the part which, as they allege, has been played, and is being played, by Jews in the Bolshevist movement in Russia and in anarchic and anti-social movements throughout the world. The most frantic efforts are being made to ascribe the murder of the Czar and of his family entirely to Jewish agencies and to Jewish hands. That, in the event (which most decent persons desire) of the downfall of the Bolshevist rule, such efforts will assuredly lead to the massacre of thousands of wholly innocent persons, is presumably not altogether to the distaste of those who make them.

Now, assuming that there is a certain sprinkling of Jews in the Bolshevist movement and in the anarchic and anti-social movements all over the world, and assuming, which is by no means certain, that among those who compassed and among those who connived at the detestable murders of the Czar and his family was a small percentage of Jews, what follows as regards the general question of Jewish morality? Very little. At present, the Jewish Russian is, for his numbers, better educated than the Gentile Russian. In every Russian party which was, or is, antagonistic to the old regime, Jews were, or are, therefore, to be found out of proportion to their numbers. The deeper explanation of the presence of Jews among the Bolshevist party is to be sought in the continued persecution and degradation which Russian Jews have undergone. On the whole, the Jew is not revengeful or cruel, and there is a Talmudic saying that he who is unmerciful is no descendant of Abraham. But, as I have already argued, persecution breeds scum. If there are some men of Jewish race (not of Jewish faith, and not, therefore, by Jews recognized as Jews) who have yielded to the lust of revenge, is it for the Gentile, whose systematic persecution has brought this about, to marvel? Should the Gentile, by the virulence of hatred, add fuel to the fire? He who is ostracised from human society, and forbidden to be a citizen of the country in which he lives, may sometimes sink into becoming the enemy of all society and of every organized state. Forbidden the joy of patriotism he would destroy patriotism throughout the world. Again, the Russian Jew, like his Gentile brother, has too often abandoned religion. But the Gentile had other spiritual resources: the hunted and persecuted Jew has none. It has, moreover, to be freely admitted that the higher fruits of liberty—order, self-control, moderation—are not to be won in a day. Transplant a Russian Jew of twenty to London or New York, and the healthy wine of freedom may make him mistake license for liberty. He may use freedom for evil ends. It speaks well for the Jews as a whole that such abuses and perversions are exceptional.

In any case, such instances of "Jewish iniquity" are no evidence against "Jewish" morality. One might more legitimately argue that it is Jewish morality which has made them few.

It may, however, be said that, though Jewish morality is a high morality, it is not the same morality as the morality of Christian Europe. The states of Christian Europe need one and the same type of morality throughout their borders. Here the anti-Semitic argument from morality becomes inseparably mixed up with the argument from religion.

I do not think that this argument can be regarded as not worthy of full respect and serious consideration. Europe is Christian. England is certainly a Christian country. It would not be unreasonable that Christians should dislike the presence in this country of a compact group of persons, claiming and possessing full civic and political rights and privileges, who belong to a religion wholly different from Christianity, and with moral ideas and ideals gravely different, even if not grossly inferior. Such might be the argument not unjustly used against the Hottentots or even the Chinese.

Against Judaism and the Jews the argument has, I think, little value. For the moral ideas and ideals of Christianity and Judaism are very nearly the same. The highest things in the Old Testament, which, as a matter of fact, constitute the ethical elements in the religion of modern Jews, are in tune with the best ethical elements in the religious teachings of the New Testament and of Christianity. I do not deny that we find in the New Testament the command: "Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, bless them that curse you, and pray for them that despitefully use you", but it is hardly for the anti-Semites to object to a religion the sacred scripture of which does not contain these sublime injunctions. They, at any rate, cannot think that these commands are of any practical importance. There is, without irony or sarcasm, just enough difference in the ethical teachings of Judaism and Christianity to be of stimulating value; there is not enough to cause the presence of the dissentient minority to be of the smallest ethical danger or disadvantage to the majority. If the Jew can rightly learn to admire and to appropriate the ethical ideals and efflorescence of the New Testament, the Christian could rightly learn to appropriate more fully the highest ideals and delicacies of the Old Testament and of the Rabbis. Does the one need to take to heart the saying: "Love is the fulfillment of the Law"? Does the other never need to obey the order: "Thou shalt love the resident alien as thyself"? It is sometimes said that Judaism is this-worldly, while Christianity is other-worldly. The antithesis is false; but if there were anything in it, if it were true that Judaism was specially keen on making this world into a true kingdom of God, then Judaism would be entirely congruous with the prevailing spirit of modern Christianity. The truth is that the teachings of modern Judaism and modern Christianity as to this world and the next world ("the vestibule and the hall", as one old Rabbi called them) and their relations to each other have to all intents and purposes become the same. It would be idle to ask people with violently buzzing bees in their bonnets, such as the regular anti-Semites, to adopt any reasonable course. But if those who have milder prejudices would only consent to learn what modern Judaism actually teaches and holds, they would find that there is no ethical objection to the presence of Jews in Christian environment. The Congregational Union has recently issued an interesting liturgy for optional use in the Congregational churches. Among the prayers which they have incorporated is a long litany written not more than eighteen years ago by the late Rabbi Simeon Singer for the services of the Jewish Religious Union. That does not look as if the spiritual and religious ideals of modern Jew and modern Christian were so very different from one another. Would the readers of this Review like to have before them another brief prayer from the same gifted mind. Is it of Hottentot level?—

"Thou whose infinite power and wisdom are reflected in the infinite varieties of Thy creation we see Thy handwork also in the differences that prevail in the minds of the men. We pray to Thee for all men, Thy children, our brethren. Take them all under the sheltering wings of Thy love. And may we, recognizing that divergences of thought and belief are of Thine implanting, strive the more zealously to be one in charity and forbearance, one in the desire to know and do Thy will. Amen".

But even if the religious objection falls, the "foreign body" argument remains. The Jews refuse to marry their Gentile neighbors, and an unassimilated and unassimilable foreign body in the State is considered a disadvantage. The extremer anti-Semites find objections in both directions for it and when the Jews do marry "Gentiles", it is alleged that the purity of the Gentile race suffers. The Jew is once more equated with the Zulu or the Chinese, and the offspring of Jew and Gentile is regarded as the offspring of white and yellow, or white and black. I will not touch upon this objection, which I believe to be unfounded and inadmissible but as one who, for purely religious reasons, still desires the Jew to mate only with the Jew, or with the proselyte to Judaism, I will confine myself to the other.

Now if the Jewish reluctance to marry the Gentile had any other than a religious root, Christian hostility would be justified. For then it might be argued that this very reluctance proves that a Jew cannot be a perfect French, Danish or German patriot, as the case may be. But it has no other root than religion. A small minority can maintain its identity and distinctiveness in no other way. Let Jews intermarry freely with men and women of other faiths, and in a few generations Judaism must disappear. And a good thing, too, would say the anti-Semites. Yes, but those who believe in Judaism and its mission cannot say so. Yet the purely religious reason for the reluctance to intermarriage takes away its political sting. It does nothing to impair the fullness and the intensity of Jewish patriotism. To the Jew (except to that dangerous modern creation, the nationalist Jew), what makes a man a Jew is religion; and just as he who abandons or denies Judaism is to the Jew no Jew, be his race and ancestry what they may, so is he who has adopted Judaism a Jew in the fullest sense of the word, be his blood and lineage Aryan or Semitic. I will not waste words as to Jewish patriotism. It is difficult for an English Jew to write upon the subject with restraint. Suffice it to say that the blood which the Jews shed for England in the great war was no less gladly offered than the blood of the purest Aryan or "Nordic" in the land. Treat the Jews as equal citizens, and you will have no cause to regret it; you will soon have reason to appreciate the fervor of their patriotism. What is rather wonderful is that in thousands of cases the patriotism has been not wanting, even when the citizenship was in default. It cannot, however, be denied that the volume and intensity of anti-Semitic hatred have in some quarters inclined some Jews to despair and to throw up the sponge. Hence the growth of Zionism and of Jewish nationalism, which, at bottom, are a surrender to our enemies and to their contention that the Jews themselves admit that they cannot become, and that they do want to become, citizens of the countries in which they dwell. Whatever the future of Palestine, the welfare of the immense majority of Jews depends upon those who refuse to surrender or despair. Citizens we are, and citizens we claim to be; and not only citizens, but worthy citizens, who love, and mean to love their European country and their European homes.

A few words must suffice as to economic objections: These, to some extent, cancel one another.

On the one hand, the Jews are disliked because they are capitalists and financiers, lovers of wealth and of money; international financiers, moreover, who promote militarism, reaction and darkness. On the other hand, they are disliked because of their poverty, their low standard of comfort, their prolificness, their tendency to sweat and be sweated, to undercut and undersell. But they are also, as we have seen, disliked because they are the violent enemies of the capitalist, because they are wild and anarchic socialists and communists, the plotters of red revolution and of ruin. So far as there is any truth in one, or other, or all of these allegations, they are the fruit and issue of disabilities and degradation. What occupations and professions were open for centuries to the Jew except the lower forms of acquisition? When other occupations and professions are open to them, it is found that Jews are not slow to take advantage of these newer opportunities. They soon learn the higher standards of comfort; it is even curious that among the Jewish critics of themselves there are some who think that Jews have a tendency to raise this standard unnecessarily high. Give the Jews freedom and justice, and even a short respite from hatred and prejudice, and there is no reason to suppose then these various products of disabilities and persecution will not entirely disappear. If a group of men have no country, how can they learn loyalty to any country? Where every man's hand is against you, you may be tempted to hit back. It does no good but you may yield to temptation. And these evil passions can not be overcome by all in the twinkling of an eye. Is it too much to ask from Christendom, in return for centuries of persecution, a few years of patience? Certain ugly characteristics of the hunted animal—fear, cunning, untruthfulness—may have shown themselves in a few Jews who had not yet learned to love and care for England. But the Jew learns very quickly. Indicate to him that you want him to learn, that you will welcome his learning. Even as things are, the learning is going on apace. At this very moment, in the far east of London, taught by one of the finest Jewish Englishmen alive, the sons of the alien are learning

"To set the cause above renown.
To love the game beyond the prize".

They are learning

"To count the life of battle good, and dear
The land that gave them birth,
And dearer yet the brotherhood
That binds the brave of all the earth".

Give them only a little encouragement; a little surcease from suspicion and hatred; a little breathing space; a little time.

Anti-Semitism tends to make the people it hates at last worthy of hatred. For hatred will at last breed hatred, and suspicion will breed suspicion. Equality, fairness, love—these are curative. To make the Jews as like you as possible, treat them as you treat any other English citizens. They will soon resemble you—in your very failings as well as in your virtues!

Meanwhile the lesson for the Jews is always the same. First: Cast not off religion; for in religion—in a living harmony of religious belief and religious practice—lies your true salvation. Secondly: Never despair; keep to your old ideal —Englishmen of Jewish faith; nothing less, nothing more.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION IN PALESTINE.

Writing in the "Hapoal Hazoir" of Jaffa, in its issue of February 4, M. Smiliansky discusses the political situation of the Jews in Palestine and is not very happy about the conclusions he arrives at. Smiliansky cites various small incidents, happening here and there which he believes are the surest indication of the actual conditions. These incidents, according to the writeup show "that even now under the regime of Herbert Samuel, our political position in the country is by no means firmly established". The writer indicates that the attitude of the police towards the Jews is not at all satisfactory. In Haifa, anti-Jewish propaganda is carried on quite openly while in Nazareth they are organizing for a demonstration similar to that which was held in Jerusalem last year. In this centre Jews are also deliberately boycotted while the higher officials look on and do nothing. In one of the districts the individuals who organized the Jerusalem pogrom last year, and subsequently escaped from jail, is now occupying the position of Vice-Governor. Smiliansky warns his readers not to overlook these striking incidents because "the great things come to nought when these minor things do not support them. The great promises of San Remo are not great in the absence of Jewish soil, of Jewish police, of Jewish officials and in the presence of these trifling incidents. Do not look indifferently upon these petty instances. The man in the street the ordinary simple man sees all things reflected in these trifling matters and he sees that despite San Remo and all it held out, the country is still in the hands of non-Jewish police and non-Jewish officials and in a moment of disorder, the situation will primarily be in their hands.

TEN THOUSAND JERUSALEM JEWS CHEER WINSTON CHURCHILL, COLONIAL SECRETARY, CALLED UPON THEM FOR GREATER EFFORT. CHIEF RABBI PRESENTS HIM WITH SOPHAR TORAH.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Ten thousand Jews turned out on the Mount of Olives according to a Jerusalem dispatch to greet and cheer Winston Spencer Churchill, the British Colonial Secretary who is at present on an official visit to Palestine. Addressing the crowd which was gathered on the place where the Hebrew University is soon to make its appearance, Churchill spoke inspiringly of the promise held out in the Balfour Declaration and lauded the work already being done by the Jews for the development of the country. M. Nahum Sokolow, speaking in behalf of the Zionists, declared that not only do the Jews desire peace with the Arabs but that it is their ardent wish to live in closest friendship and work in constant cooperation with them. Chief Rabbi Kuk presented the British Minister with a sacred scroll conveying the blessings of the Jews for England and Churchill declared that he would keep this scroll as a precious relic in his possession.

Churchill received a delegation representing the Congress of Haifa. Replying to their request that the Balfour Declaration be withdrawn, the Colonial Secretary stated that that was now entirely out of the question but that at the same time that the government would effect a Jewish national home, it will protect the rights of the rest of the Palestine population. Later, in the day, Churchill received a Jewish delegation of ten members representing the Zionist Commission, the Jewish National Council of Palestine and the recently-elected body of Rabbis. Churchill told the delegation of Jews the terms in which he had spoken to the Arabs and asked the Jews to aid in restoring the confidence of the Moslem population and dissipate all charges of Bolshevism against them. He also suggested that the British tax-payers cannot bear the expenses of the establishment of a Jewish national home and the Jews themselves must make greater financial efforts. Dr. Ruppin, replying stated that the Zionists were prepared to raise all necessary means.

DEUTSCH ISRAELITISCHE GEMEINDEBUND ORGANIZED.

On the 23d ult. the large hall of the B'nai B'rith Lodge in Berlin, Germany, was thronged with three hundred and twenty-three delegates, representing over nine hundred communities, when the "Deutsch Israelitische Gemeindebund" was formally inaugurated. Professor Dr. I. Kalischer presided over the gathering, which included representatives of every section of German, Jewry. In his presidential address, he pointed out that that assembly marked an epoch in the history of German Jews. It was a turning point in their communal existence. Dr. Ismar Freund, the author of the Constitution of the Union, gave a resume of its leading features. It had been necessitated by the new government legislation. Its objects were the revival and strengthening of religious life by the maintenance of autonomy; the giving of financial assistance to poverty-stricken communities; the maintenance and foundation of communal institutions. The Union would act as the public representative of the Community in reference to the State and would promote the legal and social status of the Community and its officials. The headquarters would be in Berlin. The executive power is vested in a "Bundestag," a Council, and in various committees. The "Bundestag," which is open to both men and women, will be elected on the basis of one deputy for every three thousand voters. The Council of fifty-five will be elected in the proportion of one deputy to 20,000 voters. In addition, three rabbis, two professors, and three members of the theological seminaries of Berlin and Breslau will have seats on it. The various committees will have the overseeing of teaching, ritual, charitable activities and political and judicial affairs. Dr. Klee, speaking in the name of the Zionists, announced their acceptance of the scheme, subject to certain modifications. After a ten hours' discussion, unanimity was obtained. The meeting concluded with a tribute to the chairman, whose life-work had been crowned by the foundation of a union in which all German-Jewish interests had a common platform.

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

Toying with Firebrands.

NEWS, like charity, begins at home. There can be no doubt that the anti-Semitic movement is growing. The American Israelite in its issue of March 31, reports three cases of bigoted attacks on the Jews from Protestant ministers, two delivered in pulpits and one found in a religious journal. The Dearborn Independent evidently has succeeded in stirring up religious, race, and class hatred. It is as ludicrous as it is vicious to claim that there is no intention to incite attacks on the Jews. It is, indeed, the story of the madman casting firebrands, arrows and death and declaring it a sport. (Prov. 26-18). No one can see any sense in pointing out the supposed large number of Jews in prominent public offices or their large proportion in the management of moving picture theatres, unless either a legal restriction against Jews in public life and in civic rights is intended in the way the law provided in most European states down to the beginning of the nineteenth century, or the masses are invited to stage pogroms in the manner in which czarist Russia, Ukraine or Poland have tried to solve the Jewish question. The agitation has absolutely no sense unless the premise that there exists a Jewish world organization for the sake of monopolizing all public activities is granted to be true. This premise, however, rests on the often quoted yellow novel of the forger Herman Goedsche which quite recently was exposed by Herman Bernstein in his excellent book, "The History of a Lie", New York, 1921. Mr. Bernstein's book has the additional merit to follow the development of this lie from a yellow novel plot into a supposed convention under Zionist auspices. It is further stated in the Yiddish daily, "Zeit", of March 13, that the origin of the protocols can be traced to the reactionary organization of the Russian church which has its seat in New York. The main object of the invention is to rehabilitate Russian despotism by the denunciation of Bolshevism as a Jewish invention.

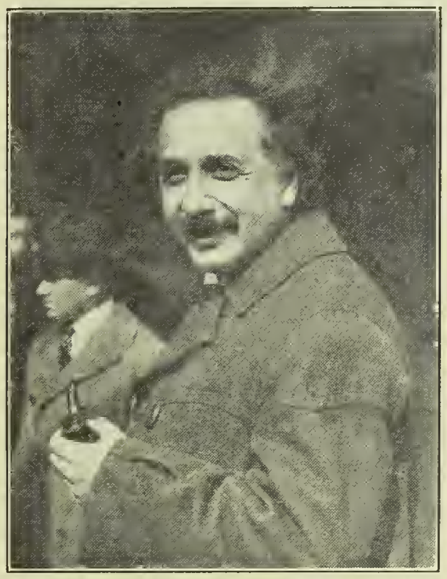
The Mote In Our Eyes.

The New York Times of March 29 contains two reports of arrests of "rabbis" by federal officers for violation of the prohibition law. Leaving our definite conclusions until the charges will be proven in court, we are unfortunately compelled to admit that the exemption of so-called sacramental wine is undoubtedly often abused. Unscrupulous people, posing as rabbis and reporting fake membership lists of their alleged synagogues, are taking advantage of the situation in a manner which is bound to bring discredit upon the Jewish people as a whole, a fraud which is especially dangerous under the present conditions. Orthodox rabbis ought to make a sacrifice, which they can make without doing violence to their religious convictions. The strictest codes of law (see for instance Orah Hyyim 472,30 ed. Wilna, 1900, 272,2) declare unequivocally that unfermented wine may be used in all religious ceremonies. A fairly modern representative of extreme orthodoxy, Rabbi Daniel Terni of Florence, who lived in the beginning of the nineteenth century, endorsed this view by a number of quotations from the works of prominent Oriental rabbis. (Terni's Notes on Shulhan Aruk I, p. 65C, Florence 1803). If at any time, it is now proper for orthodox rabbis to act upon the Talmudic maxim that Judaism declares obedience to the state's law as a religious duty. (Dina d'Malkuta Dina).

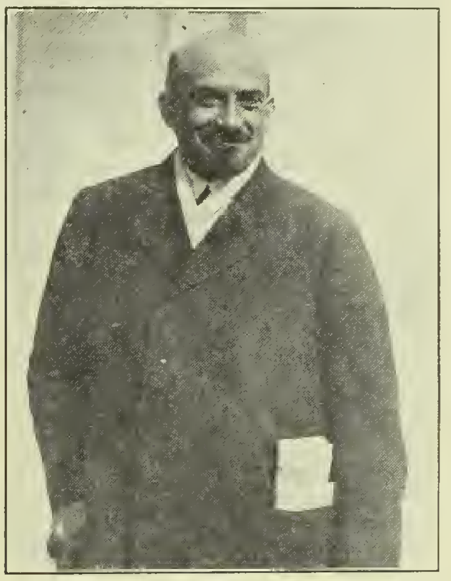
Poland.

Unfortunately, we have to chronicle again a number of attacks on the Jews in various Polish states of which one, in Briansk in which six Jews were killed, was committed by soldiers. Such cases formed the basis of an interpellation presented in the Sejm by the Jewish members. It may be readily admitted that the government cannot always be responsible for excesses committed by individuals even when the perpetrators wear the uniform of the country, but we ought to see at least an evidence on the part of the authorities to stop these outrages. These evidences, so far, have been missing. It is reported that in the course of the discussion held between the representatives of the Polish government and the Jewish members of the Sejm, the Minister of the Interior, Skulski, should have said, "The fewer Jews we shall have in Poland, the better it is for the country". The basis of the trouble is a general reactionary policy of the present Polish government.

Professor Boduen de Cortuna, a celebrated philologist at the university of Warsaw, was discharged for advocating the granting of minority rights to the Jews. A case reported from a Warsaw hospital, where a dying Jew was baptized against his will, reminds us of the times when Jesuits reigned supreme in Poland. A bill recently passed which excludes Jews from the right of buying timber-land is another of the various specimens of disregard of the Treaty of Versailles to which Poland pledged itself. Another fact, in itself small, proves the animosity of the Polish population. An agitation was started to change the name of a street in Lodz, named for Dr. Zamenhof, the inventor of the international language, Esperanto. In contrast with the declared hostility of the government to the Jews, we see that "the fellow citizens of Old Testament faith", as the old Polish legislation calls the Jews, come in handy when foreign countries are to be impressed with the justice of Polish expansion policies. One Alexander Hafka of Wilna is at present in Paris trying to make propaganda for the annexation of Wilna to Poland on the claim that the Jews of that city demand it. It is said that he intends coming to the United States for the same purpose. We also learn that conditions in the Ukraine continue as they were and numerous Jews are compelled to flee from Podolia, to Poland where they are received with bitter hostility.



Professor Albert Einstein, Zionist leader, and author of the Theory of Relativity, photographed upon his arrival in New York, April 2, on the S. S. Rotterdam. His scientific discoveries have astounded the entire world.



Professor Ohaim Weizzman, discoverer of T N T and President of the world Zionist organization, who was accorded a glorious welcome upon his arrival in New York, April 2, on the S. S. Rotterdam by Representatives of America's Jewry.

Germany.

The leading event in German politics, in which the Jews are also interested, is the German victory in the Plebiscite of Silesia. From the reports of the B'nai B'rith Lodges it is evident that the Jews of that district would consider it a misfortune, if they were assigned to Poland. The same impression is received from the fact that in the former Prussian territory ceded to Poland, the Jews are emigrating in large numbers. Nevertheless, the position of the Jews in Germany is by no means reassuring. The newspaper reports of a pogrom in Berlin were considerably exaggerated, as has been proven by later information. Riots in a large city under an excitement, which is only too natural, can not be taken as a proof of either official unfriendliness or popular hostility. These riots, which took place February 27, were a demonstration by reactionary groups and, as far as known, only one person was wounded. This is by no means intended to deny the seriousness of the fact that even such excesses should have taken place, but it is surely not good policy to exaggerate incidents of this kind. It seems far more important that a political agitation against the Jews, in which especially academic circles, including professors and students, take part should continue. The successor of Stoecker in the Reichstag, Mumm, interpellated the government on the poor "east Jews" who are the scapegoat everywhere. This interpellation was coupled with the usual complaint that these Jews are profiteers and food smugglers. The minister could reply that the total number of Jewish immigrants from eastern Europe is 11,453, of whom more than one-half were already expelled. It is well established that most of these people were hard working men, employed during war times by the government in mines and mills, but, even if this were not the case, one can say offhand, that five to six thousand people can not account for the food and housing shortage from which sixty-five millions are suffering.

The most depressing experience is, as stated before, the participation of the intellectual leaders in the anti-Jewish movement. In a celebration held on the fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of the German empire in the assembly hall of the Berlin university, Professor Roethe, advocating the return of Germany to monarchial institutions, called democracy a Jewish invention and descended to the lowest slang in attacking the Jews. He quoted among others, this slang couplet: "Wo der Jud sich mausig macht, wo der Lump sich lausig macht". Respect for truth has at no time been an anti-Semitic principle. The leading anti-Semitic paper, "Deutsche Zeitung", reported an address by a Miss Herzfeld on the degeneracy of the German woman as a proof of the arrogance of the Jews. For several days the same paper published letters from readers along the same line. It was established afterwards that Miss Herzfeld is not merely a Christian but a leader in mission work and delivered this address in a church under the auspices of the Berlin church authorities. Justice requires that we chronicle concessions made by the government to Jewish religious needs. The Minister of Agriculture allowed for the Passover holy days four and one-half pounds of Matzos for strictly observant Jewish families and two pounds for all others. As a specimen of internal development in the Judaism of Germany the following two items deserve to be noticed. The synagogue of Plau in Mecklenburg, was donated to the Catholic community. Mecklenburg was, until lately, the most reactionary state of Germany. Until 1869 the Jews were subject to various disabilities and Catholic service was prohibited. The reactionary wisdom of placing the Jews under restraint was at no time more clearly refuted than in the development of this state. In 1850 the Duchy of Melkenburg had over 3,000 Jews. In 1910 their number had dwindled down to 1,300 and the consequence is that most of the smaller Jewish communities have gone out of existence. Another interesting item is a motion made in the Board of Trustees of the Berlin congregation to establish parochial schools. The supporters of the motion were the orthodox and the Zionists. In the case of the former, the motion is quite logical, while the latter demanded this departure from the traditions of the community on the ground that Judaism is not a religion but a "Kulturgemeinschaft". This fact in itself shows that the position of the Jews has not improved under the republic.

Austria.

The reports of a riot in Vienna and of the anti-Semite Congress held in that city as a counter demonstration against the liberals, who celebrated the anniversary of the revolution of 1848, created again an exaggerated impression. This is not meant to underrate the importance of such occurrences when we contrast them with the event commemorated. In 1848, when Dr. Adolph Fischof was the spokesman of the masses clamoring for a democratic government, no one would have believed that almost three-quarters of a century afterwards such events would take place. Yet, the steps taken by the American Jewish Congress were a needless, and therefore probably injurious, procedure. The Austrian government, as Secretary Hughes states in his reply, could not be held any more responsible for such occurrences than the government of the United States could be called to account for the publication of the Dearborn Independent. It is of far greater importance that local and provincial authorities often treat the Jews as outlaws. A respectable Vienna merchant, who went to a health resort in Salzburg for recuperation after a severe illness, was visited by his wife. The latter was arrested for traveling without permit, although she had taken the precaution to bring her marriage certificate along, and sentenced to three weeks in jail. In the report of the case the judge stated somewhat unnecessarily, but with evident design, that the defendant had presented an "Israelitisch" marriage certificate. The section Austria of the Alpine Tourist Society voted with a large majority for the exclusion of the Jews from membership. As this involved a change of the constitution, which requires a three-fourths majority, the motion did not pass, but the supporters of the motion elected an anti-Semitic Board, which will carry out in practice what the constitution does not permit in theory.

As in Germany, the agitation against the "east Jews" continues in Austria, especially in Vienna, where in individual instances the expulsions are carried out with barbarous disregard of elementary human rights. Naturally, as in Germany, the claim is made that the measure is directed against profiteers and such certainly exist, as we learned from good authority by private correspondence. The subject was laid before the council of the League of Nations, which decided March 3 on an agreement between Poland and Austria. The latter country promised to suspend all expulsions of people who have applied for citizenship under the option clause of the treaty, who are sick and old, or whose homes were destroyed during the war; while on the other hand, Poland promised to give up her dilatory policy in receiving such exiles who cannot claim the benefit of these exemptions.

The peculiar spectacle of Jewish nationalists joining hands with their clerical enemies was presented in the Vienna city council. According to the law of 1868, which has not been amended as yet, religious instruction forms part of the prescribed curriculum, the religious community furnishing the teachers and the city giving the school premises free for such instruction. Formerly, the churches represented in the schools had the right to an official representative on the School Board. A new law was proposed which would deprive them of this privilege, the liberals claiming that it was up to the conservatives to elect ministers as their representatives if they so chose. The Socialist papers had their fun with the clericals who insisted on having a rabbi on the School Board, which they did, under the pretense that they were not fighting for their own domination in matters of education but for justice to all religions. The motion, however, was defeated by a large majority, the Jewish members voting with the clericals. A report of two incidents, which are a distinct disgrace to Christianity, deserves particular mention. English missionary societies are utilizing the terrible distress among the Jewish population in Vienna for their purposes. Such missionaries offer money to Jewish relief societies under the condition that missionary tracts be distributed among the Jews who receive such support.

Hungary.

It is very hazardous to say anything of the conditions in this country, while it seems to stand on the threshold of a complete upheaval. No reasonable person will believe that Emperor Charles came to Budapest without assurance that he would be given the support of the party in power. We knew even before that the reactionaries, at present in control of the affairs of the state, are outspoken monarchists. From the Jewish point of view the change could hardly be for the worse. The latest reports gave us again a number of incidents in which Jews were robbed and brutally murdered without any attempt to punish the perpetrators of the crime. It is particularly sad that the foreign missions in the Hungarian capital have all the time attempted to cover these crimes, evidently in order to discredit the communist government, which was supposed to have had a monopoly on such outrages. A Vienna paper informs us that Admiral Troubridge, on the day when the body of the Jewish editor of a Socialist paper was found horribly mutilated, signed a statement that life was as safe in Budapest as it was in London. A similar statement was made by the French representative, Foucheur. In reviewing the situation of the Jews in Hungary one must not overlook the fact, that the Jews were the main, if not the exclusive supporters of the Magyar element in the non-Magyar sections of the country. Now the Magyar aristocracy is leading in persecution. Even Count Andrassy, the son of the statesman who in 1867 introduced the bill for the emancipation of the Jews, denounced the Jews in parliament as the chief instigators of communism and declared that the "Christian course" of the present government was the only salvation of the country. These patriotic aristocrats, who are afraid of the Roumanian agrarian legislation which would deprive them of their large estates in the territory annexed by Roumania, go so far as to denounce the Jews of that section as responsible for the opposition of the population in that district against the new government. Rabbi Immanuel Loew, who last year was arrested under charges of disloyalty preferred by an apostate Jew, is still imprisoned awaiting trial, and the attempt of his attorneys to liberate him on bond were so far unavailing. The kind of Jew, who is welcome to the existing government, is exemplified in Ignatius Trebitch Lincoln, the man of numerous aliases, who was arrested in this country as a spy and, after having been reported as dead, turned up in Vienna where he was again arrested on the charge of having forged documents in his possession which he used for counter revolutionary activities.

Zionism.

It is evident that the Talmud (Berakot, 5a) is right when it says that Palestine, like other boons, will have to be acquired through suffering. The Arab population is continuing its agitation against the national Jewish home and recently laid its protests before the Council of the League of Nations. The British government, however, proceeds with improvements and the latest report informs us of a plan to make of Jaffa a modern harbor. A similar attempt along spiritual lines is the calling together of a convention to discuss a new constitution of the Jewish communities. The convention, composed of rabbis and laymen, was opened February 22, by the High Commissioner, Sir Herbert Samuel, and by General Storrs, both of whom began their addresses with a few words in Hebrew. The main subject for deliberation was the question of the chief rabbinate. Under the Turkish administration the sultan appointed the Haham [illegible]. Ever since the death of Chief [illegible], in 1906, the position was [illegible]. It is said now, that a rabbinical council of eight members is planned [illegible] presidents, one representing the Sefardic and one the Ashkenazic element. We have to await information by mail on the progress of the movement but have learned so far from cables, that Rabbis Diskin and Sonnenfeld have already protested against this council, declaring that they will not recognize it. On the other hand, the orthodox society, Agudat Israel, in Holland, has declared its willingness to cooperate again with the large body of Zionists, although various members were bitterly provoked by the action of the Socialist section, which conducted its kitchen regardless of the dietary laws. A conference between Mr. Churchill and Nahum Sokolow is reported in the customary manner, which does not surprise us in the era supposed to have done away with secret diplomacy. A curious effect of the Zionist movement, coming from Czecho-Slovakia, deserves mention. The new republic is governed by liberals in religion among whom the President, Masaryk, stands foremost. Numerous Czechs have withdrawn from the Catholic church and either declared themselves "free-thinkers" or joined a newly formed national church. The organ of the Poale Zion publishes an appeal that the Jews should not alone withdraw from the Jewish congregations but also should declare themselves as Jews by nationality. From Russia again we receive numerous reports of the persecution of Zionist societies by the Soviet government. Refugees from Russia coming to America or to Palestine unite in the report that the Jews who are supposed to have organized the Soviet government, are suffering persecution in all instances in which they wish to assert themselves as Jews.

Hovels in a Rumanian town. Jewish Children pick their toys from the refuse.

Miscellaneous.

A shocking report comes from the part of Czecho-Slovakia formerly Hungarian. The rabbi of Malacka, a father of eight children, committed suicide because he could not bear seeing his children starving and naked. A similar report gives us details of the death of Dr. Joseph Chasanowitz, who died in Yekaterinoslav in November, 1920, during an invasion by Ukrainian troops. The aged man, whose life was devoted to the establishment of a national library in Jerusalem, died of exposure and starvation. At his funeral only a handful of faithful friends were present while bullets whizzed over the cemetery. From Spain comes the report of the foundation of an international Sefardic society of which Senator Pulido, a Christian, who for years has been active in the repatriation of Spanish speaking Jews of the Orient, is Chairman. Ignatius Bauer, probably a nephew of the famous Abbe Bauer, the spiritual adviser of the late Empress Eugenia of France, is also a member of this committee. We must wait for later developments before we can receive this news with enthusiasm. A settlement of Jews would first of all require economic prospects and furthermore the sentiment of the population can hardly be judged by the sympathy of a few enthusiasts.

Hovels in the Jewish quarters in a Rumanian city. A girl, clerk in a government office, barefooted. It is Sunday and she economizes her shoes.

German Jews have been quite active in the publication of apologetic works which ought to stimulate imitation in this country. The latest is a reprint of the chapter on ethical teachings in Zunz's, "Zur Geschichte und Literatur", edited by Professor Elbogen, an active member of the I. O. B. B. The book was published at the price of 4.50 marks which, at the present valuation means a ridiculously small sum for American purchasers. The enterprise deserves encouragement.

The Hassidic community of the United States received a new accession by the arrival of Rabbi Asher of Rymanow, probably a descendant of the famous "Wunderrabbi", Mendel of Rymanow, who died in 1815 and whose grave is, according to reports, often visited by Polish aristocrats who, like Jews, ask for intercession of the saint.

There is, however, considerable orthodoxy left in Poland, for we are informed that a section of the Jewish congregation of Warsaw protested against the appointment of Dr. Samuel Poznanski as chief rabbi. Poznanski is one of the foremost Jewish scholars living and has never been known as a reformer, but the mere fact that he possesses an academic education and officiates in a synagogue which has a choir and an organ, although the latter is not used on the Sabbath, is sufficient to discredit him.

A brief cable reports the death of Nathan Samuely, the aged author of stories from the life of Galician Jews, which occurred in Baden, near Vienna. From Breslau is reported the death of Rabbi Ferdinand Rosenthal, who represented the conservative element of the Breslau congregation in accordance with an agreement made nearly eighty years ago when the conservatives fought the election of Abraham Geiger. Rosenthal, who was in his eighty-third year, had lately retired from office.

SLANDERING A RACE.

Burke did not know the method of drawing up an indictment against a whole people, but there are those today who have a facility for uttering slander against a whole race. That is, indeed, a charitable and restrained description of their doings, which in fact sound a depth of malignant turpitude as well as of fantastic self-stultification scarcely rivalled in the annals of calumniation.

There was occasion for surprise and for real grief when so respectable and intelligent a journal as the London "Morning Post" lent itself to the publication of a prolix serial diatribe against the Jewish people as the source of all the evil in the world. That was going beyond the limits of the eccentricities for which that paper had formerly been known, and there was sincere gratification when the "Manchester Guardian," in most masterly fashion, exposed and refuted the falsity of the whole thing a few months ago. We had been glad to think that the episode was ended, and that whatever motives inspired the "Morning Post" thus to degrade its columns had spent their force and would be felt no more.

That the gentle sport of Jew-baiting should be taken up by Henry Ford in his "Dearborn Independent" did not surprise nor disquiet us. It was only what might have been expected of him. He was just about the sort of man who would naturally take up the most crazy and destestable fad and make himself as offensive as possible to his fellowmen.

We must confess, however, our profound surprise, chagrin and regret at seeing the slanderous fabrications taken in hand by one of the oldest and most respected of American publishing houses and invested with the undeserved authority of its imprint in a professedly serious and permanent volume. Few publishers have given more of real value and high credit to American literature than the Putnams, or have stood for a finer American spirit. It is lamentable to add that few, if any, have stooped lower from that high estate and more grievously sullied their name with an unworthy print than they have done in republishing here the malignant drivel of the "Morning Post".

On another page we take pleasure in reprinting a detailed exposure of these detestable slanders upon the Jewish race, slanders based upon almost incredibly impudent forgeries and falsehoods and old wives' hobgoblin tales. They have, of course, the unmistakable German flavor, redolent of the days of Court-Chaplain Stoecker and his infamous Judenhetze, when he was the spiritual guide of William von Hohenzollern and encouraged that degenerate prince to conspire against his father and to arrest and blackmail his mother at her husband's bier. Because of that taint upon them it is all the more astonishing and disgraceful that respectable agencies should have given them currency in England and America.

Racial animosities, like class wars, are always odious, even when they have apparent foundation in actual occurrences or circumstances. When, as in this case, they are based upon nothing but fabrications and forgeries, and when they have no other motive than the most sordid, they are melancholy exhibitions of man's evil passions at their worst.—[Harvey's Weekly.

POLISH GOVERNMENT APPEALS TO LEAGUE IN BEHALF OF GALICIAN JEWS.

(Paris, J. C. B. Service.)

The Polish government recently addressed a note to the League of Nations, protesting against the expulsion of Galician Jews from Austria. In this note the Polish government pointed out that such expulsions set up a dangerous precedent for other states, and aggravates the misery of the Jews who are natives of Galicia and to whose welfare Poland cannot remain indifferent. Poland also points out that it is not in a position to admit these Jews now and if Vienna persists in their expulsion it will be forced to close its frontiers against all refugees, Jews or Christians.

The anti-Semitic campaign conducted by a group of members of the Austrian Alps Sporting Association, received a severe setback. The proposal furthered by this group to exclude all Jews from the organization was completely defeated.

The Religious Significance of the Debt of America to the Jew

Sermon
by Doctor H. Felton,
Lake Linden

AN OLD man is sitting alone with life's memories amid the gathering shadows of the eventide. Again and again his thoughts wander to the past and the never-to-be-forgotten promise of his God, 'In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed' ". Thus did the preacher begin his introduction, and then leading his audience by successive steps to the fulfillment of that promise he showed in graphic descriptive the faithfulness of God. Then connecting the Old Testament with the new through the second part of the text he showed that it was not an ingenious arrangement of word upon which to hang a theological argument or start a debate; but was the New Testament corroborating the Old Testament on a matter of vital importance. "Therefore", said he, "it must be true. Unfortunately that is sometimes overlooked. For example, in recent months a well-known business man, Mr. Henry Ford, has been publishing in the Dearborn Independent and in book form, a series of articles. I, myself, have received a complimentary copy of those articles in book form. I have read them. I make no comment thereon excepting this: My impression is that Mr. Ford would have shown greater wisdom had he refrained from publishing either the articles or the books.

"I merely mention the matter here at this time, not because I think the Jewish people need any protection from Mr. Ford or his journalism; I do not think so. At the same time, I venture the suggestion that in common fairness it may be well for every thoughtful man and woman to remind themselves again and again of several important truths that have a vital bearing on the issue raised by the publication of the articles referred to and similar propaganda. Hence the topic to which I have ventured to invite your attention tonight. Examine it carefully and you will discover that the promises made by God to Abraham have been in process of fulfillment through the ages and are being fulfilled throughout the United States and the world at the present time.

"Now, I am perfectly willing to admit that Ipse dixit rarely makes any appeal to thoughtful people such as we have here tonight. Permit me, therefore, to offer some proof of the statement made. As you will naturally expect, the financial, economic, and philanthropic aspects of the case cannot be dealt with at any length within the limits of a sermon. Suffice to say, that obvious conclusive facts prove that the Jews have in these matters taken a conspicuously important part. That being clear, we pass to the consideration of the religious significance of the truth enshrined in the text.

The Debt of America to the Jew for the Bible.

"I suppose there will be general agreement with the statement that more people have been benefited and blessed by reading and studying the Bible than any other book ever printed. The Bible helps folks in all kinds of unexpected ways. For instance, the other day a bashful curate found that the young ladies of his parish were getting too helpful. At last it became so embarrassing he left. Not long afterwards he met the curate who had succeeded him. 'How did you get on with the ladies'? he asked. 'Very well, indeed', said he. 'There is safety in Numbers'. Like a flash the other rejoined 'I only found it in Exodus'.

"Some people know so little about the Bible they have found safety nowhere. Yet it is one of the greatest safeguards on earth, as countless studious readers have discovered. In many homes the Bible is honored and revered. Actual figures show that more Bibles are being bought and given away than ever before. Well, how did the world receive the Bible? Trace it back and you will find it came through the Jews. Take the Hebrew Psalms, for instance. They have helped and comforted and inspired more needy folks than all the drama ever produced.

" 'The Lord is my shepherd'. That Psalm has been like a star in the darkened sky to more people than your clever mathematician could ever count.

" 'God is our refuge and strength. A very present help in trouble'. That has been like a beacon light shining across a storm-tossed sea to more sorrow-stricken mortals than all the deeds of the Caesars or the Napoleons ever recorded on the scroll of fame.

" 'He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty'. That ninety-first Psalm has been rehearsed by more tear-blinded, bereaved sufferers than all the classics of the sages, ancient or modern. As they listened, tears for them became telescopes, to bring God nearer. The raging sea of doubt, breaking with angry roar on the treacherous coast of self, hearing the music of its matchless appeal, sank to rest, while faith-happy as an exultant maiden at whose feet love has just laid a posy—climbed with unfaltering step through the prison house of doubt to the secret place of the Most High where the 'crookedness of the earthly straight and the flaws in the earthly perfect' stand revealed, and where men and women, losing sight of their best in the vision of the infinitely better, discover that life has ceased to be an enigma and has become a sublime possibility. 'In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed', says God. And the Bible is the proof positive that the promise is being kept. Therefore, America is in debt to the Jews.

The Debt for the Churches.

"The debt of America to the Jews is proved by the numerous churches scattered throughout its borders. Sectarianism and denominationalism may sometimes be a curse instead of a blessing. The story of the colored woman who desired to be taken to a church where the gospel was dispensed with, finds its counterpart in many places today. The result is that the weary seeker after truth, instead of obtaining the power that conquers passion and subdues the wayward will, gets little but an ethical shadow as illusive as a dream, as unsatisfying as an empty husk, and as unresponsive to the deepest yearnings of the soul as a statue to the last pleadings of love. Thank God that is not true of the church generally". Doctor Felton here gave a graphic description of Daniel opening his windows towards Jerusalem and getting a wondrous inspiration from the memories clustering around the temple there. The point of the exceeding helpfulness of the Church and what it stands for and the comfort it supplies in times of direst need, was further illustrated by the Story of David and Goliath and the sword taken from Goliath by David supplying his greatest need at the hands of Abimeleck, the Priest long afterwards. "That", said the preacher, "has been the case with countless people. In times of distress they have almost instinctively wended their way to the preacher and thence to the church. And the church has supplied them with the sword wherewith to fight the world, the flesh and the devil.

"That is the reason why tonight numberless people from one end of America to the other are glad to sing:

" 'I love thy church O God.
Her walls before Thee stand
Dear as the apple of thine eye,
And graven on thy hands.

" 'For her my tears shall fall
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and toils be given
Till toils and cares shall end'.

"Now, whence came the church? Who was it, for instance, that conceived and made possible the temple at Jerusalem? Was it not a Jew? And cannot the inspiration for countless other temples be traced back thereto? Therefore is the Church in America today the living witness of its debt to the Jew.

The Tithe and Business Methods in Church Finance.

"And not only is America largely in debt to the Jew for the Church, she is also indebted to the same source for the most businesslike practical plan of perpetuating the Church and the work the Church was called into being to perform. It has been proven beyond any reasonable doubt that Tithing—Christian stewardship—systematically and honestly practiced will do more to solve financial and other problems of Church life than any other one thing.

"To whom does the church owe the idea of the tithe? The answer is—the Jew. It was indelibly written on the charter of Israel that God is the giver and man the recipient. The tithe was an acknowledgment of dependence upon God's bounty. With the Hebrew the tithe was a first-fruits matter. The Jew paid his debt first. The first fruits of his field and his flocks belonged to God. He did not expect to pay with the left-over or the useless or the imperfect. With the Jew God received the first and the best and the modern idea of stewardship can be traced back to that fact. Today the church generally is only just beginning to realize the possibilities and responsibilities of Christian stewardship. Yet even so, the idea is gripping men and women as never before. In ever increasing numbers they are recognizing the ownership of God to all they possess. Take this church for example, last year we raised for benevolences outside the local budget over two thousand, eight hundred dollars, largely because we have some loyal tithers. The same thing to a greater or less degree is being done in other churches. Thus, the promise made to Abraham by God is being kept and the nations of the earth are being blessed through the missionary and other work largely made possible through the tithe.

The Most Ennobling Conception of God.

One Other Thing.

"Perhaps the most conclusive proof of the debt of America to the Jew is enshrined in the truth that she owes to a Jew the most ennobling and enriching conception of God. Some people may not think that very important. As a matter of fact, however, a man's conception of God is the most vital and far-reaching factor in that man's life. What a man thinks of God will, in the last analysis, determine what he thinks of sin. And what he thinks of sin must inevitably shape his life and fashion his character. Nor is that dogmatism. It is philosophy. The root meaning of the word used by the ancient Greeks to denote a man was 'Upward Looker'. The ascent of the race through the ages is the proof positive that the Greeks were not mistaken. The explanation of the wondrous search for God begun in the myths of the childhood of the race and the discovery—the grandest discovery man groping among portents and dreams and omens has ever made—or ever can make—is that man, at his best, is essentially a climber. At his best his face is always turned towards the heights. Ever dreaming dreams and seeing visions, the future for him is transformed with the radiant hues of promise until it becomes oftimes more attractive than the early morn, when the banners of cloud are unfurled to the breeze and the landscape is bathed in the colors of the rainbow. So it comes to pass that even the darkest night oftimes reveals a star and above the tumult of the fiercest storm man hears the bugle-call of hope 'Excelsior'—onwards—upwards.

"But, mind you, when you have traced that bugle-call back to its source you find it is God. Man climbs the heights because the soul of man responds to the call of its God—and not otherwise.

"It is easy amid the hurry and bustle of this strenuous life for a man to forget God. But when, for example, soft yearnings, like strains of exquisite music melt the hardness in his heart into tenderness and love, deep answers to deep, and an invisible hand draws back the curtains of disdain veiling the lofty ideals of the past; then, as a 'beautiful profile standing out in the gathering gloom with the effect of some rare cameo through which a light shines softly he beholds his 'better self' awaiting in majesty to greet him. Like Jacob he exclaims, 'Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not'. And ever afterwards that place for him is 'Bethel'—the gate of Heaven. Therein is the assurance—not only of the ultimate triumph of good over evil—therein also is the proof that a man's conception of God is the most vital and far-reaching factor in that man's life. The supreme importance, therefore of a right conception of God is self-evident. That in the last analysis is the greater reason why the debt of America to the Jews is beyond the power of words to express. Reverently do we affirm that it was a Jew brought up in a Jewish home, who gave to the world the most ennobling conception of God it has ever known. For it was a Jew—Christ Jesus—who revealed God to man as He had always longed to be revealed, infinite in love, pity, and tenderness.

"Far back in childhood years we knelt at mother's knee and lisped our evening prayer: 'Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name.' Even tonight, after the lapse of many years, the memory of that prayer is as the face of an Angel peering through the mists of a wayward past and calling a wanderer back to a new resolve and a new life. Who was it who first taught men to say 'Our Father'? It was a Jew—Jesus of Nazareth. And tonight throughout the United States and the world, men and women and little children in countless numbers will reverently bow the knee and say 'Our Father' and when they say it the text of the evening will be finding its glorious verification at the bar of human experience and the debt of America and the world to the Jew will be proven beyond the shadow of a doubt.

"Now, then! This is the reason why of all the rest. In the face of all that and much more that could be said, did time permit, is it not fair and just to give the Jew his due? Is it not infinitely better to recognize indisputable facts rather than condemn at the behest of prejudice or ignorance?

"One of the biggest problems confronting the United States at this time is how to assimilate and utilize for the general good the racial characteristics of the multitudinous nationalities seeking a home in this highly favored land, and transform each individual concerned into real worth-while Americans without any hyphen whatsoever—the type of American every person who comes here to live should be—hyphenless American, one hundred per cent American. That is the great problem confronting the United States. And it cannot be solved via biased journalism, or by any appeal to racial passion, neither can it be solved by the exploitation of one nationality at the expense of another. It may be solved by a reasonable recognition of the good in all and a determination to give everybody a fair square deal and a chance to make his or her offering on the altar of the common good at the behest of brotherliness and love to God and man. It will be solved by the application of Christian principles applied in a Christian way. The time has gone by for narrow, one-sided views on anything or anybody. In these days a man reveals his wisdom not by stubborn adherence to preconceived ideas but by a fair-minded, righteous adaptability to changing conditions and tactful recognition of both sides of the question involved.

A Plea for Goodwill.

"What above all else is needed in these perilous times is not racial enmity or strife, or ill-will, but peace and harmony and goodwill towards all men.

The Secret.

"Mark this, therefore, for it is vital. Abraham was blessed and through him all the nations of the earth are being blessed because Abraham found out what God wanted him to do, and did it.

" 'In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed' said God. But why did God say that? The answer is: 'Because thou hast obeyed my voice'. What does that mean? It means that obedience to God is the certain assurance of blessing from God. Not merely a blessing for self, but a blessing that can be passed on to others. It is, therefore, the solution of the racial problem and countless other problems. So I say, find out what God wants you to do and do it. Do it at any cost. And it will be with you as it was with Abraham, 'In thee—thee—shall others be blessed'. Thus the glorious time will be brought nearer when all men shall be brothers and when all shall in truth be able to say:

" 'I live for those who love me, for those who know me true,
For the heaven that shines above me and awaits my spirit, too.
For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do' ".

Speech Delivered by Justice John Ford

At Henry Jones-Lebanon Lodge, New York

THERE is no text like the Declaration of Independence for a sermon on Americanism. It is the real foundation of our government. The Constitution itself rests upon it.

By it the new nation was consecrated to democracy and our political creed defiantly proclaimed in the teeth of Europe and Asia.

The soundness of the political doctrine thus formulated has been triumphantly vindicated. For a time it was partially obscured by our toleration of slavery. But that in time was obliterated by the rising tide of American aspiration for a full recognition of the principles of the Declaration.

All men are created equal and endowed alike with the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. If you analyse American institutions in search of their ultimate life principle you will get to just that inspired declaration of national faith.

The rest of the immortal instrument is but an elaboration of this fundamental principle.

It is chiefly because this governmen, reflects those sublime principles of libertyt equality and fraternity that the oppressed of other lands have flocked hither. It used to be our proud boast that this benevolent country was an asylum open to them all. Recent legislation and attempted legislation indicate a purpose to close our gates to them.

I am personally opposed to such a policy and I was glad to see that Woodrow Wilson vetoed the immigration exclusion bill as almost his last act before quitting the White House.

I shall lose pride in my country if it obscures the guiding light which gleams from the Great Declaration, by permitting sordidness or selfishness, racial prejudice or religious intolerance to bar our doors against any of God's children who flee to us for refuge from persecution and oppression.

Advocates of exclusion conjure up dangers to the Republic from unrestricted immigration. I defy them to point those dangers out. After the practically unrestricted admission of foreigners for two or three hundred years to these shores, surely the alleged dangers should have manifested themselves objectively in evil results.

Surely those who would rob us of our proud and time-honored boast that our country is an asylum for the oppressed of all nations should have no difficulty in finding proof of their theory in this city which has so long been dominated by a large majority of foreign birth and parentage.

As shown by the latest census in our population of nearly 6,000,000, there are about two million of foreign birth and two millions more one or both of whose parents were of foreign birth. This included the white races only. It is from them the alarmists see the danger approaching.

But why has the danger not arrived? Why have not the threatened evils appeared during all the past years of the domination of immigrants and the sons and daughters of immigrants?

The answer is, there never was any danger and there are no evil results. Our city is the best governed city in the world, our people the most tolerant, progressive and enlightened in the whole country.

I am the son of foreign-born parents. And I will say to you now that if the present immigration laws were in force when they came here they would not have been permitted to land. They would have been excluded as pauper immigrants so poor and wretched was their condition as they fled from merciless oppression in their native land.

But they brought with them what this country needed then and still needs, a sound morality, willing hands, industrious habits, undaunted hearts and whole-hearted devotion to the land of their adoption. They reared a family of eight children, every one of whom except one killed in a railroad accident, is today doing his [illegible] honorable part in the work of the [illegible]

[illegible] that three of my parents' [illegible] served their country in war and a daughter is still engaged in war work in Coblenz.

Both my parents were Irish Catholics. I mention their religion because religious prejudice plays no small part in this anti-immigration crusade. They landed at Castle Garden about the middle of the last century. They were of the multitudes then seeking these shores of hope and promise to escape as cruel and hateful a government as ever afflicted any people, not excepting even the Jews themselves.

Their coming aroused the fanatics who saw in it black and threatening dangers to the Republic. The Know-Nothing Party came into being, born of hostility to this Irish immigration. The poor unfortunate Irish found themselves ostracised in the land of the free and met on every hand when they sought employment with the warning, "No Irish need apply".

The spasm of bigotry subsided in time. But it flared out again within my own recollection over the coming of the Italians and other peoples from southern Europe.

Then the Jews, escaping from barbarous persecution in eastern Europe, became in turn a menace in the jaundiced minds of these intolerant, self-constituted guardians of national safety. The lessons of the World War have stopped temporarily at least specific reference to the Jews as a menace.

No, I have not forgotten the silly piping of a notorious namesake of mine. But I recall that he was the one who went over with a shipload of fanatics to "get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas" during the World War, and I have concluded that he is wholly irresponsible except as the manufacturer of a contrivance which emphasizes the pleasure of walking.

In our day here in New York religious and racial prejudice is rapidly becoming a thing of the past and indeed need no longer be considered as an influence in our political life. We have only the task before us of being good Americans in full recognition of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of men.

After all, our principal duty is to strive to perform our civic obligations in respect of the municipal problems which confront us. For it is the city government which touches our lives most closely and has most to do with our common welfare.

We are rarely brought into contact with either state or national regulations but the City government is everywhere about us. There are the police, the fire, the health, the building, the charity, the street cleaning, the tax departments, and their agencies and regulations which meet us at every turn.

All these are committed to the city administration. Our interest in city affairs counts as ten to one as compared with those of either state or nation.

That our citizens of foreign birth or immediate extraction are good Americans let the work of their hands and minds testify in this imperial city of ours.

Is it a good city, a well-governed city, a prosperous city? Is it a desirable place in which to live and rear a family?

I shall answer those questions by asking you a few. Is there a spot on earth where you would rather live? Did you ever know one who ever lived in New York who willingly left it? And if he was forced to leave did he not return if he ever got the chance?

Why New York today is the queen city of the earth. It is an empire in itself. Economically considered, its population is not six but ten millions if we include the New Jersey and other centers of population which really belong to us.

Our city is the seat of learning, of literature, of art, of science, and of culture upon this continent.

Its unique architecture displayed in its awe-inspiring skyscrapers, its temples of religion and education, its art galleries and museums, its public parks and driveways, its water works and systems of elevated and subterranean railroads, its magnificent residences and palatial hotels have carried its fame as far and wide as civilization itself has spread.

Are not these things proof that our city is well ordered, that life and property are safe, that a wholesome moral sentiment prevails?

I hold in unspeakable contempt, amounting almost to loathing, those of our citizens who have prospered and gained affluence here in New York through the patronage of New Yorkers yet who seem to delight in besmirching the fair name of their home city.

It is not a godless city; it is a religious city. Its people are not ignorant, they are intelligent. It is not disorderly, it is orderly. Life and property are not in danger; they are safer here than in any other spot on earth.

My country house up near Peekskill has been broken into three times during the past ten years. No piece of personal property is safe on my farm there. Not in New York but in the rural districts, does crime flourish and criminals go unpunished.

There, too, will you find political corruption. A Tammany or Republican district leader would rank as a Sunday school teacher compared with the common brand of hardened and unscrupulous country politician.

By their fruits shall they be known. We of foreign birth or parentage who have made this city what it is and kept it wholesome, growing and prosperous court comparison with any section of our country on the score of real Americanism.

I am restive when I hear the insane chatter about the necessity of Americanizing our foreign-born citizens. My experience, study and observation lead me to the conclusion that they are among our best citizens. They come here to be free and appreciate the blessings of freedom. It is those who are born into citizenship who more often stand in need of Americanization.

In admitting new citizens I could never bring myself to lecture them on their newly assumed duties. I know they realize the responsibilities of citizenship and that they are the last to be accused of a lack of patriotism.

Every test to which they have been subjected throughout the period of our national existence in either peace or war proves that they are just as patriotic as those who boast of their Puritan or Huguenot descent.

In New York our principle duties as citizens center around our municipal government. We have here a set of local governmental problems which are crying for solution. Particularly is this true of the housing and transit problems.

It will require our best thought and study to solve them sanely and justly. They are primarily domestic municipal questions and are interdependent. A wise solution of the transit problem will be a fifty per cent. solution of the housing problem.

While the State has given us a comparatively free hand to deal with other phases of municipal housekeeping, it has jealously withheld from us the power to deal with transit and housing.

For fifty years we have suffered and our growth has been retarded because of inadequate transit facilities. Remember that there are still cornfields and cow pastures within the boundaries of New York.

We should have a couple of hundred miles more of transit lines, subway, elevated and surface, stretching from the congested centers out into the unpeopled sections of the city.

Public sentiment in the city has been demanding them vainly for many weary years. We have not got them because local passenger transportation has been in the hands of selfish private interests more concerned with making dividends than with promoting the comfort of their passengers or serving the general needs of the city.

The size of their dividends depends upon crowded cars and a short haul. The city has never had any real control over local transportation nor has it ever had power of its own motion to build a single mile of railroad.

The state has persisted in its policy of dealing with the transit problem itself to the exclusion of the municipal government. From the late recommendations of the Governor and the pending transit bills endorsed by him it would appear that the present state government purposes to go farther than any preceding administration ever dared to go in over-riding local sentiment and disregarding municipal contract and property rights—This notwithstanding that there is no municipal utility upon which the comfort, prosperity and well being of the city depends more than upon its transit facilities. It means a policy that gives the upstate politicians exclusive control over this vital city function.

That this is no exaggerated assertion one illustration will prove. In the Senate the Governor's transit bill is now under consideration by the Committee on Public Service.

On this committee are eleven Republicans and three Democrats. Of course with the present large majority of Republicans the three Democratic Senators will have just as much voice in the committee as any three little sparrows hopping about on Broadway, notwithstanding that they are all from the City of New York.

Of the eleven Republicans, just one out of the twelve elected here has a place on the committee. That is Senator Duggan a good man who can always be relied upon to vote in favor of his home city regardless of the party lash.

The other ten committee men yesterday decided the fate of this measure which is mainly intended for New York and affects our substantial municipal rights, and the privileges and the welfare of our people more vitally and in larger measure than any bill introduced in the Legislature within my recollection.

Who are these ten men who have decided in the first instance how and where we shall be transported and what price we shall pay for a ride? Did we have a vote in their election? Will they have to come back to us to account to us for their acts? Let us see:

Should I take you through the other committees of the legislature you would find similar conditions prevailing—the statesmen from Hay Corners and Pumpkin Hollow dictating our municipal fate in callous disregard of our wishes.

I ask you in all seriousness whether this is democratic government according to the Declaration of Independence? That instrument declared that there can be no just government without the consent of the governed. And the fundamental tenet of American political institutions is that laws should be made by the elected representatives of the people, and that the law makers should be responsible to the people who are affected by the laws enacted.

What interest has Arcade or Mohawk or Rushville in the transit bill which proposes to abrogate the contracts between our local railroad companies and the city?

In reliance upon the validity of those contracts we have obligated ourselves to the extent of some $300,000,000 of the city's money.

Here is a question thrown square in our faces that we can not shirk or evade. It should stir into activity every earnest mind and call forth the highest patriotic efforts from every citizen of New York to safeguard her rights and promote her prosperity and welfare.

It is a clarion call for our Americanism to assert itself in behalf of our beloved city which has been so good to us and done so much for us and is entitled to our uttermost loyalty and devotion.

AMALGAMATED PITTSBURGH LODGE I. O. B. B.

The membership drive for one thousand members for the Amalgamated Pittsburgh Lodge of the I. O. B. B. is still progressing, and an appeal is being sent to members by the officers of the Membership Committee, asking that each member who has not yet sent in an application, secure at least one new member for the consolidated lodge. If this is done, the one thousand mark will be passed. Those in charge of the drive feel that in consideration of the very good work already accomplished, this assistance should be accorded them.

As some of the members have secured nearly fifty applications, it is felt that when the list of workers is published, the name of every member in Pittsburgh should appear as having secured at least one new member.

JEWISH REFUGEES IN POLAND WILL NOT BE SENT BACK TO SOVIET RUSSIA.

Warsaw, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

A conference of officials from the various provinces of Poland which has just been held here adopted a proposal of M. Prilutzki, that after the Ukrainian refugees have been registered, they should be permitted to remain in such parts of Poland as they may find themselves and that in any event they are not to be forced across the Bolshevist frontier. The conference also decided that after April 15, the provincial authorities should place no difficulties in the way of Jews desiring to make a temporary visit out of the country.

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, March 17, 1921.

FOR two or three years past Anglo-Jewry has been the richer by the settlement in its midst of a number of Russian Jews who for various reasons have found it well to leave Russia. Many of them are quite well-to-do; all of them are energetic and active, and are constantly doing something in one department or other of public work. Like most Russians they are intellectuals, some real and others artificial; and for a year or two past they have had a private circle, meeting in full evening dress at different houses, to drink tea, hear a lecture on some topic of the day, Jewish or general, and then talk about it. They certainly give one an impression of being exotics in a land of prose; nevertheless many of them are quite keen business men and actually carry on a huge volume of trade, not excluding that of a highly speculative character. Unquestionably, they form a well-marked group, rather bright in colour, in our midst, and their influence is spreading. A fair sprinkling of them have joined the London Lodge; many of them are interested in the Federation of Ukrainian Jews, which serves two purposes, the first to inform public opinion as to the inhuman sufferings of the Jews in the Ukraine and the second to provide financial and other aid for the wretched victims. They are so much in earnest, these people of the Federation of Ukrainian Jews, that they have obtained the sympathy and cooperation of many members of the Anglo-Jewish Community who belong to what may be termed the ancient strain. But the Federation deserves to succeed, and Dr. Jochelman, a respected member of the London Lodge, is practically giving up the whole of his life and strength of the assistance of the Ukrainian Jews.

The same people are to be met with in other directions, too. The recently formed Anglo-Lithuanian Society was originated by these Russian Jews, and whenever a lecture is announced at a Jewish gathering they flock to it in strength. Recently the Jewish Historical Society of England arranged with Dr. Vishnitzer to deliver a course of lectures on the position and the organization of the Jews in Eastern Europe, and our Russian brethren formed the bulk of the audience. Some of them are found in higher quarters. In the re-organization of the Executive of the Zionist Movement one of their number, no less a person than Mr. Vladimir Jabotinsky, whose name has become famous all over the world, has been appointed a member. Some critics say this appointment is the last nail in the coffin in which the Zionist organization will be buried; others, who are more hopeful declare that Mr. Jabotinsky will be the prince whose kiss will wake the sleeping beauty into life. It remains to be seen which of these soothsayers has greater insight. But there is little doubt that the appointment was made to win the support of Russian Jews, both in London and abroad, and there is little doubt, too, that for a time at least that support will be forthcoming. Serious-minded people, however, believe that Mr. Jabotinsky is the stormy petrel of Zionist politics.

Another sphere of activity cultivated by the Russian colony is the Society for the Promotion of Trade and Agriculture among the Jews in Russia, a long name usually shortened into O. R. T. The name of this society sufficiently describes its objects, and if it works along right lines it ought certainly to be worthy of much sympathy and support. One curious thing in connection with all these movements in which the Russians are interested is the remarkable English documents which they produce. Naturally they desire to write in English, and they do. But what an English! It surely ought to be possible to get an English-speaking person to revise the publications into something like a fair standard of style. A report of the O. R. T., for instance, has recently come into our hands which was rendered amusing by its foreign spirit and foreign expressions, although the words were in English characters. But perhaps after all that is a small matter which will be improved in the course of time.

It must be admitted that this foreign colony is able, gifted, restless, and bright, a veritable beauty spot in a drab picture. Yet the drab picture is not so drab either. During the last month the Earl of Reading has been feted and dined by all manner of organizations and societies and even individuals who occupy public places. He is to sail for India before this month is out, and only this week he was entertained to a farewell banquet by the Bench and the Bar of England. Here you could see collected the best brains and the best oratory in the country, judges and lawyers, politicians and public men of all kinds, who came to do honour to one who is universally beloved for his courtesy, his sympathy and his strong sense of justice. Whatever one may say about the first two qualities, it is highly likely that the third is distinctly Jewish in character. Speaking of the Bar brings to mind the honour which was conferred on Mr. H. S. Q. Henriques, who has just been made a King's Counsel. To be a K. C. is an honour to which many barristers aspire, but which only those achieve who combine merit and popularity. Mr. Henriques is one of the finest minds in the Community. He is a Past President of the Jewish Historical Society, the author of a couple of books printed by that body, an active member of the Jewish Board of Deputies, and chairman of the Council of the Upper Berkeley Street Synagogue, altogether, then, a man who stands high in Anglo-Jewry. We already have a number of Jews who are K. C.'s; Mr. Henriques is distinctly a worthy addition to the group.

The Jewish Lads' Brigade is once more coming to the fore with its old distinctions and its old spirit. To show that it has not fallen from its old standards—indeed, that it has risen to standards yet higher, we need only instance the fact that the Brigade recently won the Boxing Championship of Great Britain. The Prince of Wales presented his shield to the team of the Jewish Lads' Brigade at St. James' Place, two days after they won the championship, and it has been arranged that on March 22, His Royal Highness will inspect the Brigade at its headquarters in East London. The Brigade is a force for good in our East side of the metropolis, teaching, as it does, manliness and discipline to our growing boys, who need the teaching greatly. One may say that teaching of whatever kind or quality which makes for restraint and self-control, must of necessity be good. That is why the Jewish Lads' Brigade is a success; at any rate it provides something which in normal conditions might supplement what the Jewish Religious Education Board ought to provide, but cannot always do adequately for lack of means. Years ago those who first started the Jewish Club Movement for Boys in the East End of London little dreamt that their puny plant would grow into a hardy tree and do credit to those who nurtured it in the beginning. We now have in London not only Boys' Clubs for junior boys but an Old Boys' Club, as it is called, for those who become too old for the junior clubs, and who normally gravitate towards this institution. "Old boys" the members truly are, some of them even with boys of their own, but all have been connected with the Jewish Club movement from the very first. The Old Boys' Club, too, takes a great interest in the Friendly Society movement; indeed, it possesses one of the strongest local units of that movement in the country.

The Union of Jewish Women held its annual meeting during the last month, and certainly showed a good deal of enterprise in adopting a course which ought to be followed by other organizations, and which has long been adopted by the London Lodge. Hitherto the Union has had a President for many years in succession. Now its constitution provides that no president shall hold office for more than two years, and Mrs. Myer Spielman, one of the ablest of our women workers, has set a fine example by insisting that the letter and the spirit of the constitution shall be observed, and by laying down her office voluntarily to make room for a new President. That new President is Mrs. Alfred Eichholz, the elder daughter of the late Chief Rabbi, Dr. Herman Adler. We of the London Lodge recognize what a boon it is to have a new President each session. For one thing it makes members keen; for another it brings fresh energy and zeal to the work of the lodge. In this respect the London Lodge stands in marked contrast to the majority of the communal institutions in Anglo-Jewry, where, as a rule, men hold office almost continuously, and where, as a consequence, there is a tendency for atrophy to set in. So ingrained is this policy that when presidents of institutions threaten to resign because their policy is not generally acceptable, the rank and file usually crawl on their knees in homage, and beg the existing office-holder to continue. At any rate, the Union of Jewish Women shows a finer spirit. The report of the work for the past year includes a reference to the efforts that are being made to secure the franchise for women in the United Synagogue. The Union has also been instrumental in raising funds for various needy institutions, including the Women's Million Shilling Fund on behalf of the Jewish War Memorial. The Union serves as a labour bureau, finding positions for women and girls who need to earn their living, and provides training in all manner of activities, —social work, gardening, librarianship, and so on.

The London Community is once more to have its full number of synagogues complete. The synagogue in St. John's Wood a comfortable residential quarter in the northwest of London, had to be closed some little while back because the foundations were found to be insecure. The structure has been renovated and strengthened, and as a matter of fact will now have larger seating accommodation than before. Perhaps the local authorities will wait for the inauguration of the new building until the return of the Chief Rabbi, in the late summer. It is curious to note that the absence of the Chief Rabbi is scarcely observed; communal activities proceed pretty much as usual, and one can only hope that the holiday which the Chief Rabbi is at present enjoying, the additional time vouchsafed to him for thought and reflection, and his enlarged experience of men and affairs under other skies than our own, will make in the long run for the benefit of the Anglo-Jewish Community.

Among the institutions that have the interest of the Community very much at heart must be placed the London Lodge of our own Order. We propose in the near future to arrange a series of symposia for the thorough discussion of various problems affecting the community. It is so good to be able to report that the younger members of the lodge, of whom, by the way, we are getting quite a fair number, are specially keen about this part of our work. Altogether there is a very charming spirit in the lodge and among its members, and all that is really lacking is a home of our own. At present we dream of this; sooner or later we shall be taking steps to get it; and, finally, we hope to possess a centre in London which shall be the gathering place of all that is good and helpful and serious in Anglo-Jewish life.

ANTI-SEMITES AT MUNICH BREAK UP JEWISH GATHERING. BERLIN TO HAVE ANTI-SEMITIC DEMONSTRATION.

Berlin, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Anti-Semites broke up a gathering of Jewish students who were attending a lecture by Reverend Dr. Jacob at Munich according to a dispatch from that city

Anti-Semites in this city are making preparations for a monster demonstration to be carried out next Sunday. The demonstration will be directed against the Allies as well as the Jews and will be a protest against the Allied Conference of London.

PALESTINE NATIONAL COUNCIL OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Sir Herbert Samuel has announced that all Government departments in Palestine will be instructed to officially recognize the Jewish National Council as the representative body of the Jewish community in Palestine, according to a Jerusalem dispatch. The High Comissioner also announced his intention of regularly conferring with the heads of the National Council.

PASSOVER.

Passover, the Jewish festival of Liberty, known in Hebrew as "Pesach," begins this year on Friday evening, April 22. The concluding day of the celebration will be held on Saturday, April 30, among families adhering strictly to traditional regulations, while more liberal Jews conclude the Passover week on Friday, April 29.

Passover in the light of its origin was an agricultural feast, but at a later period became disassociated in part from its primitive nature—worship ceremonialism and was identified with an epochal historical circumstance, which invested the festival with a new and highly significant spiritual message.

Associated as the Passover is, with the Exodus of the Children of Israel from Egypt, it recalls the many miracles which were wrought in their behalf by the never-slumbering Guardian and Keeper of Israel. The delivery of the Hebrews from Egypt's yoke of slavery released them from bondage and darkness and gave them instead freedom and light. The memory of the enslavement of Israel is revived and the scenes reviewed where the kindred of Joseph were degraded to slave-labor in the very country upon which their illustrious ancestor had showered rich blessings. Their enslavement of body afflicted likewise their souls. They sank into the grievous thraldom of despair.

The deliverance of the Children of Israel from Egypt was assurance that their supplications had been heard on High and their chains of bondage broken by the God of their fathers.

The memory of this redemption is revived in the Passover festival where it is utilized as a symbol of a freedom more embracing than the escape of the Children of Israel from tyranny and oppression. It becomes at the same time a token of humanity's final triumph over all oppressors, tyrants and bigots.

During the Passover week, Jewish families eat Matzoth, unleavened bread, which is one of the several symbols used in the observance of the festival to bring home the recollection of oppression and the eventual triumph of humanity from the tyranny of injustice and iniquity.

The festival beginning on the evening of the day previous to the holiday, is known as the Seder and inaugurates the Passover celebration. This service is a beautiful home ceremony in which all members of the family participate.

The special ritual used for this Seder service is called the "Hagadah" and recites the events of the Exodus by means of quaint songs and stories, that awaken within the soul of old and young, a love of liberty and strengthens the faith of the present generation in the priestly mission of Israel in the world.

Observed in a spirit of gladness, this spring festival of liberty has inspired the Jew to trust in the eventual reign of righteousness. For this reign of righteousness the Jew believes himself to have been appointed to prepare, as the final goal of all mankind.

GERMAN GENERAL CONDEMNS ANTI-SEMITISM.

General Freiher of Hamburg has delivered a strong address of protest against the growing tide of anti-Semitism in Germany, alleging that anti-Semitism has been responsible for the constant weakening of Germany's international position.

CATHOLICS COME FIRST IN THIS OFFICE.

Warsaw, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

An order has been issued by Major Pku and was circulated last Friday directing that in future Catholics will be attended to before all other visitors at the office of the Polish Minister of Finance.

STATISTICS OF ROUMANIAN JEWS.

According to official statistics, there are now in Roumania, including the new provinces recently taken over by Roumania, around 600,000 Jews, of whom 267,000 live in Bessarabia, 102,000 in Bukovina, 64,074 in Transylvania and 14,529 in the Banat.

A new stream of Jewish refugees from Ukrainia is reported to be arriving in Bukovinia in a Czernowitz dispatch. The refugees are in a most helpless state and the Jewish community is utterly at a loss to help them.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1921
New Moon	April 9
Fast of the First Born	April 22
Passover, first day	April 23
Passover, second day	April 24
Passover, eighth day	April 30
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

THE SEASON OF OUR FREEDOM.

This year the Passover week comes rather belated. It is almost a month since our neighbors celebrated their Easter. The synagogue frequenter, who through the year is predominantly feminine, has had an opportunity to display her spring finery. Perhaps she has delayed the spring house-cleaning to comport with the Jewish calendar, and perhaps not, as things go these days. Of course, no man can predict the weather, editorials being written much in advance. But Passover has long since ceased to be a matter of the weather, a mere spring festival. We proclaim it and sanctify it over a cup of what we hope may be real wine, as the day of our freedom. Although we be all learned men, it is incumbent upon us to rehearse the ancient story of our freedom. Our religion is of the redemptive kind. "Our Redeemer liveth", is the glad cry of our liturgic poet, unaware of evil-minded cavillers at this late date who begrudge us the capital R. Yes, our Redeemer is none but God. It is He who passed over and redeemed us out of bondage. He delegated the work of redemption to none else. Judaism has no room for vicarious redeemers. Whether in matters of the individual conscience, when we stand perplexed and confused, or in matters of our people's tribulations which weigh us all down and depress us, we look up to God and repose our trust in Him alone. He works through human agencies, He works through great human movements, but exceedingly wonderful is His work. When the hour of redemption strikes, it is miraculous. When the darkness is densest, when tribulation is greatest, the light that pierces the clouds is so more dazzling, so more sudden, so more warming and comforting. The night upon which the feast is sanctified is to us a reminder, not merely of the one outstanding act of redemption, by which we became a people consecrated to divine service. The night is always featured as evil. When light was, God saw that it was good. The night of Passover was charged for our fathers with many ill-bodings. For the destroyer was at the gate. And he is still at his malevolent business. "Watchman, what of the night"? How much of the night is passed and gone? We long for the dawn of the morning, for the rising of the healing power, sun-winged with salvation. "The Watchman of Israel neither slumbereth nor sleepeth". It is a night of watching unto the Lord. The terrors of the night we fear them not. There is a recrudescence of the mediaeval spirit of hatred. The world has battled for freedom, and we have fought side by side with our fellow-citizens. Yet the Jew is made the scapegoat of all the world's ills. The precious boon of freedom, wherever it is ours—we must eternally be vigilant to defend it. And there are many lands where the freedom granted us by solemn oath is flagrantly violated and through chicanery withheld. What if the exile has terminated even for those who still considered themselves exiles, now that the land of the fathers has been released for such as may choose to build their homes there! We shall remain dispersed. We shall call home whatever land harbors us, where our fathers died and where our children are reared. We cherish our homes as ardently as those of older stock. We love this land of freedom. Here it is where, with words taken from our Book, freedom was proclaimed to all the inhabitants of the land. This is the land of which it was said, that it must not be half-slave, half-free. The weapons of unfreedom may be whetted, but they cannot prevail. Against the rock of liberty they will be broken to pieces. And the foundations of that rock were laid in ancient times, when Israel became free to make the world free. This is the meaning of our season of freedom.

LEARNING AND PRACTICALNESS.

Institutions of learning in this country are variously constituted. Nevertheless, they are all conducted pretty much after the same manner. Whether they are private foundations or state and municipal, they are all managed by a body of governors, mostly laymen, who look after the temporal affairs of the institutions. In so far as they are also charged with the supervision of the educational work and the educational policy, theirs is the appointive power to select the head of the institution. That function they are called to exercise whenever the post is vacated through death or resignation. Our great college presidents have for the most part been eminent scholars, who in addition to their standing in the learned world, were distinguished for their administrative and executive ability. It very often happened that men who had taught the deadest subjects, like Greek or Hebrew, made excellent presidents. Practicalness and learning do go together. It is not a good example that has recently been set by one of our universities to create a double headship, one as it were for show and the other for the actual working out of the educational activities. It is not a good example for other and especially the smaller institutions to follow. The prestige of an institution is, after all, bound up with its teaching body and the name and fame of one raised above his colleagues, but essentially a teacher like them. The representative of an educational institution cannot be a stranger to the very thing he is to represent, solid scholarship. Mere learning is as little sufficient as mere executive ability or the faculty for collecting funds or soliciting large funds. For one thing we expect from the heads of our colleges unblemished character and sturdy Americanism. For whatever else our schools must be they should at the same time be nurseries of the higher life and of patriotism. When it comes to a theological institution, the position of head acquires a further significance from the fact that the man chosen exerts an influence far and above the school over which he presides. He is rightly looked up to as the representative of his denomination. He must possess ripe learning; he must be endowed with the rare faculty of engendering enthusiasm for the faith. He is the spokesman of his people's spiritual greatness. The head of a theological institution must needs be a theologian, one who is able to defend what his people hold as the truth. It is not necessary that he should be a partisan. The Christian theological schools in this country are striving to divest themselves of narrow sectarianism. They aim at being schools for any and every Christian. But when chosen from his own party, the question ought not to be raised whether he is or is not a nursling of the institution he is to preside over. The best man, and the very best man, ought to be chosen, no matter what his antecedents. If he stands out head and shoulders above the other candidates, if he is a thinker, a brilliant orator, a fine preacher, he is the man. He may and may not possess what goes as learning in the narrower sense. Book learning is easily acquired. But the faculty of turning a measure of learning to good advantage is rare. What we need most of all is not exactly the bookish man, but the thinker, the man who can stimulate, a personality that fascinates. For, in these days of reconstruction and of changed perspective, much thinking will be required. There is many a position that should be reformulated. The doctrinaire and the single-track mind cannot and will not readjust themselves. In this readjustment will lie the chief practicalness that is supremely requisite in any man of learning in these days with their newer problems and newer outlook upon life.

JEWS AND ARABS WILL COMPOSE PALESTINE HOME DEFENSE.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The Palestine government has completed arrangements for the establishment of two battalions to form a home-defense, says a Jerusalem Dispatch. The battalion of the north will be composed mainly of Jews and will be under the command of Colonel Margolin, while that of the south will be made up chiefly of Arabs. General Castell will be in charge of the entire force. Service will be for one year and new recruits will be added every six months.

HUNGARIAN CHIEF RABBI TO BE PROSECUTED.

Vienna, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Hungarian Jews are greatly concerned over the forthcoming trial of the Chief Rabbi of Szegedin, Dr. Leow, according to a dispatch received here from Budapest. Dr. Loew was many months under arrest and is now being prosecuted for revelations he is alleged to have made regarding the persecution of the Jews in Hungary.

The Pogrom Child

Written for The Central Relief Committee
by P. M. RASKIN

I met a little maid scarce seven,
Yet her cheek was wan and pale,
And her eyes, like twilight heaven,
Told a sad, a doleful tale.

"Child", I asked, "why walk you lonely
From what horror do you come?"
Shivering she stammered only:
"Bad Man. . . Bad Man . . . The Pogrom. . ."

"I—the only saved . . . they caught me
Quickly carried me away,
Put me in a boat and brought me
To this town—a long, long way . . ."

As these childish words were spoken
I again asked: "Where's your home?"
And she stammered: "broken . . . broken. . .
By the Bad Man—The Pogrom . . ."

"Have you, darling child, a mother?"
Quick her eyes with tears were filled:
"Yes, in heaven . . . her and brother
At her breast, the Bad Man killed."

"Mama hid in fright—was nursing
Baby brother—little Max,
When the Bad Man broke in, cursing,
Shuck them both down with his axe. . ."

"Have you, dear, no father, brother?"
And she shook her head and cried:
"They in heaven too . . . with mother . . .
Bad man stabbed them, and they died . . ."

"Have you not, dear child, a sister?"
"Rose had beautiful black eyes;
Since the Bad Man came and kissed her,
Tore her dress—she always cries. . .

"When my sister Lily saw it
She began to laugh and cry. . .
Now she always laughs—I know it—
But I cannot tell you why.

"You are not a Bad Man, tell me,
I am left now all alone. . ."

* * *

Suddenly a fright befell me—
When I woke—the child was gone.

Send checks to HARRY FISCHEL, Treasurer Central Relief Committee, 51 Chambers Street, New York City

New Antidotes to Antisemitism

By Rabbi Julius a Leibert, Spokane, Wash.

Delivered, February 20, 1921, at Portland, Ore., during the Convention of District No. 4, I. O. B. B.

"A LIE", say the rabbis, "is more far-reaching in the harm it does than bloodshed. In the latter there are only two direct victims—the slayer and the slain—but in the case of the former there are three victims—the liar himself, the receiver of the lie, and the one about whom the lie was told".

The truth of this rabbinic statement is nowhere so clearly demonstrated as in anti-semitism. Certainly, those who consciously propagate it are victims. I do not care what kind of an "anti" one may be. Be he anti-Jewish or anti-Catholic, anti-British or anti-Irish, anti-this or anti-that, as long as he is definitely and irrevocably committed to a policy of againstness, as long as his mind is closed and his reasoning faculties impervious to new light, he is the abject and miserable victim of the poison of prejudice.

And the propagators of anti-semitism clearly show by their conduct that they have been dangerously poisoned by prejudice. Their delirious charges prove that when Henry Ford tells his fellow Americans that every Bolshevik commissar—mind, every Bolshevik commissar, is a Jew, he is, to put it mildly, merely applying for membership in the Annanias Club; when the author of the infamous protocols tells the world that the Jews, the Masons, and the Pope have conspired to overthrow Christianity, he is simply confessing to being subject to hallucinations; and when the American Judaphobes, in seeking to transplant in America's soil the age-old prejudices, hatreds, and suspicions of senile Europe, actually aim a treacherous blow at one of the most sacred principles of America, the principle that calls upon every American to unite and not divide the nation, the principle that demands the suppression of class and racial and religious antagonism, the principle that recognizes loyalty to America as the only basis of citizenship—I say, when they aim a traitor's blow at that principle—they show unmistakably that they are mad.

Spain at one time was the leading nation of Europe. That position she might still have been holding to this day had she but heeded the warning cry of the Psalmist: "Touch not mine annointed ones and do my prophets no harm"! But alas for Spain! She heeded instead her fanatics, her bigots and her contention breeders. And when these succeeded in making Jew-baiting, Marrano-hunting, and heretic-burning along with bull-fighting the national games of Spain, Spain fell never to rise again.

Russia finds herself today in the throes of a protracted revolution. God alone knows when she will emerge from the welter of blood and tears. But Russia might have been spared collapse and revolution had she but heeded the warning cry of the Psalmist: "Touch not mine annointed ones and neither do my prophets harm"! Oh, unfortunate Russia! Her rulers remained deaf to the Psalmist's admonition. They heeded instead the voice of prejudice and the call of blind avarice. They devoted all their energy and thought toward inciting race against race, religion against religion and class against class. They preached anti-semitism, they plotted pogroms, and they invented inhuman laws and institutions. As a result Russia collapsed and the Romanoffs fell, never to rise again.

The entire continent of Europe, like a colossal fountain, spouts blood from millions of wounds. And what is responsible for its unparalleled tragedy? To be sure, the millenia-old prejudices, jealousies, fears, suspicions, ambitions, and stupidities. Every nation of Europe seems to have more than its rightful quota of jingoes, chauvinists, super-patriots, militarists, adventures, and various "Panists"—Pan-Slavists, Pan-Germans, and Pan-Latins. These constantly exude the poison of prejudice and, like the serpent, charm but to destroy. Under the plea of self-preservation they sow the seed of mutual fear, hatred, and suspicion. Thereby they hold Europe in a perpetual state of agitation, nervous tension, and turmoil, which ultimately must result in the destruction of the European civilization.

If America has thus far escaped the fate of Europe, the reason therfore lies solely in the fact that America has always heeded the admonition of the Psalmist: "Touch not mine annointed ones and do my prophets no harm"! Of course, by "prophets" and "annointed ones" I do not mean the Jewish people alone. I mean anyone in a position similar to theirs. It is true that "Ku-Kluxism" and "Know-nothingism" have often reared their ugly heads in America. But it is also true that there was always some one to decapitate them. Even while they flourished they flourished only in isolated localities. They never became national issues. They were never permitted to vitiate our national politics. And racial and religious prejudices have never been incorporated in the platforms of great parties or in the policies of the national government. As a result the energies of our statesmen have ever been directed to the problems that would spell progress and constructiveness. Their vision, undimmed by prejudice, has always discerned the ennobling and the spiritualizing forces of life. And the great masses of our nation, feeling themselves united, despite their heterogeneous origin, by millions of ties, have always worked and watched and prayed together for the America that stands today as the greatest, the freest, and the most generous nation on earth. But should that day come, that sad and gloomy day, the day Henry Ford and his hirelings hope and work for, the day when America like Europe, will be divided into mutually distrustful, suspicious, and hatred-harboring groups, on that day the glory that is America's will wane and her splendor be no more. It could not be otherwise. For when the ablest minds of the nation allow themselves to be caught in the meshes of a controversy that can in no way benefit our state, when they array themselves into hostile groups, one calumniating and the other vindicating a people, one trumping up charges against a religion and the other refuting them, and when they direct their inquiries to imaginary problems and ignore the real problems of America—the problems of poverty, of prostitution, of ignorance, of disease, and of crime—I say, when this perversion or diversion of intellect shall take place in our midst, America's glory will wane and her splendor be no more. No other alternative is possible. When one uses his torch not to give light, but to burn down human habitation, darkness and misery must follow.

Darkness, misery and suffering are the lot not only of those who listen to lies, but also of those about whom the lies are told. This need hardly be proved. Shall I remind you of the crucifixion legend? Of the supposed host desecrations? Of the fictitious well-poisonings? Of the blood accusations? Or of the pack of lies that precipitated the recent Polish and Ukrainian inhumanities?

Now, my friends, the three dangers lurking in the lie threaten America. Anti-Semitism, in all of its hideousness, is being propagated openly, boldly and unblushingly in our midst. I, for one, however will not cry "Danger"! to my fellow Americans, Henry Ford, his hirelings and their ilk. Let them look out for themselves. It is better thus. For if I had to do the looking out for them, they would not be enjoying the privilege of being at large. And of a right they should not have that privilege. In a land where justice prevails and where law and order hold sway, the calumniators, traducers, and libelers of entire peoples, the men, who by their false reports put thousands of human beings in jeopardy of their lives, should be rendered harmless. What! Shall the law be invoked against the slanderer of individuals, but shall the slanderer of peoples go scot free? That is, indeed, a condition that calls for regrets but also for a speedy remedy.

Nor will I cry "Danger"! to the American people. There is no need for that. The American people, or rather their leaders, are fully awake to the perilous situation. The emphatic protest signed by Woodrow Wilson, William Howard Taft, and scores of other prominent Americans, as well as the journalistic work of such brilliant writers as William Hard and John Spargo, show clearly that the American people require no warning from me. They know that Ford's canards threaten America more than the Jew and therefore they have hastened to challenge and expose them.

What I wish to do is to cry "Danger"! to the Jewish people, to point out the perils to them, and to offer a plan for avoiding them.

Now, the dangers threatening us today are not to be looked for in anti-Jewish riots, boycotts, or pogroms. However tense the feeling against us may become, riots and pogroms will never take place. We must always remember that America is not, nor never shall be like Russia, Poland, or Turkey. No, the dangers are to be found in a different type of outbreaks. These rather consist not in what we are, but in what you and I may become, if this anti-Semitic propaganda continues much longer. Let me explain what I mean:

Hitherto the dislike that some of our compatriots have manifested against us was entirely the result of inherited prejudice, commercial rivalry, ignorance of our life and ideals, and theologic bias. It never came as the result of personal experience. On the contrary, whenever personal contact between Jew and non-Jew was established, it invariably helped to batter down the barriers theologic bias and inherited prejudice had erected. What is more, the Jew used to meet his neighbor on a basis of equality, without fawning or truckling, without distrust or suspicion. If, despite it all, he failed to secure his neighbor's friendship, he at least earned his respect. And when lack of friendship and neighborliness caused him to suffer, he derived consolation from the knowledge that he suffered not because of his own conduct but because of conditions over which he exerted no control.

But with the persistent spreading of anti-Semitism in America, there is the danger that the Jew may ultimately become personally responsible—remember, personally responsible for the animosity shown him. Apprehending a widespread feeling against him, sensing the suspicions that saturate his atmosphere, realizing that every act of his is being scrutinized by a multitude of hostile eyes, and knowing that his presence among non-Jews only serves as an irksome restraint, he may become entirely too self-conscious. He may turn jelly-fish and fawn and curry favor, or he may become too pugnacious and aggressive. He may go about his business with a chip on his shoulder or with the furtive glance of the hounded animal in his eye. He may become a spiritual hypochondriac and whimper and complain and protest all the time. But as all these traits rather repel than attract friends, and since they would render anyone odious and obnoxious, and most of all one against whom prejudice already exists, it is quite obvious that a time must soon come when the Jew will be personally responsible for the ill-will and unfriendliness shown him. And when that day comes it will mark the saddest chapter in the history of the American Jew.

The burning question of the hour therefore is: What can we do in order to render that chapter impossible?

Shall we hold protest meetings? These avail nothing. Has the recent protest of America's notables caused the virus of anti-Semitism to abate one whit? Why, even the Quixotic Henry Ford had the naivete, (Or was it the knavery?) to declare that he himself would have been willing to sign it!

Shall we resort to reason and argument? They are futile. Reasoning beings do not accept the anti-Semitic lies; and those who accept them are clearly impervious to reason.

Shall we counter-attack and issue such pamphlets as the one entitled: "Ford, a Traitor"? I know there are plenty of good and gullible Americans who will believe all we tell them. But, unlike Ford, I would shrink with a sense of shame from exploiting their credulity. Let Ford lie to his heart's content. I would have none of it. Two wrongs have never to my knowledge coalesced to form one right.

What then shall we do?

If my humble counsel prevailed I would say: Let us stop reading the inspiration and the lucubrations of the anti-Semites; let us stop discussing them. Let us cease becoming agitated over them. Let us ignore them completely. Yea, let us meet them with the dignity of silence and the eloquence of unexpressed suffering. Nor let us be swerved from our determination to be silent by the desire, animating certain quarters, to use the anti-Semitic propaganda as a means of restoring to the fold apostate and indifferent Jews. I for one do not want them. I want Jews by impulsion and not Jews by expulsion. I want Jews by conviction and not Jews by eviction. I want Lord-made and not Ford-made Jews. Ford's products have always had the element of cheapness about them and his Jews form no exception to the rule. On, therewith, our campaign of silence and the eloquence of unexpressed suffering! Our salvation lies chiefly in them.

I know, however, that it is not within the power of everyone to suppress emotions. I know that righteous indignations clamor to be made vocal. I know there is relief in speaking out, in crying out, and in doing something. Therefore, I should also like to suggest two more ways of dealing with Judaphobia. For the more light hearted among us I recommend taking out a leaf from God's own book. What does he do when—"the nations are in uproar and when the people mutter in vain? When the kings of the earth stand up, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord and against His annointed"? Does not the Psalmist tell us: "He that sitteth in heaven laugheth; the Lord hath them in derision"? Well, even so let them do. Let them laugh down the conspiracy of the anti-Semites. Let them meet their lies with a symphony of laughter—with snigger, guffaw, and machination, with humor and satire and irony, with quip and quirk and witty word. After all there is great merit to these. Cervantes, Voltaire, Heine, and Lincoln found them most efficacious weapons. There is also this further advantage in them, especially to a people that for the last two thousand years has done naught but weep. It is this: They make for mirth and merriment. And don't we all know that the world laughs with the laugher? Let them, therefore, laugh at and mock and deride, until the silly stuff of the anti-Semitic canards has entirely evaporated back to the realm of nothingness it came from.

The more serious, however, need not resort to laughing as a means of relieving their pent-up emotions. Action might be more becoming to them. And what should they do? Let them, if they will, try to live up to the moral in Lessing's story of the three rings.

The moral of this story is certainly plain and our more serious coreligionists will do well to take it to heart. Let them live Jewish lives, let them be more just, more truthful, and more generous than their neighbors; let them never miss an opportunity to glorify the name of our God; let them devote their energies and their substance toward making our institutions firm enough and influential enough to embody the ideals of our sacred heritage, and then the falsity and the baseness of the anti-Semitic charges will become clear to all. And even as the clouds must disappear before the breath of the Lord, and the ice must melt away when bathed in sunbeams, even so will the flimsy fabric of anti-Semitism be torn into shreds by our nobler and holier lives.

There is, perhaps, no other organization in America more fit to undertake the mission of making our ideals living realities than the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith. It is the only organization where Jews of all shades and complexions of thought and of all climes and cultures meet for harmonious and common purposes. It, therefore, could and it should be not only the missionary, but also the exemplar of the ideals, the far-visioned dreams, and the ennobling aspirations of our seers and prophets. And, above all, remember this, members of the I. O. B. B., that if you make Judaism living and dynamic, if you will reflect its teachings, both in public and in private life, and if you will exalt it at all times and above all other considerations, it will exalt you, and through you the whole household of Israel to a firmament serene, and to an atmosphere free from the miasma of prejudice. Amen!

MAZOL TOV.

Dr. Harry A. Kraus and Miss Frances Gutwillig were united in marriage at the Buena Shore Club, Chicago, on Tuesday, April 12, 1921.

Dr. Kraus is Past President of District Grand Lodge No. 6, I. O. B. B. and is the second oldest son of Mr. Adolf Kraus, President of the Order.

Miss Gutwillig is the daughter of Mr. Ernst Gutwillig, prominent and old-time resident of Chicago.

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

IX

DID the founder of Christianity hold himself for the Messiah, or did he not? The very name by which he came to be called by those who believed in him and narrated his life would, of course, only be an indication that they regarded him as the Anointed (Greek "Christ"; Hebrew "Messiah"). It may have been their misunderstanding of him, to which again he may and may not have contributed, either by failing to dispel their misconception, or else by some ambiguity of speech or a dark expression admitting of more than one meaning. The whole question is a very intricate one, and were I to enter into all the details, more than one paper would be required for this subject alone. The tendency among liberal Christian scholars to deny that Jesus appeared in the role of the Messiah is not entirely free from a desire to disengage the founder from the Jewish circle of ideas and to remove him far and above the Jewish horizon. But even where the subject is discussed in freedom from prepossessions there is shown a failure to comprehend the essence of the Jewish Messianic belief as then held. Obviously we ought to concern ourselves with the phase current at that time, and strange as it may seem, we are not so well informed about it. When, therefore, some scholars reduce the matter to just this, that Jesus did hold himself for the Messiah, but for a Messiah of a different sort from the one currently expected—hence once more a link in the chain of the Great Misunderstanding—they are begging the question.

Ask a Jew of the orthodox stamp, who prays for the advent of the Messiah and waits for him though he tarry, ask him how he pictures to himself the Messiah, by what tokens he may recognize him, what are his functions, and so on, and you will find that his notions are quite hazy. Consult Jewish literature even of the less remote sort, and we cannot say that the ideas are particularly clear. All we know is that the hope is or was entertained. and that when the last pretender, a contemporary of Spinoza, appeared, the dormant enthusiasm was awakened and maidens in the streets "prophesied", that is went through all the emotions of a powerful religious revival. Now Sabbatai Zevi did come forward as a liberator of the land and the people. But there were features in his career which are strongly reminiscent of those narrated in the Gospels. It cannot be said for a moment that the latter supplied the pattern. Apparently the program is quite an ancient one and deeply rooted in the people's subconsciousness capable of producing just that kind of a figure. There were miraculous doings, signs of the Messianic advent; there were exalted opinions about the personality of the pretender bordering on what transcends normal Judaism; there was even an attitude of indifference to certain well-established religious habits and the law. Even beyond his apostasy and death his believers clung to him quite after the fashion of those early Christians in Galilee and Jerusalem. In other words, the Messiah is not a mere political hero. He is primarily a religious personality, who effects a new order of things in the spiritual realm.

We must remember that it is Maimonides, who definitively severed the two articles of the Creed, the one concerning the Messiah and the other touching the resurrection and the World to Come. Accordingly, the program is a double one; first, the Messiah who acts as a deliverer from dispersion and establishes a righteous rule; and then after a long interval the end of the present world. This is called millennium, from the idea that the duration of the Messianic reign under a scion of David and his successors will be for a thousand years, lasting until the new world is ushered in, which, of course, is heavenly. It is true that Maimonides could cite a casual saying of the rabbis which was to the same effect. That means simply that the rabbis occasionally held to the rationalistic view. Maimonides, it need not be said, was a rationalist. Messianic description did not harmonize with his notions of immortality or of Heaven. But [illegible] was not the creator of the [illegible]. It is also true that modern [illegible] teachers dispute whether the [illegible] of the dispersed and even the [illegible] the temple may not precede the coming of the Messiah. But this is a bit of legalistic rationalism which has served well as the precursor of the modern movement which, indeed, has issued in what certain circles may with right regard as the beginning of the redemption. But all this does not weigh with the student of religion, who must consult what is universally believed, believed by the masses of the people. And the masses still cling to the hazy notions about the blowing of the great horn, and the dispersed being gathered, and the dead bodies rolling subterraneously to Palestine, there to effect their resurrection—all simultaneous with the appearance of the Messiah.

In other words, the Messianic idea partakes of an other-worldly character. It is really not of this earth. The Messiah, according to the rabbis, is pre-mundane, that is, was created ere the world was. What underlies this notion we quite understand. "The end of a thing is first in thought". The world is for the sake of that which will eventuate from it. But as popularly conceived, the Messiah comes with the clouds of heaven, he descends from Heaven where he is held in reserve, to earth. Or, as the rabbis express it, the Messiah was born on the day when Jerusalem was destroyed. We again understand the meaning. With the catastrophe is created the agency to restore the lost conditions. Nevertheless a being thus conceived is not a common ordinary human being. Such a person may call himself the Son of God. For if or when Jesus used this expression for himself, he did not mean it in the physical sense. That was part of the misunderstanding introduced when Christianity passed on to the Greek. He believed himself nearer to God than all humanity, nearer to God's purposes, nearer to an understanding of God's design with His creatures. But if he used the appellation, it meant that he considered himself as the Messiah. This much is clear that he did not come forward as a scion of David. For he argues from Scripture that David and the Messiah are two distinct persons. But if at all he argued about this matter, it would be proof that he emphasized his Messianic claims. Not all Jews in his day were at one in the belief that the Messiah would be of the stock of David. There were those who held that he would come from the seed of Aaron. The rabbis speak of two Messiahs, one from Ephraim and one from David. The one from Ephraim appears as the suffering Messiah, the one who is pierced in the onslaught of the nations, who paves the way for the triumphant Messiah.

We emphasize, in the light of the evidence presented, that if Jesus stressed the other-worldly features in his Messianic career, he stood on Jewish ground, would be understood by his contemporaries and strike a chord in the deepest recesses of the Jewish soul. If then he met with opposition, it was not from the circles given to the belief in the Messiah of the character described above. The opposition came from the rationalist part of the people, not necessarily only from the Sadducee members of the Sanhedrin who disbelieved in the resurrection and the whole heavenly apparatus, but from the Pharisaic teachers likewise, the representatives of strict legalism, who could not brook the many laxities in practice which the Messianic movement always produces and the freer handlings of religious doctrines in a manner endangering strict monotheism. For as the history of the many pretenders shows, the official spokesmen of Judaism wait for the Messiah with their people, but when one comes and proclaims himself as such they reject him and proceed to wait for the next one to come. It will always be the next one. Not because the task is prodigious, but because of the admixture into the Messianic idea of elements which belong to the World to Come and from which Messianism cannot be separated. The Messiah on earth is really a contradiction in terms. For he is supremely heavenly. Not that orthodox Judaism will ever relinquish that idea, that some day he will come to earth, but then when he comes the earth will be no more, for it will be a new earth and a new Heaven. It is a grandios hope to see earth losing itself in Heaven, when death will be no more and men with crowns upon their heads enjoy the splendor of the Divine Presence. But failing these conditions, the Messiah is an impossibility. And after all the word of a famous Jewish rabbi, that in the end it is not the Messiah who redeems Israel, but God himself—not that the good rabbi for one moment foreswore his belief and hope in the great Jewish doctrine—shows that Judaism, monotheistic Judaism, is much too jealous of its cardinal article of faith to suffer anything that may impair it. If Jesus gave himself out as the Messiah, if he even dwelt preeminently on the other-worldly features, the Great Misunderstanding was inevitable. At best there is in every Messianic personage, I will not call them false Messiahs or pretenders, a spark of the Great Personality everlastingly hoped for, and each and every one is a witness of the deep-rooted ideal which has its foundation in the hope that earth must pass away and Heaven take its place. Each and every one paves the way for his successor. So taught Maimonides of Jesus and Mohammed. But, of course, for the time being when a way-paver appears, proclaiming himself as he must needs do as the end and the goal, Judaism recoils and the Great Misunderstanding is the necessary result.

AGRARIAN REFORMS IN POLAND ARE IMPOSED UPON JEWS ONLY.

Warsaw, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The Jewish Seim Club has received a number of additional complaints against the land and agricultural department. The complaints establish the fact that in trying to enforce the recently-adopted measures for agrarian reform, the representatives of the land department are concentrating exclusively upon Jewish farmers and aro dividing up only Jewish estates. When the official at Lublin was asked to explain why the Jews only were affected by the reforms, he replied that they were the ones who were most anxious to see the reforms adopted The Jewish Seim Club has taken the matter up with the Chief of the Land Department.

DANZIG EXPELLING ALIENS.

Danzig, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The local authorities have ordered a number of foreigners to leave the city on tho ground that they are aliens. Eastern Jewish refugees who are being threatened with expulsion have appealed to High Commissioner Hawking, to intervene.

The First Convention of the Central Welfare Office of the German Jews

By Dr. Alfred Goldschmidt of Berlin

AFTER an interval of three years since its foundation the first general convention of the Central Welfare Office of the German Jews was held January 24-25, 1921, in the building of the Berlin Lodges, I. O. B. B. The meeting was held under promising auspices. On the previous day the Union of the German Jewish Congregations held in the same building its convention which resulted in the amalgamation of all Jewish activities in the newly created "General Organization of the German Jews". This organization renders it possible that the Jews appear to the outside world as a unit. 'Unity'also was the watchword in the convention of the Central Welfare organizations which comprised representatives of all larger Jewish organizations of a similar nature.

The object of this Central office is to bring about the best possible results of all Jewish welfare efforts. It intends to give information and advice on the basis of the material which it has collected and of the experiences accumulated. In this way duplication of efforts shall be avoided, relief shall be suggested, waste shall be eliminated, economy advanced, existing institutions combined and new ones created.

Privy Councillor Timendorfer, the President of the district, opened the convention and conducted the business until the chairman, Dr. George Baum, was elected, who presided over the rest of the meeting.

The two first papers dealt with general principles from the broadest point of view. Mrs. S. Wronsky read a paper on "The Demands of Jewish Welfare Work In Our Days", and Dr. George Baum on "Jewish Sociology". He dealt with the problems which Judaism at the present era has to face. The effects of mixed marriages, late marriages, housing problems on one side confronted with extravagance on the other, the proletariat in the professions, about which he said it will be necessary to discard the superstition that every family must have at least one son who enters a profession. These problems and some others were discussed and suggestions were made how the injurious effects are to be neutralized. "We are living in an era of increased hatred", Dr. Baum said. "Ahasuerus who cannot die is followed by Haman who will not die". Mrs. Wronsky said "We have to go out of our way to meet those who have a claim on our love. When the flood of the terrible war suffering shall have subsided and when the dove of peace shall take her flight out of Noah's ark to bring comfort to those whom we love, then the doors of the ark shall be wide open for all who need our aid".

After the first two papers had been read which outlined the aims and methods of Jewish sociology, individual questions of emergency aid were discussed. Emil Waldstein of Breslau discussed in an exhaustive paper the needs of our orphan asylums and educational institutions. Attorney Dr. Lamm of Berlin read a paper which dealt with the task of juvenile care.

On the second day of the convention a number of physicians read papers. Sanitary Councillor Dr. Hanauer, lecturer at the University of Frankfort on the Main, gave a general survey of the task of social hygiene in Jewish welfare work.

This general paper was followed by discussion of individual points. Professor Toby Cohn of Berlin spoke on the care for people afflicted with nervous diseases. Sanitary Councillor Dr. Wilhelm Feilchenfeld of Berlin spoke on the care of tuberculosis patents and Sanitary Councillor Dr. Nawratzki of Berlin-Nikolassee on the care for mentally retarded boys and girls.

Mrs. Clara Samuel of Elberfeld and Mr. Eugene Caspary, Berlin, discussed the necessity of combining local institutions for Jewish welfare so as to prevent duplication of activities.

Dr. Albert Levy of Berlin announced briefly plans for the establishment of a national organization for voluntary welfare work in which the Jewish Central Organization shall take part. Dr. Friedrich Ollendorff read a report on Jewish Relief Work in Foreign Countries in which he said the Jews of Germany have never turned a deaf ear to distress beyond the borders of their country. The terrible suffering at present, however, requires a national organization of such relief work. It is necessary to create a sentiment like that found among the Quakers. A real peace sentiment which shall express itself not merely in words but in deeds. Dr. Alfred Klee of Berlin discussed the World's Relief Conference which was held in Carlsbad and its importance for Jewish welfare work.

The Secretary General, Fritz Mordecai Kaufmann, of Berlin, spoke in connection with this address on the problem of the eastern Jews in Germany. He gave information on the work of the employment bureau maintained by the Jewish organizations of Germany. The chairman, Dr. Baum, closed the convention which was in every respect satisfactory on the evening of January 25, saying that the spirit of the home in which the convention was held, the spirit of benevolence, brotherly love and harmony, may be a symbol for all future activity. This motto is expressed in a typical Jewish word which means both charity and justice. It is also the motto of the new bulletin of the Central Relief Organization: "Zedakah".

ANTI-SEMITIC WORLD CONGRESS IN BUDAPEST NEXT AUTUMN.

Vienna, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Tho local conference of Anti-Semites has decided to call an anti-Semitic world congress during next autumn. Tho congress will be called at Budapest. The local gathering also decided to organize regular anti-Semitic demonstrations in Austria, Germany, and other countries and to aid in the development of anti-Semitism in countries where the movement is not yet completely organized.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

RAINIER LODGE, SEATTLE, WASH.

Three hundred applications have been secured by the members of Rainier Lodge since the beginning of the drive for members, which was initiated by Louis Friedlander, Vice-President and Chairman of the Membership Committee. Mr. Friedlander commenced the drive by securing a comparatively large number of new members through personal solicitation. Appointments of sub-chairmen for a period of two weeks was the feature of the whole drive. Under the personal direction of the chairmen, each one in charge for only 2 weeks, 300 applications were obtained within 2 months. The chairmen in charge were: Louis Friedlander, Max A. Silver, Harold M. Rogers and S. B. Asia. Of the 300 applicants, 175 have already been added to the roster of the lodge.

The success of the membership drive is only rivalled by the successful attendance at the meetings of the lodge.

At the end of December 31, 1920, the Promotion Committee had succeeded in nstilling enough enthusiasm into the members so that attendance increased from 30 o 100 at every meeting. The seriousness of purpose of the officers-elect for 1921 and he interest attached to the spread of Anti-Semitic propaganda aided P. N. Mendelsohn, chairman of the Promotion Committee, in his work to increase the attendance. At present time of writing the average attendance is about 200, so that attendance will no longer be a problem o solve.

Great interest attaches to the work of he Jewish War Orphans' Committee, consisting of Ralph Schoenfeld, J. Aronson, M. S. Bornstein, Henry Kleinberg, Dr. Samuel Koch, J. Newberger, Samuel Ostrow, Carl Reiter, Sol Rogers, A. Shemanksi and Herman Schocken, who is n personal charge of this activity.

According to the initial report of the committee, $2,100.00 has been pledged already. This is an excellent piece of work and reflects the potential source of power of an organized Jewish community. And he Jewish Community of Seattle has certainly been rejuvenated of late. The progress of the Order in the Northwest will be evidenced in greater measure from now on, as our energy is shifted from the work of organization to the actual accomplishment of the principles for which he Order stands.—[Barnett E. Harvitz, Chairman, Publicity.

One hundred twenty-five candidates were initiated by Rainier Lodge at a meeting held on March 17, 1921. This class was one of the largest ever initiated by the Order in the west. It comprised a portion of approximately 250 elective candidates who have been secured since the launching f the membership campaign by the lodge. nitiation ceremonies were conducted by he Rainier Lodge degree team. The address of the evening was made by Mr. Nathan Epstein and musical program was rranged by Charles Wilson, cantor and onductor. Delegations from Tacoma, Bellingham and Vancouver lodges were in ttendance and the evening was graced y the presence of the president of the District, Brother David Solis Cohen of Portland.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. Swett entertained welve guests at dinner on Wednesday vening, February 23, in honor of Mr. D. Solis Cohen, newly elected Grand President of District No. 4, I. O. B. B. After the dinner a reception was held, bout forty friends calling to congratulate Mr. Cohen.

On Sunday, March 13, the members of he Athletic Department of the B'nai B'rith Building met to organize the B'nai B'rith Amateur Athletic Club. A constitution was adopted and officers were elected.

On Monday, March 28, Dr. McElveene spoke on "Love and Marriage" under he auspices of the B'nai B'rith Forum.

Portland Lodge, No. 65, and its Ladies' Auxiliary gave a Purim Dancing Party on Thursday evening, March 24, which was a big event of the season.

The joint program of Portland Lodge and the Daughters of the Covenant rought an unusually large attendance on Tuesday evening, March 15, 1921. "Purim", the subject of the address y Rabbi Wise, was the feature of the evening. Refreshments were served by he ladies.

SCRANTON, PA.

Before a large gathering of Jewish men and women of Scranton, Pa., Hon. Jos. W. Salus of Philadelphia, Past-President of District Grand Lodge, No. 3 and member of the New Jersey State Legislature, denounced tho efforts of Henry Ford to spread anti-Somitism in this country.

Backing up his statement that Ford is the "Idiotic Coward of Detroit", Mr. Salus declared that "the Jews were doing their utmost toward the destruction of autocracy during the recent World War that liberty and freedom might be preserved upon this oarth. But where was Henry Ford and his son? Edsel Ford was trying to dodge the draft, afraid to onter the field of battle. Henry Ford and his son are the type of men that shrink from all patriotic duties".

Answers Ford Questions.

In answer to several questions that Ford had been endeavoring to answer on the Jewish question in his weekly, "The Dearborn Independent", such as the following: 1. The Jews are trying to become international rulers. 2. They are endeavoring to supplant their own and European government in the United States. 3. They are usuring and Annihilating, Mr. Salus declared that "there have been no other peoples that have done more to harmonize, to be fair, better the conditions of communal life and show their patriotism than have the Jews".

Summing up the various articles that are appearing in the Dearborn Independent Mr. Salus declared that they are the product of "a monstrous evil, and one of the lowest, commonest and dullest rascals as well as detestable liars that ever lived.

"This is a serious time we are living and this problem, which has 'The Idiot of Detroit' behind it, must be dealt with in a militant manner. And it shall be done. Henry Ford will regret every word that he has written to slander the Jews. No one has respect, fear or feeling for such a type of man", continued Mr. Salus in speaking of some stand that might be taken to oppress Ford.

All Must Unite.

"It is necessary that all Jews unite in this combat. The B'nai B'rith has organized an 'Anti-defamation League,' whereby all Jews, through their unity, may each serve as a milestone in the progress of this work. And this will be done, but the co-operation of every man, woman and child of the Jewish race must be assembled for the attack upon Ford and his weekly.

"Not only is the B'nai B'rith, which is a Jewish fraternal organization of international repute, determined to destroy all the ill will created by Henry Ford, but it is going to elevate the standards of the Jews of America to as great a plan as possible. And the greatest Jews of the world are behind the project," added Mr. Salus in speaking of future prospects.

Closing his address, Mr. Salus said that it is absolutely necessary that all Jews enroll as members of the organization, for the Order is for the purpose of "uniting Israelites for the promotion of the highest interests and inculcating within them the fullest meaning of philanthropy. And above all, the organization needs your assistance in destroying all the fiendish propaganda that this idiot has been spreading broadcast."

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT HAMILTON, OHIO.

On March 7, Hamilton Lodge, No. 882, I. O. B. B., of Hamilton, Ohio, was instituted through the efforts of Sidney G. Kusworm, member of the Executive Committee of the Order, cooperating with David M. Silver, of Hamilton. Edwin J. Schanfarber, of Columbus, first vice president of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, presided, and was assisted by Leonard H. Freiberg, secretary of the district; Rabbi Samuel Meyerberg and Joseph Klein, of Dayton, and Morton Ball, of the same city. A large representation was present from Middletown Lodge, headed by Samuel Bergstein, President of that organization. The lodge was instituted with 40 charter members. Sidney G. Kusworm delivered the address of the evening. Agreeable refreshments ended an evening bright with promise for the unity and increased activity of the Jewish community in Hamilton.

EBN EZRA LODGE, ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

At the meeting of Ebn Ezra Lodge, No. 47, of St. Louis, Mo., held during the month of March, resolutions were adopted in memory of late Brother Jacob Lampert.

At the same meeting, a further resolution was adopted that a committee of three be appointed to secure a menorah with the name of late Brother Jacob Lampert inscribed therein as an everlasting tribute to his memory. The committee appointed consists of Brothers Samuel Rosenfeld, William Schwartz and L. E. Amfenger, who were given full power to act.

Resolutions of Ebn Ezra Lodge, Offered and Adopted During Hour Devoted to Tributes to the Life and Memory of Brother Jacob Lampert.

The Independent Order B'nai B'rith offers no glittering rewards. Its highest goal is sacrifice and service for others.

These demands of the Order were fulfilled by our late Brother Jacob Lampert in letter and spirit. The fulfillment of the obligations of the Order was the daily practice of his life.

Sacrifice and service were the beacon lights of his voyage upon the sea of life. Helpfulness, kindliness and cheerfulness were the controlling influences of Jacob Lampert's activities.

He was preeminently a social and a humane man; to him the little things of life appealed; the individual sufferer had a claim upon his benevolence as well as the group; and the orphan child found in him a friend and benefactor of surpassing feeling and generosity.

It was his delight to give before he was asked and in personal service demanding time and effort he was ever foremost.

To Ebn Ezra Lodge he was a faithful, ever loyal member; as the Monitor of its degree team he was unsurpassed in any lodge of the Order.

Ebn Ezra Lodge and its members mourn, deeply mourn the loss of his friendly greeting, his cheery voice, his beautiful expression of its ritual, his example, influence and service in its meetings and among its members.

Jacob Lampert lived beautifully and always blessed will be his memory.

Tennyson has written:

"Howe'er it be, it seems to me,
'Tis only noble to be good.
Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood".

History offers no finer example of the man whose life illustrates the truth of these lines than Jacob Lampert.

Resolved, That a copy of this expression of the sentiments of Ebn Ezra Lodge be sent to the relatives of our late Brother Jacob Lampert, be sent to the B'nai B'rith News and be spread upon the minutes of the lodge.

Adopted, March 10, 1921.

TOLEDO LODGE.

On January 5, 1921, Toledo Lodge, No. 183, celebrated its annual B'nai B'rith Day. A large class of candidates was initiated and officers for the ensuing term were installed by Brother Samuel Rosenfeld of St. Louis, President of District Grand Lodge No. 2. After the regular business was disposed of, the members and their ladies went to the banquet hall, where upwards of 500 spent a pleasant two hours listening to a fine program headed by a splendid address by Brother Rosenfeld.

During the month of February, at the first meeting of the lodge held on February 8, Dr. Horace Westwood, minister, delivered a talk on the subject "What the Jews think of Jesus". This meeting was attended by 250 members.

On February 22, 1921, Toledo Lodge celebrated Past President Night. This was a most remarkable event in the history of the lodge. At this meeting a large class of candidates was initiated and short talks were given by every Past President in attendance. More than 400 members were present, which was a record breaker for the lodge.

On March 22, 1921, Brother Jacob Krohngold of St. Louis, Executive Director of the District Grand Lodge, attended a special meeting of the lodge at which a class of candidates was initiated and Brother Krohngold addressed the lodge on the subject, "The Best Answer to our Defamers".

COVENANT LODGE, DULUTH, MINN.

In compliment to Bernard Silberstein, pioneer resident of Duluth, who joined the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith fifty years ago this spring, members of Covenant Lodge will stage a "golden jubilee" party Sunday, April 17, at the Spalding Hotel. The program will be open only to members of the local lodge and their families.

Preliminary plans for the "golden jubilee" were made at the regular meeting of Covenant Lodge at the Lyceum Building on March 8, when a class of twelve candidates was initiated into the Order. Brothers Chas. D. Oreckovsky and A. B. Kapplin represented the District Grand Lodge during the ceremonies. The members of the degree team in charge of the initiation included Brothers S. B. Copilowisch, Samuel Nides, D. P. Fieldman, and Dave Miller. A social session and smoker followed the ceremony. E. A. Silberstein addressed the candidates on the B'nai B'rith, and Rabbi Lebedinger responded on behalf of the class.

Mr. A. B. Kapplin was named chairman of the general committee in charge of the "golden jubilee", which will include the initiation of fifty candidates in a special "Silberstein class" in honor of Mr. Silberstein. The ceremonial will take place in the afternoon in the large ballroom of the hotel, and will be attended by Grand Lodge officers and representatives from all the lodges in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The other members of the committee are: Brothers Chas. D. Oreckovsky, D. P. Fieldman, Manuel Finkelstein, Jesse Cohen, Ben Miller and Samuel Nides, Secretary.

The initiatory exercises will be followed by a complimentary banquet to Mr. Silberstein and it is expected that 150 members and their ladies will be present. The program for the dinner will include several addresses and musical numbers and will be followed by a ball commencing at 9 o'clock. The dance will continue until 1 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Silberstein joined Pisgah Lodge of Detroit fifty years ago this spring, just after his marriage to Mrs. Silberstein. Their golden wedding anniversary was a social event of last fall. Shortly after, he came to Duluth, where he has resided ever since.

Mr. Silberstein is now 78 years of age and is very active as the head of a large mercantile firm, and has only recently completed a four year term as city commissioner. He has taken an active part in local civic and fraternal affairs and is one of the most respected citizens of the city. Mr. Silberstein is also a thirty-third degree Mason.

Mr. Silberstein is one of the oldest members of the B'nai B'rith and it is planned by the committee in charge to send invitations to all the "half-century members" residing in the West to attend the "golden jubilee" in Duluth on April 17. Special invitations also will be sent to all the range lodges and it is expected a large delegation will come down for the festivities.—[A. B. Kapplin.

HOUSTON LODGE, HOUSTON, TEXAS.

Mr. Sidney Straus, president of Houston Lodge, is probably responsible for the largest meeting ever held by this lodge which occurred on March 2 at Concordia Club. The members came accompanied by their wives or sweethearts and it had more the appearance of a high class social function than the regular lodge meeting.

The meeting was called to order at 8:30 by President Straus and after reading the minutes of the previous meeting eight candidates were intitiated into the Order.

Delegates were elected to the District Grand Lodge which meets in Dallas in May.

The members of Houston Lodge acquitted themselves gloriously when an appeal was made to the lodge for the adoption of a Jewish War Orphan. The members objected to taking any funds from the lodge treasury, but voluntarily subscribed the amount of $300, thus adopting three Jewish War Orphans.

After the meeting light refreshments were served and an old-fashioned "sociable" indulged in, such as has not taken place in many a month in this town. The evening was pleasant and profitable and one that will induce a much larger attendance.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

EDW. EVERETT AUXILIARY, NEW YORK.

Edw. Everett Auxiliary, No. 1, of New York City, is affiliated with the New York Federation of Clubs and with the Federation of Sisterhoods and Jewish Women's organizations. The auxiliary has 135 members on its roster. The following is a detailed account of current and past activities of the auxiliary:

Educational.

March 2, March 16—"Simple Points of Law that Every Woman Should Know". Speaker, our member, Lillian R. Hirsch, Attorney. April 6—"Simple Points on Banking that Every Citizen should Know". Speaker, Mr. James Rattray, Guaranty Trust Co. April 20—"Simple Points on Parliamentary Procedure that Every Club-Woman Should Know". Speaker, Mrs. Thomas Slack, President, Legislative League. May—Addresses on "The Theatre". Announcement later.

Philanthropic.

The Edward Everett Auxiliary is cooperating with the Free Synagogue at Bellevue Hospital. All members are expected to go on the Visiting Committee for distributing toys and candy to the sick children. We are also cooperating with the Joint Tuberculosis Committee, and are at present particularly interested in a scholarship to a widow's son of $5.00 weekly for one and one-half years to see him through Columbia School of Chemistry. There is an honor roll for donations of $5.00 or more. Please help. Chairman of this Committee, Mrs. S. Golieb, 541 West 156th Street.

Donations for January.

Hoover Relief Fund	$ 35.00
Federation Jewish Phil. Soc.	25.00
Scholarship	50.00
Miscellaneous	15.00
	$125.00

Social.

April 9, at Chalif's, 163 West 57thl Street—Charity dance, for the benefit of above Scholarship Fund. All members are expected to take active interest. Send for tickets to: Chairman, Lillian Marks, 101 West 126th Street. Every Sunday—Sunday afternoon social dances at Clubhouse 2307 Broadway. In March "Get Together Tea" and "Birthday Party" to be announced later.

RICHMOND, VA.

Rimmon Lodge, No. 68, of Richmond, Va., was addressed on Thursday evening, March 3, 1921, by Mr. Clarence M. Lehman of Baltimore, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 5. During the course of his remarks, Mr. Lehman brought out the interesting fact that the Constitution Grand Lodge, which is the supreme body composed of representatives from all the districts in the United States) takes care of ten thousand war orphans in Europe.

Morton L. Wallerstein, the new President of Rimmon Lodge, introduced the speaker. He called attention to the valuable work of the Anti-Defamation League, and prepared the assemblage for the serious talk which followed. After Mr. Lehman's appeal for community support of the organization, the ballroom was thrown open for dancing.

Gaston Lichtenstein, who has charge of the present drive for members, reports that about thirty applicants were elected. These candidates will be required to present themselves for initiation on March 20.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Haym Salomon Lodge, No. 888, was instituted on March 2, 1921, as a lodge of the Order. The lodge started with a membership of 65. The institution of the lodge was attended by a number of officers of the Grand Lodge and the initiatory work on the candidates was performed by the degree team of Springfield Lodge, of Springfield, Mass. Mr. Henry Lasker, of Springfield, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, presided over the institution and addressed the gathering on the world-wide growth of the Order.

Mr. Max Levy, of New York, Secretary of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, spoke of the Order's accomplishments. Rev. Herbert S. Goldstein, of New York, spoke of the necessity of an organization like the Order for inculcating ideals of Judaism.

B'NAI B'RITH INSTALLATION AT LEWISTON, MAINE.

The installation and institution of Twin City Lodge, I. O. B. B., No. 889, took place Sunday evening, in Abou Ben Adhem hall.

It has been a long time since such a representative, enthusiastic gathering of Jews of Auburn and Lewiston assembled together for the purpose of spreading the doctrines of this order: that of charity, good citizenship, the welfare of humanity, and those things which stand for the highest ideals in life.

The banquet which preceded the degree work was jolly and filled with good humor.

There were many ladies present, and they fitted nicely into the scheme of things. It was indeed a picturesque gathering and one which will not soon be forgotten.

The degree team from Portland, of which Dr. Cyrus K. Briggs is president, performed the ceremonies in a very capable manner.

Installation of officers then took place. Harry Rubinoff, upon taking the chair, thanked those who had so heartily cooperated with him to make this affair a success, and in his introductory remarks, stated that he hoped the Twin City lodge would soon become a power for good in this community.

The first speaker introduced was Henry Lasker, former president of the board of aldermen of Springfield, Mass., who gave a short stirring address, and pointed out the remarkable work which this Order is doing all over the country. J. Illch, a prominent lawer of Albany, N. Y., spoke briefly, but to the point and made a very good impression on all those present. Mr. Werby, President of Amos Lodge, Boston, who spoke next, showed how rapidly the Order is taking hold everywhere and hoped that the local order would increase its membership very soon, wishing the lodge a full measure of success.

The chairman then introduced the man who is responsible for the local organization, a man who has always contributed his share, no matter what the cause, irrespective of class, race, or religion, Dr. Elias Caplan, of Portland.

Dr. Caplan, who is one of the finest speakers in the state, regretted that he could not talk at length owing to the hour being quite late, but, nevertheless, in his short talk held his listeners entranced.

The meeting was then closed, and all voted that it was a great success.

MINNESOTA LODGE, ST. PAUL, CELEBRATES GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

On February 21, 1921, at the Junior Pioneer Hall in this city, Minnesota Lodge, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its existence as a lodge. During the day there had been a meeting of the General Committee of the District in St. Paul, which was the occasion for the presence of the officers and members of the General Committee of the District. The celebration took the form of the initiation of a large class of candidates, in fact, the largest in the history of St. Paul, there being approximately 170 men initiated into the lodge.

In addition to the lodge members and the initiates, a very splendid audience of men and women gathered to hear addresses by the officers and members of the General Committee of the District. Upon the platform were three men who became members of the lodge in 1871, one of whom had been a member of the Order since 1868. These were Brothers Max Frankel, P. H. Weiss and Brother Loewenstein. The presence of these three men who had served the community through the lodge for fifty years made the occasion even more significant.

Past President of the District, Brother H. D. Frankel, acted as Chairman of the meeting. Among those who spoke were Brother Eugene Mannheimer, President of the District; the writer of this, as Second Vice-President of the District; Brother A. B. Seelenfreund, Secretary; Brother Mecklenburger, a member of the General Committee, and others. There were also several musical selections that were very greatly enjoyed by the audience.

The lodge has started on a campaign of increasing its membership by not less than 100 per cent prior to June 1, 1921, and the officers of the lodge have set as their goal for the current year a membership of 850, which would be an increase of nearly 200 per cent.—[Gus. Loevinger.

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF GILEAD LODGE, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A class of 100 candidates was initiated by Gilead Lodge, No. 41, on March 10, 1921. Nearly two hundred and fifty members were present for the ceremony.

The degree team was composed of Brothers Maurice Goldberg, Alex. P. Greenthal, Hyman E. Padway, and Leo Reitman. The candidates were given a lecture by Brother Chas. L. Aarons. The initiation was followed by a luncheon and social hour.

The initiation was the beginning of the festivities of the lodge in honor of its sixtieth anniversary.

B'nai B'rith Temple Services.

On Friday evening, March 18, at Temple Emanu El, B'nai B'rith services were conducted by Rabbi Samuel Hirshberg. Rabbi Hirshberg discussed Anti-Semitic agitation as manifested in the various countries of the world today.

"The lot of the Jew in Europe has never been more miserable than it is today", Rabbi Hirshberg said. "Denounced, reviled, charged with major and final responsibility for all the woes into which the lands have fallen, despite the heroic manner, and to the fullest extent of their quotas, in which they fought in the armies of all the nations, they are the victims of hideous pogroms or the targets of riotous demonstrations.

"Here in America, the same movement, in another form, asserts itself in the form of social ostracism. It refuses the Jew admittance to the leading clubs, and denies membership in others to his sons and daughters; it flaunts the advertisements: 'Hebrew patronage not solicited or desired.' It generalizes about all Jews, labeling them as sharp, cunning, parasitic, vulgar, narrow and exclusive. Exceptions are admitted, but only such as 'prove the rule' ".

The sixtieth anniversary celebration was brought to a close with a banquet at the Hotel Pfister on Saturday evening, March 19. More than 400 members and their ladies attended. The guest of honor was Mr. Sig. Livingston, of Bloomington, Ill., Chairman of the Anti-Defamation League, who delivered a stirring address on the work of the League in its efforts to combat Anti-Semitism. Other speakers were Mr. Chas. L. Aarons, of Milwaukee, and Mr. A. B. Seelenfreund, of Chicago, Secretary of the Order.

A dance at the conclusion of the banquet brought the celebration to a close.

B'NAI B'RITH OF OMAHA.

The biggest meeting and initiation ever held by the Omaha lodge is planned for all day Sunday, May 1.

It is the hope of the committee to initiate a class of more than 100. The Council Bluffs, Lincoln and Sioux City lodges will be invited to join with the Omaha lodge in the mammoth meeting.

The big class will be initiated in the afternoon and at night a mass meeting, open to the public, will be held. A speaker of national prominence will be on the program.

First Time Ever Tried.

This is the first time in the history of B'nai B'rith that the three lodges have been invited at one time to join in holding one program.

Early announcement is being made by the committee in charge in order to avoid conflicts of dates and to give the neighboring lodges a chance to make arrangements to have as complete a membership as possible on hand for the initiation and meeting.

Local arrangements are in the hands of a General Committee consisting of the Intellectual Advancement Committee, headed by Vice-President William Grodinsky; the Central Council Committee, headed by Harry Lapidus, and the Membership Committee, headed by Dr. A. Greenberg.

Omaha Lodge at its recent meeting voted to contribute $500 towards the free loan fund of the Jewish Charities of Omaha.

The meeting of Omaha Lodge held on March 31 was conducted under the auspices and direction of its Women's Auxiliary. The Intellectual Advancement Committee prepared an interesting program. The meeting was open to the public.

B'NAI B'RITH DAY CELEBRATIO BY EDAR LODGE, SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

On the evening of February 21, 1921 B'nai B'rith Day was celebrated on a mo elaborate scale at the Gunter Hotel ba room, San Antonio, Texas. To Brothe S. C. Eldridge, chairman of the Intellectua and Culture Committee and the commi tee of Edar Lodge, No. 211, is due th credit of the entertainment and its su cess. The following out-of-city gues were present: Grand President of D. G L., No. 7, I. O. B. B., Victor H. Hexte Dallas, Texas; Second Grand Vice-Pre ident of D. G. L. No. 7, I. O. B. B., Hou ton, Texas, Rabbi Wm. H. Fineshrive Memphis, Tennessee, Rabbi Geo. J Fox, Fort Worth, Texas, chairman of th Intellectual and Culture Committee of th District, Brother H. G. Goodman, Cha tanooga, Tennessee.

The following program was rendere (Rabbi Samuel Marks, Temporary Chai man); invocation, Rabbi Sidney S. Te esche; patriotic selection, Gunter Hotel O chestra; Presentation of Grand Lodge Of cers; vocal selection, duet, Barcarole; Th Tales of Hoffman, Offenbach, Misses Idel Adelman, Rose Solomon, Prof. Achilles, M J. Minnaert at the piano; presenting Rab Wm. H. Fineshriber, Nat M. Washe address, "A Challenge to the Jew", Rab Wm. H. Fineshriber; instrumental sele tion, Cello, Edward M. Goldstein, Mr Frederick Abbott at piano; instrument selection, Traviata-Verde, piano, Pro Achilles M. J. Minnaert; benedictio Rabbi Gerson Feiganbaum; informal r ception and dance.

The attendance was so large that stan ing room was at a premium and many we unable to gain admission into the ha The address of Brother Wm. H. Fineshrib was an able one and sympathetically li tened to by those in attendance.

A complimentary community dinner w tendered the visiting guests at the Gunt Hotel, and was largely attended by th local B'nai B'riths.

Edar Lodge has had an unusual yea both in increasing members and doing i part in the great work of the Order.

PATCHOGUE, NEW YORK.

Sunday, March 6, was an importa day for Patchogue Lodge, No. 759, Patchogue, Long Island, New York, b cause of the degree team of Akiba Lod of New York, that paid the lodge an o ficial visit, accompanied by Brother M Levy, Secretary of District Grand Lod No. 1, to install the officers and initia a class of candidates. Appropriate speec es were delivered by the members of t team, by Max Levy of New York and officers of the local lodge, Preside Maurice Beck, Vice President Abraha Ratchick and Secretary Dr. Nachm Heller. A sumptuous supper was giv the metropolitan visitors, shared, likewi by the Patchogue members of B'nai B'rit their wives and friends.

Messrs. Theodore Schmerel and Isr Siegel of the degree team visited D Heller's Sunday school and deliver timely addresses, expressing their delig and satisfaction with the curriculum of t school and the progress of the pupils.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

Portland Lodge has again come to t fore. At the Grand Lodge session of D trict No. 4 held in Portland, Mr. L. M Mendelsohn, in his president's messa recommended that the various lodges the District sponsor the adoption of o or more orphans of the war-devastat areas of Poland and Austria.

Portland Lodge, at its last meetin unanimously agreed to adopt three of th orphans and contributed $300.00 towar this worthy movement. In addition, t individual members are to adopt sev more by voluntary subscription.

Portland Lodge held a regular meeti on Tuesday evening, March 15, at th B'nai B'rith Building. A joint progra was arranged with the Auxiliary.

"Purim" was the subject of an addre by D. Solis Cohen, President of the Di trict Grand Lodge.

Portland Lodge has been backing up th Sunday morning assemblies at Temp Beth Israel. The work is being done und the auspices of the Intellectual Advanc ment Committee of the lodge.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

Following the initiation of a class of ;eventy-five candidates, Portland Lodge, No. 65, at Temple Beth Israel, on Monday ;vening, February 21, Brother Lucius L. ;olomons of San Francisco, first Vice-President of the Constitution Grand ;odge, delivered an oration that was a nasterpiece in eloquence. His subject vas "Justice to the Jew". Mr. Solomons aid in part:

"The seeds of Anti-Semitism have been pread broadcast in America of late be-ause the entire civilized world has been guratively overturned. The Jews are cattered in all lands—a divided minority—nd are helpless because in all countries he will of the majority can work against ae interests of smaller groups.

"And we Jews have been tooting our umpet too long. For 2,000 years we ave told the world that we are fore-inners of civilization—the envoys of eace. The world now demands proof. ne evidence of our claims is our existence ter centuries of persecution. But out the original 12 tribes we have but left and these are scattered to every orner of the globe. Yes, we have been o long our own and only defenders and e absolute futility of self-praise is self-ident.

"Now we ask no place of high honor. ll that we ask is that we should be lowed to share in the country of our sidence the man-made laws of equality. nd it is for posterity that we are striving. is for our children to attain a point of mmon ground with our neighbors. We rselves must resent the slanderers and ach and emphasize the lesson that no ople can hope to prosper upon the seeds class hatred.

"But we Jews have not the genius to lp ourselves. We follow divergent ths in our desire to solve many and con-cting problems. We have none. The e problem we have is that of justice the Jew. Then we can learn in truth e ironical compliments paid to us. ve justice to the Jew. Make him at me in his own land. He wants a true herland here, not a stepfatherland or a pmotherland over there. After all our ntroversial differences belong to the lms of the abstract. We must contend concentration of purpose and power of mbers for the vital and concrete things life which lie in harmony and equality".

ZION LODGE, COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Zion Lodge, No. 62, of Columbus, Ohio, d its regular meeting on March 14. A pacity crowd of several hundred attended s meeting, and it was the expression of that never in the history of Zion Lodge they attend a meeting more interesting l enjoyable. The business transacted, ile brief, covered all the important tters before the lodge.

Varden Thomas, of the Ohio State itentiary, spoke on "Crime and Its re". He pointed out clearly that while penal institutions were endeavoring correct an existing evil, that it would to the best interest of society to concern lf more in the welfare of its boys. There no cause for 500,000 youths being ught before the courts each year, and can help to diminish this number and dicate a growing evil by being a pal your boys. Warden Thomas said, that almost all of the cases, the parent neg-ted the boys.

Mr. Wm. Geary, accompanied by Wm. rkeet, both from the Ohio State Peni-tiary, entertained with songs that ught forth rousing applause.

recitation by Miss Goldie Silverman songs by Mrs. Kneram, who was ac-npanied by Miss Rose Jasanoski, com-ed a most entertaining program.—[Ben Caplan.

RIMMON LODGE, RICHMOND, VA.

immon Lodge, No. 68, on March 19, the scene of an impressive initiation. exercises were held at the Jefferson b as part of the monthly meeting. Dr. ward N. Calisch followed the work of degree team with a talk to the initiates n the history and accomplishments of Order.

number of new applications for mem-ship were acted upon, thereby increas-the waiting list. Eight candidates e initiated.

District No. 1.

The following comparative tables show the standing of the lodges in numerical strength, and will no doubt be of interest because of the changes in the relative standing of same:

Lodges Having a Membership of 200 and Over.

September 30, 1920

1.	Horeb, New Haven	886
2.	Toronto, Toronto	492
3.	Amos, Boston	485
4.	Montefiore, Buffalo	477
5.	Manhattan-Wash., N. Y. C.	461
6.	Springfield, Springfield	334
7.	Ararat, Hartford	254
8.	Worcester, Worcester	239
9.	Brooklyn, N. Y.	229
10.	Jordan, N. Y. C.	201

December 31, 1920

1.	Amos, Boston	1,053
2.	Horeb, New Haven	782
3.	Montefiore, Buffalo	527
4.	Toronto, Toronto	448
5.	Manhattan-Wash., N. Y. C.	442
6.	Springfield, Springfield	329
7.	Brooklyn, N. Y.	259
8.	Worcester, Worcester	253
9.	Ararat, Hartford	253
10.	Jordan, N. Y. C.	215

Lodges Having a Membership of 100 to 200.

1.	Gideon, Albany	180
2.	Rehoboth, N. Y. C.	175
3.	Mt. Sinai, N. Y. C.	172
4.	Abraham, Bridgeport	169
5.	N. Y. Isaiah, N. Y. C.	162
6.	Zerubbabel, Rochester	144
7.	Harmony, Bridgeport	139
8.	New Hampshire, Manchester	137
9.	Maccabee, N. Y. C.	130
10.	Henry Jones L., N. Y. C.	121
11.	Massachusetts, Boston	117
12.	Edward Everett, N. Y. C.	102

1.	Rehoboth, N. Y. C.	177
2.	Jehuda Halevi, New Britain	175
3.	Gideon, Albany	173
4.	Abraham, Bridgeport	170
5.	Mt. Sinai, N. Y. C.	166
6.	N. Y. Isaiah, N. Y. C.	160
7.	Zerubbabel, Rochester	147
8.	Harmony, Bridgeport	142
9.	Maccabee, N. Y. C.	126
10.	Henry Jones, L., N. Y. C.	121
11.	New Hampshire, Manchester	115
12.	Melchi Zedeck, Waterbury	104
13.	Yonkers City, Yonkers	103
14.	Edward Everett, N. Y. C.	100

B'NAI B'RITH LODGE INSTITUTED AT SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

The institution of the Schenectady B'nai B'rith Lodge and the installation of officers took place on the afternoon of January 30. In the evening a banquet was held for the members and guests of the new lodge.

The degree team from Springfield, Mass., exemplified the work in a most beautiful manner. The meeting was addressed by Henry Lasker, President of District No. 1, Rabbi R. Kauffman, of Utica, N. Y., Julius Illch, of Albany, N. Y., member of the General Committee, Samuel Aronowitz, of Albany, Deputy to the State of New York and Mr. Rothschild, Superintendent of the Home for the Aged at Yonkers, N. Y.

Mr. Harry G. Coplon acted as master of ceremonies. The following officers were elected and installed: President, Harry G. Coplon; Vice-President, Benjamin Cohn; Monitor, David Cohn; Secretary, Maxwell Marcus; Treasurer, Samuel Myerhoff; Warden, Samuel Frisch; Assistant Monitor, Harry Rothschild; Guardian, Harry Goldstein. Trustees: Charles Fischer, I. J. Cohn and Jacob Ripin.

LEO N. LEVI LODGE, SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Instituting the new procedure in the method of holding meetings the Leo N. Levi Lodge of the I. O. B. B. held an open forum on March 6 at the Temple Beth El. The chairman, Mr. Henry Hershberg, explained that the purpose of the open forum was to allow the general public to participate in the discussions of the questions of the day together with the members of the I. O. B. B. Rabbi Tedesche was the first speaker before the forum, and took as his subject "Anti-Semitism". He traced the feeling from its origin to the present state, and advised just how to best combat the feeling. Mr. Victor H. Hexter, of Dallas, also addressed the audience, showing the relationship of the B'nai B'rith to the Jewish public.

B'NAI B'RITH ACTIVITIES, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

Youngstown B'nai B'rith celebrated its anniversary with a banquet and dance on March 24 at the Masonic Temple. Three hundred guests attended the affair, which was the finest ever held in Youngstown. The banquet was scheduled for 7:30 p. m. Dr. B. E. Malkin, chairman of the committee, introduced the toastmaster, Past President M. A. Myerovich, who then introduced Past President Dr. I. E. Philo for the invocation. President J. J. Friedland delivered the address of welcome and Past President Dr. I. E. Philo spoke on the work of the local welfare of the B'nai B'rith. The principal speaker of the evening was Rabbi J. B. Krohngold, Executive Director of District No. 2, B'nai B'rith. After the banquet the guests proceeded to the ballroom and enjoyed the rest of the evening with dancing until 1:00 o'clock. Several vocal selections were rendered by Madam Hegyesi, Grand Opera star from Budapest, Hungary. Madam Hegyesi's appearance proved to be an exceptional treat to the guests. The committee in charge was as follows: Dr. B. E. Malkin, chairman, Louis Fried, Sidney Sheibel, B. H. Klivans, J. Rudolph, S. Cohen, D. Levitt, Dr. M. A. Bonhard, J. N. Scott, A. Kessler, H. N. Schoenman; Ladies' Committee; Mrs. A. Kessler, Mrs. J. Gelerntner, Mrs. J. J. Friedland, Mrs. Phil Brown.

Sunday, March 27, Youngstown B. B. members paid an official visit to New Castle, Pa., about two dozen in number. Butler, Pa., was also represented. It was the largest gathering in the history of New Castle Lodge. Marcus Feuchtwanger, Past President, District No. 3, presided. David Borton, President, District No. 3, was the principal speaker. Addresses were also made by Morris Schafner, First Vice-President, District No. 3, Mr. Rosenblum, President of Butler Lodge, and J. J. Friedland, President of Youngstown Lodge. After the show was over, a Dutch lunch was served and cigars were passed around. The Youngstown delegates were divided into three groups coming home, first group arriving at midnight, second group at two a. m. and the last, the next day, distance about twenty miles.

Plans are under way to pay an official visit to Alliance, Ohio, April 10, to initiate a class of about 25 in the afternoon. In the evening a grand "blowout" will be given to the Youngstown boys, who will number about 75. The trip will be made by auto. This affair will be, without question, the most important event in the history of Alliance Lodge.

DISTRICT No. 3.

Braddock Lodge, No. 516, of Braddock, Pa., gave a dance in the Malta Temple on March 10. The affair was one of the most successful ever held by the lodge.

The annual open meeting of Monongahela Valley Lodge, No. 776, of Monessen, Pa., was held on Sunday afternoon, February 27, and was well attended.

The officers of the lodge for the ensuing term were installed by Mr. M. W. Jacobs, member of the General Committee, and the meeting was addressed by Mr. Wolk of Pittsburgh.

Thirteen candidates were initiated by the Monessen degree team in a most able manner and at the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the ladies of the lodge.

A regular meeting of Jericho Lodge, No. 44, of Pittsburgh was held in Moose Temple on Sunday morning, March 13. At this meeting the Committee on Amalgamation made its report. The Committee on Membership also made a report.

MICHIGAN CITY, IND.

At a social, open meeting given by Michigan City Lodge, No. 851, February 15, Rabbi Jacob Meyerowitz, of Gary, Ind., delivered a very interesting address. Brother Dr. William Feder, also of Gary, made a few additional remarks. About twenty-five members of Gary Lodge accompanied Rabbi Meyerowitz and Dr. Feder and were the guests of Michigan City Lodge. Musical numbers by Mrs. Moses Moritz and Mrs. Herbert P. Levin, and dancing by little Devera Shon and Lillian Breskin added to the enjoyment of the occasion. Dancing and refreshments followed. The big Purim ball was a huge success.

MT. ROYAL LODGE, MONTREAL, CANADA.

A Purim Dinner under the auspices of Mount Royal Lodge, No. 729, of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith was held on Thursday evening, March 24.

The guests at the head table were Rabbi Herman Abramowitz, Rabbi Max J. Merritt, Rabbi I. A. Hadad, Lyon Cohen, S. W. Jacobs, K. C., Captain W. Sebag—Montefiore, I. S. Goldenstein, Alan J. Hart, Michael A. Michaels, Charles L. Friedman, F. I. Spielman, and Vivian Hart.

Mr. Marcus M. Sperber, President of the lodge, acted as toastmaster. The toast list was as follows:

"The King", Mr. M. M. Sperber; "Purim", Rabbi H. Abramowitz, Rabbi Max J. Merritt, Rabbi I. A. Hadad; "Grand Lodge", Lyon Cohen, Dr. Simon Kirsch; "District Grand Lodge", Lewis Faber, Arthur Levin; "Our Lodge, Mount Royal, No. 729", Max Bernfeld, Martin J. Kaufman; "Visitors", Louis Wolfe, S. W. Jacobs, K. G.; "The Ladies", Dr. B. Duney, Capt. W. Sebag—Montefiore.

The dinner was served under the special supervision of Mr. Horn, of the Continental Dining Room and was of such excellence that one of our rabbis seriously considered the advisability of becoming orthodox. The feature of the evening was the splendid manner in which our rabbis discoursed upon the subject of Purim. The present anti-Semitic movement was throughly delved into and the methods of counteracting it were considered.

Special commendation to the B'nai B'rith Order was given by Mr. Lyon Cohen, Past President of the lodge. Mr. S. W. Jacobs, K. C., also a Past President, delivered a remarkable address in which he laid stress on the necessity of being at all times ready to uphold the aims and ideals of Judaism. Much good has been done by the B'nai B'rith but we must all do our bit to counteract the movements directed against the Jews.

The Order has taken upon itself the mission of uniting Israelites in the work of promoting their highest interests and those of humanity; of developing and elevating the mental and moral character of the people of our faith; of inculcating the purest principles of philanthropy, honor and patriotism, of supporting science and art, alleviating the wants of the poor and needy; visiting and attending the sick; coming to the rescue of victims of persecution; providing for, protecting and assisting the widow and orphan on the broadest principles of humanity.

Musical selections were rendered by a special orchestra.

The Dinner Committee consisted of Martin J. Kaufman, Chairman, S. Schwisber, S. McKinley and Max Bernfeld.

B'NAI B'RITH LODGE INSTITUTED AT OTTAWA, CANADA.

The institution of the Ottawa B'nai B'rith Lodge and the installation of officers took place on the evening of February 19, 1921. The degree team from Toronto exemplified the work in the most impressive manner, initiating thirty-two charter members.

Henry Lasker, President of District No. 1, and Max Levy, Grand Secretary of the District, were present and addressed the meeting. Many delegates from across the border and district surrounding Ottawa were present.

The officers of the new lodge are as follows: President, Dr. H. Dover; Vice-President, J. J. Marks; Monitor, B. Goldfield; Recording Secretary, H. L. Sternberg; Financial Secretary, B. H. Fogle; Treasurer, Alex. Lerner; Warden, Dr. H. Sloan; Guardian, Dr. S. N. Wathason; Assistant Monitor, M. H. Levy. Trustees elected: M. Friedman, Sam Berger and S. Abesson.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON.

A regular monthly meeting of Abr. Geiger Lodge, No. 423, and its Ladies' Auxiliary was held on Thursday evening, March 17, 1921, at the K. P. Hall.

After the business meeting of both organizations a basket social was held, which is an annual affair with the lodge. There were many beautiful and artistic baskets prepared by the ladies of the Auxiliary, the sale of which helped to swell the lodge fund. Dancing was enjoyed by the younger members as well as by some of the seniors.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

I wish to give you a little resume of our lodge for the duration of the year. Amos Lodge, No. 27, had on December 31, 1919, a total membership of 218. Today, we have a membership of approximately 1,650. I am giving you herewith the number of initiates during the various months of the year 1920:

1920.
January	9
February	9
March	69
April	59
May	57
June	52
July	....
August	....
September	53
October	119
November	203
December	162
1921.
January	285
February	152
March	78

The phenomenal growth of this lodge has been due to the systematic and untiring work of a few members of the lodge, who saw the possibilities and the desire of a united Jewry at the present time, and the people have been educated to that extent. Amos Lodge is now the foremost lodge of District No. 1.

We have addresses of very prominent speakers at every initiation night, imbuing all initiates with the spirit and ideals of the B'nai B'rith. We have had men like Rabbis Lyons, Stearns, Levenson, our worthy first Vice President of the Constitution Grand Lodge, Lueius L. Solomons; among others we have had Rabbis Abrams, Levi, Gold and Sohet of our city. In other words, we have the pulpit with us of the leading rabbis of Boston, who are members of the B'nai B'rith and help us to get recruits for our Order.

On March 24, our annual ball took place at the Hotel Somerset, at which all members and their friends had a very enjoyable and social time.

The Honorable Henry Goldfogle, Ex-Congressman of New York, will speak to Amos Lodge, on April 11.

Initiation will take place on April 25, and Rabbi Harry Halpern, of Brooklyn, New York, will deliver the address of welcome to the initiates on that night.—[Davis Scott.

NEW CASTLE, PA.

One of the most successful open meetings ever held by New Castle Lodge, No. 609, was held Sunday evening, March 27. The lodge room was filled to its capacity. The occasion was the official visit of the President of the District, Brother David Bortin, of Philadelphia, Pa. Brother Morris Schaffner, of Erie, Pa., one of the members of the General Committee, was also a guest of honor.

A large delegation of visiting brothers from Youngstown Lodge, headed by their President, Brother Friedland, and Vice President, Brother Fried, came over; also several visitors from Butler Lodge, headed by their President, Brother Samuel Rosenblum.

An excellent speech by Brother Bortin was very much applauded by the audience. Brother Bortin devoted his remarks to the work of the Anti-Defamation League.

Short talks were also made by Brothers Schaffner, Friedland, Rosenblum, Rothstein and Abe Levine.

Brother Marcus Feuchtwanger, President of New Castle Lodge, and a Past President of District No. 3, was chairman of the meeting.

A fine musical program, consisting of vocal and instrumental numbers, were successfully carried out.

At the close of the meeting a luncheon was served and a social hour was spent.

PROGRESSIVE LODGE, No. 841, NEW YORK.

Entertainment, dance and banquet were given by Progressive Lodge, No. 841, of New York City on Sunday, March 20, 1921, at the B'nai B'rith headquarters.

The entertainment consisted of enjoyable vaudeville and a musical program, followed by a banquet and dance in honor and for the benefit of the wounded and disabled soldiers of the world war, a number of whom were guests of honor at the banquet.

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

Seventy candidates were initiated at the meeting of Pisgah Lodge held on Sunday, March 6, 1921, at Temple Beth El. I. Goldberg, President of Temple Beth El, and Past President of the District Grand Lodge, was the principal speaker at the class initiation. Mr. Goldberg was followed by Brother Bon Ginsburg, President of the lodge, who spoke upon the accomplishments and work of Pisgah Lodge. The musical program at the initiation included a number of songs by the glee club and several selections by I. Leonard Braun.

The Pisgah Lodge smoker held on Monday evening, March 31, at the Elks Temple proved a success, not only by way of attendance, but on account of the successful program presented. Nearly 600 members attended and took part in the ceremonies of the evening.

The feature was the special show presented by professional actors engaged for the occasion. Most ênjoyable was the mass singing, in which all joined.

Julius Deutelbaum was the principal speaker of the evening. He was introduced by Louis Cohane. A five-piece silver set was won by Ira Cohen.

The program also included a series of song selections by Keith and Shaw, the Harts, Hayne Quintet and Mabel Dugan. Wilfred Goldman also sang several numbers, led in mass-singing and accompanied the Pisgah Lodge Glee Club.

Cigars and other features helped to make the evening enjoyable.

Pisgah Lodge has made arrangements to meet every first and third Monday of each month in the old Elk's temple. Lectures and initiation meetings will be held in the new meeting rooms. Regular business meetings will be held at the B'nai B'rith Club rooms.

At the meeting of the lodge held on Monday evening, March 14, 1921, Judge Edw. J. Jeffries was the speaker. He outlined conditions existing in the prisons and spoke at great length of the relation of the courts to the prisons and prisoners. Various reform measures were outlined by the speaker.

ZION LODGE, COLUMBUS, OHIO.

On February 14, Zion Lodge, No. 62, Columbus, Ohio, enjoyed a real live turnout of some three hundred members. This meeting was featured by a ten-round boxing bout and a ten-minute wrestling match between Kotsonoros, world champion wrestler, and Captain Maurer, of Ohio State University. Their services were given gratis.

At this meeting the lodge voted to contribute $300 a year to the Schoenthal Community House and a like amount to the Federation of Jewish Charities. On February 28, the lodge entertained as its guest and speaker Executive Director Jacob B. Krohngold, who addressed an open meeting on the work of the Anti-Defamation League. Eight candidates were initiated at this meeting. A motion was introduced by Brother Rabbi Kornfeld that it be the sense of Zion Lodge that the publication and distribution of the paper called "Facts" be emphatically disapproved; that members of Zion Lodge be discouraged from buying it or encouraging its sale in any way. The motion carried and the matter was placed in the hands of the Anti-Defamation Committee for further action.

The publication of the B'nai B'rith Booster has created exceeding enthusiasm in the affairs of our lodge. Its success can be measured in a degree by the added interest of the members and increased attendance that it encourages. The Booster reaches every member and keeps him in touch with the activities of the lodge. A word of appreciation is extended to Leo Yassenoff, editor-in-chief, who has worked so zealously in its behalf. [B. R. Caplan.

CRITERION LODGE, PHILADELPHIA

Criterion Lodge, of Philadelphia, Pa., opened new headquarters at 1229 N. Broad Street.

The lodge is composed of a membership of eighty young men.

The new building will contain a dance hall, banquet room, library, music room, billiard room and sleeping headquarters. The dedication of the building took place on Sunday, March 20.

On Tuesday, March 1, 1921, the lodge gave a dance at the Ritz-Carlton.

MEMPHIS LODGE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

With the approach of the annual convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 7, I. O. B. B., to be held in Dallas, Texas, May 1, the interest in B'nai B'rith affairs seem to be in the increase throughout the district.

But nowhere is this increased interest more noticeable than among the membership of Memphis Lodge, No. 35, I. O. B. B. For some time past Memphis Lodge has been on the uphill grade, and now that the membership of the lodge is nearing the 500 goal, interest is at fever heat. The meetings are well attended, new members are being initiated at every meeting and a new impetus is noticeable among the members of the various committees.

With a membership of 500 or over it is possible that Memphis Lodge will have the largest membership of any single lodge in the district. The lodge will have a representation at the Grand Lodge of 9 delegates, probably the largest delegation of any single lodge in the district.

William Gerber, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and his committee, are arranging an elaborate program for B'nai B'rith day, which will be commemorated early in April. An out-of-town speaker will make an address, and a delightful musical and literary program is being arranged.

President Phil C. Levitch has appointed Robert Cohen and Joseph M. Samfield as a committee to complete the membership campaign before March 31, at which time it is anticipated to have over 500 members in Memphis B'nai B'rith Lodge.

The Memphis B'nai B'rith has shown a greater increase in membership during the past twelve months than at any period in its history. This is due primarily to the zealous efforts of Phil C. Levitch, who is now serving his second term as President of the lodge. He has labored indefatigably, and to him much credit is due for the rapid progress of the Memphis B'nai B'rith Lodge.

President Phil C. Levitch has started the organization of the women's auxiliary to Memphis Lodge, No. 35, and expects in a very short time to have the new adjunct to the lodge busy at work. Memphis is the first lodge within District No. 7 to begin the organization of a B'nai B'rith ladies' auxiliary.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT FALL RIVER, MASS.

Fall River Lodge, No. 884, was instituted at Fall River, Mass., on March 1, 1921. The ceremony was followed by a luncheon. The degree team of Worcester Lodge of Worcester, Mass., exemplified the ritual.

Henry Lasker, of Springfield, President of District 1, Max Levy, Grand Secretary of the district, Mr. Beeber, the retiring President of Worcester Lodge, and vice-principal of the Worcester High school and Rabbi Harry Halpern of New York City, spoke.

BELLAIRE, OHIO.

Bellaire Lodge, No. 785, Bellaire, O., recently interested itself in behalf of the Jewish junk-dealers of the city whose license fees were suddenly increased by the city council to $150. This unusual and excessive charge worked a considerable hardship upon these men, who appealed to the B. B. Lodge to intercede in their behalf. Through the activity of Mr. Albert Luchs, the lodge was enabled to obtain a reduction of these fees to $48 a year for dealers and to $12 a year for peddlers.

Bellaire Lodge is unique in that it is the only lodge in District No. 2 that can boast a Women's Auxiliary. This organization is now two years old, is in a very flourishing condition and includes practically all the Jewish women of Bellaire as members. It has a membership of fifty ladies. Meetings are held twice a month, one of which is a business meeting, the other a social meeting. The B. B. Lodge leaves its social activities in the hands of this organization.

Three open meetings were recently held by the lodge, one on the occasion of President Samuel Rosenfeld's visit to the lodge, one on the anniversary of the institution of the lodge, when Brothers E. J. Schanfarber, of Columbus, first Vice-President of D. G. L., and Ralph Levinson, of Steubenville, member of the Propaganda Committee, addressed the lodge, and one upon the visit of the Executive Director to the lodge.

MISSOURI LODGE, ST. LOUIS, MO.

The regular meeting of Missouri Lodg on Sunday, March 27, was very wel attended, the occasion being a memoria for the late Dr. Samuel Wolfenstein, who for so many years, served as Superintendent of the Cleveland Orphan Asylum.

A class of five was initiated, in ver excellent fashion, by a team consisting o these brothers: A. L. Levi, acting as President, Carl Vetsburg, as Monitor, Jos Grand, as Vice President, and Dr. Chas. Rederer, as Assistant Monitor. Twelve applicants were elected to membership and an equal number of new applications were received. By a unanimous vote of the members present, it was decided to adopt a second Jewish Orphan from the war-stricken territory, in memory of our late lamented brother, whose memory was honored on the occasion, and a special committee, headed by Brother Jos. Stampfer reported in this connection that sufficient funds had been raised by individual subscriptions of members of Missouri Lodge to adopt two additional Orphans and that the committee was still engaged in the solicitation of funds for the purpose of adopting additional Orphans.

At the conclusion of the regular business meeting, the meeting was turned over t Brother Harry Simon, who read a most beautiful and appropriate memorial service for Dr. Wolfenstein, the program consisting of violin selections, which wer most appropriately interpolated into th service by Harry Gold, a young Jewis prodigy, a member of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, accompanied on th piano by his younger brother, Max The selections rendered by the Brother Gold being "Chant Negre" by Krame and "Song" by Dvorek.

The service proper was followed by most beautiful memorial address read b Brother Dr. Rederer, which address consisted of a beautiful expose of a more personal nature, shedding light upon the beautiful side of the Doctor's nature gaine from a personal acquaintance with hi during the last twenty-five years of hi life. Dr. Rederer stressed the intens human interest, which Doctor Wolfer stein took in the physical well-being of h charges, and emphasized his interests i modern educational and pedagogical met ods such as manual training for boys an domestic science for girls and the necessit of the equal development of the body alo with the mind by means of games and pla as well as strict attention to class-roo routine studies. He referred to the Do tor's habit of personally replying to a of his correspondence in his own han writing, rather than the employment the more modern method of dictating t same to a stenographer, assigning t Doctor's own reason for so doing as a d sire to continue in personal touch with h former charges, long after they had le the institution and his protecting win The address was a most feeling one a conveyed, to those of the brethren w were not so fortunate as Dr. Rederer personally knowing our late brother, feeling akin to intimate friendship with hi

Brother Harry Simon then follow with an address, full of love and affectio He also gave to the brothers an intimat first-hand account of the lovable nature our late brother, referring to the fact th he was among the first in Ohio Orpha ages, and in fact in the United States large, to abolish corporal punishme having forbidden the teachers at h institution to lay a hand upon th charges, no matter what provocation mig exist for discipline. He stated that D Wolfenstein, like Lincoln, was full of lo for the poor and the common people a said that while he was a great succe as a rabbi, a teacher and head of a phila thropic institution, he might have be had he so chosen, a successful busin man, for he was a truly great administrat

Brother Simon also stressed his since love for and interest in B'nai B'rithdo and emphasized his love of its teachin He closed by stating that the Clevela Orphan Asylum was recognized as o of the very best child-rearing institutio in the world and that, preeminently, o reason for this fact existed—that reas being no other than Dr. Wolfenstein.

President Ostfeld then called on Broth Henry Nathan, President of Eben Ez Lodge, who, in a few well-chosen wor expressed his appreciation of our la brother.—[Irwin Sale.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

EDAR LODGE, SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Edar Lodge, No. 211, of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, held a most interesting meeting at its lodge room at Temple Beth El, Monday night, March 14.

A very large number of members was in attendance, and a large class was initiated into the Order. L. N. Lee, Rabbi S. Marks, Sylvan Lang, S. C. Eldridge, E. M. Welsch, Sam Jacobs and M. Adelman were elected Delegates, and Morris Block, Wm. B. Weininger and Nathan Trottner, alternate delegates to the District Grand Lodge, No. 7, Convention, which will convene at Dallas, Texas, May 1, 1920.

Arrangements for a series of lectures and social meetings of the lodge to be held at the Hebrew Institute were adopted, the first meeting to be the evening of April 11, 1921. Arrangements were made for a lecture with moving picture illustrations to be delivered by Louis Vollmer, Superintendent of the Jewish Widows' and Orphans' Home, at New Orleans, La., the early part of May.

The meeting was brought to an unexpected and pleasing close by a presentation of a beautiful victrola to Past Grand President of the Order, Sam C. Eldridge, and a handsome gold watch to L. N. Lee, from the members of Edar Lodge, as an expression of the high regard and esteem in which these two members of the Order are held for their unselfish work for what the Order stands. The presentation speech was made by Wm. L. Schlessinger.—[S. C. Eldridge.

INTELLECTUAL ADVANCEMENT WORK IN DISTRICT No. 3.

Thus far the Intellectual Advancement Committee under President Bortin's administration has done splendid work. It has really been the entering wedge into a proposition that promises to become the greatest movement in District No. 3.

We have a staff of lecturers consisting of rabbis and educators, who have from time to time delivered lectures in the various communities where B'nai B'rith lodges are located. In most instances we were informed that these lectures were well received and highly commented upon by the local presses.

Brother Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson spoke in Wheeling, Parkersburg, Huntington, Washington, Oil City, and Uniontown. The Uniontown newspapers, besides giving an account of the lecture, made an editorial comment upon the very splendid address delivered by Dr. Goldenson on the "International Scapegoat".

Brother Dr. Max L. Margolis spoke in Wheeling and Lancaster and Brother Dr. Nathan Krass also spoke in Lancaster. We are told by a number of the brethren there that they also were very well received. A number of other men have been booked to deliver discourses before communities consisting of Jews and non-Jews in the various cities in the four states that comprise District No. 3.

Next year we expect to be in a position to arrange for a course of lectures to cover the entire winter season in every community and to include in it other men of national repute.—[District No. 3. Chronicle.

SOCIAL SERVICE ACTIVITIES IN MANSFIELD, O., LODGE.

The Ohio State Reformatory, located in Mansfield, Ohio, is a correctional institution for first offenders. There are over 1,600 inmates, twenty-eight of them being Jewish. Vice-President M. F. Weil, from Mansfield Lodge, No. 797, has been doing welfare work for them for over two years, assisted by Brother Benjamin Loeb. In that time a great deal of good has been accomplished in many ways, not only for the boys, but for the parents as well. Each boy is furnished with a prayer-book and a Bible, which he has during his sentence and which he is also permitted to take with him when leaving. Each year on Pesach the boys receive matzoth and they are excused from all work on Yom Kippur and Rosh Hashona. Services are held each Sunday. We are also furnishing the boys with different Jewish publications.

Although Mansfield Lodge is not yet five years old we have a reputation that we are justly proud of. More than ninety-five per cent of all those eligible in Richland County are members and at least seventy-five per cent of those in adjoining counties are members.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

B'nai B'rith Day was celebrated on Sunday evening, March 6, 1921, by Dallas Lodge, No. 197, at Temple Emanuel and a good sized attendance was present. A splendid program, with Arthur L. Kramor, as chairman, was given, and the principal address of the evening was delivered by Dr. William H. Fineshriber of Memphis, Tenn. He chose for his subject "A Challenge to the Jew", and discoursed on the work being done by the Anti-Defamation League to stamp out anti-Semitism, also set forth suggestions for the individuals on this same question. The audience listened with rapt attention to a very stirring address. Mr. Victor H. Hexter, president of District No. 7, I. O. B. B., gave a short talk, telling the purposes of the Order. The musical program was composed of an organ solo by Mrs. J. H. Cassidy, a violin solo by Mrs. Walter J. Fried, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Lefkowitz, after which she was forced to respond to an encore. Dr. David Lefkowitz pronounced the benediction.

Election of delegates to the convention of District No. 7 and initiation of a large class of candidates were the principal business transacted by Dallas Lodge, No. 197, of Dallas, Texas, at a well attended meeting held on March 24, 1921.

Mr. Alex Weisberg, who recently returned from Europe addressed the meeting on what he learned of conditions during his trip abroad.

CONVENTION OF DISTRICT No. 2.

The next convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 2, will be held in St. Louis, May 8, 9 and 10. Judging from responses already received from various lodges throughout the district and from preparations now under way the indications are that this will be one of the largest and most interesting meetings in the history of the District Grand Lodge. The local committee of the associated lodges of St. Louis, of which Brother Joseph M. Michaels is Chairman and Brother Joseph Stampfer Vice-Chairman, is actively engaged in perfecting arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates. Mrs. Aaron Waldheim has accepted the chairmanship of the Ladies' Entertainment Committee and is surrounding herself with a group of energetic workers. The Statler Hotel has been selected as the headquarters for the business meetings and the social events.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT LYNN, MASS.

Lynn Lodge, No. 892, was instituted on Sunday, March 13, at Lynn, Mass. The degree was conferred by the Worcester degree team, which was in charge of Samuel Beeber.

The following officers were elected and installed: President, Joseph Herwitz; Vice-President, Dr. Edward Shon; Recording Secretary, Sam Herwitz; Treasurer, Isidor Linsky; Trustees: Sol. Newman, Harry Israel, Peter Alkin; Monitor, J. J. Lippitt; Assistant Monitor, Isidor Stone; Warden, Simon Alford; Guardian, Morris Borokky.

After the ceremony a banquet was served at the Women's Club House and the ladies were present. Addresses were delivered by Henry Lasker of Springfield, President of District Grand Lodge, Judge A. K. Cohen of Boston, Member of the General Committee, A. Benj. Werby of Boston, President of Amos Ladge, Leo J. Lyons of Boston, Vice-President of Amos Lodge, J. M. Burrows, and Mr. Sheldon of Amos Lodge, Dr. Elias Pofcher of Worcester, Deputy for Massachusetts, Brother Eisenberg, President of Worcester Lodge, and Rabbi Abraham Goodman of New York.

EDWARD EVERETT LODGE, NEW YORK.

On Saturday evening, March 19, 1921, Edward Everett Lodge, No. 97, of New York City, gave its first entertainment and dance of the season, this to be followed by several others.

The affair proved to be a gala event, and was attended by a splendid gathering.

At the close of the entertainment which was a most delightful affair, refreshments were served when dancing to the tune of an excellent jazz band was indulged in until the early hours of the morning.

JOSHUA LODGE, PHILADELPHIA.

At the meeting of Joshua Lodge, No. 23, held on March 2 at the Continental Hotel, Joseph Herbach spoke on the activities of the B'nai B'rith throughout the district. He dwelt on the contrast between the activities of the lodge in the city and country districts and also reviewed the anti-defamation work of the Order.

An interesting program has been laid out for the next few months. The Membership Committee, of which Samuel B. Lush is chairman, will make an effort to increase the membership of the lodge, which, at the present time, exceeds 700.

The Entertainment Committee, of which Mr. Emanuel Finberg is chairman, is making preparations for the dinner-dance, which will be held at the Ritz-Carlton on April 10.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to Abraham Lippman Lodge, No. 672, of Pittsburgh, held its regular meeting on March 16, at which time it was voted to adopt a Jewish war orphan.

ASHEVILLE LODGE, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

The ninth anniversary of the lodge was the occasion for a public installation of officers and social session held in the Jewish Community Club rooms on Sunday evening, March 6.

Brother Marcus W. Jacobi, of Wilmington, N. C., represented D. G. L. No. 5 and was the chief speaker of the evening. His eloquence and sincerity won the entire audience, which was the largest, most enthusiastic gathering the local lodge ever entertained. There were several fine musical numbers on the program. Introductory remarks by Rabbi Harvey E. Wessel were followed by a report of the Secretary and the introduction of Brother Jacobi, who inspired the crowd with the aims of the Order. The new officers all made short addresses, after which the Secretary presented the retiring President, Rabbi Elias Fox, with the lodge's token of appreciation and esteem. Refreshments followed, while the ladies present solicited applications, which resulted in a 50 per cent increase in membership. Dancing and general sociability were then enjoyed until midnight.

Much good is expected of this visit of Brother Jacobi, as there seems to have been a rebirth of public, as well as members' interest in the Order.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT HAMILTON, CANADA.

Viceroy-Reading Lodge, No. 886, was instituted at Hamilton, Canada, on February 20, 1921. The ceremony took place at the Royal Connaught Hotel and thirty-seven members were initiated as charter members of the lodge.

There were present delegations from the District Grand Lodge, and also from sister lodges of Canada. Brother Henry Lasker, of Springfield, President of the District Grand Lodge, accompanied by the Secretary of the District Grand Lodge, Brother Max Levy, presided over the ceremonies and assisted in the initiatory work.

A supper was given to the visiting members and guests, which was participated in by more than 120 people.

David Sweet acted as master of ceremonies and addresses were delivered by Rabbi Julius Berger of this city, and Rabbi Dr. Breckner, Ralph Raphael, Ald. Jos. Singer, Abe Cohen and N. Philips, all of Toronto, Joseph Sweet of Hamilton, and Henry Lasker, President, also spoke.

ANTI-SEMITISM DENOUNCED BY KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Denouncing an alleged anti-Jewish movement in southern parts of the United States, Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty, of the Knights of Columbus, announced that he had called upon 2,200 Knights of Columbus lecturers in the United States and Canada to combat anti-Semitism. "An attack on one religion or race may develop easily into an attack on any religion or race", his message read. "The Knights of Columbus will oppose the anti-Semitic movement because it is un-American. There are undesirables of every race in this country, but that does not justify proscription of any race. So long as there is notoriety and profit in the practice of prejudice, we shall be plagued with the anti-Jewish and other movements".

MINNEAPOLIS LODGE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.

An unusually well attended meeting of Minneapolis Lodge, No. 271, was held at the West Hotel on March 22, 1921. Mr. Abraham Goldberg, of New York, editor, publicist, and communal worker who recently returned from a trip to Palestine addressed the lodge on the subject, "What I Saw In Palestine".

A large class of candidates was also initiated preceding the lecture.

A meeting of the Big Brothers is scheduled for the near future at which time Mr. C. L. Burt will address the members on Social Service. A number of members of Minneapolis Lodge are active in this interesting branch of B'nai B'rith activity.

Minneapolis Lodge as an organization has pledged itself to the movement to raise funds for the starving people of China. Sunday, March 13, was designated as B'nai B'rith Day for the China Famine Relief Fund. Two hundred members of Minneapolis Lodge volunteered to solicit the lodge members for contributions. On March 15, the day of the city general campaign, a section of the city of Minneapolis was assigned to the B'nai B'rith. Four hundred members of the lodge were designated to serve on that day.

JULIUS HOUSEMAN LODGE, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Julius Houseman Lodge, No. 238, held one of the most successful meetings in its history on Monday, March 21, 1921. Sixteen new members were initiated and the ceremonies were held in Temple Emanuel. The initiation ceremonies were in charge of Brother Henry Ely, and were most impressive. A full musical program under charge of Brother Abraham J. Gorney added considerably to the beauty of the ritual.

After the initiation a banquet was held in the Vestry Room of the Temple, after which the lodge listened to an eloquent address of Brother. Benjamin Samuels of Chicago, who pointed out in impressive manner the services that B'nai B'rith has made and is making to the cause of Judaism in this country and throughout the world. The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic and best attended in the history of the lodge.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT ROANOKE, VA.

On February 10, Dr. Edw. N. Calisch, of Richmond, member of the Executive Committee of the Order, instituted Israel Friedlander Lodge, No. 877, at Roanoke, Va. There was a large and enthusiastic audience in attendance, forty-five members being enrolled on the charter.

Dr. Calisch officiated at the initiatory ceremonies, installed the newly elected officers and after the initiation doors were thrown open to the public. The hall soon became filled by those who desired to listen to the address of Dr. Calisch on the work of the history of the Order, which address was warmly received.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

On March 6, 1921, Kadimah Lodge, No. 881, B'nai B'rith, of Springfield, Ohio, was instituted by the officers of D. G. L. No. 2. The petition was secured by Sidney G. Kusworm, a member of the Executive Committee of the Order. Edwin J. Schanfarber, of Columbus, First Vice President of District No. 2, presided. Messrs. Kusworm, Schulman and Klein attended from Dayton and Leonard H. Frieberg from Cincinnati. Edwin J. Schanfarber and Sidney G. Kusworm made eloquent addresses. The lodge started with a membership of 45, all high caliber men, and bids fair to be one of the banner lodges of the district.

HARMONY LODGE, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Judge-made law and statute-made law were explained by Prof. Edmund Morris Morgan, of Yale University Law School, at an open meeting held by Harmony Lodge on March 20, 1921. His subject was "Relation of the Lawyer to the Layman." Professor Morgan told why a lawyer is necessary to a community.

The meeting was largely attended and was the first of a series of similar meetings to be held in the near future, which have already been arranged by the committee in charge.

WORCESTER, MASS.

On March 19, Worcester Lodge, No. 600, held a very enthusiastic meeting presided over by Alfred G. Isenberg, President. Twenty-five candidates were admitted and the degree work was exemplified by the Junior degree team. Many of these new candidates, who are members of other American Orders, spoke highly of the B'nai B'rith ritual and of the work as exemplified.

Our Junior degree team has been very active this month, having instituted a new lodge in Fall River on the 6th and one in Lynn on the 13th. The Senior degree team, under the leadership of Attorney Elias H. Pofcher, initiated forty candidates for the Hagai Lodge of Providence, R. I.

Resolutions were also received from the Lowell Lodge, of Lowell, Mass., in appreciation of the splendid degree work as exemplified by the Senior degree team when their new lodge was instituted. —[Jos. Friedman.

DAVIS LODGE, SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

The feast of Purim was celebrated under the auspices of Davis Lodge, No. 872, of Sheboygan, Wis., in March 26, 1921, and it proved a most delightful and enjoyable affair. There was a full attendance of the members of the lodge and its Ladies' Auxiliary.

Mr. H. Davis, acting as master of ceremonies for the evening, spoke about the festival and his talk was very much enjoyed. At the conclusion of his remarks, he presented a silver fruit stand to Mr. and Mrs. Menschoff.

Refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and merry making.

DAUGHTERS OF THE COVENANT AUXILIARY TO PORTLAND LODGE.

Daughters of the Covenant Auxiliary to Portland Lodge is bringing joy to many a little soul as well as warmth to the little bodies, by the garments they are turning out.

Many a worthy home was graced with the festive spirit of "Purim" through the generosity of a great many of the members of the Auxiliary who prepared bountiful baskets of food for distribution among the needy.

The Auxiliary holds business lunches at noon, the first and third Tuesday of each month, in the Hazelwood Hotel. These luncheons have proved really interesting.

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON.

The meeting of Ranier Lodge, No. 627, of Seattle, Washington, held on Wednesday evening, March 9, 1921, records the largest attendance ever recorded in the history of the lodge. An excellent program was furnished by the committee in charge, one of the features being the jazz orchestra which has recently been organized. Vocal solos were given by David Elkan, Miss Walker and little Marjorie Grinston. Mr. J. A. Coysell gave an impersonation of the "Madison Men from India". The speaker of the evening was Rabbi Jonah B. Wise of Portland.

HERZL LODGE, HOUSTON, TEXAS.

On Tuesday, March 1, 1921, Herzl Lodge, No. 608, held a meeting at the Y. M. H. A. Hall, which was well attended.

Twelve candidates were initiated, the work being done by the degree team of the lodge.

Election of delegates to the District Grand Lodge convention was also held.

Under new business, the proposition of adopting additional Jewish war orphans was taken up, resulting in the contribution of $400 by members, making the total of the lodge $500 for this purpose. One orphan will be adopted in memory of late Brother Solomon Marx of New Orleans.

It was a late hour when the enthusiastic assembly adjourned.

B'NAI B'RITH AUXILIARY OF SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

A ladies' auxiliary of Davis Lodge, No. 872, was organized on February 20, 1921, at the lodge rooms of Davis Lodge, twenty-three ladies signing as charter members. Officers were chosen and standing committees selected.

The Ladies' Auxiliary is to work in conjunction, as far as possible, with the men's lodge and both will strive to work for the [illegible] of the Jewish people in all manner [illegible]

DISTRICT No. 7.

A grand Purim Masquerade Ball was given by Isidor Strauss Lodge, No. 519, of Ft. Worth, Texas, on Tuesday evening, March 22.

Gulf Lodge, No. 221, of New Orleans, La., held a "Lodge of Sorrow" on Sunday, March 13, at the Y. M. H. A. in memory of late Brother Solomon Marx.

Rabbi Tedesche established a popular forum under the auspices of the B'nai B'rith of San Antonio, Texas. He introduced the Forum before a large and enthusiastic audience on Sunday, March 6, at which time Judge Fly delivered a lecture on "The Privilege of American Citizenship."

COUNCIL BLUFFS LODGE, COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

Plans and preparations are being made by the members of the Council Bluffs lodge of the B'nai B'rith for its tenth annual celebration which will be given in April.

Although the Council Bluffs lodge has been in existence for only ten years it has already received honorary montion, from the Grand Lodge of the B'nai B'rith because of its large membership. There are one-hundred and twenty-five Jewish families in Council Bluffs, and there are more than 130 members in the Council Bluffs lodge.

DANVILLE, ILLINOIS.

A semi-formal dinner dance was held under the auspices of Danville Lodge, No. 568, of Danville, Ill., at the Elks' Club on March 22, 1921. Over a hundred couples attended and it proved to be one of the best affairs held by the lodge. Representatives from a number of sister lodges of Terre Haute, Champaign and other cities were in attendance. After the dance, a midnight luncheon was given out-of-town guests.

BRISTOL, TENNESSEE.

Nat. Strauss Lodge, No. 779, of Bristol, Tenn., celebrated "The Feast of Purim" in befitting style on Sunday, March 27, 1921, in their lodge room, where the entire community, with few exceptions, congregated to partake of the bountiful repast served by the Jewish Ladies Aid Society of the city. The feature of the evening was an address by Mr. I. B. Finkelstein, of Knoxville, Tenn., President of the B. B. Lodge of that city, who is said to be the youngest President in the Order. He delivered a masterly message on "Brotherly Love", replete with inspiration to the members and full of thoughtful advice to Jews in general, which was thoroughly appreciated by all.

TRINIDAD LODGE, TRINIDAD, COLO.

Trinidad Lodge celebrated the forty-third anniversary of its founding on March 20. A class of Seven was initiated into the order, the work being done by the Denver degree team, consisting of Brothers Freidman, Anfenger, Zwetow and Heller. In the evening a social session was held for the members, their ladies and friends. Trinidad Lodge now numbers seventy-eight members and has waiting four candidates, with a few more in sight.

STEUBENVILLE, OHIO.

More than 250 turned out to hear Mr. Jacob B. Krohngold, Executive Director of District No. 2, I. O. B. B., at an open meeting of Steubenville Lodge, No. 787, held Sunday, February 27, at the Jewish Community Center. Brother Krohngold spoke on the work of the Anti-Defamation League. Several splendid musical numbers rounded out the evening.

JOPLIN, MO.

On February 13, United Cities Lodge, No. 533, celebrated B'nai B'rith Day. The guest of honor and speaker of the occasion was Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, President, D. G. L. No. 2, who spoke on "Opportunity, Security and Happiness". The address was well received by a large attendance, numbering about 160 people. A banquet was served and a musical program was greatly enjoyed.

DISTRICT No. 5.

Gate City Lodge, No. 144, of Atlanta, Ga., is actively engaged in a membership campaign for the purpose of securing 100 candidates to be initiated at a special class initiation during this spring.

The lodge is also actively engaged in Anti-Defamation League work in the matter of raising funds for the league.

EDAR LODGE, SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Edar Lodge, No. 211, is one of the oldest lodges in District No. 7.

The past year has been one of unusual activities. The membership has been greatly increased and splendid and well attended meetings are held.

A short time ago a class of sixty was initiated and a class of about forty or more will soon be initiated. Edar Lodge has never failed to celebrate B'nai B'rith Day, and this year's celebration was a splendid success, having in attendance Brother Rabbi William Fineshriber of Memphis, Tennessee, Grand President; Victor H. Hexter, of Dallas, Texas, Second Vice-President; S. J. Westheimer of Houston, Texas; Brother H. G. Gootman of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and others.

The lodge also had a splendid meeting for the Anti-Defamation League, addressed by Brother Rabbi Henry Cohen of Galveston, Texas, whose efforts were ably supplemented by our Second Grand Vice-President, S. J. Westheimer. A collection of about two thousand dollars was made for the Anti-Defamation League.

The present officers of the lodge are splendid types of the young American Jews.

Above all, the great secret of Edar Lodge's success is its broad democratic brotherly feeling established which prevails throughout its membership, having only one central thought and that is to carry out its principles so the Jews and mankind may be benefitted by its activities.

The lodge has always sought the membership of Jews in the neighboring cities, and during the month of January of this year a session of the lodge was held at Lockhart, Texas, and about twenty initiated into the lodge. The initiation was followed by an entertainment given by the Lockhart brethren under the direction of Brother A. Weinbaum and L. Schwartz and others and was a memorable occasion in the life of the lodge.

Edar Lodge is arranging for a series of lectures and social meetings to be held in the newly opened Hebrew Institute, and the first of these will be held on April 11. An illustrated lecture early in May will be given by Louis Vollmer, superintendent of the Jewish Women's and Orphans' Home at New Orleans, La. At the last meeting of the lodge, a phonograph was presented to Past Grand President Sam C. Eldridge, and a gold watch was given to L. N. Lee in appreciation of their untiring work for the welfare of the organization. The presentation speeches were made by William L. Schlessinger.

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

As a result of the growing work of the lodge, the Secretaries of Amos Lodge felt obliged to tender their resignation. The lodge appointed a committee to investigate the advisability of establishing a business office for the lodge.

The committee reported to the lodge at the February 28 meeting in favor of the establishment of such an office. The recommendation was approved by the lodge. An office was secured at the Carney Building, 43 Tremont St. The records of the lodge will be kept in this office. It will serve also as a meeting place for the various committees of the lodge. A clerk will be in attendance daily to take care of the matters pertaining to Amos Lodge.

Warden Shattuck, of the State Prison at Charlestown, addressed the members of Amos Lodge at the meeting held on Monday, March 14. He spoke of his experiences in his prison work. The meeting was unusually well attended by the members and their ladies.

The second meeting of the lodge in March, held on Monday, the 28th, was devoted entirely to a class initiation. The initiatory work was exemplified by the junior degree team of Worcester Lodge of Worcester, Mass.

Rabbi H. Raphael Gold of Roxbury delivered an address.

DISTRICT No. 4.

Dr. J. B. Wise, grand orator of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, was the principal speaker at a regular meeting of Rainier Lodge of Seattle, Wash., held on March 7.

B'NAI B'RITH OF SAN FRANCISCO.

Golden Gate Lodge, No. 129, entertained its members and friends at a whist party on Wednesday evening, March 16, 1921, in the B'nai B'rith Building. Valuable prizes were awarded and refreshments were served.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

The Entertainment Committee of Cleveland Lodge, No 16, presented the "B'nai B'rith Follies" during the month of March. The play is the work of Stanley Koch and David Warshawsky. Lyrics and songs were some of the features of the production.

The B'nai B'rith Chess Circle is planning an individual chess tournament for the members. As part of its program, the circle conducted a simultaneous chess match in which Mr. Edw. Lasker of Chicago, considered to be one of the foremost chess players of the country participated. Mr. Lasker recorded twenty victories and two draws.

The French Circle organized two years ago is arranging for a change of program in the course of study. It is planning to read several light comedies. The circle is planning a soiree at which time a program of interest will be presented.

The Speakers' Club held a meeting on March 6, 1921. Mr. Russell Wiseman of the Western Reserve University spoke on "Business Conditions of the Day".

Cleveland Lodge will celebrate Passover with a traditional Seder on the second night of Pesach, Saturday evening, April 23, at the B'nai B'rith Building. It is intended primarily for those who have not the opportunity of participating in a ceremonial of this kind in their own home. The Seder will be conducted by Rabbi Solomon Goldman.

The Premiere of the "Razzing Show of 1921" was held on Saturday, April 2, 1921. The cast was composed of eight girls and a dozen men chosen with special care as to the character they were to burlesque, with snappy lines and with appropriate parodies on timely songs. The production exceeded even the fondest anticipations of the committee.

DISTRICT No. 2.

Kansas City Lodge, No. 184, of Kansas City, Mo., entertained its members with a cultural meeting on Monday night, March 1, 1921, in honor of its Past Presidents in the assembly room of the Temple.

Dr. H. H. Mayer was speaker of the evening and a large class of candidates was initiated.

JEWS IN LATVIA MAY LABOR ON SUNDAY.

Danzig, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The Constituent Assembly of Latvia has adopted the proposal of the parties that Jews resting on Saturday be permitted to work and trade on Sunday according to a Riga dispatch received here. The proposal had the support of the commission on National Minorities.

ON THE FORD ISSUES.

The individuals and publications responsible for the so-called "anti-Semitic movement" are not serving the cause of true democracy in the United States.

The American government was founded on the principle that men of every race are entitled to equal rights and privileges and endowed by nature with a capacity for good citizenship, under democratic institutions. That, at least, was the conception of Jefferson and Lincoln.

The anti-Semitic movement is an extreme form of bigotry. It goes one step further than Toryism, by urging discrimination against the Jews on the ground of religion as well as the accident of birth.

The anti-Semitic movement will result in evil reaching beyond our national boundaries. Racial prejudice is the surest breeder of war. Until it is weeded out of the hearts of mankind, there will be no lasting peace. The common people of the land, who have most to gain from democcracy and most to lose in international war, must defend this country from attacks like that now directed against the Jew. He is an enemy of American democracy who assails any man or any people because of nationality or religion.—[La Follette's Magazine.

AMERICAN CONSUL WILL NOT VISE PASSPORTS UNLESS MEN HAVE PERMISSION OF THEIR WIVES TO SAIL.

Warsaw, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency),

Announcement is made in behalf of the American Consul in this city that in future he will issue no vises to men going abroad unless they can produce proof that they have the permission of their wives to do so.

6.05
N
R.B.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS
BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

IVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY
JUN

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII MAY, 1921 No. 9

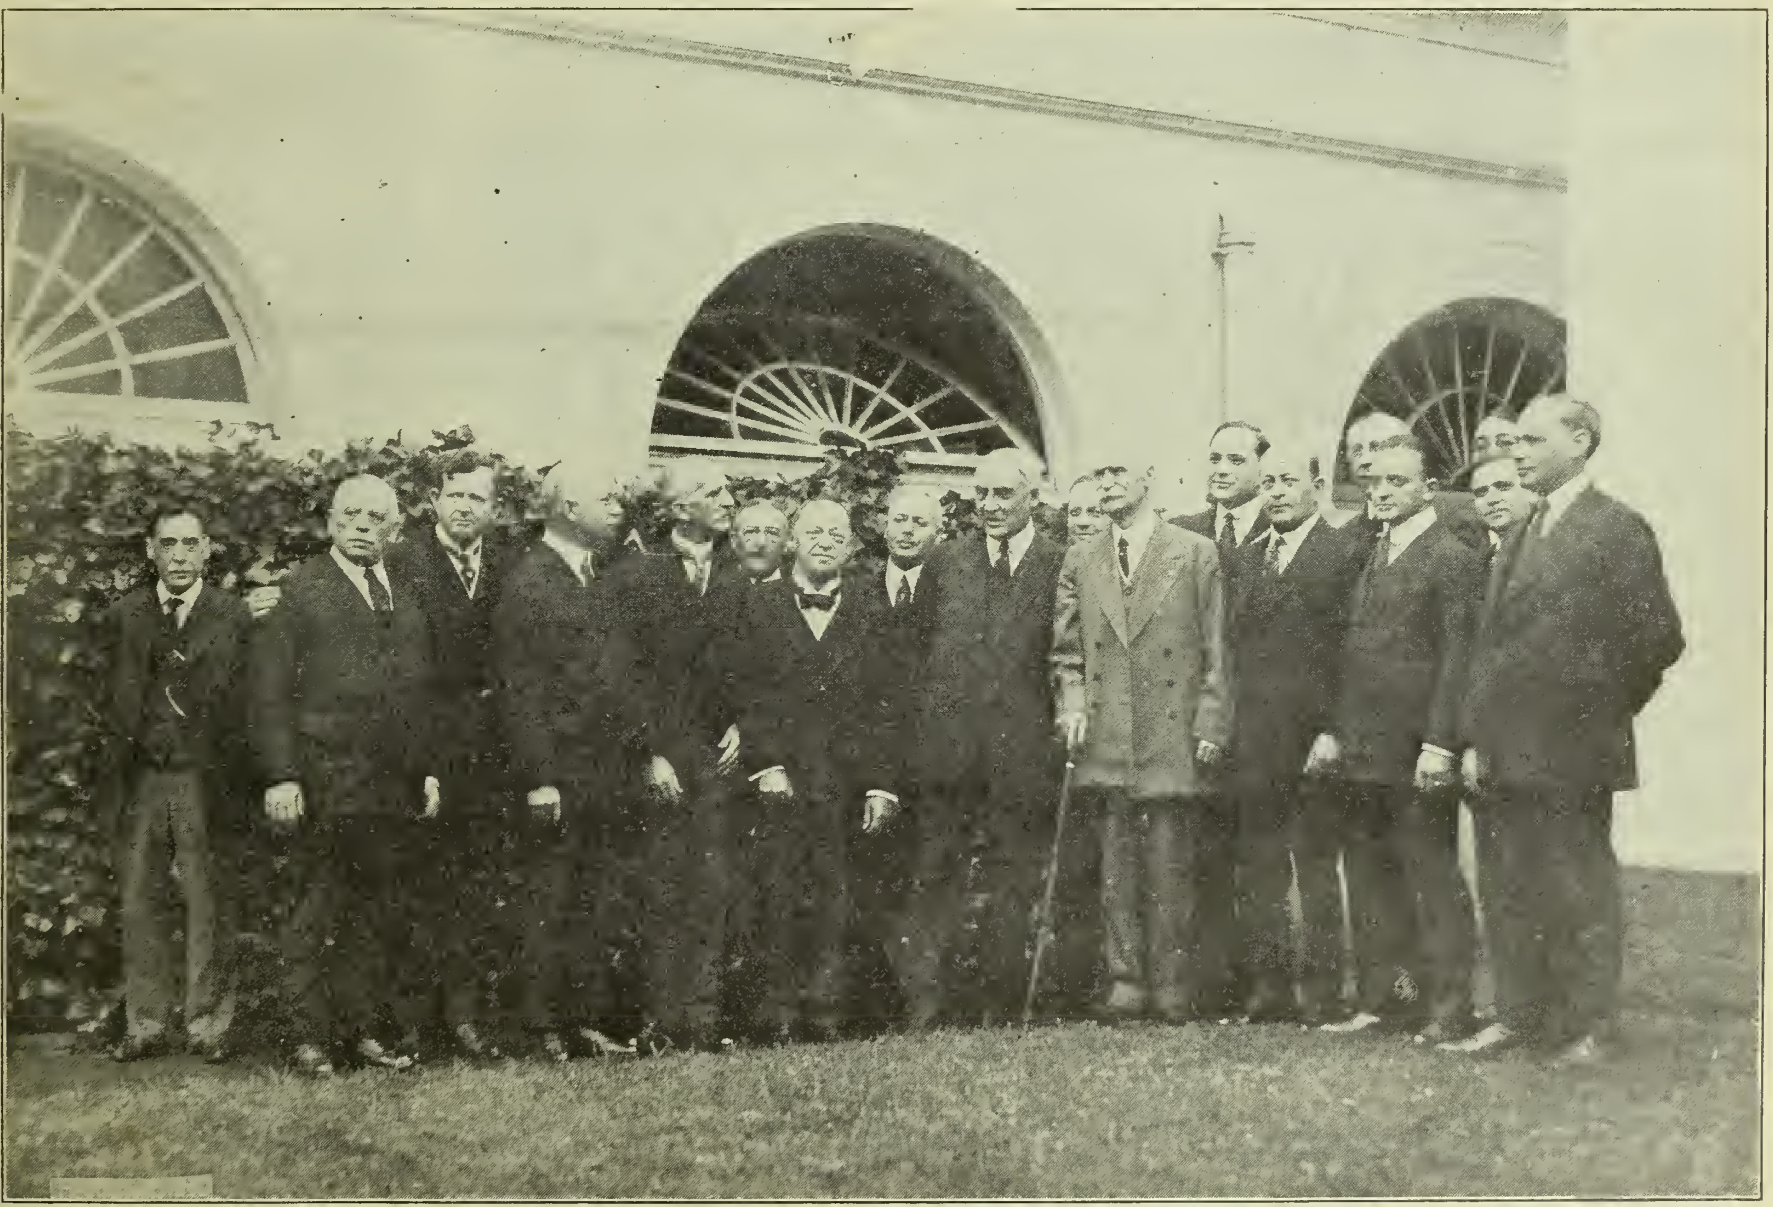
Minutes of the Meeting of the Executive Committee, Independent Order of B'nai B'rith

Held in Washington, D. C., on May 5 and 6, 1921

May 5, 1921.

Morning Session.

A MEETING of the Executive Committee of the Order was held in Washington, D. C., on May 5 and 6, 1921, with the following in attendance: Adolf Kraus, Lucius L. Solomons, Archibald A. Marx, Jacob Singer, Simon Wolf, Charles Hartman, Sidney G. Kusworm, Dr. Edward N. Calisch, Philip Stein, Henry Lasker, Samuel Rosenfeld, David Bortin, D. Solis Cohen, Clarence M. Lehman, Sig. Livingston and the Secretary.



Executive Committee of Constitution Grand Lodge, Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, Received by President Harding at the White House, May 5, 1921.

Excuses were presented for the absence of Brothers Irving Lehman, Eugene Mannheimer and A. B. Freyer.

Brothers Julius I. Peyser, Past President of District No. 5, and Edwin L. Levy, Secretary of District No. 5, were also present.

Greetings were presented from District Grand Lodge, No. 7, in convention assembled at Dallas, Texas, and from District Grand Lodge, No. 8, by its President and Secretary.

Brother Rev. Herbert J. Samuel, of Winnipeg, as representative of the B'nai B'rith lodges in the Dominion of Canada, read a prepared statement, reviewing the creation of a Canadian Anti-Defamation Committee at a conference of representatives of the Canadian lodges in Winnipeg in November, 1920; showing that such committee was necessary because it met the situation in Canada successfully, that it had to be under control of citizens of that country and not of those of foreign lands and that if the lodges cannot carry on the work as such, it would have to be carried on independent of the Order. Brother Samuel, therefore, requested that the Executive Committee reconsider the action of the Central Administrative Board at its meeting on January 4, 1921, holding that: "No independent action be taken by any lodge or lodges here or in Canada on the lines of Anti-Defamation work and that any plan for action or any literature proposed to emanate from any lodge or lodges in regard to Anti-Defamation work be first submitted to the Executive Committee of the Order for its approval".

Brother Sidney G. Kusworm moved that the action of the Central Administrative Board of the Order taken at its meeting held in Chicago on January 4, 1921, be reconsidered. Motion carried.

Moved by Brother David Bortin that the Anti-Defamation Committee, acting under the auspices of the lodges of the Order in Canada, be authorized to work autonomously and as far as practicable cooperate with the Anti-Defamation League of the Order. Motion was unanimously adopted.

The following communications were presented:

From District Grand Lodge, No. 4, enclosing copy of resolution adopted by that district at its fifty-eighth annual convention held in the city of Portland, Oregon, instructing its General Committee to take up with the Executive Committee of the Order the proposition of establishing lodges of the Order in the Republic of Mexico and the South American Republics.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 7, with reference to the establishment of B'nai B'rith lodges at Mexico City, Vera Cruz and Tampico.

From Brother Rabbi Martin Zielonka, of El Paso, Texas, transmitting correspondence concerning the possibilities of organizing a B'nai B'rith lodge in Mexico City.

The three communications were ordered referred to the Central Administrative Board for such action as it may deem proper.

From the Zionist Organization of America extending an invitation to the Order to send a representative to attend the convention of the Zionist Organization of America held in Buffalo, on November 25, 1920. The Secretary presented in connection therewith copy of reply sent by the President of the Order which was read. Upon motion which prevailed action of the President of the Order was approved.

From Green Bay Lodge, No. 618, of Green Bay, Wis., transmitting resolution adopted by Green Bay Lodge endorsing the attitude of the President of the Order in the matter of reconstruction work in Palestine. Communication ordered filed.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 10, Czecho-Slovakia, transmitting report of the President of that district submitted to the convention of that district held on March 20, 1921. Communication was ordered referred to the Central Administrative Board.

From Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark,

N. J., inquiring whether the following resolution adopted by the lodge: "That Ezekiel Lodge send representatives to the local provincial committee that will meet to organize an American Jewish Congress provided the action is not unconstitutional", is deemed legal and constitutional by the Executive Committee of the Order. In this connection communication was presented from Brother Fred'k Jay, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 3.

Moved by Brother Philip Stein that a committee of three bo appointed to prepare a statement expressive of the sense of the Executive Committee of the Order with reference to participation by lodges or District Grand Lodges in matters of national, racial or political nature. Motion carried and Brothers Philip Stein, Dr. Edw. N. Calisch and Jacob Singer were appointed as such committee.

Brother Simon Wolf announced that the President of the United States designated the hour of 12:30 to receive at the White House the members of the Executive Committee of the Order.

Brother Simon Wolf further announced that Brother Julius I. Peyser of Washington arranged for a luncheon after the reception at the White House at which the Honorable James Davis, Secretary of the Department of Immigration and Labor, would be the guest of honor.

Recess was then taken until 3:00 p. m. same day.

Reception at the White House.

The members of the Executive Committee of the Order were received by President Warren G. Harding in the White House, Brother Simon Wolf introduced to the President, Brother Adolf Kraus, who then introduced each member of the Executive Committee.

President Kraus then addressed President Harding, conveying to him good wishes on behalf of the membership of the Order, and pledging its support and loyalty to the President and to the American Government.

President Harding responded, expressing appreciation of the aims of the Order and that it is his earnest desire to promote peace and good will among the nations and people of the earth.

A photograph of the members of the. Executive Committee with President Harding was then taken.

Luncheon in Honor of Secretary Davis.

With Brother Julius I. Peyser as host, a luncheon was tendered at the Hotel Washington, participated in by the members of the Executive Committee and a number of prominent members of the Order, residents of Washington. The guest of honor was Honorable James Davis, Secretary of the Department of Immigration and Labor. Mr. Davis addressed the audience on the difficulties confronting him in the matter of properly executing the work of the Department under his charge. His address was very much appreciated.

Afternoon Session.

At the appointed hour the meeting reconvened, all those reported present at the previous sessions in attendance.

The President announced the death of Brother Salomon Marx. of New Orleans and of Mrs. Charles Hartman, of New York.

Moved by Brother Simon Wolf that a vote of thanks be extended to Secretary Davis of the Department of Labor and that the Secretary be directed to express, on behalf of the Executive Committee, to Secretary Davis its appreciation and thanks for his attendance at the luncheon and for his address. Motion was unanimously adopted.

Brother Simon Wolf reported that on behalf of the Executive Committee of the Order he caused a basket of flowers to be sent to Mrs. Warren G. Harding and submitted the following acknowledgment received from the White House:

"May 5, 1921. Mrs. Harding asks me to thank the members of the Executive Committee of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith for the very beautiful basket of roses which came yesterday.

"Assuring you of Mrs. Harding's warm appreciation of this generous thought and with her best wishes,

"Sincerely yours,
"LAURA HARLAN,
"Secretary".

The matter of awarding the B'nai B'rith gold medal was taken up. It was unanimously resolved that the consideration of awarding the B'nai B'rith gold medal be laid over until the next meeting of the Executive Committee.

Following communications were pre-[illegible]

From District Grand Lodge, No. 7 transmitting resolution adopted by the District Grand Lodge at its convention held in Dallas, Texas, on May 2, 1921, to wit:

"Whereas, Owing to difficulties in obtaining passports to United States ports European emigrants in large numbers are coming to Vera Cruz, Mexico, and settling in the vicinity thereof and in the city of Mexico, and

"Whereas, The prospective increase in such emigration is likely to create social and economic problems for our co-religionists in that country as well as in the American states bordering thereon, some of them in District No. 7; Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the Order be requested forthwith to cause a survey to be made and, if found necessary, to establish such agencies in conjunction with the Jewish Communities of Mexico as will provide for the proper distribution of such emigrants in Mexico and in other southern Republics into which they may lawfully enter".

Upon motion which prevailed the resolution was referred to a committee consisting of Brothers Archibald A. Marx and Lucius L. Solomons for consideration and report.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 7, transmitting copy of resolution passed by the Grand Lodge at its convention held in Dallas, Texas, on May 2, 1921, to wit:

"Whereas, Conditions in Europe make it physically impossible for many persons to obtain a legal passport to this country, and

"Whereas, Those same and other conditions in Europe have become so unbearable that many emigrants are seeking a haven of refuge in Central American ports and particularly those of our sister republic, Mexico, from which country such refugee emigrants are attempting to enter the United States, and

"Whereas, Deportation threatens such of them as may be unlawfully in the United States; Therefore

"Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the Order be requested to take such action as will assist the United States Government in enforcing the immigration laws of this country but at the same time appeal to our government not to send such offenders to lands where their lives may be jeopardized".

Moved by Brother Archibald A. Marx that a committee be appointed to consider the foregoing resolution and to confer with the Secretary of the Department of Labor and the Commissioner of Immigration and to submit report. Motion carried. The President appointed as such committee, Brothers Archibald A. Marx, Simon Wolf and Julius I. Peyser.

Brother Simon Wolf thereupon presented to the Executive Committee his report as representative of the Order in Washington. Upon motion which prevailed, a vote of thanks was extended to Brother Wolf for the splendid report presented by him and for the painstaking attention devoted by him to the many problems confronting American Jewry.

The question of maintenance of the office of the Order in Washington was then taken up for consideration.

Moved by Brother Philip Stein that the allowance for the maintenance of the Washington office be increased to $250 per month. Motion was amended by Brother Jacob Singer to increase the allowance to $300 per month. Motion as amended was put to a vote and was unanimously adopted.

Moved by Brother Sidney G. Kusworm that the increased allowance for office expense in Washington be dated from January 1, 1921. Motion carried.

From the Joint Distribution Committee of the American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers, Department for the Care of Jewish War Orphans, outlining a financial adoption plan in connection with the cooperation of the Order with the Joint Distribution Committee for the care of Jewish war orphans.

Moved by Brother Sidney G. Kusworm that the plan as outlined by the Joint Distribution Committee be approved and that the lodges be informed accordingly.

Substitute motion was offered by Brother Philip Stein that the communication be referred to a committee of three for consideration and report. Substitute motion was put to a vote and was carried. The President appointed as such committee Brothers Philip Stein, Sidney G. Kusworm and David Bortin.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Germany, informing the Executive Committee of the Order that there is a great demand on the part of lodges of the district and individual members for a complete and exhaustive history of the Order and suggesting that the Executive Committee take the necessary steps looking to the preparation of such history and tendering the Executive Committee its cooperation with reference to material pertaining to the German District. Communication was ordered referred to the Central Administrative Board.

The matter of making allotments to districts for propaganda purposes was taken up for consideration.

Upon motion which prevailed a committee consisting of Brothers Archibald A. Marx and the Secretary was appointed to consider the matter and submit report.

Dr. Oscar Grün, Editor of the Jüdische Press Zentrale of Zürich, Switzerland, was granted the privilege of addressing the Executive Committee. Dr. Grün in his statement alluded to the work of his newspaper in furnishing authentic and correct information to various organizations and the general press on matters pertaining to Jewish affairs. He appealed for an appropriation to make it possible for him to continue this work, heretofore and up to this time carried on from his own personal means. After discussion of the subject matter and the request of Dr. Grün, it was moved by Brother Archibald A. Marx that the Secretary of the Order be directed to ascertain from the Grand Lodges of Europe and from other available sources the extent of the work of Dr. Grün and the results secured through the publication of the organ under his leadership and that if report on those matters be deemed favorable by the Central Administrative Board, the latter be authorized to make such appropriation in the premises as it will deem proper. Motion carried.

A recess was then taken until 8:00 p. m. same day.

Evening Session.

At the appointed hour the meeting reconvened, all those reported. present at the previous sessions in attendance.

Brother Archibald A. Marx, on behalf of the committee appointed to make recommendations as to propaganda allotments, recommended the following allotments:

District No. 1, to cover expense connected with Canadian propaganda, $2,500.

District No. 1, for general propaganda purposes, $1,500.

District No. 2, $1,750.

District No. 3, $1,500.

District No. 4, $1,500.

District No. 5, $3,000.

District No. 6, to cover expense in connection with Canadian propaganda, $1, 500.

District No. 6, for general propaganda purposes, $1,500.

District No. 7, $1,250.

The committee further recommended that the manner and mode of payment of these allotments be left to the President of the Order.

Moved by Brother Henry Lasker that the report of the Committee on Propaganda Allotments and recommendations connected therein be approved. Motion carried.

It was thereupon resolved that the remainder of the evening session be devoted for the consideration of matters connected with the Anti-Defamation League and its work.

The Secretary presented financial report containing itemized statement of receipts and disbursements of the Anti-Defamation League fund.

The work of the league during the past year was then reviewed and plans for the continuation of the program as outlined during the past year and a possible enhancement thereof were then considered.

The President of the Order and Brothers Lucius L. Solomons and Sig. Livingston addressed the meeting, emphasizing the absolute need of continuing the work and to pursue an educational campaign to enlighten the American public upon the true status of the Jew and urging the necessity of securing additional funds for carrying on the work as outlined.

At the close of the discussion it was unanimously resolved upon motion of Brother Sidney G. Kusworm, that the President of the Order be authorized and requested to secure a competent man to conduct a campaign for funds and that such other assistants be employed as may be found necessary to bring about the desired results. Motion was unanimously adopted.

A recess was then taken until 9:30 a. m. the following day.

May 6, 1921.

Morning Session.

At the appointed hour, the meeting reconvened, all those reported present at the previous sessions in attendance.

Financial reports of the Treasurer and the Secretary were presented showing the balances of the various funds of the Executive Committee to be as follows:

General Fund balance	$22,036.30
Emergency Relief Fund balance	34,361.44
Special Fund balance	11,926.50
Oriental Fund balance	87.18
European Fund balance	435.49
Rehabilitation Fund balance	11,189.81
European Orphan Fund balance	224.00
Total	$80,260.72

The Secretary further presented detailed statement of the B'nai B'rith Rehabilitation Fund, and statement showing changes in the roster of lodges and a membership statement showing the membership of the Order in the American Districts on January 1, 1921, to be 50,866 against 40,423 on January 1, 1920, showing a net gain of 10,443.

Upon motion which prevailed the aforementioned reports were referred to a committee consisting of Brothers D. Solis Cohen and Henry Lasker for audit and report.

Appropriations to philanthropic institutions supported and maintained by the Order were then considered.

Moved by Brother Archibald A. Marx that the same appropriations as made heretofore be renewed. Motion carried and the following appropriations were thereupon entered upon the records for the ensuing year:

National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives, Denver	$6,000
Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark.	6,000
Arizona Tuberculosis Sanitarium	500
Educational League, Cleveland, O.	1,000
Infants Aid Society, Chicago	100

The attention of the Executive Committee was called by Brother Simon Wolf to the seventieth birthday anniversary of Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, of Chicago, which will occur on May 22, 1921. It was unanimously resolved that greetings be extended to Dr. Hirsch on that occasion on behalf of the Executive Committee.

From Brother Rabbi Montague N. A. Cohen, of York, Pa., suggesting certain changes in the ritual. Communication was ordered referred to Brother Dr. E. N. Calisch.

From Dr. Leon Ader of Krakau, Galicia, Poland, with reference to the status of Austria Lodge, of Bielitz, in view of the recent war as a result of which the city of Bielitz became part of the territory of the Republic of Poland.

The Executive Committee resolved that Austria Lodge remain for the present under the jurisdiction of the Executive Committee of the Order.

The attention of the Executive Committee was called to the recent death of late Cardinal James Gibbons and upon motion which prevailed a committee consisting of Brothers Sig. Livingston and D. Solis Cohen was appointed to draft resolutions.

The Secretary presented communication from Brother Charles Hartman expressing in his personal behalf and in behalf of his family sincere thanks to the Executive Committee for its expression of sympathy.

The Secretary further presented communication from the family of the late Brother Salomon Marx extending thanks to the Executive Committee for its kind expression of sympathy.

Brother Jacob Singer on behalf of the committee appointed to consider communication of Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J., with reference to participation in the matter of organizing the American Jewish Congress presented the following resolution:

"The Executive Committee of the Constitution Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, in the exercise of its powers to direct the operation of the Organic Law of the Order, do hereby reaffirm and declare:

"That the Independent Order B'nai B'rith to ensure the harmonious growth and solidarity of the fraternity has ever rigidly adhered to the fundamental purposes of its law and government, that no action may be taken by the Order or by any constituent unit thereof, either within the Order or in cooperation or affiliation with any other body, upon Jewish questions involving racial nationalistic or political controversies upon which Jewish opinion is divided.

"That while it is unlawful for Lodges or Grand Lodges of the Order so to function, the privileges of the members of the Order to act as individuals in the freest exercise of the rights of conscience are not in any manner limited or abridged".

Moved by Brother Lucius L. Solomons that the foregoing resolution be adopted and that copies thereof be transmitted to the lodges and District Grand Lodges of the Order. Motion was unanimously adopted.

Brother Dr. Edward N. Calisch presented the following resolution:

"Be it resolved that the Secretary of the Order be directed to have prepared a monthly digest of the activities of the Order for the Jewish press and that copies of such digest be sent out to the Jewish newspapers of America".

Moved by Brother Lucius L. Solomons that the resolution be adopted. Motion carried.

Brother Sidney G. Kusworm, on behalf of the special committee appointed to consider the question of care of Jewish war orphans, presented the following report:

"Your Committee, appointed to report on the question of the care of Jewish War Orphans, begs to report as follows:

"First, we are in hearty accord with the work of caring for and maintaining the Jewish war orphans.

"Second, we highly commend the splendid work being done in this work by other agencies.

"Third, we feel that our Order should take energetic steps toward assisting in this great work.

"Fourth, we recommend that inasmuch as we have lodges in the war-ridden countries, and are in a position through them to adequately care for as many war orphans as we have funds provided for this purpose, that our part of this work be done through our Order and its agencies, and that we do not send any funds for this work to any other organization.

"Fifth, we recommend that the Executive Committee of the Order expend from its funds the sum of ten thousand dollars for the care of one hundred Jewish war orphans for this year.

"Sixth, we recommend that an active campaign be waged throughout the American districts to the end that at least four hundred of such orphans will be cared for by the lodges during the present year.

"Seventh, that the President of the Order appoint a committee which shall be charged with bringing to the attention of the lodges in the American districts the urgency and the necessity of prompt action in this most important matter, and that said committee shall devise ways and means whereby the contributing lodges will receive full and complete data with reference to the war orphans being cared for by the respective lodges.

"Eighth, that the expense of stenographer, stationery and postage necessary for the committee to carry out the work provided for in paragraph seven be borne by the Executive Committee of the Order".

Moved by Brother Philip Stein that the report of the Committee on Jewish War Orphans be adopted. Motion carried unanimously.

The President appointed Brothers Sidney G. Kusworm, Henry Lasker and Adolf Kraus as the committee provided for in paragraph seven of the report.

Brother David Solis Cohen, on behalf of the committee appointed to audit the financial reports of the Executive Committee, presented a report of having examined the various financial reports and having found the same complete and satisfactory.

The report was adopted and ordered filed.

Brother D. Solis Cohen presented the following resolution in memory of the late Cardinal Gibbons:

"In recognition of a gracious life dedicated to the service of mankind, the Executive Committee of the Order B'nai B'rith, in session assembled at Washington, D. C., May 6, 1921, herewith records its tribute and that of those it represents to the memory of Cardinal James Gibbons.

"His noble life, his broad, liberal spirit, his love of his fellow man as exemplified in his every act, give to that memory a hallowed place in the hearts of his countrymen of all creeds. May it remain as a continuing inspiration to all those to whom may come the opportunities and the influence which were his".

It was moved that the foregoing resolution be adopted by a rising vote. Motion carried unanimously.

Brother Archibald A. Marx presented the following report on social service:

"In reference to outlining a plan of social service for the American districts, which matter was placed in my hands for consideration and a report, and which was deferred for the time so that all efforts and moneys might be available for Anti-Defamation work, I believe that the time is now propitious for us to outline this very important work.

"I have secured from each district a report of its activities along these lines of work, as outlined by them. We all must realize that no plan that could be outlined would suit the conditions of each and every district. The B'nai B'rith should endeavor to lead in this work and I would recommend that, in accordance with the resolution of the Constitutional Grand Lodge, a meeting be called at an early date of the chairmen of the Social Service Committees of all districts so that a comprehensive plan may be adopted, the subjects that we should recommend to them for consideration being as follows:

"First: (a) Big Brother Work, the real looking after of the youth who has no one upon whom to call for advice and assistance, and taking a keen interest in him, realizing, as we do, that 'It is wiser and better to save youth than to punish criminals'; (b) finding or providing homes for destitute children.

"Second: (a) Make an intensive study of conditions and numbers of Jews in Elemosenary and Penal Institutions; prepare carefully compiled statistics with a view to discovering, if possible, the causes of criminality among our people, and the environment and conditions that cause it; (b) give to such inmates all personal, religious and social help possible. Under this heading would come the holding of services on holidays, the furnishing of Passover food, etc., aiding the authorities within the institution to bring about a proper respect for laws and rules, also aiding the dependents of the prisoners, the family, usually the innocent sufferers; (c) provide some method of after care for such persons so that they may again become self-respecting and fit members of society; (d) particular attention and interest should be taken in youths in reform schools. Religious instruction should be given them; (e) youths, if any, in state prisons should be paroled and cared for by the committee.

"Third: Special interest should be taken in wards or inmates of B'nai B'rith institutions.

"Fourth: The advisability of establishing a free loan society in cities where none exists, or of enlarging those which are not adequate".

Moved by Brother Jacob Singer that the report of Brother Archibald A. Marx on social service be adopted but that in view of the fact that there are, at present, no available funds in the Contingent Fund, no appropriation be made. Motion was adopted.

The President thereupon appointed Brother Archibald A. Marx, National Director of Social Service, for the American Districts of the Order.

Brother Archibald A. Marx presented the following report of the committee appointed to define the duties of the Central Administrative Board:

"With reference to our appointment on the committee to define the duties of the Central Administrative Board, we beg leave to submit the following, as our ideas of the duties of this board:

"First, this board, when in session, shall have all of the rights and privileges of the Executive Committee.

"Second, all actions taken at any regularly called meeting of this board shall be final and binding upon the Order, except such actions as the Executive Committee shall refer from time to time to this board for reports on, in which event the report or investigation shall not be considered as binding upon the Order.

"Third, this board shall meet at the call of the President of the Order, or a meeting of the board may be called by any three members thereof, by giving written notice to the other members of the board and to the members of the Executive Committee and the Secretary ten days prior to the day of said meeting.

"Fourth, the expenses of attending meetings of the members of the board shall be defrayed out of the general funds belonging to the Constitution Grand Lodge. Any vacancy on the board shall be filled by the President from the members of the Executive Committee.

"Fifth, members of the Executive Committee must be notified of all meetings of the Administrative Board and those not members of the Administrative Board may attend meetings at their own expense.

"Sixth, any member failing to attend two consecutive meetings of said board, without valid reasons or excuses which are acceptable to the President of the Order and the members of the board, his office shall be declared vacant, and the President authorized and directed to fill such vacancy or vacancies within thirty days after such vacancies occur.

"Seventh, a copy of the minutes of the meeting of the Administrative Board shall be sent to each member of the Executive Committee as soon as possible after each meeting".

Moved by Brother Henry Lasker that the report be adopted. Motion carried.

Moved by Brother Samuel Rosenfeld that the Central Administrative Board be composed of five members. Motion was put to a vote and was lost.

Moved by Brother C. M. Lehman that the Central Administrative Board be composed of seven members. Motion was adopted.

A recess was then taken until 2 p. m. the same day.

Afternoon Session.

At the appointed hour, the meeting reconvened, all those reported present at the previous sessions in attendance.

Brother Samuel Rosenfeld presented the following report with reference to the establishment of a Lyceum Bureau:

"At meeting of the Executive Committee in Chicago, June 21, 1920, I was appointed a committee of one to consider the following resolution, favorably recommended, adopted and referred to the Executive Committee with power to act, by the Constitution Grand Lodge convention at Cleveland: 'There shall be established a Lyceum Bureau, with a list of selected speakers in each district, who will be designated, periodically, to visit lodges and hold lectures on various Jewish topics of the day, on Jewish history, and on the condition of our brethren in various parts of this and other lands, and on the work accomplished by the various bureaus'; and was directed to prepare a plan and submit report to the Central Administrative Board.

"Since said date apparently all activities have been absorbed by the Anti-Defamation League work. However, the resolution should now be considered and plans for putting same in operation should be determined. The demand for speakers is exceedingly great. From every part of the United States and Canada there come calls for speakers. The Lyceum bureau would necessarily have to be developed. Speakers qualified and adapted to advance the interest of our people and of the Order would have to be found and selected. The time, place and distribution of speakers would require planning. The character and substance of addresses, outlined by resolution above quoted, would have to be determined. The cost involved would require analysis and decision. The government of the bureau and its management should be definitely authorized.

"A preliminary plan of operations might be the only undertaking at first. A few of the great centers of Jewish population and activity, such as Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Denver and San Francisco, might first be considered and served.

"Upon consideration, the following plan is suggested:

"First, the Lyceum Bureau should be under the control of the President and Central Administrative Board.

"Second, the Secretary of the Executive Committee should manage and direct same, submitting selection of speakers, subject matter of addresses, schedule of dates, tour and cost, for approval.

"Third, in the beginning, all cost of Lyceum Bureau to be sustained by the Constitution Grand Lodge and later on districts and lodges might be invited to share a part of expense.

"Fourth, speakers should consist of non-Jewish as well as Jewish lecturers, and it may be arranged for them to address other bodies than purely B'nai B'rith meetings, for instance, universities, colleges, high schools, and other organizations having learning and education as their purpose, such as Contemporary Clubs and the like".

The report was ordered referred to the Central Administrative Board.

Brother Samuel Rosenfeld presented the following report on behalf of the committee appointed to consider the establishment of a Bureau of Enlightenment:

"The Committee on Survey made the following a part of its report: 'We recommend the establishment of a B'nai B'rith Bureau of Enlightenment, Amendment to Constitution Grand Lodge, Part III, to become " 'Article IX.

" 'Section 1. There is hereby created a B'nai B'rith Bureau of Enlightenment which shall conduct the work of collecting and disseminating data touching creditable, notable, charitable, philanthropic, scientific, artistic, and past and current worthy deeds, actions and accomplishments of Jews. Its plan of management and operation shall be framed by the Executive Committee of the Order. The Executive Committee is empowered to appropriate from time to time, out of general funds, such sum as it may deem necessary to carry on the work of the bureau, which sum shall be expended under direction and control of Executive Committee.

" 'Discussion:

" 'Its purpose and field of endeavor shall be the collection and dissemination of data touching creditable, notable, charitable, philanthropic, scientific, artistic, and past and current worthy deeds, actions and accomplishments of Jews. At the present time the daily press is thoroughly friendly but it has no source of supply, in the nature of the "Associated Press", of news matter favorable and creditable to members of our faith. The converse is, however, very true. Any and every act derogatory to the Jew finds its way into publicity. The magazines, journals, pictorial publications are also without data, articles and services of Jews reflecting the favorable side of our people.

" 'Such bureau might be called "Press Bureau", or "Department of Publicity" or "Department of Propaganda", but all such descriptive terms want in dignity and are hackneyed and are in disfavor.

" 'The world, mankind, christendom, should be enfranchised from its bondage to false report in respect to the crucifixion; in respect to the character, the lives, the aspirations and the hopes of Israel. Enlightenment respecting Judaism and the Jew might clear the vision of mankind and free hearts and hands from slavery to error. Enlightenment will vindicate and redeem the most oppressed and long suffering people known to the annals of time.

" 'The task is a very great one, it contemplates activity throughout the civilized world, but the undoing of the evil of centuries and the gradual rehabilitation of the race in the good graces of humanity would be its effect'.

"The amendment proposed was referred to Committee on Constitution, was recommended for adoption and the convention adopted same.

"At the meeting of the Executive Committee in Chicago, June 21, 1920, I was appointed a committee of one to consider said amendment to the constitution and submit a plan to put same in effect to the Executive Committee. Said constitutional provision and 'discussion' above quoted clearly express the purpose of the Bureau of Enlightenment. Had it been in existence and operation during the past year it could have rendered excellent service in the dissemination of data outlined in above 'discussion'. Of course, the Anti-Defamation matter has occupied all our time.

"Said bureau should be immediately organized and put to work. Upon consideration, the following plan is suggested:

"First, the bureau should be in the office and under the direction and management of the Secretary of the Anti-Defamation League.

"Second, all proper and necessary office equipment, stationery and printed matter should be provided.

"Third, said Secretary should immediately proceed with the collection and dissemination of data in the name of the bureau".

The report was ordered referred to the Central Administrative Board.

Brother Dr. E. N. Calisch presented the following report on behalf of the committee appointed to revise the ritual of the Order.

"Having been appointed a Committee on Revision of the Ritual of the Order, in accordance with the action of the Constitutional Grand Lodge in abolishing secrecy in the Order, I beg leave to report that I prepared a revised version of the ritual, which I presented to the Executive Committee at its meeting in Chicago in June, 1920. The Executive Committee made some further changes in the version which I submitted and then ordered the ritual printed. Scarcely had the book come off the press, when the Administrative Board determined on further changes, which were made and the ritual reprinted and sent out to the lodges of the Order and now in use.

"Relative to the special rituals, for B'nai B'rith Day, Mothers' Day, Memorial Service, etc., I prepared rituals for these special occasions, which I submitted to the Administrative Committee.

Moved by Brother Henry Lasker that the report be adopted and that the Secretary be directed to cause the completion of the printing of the special rituals and their distribution among the lodges of the American District. Motion carried.

Communication was presented from Brother Dr. M. Epstein of London on behalf of London Lodge, advising that the lodge still holds to the order of the Executive Committee the sum of a little over 100 pounds of sterling collected at the request of the Executive Committee of the Order for the purpose of a loan fund for the members of the Order in Europe, sufferers as a result of the war, and requesting instructions as to the disposition of this money.

It was resolved that London Lodge be requested to forward the amount to the Executive Committee of the Order to be used in connection with other funds contributed for similar purposes.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 10, Czecho-Slovakia, transmitting appeal from Orient Lodge of Czernowitz, formerly province of Bukowina, now integral part of Roumania, appealing for assistance to enable the lodge to rehabilitate philanthropic institutions maintained by the lodge and which suffered materially as a result of the war.

Moved by Brother Sidney G. Kusworm that the sum of $2,500 be appropriated out of the Emergency Relief Fund for the purpose of aiding the philanthropic institutions of Orient Lodge of Czernowitz and that the appropriation be turned over to the Secretary of the Order to be paid over by him to the authorized representatives of Orient Lodge. Motion carried.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 11, the Orient, transmitting appeal for funds to enable the Grand Lodge to continue its educational work among the poor children of Constantinople.

Moved by Brother Philip Stein that the sum of $1,000 be appropriated out of the Emergency Relief Fund and be entrusted to the Secretary of the Order. Motion carried.

From Brother Henry Lasker, on behalf of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, transmitting a tentative plan for the establishment of women's auxiliary lodges in the Order, also proposed ritual for such women's auxiliaries.

The communication as well as the proposed ritual were ordered referred to the Central Administrative Board.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 11, transmitting appeal for the support and maintenance of the B'nai B'rith kindergarten located at Balat, a suburb of Constantinople.

Moved by Brother Chas. Hartman that the sum of $1,000 be appropriated out of the Emergency Relief Fund to be entrusted to the Secretary of the Order, who be authorized to turn the amount over to District Grand Lodge, No. 11. Motion carried.

From the Jewish Chautauqua Society with reference to cooperation of the Order with the Jewish Chautauqua Society in the matter of establishment of lectureships, thereby making the work of the Intellectual Advancement Committee of [illegible] more effective.

Communication was ordered referred to the Central Administrative Board.

From Brother Dr. Leon Adler of Krakau, [illegible] submitting report as to the con[illegible] [illegible] Lodge, of Krakau. [illegible] was ordered filed.

[illegible] Grand Lodge, No. 8, [illegible] requesting to be furnished with [illegible] photograph or half tone of the Statue of Liberty, located in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, to be used in connection with the jubilee number of the District Grand Lodge's publication, and also requesting an article in connection with the Statue of Liberty to be published therewith.

Brother Simon Wolf was requested to prepare the article and the Secretary was directed to secure the required photograph and to transmit the same to District Grand Lodge, No. 8.

From Racine Lodge, No. 697, Racine, Wis., requesting permission to change its name to Israel Lodge. Request was refused because there is in existence a lodge by that name.

It was resolved, however, to grant permission to Racine Lodge to change its name, provided that in the assumption of the new name, it selects one that is not already borne by any other lodge.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 9, Roumania, with reference to the "Jabneh Academy", suggesting that certain pamphlets bearing upon the subject matter be translated and published in the B'nai B'rith News.

The Secretary was directed to inform District Grand Lodge, No. 9, that lack of funds makes it impossible to comply with the request of the Grand Lodge.

From Winnipeg Lodge, No. 650, of Winnipeg, Can., inquiring as to the possibilities of repayment of moneys paid by members of the lodge to the Rehabilitation Fund of the Order.

The Secretary presented in connection therewith copy of reply sent by him to Winnipeg Lodge. The same was approved.

From Brother Bernard Ginsburg, of Detroit, Michigan, submitting for favorable consideration changes in the ritual of the Order.

Resolved that no change be now made in the present ritual.

From London Lodge, No. 663, London, England, advising that the lodge adopted a resolution to the effect that the per capita tax of two shillings per member be paid by the lodge to the Executive Committee each year and enclosing draft for $45.58 in payment of the dues for the year 1921, based upon a membership of 125.

The Secretary was directed to inform London Lodge that the Executive Committee appreciates the action of London Lodge.

From Leopolis Lodge, No. 482, of Lemberg, Galicia, submitting report of activities of the lodge.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 3, advising of the consolidation of the B'nai B'rith lodges of Pittsburgh and requesting authority for the consolidated lodge to assume the name of Pittsburgh Lodge, No. 44. Request was granted.

From Augustin-Keller Lodge, No. 648, Zurich, Switzerland, with reference to the care of undernourished Jewish children by the B'nai B'rith of Switzerland during the summer months, and requesting that an appeal be issued to the lodges of the Order in America for contributions for this purpose.

Moved by Brother Sigmund Livingston that communication be referred to the President and Secretary of the Order for such action as they will deem proper.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 10, Czecho-Slovakia, advising of the election of Dr. Josef Popper, of Prague, to the presidency of District Grand Lodge, No. 10.

Brother Lucius L. Solomons, on behalf of the committee appointed to consider resolution adopted by District Grand Lodge, No. 7, with reference to the care of emigrant Jews coming to Mexico, submitted report recommending that the Executive Committee cause an investigation to be made of the existing conditions in Mexico, ascertain what arrangements may be made for the care of Jewish emigrants coming to Mexico and that a sum not exceeding $500 be appropriated to defray expense of such investigation. Report was unanimously adopted and the President authorized Brother Archibald A. Marx to make the investigation and to proceed in person to Mexico if deemed necessary by him.

Brother Archibald A. Marx, on behalf of the committee appointed to consider resolution adopted by District Grand Lodge, No. 7, with reference to the unlawful entry into the United States by aliens from Mexico, reported that the committee had a conference with the Secretary of the Department of Immigration and Labor.

From Lake Lodge, No. 831, Gary, Ind., inquiring with reference to the adoption of Jewish war orphans Communication was ordered referred to the Secretary.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Germany, submitting appeal for financial aid to enable the Grand Lodge to maintain its philanthropic institutions, particularly vacation colonies for the Children's Hospital at Norderney and the orphan home.

Moved by Brother Archibald A. Marx that the sum of $2,500 be appropriated out of the Emergency Relief Fund for that purpose and that the appropriation be entrusted to the Secretary of the Order who will sail to Europe next June. Motion carried.

From Brother Max Weill-Bruell, of Zurich, Switzerland, with reference to the institution of a B'nai B'rith lodge at Milan, Italy, and expressing appreciation to the Executive Committee for the confidence imposed in him by delegating him as representative of the Order to institute the lodge.

Communication ordered filed.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 9, with reference to the situation in Czernowitz in need of aid to rehabilitate B'nai B'rith institutions under the auspices of Orient Lodge of that city.

In view of action taken on the subject matter in another communication on the subject matter, communication was ordered filed.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Germany, requesting authority to appropriate out of the funds sent to the Grand Lodge for rehabilitation purposes a portion thereof for the benefit of the organization of Jewish nurses under the auspices of the Grand Lodge.

Held that said fund being a trust fund the Executive Committee has no authority to authorize the use of it for any purpose except that for which it was created.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 2, submitting a propaganda pamphlet prepared by a committee of the District Grand Lodge.

Communication was ordered referred to the Secretary with instructions to prepare propaganda literature and to submit the same to the Central Administrative Board.

From Menorah Lodge, No. 771, of Baltimore, requesting instructions as to whether the laws of the Order permit a lodge to cooperate with other organizations in the matter of Americanization work.

The Secretary reported that he referred the communication to Brother Sidney G. Kusworm, National Director of Americanization Work, and also presented to the Executive Committee copy of reply from Brother Kusworm.

Correspondence was ordered filed.

From the Provisional Committee representing the B'nai B'rith lodges of Vienna, submitting an appeal for a loan to be used for the purpose of rehabilitating the members of the Order in Vienna.

Communication was ordered referred to Brothers Charles Hartman, Henry Lasker and Irving G. Lehman, as a committee to confer with the Joint Distribution Committee.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, calling attention to the possibility of establishing a B'nai B'rith lodge in Luxemburg.

It was resolved that no action be taken in the matter of instituting new lodges under the jurisdiction of the Executive Committee of the Order until such time when full peace shall have been declared by the nations of Europe.

From Amos Lodge, of Boston, Mass., referring to a formal application filed for a charter for a ladies' auxiliary of the lodge.

Communication was ordered referred to District Grand Lodge, No. 1.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 2, with reference to the furnishing of membership cards by the Executive Committee of the Order.

Moved by Brother David Bortin that the Executive Committee of the Order furnish the American districts with the number of membership cards desired by them. Motion carried.

From Mr. Santo Semo, of Paris, with reference to the organization of a B'nai B'rith lodge in Paris, France.

Communication was ordered referred to the President with full authority to take such action in the premises as he may deem proper.

From Brother Rabbi H. H. Mayer, of Kansas City, Mo., informing that he received advices from Constantinople that there are many Jewish orphans in need of help, further stating that information has reached him that many such orphans have been placed in homes where they are ill-treated and suggesting advisability of investigation by the Order to ascertain the true facts in the case; furthermore, advising that the writer has issued an appeal to the lodges in his district for contribution to such fund for the relief of orphans in Constantinople, and inquiring also whether a general appeal emanating from the Executive Committee of the Order would be advisable.

It was unanimously resolved that a circular be issued to the lodges of the Order, cautioning them against giving consideration to any appeals for funds or contributions issued by any individual or organization without first securing the approval and consent of the Executive Committee of the Order thereto.

It was further resolved that the Secretary, during his sojourn abroad, investigate the charges made with reference to the alleged ill-treatment of Jewish orphans in Constantinople.

From the women's hospital of Vienna known as "Charité", submitting an appeal for assistance to maintain the institution for poor Jewish women.

The Secretary was directed to forward a copy of the communication to the Joint Distribution Committee.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, transmitting for the favorable considera- of the Executive Committee an appeal of Augustin-Keller Lodge of Zurich for support in the matter of taking care of undernourished Jewish children by the B'nai B'rith of Switzerland.

Communication was ordered referred to the President and Secretary of the Order.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 2, enclosing inquiry from Kansas City Lodge, of Kansas City, Mo., relating to the collection of funds for the purchase of x-ray apparatus to be used for treatment of Jewish orphans, exiles in Constantinople and inquiring whether the collection is endorsed by the Order.

The Secretary was directed to inform District Grand Lodge, No. 2, that the Executive Committee of the Order has no information with reference to the subject matter.

From Leopolis Lodge of Lemberg, Galicia, calling attention to the misery of the large number of Jewish refugees fleeing from the Ukraine and finding temporary shelter in Lemberg and other parts of Galicia, and requesting financial aid to assist such refugees.

The Secretary was directed to forward a copy of the communication to the Joint Distribution Committee.

From Brother Simon Wolf, of Washington, and from the Executive Committee of the American Jewish Congress with reference to a conference between the representatives of Jewish organizations and the Polish minister to the United States, which was held in New York City, regarding the condition of the Jews in Poland.

From the Joint Distribution Committee, New York, concerning situation in Europe with reference to refugees in various centers thereof and relative to our tender of the cooperation of our lodges abroad. Communication was ordered filed.

From Michkan Lodge, No. 699, of Bourgas, Bulgaria, calling the attention of the Executive Committee to the necessity of securing for the lodge a permanent home for the housing of the various philanthropies conducted under the auspices of the lodge and requesting that the Executive Committee loan the lodge $5,000 to enable it to purchase a building for the purposes indicated. The Secretary was directed to inform Michkan Lodge that the Order has no funds available for such purposes.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, in the form of a cablegram, advising that over 100 Polish-Jewish emigrants are stranded at Cologne on account of having lost their passports and the refusal of the American Consul at Cologne to vise substitute passports. The Secretary reported that the matter was referred to Brother Simon Wolf, of Washington, who conferred with the Department of State and that as a result thereof, authorization was cabled to the American representatives in Cologne and Warsaw to vise supplementary passports. Correspondence was ordered filed.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Germany, inquiring whether the rehabilitation fund may be used to assist a

(Continued on page 16.)

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

A Sad Anniversary.

WHEN this issue will reach the readers of the B. B. News it will be just a year since The Dearborn Independent started its anti-Semitic campaign, an event, which is more depressing than anything else, which the progress of anti-Semitism during the last forty-three years has brought to us. We may, therefore, properly begin with the main issue of the latest phase of this campaign. The Jews are supposed to be back of all revolutionary movements and just at present back of Bolshevism. We take this statement for granted, although we can parallel it with any number of others saying just the opposite; namely, that the Jews are always backing the party in power, and being climbers, are actuated by the desire of being received in "society." The charge of bolshevism as a Jewish propaganda has been recently refuted in a German pamphlet called, "The Profiteers of Bolshevism," by Dimitri Bulashow, probably a translation from the Russian. The author proves on the hand of the official lists of the communist organization in Petrograd that the membership of the party is composed of 74.2 per cent Russians, 10.6 per cent Letts, 6.3 per cent Poles, 3.7 per cent Esthonians, while the Lithuanians and the Jews are at the foot of the list with 2.6 per cent each. We state this purposely, although any fair-minded person would understand at once that it is impossible for the Jews of Soviet Russia who number at best half a million, to keep one hundred twenty millions or more in their leash and especially to have full command of an army of several millions.

It must be remembered that the latest phase of anti-Semitism is mainly based on the "Protocols" which—may it be repeated again—is traced in Bernstein's, "The History of a Lie", quoted in our last review, to the yellow novel of Goedsche and its silly invention of a council of elders, which assembles once in every hundred years in the old cemetery of Prage at midnight. One of these charges quoted in Bernstein's book, page 49, is that the Jews are trying to get into aristocratic families by marrying their daughters to impoverished members of the titled nobility and in this way subject the leading classes of society to their aims. How they succeed in this attempt was clearly illustrated by the behavior of Count Arco-Valley, the assassin of Kurt Eisner, the President of the Bavarian Soviet republic, who bragged of his deed in court, saying that as a good Catholic he hated the Jews. This count is the grandson of Baron Edward Oppenheim, the son of an ennobled Jewish banker. Another charge on which The Dearborn Independent repeatedly expatiated is the claim that the commercial instinct of the Jews had vitiated the moving picture theater. On this subject we have the following, certainly unbiased testimony. A Catholic society, whose aim is a movement for clean amusements, recently discussed the question of movies in a meeting held in Treves. The speaker, a Catholic professor, who denounced the immoral influence of films was interrupted with the remark that Jewish capital is responsible for it. He replied that such bias was bound to injure the movement, for it was his duty to state that just Jewish managers of movies were hearty supporters of the reform. Another report from Germany, bearing on the same subject, is worth telling in this connection. A censor prohibited a film, which had a story of a pickpocket because this pickpocket had the manners of a gentleman while the real pickpocket according to the censor, is in most instances a Galician Jew or another low-class individual.

Another anti-Semitic claim is the accumulation of all the world's wealth in Jewish hands, likewise based on the story in the Protocols which gives directions how the Jews can obtain a monopoly on the world's capital. The following statistics, recently taken in Vienna on the income of salaried Jews, tell the tale completely. It was found that twenty per cent have an income of less than 1,800 crowns a month, forty-five per cent have an income ranging from 1,800 to 4,000 crowns and only ten per cent have an income of more than 7,000 crowns. In order to bring the statistics near to the understanding of American readers it means that twenty per cent of the Jewish people living on salaries have an income of between $3.00 and $4.00 a month while sixty-five per cent of them have an income of about $8.00 a month and ninety per cent have to live on about $14.00 a month or less. Another way of understanding the meaning of these figures is to keep in mind that a suit of clothes costs 20,000 crowns and a pair of shoes 2,000, which means that twenty per cent of the salaried people could not afford to buy a pair of shoes out of a month's income and ninety per cent will have to save up the salaries of three months in order to buy a suit of clothes. It is self-understood that similar illustrations can be given from the price of foodstuffs.

The Plight of Zionism.

Three prominent leaders of Zionism in Europe, Professors Einstein and Weizmann and Mr. Ussischkin, arrived in New York April 2, as was already stated in the last review. Their visit was intended to stimulate the collection for the Palestine Restoration Fund, called Keren Hayesod. The precision with which the Supreme International Council of the Jews is said to work was rather sadly illustrated by the fact that the work of these men was promptly disavowed by Judge Mack, the President of the Zionist Organization of America. In spite of numerous statements from both parties, the real issue of the controversy is not quite clear, except insofar as the American organization demands full control of the money collected in America, and seems to object to the cultural ideals of European Zionists, insisting on employing the money collected for land improvement. A cable sent by Mr. Peter Schweizer, the American Zionist, who is at present in Palestine, asking for unity in view of the fact that interference with the collection of the fund would be disastrous, had no effect on the stand taken by the American office. On the other hand, it seems that the enthusiasm of a considerable section of American Zionists has not been dampened by the official disavowal. At a mass meeting, held in Brooklyn, $1,000,000 was pledged to be paid in five annual installments. A cable report announces the departure of a special representative from London for Argentina, where he hopes to obtain liberal support.

Daniel Solomon Medhekar of the Beni Israel (Native Jews of East India), born at Karachi, 1844. He was the son of a soldier and received a military education. In 1872 he was appointed jailer, rising in 1899 to the rank of superintendent of prisons in Karachi, the highest rank in this department of government service, and retired in 1906. He died at Karachi, June 12, 1920, and left bequests to synagogs and schools, having always been a devout Jew.

Another instance of lack of harmony in the Zionist ranks comes from Palestine, where the Supreme Jewish Council inaugurated in February, is meeting with strong opposition. It was already announced that two orthodox extremists in the Holy City, Rabbi Hayim Sonnenfeld, representing the Hungarian, and Rabbi I. J. Diskin, representing the Russian section, have protested against the new Sanhedrin, announcing that they would not recognize it. According to the latest reports, Sir Herbert Samuel tried to bridge over the chasm by his declaration that this Sanhedrin would not interfere with the autonomy of the various congregational groups, but would merely be regarded by the government as an official Advisory Board on Jewish questions, merely the title of Chief Rabbi is to be confined to the official Presidents of the Sanhedrin. "Der Israelit", representing the cultured orthodoxy of western Europe, sides also with the opposition, expressing its fear that the Mizrahi section of the Zionists might be crushed under the Juggernaut of the official ecclesiastic authority, while the leading Zionist organ of Germany, the "Rundschau," declares triumphantly: Now Jerusalem will have to decide what real orthodoxy is, not Frankfort or Kovno. The Torah will have to be accommodated to life as was the case from Moses down to Hillel." This suggestion of reform is one more reason for orthodoxy to oppose the organization of any ecclesiastic authority.

Another opposition to Zionism comes from British politicians. An article on the Palestine Mandate by Lord Sydenham, in "Nineteenth Century," clearly indicates a strong bias of some sections among British politicians against a scheme which, as the noble Lord views it, will be an opportunity for the mythical International Council of the Jews to establish "the world control foreshadowed by the Hebrew Prophets and indicated in the Protocols," and in this way make Palestine, "which occupies a most important geographic position between the East and West, the instrument of a Jewish autocracy." Lord Cecil in the House of Commons again expressed his dissatisfaction with the Jewish National Home, which he approves in principle on the ground that it will provoke the Arabs who feel that they have not received a square deal. Another member of the House of Commons entertains another serious apprehension. He understood from a remark made by Sir Alfred Mond that the Jews are planning to rebuild Solomon's Temple. Sir Alfred Mond, it may be stated by the way, is not affiliated with any synagogue nor was his father, while his only daughter is a professing member of the Episcopal Church. The control of Palestine by the Jews, through the High Commissioner, receives a peculiar illustration in the fact that a woman physician who tried to settle in Nablus, the old S'chem, where a physician is greatly needed, was compelled by the Arabic population to leave because they claim an ancient privilege of forbidding Jews to settle in their midst.

Two other facts will show that opposition from outside to organized Zionism has not died out and being based on political motives clearly disproves the claim that the Jews act with one purpose in view. The Alliance Israelite branch of Tunis published a pamphlet, in which the Zionists are denounced as agents of British imperialism. Rabbi B. Jacob of Dortmund published in the Jewish press a statement giving the reasons why he declines to take part in the collections for the Keren Hayesod. After stating, for which he cannot be blamed, that the present conditions in Germany are so that every penny is needed for maintaining Jewish institutions in the country, he adds that it is contrary to his conscience as a German of the Jewish persuasion to send money for an English Jewish colony in Asia. He closes with the peroration: "Let the victors who are trying to wring out wealth from German poverty, let the Jews of England and America contribute. The German Jews will stand aside." All of which is respectfully submitted to The Dearborn Independent as material to prove the clockwork precision of the Jewish world organization.

The Land of Darkness.

A favorable report, which naturally must call for some skepticism, comes from the Ukraine. It is said that two Jews were appointed members of the Ukranian Central Council and at the same time it is reported that Samuel Zhitlowsky was appointed minister of Jewish affairs for White Russia. We unfortunately must remember that similar reports reached us three years ago when the Ukranian republic was first proclaimed. We heard then that Moses Goldfarb was appointed minister of Jewish affairs and Dr. Sarchi, who was representative of the republic in London, told us glowing stories of the friendship which Petlura, the butcher, entertained for the Jews. While it is impossible to have any definite information we unfortunately cannot discredit the report of continuous pogroms both in the Ukraine and in White Russia. In the former country it is said that the only change noticeable is the fact that instead of the former armies, now groups of bandits, which are organized from peasants are keeping up the work of devastation. It is said that numerous Jews trying to escape from this hell into Rumanian Besarabia lost their lives drowning in the Dniester River. The plight of the refugees is terrible and the worst is that those who have managed to escape into Poland in order to join their relatives in America because they cannot obtain passport vises from the United States Consul in Warsaw, on the ground that all such passports must wait until the new immigration bill shall have been passed. Instead of enumerating the individual places where pogroms are said to have taken place during the month of April, the following case reported reliably from Czernowitz, the former capital of the Austrian province of Bukowina, now a Rumanian city, will serve by its lurid story as a type of the unprecedented horror reigning in the land which we thought had established a record of brutality in the rebellion of Chmelnicki, three hundred years ago. A woman in Czernowitz appealed to the Relief Society, as a fugitive from the horrors of Ukraine in which her husband and her elder son were killed. A younger son was lying ill with typhoid in a hospital in Besarabia, while a daughter of twelve years, afflicted with syphilis had to be received in the maternity hospital in Czernowitz. Turning from these individual cases to a general presentation, we quote from Herman Saltzman who recently returned to London after having spent three months in Soviet Russia, the following figures. In the Ukranian pogroms of the last three years 140,000 Jews were murdered, thousands of women violated, 200,000 people died from typhus, in 144 towns with large Jewish communities, not a single Jew is left, eleven towns, entirely inhabited by Jews, were so completely wiped out that not a trace of a building remains, and in the pogrom area are 600,000 destitute children of whom 110,000 are Orphans.

All of them lack food, clothes, shelter, and most of them are happy when they can obtain one inadequate meal a day. The better world which we were promised would come after the war has surely not materialized as yet.

The High Priest's Question.

The Talmud, in a glowing description of the services on the Day of Atonement in the temple of Jerusalem, reports that the first act of the High Priest in the morning was to ask of the temple guard, "Has the first light appeared"? We are asking the same question with regard to the situation in Poland, which, as our brethren in that country inform us, is bound to improve in the near future. While it is evident that a serious statesman who hopes for a truly resurrected Poland, depending on her own resources, must realize that the fight against sixteen percent of its citizenship is a hopeless task, definite signs of such realization are still missing. We should expect such a comprehension of realities, first of all among the leading men of science. If such is the case it has not been reported. But Professor Michalski, who holds the chair of political economy in the University of Warsaw, in a French book, recently published in Lausanne and entitled "The Means of Solving the Jewish Question in Poland", sums up his convictions in the plain statement that the only way of solving the Jewish question is to rid Poland of the last Jew. Various members of the Sejm have expressed themselves in a similar manner and it is needless to quote them in detail, for the mere fact that even during the Plebiscite movement in Silesia the agitation did not stop. It may be true, as Korfanty, formerly a member of the German Reichstag, reported that the Jews in Upper Silesia promised him support for the Polish cause if he would pledge himself to a bill prohibiting immigration from Poland proper into Silesia, though there are sufficiently strong indications, as we shall see later, that the Jews in the contested area viewed the possibility of a Polish annexation as a calamity. Smaller instances of hostility, as a resolution passed by the Chamber of Barristers in Warsaw against admission of Jewish members or the report that Jews are not admitted to public meetings of a political nature and the still frequent assaults on Jews by soldiers in uniform are matters to which we would not attach much importance, if we could only see the first ray of light that would, as it did in Jerusalem of old, indicate the work of Atonement to be understood in the etymological sense as at-onement, conciliation.

Still Awakening But Not Awake.

The last doubt that the arrival of the former Austrian Emperor Charles in Hungary was a prearranged affair has disappeared. Various speakers in the Diet declared that one on whose head the crown of Saint Stephen once has rested must remain king forever and similar [illegible] utterances, for which Magyar political oratory was well-known even before 1848, prove that President Horty is at his wit's end and would welcome a restoration of a monarchy. It was surely due only to the threats of France and her [illegible] in central Europe, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, that the attempt to duplicate Napoleon's return from Elba failed so ignominiously after only nine days (March 27 to April 5). For the Jews it could not have meant a deterioration of their present condition. This may perhaps be inferred from the fact that Wilhelm Vazsonyi, the last minister of justice under the monarchy and an exile in Vienna since the establishment of the Communist Government, returned to Budapest, another refutation of the old [illegible] Jewish and [illegible]. The improvement in Jewish conditions, however, has not [illegible]. Aside from acts of mob [illegible] such large proportions on the Christian [illegible] that in Budapest [illegible] ignore this decision. An act of incredible brutality is the following report, found in a paper representing the party in power. A Jewish soldier, whose turn it was to prepare the meal for his squad, was killed by the explosion of a bomb which one of his comrades in some manner placed near the fire. Such "accidental" explosions have occurred several times and the organs of awakening Hungary celebrated this "accident" as a work of a patriotic providence. In spite of all this, some Jews are still loud in professing their Magyar patriotism. The President of the Budapest congregation donated 250,000 crowns to a literary society with the declaration that in spite of all which the Jews had to suffer they would remain Magyar patriots.

Austria.

The complete reports found in papers, representing various parties on the pogrom, which took place in Vienna, March 13, on the anniversary of the revolution of 1848, merely confirm what was said in last month's review. It was a riot undoubtedly due to the inflammatory speeches delivered at the anti-Semitic congress, but its managers, realizing the bad effects which such incidents must have on the foreign relations of the republic declined all responsibility and even went so far as to say that it was all done by the enemy who sowed the tares in the wheatfield of true Christian ideals. It was established by the subsequent investigation that German and Magyar "patriots" who must have come to Vienna for this purpose were in the crowd of hoodlums, including a German lieutenant attached to the German legation in Vienna. A comment in the "Wiener Morgenzeitung" on the deliberations of this congress is too good not to be reported verbatim. The paper says: "For three days delegates from Austria, Germany and Hungary exchanged ideas. No party could have lost anything in this transaction". The demonstration against Arthur Schnitzler's play "Reigen" continued and assumed such proportions that the performance had to be interrupted. In this connection the present writer feels that he has to give an explanation, due to an exception taken to his former remarks by a reader. Arthur Schnitzler is a poet of great merit and his Jewish position was nobly presented in his play, "Professor Bernhardi", and in his novel, "The Way to Freedom". Schnitzler is a modernist, and some of his presentations of the sexual problem may be considered as going too far. This, however, is not the point. The present writer believes himself to be free from prudishness, yet Schnitzler's novel, "Casanovas Heimfahrt", Berlin, 1918, is, in his opinion, a production whose literary merits—which for argument's sake we are willing to grant—do not excuse the lewdness which fills the book. The present writer admits, as he has admitted before, that he has not read the play which gave cause to the turbulent demonstration but the fact that at certain "critical" moments the curtain falls because the audience must not see what it knows to pass behind the curtain, is in itself sufficient to justify our judgment, and the additional fact, that the Jewish Morgenzeitung condemns the play too, is bound to confirm the original opinion that anti-Semitism seized a justifiable opportunity to emphasize the anti-Semitic claim so prominently heralded in the Dearborn Independent that the Jew exploits vicious instincts for commercial purposes.

A similar case of encouragement given to anti-Semitism is also reported from Vienna. Count Palffy who was a collector of art left his valuable collection to the state. But, as the care of the collection would have been too expensive, the state refused to accept the bequest, and the collection was sold at public auction. Among the bidders was Herr Von Reitzes, the son of a Galician Jew who became a millionaire through lucky street railway speculations, who bought a writing desk once owned by Napoleon for 13,000,000 crowns which sum is not as big as it sounds but may be on March 8, just a few days before the anti-Semitic convention, when it was bought, represented a sum of $22,000 to $25,000. Such an ostentatious display of wealth in the midst of the terrible distress prevailing in Vienna was quite naturally a welcome proof of anti-Semitic claims, supplementing the statement made by the anti-Semite [illegible], in the National Assembly three days before who spoke of the disproportionate wealth of the Jews, claiming that their number has risen to 370,000—somewhat improbable as the census of 1910 gave only 175,000—and that thirty-five per cent are found in the high schools, that furthermore, while Vienna had only 100 millionaires before the war it has now 8,000, of whom 7,200 are Jews. It is not our object to claim that the innocent and well-meaning anti-Semites are provoked beyond endurance by facts such as the action of Herr Von Reitzes, but incidents of this kind are bound to intensify the agitation. We can, however, not forego the pleasure of reproducing a clever epigram on this incident found in the Vienna daily, "Der Morgen",

"In Wien hat nun ein Herr Baron
  Den Schreibtisch im Gebrauche,
Da wandte sich Napoleon
  Und liegt jetzt aufdem Bauche
Und donnert im Kommandoton:
  'Er Kann mich—was? Er weis es schon" under a cartoon presenting Reitzes before the desk of Napoleon.

The Fatherland.

The death of the Empress of Germany will, like every death, first of all call for an expression of sympathy, which is so much the more in place as she survived a tragedy of which in her youth she could never have dreamed. While we do not intend to revive old grievances, it is a historical duty to remember on this occasion the fact that the old lady was a strong sympathizer of Court Chaplain Stoecker and aided in his movement which hoped to strengthen religious sentiment by a little anti-Semitic seasoning. We particularly remember that in 1900 she selected an innocent remark of Professor Hugo Preuss, the an alderman of the city of Berlin, and since that time internationally known as the author of the constitution of then German republic, for an unjust attack, claiming that by applying the words of the psalm "Commit thy way unto the Lord," to the autocratic ideas of the then minister of education he had ridiculed the Protestant religion because this verse is used in a hymn of the Protestant Church. She made atonement at that time by schnorring from Jewish financiers for her favorite plans of relieving the need of churches in Berlin but, now that she is dead, the Jews surely have no reason to recall old complaints.

The anti-Semitic riot in Berlin was noticed in last month's review and again we may repeat that such acts of rowdyism are by no means as serious as the constant agitation in the population, especially among the educated class. At the head of the movement we find the nationalists who are racial chauvinists and reactionary monarchists. Their secretary general went so far as to say in a public meeting that while the progress of his party is slow it is sure, and the day of reckoning is bound to come when "propaganda of action" will be preached. The Protestant clericals combined with the Junkers represented in the Kreuzeitung, with its motto, "With God for King and Fatherland" gave recently an interesting exhibition of their religious ideals. The paper reported that a prominent Protestant minister, addressing a meeting of the National People's Party, had attacked the Jews as having corrupted the nation by dancing around the golden calf. A Christian young lady wrote him a letter of protest based on her own experience, having lived for years with a Jewish family. The clergyman replied that the paper had misrepresented him. He not merely had not made this remark attributed to him, but when the remark was made from the audience he had protested against it, saying that instead of attacking the Jews we should clean our own house. The lady then wrote to the Kreuzeitung, demanding a correction, but received a reply that it was such an old story that nobody would recall it any more. Similar are the proofs of hostility in the circles of educators. The present minister of education, Haenisch, is the constant object of attacks on the part of the students and anti-Semitic professors. The tone of these attacks may be judged from one specimen. A paper published in Goettingen, the old university town which, by the way, was the first or second university in Germany to appoint Jews to professorship, greeted the minister on a visit to the city with the gentlemanly criticism that, by his impudence which beats that of the most obtrusive Galician, he is ahead of his favorite Jews by a Hebrew nose-length. Another specimen of incredible rudeness because coming from a "lady" is reported from Berlin. A Frau von Waldheim, teacher in a private school for girls, asked her class how many were not baptized. Three girls rose. She asked one why she was not baptized and received the reply that her father was a Jew and her mother a Christian and she was brought up a Jewess. The "lady" then told her class that this girl was a specimen of the offspring of a full-blooded bulldog and a cur.

With all this it can clearly be noticed that the Jews in the Polish parts of Prussia consider the annexation of their homes to Poland a calamity. From a town in Upper Silesia it is reported that a woman of ninety-one, bed-ridden for years, had herself carried to the polls to cast her vote for Germany. Still more important is the fact that the latest report of the statistics of the Jews in the Province of Posen gives the number of Jews as 2,800. The census of 1910 had 26,511, representing about 1.25 per cent of the total population and showing a decline since 1871 from 61,982 or 3.9 per cent. This would be so rapid that we must believe in an error of the transmission of the figures but it remains a fact that the Jews fled from the districts ceded to Poland in such large numbers that flourishing congregations were disbanded and, rabbis rendered homeless, had to be taken care of in various German congregations. Considering this fact it is deeply depressing that just from a town in Silesia it is reported that the son of the burgomaster leading a troup of boy scouts past a Jewish cemetery ordered the whole troop to halt and to spit. It is worth while remembering this incident, when some distorted or exaggerated passage in the Talmud is quoted again to prove Jewish fanaticism. It certainly has an effect in solidifying Jewish organizations. The city of Cassel had since 1810 a Jewish normal school, the first one ever established. As reported at the time it was closed last year on account of financial conditions, but the practice school connected with it has now been revived as a Jewish primary school, which, according to the constitution, the government has to support, if there is a sufficient number of children who want a denominational school. The congregation must, for the present pay a considerable part of the maintenance of the school, on account of some legal difficulties, one of which is the surprising fact that this school because it keeps the Sabbath is also frequented by thirty children of Seventh Day Adventists. The difficulties met by congregations in maintaining existing institutions to which Rabbi Jacob, as pointed out before, referred, is brought home to us by the fact that the Berlin congregation had to close the maternity pavilion of its hospital on account of its inability to maintain the institution as it was conducted before the war.

News From Eastern Europe.

The Russian Soviet Government has been so often denounced in various ways that it is never safe to accept any report, damaging it without full evidence. The latest is a Berlin dispatch, quoting a Moscow paper to the effect that the Jewish painter, Samuelson, a Bolshevist, was lynched because he presented an execution in a manner which was revolting even to the Bolshevist sympathizers. The London Times, also strongly biased, reports April 11, that the city of Moscow is placarded with appeals to overthrow the government which is run by Jews, so that a Russian must believe he is living in Palestine. Yiddish papers report rather credibly that the celebrated Hebrew poet, Bialik, was in Moscow, asking for permission for the Hebrew authors to emigrate. Bialik was repeatedly reported as dead, as starving, as a millionaire and as on the way to Palestine, so we reserve our judgment as to what we shall hear of him next.

From Rumania reports continue to be favorable. The inspector of theaters in the part annexed from Hungary announced that the government not only will tolerate but will encourage Yiddish theaters and may subsidize them, being interested in all cultural Jewish activities. We remember that the modern Yiddish stage under Abraham Goldfaden, later in New York, had its origin in Rumania. The report is rather credible, although it suggests the terrible plight of the Hungarian Jews who also were used by the Magyars in former years for the suppression of non-Magyar nationalities. Rumania evidently has not learned the lesson of the uselessness of such attempts at forced denationalizations, and a student's riot in Czernowitz against Jewish students for speaking Hebrew furnishes another evidence.

(Continued on page 16.)

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, March 18, 1921

THE communal limelight is for the moment not working. There has been nothing of outstanding interest during the month to which special attention need be directed. We are still without the Chief Rabbi, and the wheels of the communal machines are revolving as usual. The question has occurred to many people whether it is the Chief Rabbi who produces the great problems or whether, on the other hand, his absence means that the great problems are neglected. In any event the community is proceeding along the calm tenor of its way, only troubled by appeals from all sides, appeals for workers and appeals for money. A generation ago social workers were abundant. It seemed to be regarded as a sort of duty in each family that had anything like a high standard of respectability for the younger members to volunteer to do social service of all kinds. To-day many a Jewish institution is languishing for lack of workers. It may be that the work has grown to such enormous dimensions that it has expanded beyond the supply of social workers. On the other hand it may also be that possibly the keenness and zeal of olden days has become somewhat slack. Moreover, the war will not be without some influence in this matter. The present period in Europe has produced a lethargy and an idleness which it is easy to comprehend. The pendulum in all things has swung backwards; we are perhap as little more selfish than before. But all this is bound to change. The new generation which is growing, and growing somehow so quickly, will have a very different outlook from that of its predecessor, and all observers are agreed that it will be more serious in tone, more ready to sacrifice itself. Indeed, many people say that religion will, before long, come into her own again, for the healing of the world, both of individual men and of nations, will come through a moral regeneration. It will be a case of changing hearts, instead of changing garments. In that day social workers will be abundant, and the intricate problems which arise in the lives of our weaker and poorer brethren will be solved with a zeal and a bustling which will do credit to the age which produces it.

Money, too, is wanted in all directions just now. There are bitter cries from the Ukraine which we doubt not have also reached the ears of American Jewry. We, too, are asked to rescue Jewish Orphans from that European hell. Despite the general slump in trade, people are striving to do their duty to help the helpless. Then there is the appeal of Palestine. Anglo-Jewry is learning more and more to regard Palestine as a matter, which it cannot set aside and which it must help to the utmost of its powers. Even the most "patriotic" Jews—those who are more Royalist than the king—and who in the past were frightened by such bogies as nationalism, Jewish citizenship, independent government and so forth—now feel that Palestine means something to them. A grand dame of one of our oldest Anglo-Jewish families was telling a bosom friend of hers that she had seen so little of her only son. Before 1914 he was at Oxford; then he joined the army; and since the armistice he has felt the call of Palestine and has gone to live there. Her friend comforted her by saying he might have gone to India. The reply is significant. "We should not have allowed him to go to India," said the mother, "but we cannot object to Palestine". Many such young men are gradually settling down in the Holy Land and slowly, almost imperceptibly, an Anglo-Jewish colony is springing up in Jerusalem, the latest adherent being Mr. Albert M. Hyamson, who occupies a responsible position in the Immigration Department of the Administration. Mr. Norman Bentwich is there, too, and several of his sisters, one of whom has just married a Palestinian, namely, Mr. David Yellin's son, and we mention this fact because both Mr. Yellin and Mr. Bentwich are members of the Order, the one of the London, the other of the Jerusalem Lodge.

All this is very pleasing, and the sentimentality of the thing must of necessity interest all and sundry. But the deeper side of Palestine is a thorny problem, made thornier by the disagreements in the Zionist camp itself. On their return from Palestine both Dr. Weizmann and Sir Alfred Mond (who, by the way, has just changed his port folio in the Cabinet from Minister of Public Works to that of Public Health) came back from their visit to Palestine full of enthusiasm. Both were agreed that the slogan was "Possibilities". The land had possibilities, the people had possibilities, economic development was exceedingly promising, if only means were available to help things begin to move. At a banquet which the Keren Hayesod organized in honor of Sir Alfred the same note was struck, and Colonel Amery, who was then Under-Secretary of the Colonial Office, which now has charge of Palestine, declared that the authorities were most amicably disposed towards the development of the country and hoped to see a prosperous Palestine before long. But the Jews must do their part. Here is the rub. It is unfortunate that the managers of the Keren Hayesod, excellent people every one of them, are yet by training and sympathy out of accord with the Jews of this country. They fear them partly, and partly despise them, and a combination of this sort is clearly not healthy for the purpose of collecting funds. It is all right when you are writing poems or dramas or novels or critical essays, but when it comes to practical work of a business character, fear, combined with contempt, is a poor key to open the door with. What is the result? The Keren Hayesod is making but little progress, and its self-appointed directors are becoming somewhat uneasy. Can they be left stranded? By no means. The Keren Hayesod, the Zionist movement, Palestine itself, are all such big things that they transcend the leaders and must of necessity make their appeal to every Jewish heart that feels and every Jewish mind that thinks. It is not that the movement is without sympathy in this country. On the contrary, not only has Sir Alfred Mond thrown himself heart and soul into the Economic Council for Palestine, over which he is to preside, but Sir Robert Waley Cohen, one of Anglo-Jewry's great men, has likewise lent his support to this Jewish movement. It simply must succeed. The desideratum at present is money. It is always money. Doubtless it will be forthcoming in due course. Mr. Winston Churchill's journey to Palestine will also help the movement, seeing that he is most enthusiastic in regard to everything he saw. The political situation out there remains unchanged. It can be summarized in a few sentences. Sir Herbert Samuel is a huge success with all classes of the population. The British Administration is trusted and respected; in the course of time there will be more and more scope to carry out the terms of the Balfour Declaration; and if only the means are forthcoming Jewish settlers may be placed on the land who will sacrifice every ounce of their energy to build up a country of which Jews will have reason to be proud.

The wave of anti-Semitism which swept over this country about a year ago seems to have spent itself at last. It has passed away, leaving behind it only little, ugly, creeping things, small insects that make a dull, horrid sound and send forth little stings. Clearly they cannot exist without the swell of the tide, and since that tends to disappear, these ugly little creatures must, of necessity, die. They are no great loss. They do no credit to a Christian country, for their gospel is a gospel of hate, and they can claim little popularity as true Englishmen, though as is usual in such cases, they label themselves superlatively British. Fortunately, we have no Ford, as you have. The couple of old women who, whenever the newspapers print a somewhat striking head-line, see red, who when there is a heavy fall of snow imagine that the British Empire is toppling to pieces, who if there is industrial unrest, cry triumphantly, "Bolsheviks"! (and by "Bolsheviks" they very often mean Jews), these people will go on calling in the wilderness until either the natural progress of time will put an end to their cawing or their own good sense will show them the extent of their stupidity. In the meantime Jews will go on doing their duty as citizens, shouldering their burden with the rest, contributing their energy, their brains and their heart to the up-building of a country where righteousness and justice shall be the watch-words of the commonwealth.

It is of interest to chronicle the fact that the London County Council, the parliament of Greater London, has chosen a Jew for its chairman, namely, Major Percy Simmons. Mr. Simmons is 47 years of age and a lawyer by profession.

The great social event of the season promises to be the magnificent concert on Sunday, May 8, at the Alhambra, in aid of the Jews' Free School. That educational institution is approaching its 100th birthday, and has done splendid service to the Jewish community in London. Many are its distinguished alumni who are found in all walks of life, and many are those who look back to the days of their boyhood, to that massive building in Bell Lane, with more than sentimental memories. There was a time when the Free School received ample support from the community, to say nothing of the house of Rothschild, whose favorite institution it was. But today, when all education is supported by public funds and when the Free School thus requires money only for specifically Jewish religious education, it is not always easy to make ends meet. Much is expected from this concert, to which all the leading artistes in London have promised to contribute, for which all the great dames in the purlieus of Park Lane have undertaken to sell tickets, and at which, it is said, the most beauteous damsels in the community will sell programs on the evening itself. All will work in the name of sweet charity, and the Free School in Bell Lane will be enabled to proceed with its religious classes as before.

Another communal institution, which is becoming popular, is the regular University Extension Course of Lectures organized by the Jewish Historical Society of England at Toynbee Hall. In the present session the sixteenth century will be the playing ground of the lecturers, among whom are included Dr. Gaster, Mr. Lucien Wolf, the Rev. Morris Joseph, Mrs. Redcliffe Salaman, Mr. Elkan Adler and Mr. Fred Spiers. The society was responsible, too, for a series of three lectures delivered by Dr. M. Vishnitzer, on the history and the organization of the Jews of Eastern Europe. It ought to be chronicled, too, that the popularity of Jewish history is spreading in the provinces, and in one instance has taken a form, which is distinctly pleasing. At all the English universities there has been a movement on foot for bringing university studies to adult workers. Classes are formed which meet once a week during the six winter months, and the courses are so arranged as to extend over three years. All sorts of subjects are taken. At Liverpool last year, Jewish history was one of these. The class was conducted by a distinguished Liverpool graduate, Mr. Bertram Benas, and after a very successful first year proceeded to the second year of the course, and hopes to conclude the third and final year with the same degree of enthusiasm as at the very beginning.

Another social event was the performance of a Hebrew play last Purim in Northwest London by children who came from the well-to-do neighborhood of Hampstead, and who pleased an admiring crowd of fathers, mothers, uncles and aunts in a way that one would hardly have expected. It is clear that Hebrew plays have come to stay. Only yesterday another was performed at the West-Central Jewish Girls' Club, on the occasion of their annual exercises. It is perhaps a sign of the times, and it is a good sign. Jews have always been famed for their dramatic sense, and when it expresses itself in Hebrew it is quite clearly good for the study of that language. But it also expresses itself in English, as anyone can see who goes to one of the West End theatres where the "Great Lover" is being performed so magnificently by Mr. Moscovitch. Starting his career as a Yiddish actor, Mr. Moscovitch has won deserved fame among London play-goers for his wonderful dramatic art. The other day he was dined by the Maccabbaens, where his praises were sung by no less a person than Lord Rothschild, who voiced the admiration of this great artist, of Jew and Gentile alike.

We have two visitors in this country who deserve a word of mention. One is your own Rabbi, Dr. H. Pereia Mendes, who is at present visiting his native town of Manchester. The other is Dr. A. S. Yahuda, who is still lecturing extensively all over the country, and who has now captured the heart of one of the daughters of the country, or rather of the colonies. Congratulations are due to him on his engagement to Miss Judes of Johannesburg. Both Dr. Mendes and Dr. Yahuda are members of the Order and while our greeting to them would have been warm, it is in this case especially hearty. It is not unlikely that the former may honor the London Lodge not only by a visit but by a lecture. This will be one of a series dealing with the various communal problems, and brethren are looking forward to the success of this symposium with much interest. We need only add that the membership of the lodge is increasing apace, and we feel that every increase brings us one step nearer the establishment of a home of our own, which is, from our immediate standpoint and from the standpoint of the community, a great necessity.

DEMANDING PROTECTION OF JEWS, BRITISH STATESMEN OPPOSE HUNGARIAN TREATY.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

At the second reading of the Peace Treaty in the House of Commons recently, considerable opposition to its passage was voiced by a number of leading men in the House, including Mr. Balfour, who expressed his disappointment at the treatment of minorities and aliens by the new states. Colonel Wedgwood moved the rejection of the Hungarian Treaty on the ground that the clauses affording protection to minorities and labor elements were never fulfilled. Wedgewood particularly condemned Hungary's treatment of the Jews, declaring that justice in that country had ceased to exist and that brute force alone ruled. After indicating the terrible extent to which Jews are being persecuted, Colonel Wedgwood demanded that the Foreign Office should instruct the British representatives in Budapest not merely to carry out his diplomatic duties, but also to watch over the safety of the Jews and the workers. Mr. Asquith also participated in the discussion, adding his condemnation of the flagrant manner in which the protection of minorities was being violated.

BRAZIL AND ARGENTINA SEEKING JEWISH EMIGRANTS.

Paris, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Reporting upon his efforts in Roumania, in behalf of the Executive of the World Relief, Engineer Tionkin states that he has succeeded in collecting five hundred thousand lei for the relief of refugees. He also reports that the situation of the refugees in Roumania generally is considerably improved since the Roumanian government has decided to permit the naturalization of refugees. Great possibilities, Tiomkin announces, are opening up in direct immigration to Brazil and Argentina, the representatives of both countries having offered every possible help and cooperation in that direction. On the other hand the American Consul in Roumania is making all sorts of difficulties for prospective immigrants. Tiomkin is at present organizing a number of children's summer colonies and in this connection makes a special appeal to American Jewry.

POGROM IN WHITE RUSSIA.

Report of a pogrom in the province of Gomel, White Russia, whose known living victims number more than 60,000 and whose dead are estimated at several thousand, has just been received by the Joint Distribution Committee from its American Jewish relief director at Reval.

The cabled report of the Gomel pogrom said: "Banditism rapidly spreading and dangerously threatening the districts of Retchitsa, Gomel, and Novosibkov. Number of Gomel pogrom victims grows from day to day and now totals over 60,000 wounded and maimed men, women and children driven from their homes with several thousand killed and dead. Refugees are concentrating in Gomel. Position of Gomel Relief Committee for distributing aid to pogrom victims critical as it has no funds, no supplies and no relief workers. Imperative that relief supplies be forwarded immediately, as great majority of victims are starving, naked and living in cold houses without windows."

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1921
New Moon	May 9
New Moon	June 7
Feast of Weeks	June 12
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

DRIVEN HITHER AND THITHER.

As one of the after-effects of the war, and most deplorable it is of all, there stands out a hardening of the heart and the banishment of humanitarian sentiment. Yesterday shoulder to shoulder with other nationals to punish the aggressor who knew no pity, we are come home forgetful of the common cause, but ever mindful of the strength of our own arm. After all it would seem as if we were caught by the wave of enthusiasm at one time, just as to-day we are carried on the wave of reaction now engulfing the world. There was a glamour of sentiment in our war business; there is cold calculating selfishness in our "return to normalcy". We may be turning, but we are not returning. This notion of "We are first of all for ourselves" was not the normal one in which we had grown up. There was a time, not so far off, when the cry of the persecuted abroad stirred us. We not only remonstrated with the evildoer, but we extended our arms to welcome to our shores the victims of tyranny and of political chicanery. We are infested by colonies of the bloody authors of hatred and right under our eyes they ply their trade at inciting their hosts against the hapless people whom they themselves so cruelly dealt with. Who but the minions of the Czar invented that diabolical scheme, born of suspicion and libel, to uproot a section of the population and to carry the despoiled hundreds of miles away to far regions? Since from that time on they have been "driven hither and thither", that is, as many of them as did escape the fate of thousands upon thousands of their brethren when armies marched and countermarched, advanced and retreated, over a vast area and left behind communities wiped out, women dishonored, the survivors robbed of their possessions and fleeing to some place of safety, often to find themselves exposed to new dangers and frequently bidden to 'move on". What if families have become disunited, if husbands and fathers across the seas well able to take care of them call for them, the bars are shut against them. They are undesirable, for have they not been 'driven hither and thither'? There is no pity for this driftwood upon the [illegible] of hate, there is no humane sentiment. Let them continue to drift. They had once homes, and homes are waiting for them. Let them stay homeless. We will not play the part of the 'Good Samaritan'. We will not be moved with compassion. This shall no longer be the haven of refuge for the oppressed. We [illegible] with them at a distance, [illegible] keep them away from our shores. We are entrenched behind our solicitude for our own selves. This land is [illegible] for us only. It is a well recognized slogan of the changed times. It betokens the reign of an exaggerated self-consciousness. The "horror of the stranger" has taken hold upon us. It manifests itself in a variety of ways. The world may be out of gear. The war in which we participated has bequeathed to coming generations burdens untold and all the ills of a disturbed equilibrium. We will do what we can to minimize the evil. But the stranger must not cross our threshold. Those that come from well-regulated homes may enter. Those that are "driven hither and thither" will please remain where they are, homeless and aimless. For it is a changed world, a world changed in sentiment. The war has given the death blow to the finer sensibilities. The return to complete "normalcy" may come, some day, but meanwhile, for fourteen months at least, we will stay "abnormal". Which, of course, means untrue to our traditions. They are just suspended, shelved for a while. But will they come back?

THE NEED FOR THE JEW.

We have heard the cry of Jewish nationalists that the preservation of the Jewish people calls for no other reason than the "biological". The Jewish variety exists, and varieties contain in themselves the justification of their existence. As well may an individual ask himself the question, Is there need of my existence? That the life of a mass, no less than the life of an individual, rests upon the instinct of self-preservation, will be readily granted. But that is only half the story. For if we proceed purely on "biological" principles, history, recorded and unrecorded, registers defunct varieties, such as were and then passed away. Apparently the need for them ceased to exist at one time. They had done their work. Others succeeded to their heritage and built upon their foundations. The melting pot was stewing and brewing in remote antiquity. Races and aggregates of mankind break up and out of their debris new amalgamations arise. With the will to live there goes the submission to decay. On purely biological grounds, it might be argued that to live on where out of death a new birth would emerge, to persist in segregation where integration might lead to new grouping, is not at all the law of nature. The out-and-out assimilationist has long told us that those who stay Jews, rear their children as Jews, and fill them with that very "staying" capacity which we call Judaism or the Jewish consciousness, sin against nature. We therefore who refuse to submerge ourselves must justify our position on different grounds. It is not sufficient to say that because we are we ought to remain and continue to be. Assuming that the biological motive is operative within ourselves, let us remember then that it is not we who require to be convinced, but the outsider. We can live only if we are let live. We must prove to the other man that there is need for Jew. That need is by no means conceded. The Church contends that the need existed at one time to produce certain results and that so soon as these were reached the need ceased to exist. To the Church, Israel's persistence is an anachronism. The Jew must therefore maintain that the need still exists, that the results spoken of were not achieved, are still to be achieved. In other words, the Jew has not yet acquitted himself of the task which the progenitor and builder of the people was bidden to assume. This religious consciousness alone can give the Jew standing in the world. The Jew must impress himself upon the world, the world of living issues. The Jew must prove that he has something to give to the world, and it matters not whether you call it religion or name it culture. It must be something spiritual. It is not at all necessary that the Jewish Mission be invested with the conversionist outfit. We should not wish to convert the world even if we had the power to do so. We resent the conversionism of others. This attitude of superiority and of possessing the whole truth will be a hindrance rather than a help. We concede something in the Christian religion, and in other religions, which we do not possess. But there is something that we have set out to do, there is a coloring and a motivation to our piety that others do not possess. That we call the Jewish truth, or rather the Jew's contribution to the truth. The world will lose by suppressing it, the world will gain in richness of the spiritual life by suffering it to be cultivated. The Jew brings something to the world that the world has not. Therein lies the need for the Jew. A world faced by the ugly rise of naked materialism should husband all its spiritual resources. The religiously minded cannot afford to be a house divided against itself. Jew and Christian must come to terms by acknowledging that there is a need for both, that each has something which the other man has not. Let us walk on roads parallel. We shall meet in eternity.

THE REAL PERIL.

"The real peril of anti-Semitism, should it develop into one, would not be to the Jew but to the nation, to democracy, to the spiritual life of the people."—[Christian Work.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT AGAIN CRITICIZED.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Commenting on the introduction of the new budget, the "Daily Express" again takes to task the government for its policy in the Near East. The "Express" remarks that the British taxpayer has nothing more to hope from a government, which is determined to force him to pay nine pennies out of every pound for the maintenance of Mesopotamia and two-pence in every pound to purchase bayonets for the protection of the Jews in Palestine. The "Daily Mail" speaks in similar terms of the government's policy.

NOTED JEW OF FRANCE DEAD.

Joseph Reinach, one of the leading Jews of France died on April 18, 1921, after a long illness, aged 66. Reinach was one of the leaders of the "Alliance Israelite" and took a leading part in the defense of Captain Dreyfuss. He was an historian of note and during the late war rendered invaluable service to the Allied cause. Almost throughout the period of the war, he was a regular contributor to the influential daily, "Figaro," where he dealt mainly with the military situation. At one time Reinach was Gambetta's secretary and he entered the French Chamber of Deputies as far back as 1889. At the age of twenty-one he had already gained note as a writer.

The entire French press mourns the loss of M. Reinach and speaks in most praiseworthy terms of his manifold activities during a long and most useful period.

NOTED RUSSIAN TO REVEAL ORIGIN OF "JEWISH PERIL."

Paris, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Vladimir Bourtzeff, the noted Russian revolutionary who has been instrumental in exposing the Russian secret service, announces his intention of publishing startling revelations respecting the origin of the "Jewish Peril," the anti-Semitic volume containing the Protocols of the "Elders of Zion".

TOO MUCH FOX-TROTTING IN JERUSALEM, CATHOLIC ORGAN ASSERTS.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The "Daily Express" cites a report which appeared in the "Unita Catholica" asserting that the entire population of Jerusalem has gone dance-mad. According to the quoted report, Christians, Jews and Mohammedans of all classes crowd Jersualem dance-halls at all hours of the day and night, and the fox-trot and similar modern dances are indulged in.

Interesting Letters

Through the kindness of Mr. Louis Buckspan, of Dallas, Texas, we are enabled to publish the following interesting letters:

Sounds Warning.

To the News:

"Great men are not always wise," says Elihu in the Book of Job, and this allagis has been verified. Napoleon was great but not wise, and so also "His Majesty," William II, as the finish of both proved.

These men were great as statesmen and warriors, but others in other lines are great, such as writers, inventors, financiers, etc., and yet do some foolish things. To-wit, a few years ago no one knew Henry Ford, but he is now known from continent to continent. He is the reputed master of millions and millions, which his inventive and financial ability has enabled him to acquire. Yet he has undertaken a foolish endeavor. He has turned his guns upon a fortress he can never conquer. He is making war upon Israel. Mr. Ford, go back and read of Assyria, Egypt, Babylon, the Hittites, Philistines, etc., and show us where all these are, save poor old Egypt.

In the fifteenth century Spain was the mightiest nation of earth, and in the fulness of her pride she turned her hand against 500,000 Israelites dwelling securely in her borders. Where does she stand among the nations today? "Them that curse thee, them will I curse", was fulfilled upon her. America was then a howling wilderness. One hundred and forty-five years ago the Declaration of Independence was framed, and a Constitution guaranteeing protection to all, both "Jew and Gentile", and today America is the mightiest Nation on earth, God fulfilling to her "Them that bless thee, them will I bless". Beware, Mr. Ford. View with alarm the fate of Israel's enemies.

Unless you do "Ichabod" will be written over Henry Ford's greatness. Beware!

W. H. KITTRELL, SR.,
Cisco, Texas.

Denton, Texas, March 12, 1921.

Dear Friend:

Your "Sounds Warning" to Henry Ford in today's Dallas News is very opportune. Send him a copy of today's Dallas News, it may enlighten him if he is capable of it. Are there not enough Christian—Christian countries which for centuries have persecuted and still persecute Jews without doing that same thing in this country which calls itself the home of all those who suffer persecution? Dearborn Independent, Henry Ford's paper, indicts the Jews for all the sorrows of the world. How can 15,000,000 Jews hope to rule this world? It seems an insult. May others help you in preventing a clash between Jews and Christians in this country. God bless you.

RAYMOND VERNIMONT,
Catholic Priest.

Cisco, Texas, March 31, 1921.

Mr. Louis Buckspan,
Dallas, Texas.

My Dear Sir:

Am just in receipt of your favor of 30th instant and assure you that it gives me great pleasure to receive such communications, also to say you have my fullest and ready consent to have the letter reprinted.

Am enclosing you a letter from a Catholic priest, who also read the letter. This was somewhat a surprise to me since Catholics have been such anti-Semites for centuries.

I thank God for these assurances that He is raising up friends for persecuted Israel among her former enemies.

Today I mailed the Dallas News a second communication on the same lines, viz.: Austria's recent announcement that "all foreign Jews be expelled from Europe", and calling for a convention of anti-Semites the world over to meet in Budapest to carry out this nefarious purpose. Thus has Austria the impudence to appeal to this country—the friend of Jacob to come to her financial succor or "we perish". God forbid that our government lend aid to the red-handed murderers.

I am a firm believer in Jesus Christ, for whom we owe a debt of gratitude to the Jew.

Furthermore, I reverence the Bible, Old and New, and the Jew wrote every word of it.

Where would the Christian be but for Jacob?

For many years I have written in their defense in Houston Post, Dallas News, Fort Worth Record and many other papers. Am now 70 years of age and have preached the Gospel for nearly forty years and hope to fight Israel's battle what time the God of Jacob may allot me in this present existence.

Assuring you of my kindest regards.
Believe me sincerely,

W. H. KITTRELL, SR.

The Convention of 1874 and the Statue of Religious Liberty

By Simon Wolf

THE reinterment at the National Cemetery at Arlington, Virginia, of Eminent sculptor, Sir Moses Ezekiel, brings to memory the great Convention of the Order in 1874 in the city of Chicago, at which I had the honor and privilege of presiding. It was an epochal convention in every sense. At one time the conditions were of a very grave character. The Order was threatened with disruption. The members of the Sixth District were on their feet about to leave the convention. It was through my humble efforts that peace was restored, and time and again eminent members of that convention have stated in person and in writing, that I saved the Order on that day. It was during the proceedings that I suggested that a Statue to Religious Liberty should be given by the Order to the United States, and that Sir Moses Ezekiel, practically an unknown artist, residing in Rome, Italy, should be the sculptor. The matter was referred to the Committee on Resolutions, of which Adolph L. Sanger of New York was chairman, and their report was in the affirmative of my proposal. The award was made, and in due time the Statue was dedicated in the City of Philadelphia and placed in Fairmount Park, and unveiled on the 4th of July, 1876. The oration was delivered by Brother Sanger, inasmuch as I was prevented from doing so. I invited President Grant to be at the unveiling, but public business prevented him from accepting. The correspondence that passed between us is as follows:

"Washington, D. C., June 26, 1876.

"My Dear Mr. President:

"No doubt you are aware of the fact that the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith at its quinquennial convention held in Chicago in 1874, unanimously voted the erection of a Statue to Religious Liberty, and that the same should be erected in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. Now on this coming Fourth of July, the Statue, having been completed by an American sculptor, Sir Moses Ezekiel, will be dedicated and given to the people of the United States. This evidence of patriotism and of love of liberty on the part of American citizens of Jewish faith is in keeping with their history and their lofty ideals and conception of duty. No class of citizenship has been made happier by religious liberty than the Jew, for the denial of that liberty in other lands has been the cause of endless persecution and misery.

"We sincerely trust that this statue, typifying so grandly the separation of church and state, may be an inspiration and an example for all the generations of the future.

"Is it not possible for you to attend the unveiling?

"Very sincerely,
SIMON WOLF".

And the President replied:

"White House, June 28, 1876.

"My Dear Mr. Wolf:

"Your letter in the matter of the Statue to be dedicated to Religious Liberty in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, on the 4th of July, has been duly received.

"It has impressed me deeply, and I congratulate you and all concerned for this splendid contribution on the part of American citizens who at all times, in war and in peace, have shown their loyalty and patriotism on and in behalf of the Republic.

"I sincerely regret that official duties will prevent my attendance.

"Sincerely yours,
"U. S. GRANT".

A curious incident in connection with this Statue is that most of the Lodges responded to the call of paying a per capita for each member of the Order, but a few of the Lodges, having a large Orthodox membership, for ritualistic reasons objected and I finally had to make two trips in various parts of the country to secure the assessment.

In 1906, on my seventieth birthday, I received the following letter from Sir Moses Ezekiel, which has never before been published and is of intense interest, as it voices the sculptor's gratitude and gives a lofty conception of what inspired him in creating this monument:

"Rome 8, October, 1906.

"Hon. Simon Wolf,
"Washington, D. C.

"My dear and honoured Sir:

"I have heard with very great pleasure that you are about to reach the allotted three score and ten years, and that it has pleased the Almighty to bless you with the vigour of body and soul, that will enable your many friends (without putting a limit to the will of God) to offer you the old Roman augury of 'Cento di Questi Giorni'.

"I, who have been the humble instrument of carrying out in enduring stone the fundamental idea of that which alone can give peace on earth and good will towards all men, owe the initial steps to you and to you alone, and to your lofty clear mind and your most noble desire to reflect honor upon our race. The placing of an enduring record of the one principle of our government which alone prevents the recurrence of oppression, of religious fanaticism and intolerance, and makes our country the most civilized one on the face of the earth.

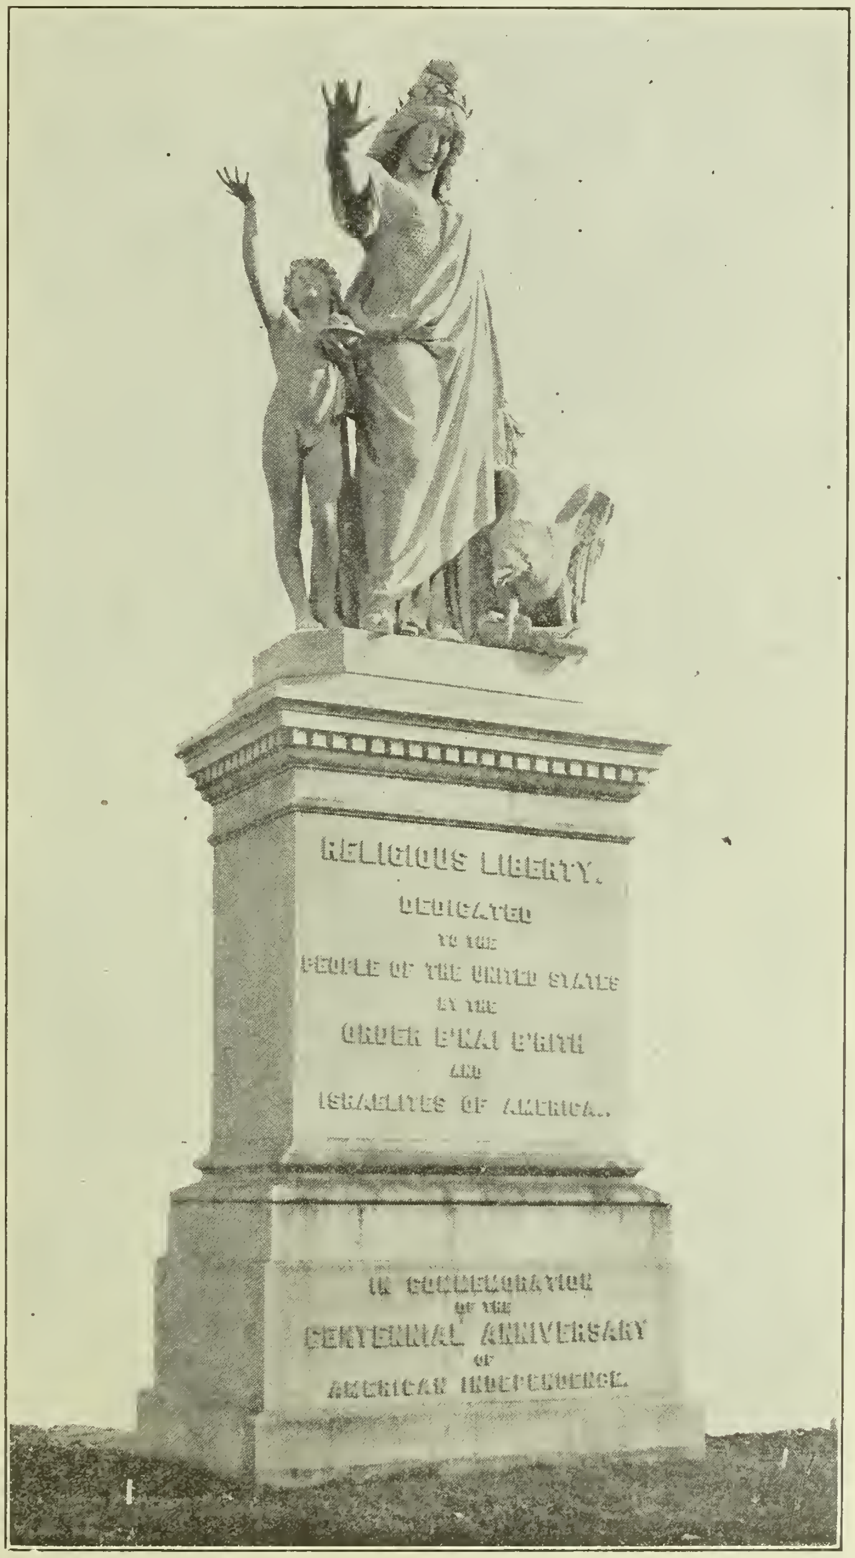
"I come to you, therefore, today with feelings of deep reverence and gratitude to offer to you my heartfelt congratulations on your birthday and to wish you and those dear to you the greatest joy and the fruition of your dearest wishes and to beg of you to remember me on the 28th as yours very truly and sincerely,

"M. EZEKIEL".

Not only the Order, but all of Jewry, is to be congratulated that we are the only organization in the United States that has given a monument typifying Religious Liberty, and that it should stand in the city of Philadelphia where the independence of the Republic was first declared is no less significant and inspiring.

It is also gratifying to note that Ezekiel was not only an American but a Jew and a member of the Order, and who is now recognized all the world over as one of the great sculptors of all time. His wonderful work at the Arlington Cemetery has been the object of great admiration, and when his remains were finally entombed, the services were most inspiring, and Dr. Philipson gave light, color and eloquence in his tribute to the sculptor.

Three eminent Americans of Jewish faith sleep near each other at Arlington Cemetery—Admiral Adolph Marix, General C. H. Lauchheimer, Sir Moses Ezekiel.



That same convention endorsed the mission of Brother Peixotto to Roumania, and authorized me to secure, by Act of Congress, the creation of a Consulate at Bucharest, as Peixotto's appointment, as President Grant himself said, was in the nature of a missionary rather than an official of the Government.

FORD AND THE JEWS.

Henry Ford's general conceptions of the fundamental factors that make for war or peace were not at all accurate when he launched his famous and futile expeditionary peace ship and took it overseas to futile wreckage on the coasts of Denmark.

His present ardent attacks upon the Jews are at least equally silly. They are worse than silly, because instead of merely accomplishing no good they do absolutely harm from spreading in the minds of many already predisposed toward anti-Semitism a fresh impetus of suspicion and hatred toward a people whose advance and frequent leadership in all good citizenship was never more notoriously praiseworthy than today.

Race prejudice is a blind emotion. Its cruelties can be incalculable, both toward the individual and the mass. Its encouragement in this country is a harmful thing, to be regretted wherever indulged. We are threatened with no wave of foreign domination of any kind. In dealing with Jews, as with citizens of other sorts, we find them at no time mustered as a segregated group bound together in interest against our interest, or for any unworthy interest. It is commendable that they are strong in defense of their common reputation for their own character and the privilege of worship according to their faith. Their place, public and private, in American life is an indispensable national asset. Mr. Ford finds public opinion indignantly set against his ridiculous attempts to prove the contrary.—[The Evening Mail, New York City, February 19, 1921.

SIR MOSES EZEKIEL BURIED AT ARLINGTON.

President at Services for Confederate Soldier and Sculptor.

Within sight of the Confederate Monument, his last and his greatest work, the body of Sir Moses Ezekiel, sculptor and Confederate soldier, was buried on Wednesday in Arlington. The commitment services were accompanied by memorial services in which President Harding, Secretary Weeks and Roland Ricci, the Italian Ambassador, joined in paying tribute to Sir Moses, who died in Rome in 1917.

President Harding in a letter read at the exercises characterized Sir Moses as "a great Virginian, a great artist, a great American and a great citizen of world fame".

"Ezekiel will be remembered", the President wrote, "as one who knew how to translate the glories of his own time and people into that language of art which is common to all people and all times. . . . He served his State in the conflict that threatened to divide and that at last served to unify our country. He accepted the verdict of the Civil War's arbitrament with all that fine generosity that has been characteristic of both the North and the South".

Secretary Weeks made the principal address, while Ambassador Ricci spoke on "Sir Moses Ezekiel as an Adopted Son of Italy", and Colonel Robert E. Lee, as a representative of the Confederacy for which Sir Moses as a Virginia Military Institute student fought at the Battle of New Market in 1864. took as his subject "Sir Moses Ezekiel as an American and as a Southerner".

TERRORISTS IN HUNGARY RESUME ACTIVITIES—FIVE JEWS MURDERED.

Vienna (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The White Terror has been resumed in Budapest, according to latest advices received here from the Hungarian capital. Within the past few days the bodies of five Jews, merchants from the province, have been found murdered on the shores of local rivers.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Solomons, Indianapolis, Indiana, announce the engagement of their daughter, Claris, to Rabbi Jacob B. Krohngold, of St. Louis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Krohngold, Akron, Ohio.

The Great Misunderstanding

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

X

A CHRISTIAN reviewer of a book recently written by a Jew discerns uneasiness in the mind of the modern Jew concerning the tragic end of Jesus. Let it be remarked at the outset that the present writer has no uneasiness whatsoever on that score. As I read judicious statements by Christian scholars, the accounts of the trial and death of Jesus are distinctly one-sided. What actually happened is obscured by the whole trend of the Gospel narrative to lay the blame on the Jews. It is not at all necessary to charge the writers with wilful misrepresentation. They put down what they believed was the true account. But the times in which the narrative reached the form which it now has were somewhat removed from the event and the controversies between Jews and Christians, which developed as the breach widened, cast their shadow upon the occurrences. Jesus said and did many more things than the disciples retained in their memory. As the case often is, when a great teacher has passed away, remarks made by him on different occasions and in the hearing of different people lodge themselves in the memory of this or the other person, and the fewest will recollect all his sayings. Moreover, as no man is wholly consistent and as occasions vary and with them a person's moods, there will result contradictory statements, which biographers will tend to reconcile. Biographies are dictated by love and veneration. Whatever does not lend itself to glorification is submerged, is simply not remembered. We shall never know what particular action or utterance was seized upon by the court of justice. But in the light of our previous expositions there was enough of a misunderstanding to be construed into unorthodoxy. The Church can least afford to cast stones upon the Jews who handed Jesus over to the Roman authorities. The Church has burnt at the stake many an offender for less reason. And the Jews have been amply dealt with for the action of their fathers against one of their own, who certainly came within their jurisdiction. Our aim was not to deal with that phase at all. We have confined ourselves to the misunderstanding. We saw what its true proportions were. But a misunderstanding it was, and that was sufficient to bring about the result. We called it the Great Misunderstanding, because its results have been far-reaching. But once we abstract from these results, and confine ourselves to the issue at the time, the misunderstanding reveals itself as inevitable, yet not at all so prodigious as to cause that estrangement and continued misunderstanding, which separates the Jew and the Christian of to-day. For we have seen how many points there were in the misunderstanding which have proved a stumbling-block to the Church, and how on many a matter the Church almost reversed the attitude of the Founder. Surely there is cause for a coming together, for an understanding.

Had Christianity remained in Jerusalem, had it been developed among native Jews solely, it would have remained a sect, one of many, and would have of itself come to an understanding with the main body. Gamaliel's cautious attitude shows to what extent Pharisaism could be tolerant. But the Christianity which came to be is of Antioch and the Dispersion. The Jew of the Dispersion was different from the native Jew. He was subject to all the [illegible] and all the currents of his surroundings quite as much as he is to-day under similar conditions. Paul was a Jew of the Dispersion, and that sums up his entire career. We dispute not that he was a [illegible]. We have his like [illegible] Jew, who stands out [illegible] religious leader. [illegible] of the Jewish [illegible] Paul was a Reform Jew [illegible] all the national- [illegible] of Judaism. Judaism is a [illegible] that [illegible]. The orthodox [illegible] has come to recognize it. The Christianized [illegible] the Jew? And when [illegible] Reform Jew [illegible] and [illegible] of the Liberal Movement in England, and many another in this country. But reform offers another parallel. In emphasizing the universalistic elements of Judaism, Reform, as well as the Pauline Movement, must needs invite the outsider to come in. It is this opening of the gates to them without, it is this orientation to the non-Jew, that inevitably must lead to that pass that came about in the days of Paul. It was simply a question of numeric preponderance. Where Gentiles formed the backbone of a community, a church, the original misunderstanding between Jesus and his contemporaries was exaggerated and assumed those proportions, which it came to possess ever after. Expressions, harmless in their Jewish setting, were invested with a meaning quite foreign to them. The Christianity that came to be is a very complex product. The founder's part is there; but much more besides. It was an age of religious mixture. Currents crossed and re-crossed each other. Various cults vied with each other, and some came near to playing the part, which came in the end to Christianity. There were those mystery societies, in which the initiates were offered personal, individual salvation. They had their ceremonies or sacraments. What to the Jew had been sanctification came to be with Gentile converts, to the Jewish variety called Christian, a sacrament. The Jew knew himself to be sanctified by commandments. Marriage was a sanctified state. But none of these were sacraments. The Jewish faith was a redemptive one. The Jew looked for his own personal salvation likewise. But he obtained it through the salvation of his people, in which he shared. His association was ready made for him. He was born into it.

In Gentile Christianity, which was essentially Greek, we must look for that exaggeration of the original misunderstanding. As it parted company with the Jewish people, its very differentiation was bound to erect that wall of separation which should distinguish the Christian from the Jew. It has been said that Paul transformed the religion of the founder into a religion about him. And that religion was cast into the mould of Greek thinking. And so the scheme of salvation was made to center in a belief concerning the God incarnate in a God-Man who offered himself on the cross that others might become free from sin. We are not criticizing the creed of Christianity. We are merely explaining it. Nor do we pass judgment on the manner in which non-Jewish rites were suffered to be perpetuated, assuming as they did a Christian interpretation. Indeed, the result was something new, new in its very composition. And undoubtedly that composition insured its hold upon Western humanity. But all this will explain how the rift between it and the Jew widened. The Jew, the protestant of remotest times, who brushed aside Babylonian cosmogonies, Canaanite Baalism, Samaritan half-heartedness, Greek frivolity, Roman worship of the state, kept up his mute protest against the new religion in its ultimate formulation and cult. The Jew remained the uncompromising monotheist. He has stood as a rock amidst the flux of ages.

But when all is said, there remained even in Catholic Christianity enough of the original foundation, which is unmistakably Jewish. The Catholic Church brushed aside many heresies, which went much farther in the desire to rid the new creation of all the Jewish elements. In one form or another the Jewish Law reentered. Remnants of the ancient temple liturgy are imbedded in Christian worship. The Christian Scriptures contain the Hebrew Bible, and the New Testament is unintelligible without an understanding of latter-day Judaism, which fills the blank page between Malachi and Matthew. Jewish psalms are sung in Christian cathedrals. Jewish morality, and not Greek, is the foundation of the Christian life, and Christian saints have modeled themselves upon Jewish prototypes. By keeping himself intact, the Jew paved the way for the Reformation and for the latter-day outgrowths, which came in its wake. The Jew is face to face with a vindication of his position. He has not stood out in vain. Providence had endowed him with strength. There was a purpose in his [illegible]. There was a meaning in his diffusion. He lives on as a witness that God's work is not yet done. He will remain what he is and has been. Humanity needs this everlastic protestant. He is inured to persecution and villification, to slander and libel. He sloughs off the weaklings, who bend their knees to Baal. Those who remain are steeled in their adamant endurance. He means to come to terms with the world; not by resigning his uniqueness, but by recognizing in the true Christian a brother in spirit. He would not meddle with the inner affairs of the Christian communion. But he cannot help observing how modern Christianity, in the measure that it casts off Greek formulae comes nearer and nearer the religion of the founder, and that religion, it has been shown conclusively, was in its background Jewish to the core.

These papers, we believe, have accomplished the task to show the very background in its historical truth. We do not deny that Jesus had ideas of his own and that sometimes they clashed with the orthodoxy of the day. But measured with the sequel, the difference was a far smaller one. Thus, in setting forth the true proportions of that Great Misunderstanding, it is not our intention to criticize, impugn, or impair Christianity in the form which it has historically assumed. We have aimed solely at convincing the Jew within of his providential position in the religious world of to-day and of all times. Let him understand that he is serving a purpose and that he is here to stay, so that his work begun in the times of Abraham may prosper. He is surrounded by a world into which the very best of his thought has entered, and that, encrusted though it be by much that is alien in spirit, it dominates to-day the world of piety. Moreover, the Jew to-day has in him potencies of spiritual energy, which it is for the world, in its own interests, to permit that they develop freely. Jews and Gentiles are passing through a most critical period of irreligion and immorality. Christians as well as Jews, the true Christians and the true Jews, must work shoulder to shoulder that the reign of faith may endure. This they can do by removing ancient misunderstandings and by learning to know and to understand each the other.

PALESTINE EXPENDITURE IN 1921 TO BE MORE THAN TWO MILLION POUNDS.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The Palestine Administration has made public its budget for 1921-2, says a Jerusalem dispatch received here. It is estimated that the revenue during the year will amount to 2,214,047 Egyptian pounds, while the expenditure will amount to 2,286,133 and will include 100,000 pounds, which will be used for purposes of national defense. Speaking of this phase of the budget, Sir Herbert Samuel officially declared that recruiting for Jewish and Arab defense units will be started at an early date.

According to Palestine advices thirty-nine new Arabic schools have been opened in the district of Haifa during the last four months.

SERBIAN ANTI-SEMITISM ASSUMING ALARMED PROPORTIONS.

Vienna, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Anti-Jewish manifestations have occurred in various cities in Serbia and make it evident that anti-Semitism is assuming alarming proportions in that country, according to a dispatch received here from Belgrade. A manifesto, issued by anti-Semitic organizations, accuses the Jews of having helped the Bulgarians and appeals to all patriotic Serbians, Croatos and Slavs to boycot the Jews and so isolate them as to force them to go to Palestine. The Serbian government is doing nothing to discourage the anti-Semites and has, on the contrary, more recently been expelling a number of Jews belonging to Greece and Spain, who have been resident in the country for many years.

CHRISTIANS PROTEST AGAINST ANTI-SEMITIC PUBLICATIONS.

London, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The local Christian organization, known as the "Prophesy Investigation Society," which devotes itself chiefly to a study of the Bible, adopted a resolution at its last meeting vigorously protesting against the anti-Semitic volumes and periodicals, which have recently made their appearance.

MONTEFIORE LODGE, BUFFALO, N. Y.

On March 30, 1921, a most inspiring meeting of Montefiore Lodge, No. 70 was held at the Buffalo Consistory, when the degree team took part in the contest for the cup offered by the District Grand Lodge. This team, composed of Israel Rumizen, Captain, Benjamin D Reisman, Emil H. Rubenstein, Herman Kahn, I. M. Hellwitz and Rev. B. Schachtel, performed the initiatory services in a most creditable and highly efficient manner. The judges of the contest were Brothers Charles Hartman, member of the General Committee, and Henry Lasker, President of the district. They expressed their entire approval and satisfaction with the manner in which Montefiore Lodge conducted and performed the initiatory rites. Following the degree work, speeches were made by Brother Henry Lasker; and Brother David Ruslaner, member of the General Committee, who presided, also gave a very enthusiastic talk on the manner in which the Jews of Buffalo should act toward the selling of the Dearborn Independent on the streets of this city. The announcement has not yet been made of the winner of the cup, but Montefiore Lodge looks forward to winning the prize.

On May 4, 1921, the next regular meeting of the lodge was held at Temple Beth El. A large and enthusiastic membership was present and business of a very interesting nature was transacted. Among the propositions proposed is one which is to be known as a gratuity fund, whereby in the event of the death of a member, his wife or heirs will be entitled to a certain sum of money as a gratuity from the lodge. This is to be purely voluntary on the part of the members, and the lodge is looking forward to establishing practical means of carrying this plan into execution. No definite action, however, was taken on the question, but the matter was referred to the General Executive Committee to prepare plans and submit the same to the lodge. Israel Rumizen, who presided in the absence of Brother Rodenberg, who was busy preparing for the minstrel show, talked briefly on the article written by Claude Montefiore on Anti-Semitic Antipathies. Announcement was made of the fact that the minstrel show, which was directed and prepared by Brother David Rodenberg, President of the lodge, would take place on Sunday, May 8, 1921, and he asked the cooperation of all those present in this first endeavor.

Minstrel Show.

Montefiore Lodge, No. 70, is indeed proud to announce the fact that its first minstrel show was held at the Majestic Theatre on Sunday evening, May 8, 1921. This show was managed by David Rodenberg. The proceeds of the program went toward paying up the pledge made by the lodge for the University of Buffalo Building Fund, and also to adopt a Jewish war orphan. The program was as follows: Part I was the "Montefiore Minstrels", which was prepared by David Rodenberg, President of the lodge; Part II was "The Skin Salesman", a one-act playlet written by David Rodenberg; and Part III was a "Jazz Wedding", performed by the Montefiore Minstrels. The following are the gentlemen who participated and who deserve the credit for this wonderful production: Brothers David Rodenberg, Nate Freedman and Robert Rodenberg; end men, Robert Levenson, Jack Feldstein, Ray Freedlander, Sidney Ehrenreich, Lew Ellison; and the following chorus: Irving Bareun, Samuel Rosenberg, Albert Schwab, Nat Morrison, Lew Walters, Michael Lewis, Norman Klein, Herman Rosenberg, Jay Brownstein, Albert Mandelkern, Joseph Kole, A. Drellich, Sam Mattis, George Rosen, Abe Mazure, Irving Schwab. The play, "The Skin Salesman", was performed by Robert Levenson, Irving Rodenberg, Harold Ehrlich, and Rheda Lewis, who was the only girl in the whole show.

The club, through this medium, takes this opportunity to thank all those who participated in this splendid production for the B'nai B'rith spirit as evidenced by this wonderful hit. The local lodge is indeed proud of its performers and the self-sacrificing manner in which the boys worked and participated in the show. Credit is also due to I. M. Hellwitz, Israel Rumizen, Jack Yellen, the Buffalo Jewish Review, and all Buffalo newspapers, which contributed toward making the production a success.—Israel Rumizen

Meeting of the General Committee of District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Germany

A MEETING of the General Committee of the German District Grand Lodge as held on February 18, 1921, in the 'nai B'rith Building, and in the absence Brothers Timeudorfer and Kuznitzky, rother Maximillian Stein presided.

Report was presented announcing the tablishment of a Ladies' Auxiliary in eipzig.

Danmark Lodge, of Copenhagen, in- rmed the Grand Lodge that it will not pen a fresh air colony for foreign children is summer.

With reference to Freemasonry, the eneral Committee was advised that the tuation in Masonic circles has not sub- antially changed from its attitude. At y rate, no new action has been taken ndering it more difficult for members the B'nai B'rith to be admitted to asonic lodges. Much emphasis is laid on the information that Masonic circles an a communion of activity with the dd Fellows and similar fraternal organ- ations.

The Propaganda Committee presented report to the effect that 18 candidates ve expressed their willingness to join 4 members of the Order, residents of olp, and form a lodge of the Order in at city, and that such lodge, if instituted, augmented further by 30 members cured in adjacent counties. The Gen- al Committee resolved to hold a propa- nda meeting in Stolp on March 12.

A class of 13 candidates has been secured d will be initiated in Westfalia Lodge ultimate view of organizing a B'nai 'rith lodge in the adjoining city of Seest.

The General Committee issued a cir- lar to the lodges of the district and em- oyment bureans maintained by them, lling upon the organizations to aid wish school boys whose school days will me to an end by securing for them an portunity to learn a mechanical trade. he smaller communities are particularly lled upon to supply positions for ap- entices.

eneral Committee Meeting, March 1, 1921.

Dr. B. Timendorfer, President of the strict, tendered his resignation as repre- ntative of the Grand Lodge in the uratorium in the Jewish High School.

Communication was presented from unich to the effect that the B'nai B'rith dge of that city has resolved to petition e Grand Lodge for a charter for a second dge of the Order to be instituted in that ty.

The B'nai B'rith Lodge of Cologne has solved to unite the Westfalian lodges th a view of making it possible to care r the members of the lodges still located the ceded territory and to enable them be placed in a position to become self- pporting and self-sustaining.

In Duesseldorf, a new Ladies' Auxiliary to the B'nai B'rith lodge of that city was organized. A member of the lodge contributed 5,000 mark on that occasion for the use and benefit of the auxiliary.

The General Committee was advised that the two lodges of Frankfort a/m have resolved to petition the Grand Lodge for a charter for the institution of a third lodge in that city.

On Sunday, February 20, 1921, a gathering was held, largely attended by members of the Order belonging to lodges located in ceded territories, particularly Poland. At this meeting, various resolutions were adopted, among them, that it is left to each individual brother to regulate his relationship with his own lodge. The question as to the establishment of a Grand Lodge in Poland will be considered after the Plebiscite in Upper Silesia shall have been finally disposed of.

The General Committee appropriated the sum of 6,000 mark for the benefit of the Advance Society of the German Jews, conditioned, however, that other Jewish organizations contribute in proportion to their means.

The German League of Nations was the subject of extensive discussion. Dr. P. Nathan advocated the support of the league on the part of the Grand Lodge and lodges of the Order. It was pointed out that the Grand Lodge is not a member of the league in view of the fact that the Order cannot take part in any matters of a political nature.

General Committee Meeting, March 22, 1921.

In the absence of Brother Dr. Timendorfer, Brother Maximillian Stein presided.

Report was presented of official visit paid by Brother Blumenau to the lodge at Coblenz, emphasizing real activity in that lodge.

Report was presented that, of all Jewish institutions, only the Jewish orphan Home of Frankfort was favorably considered for the distribution of American milk cows, and that two such cows were assigned to the orphanage.

In view of the fact that a just and equitable distribution of these milk cows is not taking place, it was resolved to forward a protest to America and emphasize that Jewish institutions should receive favorable consideration.

Dr. Strauss reported that he paid an official visit to the lodge at Mannheim on the occasion of its twenty-fifth silver anniversary celebration; that despite restrictions made necessary by political conditions, the celebration was most eventful, that a donation of 175,000 mark was raised among the members for the purpose of subventioning a children's home under the auspices of the lodge.

Reception to Eugen DePolnay, Former Cabinet Minister to Hungary

America Must Combat Anti-Semitism

"THE exercise of the moral influence of the people of the United States against the baleful effects of Anti-Semitism in certain parts of Europe is needed if this malignant growth is not to spread in America itself". This was the statement made at a reception in his honor, held on May 3, 1921, at the Hotel Astor by Eugen de Polnay, former cabinet minister of Hungary, and the only Jew, with one exception, ever to hold a Cabinet post in that country.

M. de Polnay, who has been in America for the past six weeks, returned on the Adriatic on May 4, 1921. The reception took the form of a meeting of the Jews of Hungarian extraction in New York to express their appreciation of M. de Polnay's services in behalf of the Jews of Hungary in Europe and Palestine. M. de Polnay is President of the Association of Hungarian Jews, formed in 1919, to care for Hungarian Jews impoverished by the war and for the refugees from other lands who poured into that country.

In describing the situation confronting the Jews of Hungary at this time, M. de Polnay, who was presented with an engrossed memorial of appreciation by his hosts, said:

"The Jews of Hungary are deeply appreciative of the sentiments and sympathy of American Jewry. We are confident of the future and of our ability to work out in time our economic rehabilitation. Never in history have the Jews of Hungary been compelled to ask for outside aid to care for their unfortunates. At this time, with thousands of children, the aged and the sick to be cared for, it is the policy of the Association of Hungarian Jews, in giving assistance, to refrain from charity, from the giving of doles which destroy the self-respect of the recipient without materially improving his situation. What we are doing is, by a system of loans, establishing in business the breadwinners of the family, providing employment and adopting other reconstructive methods by which the people shall be made self-supporting. We rely upon the honor, the purpose and the conscience of those aided to repay the loans and we have not thus far been disappointed.

"We need the aid of America, not to dispense charity, but to assist us in establishing a suitable fund to carry on our endeavors in the direction of reconstruction and to bring back the ability of our people to be self-supporting and themselves to care for those among us who are unable, by reason of physical impairment, to provide their own livelihood. Our own Jews will, in the future as in the past, provide for their poor and their aged and sick by the support of our institutions for this purpose".

Continuing M. de Polnay, who was Food Minister in the Cabinet of Premier Stefan Friedrich, which was set up following the Bolshevist collapse in 1919, said, concerning the material conditions in Hungary at this time:

"With the next harvest there will be ample food in Hungary not alone for our own people but for export and I feel confident of a very great improvement in the rates of exchange".

M. de Polnay's reference to anti-Semitism in the United States came at the conclusion of his remarks when he said:

"The example of America, where Jew and Gentile live together in fraternity and harmony is inspiring. The effort to stir religious prejudice in the United States will always fail, but the seeds of such prejudice must not be permitted to be transplanted. Anti-Semitism can only exist where there is ignorance of the Jews' contribution to the cause of humanity and civilization and to the quality of patriotism which is inherent in him and will always assert itself if not crushed and stifled. We hope for the moral support of America in stamping out anti-Semitism, whatever its source and in this way America can look forward to being free forever from the introduction of a cause of bitterness and hatred as useless, senseless and debasing as any of the evil influences which retard the coming of a better and more complete human understanding.

"The Hungarian Jew has, like the American Jew, enjoyed, with but few exceptions in the chapters of Hungary's history, equality with his non-Jewish brother and religious and political freedom. He appreciates and has taken advantage of the liberties accorded him to be a leader in Jewish thought and culture as well as in the business, agricultural and economic life of his native land, and he asks only to be permitted to pursue his ways in peace and in fraternity. American Jewry can do much to help in the attainment of this ideal".

At the conclusion of the reception to M. de Polnay, announcement was made by those in charge of the meeting that a fund of $500,000 to assist the Jews of Hungary in Europe and Palestine is to be raised in this country at once by the Relief Association for Hungarian Jews of which Dr. Philip Klein, rabbi of the First Hungarian Congregation Ohab Zedek, 18 West 116th Street, is Chairman and Albert Herskovitz of 44 West 28th Street, is the Treasurer. The campaign, in which all the prominent Jews of Hungarian extraction are deeply interested, is to be national in scope. Upon its conclusion a committee of American business men and leaders in Jewish religion and culture will be sent to Hungary to administer the fund.

JEW-BAITING.

A group of Christian men and women hose names stand for the best in American nduct and character have issued a man- esto in earnest deprecation of the "un- merican and un-Christian agitation ainst the Jews."

When Henry Ford financed the peace usade and the famous shipload for a pre- ature experiment in idealism, he was ven credit for a warm heart that took in l mankind, though his common sense as not so highly rated. His action then as at odds with his policy now. His riodical is doing all that it can to create d widen a cleavage in mankind. This preeminently a time in the world's story when every possible effort should made to bring the nations and the races gether. Those who set class against ass and man against man can only be garded as enemies of society.—[Phil- lelphia Public Ledger.

EWS OF CZECHO-SLOVAKIA CONCERNED OVER PRESIDENT'S RES- IGNATION.

Vienna, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Advices from Prague received here re- arding the situation created by the signation of President Massaryk, indi- ate that the Jews of Czecho-Slovakia are eatly disturbed by the President's act. resident Massaryk it is pointed out has ways shown concern for the Jews and stricted during his term of office, all anti- emitic manifestations.

SEDORIM FOR JEWISH IMMIGRANTS.

The Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America gave Sedorim for Jewish immigrants at its Home, 229 East Broadway, New York City, at Ellis Island, New York, and at quarantine station, Hoffman Island, New York.

At Ellis Island 800 Jewish immigrants were the guests of the society. Among those present were Menachim Mendel Ussisehkin, Dr. Benzion Mosessohn and Dr. Shmaryaha Levin of the Zionist delegation, now in this country, Mr. Ruben Brainin, the well known Hebrew writer and other distinguished men. Mr. John L. Bernstein, President of the Society, acted as host.

During the whole of Passover all Jewish immigrants detained at Ellis Island or in other quarantine stations, were provided with Passover food.

227 WOUNDED IN JAFFA—JEWS AND MOSLEMS RIOT.

Jerusalem, May 3.—The rioting at Jaffa on Sunday, in which a number of persons were killed or wounded, was renewed Monday, when several additional Jews and Moslems were killed. Moslem and Jewish notables have calmed the combatants temporarily, but a renewal of the disturbance is threatened. Martial law has been declared.

The total number of persons wounded Sunday and Monday was 227.

GERMAN MINISTER OF EDUCATION DEPLORES ANTI-JEWISH MEASURE.

Berlin (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—In the course of an interview granted to some foreign correspondents, Minister of Education Heinisch deplored the fact that Eastern Jewish students are being discriminated against in the universities. Jewish names, he declared, are prominent wherever German scientific and artistic achievements have won world-wide recognition. The Minister added that anti-Semitic riots are a blot upon those responsible for them as well as upon those countenancing them.

ROTHSCHILDS GIVE TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND POUNDS FOR ELECTRIFICATION OF PALESTINE.

Paris, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

It was learned recently that Baron Rothschild contributed twenty-five thousand pounds, to help work out the plans of Engineer Rnttenberg for the electrification of Palestine.

TEN THOUSAND JEWS WERE CONVERTED IN SIX MONTHS.

Vienna, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

Reports received here from Budapest establish the fact that during the first six months of 1920 no less than ten thousand Jews in the domain of Hungary, adopted the Christian faith. During the same period there were also 526 mixed marriages between Jews and Gentiles.

CONFERENCE BETWEEN POLISH AND JEWISH LEADERS.

The Ministers of the Interior, Finance and Education have conferred with the Jewish leaders, Dr. Nossig, Deputies Farbstein and Thon and Messrs. Prilutzki and Kirshbaum. Dr. Nossig proposed as a basis for an understanding the abolition of the old Tsarist anti-Semitic laws, the recognition of the Jewish communists, repeal of the Sunday closing law and the establishment of a special ministeral department to deal with Jewish affairs.

In reply, the Ministers invited all Jewish parties to agree upon one memorandum stating the Jewish demands and to present it at the next meeting.

JEWS HAVE ALSO A RIGHT TO EXIST, GERMAN MINISTER DECLARES.

Berlin, (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).

The question of the eastern Jews in Germany was again debated at the last session of the Prussian Diet. Minister Severing defended the position of the eastern Jew declaring that he is as much entitled to existence as any other section of the community.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

A B'nai B'rith Community Seder under the auspices of Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, of Youngstown, Ohio, was held on Friday evening, April 22, at the European Restaurant, 125 E. Federal St. Dr. J. B. Grossman, former Rabbi of Rodef Sholem Temple officiated.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

B'NAI B'RITH BULLETIN.

District Grand Lodge, No. 2.

Kokomo, Ind., Wants B'nai B'rith Lodge.

District Grand Lodge, No. 2, is in receipt of a petition from Kokomo, Ind., signed by twenty-seven names requesting that a B'nai B'rith Lodge be instituted in that city. The petition has been approved by members of the General Committee and a lodge will be instituted in the near future.

New B'nai B'rith Lodges in District No. 2.

On March 6, Kadimah Lodge, No. 881, of Springfield, Ohio, was instituted by the officers of District Grand Lodge No. 2. The newly elected President is Brother Moses Weixelbaum. The lodge started with a membership of forty-five.

On March 7, Hamilton Lodge, No. 882, of Hamilton, Ohio, was instituted. Brother David Silver was elected President. The lodge was started with forty charter members.

More Propaganda Pamphlets.

Pamphlets, graphically illustrating "B'nai B'rith benevolent institutions in the United States" are now ready for distribution. A copy of this pamphlet, together with the pamphlet "Ideals and Achievements of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, should be placed into the hands of every initiate into the Order. Write for a supply at once.

Jewish Periodicals Wanted by Inmates of Penal Institutions.

Jewish inmates of the several penal institutions in District No. 2 frequently request that Jewish periodicals be sent them. Funds at present available for Social Service work in these institutions are not sufficient to supply this need. It is suggested that individual lodges subscribe to one or two Jewish periodicals and send them to the nearest penal institution for the use of the Jewish inmates.

Has Your Lodge Adopted a Jewish War-Orphan?

There are more than three hundred thousand Jewish Orphans in Europe today. They turn their pallid, tear-stained faces to us for help. We are their sole hope for salvation. Shall we disappoint them? One hundred dollars will care for a child for one year. Each lodge, however small, can surely adopt at least one child, perhaps more. The name, address and photograph of the adopted child will be sent to the lodge. Come across.

How Old Is Your Lodge?

It is well to keep this in mind and to make a fitting celebration on the anniversary of the institution of the lodge. During the month of April the following anniversaries occurred: April 1, Denver Lodge; April 2, Eschol Lodge; April 4, Ligonier Lodge; April 15, Joseph Lodge; April 26, Muncie Lodge; April 27; Gihon Lodge; April 29, Mahoning Lodge and East Liverpool Lodge; April 30, Lima Lodge.

During the month of May the following anniversaries occurred: May 4, United Cities Lodge; May 5, Lake Lodge; May 7, Steubenville Lodge; May 10, Toledo Lodge.

Yours for a Bigger and Better B'nai B'rith.

MYER L. VICTORIOUS DINNER.

The fraternal spirit of the I. O. B. B. was exemplified at the beefsteak dinner tendered on April 6, to Brother Myer L. Victorious, Chairman of the House Committee of the I. O. B. B. headquarters in New York.

The twenty-five members of the committee united in planning this dinner as a complete surprise to Brother Victorious, who is held in the highest affection and esteem by his co-workers.

The dinner was held at Healy's and proved a most successful affair. Songs appropriate to the occasion and humorous [illegible] helped to advance the spirit of comradeship.

At the conclusion of the dinner Brother Victorious was presented with a gift. This was the occasion for a few remarks fraught with deep feeling on his part.

The committee intends, under the able leadership of Brother Victorious, to continue its good work of making the I. O. B. B. headquarters a center of social and fraternal [illegible] for the members of our Order.

TRI-CITY LODGE, ROCK ISLAND, ILL.

On Sunday, April 17, 1921, Tri-City Lodge, No. 837, held its banner meeting of the year. A membership campaign was brought to a gratifying conclusion, by the obtaining of over 100 new members under the captaincies of Brothers Dr. Kalman and Ben Comenitz, eighty of which members were initiated at this meeting.

The District Grand Lodge, in appreciation of the splendid showing made by Tri-City Lodge, sent as its representatives, for the purpose of exemplifying the initiatory ceremonies, Brothers Harry Okin and Joseph A. Golde, of Chicago.

With the full attendance of all the members of the lodge, the large class of eighty candidates had unfolded to them, in an impressive and solemn manner, the purposes and aims of the Order. That the newly initiated members were profoundly impressed was evidenced by their expressions after the meeting.

The class was of an unusually high personnel, the leading citizens of the cities of Moline, Davenport and Rock Island being among their number.

After the initiatory services, members of the class of initiates were called upon for remarks. Among those who spoke were E. P. Adler of Davenport, one of the largest newspaper publishers in the West; Max Rosenthal, of Davenport; S. L. Grossman, of Moline; and Mayer Levi, of Rock Island.

In appreciation of the services of the respective captains, presentation was made to them of excellent gifts. The visiting degree team from Chicago was likewise presented with tokens of appreciation by the lodge.

Following the meeting in the afternoon, a banquet was tendered the newly initiated candidates at Terrace Garden in Davenport. Following the banquet, the lodge had arranged for a dance at the club rooms of the lodge in Rock Island, which affair was well attended.

Before the dancing program started, advantage was taken of the presence of all of the fair sex of the Tri-Cities and a Ladies' Auxiliary of B'nai B'rith was organized. Temporary officers were elected and the enthusiasm displayed augurs well for the success of the auxiliary.

Following the election of officers, the dancing, which was participated in by all present, concluded what was generally agreed to be a memorable day in the community.

Too much credit cannot be given Tri-City Lodge for the splendid progress shown by it. The lodge is making itself a factor in the community and is in a large measure accomplishing the hopes and aspirations of the Order. It is officered by energetic young men and those of more mature years cooperate in a splendid manner with the younger men.

Keep up the good work, Tri-City Lodge.

B'NAI B'RITH DAY CELEBRATION BY WINNIPEG LODGE, WINNIPEG, CAN.

The most successful B'nai B'rith day celebration ever held by Winnipeg Lodge, No. 650, took place on Sunday, April 3. The visitor for the occasion was Rabbi Samuel S. Cohon, of Chicago, Director of Intellectual Advancement, whose charming personality and eloquent address delighted the large gatherings. In the afternoon an initiation was held and a class of thirteen was initiated, after which Dr. Cohon installed the new officers.

In the evening an audience of over a thousand of the members and their friends was present at the Allen Theatre. The memorial service of the Order was conducted by Brothers S. Hart Green, and H. J. Samuel. Brother Goldstine read his report of the work of the past year showing the considerable activities of the lodge and also the large volume of most important work which the lodge has undertaken this year in the interests of the community. Brother Cohon then delivered an oration which for warmth of feeling and eloquence has never been excelled in the experience of the lodge. It is confidently expected that B'nai B'rith day this year will be most fruitful in inspiring the lodge with enthusiasm for increasing the membership and maintaining our record of work.—[H. J. Samuel.

RAINIER LODGE, SEATTLE, WASH.

On Wednesday, April 6, at the Odd Fellows' Hall, Rainier Lodge held a social meeting.

Mr. Henry Lambado, the famous operatic tenor who recently signed a contract with the Manhattan Opera Company, appeared at the meeting by special arrangements and rendered a number of vocal selections.

Rainier Lodge is most active in the matter of caring for Jewish war orphans. This lodge was probably the first one to form a strong committee to carry on this important work, under the direction of Herman Schochen. The committee has already secured pledges amounting to over $2,000 to be used towards the adoption of Jewish war orphans.

As a result of the strenuous activity of the Membership Committee of Rainier Lodge, headed by Vice President Louis Friedlander, the roster of the lodge has been doubled within a period of 3 months. At the same time the attendance at the meetings has increased from a nominal quorum to an attendance of about 200. The membership at the beginning of 1921 numbered 203 and at the end of March the roster reached 398, with approximately 100 applicants awaiting initiation. This splendid spirit reflects a renaissance in which the younger members of Seattle Jewry have been the shining light.

Rainier Lodge has not only done a great deal for the Order in the district, but has been the sponsor of a great communal consciousness which has hitherto been latent but which has now been revived. This is the consensus of opinion of many of the leaders of the community who point to the splendid accomplishments that now feature the work of other Jewish organizations in the city.

Now that plans for the organization of the lodge are well under way, arrangements are being made to make the meetings a source of pleasure as well as of interest and education. The Rainier jazz band, organized by J. A. Koerpel, consists of J. G. Cohen, Lou Singerman, Max Berliner, I. H. Friedenthal, and J. A. Koerpel. Plans have been completed for the organization of a glee club to be known as the Rainier Glee Club.—[B. E. Harvitz.

B. F. PEIXOTTO LODGE, No. 421, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

The most enthusiastic meeting of the year held by B. F. Peixotto Lodge, No. 421, was the open meeting on Tuesday, April 19, under the auspices of the Intellectual Advancement Committee. The principal speaker of the evening was Daniel Alexander, who gave a lengthy address explaining the reasons for the articles in The Dearborn Independent as advocated by Henry Ford. He fully outlined the origin of various articles and how they might best be refuted.

The progress made by the committee on the Jewish Community Center was of much gratification to the entire audience when the chairman announced he had received pledges of nearly $14,000 and that much more could be expected before long. As soon as enough funds are on hand to warrant further action, plans will be formulated for the construction of the long desired and greatly needed Community Center for and in behalf of the Jewish population of the city.

Since the first of the year, the membership of the lodge has been increased by twenty new initiations. This now makes the membership of Salt Lake Lodge about 275 members. The good work will be kept up and it is anticipated that by the end of the year the membership will be fully 350 or more.

It is rather early to be out for the Grand Lodge convention of 1923, but Salt Lake is after it right now and expects to get it. This is the ideal place for conventions and your visit in 1923 will be well repaid in more ways than one. This is only a starter of the publicity this campaign will have up to the time of the next Grand Lodge convention.

Brother Lucius L. Solomons is to visit this lodge early in May and plans are now under way for the entertainment of our distinguished guest. District Deputy Dr. F. Coret will preside as toastmaster at the banquet and all other arrangements are under his supervision and that of the Entertainment Committee.—[S. J. Friedman.

HAR SINAI LODGE, PHILADELPHI PA.

The largest class initiation ever held the city of Philadelphia occurred on Mar 16, 1921, when over 500 candidates wer initiated into Har Sinai Lodge, No. 8.

The ceremonies of initiation took plac at Moose Hall, one of the largest halls the city of Philadelphia, and it was crowd to its capacity.

This was an open meeting to which t ladies were invited. The hall was han somely decorated with flags and flowe and an orchestra which had been engag for the evening rendered selections bo before and after the meeting and durin the initiatory ceremonies.

The officers and degree team, as is the custom at every meeting, appeared evening clothes and the degree team pe formed the ceremonies in such an admi able way that the visitors from other lodge both in Philadelphia and nearby town agreed that it was the grandest ceremon they had ever witnessed. This will, n doubt, go a great way towards influencin other lodges to arrange for a degree tea that can perform this work without th use of the ritual books.

During the initiation Jewish anthem were sung by Mrs. Lena Weber Bricker, noted Jewish singer of this city. Th charge to the candidates was delivered b Past President of the District Joseph W Salus, and by David Bortin, President o District Grand Lodge, No. 3.

In October of 1920, Har Sinai Lodge ha a membership of about 280, and, in th four months following, nearly 75 candidates were initiated at every meeting, s at the February meeting the lodge had membership of 525.

At this meeting a proposition was mad that the lodge double itself for the March meeting, and during the four weeks that followed an active campaign took plac which resulted in 800 propositions fully paid being obtained by the committee in charge.

As already stated, about 500 were present at the initiatory ceremonies, and Har Sinai Lodge now has a membership of approximately 1,100, and now is the largest individual lodge in District No. 3.

About 300 candidates still remain to b initiated and an attempt will be made at special meeting not only to bring in thes men but a number of other proposition that have since been received.

A regular meeting of Har Sinai Lodge, No. 8, which was attended by over 400 of its members, was held on Wednesday evening, April 20, 1921, at the Hotel Majestic.

The enthusiasm aroused during the past few months during the large membership drive in which the lodge grew from 280 to 1,100 members was so manifest that arrangements were made for another large class initiation for the month of May, and there is no doubt that this lodge, which is now the largest lodge in the district, will very shortly be the largest lodge in the Order.

The prizes offered to the members who brought in the largest number of candidates during the recent drive were presented at this meeting, Walter I. Davidson receiving a silver loving cup, Abraham Lifter a gold watch fob with the insignia of the Order, and Herman Savage a silver watch fob with the same insignia.

As a result of the membership drive, the lodge was entitled to nine additional delegates to the Grand Lodge convention, who were elected at this meeting, so that the lodge now has eighteen delegates for the convention to be held in Erie on June 26.

The delegation, which will be the largest ever sent to a convention by any lodge of the district, consists of Harry S. Platowsky, Abraham Berkowitz, William Portner, William Lowenthal, George Goldstein, Norman Platowsky, Charles H. Kors, Herman Bendiner, David Berger, Frank Kohn, William M. Lewis, Samuel W. Salus, William H. Smallock, Harry L. Silk, Abraham Wernick, Dr. Henry S. Wieder and Past Presidents of the district Joseph W. Salus and Adolph Platowsky.

Arrangements are now being perfected for a series of events during this month, consisting of a large class initiation, a vaudeville show and a May hop, to which latter affair the ladies will be invited.

Following the meeting a collation was served.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

In order to effectively conduct and carry on the work of the Employment Bureau Committee of the B'nai B'rith, contributions are being asked from the members. There is a vital need for employment work among the members of the lodge in view of the numerous requests received daily from applicants. The B'nai B'rith Employment Bureau intends to cooperate with other agencies and employment managers throughout the city.

In true festive spirit, a number of B'nai B'rith members and their friends celebrated Purim with a masquerade ball on the evening of March 24. Prizes were awarded both for clever dancing and interesting costumes. The evening was by far the most delightful spent by members of the lodge and much credit is due to the energy and ingenuity of the committee.

Rabbi Solomon Goldman addressed the members of Cleveland Lodge at an open meeting on April 4, at the B'nai B'rith Auditorium, on the subject "Is Religion Logical?" The address proved most interesting and instructive and was open to the members of the Order and their friends. At the conclusion of the lecture, the audience was permitted to question the speaker.

The usual Sunday evening dance under the auspices of Cleveland Lodge was held on April 24.

On Thursday evening, April 28, a special initiation ceremony was held at the meeting of Cleveland Lodge at the B'nai B'rith Building. The degree team made special plans to make this ceremony most effective and impressive and was augmented in its work by members of the General Committee of the district. A class of over 100 candidates was initiated, in the presence of a very large audience. Brother S. G. Kusworm, of Dayton, member of the Executive Committee of the Order for District No. 2, delivered the address of welcome to the initiates.

Seder Services by Cleveland Lodge.

Over two hundred voices joined in the singing of traditional hymns which featured the celebration at the B'nai B'rith Seder.

The Seder was conducted by Rabbi Solomon Goldman, and in a most interesting and eloquent manner the rabbi explained the significance of the Seder and the symbols and what they represented.

The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers which had been gathered by members of the committee.

As part of the service a special musical program had been arranged which included several Hebrew traditional melodies by John Manuel Rosenberg, the singing of Adir Hu by Miss Lillian Spero, as well as several musical selections by Misses Ruth and Miriam Stiglitz. Cantor J. Greenberg, who recently came from New York and officiated at the B'nai Jeshurun Temple, rendered several vocal selections. Harry Miller sang several songs which were very well received.

The Community Seder was a splendid expression of the communal Pesah spirit and was the best attended Seder the B'nai B'rith has had for several years.

Credit for the splendid work is due to the committee of which Miss Samuel Hartman was chairman.

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

A public Seder was given under the auspices of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, on Friday evening, April 22, at the B'nai B'rith club rooms. Jewish soldiers stationed at Fort Wayne were entertained. A number of members of the lodge responded to the appeal to entertain soldiers for the following evening and during Sunday.

EZEKIEL LODGE, NEWARK, N. J.

On Wednesday evening, May 4, 1921, a most interesting meeting was held under the auspices of Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J. The meeting took the form of a discussion regarding Passover. Three viewpoints were covered by the principal speakers, Messrs. Chas. Ruben, Joseph Kraemer and Nathan Kussy, after which a general discussion took place. The meeting and the debate lasted until about 10 o'clock after which dancing followed and arrangements were under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

B'NAI B'RITH OF PORTLAND.

At the regular meeting of Portland Lodge, No. 65, held at the B'nai B'rith Building on Tuesday, April 19, Jacob Weinstein addressed the lodge on the subject "The Problem of the Immigrant". A class of candidates was also initiated by the celebrated degree team of the lodge.

The Orphan Fund Committee of the lodge with Brother Alex Bernstein as chairman is raising the necessary money to take care of a number of European war orphans. So far, the lodge has adopted ten such orphans.

Portland Lodge's famous degree team will accompany the President of the District Grand Lodge, Brother D. Solis Cohen, on his annual official visit to the lodges of the district.

The Educational Committee in charge of the B'nai B'rith Forum arranged for a lecture on April 25 at the B'nai B'rith Building, on which occasion Mr. W. B. Wheelwright delivered an address on "Our Relations with the Orient". This meeting was open to the public. Mr. Wheelright, who has been a keen student of Oriental affairs and is well qualified to discuss that subject, made a splendid address which proved interesting and educating.

At a meeting of Portland Lodge, held on April 19, Jacob Weinstein delivered an address on the subject, "The Problem of the Emigrant". This was initiation evening and the hall was packed to capacity.

After a short business session, the Daughters of the Covenant held a delightful social hour, at which cards were enjoyed.

Mr. I. Irving Lipschultz, head of the Federation of Jewish Societies of San Francisco, addressed Portland Lodge at its meeting held on April 5.

The benefit card party and tea, for the adoption of a War Orphan, given by the Daughters of the Covenant, May 10, at B'nai B'rith Building, was one of the most delightful social affairs of the season. Tables were arranged for bridge and five hundred. Ten beautiful prizes were donated by members for the winners.

A splendid program is being arranged and will be presented in the reception room for the entertainment of those who do not play cards.

Mrs. Julius Wertheimer is in charge of arrangements and is being assisted by a very able committee, which is exerting every effort towards making this affair a social and financial success.

LEO. N. LEVI LODGE— SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Leo N. Levi Lodge, No. 675, organized and instituted in February, 1911, by Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 7, Brother Godcheau A. Levi, of Dallas, Texas, brother of the Order's great leader with whose name this lodge was honored, and by Rabbi Henry Cohen of Galveston, Texas, whose congregation Leo N. Levi served as President for many years.

The lodge at once took its place in the communal life of the city and has since labored earnestly and well with its problems. It has grown in influence and membership until now it has about two hundred members, and is at this time in the midst of a steady campaign to extend its sphere of usefulness by instilling into the thoughts of all Jews that they should endeavor to bear their share of our people's burdens, and not be satisfied with seeing some one else do it. This lodge has on its roster the names of many men prominent in the Jewish and civic life.

The lodge meets regularly every other Sunday morning, and after the business session, the lodge adjourns to the body of Temple Beth-El, and holds a forum, having this open to the public. A speaker of prominence delivers an address and then a general discussion is held upon the subject of the address. These forums are well attended and apparently are serving to better communal life.

The officers of the lodge are: Eugene Oppenheimer, President; Sol C. Nathan, Vice President; Eph M. Goldstein, Monitor; Henry A. Hirshberg, Treasurer; Leon A. Baer, Secretary.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION OF DENVER LODGE, DENVER, COLO.

More than five hundred members of Denver Lodge, No. 171, I. O. B. B., attended its 49th anniversary celebration at Knights of Pythias Hall on April 6.

It was the largest gathering of members ever seen in a lodge room of a Jewish fraternal organization in the city. Twenty members of the recently organized Cheyenne lodge came down to extend congratulations to Denver Lodge and Trinidad Lodge sent four representatives to show its fraternal spirit.

The initiation of seventy-five splendid men was impressively conducted by the degree team of the lodge, composed of Messrs. Zwetow, Harlem, Simon J. Heller, Arthur F. Friedman and J. Olcovich, with Ludwig Buka at the piano. Musical numbers were ably rendered as follows: Miss Miriam Sternfield, piano solo; violin solo, Mr. Albert Weinberg, accompanied by Miss Anna Weinberg; solos by the Remwit Four. Mr. Karcher, presdigitateur, proved an excellent entertainer.

The feature of the evening was the address of Rabbi Harry H. Mayer, of Kansas City. He took for his subject "How Much Do You Care?" After congratulating the lodge upon its splendid history and progress, he spoke of the work of the Order, especially with reference to its present dignified and effective work against anti-Semitism, and greatly impressed his listeners with the high ideals of the Order and the power for good it exerts. He appealed for a spirit of self-sacrifice and loyalty to Jewish ideals and Judaism, and said it all depended on: "How Much Do You Care?"

Sincerity was stamped upon everything Rabbi Mayer said. He spoke with eloquence and conviction, and held the attention of his audience to the conclusion of his address.

Before the meeting the officers and Past Presidents tendered Rabbi Mayer a dinner at the Albany Hotel, at which a number of the out-of-town visitors were also present. —[S. Friedenthal.

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

On Sunday, April 11, at the regular meeting of Amos Lodge, we had Judge Henry Goldfogle of New York as speaker of the evening.

On Friday, April 15, Amos Lodge arranged a special B'nai B'rith Night at Temple Ohabei Shalom on Union Park Street. Rabbi Abrams delivered a most inspiring address on Judaism, B'nai B'rithism, and the Jew. Cantor Wolkowich rendered appropriate special music for the services. It was a most inspiring night and a most inspiring occasion.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Amos Lodge had their first dance on Tuesday, April 19, where the members of Amos Lodge and the auxiliary had a most enjoyable time.

On Monday, April 25, Amos Lodge initiated sixty-five new candidates, making the membership now close to seventeen hundred. Rabbi Harry Halpern of Brooklyn, New York, was the speaker of the evening. At that meeting it was voted that Amos Lodge pursue the work left off by the late lamented Jacob H. Schiff for providing a prize for the Menorah Societies in the vicinity of Boston for an essay on a Jewish topic.

On Tuesday, May 3, the Ladies' Auxiliary of Amos Lodge will be instituted, members initiated, and officers installed, and for Sunday, May 8, extensive preparations were made for Brother Lucius L. Solomons who delivered two addresses, one in the morning at Temple Israel and one in the evening at Temple Ohabi Shalom.

On Monday, May 9, the business meeting was followed by an entertainment and refreshments.—[David Scott.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

Under the auspices of Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, of Youngstown, Ohio, a public meeting was held on Sunday, May 1, 1921, with the following program of exercises: Opening, singing "America", by audience; invocation, by Past President M. Myerovich; welcome address, by President J. Friedland; vocal solo, by J. N. Scott; piano solo, by Prof. Ehrenfeld; clarinet solo, by D. Sacherman; overture and selections, by B'nai B'rith Orchestra, D. Sacherman, leader; address, by Hon. F. J. Warnock, Mayor of Youngstown, Ohio.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT YORK, PA.

The Independent Order of B'nai B'rith has added another strong link to its chain of lodges throughout District Grand Lodge No. 3 in the formal institution of York Lodge in York, Pa.

Miss Miriam Schoenfield and Mr. Edward Hemple, both Pittsburghers, played a prominent part in the organization.

Mr. Isadore Rosenthal, formerly Rabbi of Lancaster, assisted by Albert Rosenstein, member of the General Committee of District No. 3, had much to do with the success of the occasion. Mr. Rosenthal gave a notable oration on the tenets of the Order and he in turn was assisted by a very delightful discourse by Mr. Edward Hemple, former Secretary of the District and former chairman of the Propaganda Committee, a man who has served the district throughout the past many years with ever-earnest devotion.

One of the illuminating features of the occasion was an address by Miss Miriam Schoenfield on the activities of the Council of Jewish Women in the direction of religious schools the country over. Everyone acclaimed her address as one of the bright contributions in the program.

Mr. Edward Hemple, who was the chief sponsor for the organization of this lodge, has also been instrumental during the past several months in instituting lodges at Greensburg, Pa., New Brunswick, N. J., Elizabeth, N. J., Perth Amboy, N. J., Coatesville, Pa.

HENRY JONES- LEBANON LODGE, NEW YORK.

The monthly meeting of Henry Jones-Lebanon Lodge, No. 79, was held at the B'nai B'rith headquarters, New York City, on March 14, 1921.

The meeting was well attended by representatives of all the lodges in Greater New York. A musical program followed the meeting. A visitor in the person of Gamaliel Levy, of the B'nai B'rith of London, visited the lodge, and made an address as to the workings of the B'nai B'rith in Great Britain.

Our lodge has had some doings since the present President assumed the office. Congressman Isaac Siegel of New York addressed the meeting in February on "Immigration". Mr. Justice John Ford at the March meeting spoke on "Americanism", and our April meeting will be addressed by President Henry Lasker, of District No. 1. For the first time in Greater New York, a moving picture will be given at the lodge, showing the varieus phases and activities of the B'nai B'rith in this and other countries. The meeting will be followed by a musical program, with Jewish operatic songs, given by Samuel Kantor, of the Brooklyn Jewish Center, and Bernard Schramm, of Washington Heights Congregation.

Every member of the district has been invited to attend this meeting. A membership drive is on in the district for 10,000 new members and President Henry Lasker expects to make a very satisfactory report of the increase in membership since the drive began on April 7.

INDIANAPOLIS LODGE, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Indianapolis Lodge, No. 58, has started, under the direction of its President, Harry Blatt, an active membership campaign. On Sunday afternoon, April 17, a class of 40 was initiated at the Claypool Hotel, the degree team, one of the best in District No. 32, having charge of the initiatory work.

A banquet for the members and their ladies was held later in the evening and was attended by over 250 persons, one of the finest representative gatherings of Jews held under the auspices of the B'nai B'rith in Indianapolis.

After a short musical program, the President, acting as toastmaster, introduced the following speakers who delivered stirring and inspiring talks on the work of the Order: Brother E. J. Shanfarber, of Columbus, Ohio, First Vice-President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2; Brother Alfred A. Benesch, Cleveland, Ohio, member of the General Committee; Brother Sidney G. Kusworm of Dayton, Ohio, Past President of District Grand Lodge, No. 2.—[Harry Blatt.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA.

Cedar Rapids Lodge, No. 811, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was instituted on the evening of May 20, 1921, by Brothers Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer and A. B. Seelenfreund, President and Secretary of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, respectively.

The visiting Grand Lodge officers upon their arrival were met by a committee of the new lodge and were entertained at dinner at the home of Mr. L. Oransky.

The charter list contained 80 names of which number 72 presented themselves for initiation and were duly initiated by the Grand Lodge officers, after which the election of officers and their installation by the President of the district followed.

At the close of the formal ceremonies of the institution of the lodge, the doors were thrown open to the public and a large number of the ladies and friends of the members were admitted. Addresses were made by Brothers Mannheimer and Seelenfreund, touching upon the work of the Order and the problems of the Jew. The addresses met with the approval of the audience.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

On Tuesday evening, April 19, 1921, Sioux City Lodge, No. 598, was instituted by Brothers Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Des Moines, Henry Monsky, of Omaha, and A. B. Seelenfreund, of Chicago, officers of District Grand Lodge, No. 6.

The petition for charter contained 104 names of which number 84 presented themselves for initiation and the initiatory work was performed by the Grand Lodge officers.

After the formal institution of the lodge, officers were elected and were installed by the President of the district.

Addresses touching on the welfare of the lodge and the Order were made by the visiting Grand Lodge officers and by the President of the lodge.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

The visiting Grand Lodge officers were entertained by a committee of the lodge for luncheon and dinner, during which matters pertaining to the welfare of the new lodge were considered and acted upon.

A delegation numbering five from Council Bluffs Lodge, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, made a special trip to attend the institution of the lodge.

PITTSBURGH LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

On Sunday, April 17, Pittsburgh Lodge held its first initiatory ceremony. Brother I. W. Jacobs opened the meeting and was followed by A. L. Wolk. The initiation was conducted by a team consisting of A. L. Solomon, Chairman; A. L. Wolf, Simon Davis, Sol Bachman, Baer Horvitz, Lem G. Ball and Harry C. Sirvan.

After the initiation, Brother L. S. Levin, President of Pittsburgh Lodge, No. 44, I. O. B. B., welcomed the new members in a few well chosen remarks. Among the other speakers were Leon B. Stein, member of the General Committee of District No. 3; Maurice Schaffner, First Vice President of District No. 3, who presented the charter of Pittsburgh Lodge, No. 44, on behalf of the District Grand Lodge, and Joseph Herbach, Secretary of District No. 3, who delivered a very inspiring speech.

Among the candidates who were called upon to speak were Rabbi Alfred H. Kahn and Dr. Ludwig B. Bernstein.

The meeting as a whole was very inspiring and one that will be long remembered in B'nai B'rith circles.

LIMA LODGE, LIMA, OHIO.

One of the most beautiful and interesting initiations ever witnessed by members of Lima Lodge was held in Canton on Sunday, April 24, and a class of 6 applicants was initiated.

More than 25 members of the lodge journeyed by auto to Canton for the purpose of conferring the initiation at the meeting of Lima Lodge held at the Elks Home.

After the business of the meeting was over the visiting brothers were entertained by the local members with a luncheon, during which short talks upon the work of the Order were indulged in.

GIHON LODGE, ZANESVILLE, OHIO.

Ten orphan children of Europe will be adopted by Gihon Lodge at a cost of $100 for each child. This amount will keep a child for one year and this lodge, which is always in the fore when there is an opportunity to relieve suffering, is pledging the support for one year.

The money is being collected from the members in Zanesville and Cambridge for the keeping of these orphans. The members who have so far been solicited have been very liberal in their donations.

The committee to look after the Cambridge members, who are about 40 per cent of the entire membership, is composed of Arthur Blith, Mark Greenwald and M. Hafer. The Zanesville committee members are Sam Goldstein, Sam Zwelling and Louis L. Weber.

Gihon Lodge has about 60 members, all of whom are always willing and anxious to give where they can help and their plan is to raise this $1,000 just among the members.

It is hoped by those in charge to have the $1,000 raised by Sunday and send it off at once. As quickly as possible, the lodge will receive photographs of the orphans they are supporting, together with a description of each one, as to age residence and other facts which will be interesting.

MANSFIELD LODGE, MANSFIELD, OHIO.

On Sunday, April 10, Lou M. Frank, member General Committee, D. G. L., No. 2, visited Mansfield. In the morning he accompanied Brother Mannie Weil, Vice President of Mansfield Lodge, to the Ohio State Reformatory, which is located in Mansfield. Brother Weil conducted religious services for the Jewish inmates. Either Brother Weil or Brother Jerome Freundlich visit the reformatory every Sunday, and hold religious services and have some one address the boys.

In the afternoon Brother Frank addressed a well attended meeting of Mansfield Lodge on "The Progress of the Order".

At this meeting Mansfield Lodge went on record by adopting a war orphan and sent $25 to the Leo N. Levi Hospital.

How many lodges with a membership of 60 can equal this record?

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT HAVERHILL, MASS.

On Monday, April 18, Haverhill Lodge, B'nai B'rith, which was organized by A. Benj. Werby, President of Amos Lodge, of Boston, was instituted in the Academy of Music Building, in Haverhill, by the Hon. Henry Lasker, of Springfield, Mass., President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1.

Thirty-three members of Haverhill Lodge were initiated into the Order by the Worcester degree team, headed by Brother Joseph Talamo.

The officers were installed by President Lasker, assisted by President A. Benj. Werby, of Amos Lodge, President Alfred G. Eisenberg, of Worcester Lodge, and President R. S. Pouzzner, of Lowell Lodge.

Rabbi Harry Halpern of the Community Synagogue, of Brooklyn, N. Y., delivered an address on the need of the B'nai B'rith in the revival of Jewry.

DENVER LODGE, DENVER, COLO.

At the meeting of Denver Lodge, No. 171, held on Sunday, March 13, Brother Harry H Fruness delivered an address on "Judaism—Living or Decadent".

Brother Fruness treated this vital subject in an interesting manner.

In conformity with the slogan adopted by the District Grand Lodge Membership Committee for a membership campaign, Denver Lodge is conducting one on the basis, "Every member get a new member".

The degree team of Denver Lodge paid an official visit to Trinidad Lodge, of Trinidad, Colo., on March 20 and assisted in the initiation of a class of candidates.

At the meeting of the lodge held on Wednesday, April 6, in honor of the forty-ninth anniversary of the institution of the lodge, Rabbi Harry H. Mayer, of Kansas City, member of the General Committee of District Grand Lodge, No. 2 addressed the lodge on the subject, "How Much Do you Care"?

The evening program included entertainments and smokes. The initiation of a class of one hundred candidates was the main feature of the evening.

NEW YORK-ISAIAH LODGE, NEW YORK.

At the regular March meeting of New York-Isaiah Lodge, No. 1, an interesting musical program was presented as follows: Trio (Miss Alia Meyer, pianist, Mr. Joseph Meyer, cellist, Mr. Sig. Lippstadt, violinist), (a) "Sonatine", Briner, (b) "Les Rameaux", J. Faure; tenor solo, Max Schnitzer, accompanist, Mr. Libergatt; baritone solo, S. T. Palay, accompanist, Mr. Libergatt; address, "Theodore Roosevelt, His Ideals and their Application to Present-Day Problems", Hon. George Henry Payne, Tax Commissioner of New York City and Editor of "The Forum"; violin solo, Mr. Sig. Lippstadt, (a) "Thais", Massinet, (b) "Traumerei", Schumann; tenor solo, Mr. C. Schnitzer, (a) "Gypsy Love", Lambert, (b) "Aria from La Boheme"; trio, (a) "Minuet", Beethoven, (b) "Melody at Twilight".

Mr. Payne's address was especially instructive, and it is hoped that he will visit us soon again.

The formal part of the program was followed by dancing, and all present reported a very enjoyable evening.

The lodge has undertaken a thorough revision of its by-laws, and the final reading took place at the meeting in April.

The organization of a Ladies' Auxiliary is now actively under way and will be consummated within a short time.—[S. B. Eltinge.

GRAND PRAIRIE LODGE, CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

Brothers Otto G. Felton and Henry M. Seligman, of Chicago, as representatives of the District Grand Lodge, paid an official visit to Grand Prairie Lodge, No. 281, of Champaign, Ill., on Sunday, April 17. A committee headed by Brother I. Gould met the visitors upon their arrival and escorted them to the hotel where they were entertained at a dinner party.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock a meeting of the lodge was held at the temple which meeting was attended by every member of the lodge excepting three and at which meeting Brothers Felton and Seligman initiated a class of eleven candidates, all fine, splendid looking young men attending the University of Illinois.

After the initiation, the Grand Lodge officers were called upon to address the lodge. Among others who spoke were Professors Zeitlin and Litman of the University faculty who are members of the lodge.

After the meeting, all adjourned to the vestry rooms where an excellent supper had been prepared and was served by the ladies of the sisterhood. The reception extended to the visiting Grand Lodge officers was cordial and hearty, and their efforts appeared to make an impression and met the appreciation of the lodge.

The membership of the lodge is of a high quality and the addition of the new members will surely prove a gain to the lodge and the Order.

FRATERNITY LODGE, NEW LONDON, CONN.

An entertainment in observance of the Feast of Purim was given by the children of the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Fraternity Lodge, of New London, Conn., on March 26.

The program was as follows: Recitation, Eleanor Morris; dance, Ruth Fern; recitation, Selma Hendel; cane dance, Master Merrill Dreyfus; recitation, Miss Ruth Morris; song, Master Herbert Fern; Hawaiian dance, Mary Louise and William Connor; Purim story, Ruth Muscovitz; descriptive song, Harold Fern.

At the conclusion of the program ice cream and cake was served.

On March 30, 1921, an enjoyable masquerade social was given by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Fraternity Lodge. There were Pierrot and Pierrettes galore, newsboys, nurses, Dutch girls, college boys, dudes, witches, harem girls, Uncle Sam, Martha Washington and other original and unique costumes in great variety. The Syncopated Four, in Pierrettes' costumes, furnished snappy music. Refreshments were served.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE, SALEM, MASS.

On Sunday, April 17, 1921, Brother A. Benj. Werby, organizer of Salem Lodge and President of Amos Lodge, of Boston, the largest Jewish body in New England as well as the largest lodge in District Grand Lodge, No. 1, instituted the Salem Lodge, No. 894, as the representative of the Grand Lodge. New members to the number of twenty-nine were initiated into the Order by the Springfield degree team in charge of Brother Fred. Rabinovitz.

The following officers were elected to serve for the balance of the year: Dr. Max Lesses, President; Dr. Chas. Aronson, Vice President; Harry P. Goldstein, Esq., of 125 Washington Street, Secretary; Robert M. Heller, Treasurer; David Frye, Nathan Shribman, and Max Korn, Trustees; E. A. Hershenson, Monitor; Harry A. Kimball, Assistant Monitor; Dr. Nathan Levin, Warden; and Harry Goodman, Guardian.

These officers were installed by Archibald M. Hillman, of Worcester, the second Vice President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, assisted by Brothers A. K. Sheldon, and Leo J. Lyons, of Amos Lodge, Boston, and Brothers Fred. Rabinovitz and Silbert, of Springfield.

A. Benj. Werby, the organizer, then told of the griat revival in the B'nai B'rith as determined by the growth in membership throughout the country, as well as the formation of the great number of new lodges. Leo J. Lyons delivered a talk on the essentials of harmony, and short remarks were made by Joseph Burrows, A. K. Sheldon, Archibald Hillman and Fred Rabinovitz.

ACTIVITIES OF MINNEAPOLIS LODGE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Minneapolis Lodge has undertaken three special activities in addition to the general work of the Order:

Hospital Happiness.

At United States Service Hospital, No. 68, where World War veterans are rehabilitated, at the Minneapolis General Hospital and the University Hospital, the shut-ins are entertained by Minneapolis Lodge. Under the chairmanship of Albert Rubin, entertainments consisting of musical numbers, dramatic readings, motion pictures and delight are given three nights a week.

Open Forum.

To spread knowledge and enlightenment on Jews and Judaism and the motives and methods of our enemies, among non-Jewish neighbors, Dr. S. N. Deinard, chairman of the Open Forum Committee purposes a creditable program. The plan embraces the rental of a central location and the engaging of the best speaking talent available from every source to conduct discussions.

The importance of an intelligently directed series of meetings limited only by patriotism and clear-minded expression surely commends itself to all.

Summer Camp.

During the summer, the Camp Committee, of which David Phillips is chairman, plans to give 12- to 16-year-old youngsters, in units of 40, outings of two weeks' duration at a neighboring lake. All need the air, sunshine, moral benefits and normalizing influence of camp life, under the competent director and assistants who will be engaged.

To supply the necessary funds for the three activities enumerated above, the lodge has resolved to assess its members the uniform amount annually.

GULF LODGE, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Gulf Lodge, No. 221, of New Orleans, one of the wide awake lodges of the Order in the South, gave a Seder for the members, and asked each one to bring his wife or some other member of the family with him. The services were read by Rabbis Heller and Silber and Brothers Osterman, Steeg and Goldman.

A regular Pesach supper was served at the time provided in the services. The tables were beautifully decorated.

The entire proceedings were pronounced a splendid success and it is hoped that it will stimulate some of the members to again introduce these beautiful services in their own family circles.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

WORCESTER, MASS.

One of the most eloquent addresses ever delivered before the Worcester B'nai B'rith lodge was given on April 27 at an open meeting in Castle Hall, when Rabbi Harry Halperin of New York, spoke on matters that vitally affect the Jewish nation at the present time and the manner in which the members of the B'nai B'rith in common with Jews all over the world must prepare and have to a certain extent prepared themselves to face these problems. Rabbi Halperin is said to be the youngest rabbi in America and is connected with the Jewish Communal Center in New York, one of the largest institutions of its kind in America.

He did not hesitate in the course of his address to speak freely and as a result his speech met with general approval by the 200 present and was the subject of much favorable comment.

The speaker sailed into Henry Ford in a vigorous manner and launched a bitter attack against the anti-Semitic campaign that the "automobile wizard" is now conducting against the World Jewry. "When the enemy comes against us", said Rabbi Halperin, "we must prepare to meet them in two ways. First, we must strengthen our forces to strike down the enemy from the outside and secondly we must strengthen our garrison from within.

"The question now comes up: Have we the soldiers inside the wall? When there is a chill of persecution running down our spine we cannot strengthen ourselves by stepping outside. We must strengthen ourselves from within and thus be prepared to fight any movement against us".

Rabbi Halperin then related the story of Passover and the relation between unleavened bread, Pascal lamb, and bitter herbs, as set forth in the Hagadah, and the cardinal principles of the B'nai B'rith, namely benevolence, brotherly love and harmony. On this point he asserted that benevolence was brought about by the feeling of bitterness on the part of some one else.

Continuing, the speaker said, "The Jews have a habit, that every Jew wants to be a master. Of course, we need leaders, but everybody cannot be a general; we need some privates".

"There are two obstacles standing in the way of unity: First, the conflict between the young and old, each striving to outdo the other; and secondly the desire of all to be generals, but none of us willing to be privates".

Rabbi Halperin brought his address to a brilliant climax and urged the B'nai B'rith to continue on with their good work. He was tendered a long ovation, and a rising vote of thanks was accorded him.

Prior to his address the Riversman sisters, Ethel and Baby, juvenile performers, gave several of their original bits. Henry Berman rendered a piano solo and Mrs. Rae Asher gave a violin solo.

Alfred G. Isenberg presided at the meeting.

BAY CITY LODGE, BAY CITY, MICH.

Well, Brother "Ben B'riths", No. 178 is just as full of pep as ever, our big event being a banquet on March 24 which gives us sufficient reason to feel assured that B'nai B'rith stock has received quite a boost amongst the well-known Gentile personages of our city of whom several were present.

Dr. Deutsch, of Cincinnati, was the principal speaker. Mere words can hardly portray the impression created by the venerable and learned doctor. Our heartfelt appreciation can best be fittingly expressed in the statement made by the doctor in the course of his address in which he declared: "There is a certain young lady sitting nearby staring into my eyes in a manner that should make me blush —and I love her in spite of my grey beard". Brothers Louis Harrison and Joe Hirshfield, chairmen of the Intellectual and Entertainment Committees, may justly feel proud of their success, also Brother Ed. Lichtig, chairman of the evening.

On April 10, Bay City Degree Team was favored with the honor of putting on the initiatory ceremonies for a good sized class for Saginaw Lodge. A gala day was spent in which Saginaw, Flint and Bay City Lodges frolicked to their heart's content in eating, dancing and oratory. Our hats are off to Saginaw Lodge; let's have more of them.—[A. A. Immerman.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT GREENSBURG, PA.—NEW LODGE IN WESTMORELAND COUNTY.

A large enthusiastic audience of representative citizens of Westmoreland County witnessed the installation ceremonies of Westmoreland Lodge, I. O. B. B., at Odd Fellows' Hall, Greensburg, Pa., Sunday afternoon, April 10. Mr. Marcus Feuchtwanger, Past President of District No. 3, presided at the installation ceremonies and directed the initiation of the charter members, assisted by Edward Hemple, Past Secretary of District No. 3, I. W. Jacobs, Vice President of the newly-formed Pittsburgh Lodge, No. 44, A. L. Wolk, Secretary of Pittsburgh Lodge, No. 44, and Brothers Benjamin Lencher, A. L. Martin and Alfred Nathan. One of the features of the meeting was the attendance of the Greensburg Section of the Council of Jewish Women, led by their President, Mrs. Joseph Ziskind. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Mr. Harry Friedlander; Vice President, Mr. Charles Pross; Financial Secretary, Mr. Joseph Ziskind; Secretary, Simon Davis; Treasurer, Mr. Ben Rattner; Trustees, J. Berkowitz; Bernard Bigg and Samuel Taubman; Guardian, Morris Young; Warden, Benjamin Harris.

A bright future for the new lodge, which will embrace the cities of Greensburg, Irwin, Jeannette and Latrobe, was predicted by Past President Feuchtwanger and by Messrs. Hemple, Jacobs, Wold, Lencher, Martin and Nathan, who addressed the new organization. Appreciation was extended by the newly organized order to Mr. Edward Hemple, through whose efforts Westmoreland Lodge was organized.

JOSHUA LODGE, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A campaign for membership has been arranged by Joshua Lodge, No. 23, with a view to securing an increase for 1,000 members. Two camps have been formed within the lodge, one led by Mr. A. Rovine and the other by Jos. Herbach, both of whom are confident that they will succeed in getting the greatest number of new applicants.

A Campaign Committee of 33 was appointed, with Mr. S. B. Lush as chairman.

A special meeting of the lodge was held on April 20 for the purpose of presenting names of applicants for membership.

A luncheon for the Campaign Committee was held at the Hotel Vendig for the purpose of considering arrangements for the final wind-up of the campaign.

A successful dinner and dance was given by Joshua Lodge at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on April 10, 1921.

A large attendance made this the most enjoyable affair held in a long time.

Mr. Joseph Herbach, Secretary of the district, and David Bortin, President of the district, spoke of the work of the Joshua Lodge and the district, and great enthusiasm was created for the drive now in progress for a thousand new paid-up applicants.

At the last meeting of the Joshua Lodge a large number of applications were presented to the lodge for their action. The report of the committee was received with rejoicing and all the members present promised to renew their energies in behalf of the drive.

OMAHA LODGE, OMAHA, NEB.

A number of soldiers of the Jewish faith from Fort Crook and Fort Omaha were the Purim guests of Omaha Lodge, No. 354, on the evening of March 24. After being given a big spread by Harry Lapidus and Superintendent Schaefer of the Jewish Welfare Federation, the boys were taken to the Lyric Building where a special Purim program had been arranged.

Rabbi Frederick Cohn and Rabbi Morris Taxon made interesting addresses, explaining the spirit of Purim. They emphasized the fact that at the present time there are "Hamens" also, and it is up to the Jews to stand for their rights.

Ralph Holzman, and William Grodinsky, Vice-President of the lodge, presided at the meeting.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Omaha Lodge, No. 354, at its meeting held on April 14 appointed a committee to arrange a private dancing party to be given during May.

CINCINNATI LODGE, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Cincinnati Lodge, No. 4, B'nai B'rith, gave its first charity ball on Wednesday evening, April 6, in the grand ball room of the Hotel Sinton. The affair proved to be a success, both from a social and financial standpoint.

Philip L. Hershman, President of the lodge, was in personal charge of the ball, and had as his aides, David Rosenbaum, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and its members, Mrs. Leonard H. Freiberg, chairman of the Women's Reception Committee, and its members, and Mrs. Jacob H. Kaplan, chairman of the Refreshments Committee, and its members.

Five hundred couples attended the ball, which was declared to have been the greatest Jewish social affair given in the city in years.

At the first meeting of the lodge in April, on Monday, April 11, plans were made to put into effect, in cooperation with other national organizations, the Americanization plans of the government. Attention was called by speakers to the eagerness with which the Jewish immigrant seeks citizenship in the land of his adoption.

Honorable Alfred M. Cohen was appointed chairman of the committee to put into effect the Americanization programme of the lodge.

President Hershman announced that at the next meeting a large class would be initiated, which would bring the membership of the lodge to pass the twelve hundred mark, a new record in the history of the organization.—[Chauncey D. Pichel.

BARNETT LODGE, FORREST CITY, ARK.

Very enthusiastic and well attended meetings were held recently in Marianna, Brinkley, Cotton Plant, Hughes and Forrest City. Brother Gilbert M. Schloss of Memphis Lodge, No. 35, delivered earnest appeals in Brinkley, Marianna, and Forrest City, for funds for the Anti-Defamation League to which every member present responded with an offering. In Cotton Plant, Rabbi Jerome Marks of Helena, Ark., explained, in a masterly manner, the great good being accomplished by the Anti-Defamation League and told of the necessity of every I. O. B. B. member contributing financial support; at the close of his remarks pledges were made by all members present.

President Frank Swartz and Secretary L. Barnett were elected delegates to the District Grand Lodge convention to be held in Dallas, Texas, May 1.

Barnett Lodge is making elaborate preparation for the celebration of B'nai B'rith Day to be held in Forrest City.

Barnett Lodge, though located in a town of ten Jewish families, reports a membership of fifty-three. Formerly there were seventy-six members, but on last July twenty-three members were transferred from this lodge to aid in the formation of a new lodge in Wynne, Ark.

Barnett Lodge holds meetings alternately in the adjoining towns regularly throughout the year.

PITTSBURGH LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Pittsburgh Lodge, No. 44, had a most enthusiastic and spirited meeting ever held in B'nai B'rith circles on April 3, at which time the lodge room was crowded to capacity.

Old and young were present, filled with the desire to give the new consolidated lodge an auspicious banquet. Brother A. Goldbloom, President of Sar Sholem Lodge, presided.

Election of officers for the new consolidated lodge was then held and it resulted in the unanimous choice of Brother L. S. Levin as President of Pittsburgh Lodge.

Immediately following the election, the officers were installed by Brother Marcus Feuchtwanger of New Castle, Pa., Past President of the District Grand Lodge.

A committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for a public meeting, which was held on April 17 at the Moose Temple. An elaborate and interesting program was arranged for that meeting.

The future of the B'nai B'rith in Pittsburgh seems bright and rosy. The newly elected officers seem to be inspired to make Pittsburgh Lodge the largest and most active lodge in District No. 3.

SAGINAW, MICH.

The members of the B'nai B'rith of Flint and Bay City were guests of Saginaw Lodge, No. 636, at a banquet, initiation and dance held on Sunday afternoon and evening, April 10, 1921, at the Lincoln club. More than 400 were in attendance, including a delegation of 80 from Flint and 90 from Bay City, who came in special cars.

Saginaw Lodge had made elaborate arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors and both the initiatory work of the lodge and the entertainment which followed were greatly enjoyed by the local members and the visitors.

The initiation was held during the afternoon. The Bay City degree team put on the initiation of the candidates, while the Flint team put on the Oriental Degree. Addresses were given by Ben Wiener, President of the Flint lodge, Thomas Perlman, President of the Bay City lodge, and O. G. Felton of Chicago, Director of Propaganda of the District. The women were entertained during the afternoon at the home of Mrs. Adolph Seitner, under the auspices of the Saginaw Temple Aid Society, with Miss Lilly Lenhoff in charge.

The banquet took place at 5:30 o'clock and was followed by entertainment in charge of Alex Levinsohn, which included a song by Jay Lenick, an address by Rabbi Carl Herman of Cincinnati, a song by Mrs. Harry Weingarden Flint, and addresses by Rabbi Lupo, Flint, Ed Lichtig, Bay City, and O. G. Felton.

PROGRESSIVE LODGE, NEW YORK.

A well-attended meeting of Progressive Lodge, No. 841, was held at the B'nai B'rith headquarters on April 12, 1921.

The Progressive Ladies' Auxiliary is well on its way to success and Progressive Lodge is rightfully proud of the fine galaxy of young ladies composing the auxiliary.

The installation of the officers of the auxiliary will be a big affair and will be held at the B'nai B'rith headquarters on April 26. The program will consist of entertainments, dancing and refreshments.

Soldiers Entertained.

A great deal of thanks is due the Soldiers' Entertainment Committee for the excellent program provided for the wounded soldiers of the Polyclinic and Fox Hills Hospitals on Sunday, March 20. The dance at the lodge was attended to overflowing; the music, tendered gratis by Murray Sturman, was snappy, and the entertainment delightful. Seventy-two wounded veterans of the World War partook of the tasty meal at the Star T & Z Restaurant in the evening, and then there was some more dancing and fun. Progressive Lodge also wishes to thank Mrs. Ezra Wollman, of the Ladies' Auxiliary, for her kind interest and assistance.

NEW CASTLE LODGE, NEW CASTLE, PA.

One of the most successful meetings of New Castle Lodge, No. 609, was held on Sunday evening, March 27. The lodge room was taxed to capacity in honor of the official visit of the President of the district, Mr. David Bortin, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Morris Shaffner, of Erie, First Vice President of the District.

A large delegation of visiting brothers from Youngstown Lodge attended. Several visitors were also present from Butler Lodge. Excellent addresses were delivered by the visiting Grand Lodge officers.

At the conclusion of the evening, a musical program was rendered. A buffet luncheon was served.

CRITERION LODGE, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Criterion Lodge has increased its membership considerably since its institution. A number of social meetings have lately aided in building up this lodge.

The B'nai B'rith Building owned by Criterion Lodge has been visited by many members of the Order. The lodge has appointed a committee to communicate with various Jewish organizations notifying them to use the building at all times for Jewish communal purposes free of any charge.

Criterion Lodge gave a dance and entertainment on Wednesday evening, May 18 at the Hotel Bellevue-Stratford.

CURRENT EVENTS.

(Continued from page 6.)

The Alliance Israelite publishes a cable, received from Adrianople, that a pogrom took place there, owing to a blood accusation and the Associated Press gave us another report of a pogrom started by the Greek population in Constantinople, April 26. We will remember that the Greek war of independence began in 1821, with an attack on the Jews of Janina and that the occupation of Salonica in 1912 was also followed by a pogrom of smaller dimensions. There is an unfortunate tradition among the Greek people, which has stained Jewish history even from the time of the Second Commonwealth.

Obituary.

During the last month two prominent Jewish politicians passed away: Ernesto Nathan, ex-mayor of Rome, on April 9, and the French publicist and politician, Joseph Reinach, April 18. Both were only loosely connected with Judaism. Nathan, a man of evidently mediocre attainments, was elected mayor of Rome in 1907 to spite the pope because he was an active Freemason and Reinach, while connected with some Jewish institutions, especially with the Alliance Israelite, was also a representative of Heine's view that Judaism is not a religion but a misfortune. As champion of Dreyfus he may claim considerable merit but, in the face of the hostility against the Jews in France he maintained the old idea that the Jews are no race and that the Jewish question will be solved by giving them equal rights and therefore Zionism is a crime. His son, Adolph, married the daughter of Alfred Dreyfus. They were married on a Sabbath and of course without any religious ceremony. Both Reinach and Nathan were of German descent, both families coming from Frankfort, from which Nathan's father emigrated to London and Reinach's father to Paris.

The world of science and literature lost Ernest Fraenkel, professor of gynecology at the university of Breslau, and also active in the municipal life of the city; and Joseph Popper, a most ingenious philosopher and inventor, who died at very advanced age in Vienna. Popper surprised those who knew him by the bequest of his library to the university of Jerusalem. He had never shown any active interest in Jewish affairs. An almost opposite specimen is Bernhard Muenz, the editor of a prominent Vienna daily, who died in that city. He was a native of Galicia, the grandson of the celebrated Talmudic author and strong opponent of reform, Eleazar Loew, known as Shemen Rokeach, and a brother of the recently deceased Lazar Muenz, retired rabbi of Kempen, a specimen of the progress of secularization in Jewish spiritual life. To some extent this may be said also of Saul Horowitz, a descendant of Hungarian rabbis and as a boy already a prodigy in Talmudic learning, who afterwards became an authority on mediaeval Jewish philosophy. He died in Breslau, where he held the chair of philosophy of religion at the rabbinical seminary for nearly twenty-five years. So this institution has lost in the course of a few months two prominent members of its staff, Professors Brann and Horowitz.

MINUTES OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

(Continued from page 4.)

widow of a member of the Order on rehabilitation lines. The Secretary reported that District Grand Lodge, No. 8, was advised that widows of members of the Order, sufferers as a result of the war, are eligible to participate in the benefits of the rehabilitation fund. Action was approved.

From Ezekiel Lodge, Newark, N. J., inquiring as to action taken by the Executive Committee of the Order with reference to the immigration bill. The Secretary presented reply forwarded to Ezekiel Lodge and the same was approved.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 9, Roumania, calling attention to the large number of refugees from the Ukraine and Soviet Russia temporarily sojourning within the territorial limits of Roumania contemplating emigration to the United States of America and suggesting that the Executive Committee of the Order intercede with the Department of State with a view of securing an amelioration of conditions connected with the vise by the [illegible] Consul of passports of such [illegible]. The Secretary reported that the [illegible] matter was referred to Brother [illegible] and that the matter was submitted to the Department of State receiving assurance that whatever possible the Department will do to relieve the situation in Roumania. The communication was ordered filed.

From Augustin-Keller Lodge, No. 648, of Zürich, Switzerland, calling attention to the beneficent work carried on for the past number of years by the B'nai B'rith lodges of Switzerland in the matter of caring for undernourished Jewish children from other countries and enclosing an appeal with the request that the same be published in the columns of the B'nai B'rith News. The Secretary was directed to refer the appeal to the editorial staff of the B'nai B'rith News with the request that the same be published.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 5, submitting report as to result of election held at the recent convention of the District Grand Lodge and advising that Brother Clarence M. Lehman, of Baltimore, has been elected President of the district.

From a committee representing the Aid Society of Galil, Palestine, with reference to the distribution of relief funds. Communication was ordered referred to the Joint Distribution Committee.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, calling attention to the fact that the Jewish institutions of Germany are not considered in the distribution of milk cows sent from America for the use of charitable and philanthropic institutions. Communication was ordered referred to the President of the Order.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, Germany, calling attention to the fact that one Dr. Dinter, a noted anti-Semite of Germany, contemplates making a lecture tour in the United States and suggesting that steps be taken in the matter of counteracting any efforts on his part to arouse anti-Semitic feeling in this country. Communication was ordered referred to the Anti-Defamation League.

From the Council of Jewish Women transmitting copy of letter from Ocna, Roumania, requesting assistance to re-establish the primary school in that community.

The Secretary presented copy of reply which was read and approved.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 10, acknowledging receipt of an appropriation of $5,000 from the Rehabilitation Fund to enable the members of the Order in Czecho-Slovakia to avail themselves of the privilege extended by the Czecho-Slovakian Government to holders of war bonds.

From Dr. S. Freund on behalf of Zion Lodge, of Hanover, calling attention to the needs of the orphan home for boys and the home for girls located in Hanover. Communication was ordered referred to the Joint Distribution Committee.

From the B'nai B'rith lodges of Vienna calling attention to the fact that the Talmud Thora maintains the school for poor Jewish children, mostly war orphans, and supplies such children with food and wearing apparel and that for the purpose of securing contributions from the members and lodges of the Order in America, calendars have been forwarded for distribution by the District Grand Lodges. It was resolved that the distribution of the appeal in the form of Jewish calendars be left to the discretion of the District Grand Lodges.

From Leipzig Lodge, of Leipzig, calling attention to the needs of the home for children established and maintained by the lodge and requesting that the B'nai B'rith of America supply the institution with much needed wearing apparel for the boys and girls' wards of the institution. Moved by Brother Archibald A. Marx that the sum of $250 be appropriated out of the Emergency Relief Fund. Motion carried.

From the Jewish Orphan Home of Prague, appealing for contributions to enable the institution to be maintained. Moved by Brother David Bortin that the sum of $250 be appropriated out of the Emergency Relief Fund. Motion carried.

From the Ladies' Society of Montifiore Lodge, of Berlin, auxiliary to the B'nai B'rith lodges of that city, calling attention to the needs of the philanthropic institutions maintained by the organization. Communication was ordered referred to the President of the Order for investigation.

From Mizpah Lodge, No. 466, of Philippopoli, Bulgaria, requesting the cooperation of the Executive Committee of the Order in the detention case of one Samuel Isaac Levy, detained at Ellis Island. Referred to Brother Simon Wolf.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 8, calling attention to the pamphlet issued by Dr. Herman L. Strack, Professor of Theology in the University of Berlin, combatting the anti-Semitic charges prevalent in Germany. Communication was ordered referred to the Anti-Defamation League.

From the American Jewish Committee, transmitting annual report for the year 1920. Ordered filed.

From Brother Dr. Edmund Kohn, of Vienna, with reference to the establishment of B'nai B'rith lodges in Holland. Communication was ordered referred to the President of the Order for such action as he may deem proper.

From the Near-East Relief, Chicago, enclosing a report of the activities of the organization. Communication was ordered filed.

From Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of New York, suggesting the advisability of publishing in pamphlet form the articles by Dr. Max L. Margolis appearing in the B'nai B'rith News under the title "The Great Misunderstanding". Communication was ordered referred to the Editorial Staff of the B'nai B'rith News.

From the U. S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Naturalization, submitting data and suggestions concerning the cooperation of the Order with the naturalization service of the United States Department of Labor. Communication and enclosures were ordered referred to the Director of Americanization, Brother Sidney G. Kusworm.

From the Talmud Thora of Jerusalem, Palestine, requesting assistance for the maintenance of the Jewish schools in that city. Communication was ordered referred to the Joint Distribution Committee.

From Amicitia Lodge, of Poznan, Czecho-Slovakia, calling attention to the needs of the Jewish hospital in that city maintained to take care of poor sick Jews, and appealing for financial contribution towards the maintenance of the institution. Communication was ordered referred to the Joint Distribution Committee.

From District Grand Lodge, No. 3, with reference to the provisions of the law relating to the payment of Constitution Grand Lodge dues. Communication was ordered referred to the members of the Executive Committee of the Order of District No. 3.

The following resolution was thereupon presented:

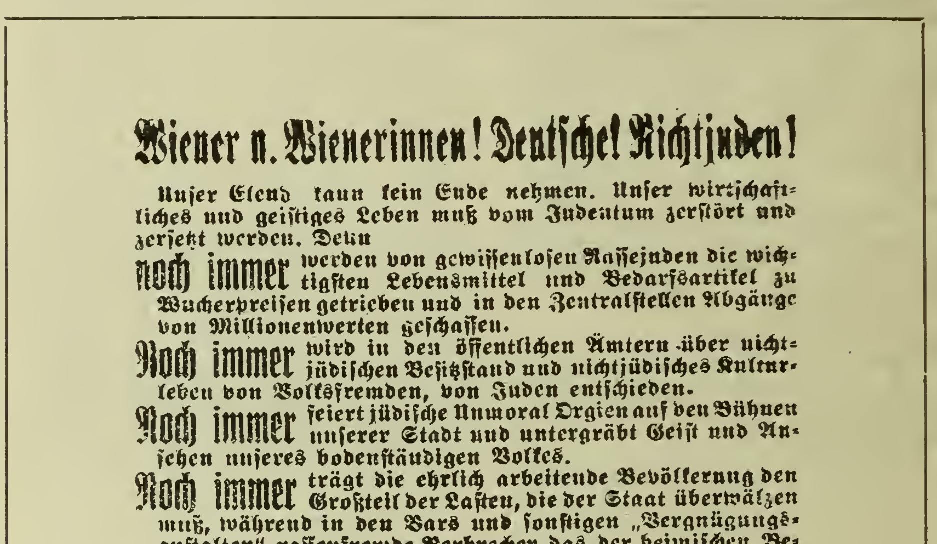
"Resolved, That no allowance shall hereafter be made for traveling expense to any member of the Executive Committee who does not remain in attendance from the opening until the close of the session".

Moved by Brother Archibald A. Marx that the foregoing resolution be adopted. Motion carried unanimously.

Moved by Brother Henry Lasker that the thanks of the Executive Committee be expressed to Brother Julius I. Peyser for his courtesies and attentions paid to the members of the Executive Committee during the session. Motion was adopted by a rising vote.

There being no further business before the Committee, the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the President.

A. B. SEELENFREUND,
Secretary.



Wiener u. Wienerinnen! Deutſche! Nichtjuden!

Unſer Elend kann kein Ende nehmen. Unſer wirtſchaftliches und geiſtiges Leben muß vom Judentum zerſtört und zerſetzt werden. Denn Noch immer werden von gewiſſenloſen Raſſejuden die wichtigſten Lebensmittel und Bedarfsartikel zu Wucherpreiſen getrieben und in den Zentralſtellen Abgänge von Millionenwerten geſchaffen.

Noch immer wird in den öffentlichen Ämtern über nichtjüdiſchen Beſitzſtand und nichtjüdiſches Kulturleben von Volksfremden, von Juden entſchieden.

Noch immer feiert jüdiſche Unmoral Orgien auf den Bühnen unſerer Stadt und untergräbt Geiſt und Anſehen unſeres bodenſtändigen Volkes.

Noch immer trägt die ehrlich arbeitende Bevölkerung den Großteil der Laſten, die der Staat überwälzen muß, während in den Bars und ſonſtigen „Vergnügungsanſtalten“ raſſenfremde Verbrecher das der heimiſchen Bevölkerung geraubte Blutgeld verpraſſen.

Das ſoll endlich ein Ende nehmen! Lange genug haben wir gewartet und gewarnt! Lange genug haben wir uns in raſtloſer Arbeit um den Wiederaufbau unſerer Heimat bemüht! Doch vom Schweiße unſerer Arbeit haben jene jüdiſchen Volksſchänder gelebt. Nun iſt unſere Geduld zu Ende! Einmütiger und entſchloſſener denn je ſoll es durch das deutſche ariſche Wien ſchallen:

Hinweg mit den Schiebern aus den Kaffeehäuſern und der Börſe, mit den unverantwortlichen Millionenabgängen in den von Juden und in deren Geiſt geleiteten Zentralſtellen.

Hinweg mit den Juden aus den öffentlichen Ämtern, die ſtets an den wichtigſten Stellen nichtjüdiſche Kultur zu vernichten ſich beſtreben.

Hinweg mit der jüdiſchen Lüſternheit von unſeren Bühnen!

Hinweg endlich mit der Rückſichtnahme auf die jüdiſchen Praſſer, die es ſtets verſtehen, ſich der öffentlichen Abgabepflicht geſchickt zu entziehen.

Wiener Nichtjuden! Dieſer unſer Ruf darf nicht wieder ungehört verhallen! Schließt euch alle zuſammen! Kein deutſcher Arier bleibt zuhauſe! Jeder, der Volk und Heimat liebt, erſcheint bei der Volkskundgebung!

Sonntag, den 13. März 1921, 5 Uhr nachmittags, in der Volkshalle des Neuen Rathauſes

Alle nichtjüdiſchen Vereine Wiens nehmen an dieſer Kundgebung geſchloſſen teil. Die Bezirksſammelplätze der einzelnen Vereine für den gemeinſamen Anmarſch werden in der nichtjüdiſchen Tagespreſſe verlautbart.

Deutſchöſterreichiſcher Schutzverein Antiſemitenbund.

WASHINGTON, PA.

Under the auspices of Washington Lodge, No. 876, a lecture was given by Rev. Luchs of the Hebrew Seminary of Cincinnati on Sunday evening, April 17.

This was the second of a series of lectures given under the auspices of the lodge. The first lecture was by Rabbi Levinson of Pittsburgh, on "The International Jew."

JACKSON, MICH.

David Heuman Lodge, No. 807, of Jackson, Mich., gave a Seder to the Jewish prisoners of Michigan State Penitentiary at Jackson, Mich., on Saturday, April 23. Rabbi Steiner conducted the service. A committee consisting of members of the Congregation, the B'nai B'rith and other Jewish organizations gave a Jewish community Seder on Sunday evening, April 24.

96.05
BN

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY
JUN 23 1921

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS
BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII JUNE, 1921 No. 10

The Anti-Jewish Warfare of Henry Ford

By Dr. Max Heller

I YIELD most reluctantly to the request of the states that I express an opinion concerning Mr. Henry Ford's agitation against the Jews. Leaders of Jewish thought are far from agreed as to the proper policy to pursue in the presence of such a strange campaign. While some favor a calm, dignified defense by publishing the facts in clear, simple language, others advise contemptuous silence in view of the patent absurdities of the charges; still others, of course, are clamoring excitedly and beating the air with all sorts of printed shrieks. Here, as elsewhere, the Jew reacts against trying situations just as do other people; he is just as irresolute and divided in counsel as is any other people in the presence of an unexpected emergency; and he has, of course, his liberal portion of self-appointed champions and irrepressible busybodies.

By temperament and conviction, I should be disposed to espouse a policy of giving the lie rope enough to hang itself; truth is bound to triumph in the end; falsehood and slander never fail to convict themselves out of their own mouths; decent and self-respecting people pay no attention to any efforts to poison the public mind against a race or a creed. Who gives any heed whatever to the anti-Catholic screeds, whether in periodical or in book form? And why should we turn around, when a crank bespatters us with fictions that are silly and childish on the very face of them? Can we not trust the good sense and the habits of fair play of the American people to size up this bubble at its utter emptiness?

It is one thing, however, to argue a practical matter theoretically, upon presumptions; it is quite another to examine it in the light of historic experience. These same dignified arguments of those who know themselves clean and scorn to prove themselves innocent have been found of no avail against poisoners of the public mind, from times immemorial. Throughout the long history of Jewish martyrdom it has been just the silliest and the most utterly groundless charges, such as poisoning wells, piercing the host, ritual murder which have proved the most mischievous and the most unsquelchable of them all. In the Dreyfus case, twenty-five years ago, the most fanciful and ridiculous inventions about veiled ladies and mysterious, non-existent portfolios were eagerly swallowed by prejudiced people of the highest rank. It is not only the stupid mob that is credulous and easily swayed; the highly educated and socially cultured enlist themselves as readily for fads and theories of the most grotesque order, especially when those conceits and prejudices are catered to from which the minds of the so-called better class are not any less exempt than those of the rabble.

As a consequence, the German and the Austrian Jews discovered, to their amazement, that the rowdyism of the anti-Semitic beer-hall found a sympathetic echo in professorial chairs occupied by distinguished bigots and illustrious fanatics; the English Jew wakes up to find a Tory paper like the Morning Post and a famous writer like G. K. Chesterton openly espousing the anti-Jewish crusade and the American Jew has the unpleasant surprise of seeing an anti-Semitic hodgepodge from England on the publication list of a reputable house like Putnam's.

It is true enough that innocence always emerges triumphant in the end; but is that reason sufficient for refusing to offer battle to injustice? The road is long; the goal is far away; in the meantime we owe, at least to the open-minded, to those disposed to play fair, some presentation of the undistorted facts as against the shower of abuse that is directed against us. It must be borne in mind, on the one hand, that the Jew does present some unique aspects and that his inner life is unknown territory to the non-Jew; on the other hand, that tales and figures which we Jews know to be absurd and at once despise as worthless, may appear plausible and impressive to the uninformed; especially when they are presented with that cocksureness of the conscienceless liar and that brazen hypocrisy of the pretended lover of his kind, which may easily deceive the unwary.

From the start a confession ought, in fairness, to be made. When a man has read and seen exploded, innumerable times, the same old-wives' tales, over and over again, when one has, for a lifetime, heard those same odious accents of tireless falsehood, of venomous hatred in the languages and styles of so many periods, one's digestion balks at the unpalatable mess and it is almost impossible to command the patience and the appetite for taking it in; one wearies, not only of the nasty spirit of it, but almost more so of the tedious repetition which never, by any chance, offers anything that is in any sense new, that is not simply a rehash of other people's stale dishes. As a consequence, the writer is far from claiming that he has made a study of the "literature" offered by the Dearborn Independent or that he has even so much as waded through all of it; there are dishes of which you cannot mistake the flavor, even without being compelled to clean the plate.

What is the gist of Mr. Ford's objurgations of the American people? He is trying to save the world again; the last time it was from war, by a peace-ship; this time it is from the Jews, by a scandal-sheet; the last time it was the war that was the fearful reality and the peace-ship the ridiculous phantom; this time the process is reversed; the conspiracy-game is the shadow and the noise of the journalistic gun furnishes all the realities. What Mr. Ford claims to have discovered, of course, has been the prattle of many irresponsible mouths and incendiary pens before him. It is the theory of a conquering nation, a nation which, through its elders, boldly conceives and sternly executes an all-embracing plan of world-conquest. As the czars were supposed to be carrying out a mythical testament of Peter the Great which bade them to sweep everything before them on their road to Constantinople in the west, Pekin and Calcutta in the east, so the Jews, according to these fanciful accounts, those east and west, those rich and those poor, capitalist and laborer, are represented as being in a secret, yet official plot to become masters of the world by financial operations, by stirring up war and through social disintegration such as Bolshevism. A wonderful people, indeed, are the Jews, upon this reading of their ambitions and achievements! What is the secret service of any organized nation with offices, taxation money, cabinets and diplomatists, compared with the intrigues of a people which has no government, collects no taxes, does not speak a common tongue, is scattered over the entire earth, has no army or navy, not even a press beyond a few family journals and yet manages, upon preconcerted plans, to dictate the policies and subdue the freedom of all nations?

A crazier, sillier notion has never been conceived; one is ashamed to quote any fact whatever against a speculation as wildly opposed to all that is possible in human nature. The pitiful absurdity of it is that, with all of the Jews' occasional prosperity and individual prestige, he is, beyond all doubts, upon every patent evidence, far and away the most helpless of all the peoples of the earth. He was helpless, before the war, not only in the grasp of gigantic Russia, but just as much in that of puny Roumania; his services to German literature, German music, German science, German industry and commerce could not secure for him, before the war, so much as one lieutenancy in the active line of the German army or navy; he was battling, before ever the inferno of carnage broke loose, with problems of East European oppression and misery which seemed hopeless of solution; he was, until the Balfour Declaration, seeking in vain to recover the land of his forefathers, to be permitted to make that war-wasted wilderness blossom again.

And within his own ranks, one could scarcely conceive of a people that has less of the disposition to submit unquestioningly to authority, more of the individualism of independent view and untrammelled choice than the Jew. If there is anywhere a people to which would be utterly impossible the close-buttoned secretiveness, the iron-clad solidarity, the unity of purpose and aim which a conspiracy for world-conquest would call for then certainly the Jew, with his infinite variety of types and habits, his critical, analytical mentality, his temperamental, impetuous ways would be the last people on earth to guard any such precarious secret, a secret supposedly harbored in some fourteen million bosoms.

Here as elsewhere, presumably, the absurd appeals to the faith of the credulous and the most wildly impossible commends itself to the lovers of romance. Else it would seem pathetic that a people should be accused of an ambition for world-enslavement, whose struggle for the elementary rights of human existence has lasted so many centuries and is still, as yet, so far from won. Right now the Jew is seeking the confirmation of minority rights on the part of some ten or twelve of the newly formed governments of Central and Eastern Europe, rights guaranteed by treaty and yet most difficult to enforce.

As to the experiences of the Jewish people in the world-war, Mr. Hoover has testified that in all his life he had "seen nothing that shocked me more than the poverty and misery of the ghettos in Eastern and Central Europe". And that despite the concerted efforts of their brothers in more prosperous countries, efforts, it must be admitted, which were far from commanding universal support. What a cruel satire it would be to inform the 80,000 Jewish war-refugees in Vienna living a life of the most incredible destitution, that they are plotting to enslave mankind! Difficulties, of course, do not exist for the conspiracy theory. If some Jews lead in the world's finance, on the one hand, and if, on the other hand, a few Jewish leaders are found among the Bolsheviks, then, in Jewry, banker and Bolshevik must be clasping hands to subdue the world in underhand fellowship. If, in Jewish ranks, the sharpest of differences exist between orthodox and reform, between Zionist and anti-Zionist, between capitalist and laborer, all these are on the surface only; even the Jewish renegade and apostate are, to believe the anti-Semite, no more than vanguards and shock-troops in the service of the mysterious invasion.

The question, however, in which perhaps sensible people are most interested is that of Mr. Ford's psychology. After all is said, it remains true that Mr. Ford is one of the great benefactors of humanity, a man who has brought health, pleasure and opportunity to hundreds of thousands of lives. Mr. Ford, too, must be a man of attractive personal qualities; else he could not have enjoyed the friendship of men like Thomas A. Edison and John Burroughs; he must be a man of rare business gifts, else he could not head gigantic interests and devise ever new enterprises. To claim that his peace-ship was an advertising dodge is to wrong him, no business man, not even a Barnum, exposes himself to universal ridicule in order to widen the market for the goods he is selling, the very fact that his peace-ship was a hopeless undertaking and that he permitted himself to be led on upon so slender a basis of prospect is convincing evidence of his gullibility, of his utter lack of judgment in matters beyond his proper sphere of mechanics and salesmanship.

It is a common experience that well-meaning men may be highly gullible and that the commercially shrewd may display extremely poor judgment in matters of a broader scope. Shrewdness and intelligence are not by any means the same thing, even shrewdness and common-sense are far from inseparable. Mr. Ford's brilliant friend, Mr. Edison, has been guilty of some ludicrous notions as to the needlessness of sleep and has given out utterances about immortality which are not creditable to his capacity for careful, balanced thinking.

Mr. Ford is the pitiable victim of a subtle piece of German propaganda, it is clumsy propaganda, readily recognizable as such, bearing every earmark of its geographical origin; but it takes in the almost illiterate automobile magnate, as if it were some new gospel.

In Germany the defeated militarists, Younkers, bureaucrats and other hangers-on of the Hohenzollern menage have been looking for a victim to the red-eyed fury of their defeat; and just like czardom, after the Russo-Japanese war, resorted to the pogroms as lightning-conductors for revolutionary unrest and righteous indignation, so these fanatics of Pan-Germanism, the apostles of Kulture, the props of autocracy by divine grace, are trying to place the blame for the bankruptcy of frightfulness upon some one whom an inrooted prejudice readily fits for the role of scapegoat—the Jew, In Germany the very classes most intimately identified with the whole caste system that culminated in the supremacy of the war spirit, have always hated the Jew as the natural representative of democratic tendencies, and they now fling themselves upon him, as the most unprotected part of the population, with all the frenzy of their anguished disappointment. Since the late seventies of the last century anti-semitism has not spoken in Germany a language as rabidly intemperate, as unblushingly coarse as it does today. Here is a pamphlet from Professor Werner, "A Highway for Truth", in which German mistakes and German defeat are blamed on the Jew; the "German Peoples Publishers" who print this harangue advertise on the covers one pamphlet which seeks to blacken the army record of the German Jews, another with the title "Judas, the World's Enemy", a third entitled "Judah's Debit-book", a fourth, "The German Collapse and Jewdom", and so forth.

Mr. Ford, meaning well, no doubt, has been led on a devious career. His peace-ship was, in all likelihood, an honest, if abortive, effort in the direction of peace. The pacifism of his frantic attempts to withhold his son, Edsel, from performing his duty as a citizen at a critical time was of the wrong sort altogether. He has now become the tool of a sinister propaganda which seeks to sow the seeds of discord, of hatred and contempt, in this land of the great melting-pot. Just to what extent he is succeeding, by dint of vast expenditure, in poisoning the public mind, it is hard to estimate; whether the powers of law and order will ever command the resources by which to estop a multimillionaire from making so pernicious a use of his stupendous wealth, it is not easy to foretell; but that it is impossible to foment prejudice and to stir up strife, to foster suspicion and to spread slander without weakening the union and the vigor of a people, without degrading the tone of public discussion and lowering the morale of general intercourse, can hardly be subject to doubt.

Mr. Ford may, some day, awake to the mischievous role he has been made to play; he will. then, discover, as have others before him, that there are war-dogs of the baser passions whom it is easy to unchain, but far more difficult to call back.

(Republished from the "New Orleans States", New Orleans, La.).

ANNUAL MEETING OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE LEO N. LEVI MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, AT DALLAS, TEXAS, MONDAY, MAY 2, 1921.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital was held at the Columbian Club, at Dallas, Tex., on May 2, 1921. Mr. A. B. Frey, and M. M. Goldman, President and Secretary respectively of D. G. L. No. 7, were present as guests. The Secretary and President read their reports which were accepted and approved. The Board approved the following resolutions, to be introduced at the Convention of the District:

"Inasmuch as Senator Robinson of Arkansas introduced a bill in Congress granting lots 1 & 2, Block 114 to the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital; and

"Inasmuch as these two lots which adjoin the hospital are of no special value to the Government, but are urgently needed by the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital for its future growth; and

"Inasmuch as the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital is maintaining a free clinic which has become a United States Public Health Service Clinic and is thus practically a Government agency and feels, therefore, that its appeal to the Government for cooperation is not without reason.

"Resolved, That D. G. L. No. 7 in convention assembled hereby goes on record in favor of Senator Robinson's bill, and appeals to every delegate to write or wire to his delegation in Congress in behalf of Senator Robinson's bill.

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the District wire Senator Robinson the appreciation of the District of his efforts in behalf of the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital."

The Board decided to increase the Executive Committee from seven to thirteen, the six additional members to be appointed one each by Districts 1-6 of the I. O. B. B. The Executive Committee is to meet at least twice a year, the traveling expenses of the members to be paid by the hospital. Six members will constitute a quorum. The first meeting of the enlarged Executive Committee is to be held in November.

Gus Strauss was appointed by the Board to represent the hospital at the convention of D. G. L. No. 2, Mr. Dan Daniel at No. 6 and Mrs. Yetta R. Schoenfeld at No. 3.

The Board of Trustees placed itself on record unanimously in favor of taking immediate steps toward the erection of a new building for clinical purposes and a nurses' home. A committee of five was appointed to endeavor to raise $100,000 throughout the country for that purpose. The committee consists of Dan Daniel, [illegible] J. Westheimer, Ben Weil, Gus Strauss, J. K. Hexter, with the President and Secretary as ex-officio members.

The present officers and members of the Board were reelected. Mr. Leo [illegible] of Nashville was elected a member of the Board in place of Mr. [illegible], and Mr. M. M. Simon was elected to fill the vacancy that existed.

Annual Convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, I. O. B. B.

The 53d annual convention of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, I. O. B. B., was held in Des Moines, Iowa, on May 30, 31, and June 1, 1921. The meeting was attended by over 90 Past Presidents of the Grand Lodge and accredited delegates and proved to be one of the best conventions the district ever held. From the opening of the convention until its closing sine die, the best spirit and sincere enthusiasm prevailed.

The message of Brother Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer, of Des Moines, as President of the District Grand Lodge, depicted the district in a most flourishing condition with a membership of over 13,000 on the date of the convention. He presented a report of achievements during the past year unequaled by any of his predecessors.

The Grand Lodge pledged its support and cooperation to the Federal Government in its constructive nation-wide program of Americanism and recommended to the lodges that the genuine spirit of America can best be made possible through public school classes in English and citizenship.

Social service work such as caring fo children at summer camps, establishment of Employment Bureaus, juvenile court work and Big Brother movements were approved and the lodges of the district were urged to engage in such work.

The work of the Anti-Defamation League of the Order was commended and the lodges are called upon to support the work of the league to the utmost of their ability and to assist in raising funds for the successful campaign carried on by the league to combat anti-Semitism in America.

The matter of separation of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, from the joint operation of the Jewish Orphan Home of Cleveland, Ohio, with District Grand Lodge, No. 2, was ordered referred to a special committee for consideration and full report to the next convention of the Grand Lodge.

The splendid activities of the philanthropic institutions maintained, aided and supported by the Order, such as the National Jewish Hospital of Denver, Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital, of Hot Springs, Educational League of Cleveland, the Jewish Free Employment Bureau of Chicago, summer camps for boys at Winnipeg, Minneapolis, and Chicago, were commended and the lodges of the district and their members are urged to continue to the full measure of their ability their support towards these worthy causes.

The matter of grouping lodges of the district for the creation of District B'nai B'rith Councils was considered and ordered referred to the General Committee with full authority to act in the premises.

HENRY MONSKY
President of District Grand Lodge No. 6

The care of Jewish war orphans received special attention on the part of the Grand Lodge. Delegates representing their respective lodges voluntarily pledged to take care of 222 orphans for the year and the Grand Lodge itself made an appropriation for the care of 100 additional orphans. Such of the lodges as have not yet indicated the extent of their ability as to the number of orphans they may care for and individual members of the district were urgently requested to give this subject matter their most earnest consideration and advise the Grand Lodge as to the number of orphans they pledge themselves to support, so that the Executive Committee of the Order will be fully advised and enabled to make the necessary arrangements through its special committees abroad to take care of the largest number of orphans possible.

The following appropriations were made:

The Jewish Free Employment Bureau, Chicago	$ 1,500
For the maintenance of the Boys' Camp, Chicago	2,000
For the maintenance of the Boys' Camp, Minneapolis	1,000
For the maintenance of the Boys' Camp, Winnipeg	1,000
For the establishment of a permanent Boys' Camp, Winnipeg	1,000
Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark.	1,000
National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives, Denver	1,000
Educational League, Cleveland	200
Social Service and Americanization Work	3,000
Intellectual Advancement and Membership	3,500
B'nai B'rith Library, University of Illinois	100
B'nai B'rith Library, University of Iowa	100
B'nai B'rith Councils	1,250
Support of Jewish War Orphans	10,000
Charitable Disbursements in Europe	1.000
Care of under-nourished and sick children, Europe	500
Infants' Aid Society, Chicago	100

The result of the election was as follows: President, Henry Monsky, Omaha, Nebr.; First Vice-President, Gustavus Loevinger, St. Paul, Minn.; Second Vice-President, Benjamin Samuels, Chicago, Ill.; Treasurer, Ben Braun, Milwaukee, Wis.; Secretary, A. B. Seelenfreund, Chicago, Ill.; Sergeant-at-Arms, Sol Levitan, Madison, Wis.

General Committee Members: Philip Stein, P. P., Chicago Ill.; Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer, Des Moines, Iowa; A. F. Mecklenburger, Chicago, Ill.; Chas. D. Oreckovsky, Duluth, Minn.; Sam J. Leon, Omaha, Nebr.; Robt. Lappen, Des Moines, Iowa; Otto G. Felton, Chicago, Ill.; Leo Reitman, Milwaukee, Wis.; Edward Lichtig, Bay City, Mich.

District Court of Appeals: Harry H. Krinsky, President, Chicago.

MINISTER DENOUNCES ANTI-SEMITISM.

Origin and persecution of the Jewish race was traced by Dr. William W. Shenks of Grace M. E. Church, principal speaker at the session of the Methodist Episcopal Conference held at Wesley M. E. Church, Minneapolis, Minn., recently.

"The Jewish faith has been necessary to the civilization and welfare of the world," he said. "Although persecuted and driven from their worldly possessions, the Jewish people have attained a high degree of culture and learning through the high caliber of their minds and intellect. The Zion Protocol, on which is based the persecution of the Hebrews, is a forgery and a lie. Its source is a book called 'The World's Unrest', by an unknown author. It was written by supporters of the Russian and German aristocracy.

"The Jews are charged with being delinquents and agents for Bolshevik propaganda. As a matter of fact their religion is the most powerful agent for law and order, next to Christianity. They are leaders in the fight against the Bolsheviki".

LLOYD GEORGE REPLIES TO MORNING POST.

Speaking in Parliament about the German debt to the Allies, Premier Lloyd George took occasion to reply to his critics who accuse him of being under the influence of Jewish financiers. Although he did not mention any names, it was known that he was referring to the Morning Post, which criticizes him as being influenced by a memorandum submitted to him by Jewish financiers, including Sir Alfred Mond and Edwin Montagu. Mr. Lloyd George said that there were some people who sing Jewish psalms every Sunday and during the week conduct propaganda to instigate pogroms against the Jews. Such men speak of a memorandum presented to us by Jewish financiers. The truth of the matter is that the memorandum was presented by four bankers, two of whom were Englishmen, one Irish and one Scotch.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATES UKRAINIAN POGROMS.

(London, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

The British government has received official reports from Constantinople, giving details of the pogroms against Ukrainian Jews during the last few years. English representatives in Constantinople have been instructed to investigate the activities of the Ukrainian Committee there and of the well-known Ataman Engel, and to prevent these from using Constantinople as a base for further pogrom preparations.

Current Events

By Gotthard Deutsch

(For the Period Ended May 29, 1921)

Pounding the Fool in the Mortar.

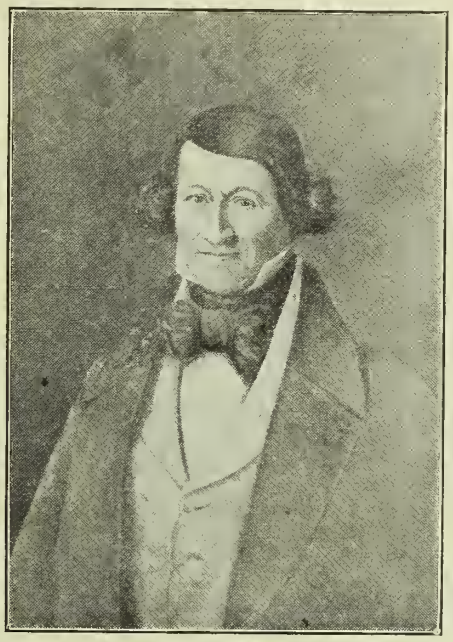
THE optimistic belief that wickedness can ever be defeated by argument is vividly refuted by the author of Proverbs (27, 22) who, always identifying folly and wickedness, says: "though thou shouldst bray a fool in a mortar with a pestle among groats, yet will not his foolishness depart from him". The Dearborn Independent, in its issue of May 28, refers again to the "Protocols" which entered Jerusalem with the British army as "the plans of the enemies of the world liberty". It has been stated and proven time and again that the "Protocols", supposed to be the minutes of an international Jewish convention held under the screen of the first Zionist Congress in 1897, are the invention of a yellow novelist, named Hermann Goedsche, a man of a shady reputation who, be it said in his exoneration, presented the supposed scheme of world control by the Jews in a trashy novel, entitled "Biarritz", and published in Berlin, 1868, and republished recently by Wilhelm Borngraever in Berlin. (Retcliffe's Historische Romane, vol. XIII, p. 130-180.) There the scheme is presented as the result of the deliberation of the thirteen elders of Israel who, as they do once in every hundred years, assembled, on the Sukkot festival at midnight around the grave of the non-existent Simon Ben Judah in the old cemetery of Prague at midnight, sharp. So the unnamed speaker of 1897 memorized the addresses delivered by the thirteen elders in 1860 and passed them off as his own wisdom.

Mendacity as a Principle.

The same paper which time and again protests against the charge that it is fomenting religious prejudice, appeals in its issue of May 21 for protection against "Jewish influence in the Christian church". This influence is found in "Jewish-German higher criticism". One would imagine that the writer of such truck belongs to the strong ward of a hydrotherapeutic institute. His place is indeed behind bars, but somewhere else, as we shall see. In support of the allegation that higher criticism is an invention of German Jews intended to destroy the Christian church, six names are quoted, five Germans, Wellhausen, Strauss, Ewald, Kuehne (sic) and Hitzig with Renan, "a Frenchman, and an atheist and a Jew" thrown in for good measure. Of these five Germans, one Kuehne, is entirely unknown, and we have all reason to believe that Abraham Kuenen is meant, who, by the way, was a Dutchman. All of them are Protestant Aryans, ordained ministers of the Protestant church, one of them, David Friedrich Strauss, having for a short time officiated as pastor. The French infidel Jew, Ernest Renan, was born of French fishermen in Treguier, Brittany, a place, where never a Jew lived, educated in a Catholic seminary for the priesthood, sent to the university as a prize pupil, where he abandoned the Catholic ministry. He was afterwards professor of Semitic philology at the Sorbonne, from which office he was dismissed through the clerical influences which were then powerful, owing to empress Eugenia, and was replaced—this is the humor of the situation—by the German Jewish scholar, Solomon Munk. In addition, it was Renan whose "History of the Semitic Languages" (1855) which called the Semites "une race incomplete", popularized the term antisemitism. Similarly "well established" is the Jewish propaganda work of the other men. Julius Wellhausen, the leading expounder of modern higher criticism, for whom the school is named, which sees in the Old Testament a system of crude ritualism and gross superstition, presents the following evidence of his desire to destroy the Christian church for the benefit of Jewish world dominion. In his leading work (Israelitische and Juedische Geschichte, p. 305, 6th ed. Berlin, 1907) he says after having spoken of Jesus as the sower whose seed was the gospel and whose field was humanity: "The Scribes and Pharisees never had any good intentions. Their observance of religious conventions never did any good. Jesus mocks at their ostentatious religious rites, their charity, fasting and praying". Similar is the attitude of Strauss who in a letter to his friend and former pupil the philosopher, Edward Zeller, dated February 24, 1868, complimenting him on his "History of Philosophy", writes: "you will convince everybody except the Jews who are as vain today as they were 1,800 years ago and will not admit that they have learned anything from the Greeks", (Ausgewaehlte Briefe, 1895, see: Monatsschrift f. G. u. W. d. J. 1908, p. 109).

Other Jews.

It would require a book to give a full review of "higher criticism" and its advocacy by Christian Theologians, as in this country Henry Preserved Smith of Andover and the late Charles Augustus Briggs of Union Theological Seminary, both expelled from the Presbyterian ministry for their radical views, in France the former Catholic priest, Alfred Loisy, excommunicated from the church, but may it not be in place to point to William Benjamin Smith of Tulane University and Arthur Drews of Karlsruhe, the advocates of the theory that Jesus never lived or to Julius Baumann of Goettingen who wrote "Die Gemuetsart Jesu" (1908) to prove that Jesus was insane, or Bruno Bauer (1809), the author of the antisemitic pamphlet, "Die Judenfrage" (1843) whose essay "Theologische Schamlosigkeiten" (1841) calls Christianity "the source of hypocrisy and servility and Judaized Stoicism". On the other hand outside of a few imitators of Wellhausen, and with the sole exception of Spinoza in the 17th century and in modern times of Graetz the Jewish exegets were either conservatives like S. D. Luzzatto or hyperorthodox like S. R. Hirsch and M. L. Malbim. This is not said to condemn higher criticism but merely for the sake of nailing down a malicious lie intended to create and foment race hatred through religious prejudice.



JONAS FRÄNCKEL
Founder of Jewish Theological Seminary
Breslav

The Limits for Rabbinic Authority.

By the time these notes shall be in the hands of the readers the Zionist Federation of America will have held its meeting in Cleveland, June 5, and many changes may have occurred which at the time of this writing can not be forecast. The leading issue is the controversy between the official representation of Zionism in America and the European propagandists, Einstein, Weizmann, Levin and Ussischkin. Inasmuch as the convention is to bring clarity into the situation the subject may be dismissed for the present.

The most serious drawback which Zionism has received was the attack on the Jews by the Arabs in Jaffa (May 1-2) which resulted in thirty-two dead and 150 wounded. For the present we have only the first cabled report of the high commissioner at hand, which gives as the reason of the outbreak a demonstration of the Jewish radical labor element which the Arab landowners resented. One thing is certain that the rabbinic belief that the possession of Palestine can not be disputed (Gen. Rabba, 79, 7) does not convince the Arabs any more than the law prohibiting the laying of Tephillin on the Ninth of Ab, which an old-fashioned rabbi believed to be an absolute protection of the fast, has proven a check on the infidel. Conditions are certainly very serious, for the government suspended Jewish immigration with such rigor that even those immigrants who were on their way before the order was issued, were not permitted to land which is a terrible hardship on those who left their homes, having under great difficulties and at a terrific cost obtained passports, and have now no place to go.

Judging by the usual methods of a chronological arrangement of facts, it seems that the presence of The British Colonial Secretary, Mr. Churchill, in Palestine, intensified the already high excitement which probably is fanned by the political interests of another European power. Mr. Churchill, addressing representatives of Jews and Arabs successively in Jerusalem, March 27, declared that England stands by the Jewish homeland, and wishes the Arab to see that this would benefit the country and so indirectly be for their own good. The Arabs evidently refuse to see it in this light. After desultory attacks on the Jewish colonies near Jaffa, a boycott was declared which according to last reports was not a success. The Arab press of Haifa, here undoubtedly under French influence continues its attacks on the Jews. A deputation of Indian Moslems had an audience with Sir Edwin S. Montagu, the Secretary for India, in which they demanded that Palestine be ruled by a Mohammedan king, and another delegation of Arabs came to Rome to interest the pope in their desire to have Jewish immigration to Palestine stopped. Lieutenant Jabotinski, of the Jewish Legion, whose sentence to fifteen years in the penintentiary for an attempt to organize a Jewish army after the Jerusalem pogroms of April 4, 1920, created a world-wide sensation, comes out with an article in the London Times, May 14, demanding from the British government permission to organize a Jewish military force of 4,000 at the expense of the Zionists. This appeal will hardly have a soothing effect on the Arab population. The Dearborn Independent continues to see in Zionism a mere mask for Bolshevism, and the propaganda for the latter the fulfillment of the stratagem, devised by the "Protocolist", although the Bolshevist government of Russia, as a recently published order of June 1, 1920, shows, set the whole machinery of its secret police to work for the suppression of Zionism.

Zion of Warsaw and Kiew.

To American readers the slogan: "America is our Palestine and Washington our Jerusalem" is well-known. First promulgated by Rev. Gustav Posnansky in Charleston, 1841, it has numerous times been repeated. It means that the removal of legal disabilities imposed on the Jews, and a gradual accomodation to the lives of their neighbors would bring about the final solution of the Jewish question. As the same slogan was with a changed text proclaimed in Hamburg, Stuttgart and Rome, etc., it is but proper that the Jews of Poland should see their Zion in Warsaw and those of the Ukraine in Kiew. Even the most confirmed optimist, however, will have to confess that such a "Shidduch" would be a one-sided affair. Conditions in Ukraine, making all possible allowances for incompleteness and exaggeration have not changed in the least, except insofar as it seems that the Mexican pattern of "generals," fighting for "liberty", has been changed for the Bedouin type of band-leaders. The President of the Ukrainian republic told a reporter of the London Daily Herald that law and order has a good chance of being restored, but meantime we received constantly reports of new pogroms; an instance of which is the statement that in Fastov, former government of Kiew, only 1,000 Jews are left of 12,000 who lived there before the war. A still stronger evidence of the reigning chaos are the waves of fugitives, assembling on all borders, notably on the Rumanian and the Polish borders, where they are not always welcomed by brass bands.

The Jews' Heaven.

The meetings between Polish and Jewish representatives which were dragging on for months, were interrupted, resumed and again interrupted, seem now to have been definitively abandoned. The clearest picture of the situation comes from Lemberg, where upon the suggestion of the Jewish socialist member of the sejm, Dr. Diamand, a strong anti-Zionist, the archbishop called such a meeting. The representatives of the nobility had "some important business" which called them away before they could express their opinion. The dean of the university said he did not know what the Jews wanted, they were living in the "coelum Judaeorum", and the only task before the government was to protect the Christians. On the Jewish side, Dr. Wasser meekly apologized for the nationalistic aspirations of the Jewish masses on whom the leaders can have no influence, as long as the persecutions continue. This ended the transactions. The Jewish members of the sejm withdrew from the committee on reconciliation as useless. The "Kurjer Polski", an antisemitic paper, condemns the policy of the government because it is only due to its apologetic attitude that the Jewish question plays any part at all, otherwise the powers would not pay any attention to it. This seems to be correct, for deputy Hartglas says in a Yiddish paper that in spite of the supposed equality of rights, vouchsafed in the Versailles treaty, the authorities have ruled that the prohibition of the possession of rural estates and mining property by Jews, as well as the special oath for Jews dating from the czarist time are still in force. Even the small chance which Jews have at present to make their voice heard in parliament is to be curtailed, if not choked off, by a gerrimander which will further reduce the Jewish representation in the sejm. This would obviate the unpleasantness of having to defend acts of brutality such as the police committed against Jewish labor organizations which paraded in Warsaw on May 1. Paderewski's paper, "Dwa Grosza", gave the casualties on this occasion under the heading "Trotzky's losses". How little the willingness of the Jews to work for Polish nationalism counts is evident from the fact that the most zealous advocate of this movement, Professor Aszkenazi, the representative of Poland on the council of the League of Nations, was not admitted to the teaching-staff of the university of Warsaw, which evoked a protest from Prof. Petrocki, who resigned on this account. In spite of this attitude the Polish nationalists are furious because the Jews of Silesia have voted against Poland in the plebiscite and they threaten reprisals. A clear and impartial statement of the situation is found in a remark made by Dr. L. Halden Guest to the London Jewish Chronicle, April 8, who said: "To be a Jew in Germany has its disadvantages, to be a Jew in Poland, is, at least, to be severely handicapped".

An Inverted Prophecy.

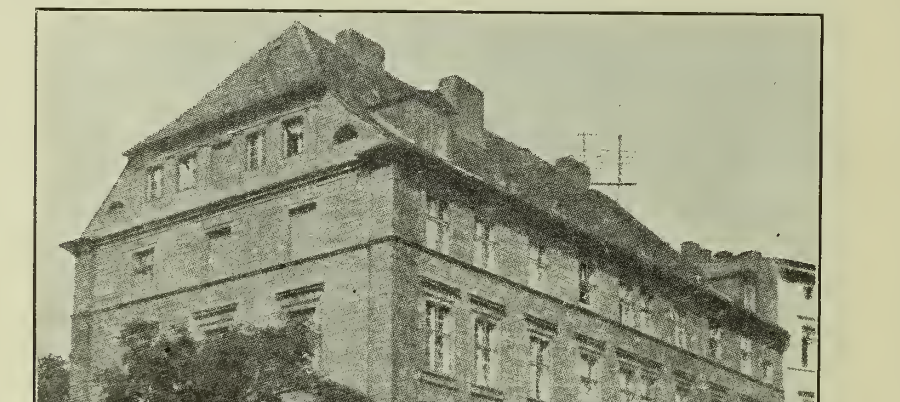
When Isaiah (60, 8) speaking of the return of the Babylonian exiles, exclaims: "Who are they that flee as a cloud"? he could not have thought of the tragedy implied in these words which might just as well be referred to the Jewish wanderers from Ukraine and Poland whose misery is unparalleled in our history. Danzig, the nearest seaport for the refugees, orders the expulsion of the "Ost juden". Czecho-Slovakia finds a few hundred refugees a peril to its safety. The antisemitic "Reichsbote" of Berlin sounds an alarm because 5,000—which figure probably will call for a discount—Jewish immigrants have entered Germany within three months. The republic of Latvia issues a restriction against the return of her former Jewish citizens who, during the war, were driven to the interior of Russia by the order of the Russian military authorities. Remnants of the army of Balachovicz, the Polish D'Annunzio, crossed into White Russia for a little pogrom diversion. The recent conflagration and total distruction of the town, Ljubawitch, the place made famous by the Hasidic rabbi, Mendel Schneiersohn, Lilienthal's colleague in the St. Petersburg conference of 1842, may give an idea, how even other causes besides pogroms contribute to the compulsion of seeking new homes. A Rumanian paper comes out with the belated story that in February 400 refugees (Let us hope that the number is exaggerated) were shot when crossing the Dnepr from Ukraine. Six hundred pioneers who succeeded in reaching Trieste to embark for Palestine are stopped by the order prohibiting Jewish immigration and are between Petliura and the deep Adriatic sea. From Barcelona Jewish refugees are expelled, and a ship, deporting them, was sunk with the loss of numerous lives. America is now practically closed, and the statement of La Guardia, President of the New York Board of Aldermen, made at a mass meeting in New York, April 27, that the immigration law was chiefly aimed at the Jews is hardly exaggerated. It is, therefore, a necessity to direct the Jewish emigration to Brazil and Argentina, as the delegates of Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society in Paris announced. This may also have its difficulties when we remember the antisemitic outbreaks in Buenos Aires against the "Russos" in 1919 and the repeated warnings against peonage in the coffee plantations in Brazil.

Old Charges and New.

The communist uprising in Germany which began March 20, and was suppressed within two weeks offered a welcome opportunity for the reactionaries, and, as shall later be reported more in detail, even for the socialists in the Reichstag to denounce the "Russian Soviet Jews". So far we have not heard of any Jews who shouted vivas for Bolshevism at the opening of the chamber in Mexico, May 13. The close alliance between Bolshevism and Judaism is forcibly illustrated by an attempt of the soviet government to prohibit circumcision, abandoned not on a plea of Trotzky but on the protest of the Mohammedan Tartars. The list of [illegible], published by the war department, contains for New York forty-four names among whom nine are Jews which [illegible] the proportion in the total population. Nor has it so far been established that [illegible] Bergdoll was sent to Germany at the expense of the 'Council of [illegible] Elders'. On the other hand a memorial volume published in honor of Cyril Frederick Lan-Davis, a photographic inventor, attached to the British aerial service, and "lost" October 14, 1915, ought to be sufficient to calm Mr. Ford who, through his hirelings, complained at the unfairness of the Jews who point to his son Edsel's non-military career or, as he puts it, to the fact that not "all members of his family served in the army". A boxing match in the east end of London, in which mostly Jewish boys participated, evokes from the sporting editor of the Daily Telegraph the comment that it was "splendidly British", an effect of naturalization which again might calm the "honorable and gallant member'" of the House of Commons, Colonel Yate, who interpellated the government, April 12, how many of the 122 aliens and 59 Russians, recently naturalized, were Jews and how many of them had served in the army. The Home Secretary was unable to accommodate his honorable and gallant friend on the question of religion on which the office had no data but was able to serve him with the information that of the fifty-nine Russians forty-six had served in the army.

The ritual murder charge has made its seasonable reappearance in various countries. None had any serious consequences by the fortunate accident that no murder of boys or girls had been committed. Two cases were reported from Lithuania, a fact rather disappointing, as we had become accustomed to consider Lithuania the bright spot on the map of the former czarist Russia. Other cases are reported from Smyrna, Salonica and Adrianople, testifying to the continued hostility of the Greek population. The case in Smyrna was started by a local paper, which reported the disappearance of a child, and was disposed of by the declaration of the chief of police at the request of prominent Jews that no such case had been reported to the police. More discouraging is a report that antisemitism is growing in Serbia from which country Spanish (?) and Greek Jews were expelled. Spanish Jews could only be natives of Serbia or other Balkan states who still speak the language of their ancestors and who found refuge under the sceptre of the sultan after their expulsion from Spain. Serbia had so far the best record of all Balkan states in the treatment of her Jews since the Berlin Treaty. Should it have changed after having been enlarged into Jugo-Slavia?

The charge of the control of world politics by international Jewry is not as old but just as absurd as the ritual murder charge, although not refuted by popes and patriarchs. It is depressing that Lloyd George found it necessary to deny it in his speech, in which he defended the ultimatum sent to Germany, May 5. He ought to be in a position to qualify the belief in the power which international Jewry exercises through its financial magnates, for, if the report is correct that his daughter is engaged to marry Sir Philip Sassoon, M. P., part of the fortune that comes from David Sassoon of Bagdad, the groom's great grandfather and from Baron Gustav de Rotschild, his grandfather, will no more enrich the synagogue or the Anglo-Jewish Association than the other half inherited by Sir Philip's sister, Sibyl, who married the earl of Rocksavage. Sir Philip himself has acted the part of "Briton first", when he accepted an invitation to dine with the Russian ambassador in London, July 11, 1913, at the time when the Beiliss trial stirred up the indignation of the world. A similar fear of the snake of the "Protocols" whose head is now supposed to have arrived at its goal, according to the Dearborn Independent, was expressed by commander Bellairs in the House of Commons, April 6, when he interpellated the government on a speech of Sir Alfred Mond, delivered in Jerusalem in which the hope for the restoration of the Temple of Jerusalem was expressed. The representative of the government replied that Sir Alfred must have spoken figuratively. It is a fact that neither he nor his father before him had shown any interest in the temples of London.



JEWISH THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, BRESLAV

Enemies from Within and Without.

The traditional idealism of the Jew, expressed in the Talmudic statement that he who prays for his neighbor, while he is in need himself will be answered first (Baba Kamma, 92a), is nobly exemplified by our brethren in Germany. The "Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden" held its annual meeting, April 4, with James Simon in the chair. The I. O. B. B. was represented by Br. Maximilian Stein in the place of District President Br. Timendorfer who resigned. The chairman reported that the educational work in Constantinople was continued, partly by local agencies and partly by the American organization, whose work in educational activities as well as in caring for the emigrants from Poland and Ukraine he praised highly, saying that, compared with this activity, German workers are pygmies. In spite of the needs of Germany, illustrated by the fact that in Hamburg alone 600 children are fed by the Quaker relief mission whom the local Jewish community assists insofar as it provides the additional cost required for a kosher kitchen, the Hilfsverein took care of 350 children from Austria. There are about 60,000 Polish Jews in Germany, a small number, considered from the point of view of percentage, most of whom had during the war been transported to Germany as laborers in factories and mines or for military reasons, but have now become "undesirable aliens".

The "Centralverein der Deutschen Juden" in its meeting, April 10, adopted a resolution condemning political and national Zionism and declares that religious and cultural Zionism is outside of the range of the society's activities which are limited to the defense of political equality and to the fight against antisemitism. This fight is still needed. In the diet of Prussia the minister of the interior was strongly attacked for his mild attitude to foreign Jews. His defense was courageous. He said that it is just the agrarian party which is complaining of labor shortage, and when to relieve this situation foreign labor is imported they raise a cry. He will not take part in any "Judenhetze", for the Jew has a right to live as everybody else. The same agrarian party clamors for restrictive measures against the Jews for their alleged monopoly of nitrogen, whose sale the government is said to have placed in the hands of Jewish exploiters, but they forget to mention that the discoveries of Jewish scientists like Nicodemus Caro and Adolf Frank have provided the chemical fertilizers which have so greatly assisted in the production of foodstuffs.

It is not to be wondered at that the German Nationalist Party should attack the Jews as being behind the supposed alliance of Jesuits and Freemasons whose combination is the cause of all troubles of Germany, but it is a combination of Syrians and Philistines who consume Israel from all sides (Isaiah, XI, 11) when the majority socialists in the Reichstag through member Osterroth joined in this chorus, holding the Jews responsible for the communist uprising in March. It appears that the communist, Paul Levi, in a pamphlet, "Unser Weg-Wider den Putschismus", had condemned this uprising and was therefore expelled from the party. Osterroth referring to his disclosures, shouted: 'Is even Levi not kosher enough'? And naming him with two other Jewish members of the party, Scholem and Katz, wanted to brand the communist "Putsch" as Jewish. In Upper Silesia the Jews were to a man on the German side, and some of them paid for their German sympathies with their lives, yet the extreme anti-semitic press charges them with Polish propaganda. The burocrats, who still hold over from the old regime, are mostly in sympathy with anti-semitic nationalism, of which the following case is a sad specimen. A Jewish woman, the widow of an Austrian professor, herself a native of Germany, living in Munich, received an order of expulsion. A friend of hers called at the police headquarters and asked for an extension on the ground that the woman was in the hospital, having undergone a serious operation. The utmost concession was a week's suspension, offered by the official. When the man said she would not be able to travel even then, the official replied: "What do I care. Let her croak, and we'll have one Jewess less". (Wenn's d'raufgeht, is a Juedin weniger).

The Land of the Phaeacians.

Reading reports from Vienna one can not help thinking of Schillers epigram:

Mich umwohnt mit glaenzendem Aug' das Volk der Phaeaken,
Immer ist's Sonntag, es dreht immer am Herd sich der Spiess.

Conditions have sadly changed. A brother from Vienna writes: Our situation is bad. A few war profiteers are living in extravagance without any sense of responsibility to the starving masses. For the Jewish situation nothing can be more characteristic than the numerous resignations from the clerical force of the Jewish congregation. A job in the Jewish congregation was in former years a much-coveted position. It meant a fair salary, steady employment, old age pension and a provision for widow and orphans. Now all this has become worthless. All who can obtain employment in business leave the congregational service; only the rabbis have to stay.

Frau Anitta Mueller, the wonderful social worker, acknowledging a donation, writes, "The distress in Vienna is daily increasing. Our institutions, to which within the last years were added an infants' home, a children's nursery, a shelter for children of school age, afflicted with incipient tuberculosis and rachitis, homes for apprentices and technical schools, are being besieged daily by hundreds of applicants whom we have to turn away on account of insufficient means. Every crown (less than a quarter of a cent) is a welcome help." The antisemitic movement has quieted down, as far as the information gleaned from the Vienna papers to the end of April goes. A ray of light is even seen in an announcement of the dean of the Vienna university,

(Continued on page 12.)

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF D. G. L. No. 1, I. O. B. B.

The sixty-ninth session of District Grand Lodge No. 1, I. O. B. B., was held at the Hotel Astor, Saturday evening, May 14, 1921. An informal reception and get-together was given to the visiting delegates and guests. Representatives from N. Y. State and the entire New England States, including the eastern part of the Dominion of Canada, were present were afforded the opportunity of becoming acquainted with each other prior to the opening of the convention.

An important part of the convention was the initiation of ladies to the B'nai B'rith Auxiliaries of the District. The Degree was conferred upon these candidates by the Springfield Auxiliary Degree Team. This was followed by a formal banquet and dance to the visiting delegates and their guests at the Hotel Astor. The event will long be remembered by those who were present.

Brother Charles Hartman, Executive Member of District No. 1, acted as toastmaster for the evening. In commenting upon the work of the degree team, Brother Hartman stated that it was a representation of the galaxy of youth and beauty. He attributed the success of their work to the retiring President, Brother Henry Lasker of Springfield and also to the Committee on Arrangements of the team.

Mrs. Leo H. Herz of the Council of Jewish Women spoke on the splendid work the women are doing at present throughout the world. In her discourse she made splendid comparisons of the women's work in primeval times with that of today and stated it was the fact that the men had so long held them at a lower level, that for this reason the women were unable long before this to obtain the equality that they have long sought. She spoke particularly concerning the affiliation of the women's lodges with that of the men, in order that there may be more harmonious work performed by them collectively.

Brother Henry Lasker spoke to the delegates and guests, particularly emphasizing the adoption of Jewish War Orphans in Europe as outlined in his message to the convention. He advocated that groups be formed for the purpose of adopting these children. and that particular interest be taken by the respective lodges of the District.

Judge Irving Lehman spoke about the wonderful work performed by the late Professor Friedlander while in Europe and how he sacrificed his life in order to save our co-religionists in Poland. He stated that Professor Friedlander was always ready to lend a helping hand for the betterment of the Jews throughout the world and his loss will long be felt by those who knew him.

He also spoke about the advantages of being a Jew, despite what some of our people were saying to the contrary, and emphasized that the only men and women who feel that it is a disadvantage to be a Jew are the men and women who do not recognize and love Judaism and the ideals of Judaism—the ideals which are the basis of this organization. He stated that it was the purpose of the Order to teach the Jew throughout the world that he has a right to be proud and happy to be a Jew and that it was our purpose to teach the Gentiles that a true Jew must always be a good American.

Brother George A. Newman, of Pittsfield, Mass., the newly elected President, addressed the delegates about the splendid work of his predecessors and particularly of the achievements of Brother Henry Lasker, who was able to increase the membership in the District from about 6,000 to over 10,000 in one year, with a large number in addition awaiting initiation. He stated he expected to be able to accomplish the same as Brother Lasker and hoped he would have the kind and earnest cooperation of the members in the District.

ACTIVITY OF DISTRICT, No. 5.

Since the first of January, the membership of District No. .5 has shown an increase of nearly fifty per cent. At the present time, Judge Chas. M. Feidelson is touring the district in the interest of the Order, his itinerary including Miami, and Jacksonville, Fla., Macon, Brunswick, Albany, Atlanta and Augusta, Ga., Roanoke and Richmond, Va., Goldsboro, Kingston, Charlotte, N. C., and Charleston, S. C.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF DISTRICT GRAND LODGE No. 2, I. O. B. B.

THE Sixty-Ninth Annual Convention of District Grand Lodge No. 2 was held at the Statler Hotel in St. Louis, Mo., on the 8th, 9th and 10th of May, 1921. The delegates were entertained royally by the St. Louis community—they were showered with gifts, shown the sights of the city, banqueted and dined. Amidst such friendly and auspicious surroundings, it is not surprising that the convention's real work proved itself to rank among the best that has ever been accomplished.

The officers elected for the coming year are: President, E. J. Schanfarber, of Columbus, Ohio; First Vice-President, Arthur F. Friedman of Denver, Col.; Second Vice-President, Alfred M. Cohen of Cincinnati, Ohio; Secretary, Leonard H. Freiberg of Cincinnati, Ohio; Treasurer, William Ornstein, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Every officer chosen has been serving the District for many years, but there was an extraordinary demonstration at the nomination and election of Alfred M. Cohen for Second Vice-President. He had been a leader for a long time without enjoying any office; in fact, he had consistently refused to be a candidate. This year the call was so insistent and universal and was couched in such terms that he could no longer refuse to give the District the benefit of his ability and experience in an official position.

Jewish Orphan Home at Cleveland.

The Trustees of this institution decided in April to recommend the separation of Districts 2 and 6 in their affairs, since both Districts had grown so in population that they did not need combination to meet the Orphan problem. District No. 2 agreed, and if District No. 6 concurs, the plan of severance will be adopted at the 1922 conventions.

Resolutions of appreciation of the lives of Samuel Wolfenstein, the Superintendent of the Orphan Home for many years, and of Nathan Drucker, Past President of the District, were adopted. They were eloquently eulogized by several of the men who knew them and worked with them.

The convention endorsed the work of the lodges in the District in collecting funds for the Home. It went on record as favoring care in selecting as directors for the Home only those who would be able and willing to give their time and energy to its advancement and not simply accept the honor.

Denver Hospital.

This haven for the victims of tuberculosis was founded by this District Grand Lodge. Its scope and size have been steadily broadening. Research work is being carried on there in the endeavor to find a cure for the disease. The children's building, given by Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hoffheimer of New York, has been running to capacity ever since it was opened last fall. The Grand Lodge decided to erect a much needed Infirmary Building, to bear the name of the Order, and plans for this purpose were adopted. A gift of $5,000.00 was announced during the convention. It will cost $100,000. The District appropriated $500.00 toward the general fund of the Hospital.

Other institutions to receive subventions were the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., $1,000.00; Denver Sheltering Home for Jewish Children, $400.00; Central Jewish Aid Society of Denver, $400.00; National Farm School, $25.00. The appeal of the Hebrew Sheltering & Immigrant Aid Society was referred to the Executive Committee of the Order.

The General Welfare Committee brought in recommendations which were adopted; that the small lodges be urged to seek membership from neighboring small communities; that Menorah buttons be presented to all initiates and that all members wear them, that special effort be made to enroll ex-soldiers and sailors; that the lodges provide community centers where none exist and aid in the Americanization work.

Membership Qualification.

Of immediate interest is the amendment to the District Constitution, providing for the admission of none but citizens, unless the non-citizen shall have declared his intention according to law to become one. Even then he must be dropped from membership unless he achieves full citizenship within five years.

Executive Director.

This office was considered still to be experimental and was ordered continued for another year at the pleasure of the General Committee. While realizing the possible value of such an activity to the District, the cost is considerable. Every lodge in the District will find itself appraised in the Director's report, which will be printed in the volume of Proceedings for 1921. Many valuable suggestions for making lodge meetings interesting and for giving the members the wherewith to occupy their philanthropic leanings will be found in the report.

National and International Relations Committee

The National and International Relations Committee recommended federal and state legislation making unlawful publication of matter concerning a religious or racial group which is false and libelous and likely to incite to acts of violence, not only in self interest but 'in behalf of American solidarity based upon the fundamental principles of American Democracy."

Urged that the Government be requested to express its displeasure and horror at unprovoked acts of violence against Jews as such in foreign lands.

On question of immigration it expressed opposition to percentage exclusion, without regard to the larger aspects of the principles involved.

Exception was taken to the attempt to introduce Bible reading in the public schools as being contrary to the principle of separation of Church and State. A resolution favoring committees of two men in or near each state capital of the District was approved; they are to keep in touch with legislation looking toward religious or racial discrimination and inform the lodges thereof in order that efforts may be made to stop it.

A resolution was passed recommending support of the Near East Relief by the lodges of the District.

Women's Auxiliaries.

Women's auxiliaries to the men's lodges are favored in those communities where conditions are suitable. The dues are quite small and a beautiful ritual already exists. Conventions of these "Daughters of the Covenant" would be held jointly with those of the lodges.

Excerpts From Rosenfeld's Message.

"The task of Americanization is an opportunity for splendid American service and for educating and enlightening the foreign element which has adopted America as its future home. It is not sufficient that we shall make them citizens, but we must go much farther and inculcate true principles and ideals of American life and American conduct in their social and commercial life.

"The past year has witnessed an intolerant attack unexampled in American history. In this promised land, in this Garden of Eden, as it were, the serpent of anti-Semitism has raised its hateful head. But the constitution of America, the laws of the land, the great people of the greatest, noblest and mightiest republic in the annals of time, will never suffer hate, oppression and intolerance to touch any of its people.

"The American flag, which holds our lifetime devotion, will ever protect life, liberty and the free exercise of religious worship.

"And the Jewish people ever have served and ever will serve the flag of the nation and ever will be true to the nation's ideals, traditions and high purposes.

"Shakespeare tells us—

" 'Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel'.

"Ah, how many such friends have I tried and adopted into the service of my office! How splendid have they been! How responsive, forbearing, uncomplaining and uncritical; ready to obey every summons to service however laborious and burdensome.

"I would delight to honor them by name, but that would mean the roll call of hundreds and some members of every lodge in the district. I honor them in thought and reverie. I grapple them to my soul with the steel hoops of memory and affection—and pray a blessing and a benediction upon the heads of the many brethren so loyal and so true".

CONVENTION OF DISTRICT GRAND LODGE, No. 7.

District Grand Lodge, No. 7, met in annual session in Dallas, Texas, on May 1, 2 and 3; with the following officers in attendance: Victor H. Hexter, President; A. B. Freyer, First Vice President; S. J. Westheimer, Second Vice President; Archibald A. Marx, Treasurer; and Myron M. Goldman, Secretary.

There were 160 delegates in attendance with twelve Past Presidents of the District Grand Lodge. The representatives were welcomed by the Mayor of Dallas and the President of Dallas Lodge. Response was made by Brother Morris Hirsch on behalf of the Grand Lodge. The President's message and the reports of the Secretary, Endowment Trustees and standing committees were read and were well received.

A number of resolutions were offered in regard to social service, cultural advancement and district activities, which were referred to various committees. Mrs. Yetta Schoenfeld addressed the convention on behalf of the Leo N. Levi Hospital at Hot Springs. During the session memorial services were held, and special eulogies were offered for late Brothers, Joseph Kohn, Dr. William Kohlmann and Salomon Marx, the nestor of the Order in District No. 7.

Following the memorial service, reports of the convention Committees were received.

Banquet.

The evening's program opened with a banquet, followed by a dance, which was tendered to the delegates and visiting ladies by Dallas Lodge, with Brother Morris Miller as Toastmaster. Brothers Rabbi Henry Cohen, A. B. Freyer, Max Philipson, Rabbi Sol L. Kory and Rabbi Wm. Feinschreiber responded to the various toasts. One of the noteworthy events of the evening occurred when Brother Rabbi David Lefkowitz, on behalf of Dallas Lodge and the Jewish community of the city, presented the President, Brother Victor H. Hexter, with a silver service for his unselfish and untiring efforts for the Order and for Judaism at large.

Tuesday morning was given over to convention reports. Brother Leon L. Lewis, of Chicago, Secretary of the Anti-Defamation League, informed the assembly in an educational address of the wonderful work of the league and he aroused much enthusiasm.

Discussion at length occurred for the selection of the next convention city, Alexandria, La., and El Paso, Texas, being in the lead. A vote was taken and El Paso received the largest number of votes. The sponsors for Alexandria suggested that El Paso be the unanimous choice for the next convention of District No. 7. The election of officers then took place with the following results: A. B. Freyer, President; S. J. Westheimer, Vice President; Lee J. Loeventhal, Second Vice President; Archibald A. Marx, Treasurer and Myron M. Goldman, Secretary.

Past President Brother Joseph Hirsch of Vicksburg, Miss., installed the officers and at the conclusion the new President, in well chosen words, bade the delegates Godspeed and the convention adjourned, sine die.

Tuesday evening the Columbian Club of Dallas tendered the delegates and visiting ladies an entertainment, consisting of two one act plays and a dance.

GEORGE ELIOT'S ANSWER.

Here is a charming story about George Eliot, the famous writer and friend of the Jews. ("George Eliot" was her pen-name. She was really a woman but she chose a man's name because she didn't want people to misjudge her books. And she admired the Jews so much that she married a Jew. If you haven't read her "Daniel Deronda", there is a treat in store for you when you are ready for it.)

George Eliot was once at a great concert given by the Philharmonic Society of London, and there she met the great composer, Richard Wagner, who was known to dislike the Jews. His wife Madame Wagner was charmed with George Eliot, and begged her to come with her husband, George Lewes, to visit them for a month at Frankfort. Now most people in England would have given a great deal to be invited to visit the Wagners. But George Eliot said:

"Madam Wagner, I beg to be excused. Your husband does not like Jews, and my husband is a Jew"!

How to Americanize the Immigrant

By Jacob Weinstein, Portland, Oregon

THERE was a time when the immigrant was a necessary factor in the development of America and so he was very welcome, but lately we have been hearing protests against his further coming. There are charges that the immigrant congests our cities and lowers our standard of wages. As a result, we witness violent labor demonstrations against the immigrant or even a more extreme reaction in the Anti-Japanese legislation of some Pacific Coast states. But I am not to discuss the broad policy as to whether we shall bar the immigrant or not. In that regard, suffice it to say that we can view the world as shipwrecked by the catastrophe of the war. America is the one great life-saving craft afloat. The European survivors are clambering its boards. In their life and death struggle they may tip the boat. We are alarmed, but before we decide upon the brutal necessity of stunning the heads and bruising the arms of the strugglers with our oars, let us look about twice and ask ourselves: "Is the boat really overcrowded"?

I am to concern myself with the immigrant that is within our borders and to suggest a policy that we should adopt in Americanizing him, and instead of being one of the great mass of Americans watching the immigrant come into our midst, I would like to transform myself into an immigrant and pass again through the funnel of Americanization. At the outset, let me say, however, that if there is a tone of complaint in what I say or a word of criticism of American institutions, be assured that it comes not from an ungrateful heart but rather from one who would show his gratitude to this nation for the splendid opportunities it has given him, by doing his share to make it better. Indeed, one who looks at his native European land today and sees it torn with bloody civil war, sees death in disease and destruction stalking every corner of the land, can feel only too keenly the haven that this country is. If any young man complains of the opportunities that this country offers, I can say that it is due to one reason only, and that is to lack of initiative and ability on his own part.

I am again, then, a native of the Czar, dwelling in a little Russian village. It is the same village that my father dwelt in and his father's father back into unknown generations. Hundreds of years before, my unknown ancestor found sufficient remuneration in the tanning business to make it a vocation and by one fell stroke, the occupation of his sons down to the tenth generation was determined. One was not born an individual there. He was born a member of a community. One was not known by his name, but rather by that of his occupation, or his town and in time of war, of course, he was merely a loyal subject of the Czar. Tradition and custom were the sole guides to action, while the "Talmud" was the entire source of knowledge as well as the sole criterion of honor and respect. He who knew more "Talmud" and did less business was the peer in those villages. And yet it was that same "Talmud" and the heritage of the people of which it speaks that put our people so far above the intellectual plane of our Russian neighbors that, even had we been [illegible], we would not have assimilated. As a distinct and separate people, we were made the objects of discrimination and persecution, if persistent and cruel enough, can drive even slaves of habit and tradition from their native soil. So it did with us and America became our hope and aim as it did of all persecuted and downtrodden people. It was this magic word, "America", that made of many a [illegible] villager a hustler, a [illegible] and a [illegible]. Nothing was too hard so long as it pointed to America. Whole villages gathered up their feather-[illegible], brass Menorahs and other precious bric-a-brac ages old and joined the endless stream to Liberty.

A week on freight cars, a week at cold [illegible] week in a filthy steerage and products of Russian soil have been transplanted to America. Shall they become a burden or an asset? Indeed, some of these come with great hope and ambition. America, with its amazing newness, [illegible] them on. Their goal is before them and a strange environment is no [illegible]. Others, however, are stunned; [illegible] on the borders and allow [illegible] its seething [illegible] to overwhelm them and they become lost in the sea of nothingness. Right here, as this new humanity from an old heritage stands on the threshold, as it enters the funnel toward Americanization, there is need for a definite policy. Shall we strip them of all their past, of their superstitions, fanaticisms, and other effects of an ignorant monarchy, as well as of the cultural heritage of an aged civilization, and then as a lifeless mass of clay apply on them a more or less vaguely defined coat of Americanism; or shall we take them as they are, with their good and their bad, and by noble precept and example teach them to give up those old-world habits that are incompatible with a new and free land, while at the same time retain whatever elements of worth they possess? We have never had a definite policy on this score, and if anything we have inclined heavily towards that of making the foreigner forget his past entirely and by some strange contortions of human nature absorb Americanism as he would a beefsteak.

Such a policy cannot but be unsuccessful, for the primary reason that Americanism is not yet a defined quantity. To the descendants of the Mayflower, it may mean a reverence for the Constitution and the early history of America; to the employer, it may mean police protection for his property and a well-filled labor market; to the laborer, it may mean an eight-hour day and better working conditions, more or less offset by the development of trusts and monopolies; to the European observer, it may mean a reverence for the dollar, a mad rush for business, with no time for art or philosophic contemplation. And yet there are some who believe that Americanism is in the making; that its perfection shall be the harmonious blending of all the immigrant cultures that come to our shores. The latter view, I believe, is the correct one and we ask ourselves, then, what are some of the good traits that the immigrant can weave into the fabric to be known as Americanism?

We must first remember that the man who tears himself away from his native land to come to a strange land is not a passive mortal to be blown willy-nilly the way the wind blows. He has pluck, courage and determination to forge ahead. We must also remember that every immigrant who comes to our shores was born at least 2,000 years old. He is not a mere ignorant foreigner. Pierce his outer garment of squalor and poverty; look behind the superstitions and whims that an unhappy political system has given him and you will find the culture of the ages. The great indictment against our policy of Americanization is that it has never tried to give these people a chance to contribute the best that is in them to our general makeup. Large masses of foreign children in our public schools are saturated with a culture foreign to that of the home from which they come. In the home there is, therefore, little or no understanding between the growing child and the static parent.

Mothers of Israel! Mothers of Italy! Why do you weep? You, over your Sabbath lights and you, over the shrine of your Lord, why, in this land where you are so rich, your material comforts so many, and your children so well educated, do you weep? You do not say, but I understand. In Russia or in Italy, your word was law and it was revered, but now when you scold your children, they ridicule your broken English and you who suffered so to rear them are no longer, in this new land, fit company for your children when they visit their American friends or go to their amusements.

If we do not impart to both parent and child a more sympathetic attitude toward each other, primarily through a better knowledge and appreciation of the cultural values prized by both, we shall continue to witness the growing estrangement between parent and child so common in our immigrant homes. The proper medium to do this for the young is our public schools. It must see to it that the hyphen connects and does not separate and it must teach each factor to respect every other and should take pains to enlighten all as to the great past contributions of every strain in our composite makeup. When every pupil recognizes all the factors which have entered into his being, he will not only continue to prize and revere that coming from his own past, but will think of it as honored in being simply one factor in forming a whole, nobler and finer than itself.

A few days ago, as I was speaking to the superintendent of the Neighborhood House, there entered a bright young man of about thirty years, I should judge. He was but a week from the old country. A smile covered his intelligent face, which bore the impress of the worst of Poland's war horrors and his eyes gleamed as he told Miss Lowenberg that he heard that the Neighborhood House conducted a night school and that he wished to join and please, too, he wished to know if we had a Russian-English or a German-English dictionary so that he might learn to speak English as soon as possible. How effusive he was in the praise of America! How joyful that this was to be his land! I felt then and there that here was a decided asset to America. Here is a man with a passionate love for this new land; a craving for learning, an ambition for progress. His wit had been sharpened by the necessity of overcoming obstacles in the old country. His education was gained by bitter effort and was, therefore, a true education. He had an instinct for communal life and a love for a stable home life. He looked forward to the time when he might be the head of a permanent unit of this great country. With all these stolid qualities, he had the spiritual finesse and strong moral fibre which devotion to his Judaism had given him. And he is but typical of the great mass of Russian-Jewish youth that have come and will come to this country. There is no telling what a rejuvenating and spiritualizing influence their presence may exert when they enter into American life, provided they enter it, not with a careless throwing aside of their heirloom, but with full consciousness of the strength of the strands they are weaving into its woof.

So each group, not only Jewish but all European, if its characteristics are studied in the light of its history, and when once these characteristics are toned down by contact with new conceptions of life, will be a source of strength and completer union. That this has not been done, there is numerous evidence to prove. Take for instance the Japanese—that industry, that frugality, that courtesy which we praise so highly as virtues in Japan become vices once they are transported here. Their industry becomes a bleeding of the soil; their frugality becomes miserliness; their superb courtesy becomes scheming intrigue. Among our own people, the stable home life is surrendering to the fast apartment house existence of America. The beautiful, soul-satisfying, restful Sabbath eve is becoming scarcer and scarcer. The study of the "Talmud" (that vast reservoir of knowledge) is sacrificed by the youth for dime novels. Yiddish newspapers, which were developing marvelous literary writers in Yiddish and which were the source of all information to all those who were too old to learn English, are being suppressed—all this because the immigrant is wrongly impressed that "Talmud", stable home life and literary progress in his native tongue are opposed to Americanism, while apartment house life, movies and cheap novels are necessary parts of it. It is not only the immigrant that is harmed by this belief but America no less. This, I believe, is the problem that Americanization faces; that of making the immigrant a vital part of American life without destroying his precious heritage in the attempt. What we teach the immigrant through precept and example he will become. He will bequeath our virtues or our vices not only to the next generation, which will spring with virgin strength from his loins, but through thousands of invisible channels he will send his blessings or curses to the ends of the earth.

An harmonious combination of the heritages of all the nations and ages that come to our shores will mean not only a perfect Americanism but a new world order as well. This last Purim there occurred a little incident of great significance. A strictly Catholic Italian family lives next door to a strictly Orthodox Russian Jewish family in Portland. The mothers of the families confide their troubles one to another as though they were sisters; the children of each family play together as though they were of the same family. This last Purim the Jewish housewife sent some Purim delicacies to the Italian neighbor and the latter returned the dish with Easter goodies. Think, my friends, of the ages of woe and hatred and persecution this little incident spans. As I see such sights, as I see the Polock and the Jew walking hand in hand, as I see the children of all nationalities singing with one voice the national anthem, and as I recall the bitter animosities that were cherished among these same peoples in Europe, I cannot help but feel that this great America is destined to be the experimental ground on which it will be proven that artificial bounds of nationality superimposed by a vague being called the "state" cannot prevent all mankind from progressing toward that unity of ideals and purposes which the one Creator destined mankind for when he sent Father Abraham and his people on their mission to teach the world the unity of God.

DAUGHTER OF LLOYD GEORGE TO WED JEW.

London.—Rumors are current that Miss Megan Lloyd George, daughter of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, is to marry Sir Phillip Sassoon, an English Jew. Sir Philip is immensely wealthy and the owner of Lympne, the fine place which has been the scene of grave conferences between England's premier and allied diplomats.

GERMAN SYMPATHY FOR JEWS EVILLY MISINTERPRETED BY POLES.

(Danzig, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

Because several German newspapers in Upper Silesia recently appeared carrying denunciatory articles against the mistreatment of Jewish inhabitants by Bavarian troops, the Polish press, particularly of Warsaw, has another instance to prove that the Jews and Germans are working hand in hand against Polish interests in Upper Silesia.

POLES DEPORT JEWS: BOLSHEVIKS SHOOT THEM.

(Warsaw, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

The Polish authorities near the Russian boundary continue to deport Jewish refugees from Ukrainia who carry no affidavits sent them by their relatives in America. The refugees are returned to Soviet Russia where, it is reported, many have been seized by the Bolsheviks and shot as counter-revolutionaries. Skulski, Minister for Foreign Affairs in Poland, refused a petition from the Jewish Deputies in parliament to intercede on behalf of the Jews.

JEW HEADS CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

New York, (J. C. B. S.) May 4.—Announcement is made that Abraham Kaplan, a well known attorney of this city, has been appointed by Mayor Hylan, President of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, a position carrying an annual salary of $6,000. Mr. Kaplan was formerly a State Senator.

JONESCU PROMISES AID TO UKRAINIAN REFUGEES.

(London, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

Take Jonescu, Roumanian Foreign Minister, recently assured the Secretary of the Italian-Jewish Emigration Committee that he would give every assistance to Ukrainian refugees passing through Roumania, according to a cabled dispatch from Venice. Jonescu stated that he considered it inhuman to bar refugees from entrance into his country.

LUZZATI APPOINTED SENATOR.

(Paris, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

A report from Rome states that Luigi Luzzati has been appointed a senator by the Crown. There are now twenty Jews in the Italian Senate.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Berman of 75 Abbott Ave., Waterbury, Conn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Ethel, to Paul Bernard Dorfmann, formerly of New York City and Springfield, Mass.

Mr. Dorfmann is a loyal member of the Order and was instrumental in reorganizing Melckizedek Lodge of Waterbury, Conn. Special mention was made of Mr. Dorfmann's notable work, by the former President of District Grand Lodge, No. 1, Brother Henry Lasker, at the annual convention of the district in New York.

News from London

By Our Correspondent, Dr. M. Epstein

London, May 18, 1921.

It is seldom that the community's dirty linen is washed in public, but now and again an occasion does occur when such is the case. The latest illustration comes from Liverpool, and it is a thousand pities that Jews should take to the high courts matters which arise out of purely internal communal organization. Many Jews in this country still attach importance to kosher meat. What follows? That machinery must be set up for the provision of such meat. In every fairly large town, therefore, there is found today a body entitled the Shechita Board, as a rule made up of representatives of all the different elements in each community. These boards issue certificates to butchers, certifying that the meat they sell is fit for Jewish consumption. For this purpose it is necessary to provide inspectors, overlookers, and such like officials, who are maintained at the expense of the board. Over and against the board, now hostile, now friendly, are the butchers. Some are men of character, others are just ordinary business men working for gain, others are of the type of the adventurer. It is manifest that a motley crowd of this character has in it the elements of trouble, and so, almost as a general rule, the Shechita Board in each town is engaged in a struggle with the butchers to establish its authority. The whole thing hinges on how much support the boards can obtain from the Jewish public. If the strict Jews agree to follow the advice of the boards they will naturally remove their custom from butchers who do not enjoy the recognition of the board. But in those cases where members of the public are prepared to take their own course and to purchase their meat where they choose, the position of the Shechita Board is obviously difficult.

The Liverpool Board was in such a position recently. It had a quarrel with a butcher in Liverpool who was established in a fairly large way of business, and who specialized in providing kosher meat for the ships that carry emigrants to America. It is obvious that the shipping companies are anxious to obtain meat which they can in good conscience offer to their Jewish patrons, no small body of people. So long as the butcher in question enjoyed the confidence of the board in Liverpool things worked smoothly, but when, for some reason or another, the butcher fell out with the board, the board withdrew its recognition and in this instance apparently attempted to influence the shipping companies not to deal with that particular butcher. Thereupon he took the case to the high courts, claiming damages for conspiracy. The case was tried at the last Liverpool assizes. It must be confessed that it is somewhat difficult to understand the true reason for the quarrel between the parties, but so much is certain—that it is hardly necessary to take cases of this kind to the courts of the land. There is no principle involved, there is no law of the country which comes into question, and indeed the judge who tried the case suggested again and again that it would be advisable for the parties to arrive at some understanding outside the courts, but despite the efforts of His Lordship the plaintiff and the defendants could not arrive at a satisfactory solution.

The case has been deferred to the next Liverpool assizes, and no decision has been taken thereon. There is no need for a general reflection on the merits of the case or for a consideration as to which party is in the right. In any event a matter like this ought to have been settled quietly somehow. To carry it to the high courts only showed that there was something wrong with the organization of the Shechita Board in this country. Either they can or they can not maintain their authority. If in the exercise of their authority they bring matters to such a pitch that those who feel aggrieved go for protection to the civil courts, then clearly the organization requires overhauling. In London there is sufficient give-and-take in these matters, sufficient tact, sufficient understanding that it is vital to conserve the good name of Jewry, so that apart from minor quarrels no serious disagreements meet the public gaze. But in the provincial centres many Jews appear not yet to have reached that state of feeling which should show them at a glance the importance of maintaining a good name which, as the Preacher said, is better than ointment. The Liverpool instance would go to show that the War Memorial still has a good deal of work to do—work which the community needs. It is all the more pleasing, therefore, to be able to report that slowly the funds are coming in and that the tour of the Chief Rabbi, which now extends to Australia and New Zealand, is being eminently successful from this point of view.

It should be made clear that attempts at providing education have certainly been made in this community in the past, though not on so extensive a scale as the War Memorial intends. We have always prided ourselves on the attention we have paid to talent, and for many years there has been in existence the Education Aid Society for the purpose of cultivating talent in science, literature, art, and music. The latest report of this society is indeed pleasant reading. It is there stated that the organization does not encourage that early precocity which is only superficial and has no sound basis, nor does it deplete the ranks of trade and industry to turn out second-rate professional men. Its standard has always been very high. During the 13 years of its existence the society has received 890 applications. Of these 243 have been helped, and 552 rejected. The society's success is ample. It has enabled poor students to qualify for the professions, and today the students include doctors, chemists, engineers, civil servants; in literature there are to be found professors, novelists, and writers; in the art section there are several of the society's proteges who have begun to make a name for themselves. Perhaps the best characteristic of the society's work is that it gives its assistance in secret. After all, the best charity is that which does not advertise the giver.

We have enjoyed a number of lectures recently, to which large audiences listened, testifying that there is a good demand for work of this character in Anglo-Jewry. In the first place we must name Professor Yahuda, who delivered three lectures at King's College, in the University of London, on the latest aspects of the origins of the Hebrew language and of the authorship of the Bible. As in most things, so too here, there are fashions. A generation ago it was fashionable to stress the Assyrian influences on the Bible; a decade or two before that the Arabic influences were dwelt upon; a decade or two still further back Egyptian influences held the field. Curious to relate, we are returning to Egypt again, and Dr. Yahuda was at pains in his three lectures to show what an enormous influence Egypt exercised over the Old Testament and its language. Whatever specialists may say, there is no doubt that Professor Yahuda delivered three excellent lectures, which were enjoyed by large audiences. But specialists to say—that he has not established his case. His reply is that the lectures form, as it were, the cream of a book on the subject which he proposes to publish before long, and that this book will furnish the proofs for his statements.

Another lecture which has become quite a social event in London Jewry is the Arthur Davis Memorial Lecture, given under the auspices of the Jewish Historical Society of England. This year Professor Alexander, who holds the chair of Philosophy at the University of Manchester, was the lecturer, and Viscount Haldane was chairman. A packed audience heard Professor Alexander discourse on "Time and Spinoza," and the great majority of his audience followed his stiff argument with attention and interest. His lecture will be published as the fourth of the little booklets of the Arthur Davis series which are destined to become one day a most useful collection of volumes on out-of-the-way aspects of Jews and Jewish life and thought.

Palestine is still a topic which exercises the minds of thoughtful Jews, here as elsewhere. We are all agreed, and that without exception, that the Holy Land must be made a worthy place for Jews and others to live in. But somehow, partly owing to causes over which we have no control, the problem languishes, and trouble breaks out in consequence. The recent Jaffa riots left a bad taste, although enthusiasts declare that, riots or no riots, life for the Jews in Palestine is a wonderful thing, at any rate for those who like it. Such, too, seems to be the impression of the Right Honourable Mr. Winston Churchill, who recently returned from Palestine full of enthusiasm for the land and its people, more particularly the Jewish people. He has not yet made his long-promised statement in Parliament on this question, but it is understood that when he does so his sentiments will be of the warmest kind, showing how enthusiastically devoted he is to the Balfour Declaration, which, as everybody knows, promises to make Palestine a home for the Jews.

Nevertheless, there are a few firebrands who, partly in malice and partly in ignorance, espouse the cause of the Arabs for no apparent good reason. Whatever is done by the Administration or by the Zionist Organization in Palestine is, in the eyes of these dissatisfied gentry, wrong, even detrimental to the British Empire. But it is not thought, despite the discussion of the problem from time to time in the House of Lords, that these worthy gentlemen exercise any real influence on public opinion in this country, and public opinion, it must be remembered, is solid in favour of a Jewish Palestine.

Yet there are some among us who do not desire to live in the Holy Land, and many of these are connected with the Jewish Liberal movement. Curious to relate, however, when this party established a branch in North London it obtained as its minister a young gentleman who is the life and soul of the Zionist movement in the universities. He evidently can easily combine to the satisfaction of his conscience a belief in Liberal Judaism and one in practical Zionism. There is nothing wonderful in that. The combination is certainly a possible one. But some of the principal leaders of the Liberal movement in this country are professed anti-Zionists, and here, as in most other cases in human life, there is a contrast which is not easy to explain.

Be this as it may, however, one thing is certain. It is that the Liberal wing is becoming active in propaganda and missionary work. It is worthily seconded in this activity by the extreme Orthodox wing, which is giving evidence of militant Judaism creditable to their struggle for existence. Both these extremists, as many people hold, lose sight of the fact that Israel is a community and continues to be a community, despite any number of internal differences among its members. No less an authority than Mr. Israel Zangwill recently touched upon this question, and accused extreme Orthodoxy of being behind the times, of being played out, of being degenerate. Mr. Zangwill prophesied that Orthodoxy must ultimately moulder like every other corpse. Whatever views one may hold on this prophecy everyone will agree that it is healthy in tone, that it shows a growing consciousness of interest in Judaism, and even though the controversy may be barren, it is yet welcome because of that interest.

A personal note must be sounded in regard to Professor Einstein, who has promised to lecture both before King's College in London and the University of Manchester. Another pleasing personal item is the success of Mr. Liverman at one of the recent municipal by-elections in London. Mr. Liverman is a keen member of the lodge, still a young man, and one possessed of high aspirations. He desires, we believe, to get into Parliament, and we feel sure that he will succeed.

We cannot conclude this letter without calling attention to the sally of Mr. Lloyd George in the House of Commons the other day anent the ungentlemanly criticism of The Morning Post of the people who were called in to advise the conference between the English and the French Prime Minsters The Morning Post complained that there was too much Jewish influence at that

(Continued on page 12.)

A SATURDAY EVENING THOUGHT.

What You Owe the Jew.

(By Herbert J. Bryce, Pastor First Presbyterian Church.)

There is a great deal of foolish and un-Christian feeling against the Jew in America today, a feeling which is being fed and stimulated in considerable measure by the articles which have been appearing for some months past in Henry Ford's paper, The Dearborn Independent. One cannot but suspect that the feeling springs from unworthy motives and that jealousy of Jewish success is not among the least of these. In an after dinner address a few days ago, ex-Senator Lafayette Young, veteran editor of the Des Moines Capitol, put the idea very aptly and wittily when he said, "The only thing I have against the Jew is that he is smarter than I am".

Have you ever stopped to think how much we are indebted to the Jew? First, we owe to the Jew our Bible, the deepest, richest, noblest, divinest book in all the world. Then, too, we owe to the Jew our knowledge of God. In the midst of a world of idolatry the Jew kept alive the knowledge of the one true and living God. Not only so, for God's supreme gift to the world came through the Jew. Jesus, the Son of God, was born of a Jewish mother. He was a Jew, and "salvation is of the Jews".

I have read with much interest the work by Mr. John Foster Fraser called, "The Conquering Jew", in which he draws attention to this debt of which I write. He tells us that to the Jewish house of Rothschild we owe the financial system of the world. He points to the numerous Jewish names famous in the world of music and art, and reminds us that among historians none are more famous than Neander, author of the greatest history of the Christian church, and Edersheim, who gave us the greatest life of Christ. We are all familiar with the work of Josephus, the famous Jewish historian, and some at least know of the great English historian, Palgrave, and of Ludwig Geiger, the leading authority on the Renaissance.

Coming into the scientific world, we find that the Jew has made a rich contribution there, thus making the world his debtor. Dr. Koch, the famous tuberculous specialist, was a Jew, as also was Koller, discoverer of cocaine, and Rosenthal, the great nerve specialist. Sir Wm. Herschel, perhaps the world's greatest astronomer, Cohn, the botanist, Sylvester, the mathematician, and Lombroso, the insanity expert, were all Jews. Added to these we might name Dr. Mandelstamm, the occulist, Prof. Solomon Schechter, the archaeologist, Prof. Meldoloa, the chemist, Prof. Ehrlich, the bacteriologist, and M. Bergson, the philosopher. These men to whom the world owes so much were all Hebrews of the Hebrews.

The Jew has brain power, and in every field of world interest where he is found that power is being demonstrated. Russia's folly, in no small measure, has been that instead of utilizing that brain power, she has persecuted the Jew. Today she is reaping the result.

The Jew simply cannot be kept down, for he is a man of destiny. Once more, according to the book, the Jews will be a nation back in their own land of Palestine. They will have power and glory, and all the nations of the earth will be blessed through them. Let us not hate the Jew, however much we hate some of the traits of character he reveals. They are not peculiar to him. They are found within ourselves. Let us honor the Jew and God will honor us. "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee", in (Gen. 12:3) is a promise which has been literally fulfilled. The nations that have treated the Jews well have prospered. Upon those who have maltreated them the judgment of God has fallen. I doubt not that much of our own national prosperity has been due to our beneficent treatment of the seed of Abraham.

ANTI-SEMITISM IN LATVIA.

Paris.—Advices received here from Riga indicate that anti-Semitism in Latvia has considerably increased more recently and is particularly noticeable among government officials who make no effort to veil their attitude. Recently the government has issued an order withdrawing all passports from Jews who previously resided in Latvia on the basis of the Russian law enacted in 1893.

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

Published Monthly (except July and August) under the auspices of the
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

Kable Brothers Co., Official Publishers,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Editorial Office
1228 TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO
All matter intended for publication should be addressed to the Editor.

Subscriptions received through lodges only.
Subscription, one dollar per annum.

No responsibility is assumed for articles published over the signatures of the writers thereof.

JEWISH CALENDAR.

5680	1921
New Moon	July 7
Fast of Tammuz	July 24
New Moon	August 5
Fast of Ab	August 14
New Moon	September 4
Selihoth	September 25
5682
New Year	October 3
Day of Atonement	October 12

THE REALM OF THE MIND.

It is well that in these days of general hysteria on the subject of national and racial antipathies, born and bred at the heat of the war fever and perpetuated long after the cessation of hostilities, the signs are increasing of a desire to return to "normalcy" in those quarters which should have kept themselves free from the contagion at any and every time. While the Dearborn sheet consistently imports from abroad the German-made denunciations of the great scientist of whom his native country should have been proud, while cheap reporters in a press catering to the instincts of the masses poke fun at the things that are of necessity unintelligible to the mob, Princeton University, Christian and American to the core, confers upon him an honorary degree in the presence of a distinguished company of academic men, surrounds the event with all the solemnity to which the stately buildings and the spacious campus lend themselves, and hails the man whom it thus honors as a second Newton, an intellectual giant, an immortal in the realm of the mind. For, as President Hibben, not disdaining for the occasion to use the actual hated tongue of the ex-enemy and even to cite the German philosopher Hegel, so well put it, the universe may be finite in time and space, but there is an undying universe of the spirit, a realm of the mind, in which the searchers after truth are the immortals. The realm of the mind, not being of this world, which soars aloft above space and time and touches the fringe of the garment of Him who is the truth, cannot be charted like a terrestrial dominion with boundaries of race and tongue and political expediency; no winds and storms and atmospheric disturbances sweep its area; it bans none but the sluggish who rest upon their inherited possessions; it challenges nothing but untruth; it abstracts from all the by-work which of necessity attaches to all our mental activity and gives a hearing to all the choice words, no matter in whom they reside. The citizens of the realm of the mind who dwell with us, of what consequence is it what their physiognomy or their garb or their language, even if that language be the hated tongue? As one of our fighters once put it, he made war upon Germans, but not on their language. With breadth of view the audience listened to the "enemy speech", and the only drawback it experienced was that it could not quite follow it in all its details and expressions. After all, as somebody remarked, the theory of relativity is just as unintelligible, unintelligible to the uninitiated in one language as in another. Lecturing, that is teaching, is very much like conversing. Naturally you can converse only with those who understand your language or whose language you understand. The teacher may come down to the level of his audience, that is the popular method, the one in vogue in extension courses. The teacher in the class-room rather raises the class to the teacher's level. He builds up gradually a means of communication between platform and audience. At length, understanding is reached. When it comes to a most abstruse and abstract subject, it is not the teacher's fault that his hearers, who have conveniently forgotten the very rudiments or the ABC of his science, cannot possibly comprehend his deductions. Students engaged in special work know that when their work issues from a printing press the number of those who can really understand it in all its bearings may be counted on the fingers of one hand. It is so in the domain of letters, but more so in the province of pure mathematics. And after all, the great intellectual giants are not their own best interpreters. Others will come and explain them to the multitude. Some grain will perish by the wayside. But something will filter through to become common property. Meanwhile, we take the word of those nearest to the masters. Princeton University may be counted upon as a safe guide. And in overcoming national prejudices it reestablished the realm of the mind in which no American would wish to be a stranger.

EMIL G. HIRSCH.

The event celebrated the other day, marking the entrance of Doctor Emil G. Hirsch upon the psalmist's years of strength, calls for public attention beyond the immediate circle of his devoted congregation. It is not merely that for us of the Order Dr. Hirsch is Brother Hirsch. Doctor Hirsch belongs to Jewry at large. Dr. Hirsch has nothing of the ecclesiastic in him. His metier is not ecclesiastical politics and the dominion of ecclesiastical affairs from a dark background. The great need not stoop to the petty expedients of those of little mind. Hirsch was not machine-made and he experiences not the least desire to be an organization man. His position of eminence rested at all times upon his own great gifts. And what are these gifts? In the first place, Dr. Hirsch stands out as the foremost preacher in the American rabbinate. He is essentially a preacher, not a lecturer, and he would resent being classed among lecturers. He is far too much at home in many a seemingly outside and remote subject—we recall his studies in connection with a political-economic question which bore the mark of wide information and original handling—to venture to pose as the expert in fields not his own. But in his own field he is expert beyond cavil. He is the preacher born and bred and trained. His interpretation of Judaism and of Jewish destiny may clash with positions held by other men; but it cannot be gainsaid that the Jewish note has pervaded all his public addresses, that he has always striven to confront the modern conditions with the outlook won from the sources of the past. How vastly he differs from the "ethicals" who threw theism and Judaism to the winds! For with him the Jewish religious contribution is not dead, but instinct with life. A foe of the outward and showy and ceremonial, perhaps a trifle too much so, he stood out for the essence against the form, for the thing against the symbol, for the reality against the simulacrum. Had he begun his career in these latter days, he might have modified his position on this score as on many another point. But having begun as he did, he proved consistent to the end. Preaching with Dr. Hirsch is a gift, his sledge-hammer eloquence a native endowment. But behind the ease with which the telling points in his discourses were made, there was deep thinking and prolonged research. His information came out of many books, books perused in the original, no matter what out-of-the-way tongue it might be, and the information was not snatched in haste, it had been thought over and made his own. Honored by a great University as teacher of Eastern languages and coeditor of learned publications, he commands Jewish learning to a degree not suspected even by his colleagues, much less by the general public. Talmud, Midrash, Hellenic wisdom, medieval philosophy, the newer German learning and even the Haskalah of far Russia, he masters and draws upon for the formation of his thought. When he chooses, he speaks the Hebrew that is cultivated today.

He is a liberal, but he would disdain being classed with the Liberals who surrender Jewish thought and play with a Christianizing theology. He stands upon the platform of Judaism. He stands as a Jew. We of the order know it. All Jewry knows it. And so we would contribute our mite of homage to him who has been our teacher and counsellor and guide. We pray that Providence may spare him in our midst for many years to come, to teach and to guide and to exhort, to build and to edify, to sustain in the hour of tribulation, to use his great gifts in showing us the way in these days of shifting positions. May the years still in store for him be free from the clouds of sorrow and infirmity, and may his vigor abide with him to stand on the watch in the house of God, keeping vigil over the faith and the fortunes of his people. And we want him as the man he always was: unbending to the powers of darkness and moral confusion, unswerving from the path of Judaism in which he strode, head and shoulder above the crowd of those of small mentality, the man of great vision, of stupendous mental powers, the unique Dr. Hirsch we knew and listened to and had affection for. What we have rehearsed is but a part of the praise which is his due—but then, as he well knows the rabbinic maxim, that is all that we are permitted to say in his presence. For we thank God that he has been spared to listen to our appreciation, even if it falls far short of his service in the cause of his people and their faith.

THE HEBREW UNIVERSITY AT JERUSALEM.

Professor Einstein, who was signally honored by Princeton University as an immortal in the realm of mind, came to this country in connection with a mission which is far from being as abstract or as unintelligible as the particular scientific theory which will go to posterity by his name. It is perhaps a misfortune that he came in association with a number of men who expected their cause to gain from the adhesion to it of so illustrious a name, but who in the nature of the case dim it through their very association. Not only are American Jews divided on the merits of this cause, but the squabbles between these Europeans and the American Zionists will deter neutrals from joining in giving honor to whom honor is due for fear of aligning themselves with one party against the other. It is unfortunate, because Professor Einstein comes to plead for the Hebrew University at Jerusalem. He, of all, ought to know, and does know, what the obstacles are that are put in the way of Jewish professors who refuse to swim with the current, indeed of all those Jewish teachers who would stay Jews, and still more to what hardships and degradation the Jewish students at European Universities are exposed. As a matter of fact, the doors of many Universities are being closed against them. Einstein pleads for a Jewish school at Jerusalem, a school which should be well endowed, properly governed, which should summon to its faculty none but the very greatest exponents of their specialties, a school rich in facilities, such as buildings, libraries, collections of all kinds, and laboratories. The University, if correctly planned, should become the one laboratory. A laboratory for what? Certainly all the sciences should be represented. The things needed most for a pioneer population would be agricultural, technical, and medical departments. But in the end a greater subject must be tackled. We have had the science of Judaism, so called, Jewish learning, but very little science and learning about Judaism. The University of Jerusalem should constitute the great laboratory where the truth about Judaism should be evolved. For there, amidst surroundings untainted by the non-Jewish spirit, the Jew should in all leisure analyze his own thought and put the Jewish appraisal upon it. There is no Jew in this country who would not open his hand to foster such an undertaking. For a Jewish center is being created in Palestine, "a" home, as the British Minister for the Colonies told the Arabs the other day. And a home is being created for the Jewish spirit. Free and unfettered it will renew itself like an eagle. It may soar as high as it pleases. It may without let or hindrance think about God and man, as it was wont to do in the day of prophets and teachers of yore. American Jews will give freely that all Jewry may pride itself upon the house of learning that is reared and that is bound to exercise a potent influence upon the development of Judaism in the dispersion. We cannot continue to stagnate. There, on the mounts of the Holy Land, a fresh breath is blowing. The dead bones will be revived by it. A new meaning will be put into our fidelity to Judaism. Remember, we practical Americans ought to know that it is only a matter of dollars and cents. The University of Chicago rose over night, as it were. It took rank immediately among the great seats of learning. Small gifts will not build the University of Jerusalem. Let the millions be forthcoming, twenty millions, and at once. Twenty rich Jews can endow the University in one day. To them the appeal must be made. The name of Einstein is a guarantee that the very greatest is planned. Mass receptions and carriage rides and hurrahs will not accomplish it. A less noisy, but a more strenuous appeal to the men of foresight who possess the means and have the vision—that will build the foundation of the Temple of Jewish Learning in Jerusalem, the holy city.

JEW MAY BE GERMAN AMBASSADOR TO UNITED STATES.

London.—The London newspapers publish a rumor that Herr Walter Rathenau the renowned German-Jewish industrial leader, is to be appointed German ambassador to the United States as soon as diplomatic relations between the two countries are resumed. Herr Rathenau has to his credit the organization of the food system in Germany during the war, and has also played a prominent part in the politics of his country. He is now president of the algemeine electrizitats gesselschaft of Germany.

JEWISH PUPILS EXEMPT FROM SCHOOL IF PARENTS OBSERVE SABBATH.

Paris (J. T. Agency).—Answering an interpellation of the Jewish community in Zurich (Switzerland), the Government Council for that district stated that Jewish pupils in the public schools will be exempt from writing on Saturday, if it can be proven that their parents observe the Sabbath.

ANITA MULLER ARRANGES TRANSFERANCE OF 500 ORPHANS TO SOUTH AFRICA.

(Vienna, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

In the company of Mr. Hochberg of South Africa, Frau Anita Muller has left for Poland, where she is to receive 500 Ukrainian orphans who will be taken to Johannesburg and cared for in the Jewish orphan asylums there. One thousand orphans have already been cared for in a similar way by the South African Jews, ZANGWILL WARNS BRITAIN.

(London, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

In a letter to the "Times" Israel Zangwill warns Great Britain that unless its intention of establishing a Jewish national homeland in Palestine for the Jews is firmly impressed on the Arab as irrevocable, there will be no peace in the country and Palestine will become a "second Egypt to England and another ancient Egypt to the Jews." Mr. Zangwill holds the present scheme, as outlined in the recently published mandate, politically and economically unworkable.

BON VOYAGE

Brother A. B. Seelenfreund, Secretary of the Order, and Mrs. Seelenfreund left for Europe on June 14. Brother Seelenfreund will inspect the eleemosynary institutions, study the conditions of the Jews in various lands, investigate emigration problems, make definite arrangements through the District Grand Lodges of the Order abroad for the care of Jewish war orphans, and gather other information of value.

On behalf of the Order a loving farewell is extended to Brother and Mrs. Seelenfreund. May his usefulness to the Order and mankind in general be as eminent in the countries through which he will travel as it has been for the greater part of his life in America.

May the Lord grant them long life, added strength and a safe return to brethren and friends.

THE JEWS OF INDIA.

Just about two or three weeks ago, Lord Reading, the Jew who was chosen by the King of England to rule over India, set out to take up the duties of his important office. He has gone to India where he will be viceroy and govern in the place of the King.

The fact that a Jew will be ruler of India makes us wonder about the Jews of India. Perhaps you did not know that there were any. Well, there are, indeed. At least 21,000 Jews live in India, and they have settled chiefly in the provinces of Bombay and Bengal, and in Indo-China, or Burmah (as it is sometimes called). Some of the Jewish communities have been there since the eighth century of the Common Era, while some claim that they can trace back their wanderings to the destruction of the Second Temple.

What do these Jews look like? Some communities are black, because their ancestors intermarried with the native women. But others are as white as you or I—allowing of course for what we should look like in that climate! Although the number of Jews is small for such a large country, the Jews have played their part in the building up of some of the cities, especially Bombay. Here the Jewish family named "Sassoon" has made itself very important, and had opened school and synagogues, hospitals and charities of all kinds.

JEWS APPEAL TO BRITAIN TO AFFORD HAVEN OF REFUGE FOR ITS HOMELESS.

(London, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

A delegation representing the Jewish Colonization Association and the Joint Foreign Committee of organized Anglo-Jewry and consisting of Sir Stuart Samuel, Claude G. Montefiore and Lucien Wolf, recently called on Under-Secretary Wood of the Colonial Office and through him petitioned the British Government to open the British colonies for the settlement of the large number of Ukrainian Jews made homeless through pogroms. Under-Secretary Wood expressed himself as entirely sympathetic towards the suggestion and assured the delegation that their request would be taken up with the colonies without delay.

HILFSVEREIN RENEWS ACTIVITIES.

The Central Office of the Emigration Department of the Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden has begun its operations after a long period of inactivity. Its work consists in the regulation of transmigration in giving advice to emigrants, and in the systematic organization of all agencies to assist emigrants and transmigrants. It has its main office in Berlin, with branch offices in Bremen and in Hamburg. In addition, agencies have been opened at the chief frontier towns and railway junctions. The bureau intends to issue its bulletin as it did before the war, giving particulars of general conditions in various countries and all information necessary for emigrants.

The annual meeting of the Hilfsverein was held recently in Berlin, with Dr. James Simon in the chair. Dr. Bernard Kahn, Secretary, reported that the Society had contributed the sum of seven million marks toward the care of Eastern Jewish refugees. The amount of 835,000 was expended on the starving Jewish children in Vienna.

THE WHITE AND THE BLUE—THE COLORS OF THE JEW.*

By Rabbi David B. Swiren.

Towards the close of the year 1917 the National Geographic Society issued a Flag Book. In that book are found eleven hundred and ninety-seven flags, their colors, their history, and their meaning. The flags of various peoples are presented there in full colors, but no flag symbolizing our people, the Jewish people, can be found there. Why?

Have we Jews no flag? Have we no colors? Have we no emblem of our faith, of our hope, and of our high ideals? Have we no colors to distinguish us from all the other peoples? Have we ever had a sign whereby our people could be known from others?

In order to ascertain all this, we need but consult the Book of Books, and the writings of the ancient Rabbis, and look closer to our life. In the Book of Books we read as follows:

"And the Lord spoke unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying: 'The children of Israel shall pitch by their fathers' houses; every man with his own standard, according to the ensigns; a good way off shall they pitch round about the tent of meeting. . . .

"Thus did the children of Israel: according to all that the Lord commanded Moses, so they pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, each one according to its families, and according to its fathers' houses". (Numbers 11, 1-2; 34.)

In commenting upon these biblical words, the Rabbis of the Midrash said as follows: "Each of the tribes had its own prince, and its own banner, the color of which corresponded to that of its stone". (Midrash Rabah, Numbers 11.)

The tribe of Reuben had, according to the Rabbis, a red banner. The banner of the tribe of Simeon was of a green color. The banner of Levi was of white, black and red. Sky-blue was the color of the banner of Judah. Issachar had a black banner. The banner of Zebulun was of white color. The tribe of Dan had a blue banner. Gray was the color of the banner of Gad. The banner of Naphtali was of wine-color. The tribe of Asher had a banner of a pearl color. Jet-black was the color of the banner of Joseph. The banner of the tribe of Benjamin was of all the colors combined. All these tribes, it is true, had but one aim, to conquer the land which God had promised to them, and to live there as a free and independent people. Still they carried these tribal banners and not one national banner as they marched towards their Promised Land. For they were not as yet fully united. Likewise had the American people acted while they were making all efforts to establish themselves as a free and independent people. No sooner had the Continental Army come into official existence than the Grand Union Flag, the flag, which consisted of thirteen stripes, alternately red and white, with a union bearing the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew combined, was adopted as its standard and displayed "Out of compliment to the United Colonies". A year and a half later, on June 14, 1777, the Stars and Stripes were adopted by act of Congress. Still none of these national flags "were carried in the field by the land forces during the Revolutionary War. The Army carried only the colors of the states to which the troops belonged, and not the national flag". (Flag Book of the National Geographic Society, pages 289-292.) The states were not as yet fully united.

On the other hand, just as the states had one national flag in addition to their respective flags even so had our people one national banner in addition to their tribal banners. Thus we read in the Bible:

"And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it Adonai-Nissi, the Lord is my banner". (Exodus xvii, 15; Rabbi Jacob Ben Asher, 1280-1340, in his Commentary to Pentateuch known as Baal Haturim, Ibid.)

From these biblical words we gather that our people, in common with the other ancient peoples, had a national banner which was emblematic of the God they believed in. Of course, the banners of the other ancient peoples were images, emblematic of their deities. The banner of our people, on the other hand, was no image as the God of whom it was intended to remind them "has neither form nor body, and man no semblance of his holiness can frame". It was, however, of white and blue colors as these colors suggest the "seat of glory" of the Lord. (Exodus, xxiv, 10; Rabbi Samuel Ben Meir, 1085-1174 in his Commentary to Pentateuch, Ibid; Sforno, 1475-1550, in his commentary to Pentateuch, Ibid.)

Again the Zizith, the fingers worn on the four corners of our garments, were intended to serve as a national banner, to symbolize our purpose and power as a people. They were intended to remind us, in the first place, of our purpose in life as a people, to be consecrated unto the service of the Lord; and in the second place, that our power depends upon our being law-abiding. For thus it is said:

"And the Lord spoke unto Moses, saying: 'Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them throughout their generations fringes in the corners of their garments . . . . that ye may remember and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God. I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt to be your God: I am the Lord your God' ". (Numbers, xv, 37-38; 40-41.)

And tradition tells us that the Zizith originally consisted of two threads of white wool and of two threads of blue wool. (Menachoth, xxxviii, 1; Rabbi David Ha Levi, 1586-1667, in his commentary called Magen David Shield of David, to Shulchan Aruch, Aruch Chayim, xi, 13). Thus we see that the white and the blue are the colors of our people as a people.

Hence it was that no other banner was accepted by the Zionists. A banner consisting of a white field bearing seven stars was suggested by Doctor Theodor Herzl in his "Judenstaat". His ideas of a "Jewish State" were accepted and he became the crownless king of our people.

Yet his proposed banner was rejected, and instead the banner suggested by David Wolfssohn was accepted by the Zionists the world over, for the latter consists of white and blue colors which have been considered the colors of our people.

Of course, this banner which was suggested by Wolfssohn and adopted by the Zionist organization is new. This banner, which consists of a white ground with a blue horizontal stripe on each side, and the Magen David, the Shield of David, in the center, in blue, was never before in use among our people. Yet it may rightly be considered the national banner of our people. For it is "of the colors of old, but new in arrangement and design". Yes, the white and the blue are the colors of the Jew.

---

* Read before the American-Jewish Historical Society on Feb. 22, 1921, at Dropsie College, Philadelphia.

ALBERT ELKUS OF SACRAMENTO ELECTED MAYOR OF THE CITY.

Albert Elkus, President of District No. 4 in 1888, and a member of the General Convention at Richmond, Va., in 1890, a leading merchant in the city of Sacramento, the capital city of California, was elected on May 6 by his colleagues, the Board of City Commissioners, Mayor of the city. Brother Elkus is a native of Sacramento. He is the oldest son of one of the early Presidents of the Hebrew Congregation and has, himself, occupied that position a number of terms. Mrs. Elkus belongs to the Kahns, a pioneer family of high standing in the city of Oakland, and is a lady of culture and refinement.

FIVE HUNDRED WARSAW JEWS REPORTED HURT IN MAY DEMONSTRATION.

(Danzig, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

No less than 500 Jews are reported to have been wounded in the course of a disturbance at Warsaw on May 1, when the police interfered with a procession of Jewish workers. Over a hundred were also placed under arrest. At the same time a number of organized anti-Semites tried to enrage the masses against the Jews. The "Rabotnik" and some of her local publications are protesting against the occurrence and demand that those responsible for the casualties should be punished.

COMPLIMENTARY DINNER TO HENRY LASKER.

On the evening of May 7 at the Eldorado in the city of New York, a complimentary dinner was tendered to Brother Henry Lasker, President of District No. 1, I. O. B. B., by his friends and coworkers of the General Committee. Mr. Charles Hartman, Executive Member, presided. Before partaking of the excellent repast, Samuel Fleischman read with great feeling, the following resolution which was unanimously adopted at the meeting of the General Committee.

"Minute adopted at a meeting of the General Committee District No. 1 of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, held May 7, 1921.

"The members of the General Committee District No. 1 of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, at this their last meeting, preceding the coming annual session of the Grand Lodge, greet brother Henry Lasker, President of the district, with hearty congratulations upon his most successful administration. Much was expected of him when he took office. The results achieved by him and through his energetic initiative surpass the highest expectations. His outstanding substantial accomplishments are: A great and unprecedented increase in the membership of the district; creation of lodges in sections of the district in which the Order had previously been unrepresented; revival of various dormant lodges; and the awakening of a spirit of active interest and enthusiasm throughout the district; self-sacrificing devotion to the performance of the duties of his office and the promotion of the welfare of the district, with earnestness and zeal.

"Industry, capability and efficient conduct of affairs have distinguished his administration of the office of President. His uniform courtesy and cordiality, combined with sincerity of purpose and thoroughness in performance, have won for him the high regard and lasting friendship of the members of this committee, who, each and all, extend to him assurances of their hope for his continued well-being and success in all his affairs, and that the district may long enjoy the benefit of his active cooperation in furthering its interests."

After the dinner, Judge Abraham K. Cohen, in his usual masterful way, complimented Pres. Lasker on his most successful administration and, in the name of and in behalf of the General Committee, presented Pres. Lasker with a magnificent Tiffany watch. Brothers Davidson, Ullman, and Goldstein then briefly spoke, each lauding the guest of the evening. Pres. Lasker, in his usual modest way, delivered a most interesting talk, which in part was devoted to a recital of the doings of the Executive Committee at their recent meeting at Washington, D. C. He exhibited a photograph taken of the Executive Committee, where President Harding honored the committee by being photographed with them. President Lasker, in accepting the gift, referred to the fact that the words of our ritual were being literally carried out to-wit: "Work and Watch". He tried, he said, to work and "watch" was part of his reward.

Following the remarks of President Lasker were short informal talks by Brothers Kantrowitz, Victorius, Osterweis, Rosenzweig, Ascher, Hillman, Shapiro, Goldschmidt and Fleischman, in the order named.

A vote of thanks was ordered conveyed to Mrs. Levy, daughter of Chas. Hartman, for having decorated the banquet tables so beautifully and for having arranged the dinner with such taste and judgment.

A motion was carried that all out-of-town lodges be supplied with a copy of the photograph of the President of the United States and the Executive Committee referred to above, and that a further copy thereof, suitably framed, be hung in the assembly-room at our headquarters.

After a most enjoyable evening, the meeting broke up at 1 a. m.—[Louis W. Osterweis.

A SOLUTION.

The B'nai B'rith seems to have had some sort of salt solution administered to it because it surely has taken on a new lease of life. It seems as if the anti-Semitic agitations, Henry Ford, the Jewish comedians, the hotel restrictions have all operated to the advantage of the Order by giving its Anti-Defamation League a great deal to do. And in truth it has done very well indeed.—[Jewish Criterion.

Despising the Old Mother

By Dr. Max L. Margolis

(Written for the B. B. News.)

ISRAEL ZANGWILL is poet, novelist, essayist, a writer of name and fame. Singularly un-British as he is in sentiment, he handles the English language with a certainty of touch after the manner of the very best. It is always a pleasure to read anything he writes, because it is so well written. And he writes not only books, for he is a public man, the protagonist of a movement, of a Jewish movement. He mounts the rostrum quite often, and he speaks as he writes. He is a frequent contributor to the Anglo-Jewish press. His latest effort is a short but delightful review of a couple of recent novels, to one of which he devotes the greater portion of his critique. It is the work of a Jew and deals with Jewish life. Zangwill points out its faults, which are inherent in a first attempt at novel writing. But he appears to agree with one point in the young novelist's presentation. It turns upon the estimate of traditional Judaism, or of orthodoxy, as both the novelist and the critic name it. The novelist finds it "forbidding". Now, argues the critic, there must be truth in this estimate, if orthodoxy thus presents itself to an "artist". For surely the artist ought to see deeper than the surface, if there is anything at all to be seen, anything to attract at the bottom. And then the critic proceeds to upbraid orthodoxy for its failure to mend; and because of this apparent unconcern with its shortcomings, he consigns orthodoxy, and with it Judaism, to death, bound to come sooner or later. There is, it must be granted, one luminous thought about the old, unthinking orthodoxy which in a measure and after its fashion, and be it ever so imperceptibly and slowly, comes to terms with the exigencies of life, whereas the conscious and reactionary latter-day orthodoxy, the kind that stalks about "in frock coat and kid gloves", shuts itself up against all compromises with modernism.

Still it is the old orthodoxy after all that the artist has found "forbidding". How much of this "forbiddingness" is to be attributed to orthodoxy and how much to downright poverty, that is the question for the student of Judaism. As things go in the world, culture and good manners go with wealth. The new rich will tell you how easy it is to buy culture. You acquire a new home with spacious grounds; you have your interior remodeled for you by a decorator; you send your children to a private school, etc., etc. We may say that it is but the veneer of culture that these people acquire. But the veneer is quite pleasing to the eye; it is certainly not "forbidding". Orthodoxy, and for that matter Judaism, is innately High-Church. It is a religion of ceremonies. It makes no difference that those Low-Church, "evangelical" Jews, whom we call prophets, had a notion that ceremonies did not matter, that the Temple service with its "noise of songs and melody of psaltries" was at best something indifferent, and that the thing needful was that "justice should well up as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream". The truth is that the religion of prophetic times, as in the centuries thereafter, manifested itself in worship, in song, in ceremony. "Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness"! But beauty requires wealth and leisure. Beauty cannot have a place in narrow, crowded streets, in ugly and dingy dwellings, in straightened circumstances. If you wish to see orthodoxy, Judaism, at its best, quite unforbidding and decidedly beautiful, go to the homes of the rich, wheresoever Judaism and wealth are not strangers to one another. A dinner in a well-appointed house is a ceremony. To constitute it such it requires the beautiful house; it requires servants, and a set of them; it requires ample and rich linen, service, and so on. On a smaller scale, and certainly in the hovels of the poor, it becomes a mere meal, where a person eats to satisfy his hunger. There can be nothing ceremonious about it. Let a sensitive child of that household, through contact with more fortunately placed children, begin to compare, and it will find its home decidedly "forbidding". Nothing will so mar the beauty of a ceremony as cramped space and fewness of participants and mean trappings. There must be a background to it, and that is usually lacking in the normal conditions of Jewish life in which orthodoxy is set.

Yet a greater artist than either the present novelist or his critic, the poet, Heine, succeeded in penetrating to the very depth of beauty and poetry in the orthodoxy, the traditional naive orthodoxy as he knew it. And we, who are no poets, but who grew up in homes not blessed with wealth, yet rich in emotion and love, are in a position to confirm the poet's delineation of how the Jewish home, the poorest and meanest, was transformed as if by a magic wand, aye, by the force of the traditional religion, into a thing of exquisite beauty. Do we not remember those blissful Sabbath evenings, with all care banished, with all material pursuits put away, with the soul liberated, singing for joy, reveling in the Sabbath rest, exalted to spiritual communion with the Divine? And what meanest and noisiest synagogue is not transformed when the Queen Sabbath is welcomed by the congregation? Is there no beauty, poetic beauty, in it, when all the worshippers turn their faces to the door, as if the Visitor were really entering? And was there no beauty in that last meal before the Day of Atonement, when at the end the blessing was recited quietly, in subdued tones, in voices full of emotion, and parents laid their hands upon the heads of their offspring, pronouncing a father's and mother's blessing? Jewish worship in the synagogue is essentially dramatic. There is movement. There are processions and recessions. Where it has been turned into a lyric recital after the fashion of the evangelical churches, it has become dead and I might say almost "forbidding". Synagogues may and may not have been noisy in the past. I have an idea that they were. Shechter was wont to say, "There is nothing as decorous as a corpse". But we must admit that the decorum in the synagogues, such as we knew them, was not of the best. Yet even in them voices were hushed at the blast of the shofar, or at similar ceremonies, the high water-marks of religious devotion.

No, traditional Judaism is by no means "forbidding". It is a thing beautiful even in its ugly accompaniments. It certainly can be beautified. It certainly has been. The old mother was beautiful, if by beauty we mean beauty of soul. To despise her is the mark of the ingrate.

THE LEO N. LEVI MEMORIAL HOSPITAL.

The [illegible] Annual Report of the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital Association for the year ending March 31, 1921, shows that the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital of Hot Springs, Ark., took care of 739 patients at a cost of approximately $36,000. In addition the clinic of the hospital treated [illegible] cases who paid the clinic [illegible] visits. These patients, both at the hospital proper and at the clinic, came from every section of the country. The clinic of the hospital is a United States Public Health Service Clinic and is cooperating with the government in its fight for the control of venereal diseases.

The Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital was erected under the auspices of the [illegible] Order B'nai B'rith, and opened its doors on November 1, 1914. It is [illegible] a charitable institution and [illegible] patients. It is national [illegible] patients coming from every [illegible] of the country. In the past six years, the hospital treated 1,869 patients of whom 460 were cured and 843 greatly improved. The clinic in a little more than two years administered treatment to 9,407 patients.

The Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital is provided with a bathhouse, which is supplied with the therapeutic waters from the Hot Springs, which are owned by the United States government. The hospital is thus in a position to be of special service in rheumatic and venereal, malaria and chronic skin diseases.

All treatment at the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital is absolutely free. Applicants are expected, however, to be provided with return transportation and must be recommended by a B'nai B'rith Lodge or some responsible charity organization in the city from which application is made. Application blanks may be obtained from the Secretary Rabbi A. B. Rhine, Hot Springs, Ark.

Address by Alfred A. Benesch at Convention of District Grand Lodge No. 2, Held at St. Louis, Mo., in May, 1921

IT IS unquestionably a mere truism to say that no subject has been more interminably discussed at lodge meetings than that of increasing attendance and stimulating the interest of the members. Those of you who are familiar with the work of other organizations, both fraternal and otherwise, secret or public, need scarcely be told that like conditions prevail there.

This almost universal apathy and the exasperating indifference on the part of the lodge brethren constitute a serious problem, to be sure, because poorly attended meetings are not only a source of discouragement to those who are active in the work, but a deterrent to the enthusiasm which must be engendered in the newly initiated members. Frequently have we heard the so-called "old war horses" complain that they have carried the burden long enough and that unless the younger element evidences more marked activity, they themselves will refuse even to attend meetings. In my own lodge it is, unhappily, a fact that the "old guard," which never failed at sessions years ago, rarely if ever appears nowadays. And it is hardly necessary to remark in this presence that the ceremony of initiation, conducted for a single candidate or for a number of candidates, at a meeting attended by a mere handful of members, and oftentimes in a perfunctory and apathetic manner, does not serve as an inspiration to regular attendance and active participation.

For years unnumbered we have repeatedly and incessantly heard asked the question, "What is the remedy?" Frankly, I do not know. No one, so far as I am aware, has come forward to offer the devoutly prayed for panacea, and I confess that I have become wearied by the many, many suggestions that have been put forth to remedy the evil. Most of them have undoubtedly been experimented with. Unfortunately, none of them has solved the problem. We have not advanced in the efforts looking toward its solution.

And so I have long since adopted the "laissez-faire" attitude. I have become an ultra-conservative stand-patter, so far as the B'nai B'rith is concerned. I do not mean, of course, that I am averse to augmented membership or to rational means of arousing interest in our meetings and in our activities, but I am decidedly opposed to artificial methods of stimulating interest. And my antagonism is based solely upon the experience of the lodges within our own District during the past few years—an unpleasantness to which it would be uncharitable to refer.

At the recent meeting of the Central Conference of American Rabbis held in Washington, Rabbi Leo M. Franklin, the retiring president, spoke in part as follows:

"Unless the entertainment and the dance and the gymnasium facilities which have latterly become a part of the equipment of so many of our synagogues succeed in awakening in the youth and the adults of the community a new and hearty interest in the activities of the synagogue that are essentially religious, they serve small purpose. Too many of our organizations there are that mistake activity for usefulness. And the influence of this mistaken idea of congregational usefulness is pernicious both to the rabbi and to his congregation. What perhaps had tended as much as anything else to undermine the influence of the rabbi is that he has spread out his efforts over too wide a field and so instead of being essentially the religious leader of his people—an expert, as it were, in his special domain—he has devoted himself to all sorts of things that are time consuming and that sap his energies and thus leave him unfit for his primary and greatest task."

What Rabbi Franklin says about the synagogue applies with equal force to the B'nai B'rith lodge. It is essentially a cultural institution and not a place of amusement. It has undertaken a definite obligation, and all its activities should be directed to the fulfilment of that obligation. The fact that the lodge gives an annual outing, or an annual minstrel performance, or an annual vaudeville entertainment is not to be deplored. Wholesome activities and relaxations are welcome adjuncts, but, as in the case of the synagogue, mere activities do not spell usefulness, because, after all, our dominating purpose, to battle against ignorance, immorality and superstition, must not be lost sight of.

Well, then, if it be argued that it is only these diversions which attract the membership in large numbers, I shall, of course, be asked, "What remedy, then, have you to offer? Shall our membership remain static? Shall we do nothing at all to recruit our strength? Shall the lodge be permitted to die of inertia"?

Grand Lodge history records that at the Indianapolis Convention, held in 1912, Brother Max E. Meisel, the retiring President, aroused a storm of protest by advocating in his message, quality rather than quantity membership. I think that even the most ardent protestants at that meeting will now concede that the history of the lodges within our District since the time of the Indianapolis Convention discloses the force and the truth of Brother Meisel's contention. With haphazard increase of membership there has come a lowering of the standard of lodge activities.

I could elaborate upon what I mean, but the limitation of time will not permit. Besides, there will be opportunity for elaboration in the round-table discussion that is to follow. The suggestion which I have to offer is by no means a panacea, nor is it a novel one. It is based squarely upon the principles of the Order.

We cannot too frequently emphasize the fact that ours is an organization "sui generis"—that its recruits are "offered no glittering rewards"—that we desire the enlistment in our cause only of such as are willing to work and to watch and to sacrifice. It is time, therefore, that we have done with the character of applicant who cannot measure up to this standard—that the applicant be made to understand our altruistic purpose before he becomes affiliated with the Order. If he anticipates free entertainments, boxing exhibitions, dancing parties and cabarets as incidents of his membership, let him look elsewhere than to the B'nai B'rith. We must not stultify ourselves, we must not prostitute the "true objects of our holy mission" by pandering to inferior standards. If a Jew is reluctant to affiliate with the Order because he questions whether any benefit will accrue to him therefrom, let him stand aloof. That is where he belongs. Only if he manifests a sincere desire to become a Ben B'rith because he is a Jew, and because by every tradition a Jew ought to be a Ben B'rith, only then should he be welcomed to membership. I have no patience with those brethren who are continually harping upon the necessity of offering inducements. If the fundamental teachings and the concrete accomplishments of the Order do not constitute inducement enough, then poor and unfortunate indeed is the Jew who requires further argument and further solicitation.

Nor have I any patience with the pessimists among us who are constantly predicting the disintegration of the Order and prophesying disaster upon the rocks of inactivity, because, after all, there is work for us to do, work of a compelling nature. Prejudice stalks through the world in garb more terrible and terrifying than ever. The widow, the orphan and the aged, not alone here, but abroad as well, call to us and we must give ear. And I have that confidence in the essential goodness and humanity of my brethren to believe that at all times and in all lands we shall not fail to recruit to our cause members to whom the honor of Israel may safely be entrusted.

Let us get back to fundamentals. Let us revert to caste. What impelled you to join the Order? Was it anything other than the opportunity to be of service? Was it anything more than the call of the Jew to duty—to exemplify the "purest principles of philanthropy, honor and patriotcim"? I hope not, because in the ultimate snalysis, those are the things to be stressed, and if their exposition to the prospective aandidate makes no appeal, be assured he is not of the desired calibre.

And after you have added a new member to your rank, "grapple him to your soul with hoops of steel". Make the ceremony of initiation so dignified and impressive, make your meetings so dignified and impressive, that the B'nai B'rith may mean something—that the precepts which we are admonished to observe may in truth and in fact enable us the better to protect the fair name of Judaism, to hold inviolate the traditional sanctity of the Family home, and to practice throughout our lives "Benevolence, Brotherly Love and Harmony".

The Call to The American Jew

Moses B. Levin

IN February, 1919, just three months after the signing of the armistice I was sent on a special mission to Warsaw. I arrived in the Polish capital on a Friday evening about sunset and, after depositing my musette at the headquarters of the American delegation, I went out into the streets to see that great centre of Polish Jewry. My steps led me I knew not where. Following two aged Jews down the famous Nalowka Strasse I found myself suddenly at the entrance to the Synagogue of the great Cantor Sirota.

I shall never forget those services. There were huddled together within the cold gray walls more than one thousand sombre-clad men, women and children and they prayed with that earnestness, that devoutness and that piety with which only those who really desire their supplications to reach the Almighty can pray. I found, too, that I was the cynosure of many eyes. The reason was clear when I was told later that I was the first American officer to appear there since the armistice.

After the last Kaddish had been said they all crowded about me and plied me with questions. How were these brothers and sisters in Cleveland and this father and mother in Detroit? How were their people in New York, in Chicago, and where not? Does not American Jewry know what is transpiring in Poland? Will not American Jewry help? These and a hundred other questions were fired at me until I felt a large lump rising in my throat. I answered as best I could. American Jewry does know. The American Jew will help, but it will take many months before real peace will come from this chaos.

I left Poland on the same mission and went down through Austria-Hungary. Here I found a fierce fire of hatred against the Jew, smouldering but threatening at any moment to break into the blaze of the pogrom. I found political parties being formed for no other purpose than to fight the Jew. I found one group charging the Jew with bringing on the war and plunging the country into misery. And I found still another group viciously attacking him for his supposed refusal to join in the prosecution of the war. It was the old anomaly of the Jew being attacked from all sides. The pretexts had changed, but the hatred was still the same. It was as Nordau once fittingly remarked, "The Jews are not hated because they have evil qualities; evil qualities are sought for in them because they are hated".

I felt relieved when I left Austria Hungary and went down into Rumania. Here I stayed thirty days, and it was not long before I realized that I had gone from the frying pan into the fire. The leading Jews of Bucharest came to me almost daily and told me of the awful conditions surrounding Jewish life in the provinces. They told me of such tragic episodes and persecutions that to most men would seem beyond human belief. I felt the desire to hear the story from one of the common people, so I went out one day into the main street of Bucarest. I stopped a poor Jew and spoke to him. We conversed in Yiddish and as he talked I noticed that he furtively eyed all passers-by. When a Rumanian would approach he would suddenly cease speaking and watch out of the corner of his eye until he had passed beyond ear-shot. It was a pitiful sight. Here he was talking to an American officer in uniform and still fearful lest a passer-by know that he was speaking Yiddish on the streets of Bucarest. He had the hounded look of one who was living continually under a sword of Damocles.

I sailed for the U. S. A. in May, 1919, confirmed in the belief that unless there was a complete change of heart on the part of the natives of the countries through which I had passed there was not even a dog's chance for the Jew. And I musingly wondered, "Can the leopard change his spots?"

When the war had been on a few years, serious-minded Jews gave studied thought to the awful tragedy confronting our people. The Jew, particularly in Eastern Europe, was being made the puppet of the opposing armies. The Russians would drive hundreds of Jews out of their homes and then the Germans would come and scatter them into new and strange parts. The poles in their occupation of a Jewish town would severely punish the Jew for his supposed loyalty to the foe; and the Germans on capturing the same town would prosecute the Jew for his allegiance to the Poles. The Jew in Germany was fighting the Jew in France; the Jew in Austria, the Jew in England. Brother against brother! And throughout the pale there was heard the terrible hep hep of the pogrom. It was indeed a dark period. It was a crime against humanity. For magnitude and gloom the tragical situation had no parallel in history. It seemed that nothing but ultimate destruction was in store for European Jewry.

Then, on November 2, 1917, like the first rays of the sun breaking through the storm-clouds came Great Britain's famous pronouncement, the Balfour Declaration. In it she pledged the whole might and strength of the Empire to secure for the Jews the opportunity to establish, in Palestine, a national home for the Jewish people. For the first time since the days of Cyrus, for the first time in 2,000 years, a great government had hailed the Jews, as one among the family of nations. It was a day of supreme rejoicing thoughout the whole Jewish world. But it was much more than a Jewish triumph. It was a triumph for civilization and for humanity. It released for mankind, as a great spiritual force, the soul of our people.

All the allied and associated powers at once endorsed Britain's declaration. Woodrow Wilson gave it his heartiest approval. But Palestine was still in the hands of the sick man of Europe, the Turk. Events now moved quickly and on the first day of Channukah, just 2,080 years since Judah Maccabee rescued Jerusalem from the heathens, General Allenby, on foot and head uncovered, marched into the holy city at the head of the British troops. It was, indeed, a world-historic event. In the words of the chief Rabbi of England, "A new future with undreamt of possibilities opened before the eternal city of the eternal people".

After months of deliberation the peace treaty was signed at Versailles. Then came the famous San Remo conference where England was given the mandate over Palestine. The Balfour Declaration became then and there a part of the international law of the civilized world. Britain at once appointed as High Commissioner to Palestine Sir Herbert Samuels, one of England's greatest Jews.

In spite of all the change in the political and legal status of the Jewish people among the nations, the conditions surrounding Jewish life in the countries of Eastern Europe were unimproved. The Versailles Treaty had, to be sure, guaranteed to all people the full and complete protection of life and liberty without distinction of "birth, nationality, language, race or religion". In its practical application, however, the treaty was a mere mockery. The Jew was still loaded with fetters in one country and in another driven about like a wild beast. He was the natural prey of the savage elements which the great war had done so much to unloose in the countries of Central and Eastern Europe. In Poland, for example, there were passed laws strictly at variance not only with the spirit but with the very words of the treaty. Even the express stipulation respecting the Jewish Sabbath was infamously ignored.

The leaders of the World Zionist Organization realized that the time for immediate action had come. They sent into Palestine practical engineers, men with organizing ability along the lines of commerce and industry. They were sent to study the needs of the country and to lay plans for the economic foundation of the Jewish state.

In July, 1920, an extraordinary Zionist conference was held at London attended by delegates elected from the different world federations. Here it was determined that the Keren Hayesod, or Foundation Fund, approximating 100 million dollars must be raised within the next five years. The conference decided that this would be apportioned as follows: Twenty per cent to be immediately applied to land purchase in Palestine through the Jewish National Fund. Of the Other eighty per cent, one-third was to go to the Economic Council for industrial and commercial investments in Palestine, one-third to the same body for the development of public utilities, and the last third to the Palestine Commission for work along the lines of immigration, sanitation and education.

Shortly after the London Conference the President of the Zionist World Organization electrified Jewry with the announcement that Sir Alfred Mond, a minister in the British Cabinet and a genius in economic organization, had accepted the chairmanship of the Economic Council. To secure one of the world's leaders in finance and industry as head of such an important body was indeed a triumph for Zionism. Through it had come back to his people another master mind.

All Zionist activity now centered on the Keren Hayesod drive. To help inaugurate a great appeal to American Jewry for this fund there came to this country a commission, consisting of Professor Chaim Weizmann, the President of the World Zionist Organization, Professor Albert Einstein, one of the world's greatest scientists and founder of the theory of relativity, Ben Zion Mossinsohn, the education head in Palestine, and Menachem Mendel Ussishkin, the fiery leader of the Russian Zionists and chief of the Palestine Commission. In London certain differences had arisen between the leaders of the World Zionist Organization and the leaders of the Zionist Organization of America. It was with the hope, too, of clearing up these differences that President Weizmann and his associates came in April to America. Many conferences were held and at the end of two weeks of extraordinary efforts for peace and united action it seemed that common ground had been reached. Representatives appointed by Dr. Weizmann and Judge Mack, President of the Zionist Organization of America, labored all night Saturday, April 16, preparing a common draft which would embody the important suggestions made in the course of the conference. The draft was submitted to both sides on Sunday morning. At noon like a bolt out of a clear sky came word that negotiations had been terminated. The tragic split between the World Zionist Organization and the leaders of the Zionist Organization of America is now a matter of common knowledge.

It is not my purpose here to go into a discussion of the differences that have arisen. From my knowledge of the facts it seems that peace is even now not impossible. What we need is decisive action and a clear expression of opinion on the part of the rank and file of the Zionist Organization of America. It is unbelievable that the ideals and hopes of a 2,000 year-old longing will, now that they are almost realized, be shattered by the lack of a united leadership. The state craft of Israel has weathered too many storms to go down before this blow. The new commonwealth must and will be firmly established, if every American Jew will do his share in setting the cornerstone.

American Jewry owes its allegiance to this great task for three main reasons. In the first place, there is the fundamental obligation that springs from the fact that we are Jews. "All Israelites are mutually accountable for each other" says the Talmud. A fierce light beats upon the Jew today. It is a grave responsibility to be a son of Israel, a responsibility from which we cannot escape even if we choose to ignore it. The world has set up a peculiar standard for judging the Jew. He is judged not individually but collectively. In the same way will the Jewish state be judged. Its success will reflect glory upon Jewry all over the world; its failure will mean the greatest tragedy in modern Jewish history. Upon every Jew then devolves the duty to see the Jewish state firmly established. In the words of the great Rabbi Hille, "If I do not stand up for myself; who will stand for me? And if not now, when?"

There is, however, a more impelling motive than mere duty and that is the great moral influence which a spiritual centre in Palestine will have upon Jews in the Diaspora. The forces of assimilation have taken an awful toll among the Jews in the countries of political emancipation. And where the Jew has not been fully assimilated he has in many cases lost his identity. It is this loss of identity which Dr. Schechter of sainted memory dreaded even more than pogroms. "It is a tragedy", said the distinguished scholar, "to see a great, ancient people distinguished for its loyalty to its religion and its devotion to its sacred law losing hundreds every day by the mere process of attrition. It is a tragedy to see a language held sacred by all the world in which holy writ was composed and which served as the depository of Israel's greatest and best thoughts doomed to oblivion. It is a tragedy to see the descendants of those who revealed religion to the world and who developed the greatest religious literature in existence almost unfamiliar with real Jewish thought. It is a tragedy to see the Jewish soul wasting away before our very eyes".

Now with the rebirth of Israel's national consciousness will come a revival in Judaism. When we see growing up on the ruins of ancient Palestine a young, vigorous generation strongly imbued with the lasting ideals of our faith will it not be an inspiration to us to retain that spiritual continuity with the past so necessary for a sound realization of Judaism in our own lives? The great majority of Jews of today will even after the establishment of the Jewish state, continue to live where they now are praying and working in absolute loyalty for the land of their birth or adoption and ever finding their peace and happiness in its progress and welfare. Politically and economically the Jewish state will move along lines drawn by local circumstances, and the path it takes will have no direct bearing on the position and problems of the Jew in the Diaspora. But in the realm of culture, in ideas, in religion and in ethics it will exert a profound influence upon Jews all over the world. To it they will turn for a truer understanding of what Judaism really is. From it will come a deeper insight into their glorious past; a clearer vision of their national future. In short, the new state will be a "spiritual centre" quickening the moral consciousness of the Jew in the Diaspora and instilling in him a healthy pride of race. It will unite by a spiritual bond the Jewish communities in all parts of the world. It will transmit through them its message to mankind.

This brings me to the final and most impelling motive for the support of the Jewish state and that is the influence it will exert not upon the Jew alone but upon the whole civilized race. The world is torn and bleeding today with sectional strife and international animosities. The fire of radicalism has blazed a pathway through many countries and has shaken the very faith of man in his institutions. Now more than ever before do we need the inspiration of the past to strengthen the hands of those who would bring peace out of this awful chaos. It is along this line that the Jewish state will serve its greatest purpose.

Let us look upon history. The last resurrection of the Jewish nation on its own soil took place about two thousand years ago. Cyrus, king of Syria, issued a proclamation granting permission to the Jewish exiles in Babylon to return to the land of their fathers. All told, but 42,000 men, women and children availed themselves of the opportunity and followed Ezra back to the Holy Land. But what a noble contribution did this handful of Zionists make to civilization! They collected and edited the Prophets; they wrote some of the fairest portions of the scriptures; they formed the canon of the Bible and they gave to the world its monotheistic religions. All this a small band of pioneers passed on to posterity. It was the monumental work not of a whole people but of a mere remnant of the Jewish Nation resurrected on its own soil.

Now when we bring into Palestine all that is best of the civilization of the East and the civilization of the West; when we carry back to the Holy Land all that is best of the culture of the old and the culture of the new world; when we combine these with native Jewish genius will not the Hebrew founts of creative energy be reopened? Will we not print a new chapter in the annals of human progress? Will we not see the realization of that great prophetic vision "From Zion shall go forth the law and the word of God from Jerusalem"?

Palestine, said one writer, will not be merely a highway of commerce; it will be a meeting-place of ideas and civilizations. The Hebrew university on the Mount of Olives reinterpreting the ideas of the prophets in modern terms will draw students from the East and the West alike and send them back to their homes broadened by intercourse with many different types and deepened by contact with Israel's great spiritual truths. The Jewish commonwealth lying across the old world and the new will bridge that age long gulf between the East and West and bring back a sense of real human brotherhood between their peoples. Through the restoration of Israel to Palestine may come the reestablishment of the Kingdom of God upon earth when

"Nations shall beat their swords into ploughshares

And their spears into pruning hooks;

Nation shall not lift up sword against nation

Neither shall they learn war any more".

Jewry has fought a noble fight. Today Zionism is no longer an ideal; it is a fact. As such it would seem to be beyond the controversial stage. But, sad to say, that is not the case. There are a certain number of Jews in both Europe and America who declare themselves anti-Zionists on the ground that they are not "Nationalist, but religious Jews". This, in spite of the fact that throughout the Bible which is accepted by all peoples as the basis of religious thought—from the covenant with Abraham to the death of Moses—there appears again and again the promise of the ultimate restoration of Israel to the Holy Land. In vain do these Jews call themselves religious and not nationalistic. For in the words of Nahum Sokolow, "the Jewish religion cannot be separated from nationalism, unless another Bible is invented". No less an authority than Saadyah (Gaon) the eminent religious philosopher and exegete of the tenth century said, "Israel is a nation by reason only of his religion". Again there is a school of Jewish thought in America that would escape its obligation to Zionism on the ground that its Judaism is not nationalistic but "Prophetic Judaism". Emanating from a centre that has produced many religious leaders for American Jewry, coming from men who are profound scholars and well-versed in prophetic lore the statement is indeed puzzling. For what do all the prophets teach if not the reestablishment of the Jewish State? From Amos to Zechariah, through the many years of prophetic leadership, there is not a more oft recurring vision than that which foresees Israel's restoration as a nation. To attempt to explain this away by sophistry is hardly becoming such a distinguished group of religious teachers.

There is, however, an opposition to Zionism that comes not from the ranks of the cultured but from a group of Chauvinists, who loudly bewail the inconsistency between loyalty to America and loyalty to Zion. Throughout the war and since the armistice too, there has been much loose talk in this country about 100 per cent Americanism. And in many cases it has come from the mouths of those who have not the slightest idea of what this great democracy stands for.

"America's fundamental law", said Justice Brandeis, "seeks to make real the brotherhood of man". That brotherhood became the Jewish fundamental law over 2000 years ago. A story is told of a would-be proselyte who came to Rabbi Hillel (20 B. C. to 10 C. E.) and scornfully asked, "Tell me the essence of Judaism while I stand upon one foot". And the great Hillel calmly answered, "What thou wouldest not that thy neighbor should do unto thee do not unto him". "This," said Hillel, "is the whole Jewish law; the rest is mere commentary". Two thousand years ago while the nations about them were still barbarians, the Jews wrote into their sacred Torah the sublime injunction, 'Let there be one law and one system of justice for the Jewish citizen and for the stranger among you'. Is not this the very soul of brotherhood? America's striving in the twentieth century is for [illegible]. This too, has been the [illegible] cry through the ages. [illegible] were fanatics in the cause of [illegible], loudly proclaiming that if [illegible] not just, or capable of becoming [illegible] better be destroyed—a view [illegible] utterly wrong led to deeds of heroism and awakened the slumbering forces of humanity. Finally America stands for equality of liberty. Zionism would bring that liberty particularly to those Jews in the hell-ridden countries of Eastern Europe, upon whom the sun of liberty has never shone. And so when we examine the fundamentals of Americanism and Zionism we find them the same. Loyalty to Zion comes loyalty to the same principles that underlie this great democracy. There is no inconsistency between Zionism and Americanism. Rather may we say that the American Jew who is not a Zionist is not a good American citizen, for it is only by being loyal to his own people that he can really develop the best that is in him and give to this country the benefit of his great heritage.

The Jew is faced today with the most tremendous problem in his history. With more than half of the Jewry of the world on the brink of starvation, with thousands of our faith homeless and penniless, the Jew is asked to raise 100 million dollars, the foundation fund of the Jewish state. The mere mention of the sum staggers the imagination. But in the words of a great unknown poet:

"We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;

We have hard work to do and loads to lift.

Shun not the struggle; face it—

'Tis God's gift".

Massed in the pales of Eastern Europe, huddled in the ports of the Mediterranean and Black Sea are thousands of Jewish refugees, men, women and children, yearning for the opportunity to return to the Holy Land, where they can live a holy life, unharrassed by the ravages of assimilation and unmenaced by pogroms. Their eyes turn pleadingly toward our shores where the leaders of the World Zionist Organization have come to rouse the Jew of America to his tremendous task. Palestine must be made ready. And the American Jew must and will pay the cost of the foundation work in one of two ways.

He can sit back and wait until it becomes necessary to employ degrading charity. He can come forward then and support the "Chaluzim" of Palestine in hospital wards, in tubercular and malaria camps; or he can answer the call of the Keren Hayesod promptly and liberally, and know that his money is going to help those pioneers to a fair start. He can sit back and wait until constructive foundation work is almost impossible, or he can come forward now, back the Keren Hayesod with his full resources and with every ounce of energy in his power, and know that he is helping to set firmly the cornerstone of the Jewish state. The one way will lead to individual and racial degeneracy; the other will make for efficiency, for a strong commonwealth and for a staunch Jewish citizenry. The Jew of America will pay the cost in one of these two ways. It is up to him. Which will he choose?

BLOOD LIBEL EPIDEMICS.

The Passover season brought many blood libel accusations in various parts of Europe. In Lithuania several such charges were brought up just before Passover. At Kapishok, the Jewish residents were in great danger on account of the preparations for a pogrom, but fortunately the alleged "missing boy" returned home in time. A similar panic reigned among the Jews of Pilwishki, but there, too, the libel was disproved.

In the Chamber of Deputies of the Greek Parliament, a Deputy made a reference to the disturbances in Salonika caused by the disappearance of a Christian child. In reply, M. Gounaris, the Prime Minister, took occasion to characterize all such libels as calumnies and as a disgrace to civilization. He said that those responsible for the circulation of the libel would be severely dealt with. He pointed out that the fact that these accusations had been made simultaneously in Salonika, Adrianople and Smyrna was a clear proof that they were the work of the enemies of Greece.

In Smyrna a statement was published in one of the newspapers that a Jew had been arrested for attempting to abduct a five-year-old Greek child. When the attention of the Chief of Police was called to this statement, he authorized the publication in all the newspapers of Smyrna and Thrace of a categorical denial of what he described as a monstrous calumny.

CURRENT EVENTS.

(Continued from page 4).

which gives to foreign students the same rights as to Austrians, a matter of great importance to Jewish students excluded from Polish and Hungarian universities, and a praiseworthy liberality, considering that out of 11,229 students 5,653 are foreigners. The fees which are the same for foreigners as for natives were raised in the medical department from 400 crowns to 6,510 (a little over $10.00), still a ridiculously low sum from an American point of view but a fortune for a Vienna student.

Old and New Hungary.

An anonymous author published in Presburg, now Bratislava, a pamphlet, entitled "Die Judenfrage in der Slovakei". He dishes out the posthumous wisdom that the Jews of northwestern Hungary are responsible for the bitter animosity of the Slovaks because during the Magyar regime they had supported the Magyar element. In advocating that the Jews become Slovaks of the Mosaic persuasion he overlooks the fact this would not help them any more than their Magyar sympathies helped them in former years and would expose them to the same animosity in the Magyar, German and Ruthenian sections of the Czecho-Slovak republic. The experience of the Jews in the present Hungary is certainly an object lesson. The new premier, count Bethlen, in his inaugural address, delivered April 19, made his bow before civilized Europe with a few vague remarks about liberty and democracy, but while he said that a Christian policy can not oppose liberty, he underscored this "Christian policy" of his predecessor Teleki which was compatible with murder and loot, tolerated by the government, and spoke of the fight against the "destructive peril" without a word of condemnation for the atrocities committed by men, wearing the uniform of the republic. Of the latter we have a few specimens from the time antecedent to count Bethlen's appointment. On March 26, raids were made on restaurants, in Budapest. Jewish patrons were arrested without warrant and cruelly beaten, although they offered no resistance and had committed no offense, as indeed they were discharged on the following day. A Christian who saw such outrages from his window called them a disgrace with the consequence that he too was beaten and arrested under the charge of sedition. Dr. Rohony, assistant at the obstetrical clinic and a Magyar, who left the clinic late in the evening, was assaulted by rowdies and stabbed because he was taken for a Jew. The city council of Budapest dismissed all Jewish principals, which evidently is a specimen of the Christian policy announced by count Bethlen, and according to latest advices Rabbi Immanuel Loew, a representative of Magyarization among the Jews, is still held in custody without trial on the charge of a supposed unpatriotic sentiment expressed more than a year ago.

From the Rabbinical World.

The orthodox press continues to lament the disregard of time-honored traditions shown in the appointment of Dr. Samuel Poznanski as chief rabbi of Warsaw. Poznanski, who is one of the world's leading Jewish scholars and recognized as a perhaps unexcelled authority on mediaeval rabbinic literature, is not known as a man of radical or even reform tendencies, and the opposition to him can only be based on the unfortunate fact that he has a sound academic training, and has until now officiated in a synagogue which has an organ, which, by the way, is not used on the Sabbath. "Der Israelit" indignantly deplores the departure from "the sacred tradition of centuries to withhold the title of chief rabbi of Warsaw as a tribute of honor to the heroes of former ages". The paper, which stands for the authenticity of tradition, has furnished a strong weapon to critics. The congregation of Warsaw is not centuries old. It dates from the occupation of the city by the Prussian army in 1794 when Jews were first permitted to settle there. Rabbinic sources inform us that in 1700 the body of a Jew who died on a Sabbath had to be transported on the same day because there was no cemetery in Warsaw (Jahrbuch der Jued. Lit. Gesellschaft, XI, 162), and the tombstone inscriptions in the Warsaw cemetery show that Rabbi Zalman Posen who died in 1839 is called Ab Bet Din (chief rabbi), while Berisch Meisels, known also as member of the first Austrian Reichstag who died in 1870, is said to "have worn the crown of the rabbinate" (Yewnin, Nahalat Olamim, p. 20 and 56, Warsaw, 1882). The appointment is probably due to the feeling of the Jewish community in the Polish capital that it has to be represented by a man of recognized culture.

The Breslau Seminary which, within a few months, lost two of its teachers, professors Brann and Horovitz, announces the appointment of Israel Rabin, until now lecturer in rabbinics in the universities of Frankfort and Giessen, and S. H. M. argulies, Chief rabbi of Florence. It seems strange that the latter, who is 63 years old, and has held the position of Florence for more than thirty years, where he also was at the head of the rabbinical seminary, should leave it now, unless the war should also in Italy have created a chauvinist sentiment which Margulies, who is a native of Galicia, found unpleasant. The Breslau institution, with its proud record of 67 years, and the memories of Frankel, Graetz and so many other Jewish scholars of first magnitude is still in a sad plight financially. It appeals for life members who shall contribute 1000 marks (now less than $20.00), a splendid opportunity for American friends of Jewish learning.

Personal Notes.

It is a remarkable coincident that the new viceroy of India, Lord Reading, should have been greeted on his arrival in Bombay by a Jewish president of the corporation, Sir Sassoon David, related to the famous house of Sassoon. The latter recently lost by death, Mrs. Mozelle Ezra of London, the daughter of Albert Sasoon. A pious Jewess she remembered in her will educational and religious institutions in Bagdad, Calcutta and Jerusalem. In the latter city she had during her life time maintained a "Yeshibah". In Munich died Edward Jaffe, professor of political economy and the first minister of justice in the Bavarian republic. The radical element of Yiddish authors in America lost a devoted worker in Dr. Hillel Solotaroff, April 30, who had made a name for himself as publicist, playwright and novelist.

NEWS FROM LONDON.

(Continued from page 7).

conference. It is very curious that nobody but The Morning Post observed this predominating Jewish influence. Dealing with the matter in a speech in the House of Commons on May 5, Mr. Lloyd George said: "There are some people who have always got Jews on the brain. They sing Jewish psalms on Sunday and for the rest of the week they are pronouncing Jewish pogroms". Another sally of the Prime Minister recently is also worthy of note. A number of dear old gentlemen, the Earl of Northumberland at their head, have come to the conclusion that the British Empire is in danger by reason of the industrial and other unrest in the world. They are particularly terrified of Bolsheviks. The very word strikes terror into their ancient hearts. They appear to be nervy. They certainly do not understand the nature of the British Empire. It should be noted that the Duke of Northumberland and his friends are either professed or secret anti-Semites. They tend to mix up Jews and Bolsheviks, which only shows that their thinking is shallow. So great is their fear of the Bolshevik bogey that they went to the Prime Minister to ask him to relieve them and England of their fantastic fears. His reply was that he preferred to trust the good sense of the average British citizen, and especially of the average British workman, who would know how to take care of himself in face of this Bolshevik propaganda. "Are we then to wait and see?" inguired one of this brave band, with tears in his eyes. "No," replied the Prime Minister, "Watch and pray!" We believe that sturdy common sense of this kind will yet carry the day in all countries and allow an opportunity for Jewish ideals to be expressed in public life.

ICA REPRESENTATIVE TOURS CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, BESSARABIA AND ROUMANIA.

(Warsaw, Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)

Mr. Janofsky, the Ica representative, has left this city to investigate conditions of Ukrainian refugees in Czecho-Slovakia, Roumania and Bessarabia.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

SPRINGFIELD LODGE ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

The formation of a women's auxiliary, initiation of 150 candidates at Apollo Hall, bestowal of a gold engraved life membership on Henry Lasker, retiring president of District No. 1, the presentation of a large clock to Bro. and Mrs. Lasker, and a gold watch charm engraved with the insignia of the Order to Bro. Frederick Rabinowitz, Past President, at the tenth anniversary banquet held at the Hotel Kimball, marked the celebration of the birthday of Springfield Lodge. Able speeches dealing with present-day Jews and Jewry were delivered, notably by John Spargo, eminent Socialist writer, and Leonard Obermeyer, former deputy attorney-general of New York.

The promotion of the mental and moral well-being of the Jew and the teaching of patriotism by inculcating these things in the hearts of the little ones were declared by Bro. Obermeyer to be the proofs for the continuation of the Order. Three hundred and fifty persons listened to the ten addresses of the evening. The banquet hall was gayly festooned and draped with the American tricolor, and the words "Welcome, Independent Order B'nai B'rith" shone forth in electric fixtures.

The class of one hundred candidates and fifty women, forming the nucleus of the new auxiliary, were initiated at Apollo Hall. Bro. Oscar Mikola drilled the degree teams, and Mrs. Rose Palmer was elected the first President of the Auxiliary.

There are sixteen women in the degree team, and is the only auxiliary in the country claiming a degree team of its own.

Welcomed by Mayor at Reception.

The evening ceremonies opened with a reception and banquet at the Hotel Kimball. The invocation was given by Rev. Dr. Samuel Price, and Bro. I. H. Hurowitz was toastmaster. Mayor Edwin F. Leonard welcomed the members on behalf of the city and gave them praise for the war-work and the present help toward the starving people of Europe and Asia. Bro. Charles Hartman of New York, member of the Executive Committee, extended invitation to the women for membership and hoped for a glorious future for the Order.

Judge A. K. Cohen of Boston, Past President of District No. 1, commented favorably on the growth of the lodge He viewed the situation from the angle of the Jew as a citizen of the United States, and the "melting pot" which unified all peoples under a common flag and democracy. Joseph H. Ullman, styled the "Father of Springfield Lodge," reviewed the history of the ten years existence of the lodge from the growth of 23 men to 500 members today.

Gifts to Henry Lasker.

Bro. Nathan E. Goldstein, President spoke on the maturing of the lodge. Bro. Goldstein made the presentation of the life membership, engraved in gold, to Brother Lasker and the large clock to Brother and Mrs. Lasker.

In thanking his brethren for the tokens, Mr. Lasker recalled the fifth anniversary of the lodge when Calvin Coolidge, then Lieutenant-Governor, spoke. In a song given on that occasion, the now Vice-President was referred to as leading the nation, Bro. Lasker said. Bro. Max Levy, Secretary of District No. 1, told of the wonderful growth of lodges in the district under the regime of Bro. Lasker. Dr. Myron Wessler made the presentation of a gold watch charm to Bro. Frederick Rabinovitz, Past President of the lodge.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

On Sunday, June 5, an open meeting was held under the auspices of Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, of Youngstown, Ohio. A fine program was arranged. An outing is being arranged by the Lodge for July 17 with a program of various athletic sports and games.

New Castle Lodge has accepted a challenge for a baseball game which will soon take place.

AMOS LODGE, BOSTON, MASS.

On Sunday, May 8, Brother Lucius L. Solomons of San Francisco, First Vice-President of the Constitution Grand Lodge, addressed the members of Amos Lodge, their family and friends, at Temple Ohabei Shalom. Brother Solomons stands out prominently as one of the best and most gifted orators in American Jewry. Needless, therefore, to express how enthusiastically his remarks were received. Brother Cantor Wolkowich furnished a beautiful musical program.

On May 9 the entire meeting was devoted to a smoker and entertainment. No charge was made and all members enjoyed the privilege of a very fine evening.

On May 23 the evening's meeting consisted of regular and special matters, such as reports of the convention delegates, report of Intellectual Advancement Committee, Social Service Committee, and Big Brother Movement Committee. Five minute talks were made by prominent members of Amos Lodge.

At a recent meeting, Rabbi Harry Halperin of Brooklyn, N. Y., the youngest orthodox rabbi in this country, addressed the members of Amos Lodge and their ladies' auxiliary. Many members were initiated and Rabbi Halperin's address was most timely.

Great credit is due the new degree team under the able leadership of Brother Dr. Moses Chertok. The musical part of the program, vocal and instrumental, in charge of Brother Edelman, added greatly to the effect and was commented on most favorably by all present.

Delegates returning from the annual convention of District No. 1 brought encouraging and enthusiastic reports, Amos Lodge having been praised and exalted at the Convention. That which is most worthy of note is that the membership now reaches over 1,700.

Brothers Judge A. K. Cohen, Sol Scheinfeld and Philip N. Winkler were elected on the General Committee.

Amos Lodge has established a prize for the Harvard Menorah Society which takes the place of the prize annually donated by the late Jacob H. Schiff.

A liberal donation was voted to the Hale House Summer Camps and an appeal is being made for all members to contribute $1.00 towards the fund. The Entertainment Committee is busy arranging an outing for members and friends at Villa Napoli, Mantasket. Athletic games, dancing and other amusements are being provided for.

[illegible] fifty members pledged themselves to become Big Brothers to little brothers in connection with the Big Brotherhood Association in Boston.

The Baby Hygiene Association is progressing and a donation has been given to help care for the babies during the summer.

At the May 23 meeting, memorial services were held for all members who departed during the year. Rabbi David Shohet and Cantor Brodsky of Temple Beth El officiated. Both were inspiring and edifying. Music was arranged by Brother Fred Phillips.

Teams have been organized by the lodge to secure funds for the adoption of twenty-five war orphans.

MINNEAPOLIS LODGE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Minneapolis Lodge is making a strenuous drive for contributions to aid in the good work that they are doing for "hospital happiness". Moving-picture programs are being furnished to the Old Asbury Hospital, Minneapolis General Hospital and the University Hospital. The pictures have been exceptionally good and are discussed by the patients for days afterwards.

The inmates of the hospitals are incurable cases and the moving pictures serve as wonderful diversion.

Dr. S. N. Deinard will soon initiate a series of informative public meetings. A downtown theatre has been secured and this promises to be the worthiest instructive movement in Minneapolis' history.

One hundred sixty youngsters will be made happy at the Boys' Camp, which is leased by the lodge on the beautiful tract on North Arm of Lake Minnetonka. Chairman David Phillips promises to have the camp equipped and operating under expert supervision by June 15.

TOLEDO LODGE, TOLEDO, OHIO

One of the most interesting meetings of Toledo Lodge occurred when Prof. H. E. Williams, Principal of the Woodward Tech. High School, delivered an address on "The Truth about Toledo Boys". At this meeting, ladies and non-members attended, and over 300 benefited by Prof. Williams' sermon.

Toledo Lodge baseball team, which so consistently defeated Pisgah Lodge of Detroit for many years, hereby challenges a game with any B'nai B'rith baseball team for any amount of money, winnings to be donated to a B'nai B'rith institution.

The meeting of May 12 of Toledo Lodge was set aside for a memorial service, when the following resolution was adopted:

"With humble thankfulness, we lift up our hearts to the Almighty, the Guardian of Israel, "who sleepeth not nor slumbereth", that he has watched over us during the past year. Yet his messenger that bringeth eternal rest and peace has not been absent from our ranks and midst, and we are called upon to record the death of the following brothers:

Meyer Zimmerman, who died June 20, 1920.

Leopold H. Louis, who died July 22, 1920.

Leo Klafter, who died November 25, 1920.

Simon Berman, who died February 22, 1921.

The Order has established an annual Memorial Day and it is a beautiful custom to pause and pay a tribute of respect to the memory of our brothers who have passed to their eternal abode. It is fitting and worthy that these members be memorialized by this fraternity, and it speaks well for our Order that it has shown this sentiment and enjoined this loving deed. The saddest experience of life is the hour when our cherished ones are taken from us, and we yearn even tonight for the touch of the vanished hand, for the sound of the voice that is still.

Those who have left us were worthy members of our Order, and it is a rare privilege of brotherly love to meet here in this solemn and affectionate assembly. We acknowledge the will of God and reverently yield to the decrees of his wisdom and justice.

"We live in deeds not years,
In thoughts, not breaths,
In feelings, not in figures on a dial;
We should count time by heart throbs,
He most lives who thinks most,
Feels the noblest, acts the best".

Thus have our deceased brothers lived, and thus they continue to live in our memories. Therein shall their families find their comfort and consolation in their inexpressible loss. Blessed are the departed whose memory is perpetuated by the high regard of their fellowmen. We are thankful for their brotherhood and in this moment, consecrated to their memory, we rededicate our noblest efforts to the larger service of humanity. Death never ends the influence of a noble character but increases the responsibility of those who are left behind, and we offer sincere thanksgiving to the Supreme Maker for the gifts of their lives during the years that we enjoyed their fellowship and services. In the spirit of our fathers of old, we say "The Lord hath given, the Lord hath taken away. Praised be the name of the Lord".

GOLDEN GATE LODGE, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

On Wednesday, June 1, a large class of candidates was initiated by the Degree Team of Golden Gate Lodge.

On Wednesday, June 15, an important business meeting was held and activities for the season were discussed. Everything has been arranged for the big annual picnic on Sunday, July 24, at East Shore Park. From all indications, this promises to outshine any other affair ever given by the lodge in previous years. Brother Leo Harris has special charge of arrangements. A very fine program is being arranged for this affair and as the attendance is usually more than 5,000, no doubt many of the brothers will aim to patronize the program, which will in turn redound to the financial success of the affair and of the lodge.

CELEBRATION BY COVENANT LODGE.

Precedents of the Order were shattered Sunday evening, May 1, at the Spalding Hotel, Duluth, Minn., when a life membership was presented to Bernard Silberstein as a tribute to his fiftieth anniversary of membership in the Order.

Three hundred Jewish residents of Duluth and vicinity met to extol the honorary guest and to hear Bro. Henry Monsky, of Omaha, Neb., Vice-President of the District Grand Lodge, deliver the principal address.

For the first time in the history of the largest representative Jewish association in the world, a member was singled out to have a life honorary membership conferred on him. Brother Silberstein served as Commissioner of Public Safety for four years, having been elected in April, 1915.

Sixty candidates were initiated at a special afternoon program in which the initiatory rites were conferred by Mr. Monsky. Responding on behalf of the candidates, W. M. Abrahamson spoke briefly of the responsibility of accepting the obligations of the Order.

Tolerance Today.

In his evening address, which followed a dinner, Mr. Monsky developed as his theme the phase of intolerance as affecting the Jew today. "The B'nai B'rith," he said, "furnishes a common meeting ground where the pious and non-pious Jew may meet for their mutual advancement. If we would seek the toleration of all creeds, we must learn to tolerate all creeds".

Sketching the philanthropic work of the Order in its support of various orphan homes and other charitable institutions, the speaker then touched on the anti-defamation scope of the work of the lodge. It was in connection with this phase that he spoke of the need for tolerance and the evils of intolerance.

Produce Happiness.

"The greatest happiness man can achieve", he said, "is to produce happiness in lives of others. Mr. Silberstein has been endowed with great ability, great wealth and great happiness. In these respects, God has made him a trustee for the dissemination of happiness and he has distinguished himself nobly".

At the conclusion of his address, Mr. Monsky was applauded for several minutes, being obliged to acknowledge the ovation repeatedly. Dancing followed the program.

Fifty years ago Mr. Silberstein joined Detroit Lodge prior to his departure for Duluth. Since then he has been an active member in the local Order. In 1908 he served as President.

Covenant degree team, which conducted the afternoon initiatory ceremonial, is composed of A. B. Kapplin, President; Charles D. Oreckovsky, Monitor; D. P. Fieldman, Vice-President; Dave Miller, Treasurer; Harry Gordon, Assistant Monitor.

Patriotic Singing.

Following the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner", Rabbi Israel Lebendiger delivered the evening prayer, after which a banquet was served.

The program was opened by S. B. Copilowish, President of Duluth Lodge and Charles D. Oreckovsky served as toastmaster.

Mr. Oreckovsky commented at length on the splendid work of A. B. Kapplin, chairman of the Jubilee Committee. Mr. Kapplin, responding, paid a remarkable tribute to Mr. Silberstein and in concluding presented the life membership. Mr. Silberstein, in accepting the testimonial, spoke briefly, apparently affected by the unprecedented tribute. Mr. Monsky's address concluded the program.

Assisting Bro. Kapplin on the Jubilee Committee were D. P. Fieldman, Ben Miller, Samuel Nides, S. B. Copilowish, Jesse Cohen and C. D. Oreckovsky. A pleasing feature of the event was "The Jew-Bull-EE", a miniature newspaper edited by Bros. Kapplin and Nides.

GULF LODGE, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A regular meeting of Gulf Lodge, No. 221, was held on Thursday evening, May 26. An interesting discussion by the committee on good and welfare of the lodge was held and a plan of action for the balance of the year acted upon.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

RAMAH LODGE, CHICAGO.

A general meeting of the lodge was held at the Covenant Club on the evening of June 6. The meeting was attended by a large number of members and visiting brothers. A class of twenty candidates was initiated by the degree team of the lodge and a number of new applications were presented.

The lodge was honored by the presence of the President, Brother Adolf Kraus, Brother Philip Stein, member of the Executive Committee of the Order, and a number of Past Presidents of the District Grand Lodge.

Brother Sidney G. Kusworm of Dayton, Ohio, member of the Executive Committee of the Order representing District No. 2, was the guest of honor. He delivered an address on the work of the Order, especially emphasizing its activities on the line of Social Service and the efforts of the Anti-Defamation League to counteract as far as possible the Anti-Semitic propaganda carried on in this country.

Brother Kusworm spoke for over an hour and during his entire address he had the closest attention of the audience. At the conclusion of his address, the audience demonstrated its approval by rising to their feet and applauding.

Brother Kraus gave a brief talk and was followed by the Secretary, Brother A. B. Seelenfreund, who addressed the lodge, expressing his thanks for their presence to bid him Godspeed upon his journey abroad, for the purpose of investigating the condition of the Jews throughout the war-stricken countries, visiting the various institutions of the Order located throughout Europe, and to make arrangements for the care of a large number of Jewish war orphans by the Order. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served and dancing was indulged in.

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

"Every Man Get a Man" is the slogan adopted by the Propaganda Committee of Pisgah Lodge, No. 34, of Detroit, Michigan, for a new campaign for members which it intends to inaugurate shortly.

The Intellectual Advancement Committee of the lodge has planned a series of debates between the members of the lodge, and the first debate was staged between Brothers Bernbaum and Rhodes, which proved to be a huge success both from the standpoint of attendance and merits of discussion.

To eliminate waste of time and delay, Pisgah Lodge proposes to inaugurate a budget system. The B'nai B'rith Council, representing all the Michigan lodges has this project under advisement and will soon make its recommendation to the lodges.

The lodge has also arranged for the election of a lodge council to consist of 15 members inclusive of the officers of the lodge.

At the meeting of the lodge held on April 18, 1921, Judge Ormand F. Hunt delivered an address on the subject, "Democracy—What It Is."

The Social Service Committee of the lodge has successfully lived up to the name which it bears. It has endeavored to be of service to the sick, the needy and unfortunate of the community. Through its efforts, many members of the lodge have taken a great interest in the soldiers of our faith at Fort Wayne and invited the boys to their homes on Sundays. Under its auspices, Passover services and a community seder were held at the B'nai B'rith clubrooms on April 22, at which boys in uniform were the special guests of honor of the lodge.

The Entertainment Committee of the lodge has completed arrangements for the annual excursion of the members of Pisgah Lodge at Sugar Island in conjunction with Toledo Lodge, of Toledo, Ohio. The program will include the annual baseball game and, in addition, races and contests of all sorts for children and adults.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

On Tuesday evening, May 31, Mahoning Lodge, No. 339, of Youngstown, Ohio, gave a May carnival and dance at [illegible] Park. A royal time was enjoyed by the large number of members and their friends who were present.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT ELIZABETH, N. J.

The event of the season in Elizabeth, N. J., occurred when the new lodge, David Kaufman, was instituted on Sunday, May 8, and seventy-five representative men of the city were initiated.

President of the District David Bortin, assisted by Ben J. Sugarman, member of the General Committee and Edward Hemple, instituted the lodge. Rabbi Chas. I. Hoffman, Past President of District Grand Lodge No. 3, opened the meeting and the initiatory team consisting of Brothers Bortin, Hemple and Emil Frankl, officiated. Brother Frankl is the Secretary of Ezekiel Lodge, No. 90, of Newark, N. J.

The following officers were installed and the honor of installing the officers was bestowed upon Brother Ben Sugarman, member of the General Committee from Ezekiel Lodge: Rev. Dr. Nathan Blechman, President; Harry Kessler, Vice-President; Louis Beinfeld, Secretary; Emanuel Levy, Treasurer; David Kaufman, Monitor; Dr. H. A. Paskow, Assistant Monitor; Henry Siegel, Warden; Wm. Davinos, Guardian; and Sigmund Welt, Barnett Cohen and Jacob Klar, Trustees.

Splendid addresses were delivered by the President of Ezekiel Lodge, Brother Jacob Fischel; President of the Women's Auxiliary, Mrs. Chas. A. Ruben; Brothers Bortin, Sugarman and Hemple.

Judge A. David responded with well chosen remarks for the community of Elizabeth, wishing the Order continued success and expressing anticipation of wonderful achievements for David Kaufman Lodge.

A beautiful musical program was rendered by Cantor Friedman of New York City, consisting of secular, religious and modern music, closing the first and beautiful night of David Kaufman Lodge.

EZEKIEL LODGE, NEWARK, N. J.

Various Events.

On Wednesday, May 11, a large class of candidates was initiated and reports indicate that the lodge will be busy initiating new members for the remainder of the season judging from the large list of petitions that were received. A prominent speaker addressed the candidates and a very pleasant evening was spent by all.

At the last meeting of the lodge in May, President Fischel dispatched with the regular business of the meeting. Brother Milton Adler, chairman of the Propaganda Committee, conducted the evening's program. Brother Charles Ruben spoke on the significance of the Passover, laying special stress upon the symbolisms—Purity, Monotheism and Sacredness of the Home and Brotherhood. Dr. Leon Mones followed with remarks on the criticisms of the Bible, interspersing his talk with stories most amusing, creating much laughter in the audience.

With remarks from Brother Nathan Kussy and the ladies, the meeting closed, dancing following.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

The ladies are intensely active and assist in making the programs of Ezekiel Lodge meetings very successful. The long-planned for operetta, under the masterful direction of Miss Mabel Baldwin, is over, leaving pleasant memories behind. Fifteen hundred members and friends attended the operetta and hints were heard in their direction that the proceeds may go to the Ezekiel Building Fund.

Mrs. Charles Ruben is President of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

On Sunday evening, May 22, Ezekiel Lodge held memorial services in honor of the departed members. The large attendance testified to the memory of friends and relatives who have passed to the great Beyond. Rev. Dr. Alexander Lyons, Rabbi of Temple Beth Elohim, delivered the memorial address and the memorial prayer and kaddish was said by Rabbi Julius Silberfeld and closing prayer and benediction by Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein. Several vocal solos and musical numbers by the choir were rendered.

On May 26 the business of the regular meeting was disposed of rapidly and the evening was given over to the ladies, who had arranged an entertainment and card party. Beautiful prizes were given to the winners.

HAR SINAI LODGE, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Har Sinai Lodge, No. 8, I. O. B. B., the largest lodge of any Jewish organization in the city of Philadelphia, held a regular meeting on Wednesday evening, May 18, at the Hotel Majestic, when over 400 members were present and a class of 100 candidates was initiated by the degree team, so that the membership of the lodge now totals 1,200. A number of distinguished guests were present at this meeting and addresses were delivered by Rabbi Isador Rosenthal, of Lancaster, Pa., Past President of District Grand Lodge No. 3, and by Julius I. Peiser, of Washington, D. C., Past President of District Grand Lodge No. 5.

The sum of $250 was subscribed to the Federation of Jewish Charities as its donation to the present drive in addition to the regular subscription that the lodge is paying annually.

The enthusiasm of the members of the lodge is so apparent that there can be no question that within a few months the lodge will fulfill its ambition to become the leading Jewish lodge of any organization in the United States.

Arrangements are being made for an elaborate meeting to be held in the month of June just preceding the convention of District Grand Lodge No. 3 which will be held in Erie on June 26.

The degree team of the lodge is now recognized as being the best degree team of any lodge in the District, and invitations are being constantly received for them to visit other lodges and initiate their candidates.

Har Sinai Lodge is setting the pace for District No. 3, and there can be no question that their enthusiasm will have a beneficial effect upon the entire District.

B'NAI B'RITH OF CLEVELAND.

On May 21, Cleveland Lodge presented two productions before a large audience. "The Maker of Dreams", by Oliphant Downes, was staged. "The Bracelet", by Alfred Suttro, was also presented. Miss Malvine Goodman, Dave Warshawsky and Harris J. Griston took the leading parts. Bert Levine, who has had considerable professional experience, assisted materially in making the productions effective.

An enthusiastic game of chess was played between the B'nai B'rith chess team and the Cleveland Athletic Club players. The team is now entered in the city chess tournament for a championship trophy which is to be donated by a Cleveland team.

The Employment Bureau [illegible] in efficiency and popularity as is evidenced by the ever increasing demands upon its services.

Election of officers will take place on June 23 and dances as well as entertainments are being scheduled for the members and their ladies for the season.

The Employment Bureau of Cleveland Lodge, started April 4, is showing a constant increase in the number of applicants received and positions placed. This bureau is being developed with unusual care by the organization, in view of the present economic stress and the necessity for enabling those who are in need to get on their feet by "helping themselves".

The great problem is to induce the manufacturer or retailer to make room for one man in his establishment. Generally he is reluctant to do so as he has a waiting list of former employes and is not desirous of setting a precedent by hiring an outsider.

The call for women workers is apparently still active, as it is no trouble to find places for girls or women whether the positions be for skilled or unskilled work.

Business men are urged to call up the Employment Bureau of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith for their requirements.

MINNEAPOLIS LODGE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

A very interesting meeting of Minneapolis Lodge was held on Tuesday evening, May 10, at the Gymnal Doled Club. Reports of the various committees were read and acted upon. A special report by the Boys' Camp Committee was made and future activities for the benefit of the Boys' Camp were discussed.

OMAHA LODGE, OMAHA, NEBR.

The largest open meeting of the lodge for the year took place on May 15 in the ball rooms of the Fontenelle Hotel. In the afternoon the lodge held a regular session and a large class of candidates was initiated by the degree team of the lodge.

Brother Gustavus Loevinger, of St. Paul, addressed the lodge on some phases of the work of the Order.

In the evening at the hotel there was a mass meeting with approximately 1,000 in attendance. The principal speaker of the evening was Gustavus Loevinger, First Vice-President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6. Brother Loevinger spoke on the work of the Order, laying special stress upon its work both of a defensive nature in relieving the Jew from the consequence, of misfortune, disaster and persecution, and also its constructive work in the promotion of Intellectual Advancement, ethical ideas and social justice.

Brother Loevinger pointed out that the Order is no longer a secret one but simply a band of Jews sufficiently intelligent to understand the purposes of the Order who have united for the good of Jewry and humanity. The audience was greatly impressed with his remarks.

Mrs. S. Pisko, Secretary of the National Jewish Hospital of Denver, also addressed the meeting. Her remarks were accompanied by motion pictures of the Denver institution.

Jeno Sebok, the violinist, made his first public appearance in Omaha at that meeting.

Brother Henry Monsky, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 6, presided in his usual efficient manner.

RAINIER LODGE, SEATTLE, WASH.

Much credit is due Rainier Lodge, No. 627, through the efforts of President Sol G. Spring, for the untiring assistance given the Joint Distribution Committee in their drive for funds for the Jewish War Orphans. A donation of $100.00 was made by the lodge, in addition to many personal contributions by the members.

On May 4 a very interesting meeting took place, when a large class of candidates was initiated by the degree team in their usual beautiful manner.

The new Glee Club, better known as the "B'nai B'rith Serenaders", under the direction of Prof. David Davis, rendered a splendid musical program, with Brother Bernard Brin as accompanist.

Another of the activities of Rainier Lodge is the baseball team under the managership of J. Kiter. The team practices at Walla-Walla play field on Sunday mornings and is open for engagements.

J. A. Koerpel, organizer of the Rainier Jazz Band, has tendered his resignation on account of a promotion which requires his residence in New York.

Brother Henry Pickard, Past President of Rainier Lodge, Trustee of Temple de Hirsch and Past President of the Congregation, was again honored by Governor Louis F. Hart with the appointment as a member of the Reformatory Parole Board. Brother Pickard is a pioneer resident of Seattle and has devoted much of his energies for the welfare of the inmates of the Monroe Institution and Jewry at large.

MISSOURI LODGE, ST. LOUIS, MO.

The April meeting was attended by a large number of brethren and the evening was enjoyed by all present. A class of candidates was initiated in the usual impressive manner by the degree team. Interesting reports of various committees were made and a special interest was manifested regarding the arrangements for the convention held in St. Louis, the Souvenir Committee having arranged for mementos of value to be given the guests at St. Louis. Jacob B. Krolngold, Executive Director, gave a very instructive address.

One of the interesting events of the month was a report that the Bellefontaine Farm, city institution for delinquent and truant boys, was given seder services, the first time in the history of the farm. Mrs. Henry L. Wolfner prepared the dinner and Brothers Louis Millstone and Samuel I. Sievers conducted the services. The officials of the farm were very courteous but it is hoped there will be no Jewish boys in the institution for another seder service for many years to come.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

MAHONNING LODGE, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

Recently, about forty members of Mahonning Lodge went to Alliance, Ohio, and initiated sixteen members, also installed the officers of Alliance Lodge. After the installation, a banquet was tendered by Alliance Lodge at Hotel Lexington under the charge of Brother H. M. Shonman. The trip was made by automobile. The guests numbered about forty, among whom were several from other cities in Ohio and New York City.

A seder was conducted by Dr. C. B. Grossman, at the conclusion of which speeches were made by Dr. Grossman, J. J. Friedman, Louis Fried, Abe Levin and others. The success of the seder is greatly due to the earnest efforts of Brother Abe Levin.

The lodge has taken steps to adopt one or more war orphans.

A B'nai B'rith Orchestra is one of the assets of the lodge and a baseball team is being organized by Dr. B. E. Malkin for the benefit of the younger members.

Executive meetings are held every noon at one of the hotels in the city, when matters of importance are discussed before submitting them to the regular meetings, thus avoiding long meetings and enabling the lodge to devote the time to its general welfare and that of the community. At many of the recent meetings, several prominent speakers, among whom were Judge Gessner, Mayor Warnock and Prof. Chaney, addressed the members. Other speakers during the season were Alfred A. Benesch of Cleveland, H. D. Fuerst of Akron, Judge Rosenfeld of St. Louis and Rabbi Krohngold of St. Louis.

A large drive for new members is scheduled and a goal of 500 is expected by January 1. The motto of the lodge is: "Each one get one".

Dr. M. A. Bohnard has succeeded in raising a fund of $600 to assist a stranded Jewish family in Hamburg.

The growth of this lodge is worthy of note, as in 1917 the membership was only 70, while today it can boast a membership of 370. Past President M. A. Myerovitch, chairman of the Publicity Committee, is responsible for much of the success of the lodge. Local newspapers have been generous in giving the lodge publicity and the B'nai B'rith is now recognized as one of the foremost organizations of the city.

ISIDOR STRAUS LODGE, FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

One hundred delegates to the District Convention, which adjourned at Dallas, were entertained by Isidor Straus Lodge of Ft. Worth, Texas, at noon, Wednesday, May 4, with a luncheon, followed by an automobile trip throughout the city to Lake Worth.

Mr. A. B. Freyer, the new President of the district, was the chief speaker. Rabbi George Fox acted as Toastmaster. The Jewish residents of Fort Worth did themselves proud in the delightful manner in which they entertained their guests and it was a fitting finale to the gathering of Jewish hosts for a great and worthy cause.

An excellent program of music and speaking had been arranged and proved most edifying and enjoyable. One of the outstanding features of the afternoon was the rendition of "Eli-Eli" by Mrs. Lilli Bogen Morris of Fort Worth and several vocal selections by Mr. Wood, accompanied by Mrs. M. Sandberger of Texarkana, were also rendered.

The guests departed for their various homes, carrying with them most pleasant reminiscences of their stay in Dallas and Fort Worth.

BELLINGHAM LODGE, BELLINGHAM, WASH.

One of the latest activities of Bellingham Lodge is a baseball team which has been organized and the season is entirely scheduled for games with the team composed of members of Samuel Lodge of Vancouver, B. C. Three games have already been successfully played. In the recent short drive for members, fourteen new brothers have been added. Brother Philip Brenner, who recently returned from a tour of Europe and Palestine, gave an interesting address on "Jerusalem, Progress and Possibilities". A short debate on the subject of present day immigration took place. Brother Morris Leibo acted as Chairman.

MANHATTAN-WASHINGTON LODGE, NEW YORK.

During the May meetings of Manhattan-Washington Lodge, No. 19, all records were broken when 116 new members were initiated and about 80 candidates elected.

At the meeting of May 11, Brother Silas N. Ratskopf, a West Point graduate, addressed the lodge on "The Life of a Jew in the Army". Brother Ratskopf served abroad during the war.

On May 29 the annual visit to the Home for Aged and Infirm at Yonkers took place. A very interesting musical progam was furnished by the pupils of Brother Isadora Dunkin and refreshments were served, thus affording the old people a very pleasant day.

On June 8 the lodge was honored with the presence of the new President of the District, Brother Geo. A. Newman, of Pittsfield, Mass. The boom in the membership of the lodge will undoubtedly prove an incentive for good work during Brother Newman's administration.

Women's Auxiliary.

Manhattan-Washington Women's Auxiliary Lodge held a very interesting meeting on May 11, when many new petitions for membership were presented. Under the auspices of the auxiliary, affairs, especially the social affairs, are being carried on successfully.

Leontine Friedman is President of the Auxiliary and Eva R. Gelberg, Secretary.

ZION LODGE, COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The regular meeting of Zion Lodge, No. 62, Columbus, Ohio, was held on May 23. The attendance was especially large, all being eager to greet the delegates from the District Grand Lodge Convention at St. Louis.

Brother E. J. Schanfarber, who received the distinguished honor of being made President of the District Grand Lodge, received an ovation which was truly significant of the high regard and esteem in which he is held by his brethren. Brother Schanfarber outlined the work for the coming year and particularly stressed the work of the Convention on Americanization.

Brother Fred Lazarus reported on the work of the Jewish Orphan Home, endorsing the action of the district regarding the maintenance of the home.

Brother Harry Kohn reported upon National and International affairs and Brother I. B. Jashenosky upon social service work.

At the close of the meeting several of the members entertained. Refreshments were served.

LITTLE ROCK LODGE, LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

With the initiation of twenty candidates, a musical program and addresses, the fiftieth anniversary of Little Rock Lodge was celebrated on May 29. The full degree team initiated the candidates. Rabbi Louis Witt, formerly in charge of Congregation B'nai Israel, was the principal speaker. Louis Seigel, Chairman of the Arrangement Committee, acted as Toastmaster. The lodge was organized fifty years ago on May 28, with a membership of twenty-one. All of the original charter members have departed from life, with the exception of Brother Jos. Pfeifer and L. Ehrenberg, who were the guests of honor at the celebration. Brother Louis Seigel, in an appropriate manner, complimented each on his long and useful life and expressed thanks for their part in establishing the lodge. Each was presented with floral bouquets.

Brother E. Navra, the Secretary for twenty-one consecutive years, was eulogized and presented with flowers. Rabbi R. Farber of Texarkana delivered the opening prayer and several musical and instrumental numbers were rendered.

Brother A. B. Freyer of Shreveport, La., President of District Grand Lodge, No. 7, was introduced. His address and remarks were very complimentary to the lodge.

The original charter granted to the local lodge was on display.

Before the conclusion of the program, a gong representing the toll of fifty years was sounded fifty times. The evening closed with the audience singing "America".

REINSTITUTION OF NORFOLK LODGE, NORFOLK, VA.

On May 28, Dr. Edw. N. Calisch, member of the Executive Committee for District No. 5, and Edwin L. Levy, Secretary of District Grand Lodge, No. 5, reinstituted Norfolk Lodge at Norfolk, Va. The new organization promises to become an active part of the Order, being officered by young men who are deeply enthused with the spirit of Judaism and B'nai B'rithism. Charles L. Kauffman is President; Sol Fass, Vice President; V. H. Nusbaum, Secretary; Bertram Nusbaum, Treasurer; Rabbi Louis Mandoza, Monitor; Rabbi N. B. Kruger, Assistant Monitor; Dr. N. J. Gould, Warden; H. A. Goldberg, Guardian. The Trustees are: Sylvan A. Meyers, H. Crochin and A. L. Robinson.

The charter list numbers forty-five. An active Membership Committee has been appointed and it is expected that at a meeting, which is to be held within a few days, a large class will be initiated.

JOINT MEETING OF PHILADELPHIA LODGES.

A meeting of the combined membership of Har Sinai, Joshua, Lincoln and Criterion Lodges of Philadelphia was held at the Majestic Hotel on Thursday evening, May 12, when the lodges were honored with an official visit from Lucius L. Solomons, of San Francisco, First Vice-President of the Executive Committee of the Order, and David Solis Cohen, of Portland, Oregon, President of District Grand Lodge No. 4. Brothers Solomons and Cohen in addressing the lodges informed the brethren that while in Washington, where they attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Order, the committee was received by the President of the United States, Warren G. Harding, who forcibly expressed his approval of the work of the Order. Their addresses had a stirring effect upon all present.

Brother David Bortin, President of District Grand Lodge No. 3, presided and Brothers Jacob Singer, member of the Executive Committee of the Order, and Jos. W. Salus, Past President of District Grand Lodge No. 3, expressed thanks in behalf of the B'nai B'rith of Philadelphia.

The evening closed with a musical program.

BETH ZUR LODGE, MOBILE, ALA.

An open meeting of Beth Zur Lodge, No. 84, with a large attendance, was held on Sunday evening, May 22. Interesting reports of the happenings of the convention of District No. 7, held at Dallas, Texas, on May 1, 2, and 3, were read. Representatives of the lodge, Rabbi Alfred G. Moses, Jas.. G. Adler, J. M. Friedman, Meyer Jacoby and E. H. Eichold, gave brief talks which were well received.

Past Grand President Sigmund Haas, a charter member of Beth Zur Lodge, celebrated his eightieth birthday on May 21 and as a demonstration of the high esteem in which he is held, a token was presented him. Brother Haas feelingly responded with words of appreciation.

Brother Leon Swartz, Past Grand President of District No. 7, addressed the assembly. Vocal selections were rendered by the Misses Ethel Swartz and Gladys Brown.

LOUISVILLE LODGE, LOUISVILLE, KY.

At a recent meeting of Louisville Lodge, several changes in the roster of officers were made. Brother G. S. Rosenberg reluctantly tendered his resignation after several years of faithful service as Secretary. Brother Sol B. Weiner will succeed Brother Rosenberg. Brother G. S. Rosenberg succeeded Brother Hilmar Ehrman as Treasurer. With the infusion of young blood in the role of officers, the lodge looks forward with confidence to good work.

The lodge voted a contribution to the Foster Memorial Fund for the purpose of purchasing the "Old Kentucky Home".

The oratorical contest took place in May and Louisville Lodge donated a cup known as the B'nai B'rith Cup. The contest was under the direction of the Y. M. H. A.

Two candidates were initiated.

INSTITUTION OF B'NAI B'RITH LODGE AT HAMMOND, IND.

A new lodge was instituted in Hammond, Ind., on Sunday, May 1, by the officers of District No. 2. Seventy-two members compose the lodge, with prospects for many more. The installing officers were Brothers Louis M. Frank of the General Committee, Edward J. Schanfarber, First Vice-President of the District, Leonard H. Freiberg, Secretary, and Alfred A. Benesch of the General Committee.

Brother Isadore Silverman of Toledo, Dr. Wm. Feder, Dr. I. J. Propper and A. Ottenheimer, prominent members from Gary, Ind., also attended.

The newly elected officers of the lodge are: Adolph Hirsch, President; P. Seifer, Vice-President; E. J. Pillischer, Treasurer; Arthur J. Weiss, Secretary; Abe Ottenheimer, Monitor; Sam Schlessinger, Assistant Monitor; Morris Dobson, Warden; Robert Gordon, Guardian.

The membership consists of residents from East Chicago, Whiting and Hammond.

The first President of the lodge was well chosen, having had experience in B'nai B'rith work, being a Past Vice-President of Lake Lodge of Gary, Ind.

An eloquent address made by Brother Alfred A. Benesch on behalf of the Grand Lodge closed the meeting.

The lodge will meet on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month and gives promise to be one of the leading lodges of the District.

HUNTINGTON LODGE, HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

On Sunday, May 29, the lodge celebrated its fifth anniversary in a very appropriate manner. A select musical program had been arranged and Richard S. Rauh, brilliant orator of Pittsburgh, represented the President of the District. Brother Edward Hemple also addressed the lodge. Refreshments were served. Representatives from Ironton, Ashland, Catlettsburg, Logan, Williamson and Welsch were in the audience.

The chess tournament ended on Sunday, May 22. Winners were adjudged and prizes awarded. A new tournament has started for the club championship and for the cup which was presented by Brother Sam Samson.

PITTSBURGH LODGE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

The first social affair of Pittsburgh Lodge was held on Tuesday, May 24, at the Lincoln Club. A series of social and educational events have been planned for the future by the Social Activities Committee. Monthly affairs are scheduled, hoping thereby to increase the spirit of good-fellowship among the members. Simon Davis is Chairman of the committee.

Music, moving pictures, singing, vaudeville, eats and good smokes made up the program for this affair. There will be many future events like this one.

WINNIPEG LODGE, WINNIPEG, CANADA.

Winnipeg Lodge has adopted the slogan, "650 members for Winnipeg Lodge, No. 650" and an enthusiastic campaign for increased membership is in full swing. Special medals will be awarded members who obtain the greatest number of candidates.

Members of the lodge attended services of the Shaarey Zedek synagogue the 7th night of Passover, when Rabbi Herbert J. Samuel addressed the assembly on the purposes of the Order and the anti-defamation problem.

GOLDEN GATE LODGE, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

Golden Gate Lodge celebrated its fifty-second anniversary on Wednesday evening, May 4, with a banquet and entertainment in the B'nai B'rith building. Elaborate plans were made and a program arranged for the evening. Grand Secretary Brother I. J. Aschheim acted as toastmaster. Past Grand President Brother Richard Gutstadt delivered an eloquent address. Rabbi Lissauer, Brothers Louis Bernstein, Nathan Newmark and Past President Rosenberg of Bear Flag Lodge of Santa Rosa also addressed the assembly. Their remarks were well received.

What Our Lodges Are Doing

HARMONY LODGE, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

A largely attended meeting was held by Harmony Lodge on May 11, when several distinguished members addressed the audience. Judge Jos. G. Shapiro, Chairman of the Board of Deputies for Connecticut, spoke on the achievements of the Order in the District. Mr. Nester Dreyfus of New London, a member of the Board, spoke of his visits to the various lodges throughout the state.

Charles H. Shapiro, Past President of the District Grand Lodge, gave a report of the Executive Committee of the Order and its recent meeting with President Harding in Washington.

Mr. Andrew J. Hallock confined his remarks to "fraternalism", especially relating to its application in everyday life and the good that it is necessarily effecting.

All remarks by the above brethren were enthusiastically received. The evening's program concluded with a smoker, entertainment and buffet lunch.

Brother Geo. A. Newman of Pittsfield, President of the District, was officially received by the lodge at its June meeting. This was Brother Newman's first visit as President.

The meeting of May 24 was a "hummer." Those who were not present may well regret it. Judge Joe Shapiro conducted the meeting in splendid fashion. His visit as Chairman of the Board of Deputies for Connecticut was enjoyed by all. Judge Shapiro addressed the audience in his usual interesting manner.

Brother Nester Dreyfus, of New London, also addressed the meeting giving the lodge further proof of his real B'nai B'rithism and his "jolly good fellowship."

Andrew J. Halek, past master of the Masons of Connecticut, delivered "a work of art" speech which will long be remembered. His analysis of real fraternalism and friendship was perfect, and every word just hit the nail on the head.

Brother Chas. H. Shapiro, Past President of District No. 1, addressed the lodge on many occasions but on May 5 was better than ever. Brother Shapiro has done much work for the Order and his advancement can be charged to two accounts, viz.: Merit and recognition for service.

Among the distinguished guests of the meeting were Past Presidents Maximillian Stein, Jos. Solomon, Dr. M. S. Rosen, Trustee Max Frank.

HUNTINGTON LODGE, HUNTINGTON, W. VA

Sunday, May 29, was a memorable day in the history of Huntington Lodge, when its quinquennial celebration was held. The program arranged by the Board of Governors was a pleasant and appreciative one.

Brother Richard Rauh and Edward Hemple of Pittsburg were the principal speakers. Being the organizers of the lodge five years ago, it was a fitting mark of distinction to have them present. Mr. Rauh represented Brother David Bortin, President of District No. 3.

From a charter membership of thirty the enrollment of the lodge at present is 178 and prospects for greater growth are bright.

The lodge in Huntington has filled a much needed want in the way of a clubroom, dance-hall and a permanent home for intellectual advancement work and has been the means whereby speakers of national repute addressed the Jews in Huntington and the Tri-state section.

A fine musical and instrumental program was furnished and the evening concluded with the serving of refreshments.

LASKER LODGE, SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

The first meeting of Lasker Lodge of San Diego, Calif., held in the community center was an interesting and stimulating affair. The evening was devoted to the discussion of anti-Semitism. Brother Jacob Weinberg introduced Rabbi Trattner the first speaker of the evening. Dr. Trattner traced anti-Semitism from early Egyptian times down to present day propaganda.

Brother M. F. Meyer spoke briefly on the necessity of combatting anti-Semitism. Rev. Wellington also gave an interesting address.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA.

Sunday, May 15, 1921, was a real B'nai B'rith Day in Omaha. In the afternoon, a class of twenty-five candidates was initiated, with an attendance of about 250 of the brethren. Lincoln, Sioux City and Council Bluffs Lodges were represented. Brother Gustavus Loevinger of St. Paul gave an interesting address, taking for his subject the growth of the B'nai B'rith.

In the evening, the program for members and their ladies was attended by approximately 1,000 persons and is perhaps the largest meeting ever held under Jewish auspices. Several musical numbers were on the program, followed by the address of Brother Loevinger, which went over in fine shape. Mrs. Pisko of the National Jewish Hospital gave a most interesting address illustrated by moving pictures, showing the wonderful work being done in the hospital. The day was a big success from start to finish.

RIMMON LODGE, RICHMOND, VA.

An interesting meeting occurred on May 23rd at Temple Beth Ahabah at which special action was taken by the membership of Rimmon Lodge to increase the activities of the organization.

Morton L. Wallerstein, President of the lodge, is cooperating with other organizations upon ways and means of taking a census of the Jewish inhabitants of the city in order to enlarge the membership. Several members were initiated by the degree team of the lodge and a great increase in the membership is being looked forward to.

SPRINGFIELD LODGE, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Declaring that Germany is the source of the propaganda rampant against the Jews today, Mr. Lucius L. Solomons, of San Francisco, First Vice-President of the Constitution Grand Lodge, addressed over 300 members of Springfield Lodge and the ladies' auxiliary, at their joint meeting on May 8.

Brother Solomons particularly emphasized the intensity of feeling against the Jews throughout the world today. He further stated that the Anti-Defamation League has done much in its nine years of existence to counteract in an educational way this propaganda but that the time is here for the Jews to stop singing their own praises and the justification to come to them must come by the Christian voice and pen.

Mr. Solomons voiced the opinion that if the world war has brought the Jew, Christian and Mohammedan closer together, then the great sacrifices and bloodshed have not been in vain but the failure of the allies to improve the status of the Jew in Europe reflects on their Democratic ideals.

BARON de HIRSCH LODGE, BUTTE, MONTANA.

Baron de Hirsch Lodge had the honor of entertaining Brother D. Solis Cohen, of Portland, President of District Grand Lodge, No. 4, on May 24. Brother Cohen delivered an inspiring address, which proved deeply interesting and impressive to the assembly, creating much enthusiasm. American patriotism was eulogized by him and he declared that being a good Ben B'rith likewise meant the obligation of being at all times a good American.

An interesting lecture was delivered by Rabbi J. K. Levin. Brother Chas. C. Cohn, District Deputy, presided and introduced the speakers.

Baron de Hirsch Lodge is in a flourishing condition and has a splendid attendance at all of its meetings. Recently an entertaining "mock trial" was held, the proceeds of which were used for social entertainments. The lodge is planning a number of entertaining features for the coming season. It is one of the most progressive lodges of the Order in the West.

COUNCIL BLUFFS LODGE, COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

Mr. A. S. Lewis of New York addressed Council Bluffs Lodge at its regular meeting early in May. Mr. Lewis is a prominent B'nai B'rith worker.

A very large representation of the lodge attended the open meeting of Omaha Lodge on May 15.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

The reestablishment of Jacksonville Lodge is in progress. A petition containing thirty-one names has been placed before the General Committee of District No. 5 and within a short time it is expected that the lodge will again be numbered in the ranks of active B'nai B'rith.

Judge Charles M. Feidelson of Savannah, Ga., addressed a large meeting which was arranged by Rabbi Israel Kaplan, assisted by Rabbi H. C. Strauss.

HOMESTEAD LODGE, HOMESTEAD, PA.

The collection derived at a mass-meeting recently held at the homestead synagogue, under the auspices of the local Anti-Defamation League, has been divided equally between the national Anti-Defamation League and the I. O. B. B. Orphanage Home, of Erie. The total amount collected was more than $500. Checks have been mailed to each of the above institutions. This is one of the many successful activities of the lodge.

PISGAH LODGE, DETROIT, MICH.

Brother Meyer S. Fink, one of the oldest members of Pisgah Lodge, addressed the members on May 16 at the Old Elks Temple. Brother Fink's subject was "Prejudice and Its Cause". This was one of the many usual interesting lectures that Brother Fink has delivered to the lodge. Brother Fink is a Past President and one of the leading members. He has served as Chairman of the B'nai B'rith Council, Treasurer of the B'nai B'rith Club, and Chairman of the House Committee.

The members of Pisgah Lodge entertained the Jewish soldiers from Fort Wayne at a dinner on Sunday, May 22.

DENVER, COLO.

At a meeting of Denver Lodge, No. 171, of Denver, Colo., held on June 5, 1921, Memorial Services were arranged for the departed members of the lodge during the past year. The memorial address was delivered by Brother Simon Quiat.

At a meeting of the lodge held June 19, Flag Day celebration took place and a class of candidates was initiated. Brother Wagman, one of the delegates of the lodge to the recent convention of the District Grand Lodge, gave a splendid report of the convention. Other delegates also spoke on various phases of the convention's work.

LASKER LODGE, SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

An opening meeting of Lasker Lodge was held on May 9, with a large attendance. Rabbi Ernest Rattner gave a short talk on Spargo's book, "The Jew and American Ideal". Rev. Wellington also addressed the assembly. A program followed the addresses and refreshments were served.

The open meetings are an incentive to the furtherance of good work in the Order.

SIOUX CITY LODGE, SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

The first meeting of Sioux City Lodge, No. 598, of Sioux City, Iowa, held after its institution, took place on May 10, 1921. The lodge considered communication from the Hebrew sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America with reference to the immigration bill pending in Congress and approved action taken by the Secretary in behalf of the lodge against the passage of the bill.

The lodge adopted by-laws prepared by a special committee.

WORCESTER LODGE, WORCESTER, MASS.

Worcester Lodge held memorial services for its departed brothers on May 30 before a large attendance of members and friends. The opening and closing prayers were delivered by Rabbi Jessie Bienenfeld, with appropriate scripture reading. Addresses by Alfred G. Isenberg, Joseph Talamo, and Elias H. Pofcher and the El Mole Rachmim by Rev. Aaron A. Horowitz, intermingled with beautiful musical selections by the string quartet made up the program for the services.

A B'NAI B'RITH REVIVAL.

With the holding of two or three of the most important Grand Lodge Conventions in the B'nai B'rith in this country, our attention is focussed on the activities of the Order. Unquestionably since the Anti-Defamation League was called into being by the Order it has been the means of keeping the B'nai B'rith before the eyes of the public and more frequently in the minds of the Jew. The Anti-Defamation League showed itself to be well organized and it did splendid work, even going so far as to put the quietus effectually upon the Presidential ambitions of Henry Ford. That would have been a defamation of the citizenship of this country if a nomination like that had been brought about. But after all, the Order must do something besides being merely investigators of defamers of the Jews. Rabbi Leiser, in addressing the Order in St. Louis, said that the B'nai B'rith must be something more than merely a fraternal organization, which has been what we have contended for years. It has an opportunity now to make itself a power and a real influence in world Jewry because its anti-defamation activities have strengthened the confidence of the public in the Order. But there are world problems awaiting them. Let the best brains of the B'nai B'rith hold counsels for the purpose of taking up the task of solving some of these problems which threaten the very existence of our people. Yes, there has been a revival in B'nai B'rithdom; but do not permit the revival to end with the mere acquisition of new members. There is work to do, brothers, real work.—[Jewish Criterion.

MENORAH LODGE, CARUTHERSVILLE, MO.

For many months it has been the aim of the Jewish citizens of Blytheville, Ark., to establish a sabbath school for their children. With the assistance of Dr. Wm. H. Fineschriber of Memphis, Tenn., this has been established. Miss Rae M. Wolf of Blytheville assisted in organizing the school and at present ten children are receiving religious education. From the sabbath school, a Friday evening service has developed and Rabbi S. S. Sternberg officiates. The sabbath school children have their own officers and the work is religiously and faithfully kept up with the aid of the teachers, Miss Ethel E. Weinberg and Mrs. Sam Joseph. Mrs. Kleban has charge of the music. The entire community is to be commended for their liberal and whole-hearted support in this work.

MANHATTAN-WASHINGTON LODGE, NEW YORK.

A regular meeting of Manhattan-Washington Lodge was held on June 8. A large number of applications for membership were acted upon and 35 candidates initiated by the degree team of the lodge.

Miss Alice L. Seligsberg addressed the meeting on "Palestine of Today as Seen by American Eyes", making special reference to the work of the American medical unit. Her address was accompanied by stereopticon illustrations. The address was especially interesting to the ladies because the work directed by Miss Seligsberg in Palestine for two years was mostly woman work, assisted by a noble band of young Jewesses largely from that city. This meeting marks the termination of the formal meetings of the lodge for the season. Elaborate and comprehensive preparations are being made for next year. A special committee was appointed to propose a working plan for the program. Arrangements were made to cooperate with the chairman of the Philanthropic Committee of the lodge. Mrs. David Levine is providing used clothes for a rummage sale to be held for the benefit of crippled children.

The barn dance on May 18 was a unique affair. The Ladies' Auxiliary deserves great credit for the ingenuity they displayed in converting the hall into a country fair ground. The older members fell into the spirit of the affair and outdid their younger brothers in the rural costumes they wore.

The hike arranged by the lodge was a great success. Sixty members, including the ladies, went to Jersey and spent a delightful day. Sister Friedman and Brother A. Weil Cowen are in charge of the excursions and week-end trips to be given during the summer recess.

BN

Special Anti-Defamation League Issue

B'NAI B'RITH NEWS

BENEVOLENCE BROTHERLY LOVE AND HARMONY

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY
AUG 23 1921

Publication Office, Mount Morris, Illinois. Published monthly (except July and August). Subscription $1.00 per year. Entered as second class matter September 29, 1920, at the post office at Mount Morris, Illinois, under the act of August 24, 1912. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Sec. 1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917, authorized October 16, 1920.

Vol. XIII AUGUST, 1921 No. 11

That Bogey Man—The Jew

By G. Frank Lydston, M. D.

The following extracts from a book bearing the above title are published with the permission of the author. Dr. Lydston's volume, (Burton Publishing Company, Kansas City, Missouri, 8vo., 136 pages), is a clear-cut and conclusive answer to the acrimonious attacks which have recently been made upon the Jew. The poignant wit disclosed in the extracts is typical of the book as a whole. While we cannot endorse all of the views which Dr. Lydston develops in his book, we do believe that the book is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject. The author, who is a well known Chicago surgeon, has written many volumes of medical treatises including his well known "Diseases of Society". He is also the author of several novels and books of general literary interest. —Editor's note.

WERE I to write a brief for the Jew, I think that the labor of it would be simplified by the latest example of "Jew-baiting"—printed and circulated by one of the most distinguished Gentile exemplars of what America has to offer in the way of commercial exploitation by those whose bumps of acquisitiveness are dominant. (Far be it from me to assert that there are any Jewish dollars in the colossal fortune acquired by this gentleman. We Gentiles meticulously trace to its source every dollar that we acquire. We may not balk at ordinary "tainted money", but money contaminated by the touch of the "Chosen People"—Heavens!)

Our critic probably will resent the appellation, "Jew-baiter". He prefers the term, "Anti-Semite", the former being considered by him "low-brow". But, somehow, the "high-brow" term does not fit his stuff and so, "Jew-baiter" let it be.

If the critique of the Jew herein under consideration is to be believed, its alleged author affects a heroism of which no one hitherto has suspected him. He implies that everybody—excepting himself, of course—is afraid to tackle the Jew problem. Well, if that be "heroic", it "goes double" for me. To take the other side of the argument and differ from the distinguished and influential polemist in question requires some "nerve". And so, my illustrious friend, let us be "heroes" together.

It's a great thing to have a hero in the family—and some families do need them so. Better a hero late than never. But perhaps it were better to have shirked and lived, than ever to have fought at all.

Please note that this book is not composed of unsigned editorials.

It is, of course, barely possible, dear reader, that the eminent critic and polemist did not have the entire 109,000,000 American Gentiles behind him.

* * * * *

In the last analysis, there is not much difference between a Russian pogrom and the latest attack upon the Jew by certain persons who have taken shrewd advantage of the present world neuropathy and chaos to accomplish selfish ends of their own. Political ambition, religious antipathy, commercial rivalry, and possibly a desire for revenge—combined with megalomania evolved from success of a certain kind—the kind which is apotheosized by us Americans—is a fair analysis of the psychology of this attack.

Printer's ink does not look so ominous as does blood, and in this country—thanks to the common sense of the average citizen—does not often lead to the shedding of it, but there are more painful and slower healing wounds than those inflicted by bayonet and bullet.

The worst of it is that such wounds sometimes shake to its very foundations the morale of society, injuring as they do, not only the immediate victims, but everybody else—not excepting even him who inflicts the wounds. There are no scars like psychic scars—especially when they involve the "pride centers", or one's bump of self-esteem.

Unfortunately one cannot brush the enemy away as too small for notice. We were long enough in "sizing up" the mosquito, but when we did we discovered that the little devil's propensities for evil were not to be despised.

Both wise men and fools often act like a catalytic ferment in a solution of sugar, starting big things—for good or evil as it may chance—which soon get out of hand. The ferment eventually drops to the bottom with the dregs, but it has done its work—and is ready to create more disturbance at the first opportunity. All that it needs is a change of environment in which to react, and, as "action and reaction are equal", in social matters as elsewhere, the price always must be paid.

The Up-to-date Jew-Baiter.

Our most recent example of the Jew-baiter is the legitimate successor of the various "baiters" of other things, who have laid all the woes of the world at the door of poverty, Catholicism, free thought, secret societies, politics, labor, capital, militarism, the social evil, venereal diseases, or "booze".

Female suffrage has not yet had its inning in the minds of these gentry as a cause of world woe—"not yet, but soon". (We doctors simplify matters by blaming microbes for nearly all human ills. We will get around to politics by and by.)

Dr. G. Frank Lydston.

This Jew-baiter would have us believe that the Jew is the "fly" in the world "ointment". How simple the remedy, so much simpler and more potent than making the world "safe for democracy", or any other quack social panacea: KILL THE JEW!—if it cannot be done with bullets, this being America, then with ink.

Is the universal human nature out of the game altogether nowadays? Must we forever be "passing the buck"?

The Jew a Marvel.

But I intimated that the latest attack upon the Jew is an excellent "brief" for him. From "The International Jew, a Reprint of a Series of Articles Appearing in the Dearborn Independent from May 22 to October 2, 1920", I will cull a few gems—only a few. Ars longa, vita brevis.

"The Gentile boy works his way up, taking employment in the productive and technical departments, but the Jewish boy prefers—anything, so long as it is connected with the commercial side of the business".

Which explains why so many Jewish boys rise to the position of an employer, whilst thousands upon thousands of Gentile boys remain mere cogs in the commercial machine. We see these "boys" everywhere, some of them long past middle age—and in the "sere and yellow leaf"—crushed, hopeless, and despairing.

Ambition a Crime.

Are ambition and intelligent foresight crimes? Is self-betterment a crime? Which is socially more efficient, an employer of many, or a mere individual "cog" in the commercial machine?

"Many are called, but few are chosen." Is it wrong to aspire to be "chosen"? If it is wrong, then what should be done with multi-millionaire Jew-baiters, who have "aspired" and won?

"A modern census would show a large professional and literary class added to the traders".

This is alarming. I would suggest that the Jewish professional class trade their diplomas for union cards, don "white wings" and get busy cleaning the streets. As for the literary Jew, he probably couldn't conquer the cacoethes scribendi, anyhow. It's incurable, and so, as the Irishman said of the off-colored pup in the litter, "Let's drown that one".

Still, if that particular member of the Jewish brood had been "drowned" in past years, the world would have lost its Mendelssohns, Lessings, Zangwills, Montefiores, Disraelis, and other wonderful men who have impressed their greatness upon humanity's scroll.

Our Jew-baiter rather resents any allusion to the names of great Jews. He does not agree that "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," and, besides, he seems to think that the great Jews do not "count", anyway.

* * * * *

The Tail Wags the Dog.

Our Jew-baiter further says:

"If the Jew is in control, how did it happen? The Jew comprises only three per cent of the population. Is it because of his superior ability, or the inferiority and don't-care attitude of the Gentiles"?

This is really funny, and should add to the gaiety of nations. The Jewish tail is wagging the Gentile dog! There are 3,000,000 of him, and 97,000,000 of us—with an additional population of about 12,000,000 Negro Gentiles thrown in for good measure.

If the "three per cent" of Jews can dominate the ninety-seven per cent of white Gentiles—and those 12,000,000 blacks—then let them do it, but the Jew has a lot of intermarrying before him, and I fancy his blood is likely to be "lost in the shuffle"—which would be very much as it should be.

If the dog can't boss the tail, so much the worse for the dog—and more power to the caudal appendage.

Please note the sentence last quoted from our critic: "Some" English! Or did an Irishman write it? It certainly is a "bull". The reader can believe what he likes, or he at least has two choices, viz: the "superiority" of the Jew, or the "inferiority" of the Gentile, as an explanation of Jew "control".

Incidentally, if we Gentiles "don't care", why should we worry? And, anyway, we'll all be dead in a minute or so.

The Jew a Free Man.

"There are poor Jews a-plenty, though most of them in their poverty are their own masters", quoth the Jew-baiter.

What a eulogy for a race! No matter how poor the Jew may be, he is not a slave!

"During the formative period of their national character the Jews lived under a law which made plutocracy and pauperism equally impossible among them".

When the Jew is in full "controll", will he revert to the social system of his forefathers? If so, then let him hasten on his way to that control.

"Jews never got rich out of one another, but out of the nations among whom they dwelt".

Well, this was good "generalship". I presume that the up-to-date nations at the "Peace Table" had in mind this excellent precedent. Diplomacy, like blood, is thicker than water.

Our critic would have us believe that the Jews dominated the Peace Table. Pity 'tis that America was not represented by a Jew. We might have gotten something for ourselves.

Fitness of the Jew to Survive.

"The explanation" (of the Jew's pre-eminence in finance) "must be sought in his vigor, resourcefulness, and special proclivities".

His fitness to survive, eh? Well, the Jew is like the rest of the genus homo—an animal which has risen in the organic scale through the development of a fore-brain and learning to walk on his hind hands, and has as much right to take advantage of any points of special fitness as have any of us. His faults are human, and probably no more glaring than would be those of any other race under the same stress of environment.

* * * * *

Pirates Do Not Like Jews.

"In an age when it was lawful for any pirate to seize goods consigned to Jews, the Jews were able to protect themselves by consigning goods on policies that bore no names".

And, of course, the "pirates" "kicked" at this. They have been kicking ever since—and always will kick. A pirate will be a pirate as long as a pirate lives.

"The Bank of England was established upon the counsel and assistance of Jewish emigrants from Holland".

So! Well, if it hadn't been for the Bank of England, the world would have been in a deuce of a fix, long before America lent a hand to make the world "safe for the Allies".

"When Spain drove out the Jews, Spain lost financial leadership, and never has regained it".

In other words: When Spain drove out the Jews, her decadence began—and has continued ever since.

During the World War: "The so-called German-Jew . . . joined the outside Jews in accomplishing the collapse of Germany".

Our Jew-baiter next will assert that the Jews won the war and should be damned therefor.

Consistency Thou Art a Jewel.

Having previously shown that the Jew does not exploit his own race for sordid gain, our Jew-baiter states, apropos of the sweat-shop that—

"The only heartless treatment ever accorded the Jew in the United States, came from his own people—his overseers and masters". Didn't our Jew-baiter say that even the poorest Jews are their own "masters"?

In the next breath he says:

"Yet there is no evidence that either the 'sweater' or 'sweated' ever thought of it as inhumanity or as 'heartless'. The Jews never regard work as a calamity; neither do they regard subordinate positions as permanently theirs".

If neither employer nor employee has set forth the sad lot of the latter, how did [illegible] about it? It looks as if everybody but the health department's social "uplifters" and Jew-baiters were satisfied with conditions.

Really, I think that the Independent's staff should be turned over to a junior law student, or to some callow youth in a primary class of logic for rebuttal, and its title should be changed to "The Boomerang".

* * * * *

The Protocols.

The statements of our critic regarding the Jewish Protocols are those of a special [illegible] and suggest accusing a dog of [illegible] because the accuser wanted him [illegible]. Our Jew-baiter admits that the Protocols have been repudiated by Jews as the work of a lunatic, and that they are anonymous, but he still insists that they represent the world policy of the Jews and that their precepts and principles have become an integral part of the psychology of the race.

This is really comical. The intelligent among the Jews insist that the Protocols are not children of Jewish brains, and the Jew-baiter insists that they are, thus cramming them down Israel's unwilling throat.

"I don't think, much less believe, or practice that stuff", says the Jew.

"Oh, yes, you do", replies the Jew-baiter. "I know you do, because there are a lot of things in your daily life which I can interpret in some of the terms of the Protocols".

The Jew is to be congratulated on having such a master mind to think for him, and, despite his struggles, to cram the ready-made thoughts down his throat, willy nilly.

Our critic says: "Jewish attacks upon it (the Protocols) thus far make much of the fact that it came out of Russia. That is hardly true. It came by way of Russia".

This should be enough for any thinking man.

Our Jew-baiter seemingly doesn't propose to let the Jew be decent—or even claim to be decent—if he wants to. I fear that, after all, the only recourse of the Jew is to settle back against the "breeching", admit nothing, deny everything, and call for proofs. The alleged proofs will be his best defense.

To believe that the anonymous Protocols represent the psychology of the Jewish race, is just about as logical as it would be for the Jews to accept the anonymous editorial attacks in the Independent as representative of the attitude of the Gentiles toward the Jews.

To the psychologist, the psychic state of the authors of the Protocols and of the aforesaid editorials are strikingly similar. The Jews claim that the Protocols were written by a madman. Possibly we Gentiles would better begin defending ourselves by asserting that our latest Jew-baiter, at the very least, is the victim of a mental "squint".

Both the Protocols and the "International Jew", are "one man" products, and do not prove the attitude of the Jews and Gentiles toward each other, any more than the preachments of the late Alexander Dowie proved that anybody save the members of his own peculiar cult were following in his footsteps.

The author of the Protocols was a genius—which hardly can be said of our Jew-baiter, but he nevertheless, probably, was a paranoiac, which "cap" possibly might fit some others that could be mentioned.

It is to be remembered that paranoia may be the background of genius. It is to be hoped that certain detractors of the Jew will not take this as personal, so far as the "genius" factor is concerned.

I predict that if representative Gentiles do not repudiate the venom of the book, the "International Jew," the time will come, and that soon, when the author of the stuff will be glad to have the mantle of charity thrown over his work, even to the extent of being reconciled to the appellation of "madman".

* * * * *

Mason and Jew.

The adroitness with which our Jew-baiter, in interpreting for his own purposes the Protocols, has endeavored to arouse the antagonism of a certain "important secret order"—meaning, of course, the Masons—against the Jews, is exceedingly clever, but so obvious that it falls by its own weight.

The attempt of our Jew-baiter to set the Jews and the members of the Masonic fraternity upon each other, cat and dog fashion, is amusing—and suspicious. Has the society in question ever dealt hardly with either the principal or the hired "hack" in the recent onslaught upon the Jews?

* * * * *

As the Twig Is Bent.

Our Jew-baiter rails against the alleged absurdity of the statement of a certain rabbi, to the effect that Gentile children are taught in Sunday School to regard Jews as "Christ Killers".

Possibly, the rabbi may have "stretched" it a bit, but how, with our methods of teaching the average child could fail to get an impression of the tragedy on Golgotha which is unfavorable to the Jews, is difficult of comprehension.

As I look back to my own school and Sunday School days, I recall that "Sheeny" and "Christ Killer" divided the honors when we Gentile boys reviled our Jew schoolmates.

It is obvious that these terms were not inventions by the minds of young children, but were borrowed from sources which we considered authoritative. Conditions may have changed, but I doubt if the average Sunday School teacher, even now, endeavors to make clear the role of the Jews in that awful tragedy or gives the Romans due credit for their part in it.

* * * * *

The Third Degree.

Not by way of backing the rabbi, quoted by our Jew-baiter, but just to "point the moral and adorn the tale"—and bring it up to date, the reader will please note this.

While in the midst of writing this volume I had occasion to be interviewed by the membership committee of a certain well-known club. The interview was a very solemn and impressive function. The "third degree" was administered as follows: (Be it remarked that I have lived and labored in Chicago for nearly half a century. During nearly four decades I have practiced medicine here. For thirty years I taught in medical colleges—for some years in our State University. It so happened, also, that I formerly was a member of that selfsame club.)

Q. Are you a Jew?

A. No.

Q. Is your wife a Jewess?

A. No.

Q. Have you any Jewish blood?

A. Well, I'm not sure. You see, I am a surgeon. I have had a lot of it on my hands—and some of it possibly may have gotten into my system.

Q. Er—have you any relatives who are Jews?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Have you any business associates who are Jews?

A. No.

The "inquisition" concluded, I bowed myself out. At the door I turned to the committee and with as much gravity as I could command said:

Gentlemen, I am writing a book about the Jews. Any harm in that?

Q. Why, are you saying nice things about them?

A. Sure. That book must go.

Which "commercial" explanation seemed satisfactory, inasmuch as I was elected. And the gods laughed—and so did I.

There's a lot of fun mixed with life's tragedies, after all. He, who can see it, has reason to be thankful.

* * * * *

Speaking of that same Dove of Peace, she is a rather self-respecting bird and since she was grabbed by those hardy voyageurs of the never to be forgotten Foolish Ship, Oscar II, and compelled to take that little trip to Europe some months ago, she has refused to alight anywhere. Poor, bedraggled dove, what a melancholy, shameful spectacle she must be—and how hopeless her life! Why, even America still is at war.

* * * * *

Speaking as a Gentile, I would say to the Jew:

"Come, my brother, let us laugh together at social academies".

And when people of diverse interests and ideas begin "laughing together", the "get together" problem is far on its way to solution.

Progressiveness of the Jew.

The impression of the Jews which I have acquired from many years' service as a teacher and lecturer, is that, as a class, they are among the most intelligent and progressive of our citizens. Their ambition is by no means bounded by the desire for commercial success; no class of our people are more keenly alert to the advantages of intellectual development.

For some years I was one of a number of lecturers who were wont to give courses of instruction to several organizations comprising members of the younger set of middle-class Chicago Jews. The late Prof. Henderson of the University of Chicago; my lamented friend, the late Luther Laflin Mills; Mr. Clarence Darrow, and other men of equal prominence, were my associates in this work. These gentlemen joined with me in admiration for the enthusiasm and progressive spirit of those young Jewish seekers after knowledge which would aid them in self-improvement.

It has been my good fortune to deliver, at various times, many lectures upon subjects of sociologic interest. Without the slightest intent of flattery or of invidious comparison, I will state that some of my most intelligently critical and receptive audiences have been composed of upper class Jews. The Jewish women, especially, have impressed me as being attentive, progressive, broad-minded, and eager for information in matters of sociologic import.

In various fields of science, and especially in my own profession, the Jew has acquitted himself most creditably—often brilliantly. My dear old friend, Dr. Jacobi, of New York, and a number of men now living, would have added lustre to any calling—and conferred honor upon any race.

The records of our young "citizens in the making" in our public schools, show that Jewish children are wonderfully good "timber".

* * * * *

I believe that the fellow who asks for our hospitality, and for the protection of the Constitution and the flag, should try to deserve it, and should show due appreciation of his opportunities. If he does not, then let us lead him to the nearest port, face him toward the place he came from, and kick him so hard that he never will stop going until he gets back home. (I have no objection to his stopping half way, however, if the water is deep enough.)

If a Jew, Irishman, Italian, Englishman, or an individual of any other race, is not more American than anything else, fire him out.

There is no room in our "melting pot" for aliens who will not fuse. Let all hyphenates get rid of their hyphens or quit. America for Americans—first, last, and all the time.

* * * * *

A Neurotic Race.

The Jewish obviously is a neurotic race. Centuries of hardship, grinding soul-and-body-racking poverty and oppression, suppression, persecution, privation, and racial intermarriage are all sufficient explanations.

The history of the Jews is a dark, grim tragedy, splotched with red and enlivened chiefly with the agonized protests of those who suffer the lack both of bread and the milk of human kindness. Such a racial history is not good for either racial or individual "nerves".

The neurotic constitution accounts for many traits of which the Jew is victim. He is sensitive to a degree, given to introspection, and likely to alternate between mental exaltation and fits of extreme depression. In these things he differs not at all from some of the rest of us, save that his average of neuropathy is higher, and, therefore, the Jewish victims of it are relatively more numerous. Then, too, we dwell on it more, simply because he is a Jew.

Considering his neurotic tendencies, it is worthy of note that proportionately, the Jewish race contributes less to prostitution, pauperism, and crime than does any other race in our "Melting Pot". Rarely is the Jew a burden on the public—his race takes care of its own.

As for the Jewish charities, the well-to-do Jew rarely is permitted to evade contributions. When he does evade them, he is regarded by his brethren as declassé. And he does not limit his benefactions to his own race. One of our most public-spirited citizens, whose benefactions run into many thousands yearly, is a Jew. No objections are raised to his dollars, but while a Gentile social system absorbs his dollars, he gets no recognition for himself—because he is a Jew.

It was a Jew who wrote:

"All other means of distinction are denied him. He must rise by wealth, or not at all. And if, as he well knows, to insure wealth will be to insure rank, respect, and attention in society, does the blame rest with him who endeavors to acquire wealth for the distinction it purchases, or with that society which so readily bows down to the shrine of Mammon"?

The author of this was not a good pleader. He should have called attention to the fact that the Jew rises, not because he has money, but because he has brains—by which he rises and gets the money. This secures the respect of the Gentile—for the money, and for the power and prestige which it brings the Jew—but only when the Gentile needs him. For the Jew himself, nothing, at any time when we can "get away with it".

Social Recognition.

Social recognition, at least of the Jew, can't be bought—by paying for it in advance, even under the camouflage of "charity and benevolence"—and both method and results are not creditable to the Jew's talent for bargaining.

A fact which to me seems peculiar is that even the intelligent, high-class Jew so often permits himself to be cajoled by Gentiles into liberal financial support of various public enterprises, although the very persons who solicit his aid draw upon him the social "dead line". Self-respect, it would seem, should suggest the demand for recognition of himself and his race, as well as of his money.

Considering his pride of race and resentment of the obvious discrimination against him, the Jew should be consistent —which he not always is. When the chance arises to slip under the "big tent", he sometimes takes advantage of it.

A certain prosperous club in this city was founded by Jews. Many of the original Jewish members have dropped out. Many, however, remain. Some years after its organization the club began to refuse admission to Jews. Did those who were already members resign? They did not. Had they done so, the aforesaid club would soon have been "on its uppers".

Another club in this city is so exclusive that it not only objects to Jewish blood, but also resents business and matrimonial alliances of prospective members with Jews—of which more anon. Everybody knows this, yet Jews—and prominent ones—often accept entertainment at this club. But it is not always thus:

A certain fashionable hotel in the far West, for many years owed most of its prosperity to Jews. Its Jewish patronage was wealthy and high-class. Dazzled by war and post-war prosperity—and probably influenced by the recent orgy of Jew-baiting—the proprietor "burned his bridges behind him" and announced that, beginning with next season, no more Jews would be received as guests.

Every Jew in the hotel sought other accommodations, it is said, whereat our Boniface—which should be "Bonyhead"—mourned, and wept salt tears, and beat his breast full sore, saying, "I didn't think they would leave me before the close of the season".

What under heaven did he think?—I wonder.

Metaphorically, that landlord now is wearing crepe of somber hue, and next season, he probably will require a few extra yards of it, for much fewer "Johnnies with the open hand" then will hie them westward, seeking opportunities to spend war profits and ungodly high wages.

* * * * *

With Apologies to Aesop.

There once was a stupid old black crow, who had acquired a huge piece of cheese. He flew with it to a limb of a tall tree, and prepared to have a feast at which "Lucullus should dine with Lucullus".

A wily fox who chanced to pass that way caught sight of the crow and his banquet-to-be, and resolved to secure the cheese for himself.

Knowing the self-conceit of "successful" crows, the fox called a meeting of the Ways and Means Committee of his brain and reasoned, in this wise:

"If I flatter that old bird sufficiently, and make him think that a crow who has amassed much cheese can sing grand opera, or at least speak eloquently and wisely to the multitude, he will open his mouth, and drop the cheese, and I will annex it".

And so the foxy fox spake thusly:

"Oh, wisest and most lustrous, most beautiful and accomplished of worldly successes, give ear unto me:

"You have won many plaudits, by your wonderful talents and the marvels you have performed. But, you are hiding your chiefest treasure, your voice. Caruso has nothing on you. Listen, I pray you, to the vox populi and let us hear you sing".

And the foolish crow mistook the egotism in his cosmos for "the call", and the voice of the foxy fox for the vox pop. and began singing.

And the song was: "I Didn't Raise My Boy to be a Soldier".

And as soon as he opened his mouth, the cheese fell into the foxy fox's hungry maw.

And the foolish crow went hungry, whilst the wily fox ate the cheese, and rubbing his belly said:

"Verily, the Vox Pop is the Vox Dei—and there is great joy in the Department of the Interior".

And the crow wept full sore.

The moral of which is, that when fortune has smiled upon you, it is best to let well enough alone, for a swelled head may "spill the beans".

* * * * *

When the people of America appreciate the humor of certain things, and see how funny they themselves really are, they will laugh themselves back to liberty.

Was it not Voltaire who said that the way for humanity to get rid of an evil was to laugh it off the face of the earth?

We have almost lost our sense of humor. It is atrophying, and soon will be entirely gone. Our sense of proportion was lost long ago, and we are "slipping", but we surely will regain it.

Fanatics and other atavistic phenomena please take notice.

Meanwhile, the high gods are laughing. Speed the day when we all can laugh with them.

But what remedy does our Jew-baiter advise for the salvation of the Gentile world? How shall we stop the onrush of the enormous Jewish horde of 3,000,000 ambitious human wonders. How shall we poor, feeble, white Gentiles—only 97,000,000—and our 12,000,000 Negro fellow citizens be saved?

Surely, our Jew-baiter is not merely trying to sow seeds of racial hatred and discord. He must be altruistic in his motives.

But again, What is the remedy? A Russian pogrom? He really can not mean that. If he does not mean that, what is to be our inference—that we cannot stem the tide of 3,000,000 Jew supermen? Must our poor little 97,000,000 white Gentile "Nit-wits" and 12,000,000 helpless "cullud" ones be overwhelmed, and sent into bondage by those 3,000,000 supermen?

"Perish the thought"! But how evade the "thought"? Pray, tell us.

Is our Jew-baiter really serious when he states that exposing the alleged diabolical world program of the Jews will stem the evil tide?

Does a diagnosis do more than point out the disease?

Now that Dr. Jew-baiter has made his diagnosis, we, the patient—the Gentiles—would like to know what he is going to do about it. Does he merely want to "stir" us all up?

Following close upon the Mayflower, fourteen Jewish families came from England, and landed at Plymouth—a fair proportion of our hardy and much vaunted first families. I presume that their descendants can fairly be termed "Americans".

Jews did much in aiding us in proclaiming our liberties, and afterward securing them during the Revolution. Jews fought in the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, and the late World War.

In fighting—often dying—for America, were these Jews fighting for their country, even as men of other races fought, or, in the case of the Jew, is "fighting for his country" merely a euphemism?

When the final roll was called "Over There", thousands of boys in khaki answered "Here", to Jewish names. Hundreds upon hundreds more did not answer —because their voices were forever stilled. They lay 'neath the poppies in "Flanders fields", or elsewhere, in the blood-stained soil of war-torn France.

The names of some of the detractors of the Jew did not appear on the rolls of either the living or the dead. Money is a great power. It buys philippics against those whom one wishes to hurt, and establishes "safety zones" for slackers.

CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT.

The congratulations of President Adolph Kraus, extended to Chief Justice William Howard Taft on the occasion of his appointment were acknowledged by Chief Justice Taft as follows.

Pointe-a Pic. P. Q., Can., July 12, 1921.
My dear Mr. Kraus:

I thank the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith for the expression of good will. It gives me pleasure to know that I am held in such kindly regard in the Order of the B'nai B'rith. I appreciate the interest you have shown in my appointment as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Sincerely yours,
WM. H. TAFT.

Official Record of an Anti-Defamation League Meeting

IN order that our readers may have some idea of the manner in which the Governing Board of the Anti-Defamation League functions, we are reprinting the minutes of a recent meeting selected at random from the Secretary's official record. Since the organization of the League in 1913, the Governing Board, which meets weekly, has held about 350 meetings. As will be noted from the following record, the questions considered are of the most varied nature. Those taken up at the meeting reported herein are typical".

1. Communication addressed to American Legion Post, Pensacola, Fla., in envelope postmarked April 29, 1921, from London, England, bears same handwriting as envelopes containing anti-Semitic propaganda distributed to the American Legion posts in December, 1919, and January and February, 1920, by "Frazier Curtis". The envelope contained a pamphlet entitled "Bolshevism, the Jewish Peril", containing a plea "that England expel all Jews from positions where they are a menace to the Gentile community and re-enact the laws of Edward the First"; another entitled "The Jew and Treason", in which specific charges of treason by British, French and American Jews against their respective countries are made, and the third a pamphlet of the so-called "higher Anti-Semitism", entitled "The Code of the Jew", containing alleged quotations from the Old Testament and the Talmud. Secretary was directed to advise our representative in Pensacola, Fla., against steps proposed and to leave matter in hands of the Governing Board. Discussion of further plans for cooperation with American Legion Headquarters in this and similar matters was laid over until next meeting.

2. Secretary reported that he had received information to the effect that the National Civic Federation with offices in the Metropolitan Tower, New York City, was about to publish a report on Bolshevism which would be issued in the near future and that this report had been prepared under the personal supervision of the infamous Lieutenant Boris Brasol who has been chiefly responsible for the Czaristic anti-Semitic propaganda which has been circulated in this country during the past year through the Association Unity of Russia, the Russian National Society and certain American "patrioteer" organizations. Secretary was directed to write to Mr. Ralph M. Easley, Chairman of the Executive Council, calling attention to the activities of Brasol in the anti-Semitic propaganda and protesting strenuously against the distribution of any literature prepared by Brasol bearing upon Jewish responsibility for Bolshevism. Also instructed to write similar letters to the members of the Executive Council of the National Civic Federation. *

3. Communication from Secretary of the American Publishing Association offering to turn the entire control of the Editorial Department of "Facts" over to the Anti-Defamation League, was ordered filed. Secretary was directed to advise the American Publishing Association that it could not accept the offer.

4. A situation developing in Grand Rapids, Mich., as a result of a sermon delivered by a converted Jew named Max Wertheimer who "confessed" that the Jews were guilty of all the crimes assigned to them by The Dearborn Independent was very effectively handled in that city by Mr. Gustave A. Wolf. Secretary was directed to write a letter of appreciation to Mr. Wolf, also to thank Dr. Deutsch for the detailed information as to the activities of Wertheimer.

5. The Committee went on record as disapproving of taking an appeal from the decision of the U. S. Federal Court in Cleveland granting injunction restraining local officials from interfering with the street sale of The Dearborn Independent.

6. Communication from Grand Lodge No. 8, enclosing copy of pamphlet entitled "Judische Geheimgesetze", by Professor Herman L. Strack, quoting communication from Der Centralverein deutscher Staatsburger judischen Glaubens, suggesting that the League have the pamphlet translated and recommending it as the best answer that has been made to the "Higher" anti-Semitism. On motion duly made, seconded and carried, the Chairman appointed a Committee with power to have the pamphlet translated at the expense of the League and to have the translation referred back to the Board for further action.

7. Communication from Secretary of District Grand Lodge No. 8, Germany, advising that Dr. Arthur Dinter, well-known German anti-Semite, was leaving in the near future for America where he expected to deliver a series of anti-Semitic lectures; also enclosing notes and data bearing upon work which Dr. Dinter has been conducting in Germany along anti-Semitic lines. Secretary was directed to gather all possible information bearing upon this subject, to find out, if possible, under whose auspices Dr. Dinter was to lecture in America, and to report to the Board from time to time the results of such investigations so that further action might be taken.

8. A Universal feature film entitled "Cheated Love" was inspected by the Secretary at the Censorship Board office. The picture is an excellent one in all respects but one. All of the characters are Jewish with one exception, and all of them are honest, kindly folk except one. The latter is described as a "schicksa". The Secretary was directed to write to Mr. Carl Laemmle advising him of this fact and urging the elimination of the word "schicksa".

9. Secretary reported that he had sen a bulletin to all representatives of the League advising them of the game mechanism described as "Shylock" and of the action taken by the Philadelphia authorities in reference thereto.

10. A cartoon published in the Tacoma Daily Ledger of April 27, 1921, was deemed unobjectionable. No action was taken in reference thereto.

11. Request from Lombard College, Galesburg, Ill., for a sufficient number of copies of the Taft pamphlet to supply members of the Freshman class for use in extemporaneous speaking and debate work. Secretary was directed to comply with the request and to send also, copies of the Spargo book.

12. An investigation of the summer resort bureau known as "Ask Mr. Foster", which has its headquarters in the store of Carson Pirie Scott & Company showed a violation of the Illinois anti-discrimination act. Board directed that protest be made to Carson Pirie Scott & Company. Secretary stated that he was making a similar investigation of other summer resort information bureaus.

13. Report from Anti-Defamation Committee of Portland, Oregon, covering the work of that committee during the past six months was received and the Secretary instructed to advise Portland Lodge of the Board's appreciation.

14. Attention of the Board was directed to a new book published by the Century Company entitled "The Russian Bolshevik Revolution" by Professor Edward A Ross of the University of Wisconsin. The book is being received as a standard history of the subject. The book itself is very fair and does not err as do most publications in hinting at Jewish responsibility for the Bolshevik movement. The fact that Professor Ross was in Russia during most of the revolutionary period lends additional authority to what he has to say. It was the opinion of the Board that the circulation of the book should be encouraged.

15. A film entitled "Nothing To Think About" is being distributed by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation in a series known as "Capitol Comedies". The film consists of two reels and centers about the efforts of a Jewish hotel keeper to set fire to his hotel in order to collect on insurance which is about to expire. He fails in all his efforts, but the building is finally set on fire by accident much to the joy of the proprietor who later discovers, however, that the policy has expired. The titles are written in such a manner as to make it clear that the hotel keeper is a Jew and the make-up is also intended to give that impression. Secretary reported that he had entered a protest against the film before the Chicago Censorship Board and that the film had been rejected. A motion picture bulletin was sent out on June 23, requesting representatives of the League to notify their local exhibitors showing Goldwyn pictures, of the objectionable nature of this film.

16. In further reference to the parody on "Welcome Stranger" in the Passing Show of 1921 now playing at the Apollo Theatre in Chicago, Secretary reported that he had received a letter from Mr. John J. Garrity advising that our letter to Mr. Houseman, the Manager of the Theatre, had been referred to him and suggesting that we write a letter of protest to Mr. J. J. Shubert "regarding this scene as no person can act upon this except Mr. Shubert". Secretary was directed to communicate with Mr. Shubert.

17. Communication from Rabbi Henry Cohen of Galveston, Texas, enclosing anti-Semitic propaganda literature bearing a London (England) imprint which was distributed among American Legion posts in Dallas. This circular is the same as the one which was previously received by the American Legion at Pensacola, Florida, and submitted to the League. Secretary was directed to communicate again with the American Legion Headquarters asking whether it would be advisable to again warn the posts against bringing up at their meetings the poisonous communications which are being sent to them from European anti-Semitic sources.

18. In a pamphlet entitled "Truth and Light", published by the Iconoclast Publishing Company and distributed by Mr. C. A. Windle, appears the following statement: "Lincoln was killed by a Jew", Booth, who shouted to the audience at Ford's Theatre, after he fired the fatal shot, 'The South is avenged' ". Mr. Windle is the same gentleman who some months ago published a pamphlet entitled "The Tyranny of Intolerance", which he offered to the League for general distribution in its campaign against the Ford defamation. This offer was not accepted. Investigation of the genealogy of the Booth family fails to disclose any Jewish blood. It is possible, however, that Mr. Windle found the authority for his statement in Israel Zangwill's latest book "The Voice of Jerusalem" wherein Zangwill states that Edwin Booth, the brother of John Wilkes Booth, was a Jew. Secretary reported that he was making a further investigation of the genealogy of the Booth family at the Newberry Library. The Board directed that a communication be sent to Mr. Zangwill calling attention to the error in his book and urging that it be corrected. Secretary was also directed to protest to Mr. Windle against the erroneous statement above quoted, also to call to his attention the injustice of the following statement which appeared on the front page of the June, 1921, issue of the Iconoclast: "Much is heard of the menace of Bolshevism, but Barney Baruch is more dangerous than Eugene Debs. The war sent Debs to prison and made Baruch a millionaire". Baruch in a statement addressed to Senator Kenyon proved that his personal fortune had diminished by one-half as a result of the war, and informed public opinion has given him full credit for his invaluable and unselfish assistance to the Government as a dollar-a-year-man.

19. Communication from Mr. V——, of ———, Tenn., advising that he is writing a book in defense of the Jew and asking for data to be used in preparation and for subsidy with which to publish. The Board directed that the Secretary send as much data as Mr. V—— might desire for his purpose but to advise him that it was against the policy of the League to subsidize any publications of this nature.

20. Attention of the Board was directed to the fact that G. P. Putnam's Sons are still distributing "The Cause of World Unrest". In view of the attitude taken by Putnams in withdrawing volume four of the Cambridge History of American Literature in deference to the protest made by Christian Scientists against an article on Christian Science in the volume, the Board directed that the matter of "The Cause of World Unrest" be reopened and that a protest against its continued distribution be sent to Putnams.

21. Communication from Professor [illegible], of the University of ——, [illegible] that copies of the Ford book "Jewish Activities in the United States" have just been received by all members of faculty of that school, and urging upon the League the necessity of sending literature which would prove the falsity of the charges made therein. Secretary reported that 115 copies of the Spargo book and the Wilson Protest had been distributed among the faculty of the University; that in view of the request made by Dr. [illegible], he had prepared an additional list of [illegible] of the faculty who should receive literature. The Board directed that literature be sent to every member of the faculty.

[illegible] The latest bulletin of the Russian [illegible] Society of New York announces that a Russian national book store is to be opened in New York City with a branch store in Boston which will distribute "good Russian books printed in Russian and not in the communist jargon" also a "selection of English and American books bearing upon international relations and the Russian problem". The type of books recommended by the Russian National Society to its members indicates that those book stores will specialize in anti-Semitic literature.

23. Various communications from librarians expressing their appreciation of the gift of the Spargo books were submitted to the Board. Several of these are written in such a manner as to indicate that the librarians were anxious to secure books which would present a truthful statement in answer to anti-Semitic charges.

24. Several letters from directors of girls' schools located in New England showed a disinclination to register a prospective student on the grounds that she was a Jewess. The Board directed on the recommendation of Mrs. Cowen, that the matter be forwarded the chairmen of the Committee on Education of the Council of Jewish Women.

LEON L. LEWIS,
Secretary.

*The National Civic Federation carefully re-examined all material submitted by Brasol with a view to sterilizing it of any anti-Semitic content.

B'NAI B'RITH ORIGINS.

In an article entitled "Jewish Fraternalism in the United States", by Albert M. Friedenberg, Corresponding Secretary of the American Jewish Historical Society, recently published in the Hebrew Standard, the following account is given of the origin and development of the Order:

"The first of the American Jewish fraternities in establishment and perhaps in prestige as well is the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith. This Order was founded at New York in 1843 by Jews hailing from Germany, who effectively impressed upon it their own aims and ideals. For its first fifty years certainly the B'nai B'rith was typical of the merits and the defects of the American Jewry of German origin. Indeed, for many years after its establishment the deliberations of the supreme and subordinate divisions of the B'nai B'rith were conducted in the German language and its membership was almost exclusively recruited from those who belonged to the German section of the community. After it had been in existence for about forty years B'nai B'rith succeeded in penetrating into foreign parts. Its first overseas lodges were set up in Germany, and were successful even beyond anticipation. For there, by reason of German Jewish, more particularly anti-Semitic, conditions, the B'nai B'rith took very deep root and grew to be an important factor in the religious, social and communal life of the Jews of Germany. Naturally, too, it spread out in contiguous, German-speaking lands. Later on, when the parent bodies in the United States had divested themselves of their exclusively German character and when the endowment division of the fraternity had been modernized, the B'nai B'rith was universalized, Jewishly speaking. Its operations were extended into other foreign countries, notably the Holy Land, other parts of the former Turkish Empire, and England. Its aims were to a certain extent reformulated, so that the Order sought to influence Jewish life both here and abroad through a variety of methods, all highly idealistic and all equally creditable from the standpoints of Jewry and Judaism and good citizenship.

"Ever throughout its history the B'nai B'rith has claimed the allegiance of many Jewish leaders of light and worth in their several communities, some of them being men of national, if not international, importance. In this connection, the names of Julius Bien and Leo N. Levi, gone but not forgotten, and of Simon Wolf and Adolph Kraus, happily still with us, deserve to be recalled".

RUSSIAN TRADE DELEGATION IN LONDON DENIES POGROMS IN RUSSIA.

London (Jewish Correspondence Bureau). The Soviet Russia Trade Delegation yesterday issued a statement, denying that any pogroms' were made on Jews because of the present famine. Recently, there have been rumors that due to the shortage in food, Muzhiks in Samara and other provinces attacked and killed Jews. The Soviet representatives here deny the whole story.

B'nai B'rith Does Pioneer Work in Mexico

Committees for Care of Immigrants Organized—Mexican Community Expresses Thanks

AS previously announced, the B'nai B'rith has communicated with the Mexican Charge d' affairs relative to the immigration situation in Mexico and has endeavored, through him, to see that immigrants arriving in Mexico, who, because of the new 3% law, are barred from entering the United States, shall be favorably received by the Mexican authorities and further assured him that the Order would do whatever possible to aid the immigrants in becoming self-sustaining citizens of Mexico. The whole matter was thoroughly discussed at the recent Executive Committee meeting in Washington and was considered of such moment that Mr. Archibald A. Marx of New Orleans and Rabbi Martin Zielonka of El Paso were authorized to proceed at once to Mexico for the purpose of making an investigation of conditions and of bringing comfort and assistance to the unfortunate immigrants.

The fact that many people, especially from Eastern Europe, were coming into Mexico without sufficient means to support themselves and with no knowledge of the language of the country or of the conditions of life there, was not the only element in this most serious problem. Equally as grave and often with more serious results to the unwitting emigrants was the fact that they entered the United States illegally and were placed under arrest by immigration officers and in many cases deported to the country from whence they had originally come. Quite a few of these cases have been taken up from time to time by the B'nai B'rith with Secretary Davis of the Department of Labor, but he was unable to assist or stay action. These victims were, in a majority of the cases, innocent of any desire to violate the law, but had fallen into the hands of certain steamship agents abroad who promised that the emigrants would be brought into the United States after a short stay in Mexico.

Archibald A. Marx.

Rabbi Martin A. Zielonka.

The representatives of the B'nai B'rith, in the course of their investigations, found that representatives of a steamship company in Koenigsberg, Germany, told emigrants that they could go to the United States via Holland or Germany and Vera Cruz. One of the emigrants told the committee that a representative of the Robert Mayerhoeffer Steamship Company of Konigsberg, Germany, took him to Berlin, and introduced him to a man who had his passport vised by the Mexican Consul at Berlin, in consideration of a sum of fifteen dollars, that the agent showed him a map of the United States and Mexico and told him how easy it was to cross from one country into the other, that he asked the agent how he could cross the river between the two countries and that the agent assured him that there would be a boat waiting to take him over. The photograph of the Berlin agent of the steamship company is now in the possession of the B'nai B'rith.

There are many immigrants in Mexico who had been promised that they could immediately join their relatives in America. They came with the belief that they could enter the United States. Now they are stranded in a country whose language they do not understand. To engage in gainful occupation with such surroundings and with practically no assistance is almost impossible. Such was the situation the representatives of the B'nai B'rith accompanied by a representative of the Industrial Removal Office of New York found when they arrived in Mexico City.

Relief Committee Formed.

The first difficulty which the Committee encountered was bringing the local Jews together for the purpose of helping the immigrants. There was no Jewish organization of any kind and it devolved upon the B'nai B'rith representatives to introduce some of the leading Jews to each other. A meeting of the representative men of Mexico City was held, ways and means discussed, the offer of the B'nai B'rith considered and accepted and within a very short time the work was launched.

Mr. Marx and Rabbi Zielonka reported that they were successful in establishing committees to take care of the health and sanitation of the immigrants and in arranging for their education in the Spanish language. They write: "In order to stimulate them and show them that we are ready to help them if they will endeavor to help themselves, we have agreed to advance them financial aid for three months and at the end of that time, we expect them to show us what they have accomplished for themselves before any further assistance can be expected". They report also that they believe that in bringing together the Jews of Mexico City and uniting them in relief work, much good will come not only to the immigrants who may come to that country, but also to the country itself.

The President of the B'nai B'rith received the following letter from Mr. Louis S. Loeb, Treasurer of the Committee in Mexico City:

"July 14, 1921.

"Independent Order of B'nai B'rith,
"1228 Tribune Bldg.,
"Chicago, Ill.

"Gentlemen:

"Attention Mr. Adolf Kraus, Pres.

"I am in receipt of your letter dated July 8th, enclosing check.

"I take the opportunity to thank you personally, and in the name of those with whom I have the pleasure of being associated, for your very liberal donation.

"I can assure you that we all appreciate your sympathy and cooperation in our problem and that we will give our best efforts in order to solve these and others which may arise, in the hope that you may feel that the work of your representatives has borne ample fruit.

"I also wish to thank you in the name of those concerned for the visit paid us here by your representatives, and congratulate you upon the able and successful manner in which they succeeded in showing us how we might launch out to our work.

"I will be very pleased to keep you posted from time to time as to the progress of our work, and can assure you of our continued cordiality to any and all of your members who may care to pay us a visit.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "LOUIS S. LOEB".

(Continued on page 12).

An Anti-Defamation League Catechism

What is the Anti-Defamation League?

The League was organized in 1913 under the auspices of the I. O. B. B. to bring about a better understanding between Jew and non-Jew.

How is the League governed?

The Governing Board of the League is composed of the members of the Executive Committee of the Order, one member at large from each district, seven members at large from the city of Chicago, and duly accredited representatives who are resident in Chicago, of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the Council of Jewish Women, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Zionist Organization. The members resident in Chicago hold meetings once each week. During the eight years of its existence the Governing Board of the League has considered and acted on more than four thousand matters. Complete records of the matters considered at each meeting are kept by the Secretary. For a clearer understanding of the manner in which the Board functions, a record of a recent meeting is reprinted in this issue.

What administrative machinery does the League possess?

The League has one or more representatives in each city throughout the country and in addition many B'nai B'rith lodges have special Anti-Defamation Committees. The administrative headquarters of the League are located in the Tribune Building, Chicago, Illinois. A suite of offices with adequate clerical help is directed by the Secretary of the League, Mr. Leon L. Lewis, a Chicago attorney, who has held that office consecutively since the foundation of the League, with the exception of two years during which he was serving as Captain in the A. E. F.

Who determines the policies of the League?

In general the policies of the League are determined by the Governing Board in accordance with a set of Principles which were agreed upon in 1913, and in accordance with which all the policies of the League have been shaped since that time. The keynote of these Principles is education.

What were the principal accomplishments of the League during the first few years of its existence?

(A) Secured the cooperation of motion picture producers in preventing the depiction on the screen of usurers, blackmailers, fire-bugs, swindlers, gamblers, grafters and white slavers, by persons made up to represent "Jewish types." Prior to 1913 the tendency on the part of motion picture producers was towards the conventionalization of Jewish types in roles of this kind. The results in this field of endeavor have been almost completely successful. From time to time however instances of this kind recur. Correspondence showing the complete success of the League in this field of activities, in the few instances which have come up in recent months, is reprinted in other issues of this paper.

(B) Secured the passage of legislation in many states preventing summer resorts from distributing literature which advertises a discriminatory policy. This does not mean that attempts were made to force hotel owners to receive Jews as guests. These laws are being enforced by the League. The summer resort literature is distributed in many cases by information bureaus established by newspapers, department stores, etc. Wherever it is found that discriminatory literature is being distributed, the fact is brought to the attention of responsible parties and the law regulating the subject matter is quoted to them.

(C) The League has brought about the discontinuance of the use of the "Merchant of Venice" as a text-book in many of the grade schools and high schools of the country. In other schools it has brought about the discontinuance of texts which give an erroneous interpretation of the play.

(D) The League has stopped the caricaturing of the Jew in an offensive manner on the stage. It has secured the cooperation of all booking offices and the few sporadic instances which come up for the Board's attention are handled easily and effectively as a result of the connections which have been established.

President Endorses League

PRESIDENT HARDING has at all times been in sympathy with the aims and objects of the Anti-Defamation League. In an address delivered before the Marion B'nai B'rith Lodge, last fall, he declared:

"I hope that all America will catch the spirit of B'nai B'rith in campaigning against ignorance, intolerance and defamation, against all the movements aimed to rend the concord of American citizenship. Fraternity, helpfulness and service must be the abiding purpose of our people, and the compensations that come to this consciousness of helping one's fellowmen contribute more to the happiness of self than success, distinction and all the other triumphs of life."

(E) The League has carried on an educational campaign to bring about the proper use of the word Jew in articles appearing in newspapers, magazines and books. It has secured the cooperation of newspapers, and has had posted in the composing rooms of the principal papers a memorandum showing the proper use of the words "Jew", "Hebrew" and "Israelite". Prior to 1913 the tendency was noticeable in many papers to mention the religious faith of a malefactor if the malefactor was a Jew. This practice has practically been discontinued.

(F) The League has made a careful survey of children's literature. Books which contain erroneous matter which children might accept as true and which might prejudicially affect, in later life, their attitude to the Jew, have been brought to the attention of the publishers and the reason for our objections presented in extenso. In this manner, through the cooperation of the Council of Jewish Women, the League was able to bring about the elimination of the "Rogue of a Jew" rhyme from many editions of "Mother Goose". The splendid cooperation of Harper Brothers in the matter of the "Ten Boys from History" episode, is typical of the position taken by publishers in other cases of the sort.

(G) The League has provided libraries with a bibliography of books on Jewish subjects and has stimulated the reading and studying of books which truthfully set forth the history, religious traditions, ethics, culture, and philosophy of the Jew.

To what extent have recent events caused a change in the League's program of activities?

Until about two years ago there was no such thing as organized anti-Semitism in the United States. There was considerable misunderstanding of the Jew and what he stood for and the League functioned principally in removing that misunderstanding by educational methods. Within the past two years we have seen a complete change. There is now a definite anti-Semitic movement in our midst, directed by men who devote their entire time to the spreading of the seeds of hatred, and who have at their disposal unlimited funds. It has been necessary therefore to enlarge the educational program of the League very extensively. At the same time, however, the League has continued its activities in all the various fields listed in the previous sections.

In what manner has the League extended its educational activities?

The League has devoted a great deal of time and effort to the investigation of the sources of anti-Semitism in this country and has published the result of its researches in the form of books, pamphlets and circulars. Within the past year nearly three hundred thousand pieces of literature of this type have been distributed in this country. They have been sent to libraries, publicists, educators, statesmen, public officials, clergymen, authors and others who have in their hands the molding of public opinion.

Among the booklets prepared and distributed by the League are the following: "AN EXPOSURE of the hoax which is being foisted upon the American public by Henry Ford in his weekly newspaper entitled 'The Dearborn Independent' and in the pamphlet which he is distributing entitled 'The World's Foremost Problem' ".

(2) "The Poison Pen", further revelations concerning anti-Semitic Propaganda in the United States, and

(3) "Anti-Semitism in the United States".

The latter was prepared for the League by Chief Justice William Howard Taft of the United States Supreme Court, and was delivered when the anti-Semitic campaign was at its height as an address at a dinner given in his honor in Chicago by Ramah Lodge, I. O. B. B. Excerpts from his lecture were sent out by all of the press organizations and were published with editorial comment in almost every paper throughout the country.

In addition the League has distributed scores of thousands of the document which will be known in history as the Spargo Protest. This protest, prepared by John Spargo, one of the ablest defenders of American ideals, was endorsed by ex-President Wilson, Cardinal O'Connell and one hundred and sixteen other leading non-Jewish Americans. It was given wide publicity in the press.

The League has also distributed many thousand copies of the "Jew and American Ideals", a book written by Mr. Spargo and published by Harper and Brothers. Mr. Spargo wrote this book because, as he states in the preface

> "Anti-Semitism is at all times and in all places inseparably fused with the reactionary movement in general and to oppose it is to serve the cause of progress. Many of my personal friends took the Protocols seriously, and people who had read my books on Bolshevism asked whether it was true that Bolshevism was a Jewish movement. I realized that there was need of a short presentation of the facts. No Jew knows that I was contemplating such a task; no Jew was consulted about it; no Jew heard of it until after the manuscript was in the publisher's hands. I am quite as much opposed to all other attempts to divide our citizenship along racial or religious lines".

To whom is the organized anti-Semitic agitation in America chiefly traceable?

(A) A group of Russian Emigrés living in New York.

(B) An anti-Semitic organization with headquarters in London which is supported by certain members of the British nobility who had large financial holdings in Russia prior to the revolution of 1917.

(C) Polish propagandists who by defaming the Jew in this country sought to justify the treatment of the Jew in Poland.

(D) Henry Ford, who has become the dupe and tool of anti-Semitic agencies and whose nefarious activities in this regard are too well known to require further exposition.

(E) Certain publishing houses, two of them well known, others previously unheard of.

(F) Certain national patriotic organizations which were imposed upon by anti-Semitic agencies and whose machinery was used to spread anti-Semitic literature.

What organizations of Russian Emigrés are spreading anti-Semitic propaganda in the U. S.?

One of these organizations is known as the Association Unity of Russia with offices at No. 5 Columbus Circle, New York City. It was formerly located at 121 E. 7th St. in New York City, in a church occupied by an Orthodox Russian Congregation. The association met in a large hall in the rear of the church. The office of the association occupied the upper floor of the building. The association is composed of men who are exiles as a result of the Bolshevik revolution and whose property has been confiscated by the Bolsheviki. It prints and distributes anti-Semitic pamphlets. One of these is entitled "Who Rules Russia". It purports to give the personnel of the Soviet Bureaucracy. Its main contention is stated in the "Foreword" of the pamphlet, which reads as follows:

> "The pamphlet herewith presented to the public is of major importance in spite of its brevity. The question 'Who Rules Russia?' is plainly answered by the mere enumeration of the responsible officials of the irresponsible Soviet Government. . . . . The fundamental fact is undeniable, viz.: that the Soviet bureaucracy is almost entirely controlled by Jews and Jewesses, while the number of Russians participating in the Soviet Government is ridiculously low. There is no escaping from this fact, which stands out as a solemn warning to those countries and States which claim to be Christian and which believe in national modes of life as opposed to unrestricted internationalism, of which the Jewish nation is the dominant power".

Then follows, page after page, a list of names with descriptions of their activities and nationality. The lists are typical of Russian anti-Semitic tactics in the brazen effrontery of their misstatements. In commenting on the lists Mr. Spargo, in his book, "The Jew and American Ideals", makes this statement:

> "That some of these lists are deliberate inventions of the anonymous compiler or compilers is quite certain, for the most complete files of Bolshevist publications in this country do not contain either the lists or the data from which it might be possible to compile them. Other lists represent the most reckless lying".

The pamphlet was very widely distributed by the organization and certain Russian newspapers published in New York City. It is referred to as an authority by anti-Semitic journals here and abroad. (Cf. recent issues of the London Spectator and the Mercure de France.)

Another organization having similar aims is the Russian National Society, located at 5 Columbus Circle, New York City, and presided over by Lieutenant Boris Brasol, the notorious Russian army officer who was one of the government prosecutors in the Beilis case. The Association Unity of Russia now has its offices at the same address. In one of the many circulars issued by the Russian National Society, Brasol describes the Bolshevik revolution in the following terms: "The eternal theme of world domination 'Judas vs. Jesus' assumed in Russia the form of a gigantic revolt of the international ghetto against a Christian nation which served hitherto as the great European reservoir of religious thought and moral achievement". This is the keynote of the activities of the Russian National Society. The purposes of the organization as stated in its by-laws are:

> (A) To defend Russian National interests in America. (B) to furnish complete information to the anti-bolshevist leaders, (C) to carry out all kinds of commissions received from the anti-bolshevist leaders and represent them over here in compliance with their instructions, (D) to assist the maintenance of contact of different anti-bolshevist parts of Russia between themselves, (E) to give every possible other support to the Russian anti-bolshevist leaders and government".

Its actual purpose seems to be to demonstrate that Russia has been "murdered by Jews" and that the latter "have America as their next goal". (The words quoted are taken from a recent Bulletin of the Society.) By "anti-bolshevist leaders" is meant only those of the extreme right—the ultra-reactionary group of former bureaucrats and army officers.

A subsidiary organization affiliated with it, known as the American Russian Society, has as its object:

> (A) To oppose and combat within the United States the growth, progress and execution of political theories based upon principles of internationalism, sovietism or anarchism, in whatsoever guise they may appear, whether as bolshevism, communism, socialism or under kindred titles; to this end to diffuse authentic information respecting the nature of these theories and the revolutionary activities of their proponents, and by all lawful and legitimate means to strive for the eradication of the influence which they already have gained; (B) to lend our support and to render aid and cooperation to all groups in all nations who are contending with these sinister forces, and particularly to the Russian people in their present courageous struggle to overthrow the alien military dictatorship which, under the name of Sovietism, is rapidly causing the disintegration of all civilized institutions in that country, religious, moral, social and political; (C) as an effective means to these ends to create a better understanding by the American people of the genius of the Russian people by dissemination within the United States of information respecting the history, institutions, literature and arts of Russia; (D) when Russia shall happily have overcome the evil influences now in the ascendant in that country, in so far as may be proper, to support the forces working for the establishment of a stable government, and to assist in the formation of a close and sympathetic relationship between Russia renascent and the United States".

The real object, however, seems to be to give a wider scope to the anti-Semitic activities of the Russian National Society.

Another organization which has its headquarters in the same offices as the above, is the Union of Russian Peasants, which Brasol recently reorganized and took under his wing.

The latest activity of these organizations is the establishment of a book-store in the city of New York, from which anti-Semitic literature of all kinds is being sold

What are the objects of these organizations in spreading anti-Semitic propaganda?

The organizers of these societies belong to the Russian, militaristic, reactionary group. They are as much opposed to the establishment of any other form of liberal government in Russia as they are to Bolshevism. Their methods in arousing sympathy for their cause are typically Czaristic. They attempt to befuddle the public by minimizing the conditions which made revolution in Russia inevitable and attempt to divert attention from the evils of a reversion to Czaristic government by creating [illegible] which do not exist

Anti-Semitism, as Count Witte discloses [illegible] in his "Memoirs," has always [illegible] trump card in the hands of the [illegible]. Experience over a great many years convinced the government [illegible] that anti-Semitic agitation was the best antidote for revolutionary proclivities on the part of the masses and that the passions of the peasants could be dissipated by steering them into anti-Semitic channels. For the Russian of the ruling classes, anti-Semitism is therefore a most powerful weapon. He is thoroughly familiar with all its possibilities and heartlessly unconcerned with the terrible consequences to the Jewish victims. The deposed aristocrats did not hesitate therefore to stamp the Soviet Government as a "Jew Government", and to advertise the Russian Revolution as a revolt of "Judas vs. Jesus". The Russian peasantry has been thoroughly propagandized to this effect from reactionary headquarters located in Constantinople, Riga, Warsaw, and Berlin. Brasol is the American representative.

The purpose of the propaganda in Russia is self-evident. The reason for its extension to Western Europe and America is less obvious. Outside of Russia they hope to derive the following benefits by ascribing to Bolshevism a Jewish origin. First, they hope to show that the present government is not a Russian government and therefore that the revolution was not a national movement but an alien excrescence; second, they thereby hope to ally with them all those who are unfriendly to the Jew; third, by describing Bolshevism as only one phase in a Jewish world conspiracy, they hope to emphasize the fear of radical activities in this country and thereby secure the cooperation of the propertied classes.

In this program they have been partially successful, especially in England and France. In America they have had some success, but their influence is rapidly waning. An exposure of their dishonest methods is having its effect in discrediting them with many of those who have been their easy dupes and in cutting off the funds needed to carry on their nefarious activities.

In what way has the League countered the program of these Russian societies?

By publicity, exposing the past affiliations of their officials, their present aims and objects, and the utter unreliability of their contentions. In addition to sending out literature which exposes the unscrupulous tactics of these organizations and the falsity of the statements on which they premise their claims for support, the League has carefully traced the connection. between the leaders of the movement and various American organizations which have been imposed upon by them. (One of these trails led straight to the doors of The Dearborn Independent.) In this way the League has been able to foil carefully laid plans intended to extend their influence and increase their income. A recent instance involving the efforts of Brasol to use the National Civic Federation for his own purposes is referred to in another part of this issue.

In what manner have the English anti-Semitic organizations affected conditions in American and how has the League countered their activities?

Literature published by these organizations is being widely distributed in this country. It consists of pamphlets, circulars and booklets. One of these circulars was issued about the time of the Republican Convention. It read: "Jewish finance masquerading as the Old Guard, has nominated Senator Harding. The same Jews who have the Democratic party in their pockets will soon name some other agent as Democratic candidate. The only way for real Americans to smash the Jewish machinery which controls the United States is to nominate Leonard Wood on a straight American anti-Jewish platform". This circular was distributed broadcast among American Legion Posts in this country in envelopes mailed from London. General Wood's letter to the League in reference to this circular will be reprinted in a subsequent issue. Several other circulars intended to arouse fear and hatred of the Jew were distributed in the same manner among American Legion Posts. Finally in December, of 1919, the London organization printed the first English translation of the Protocols and distributed copies broadcast among American Legion Posts under the title "The Jewish Peril". The Secretary of the League conferred with national officers of the Legion at Indianapolis. The latter were of the opinion that the cumulative effect of the propaganda might be very harmful and offered the League their fullest cooperation in combating it. Instructions were sent to Department Adjutants by the Director of Organization of the American Legion covering the subject, and stating:

> "The writer had the pleasure of going into this matter with Mr. Leon L. Lewis, Executive Secretary of the Anti-Defamation League, 812 Tribune Building, Chicago, Illinois, and as a result of our conversation it was decided that the policy of the National Headquarters of the American Legion would be to refer all such matters to Mr. Lewis, in order that he might be in a better position to take the necessary action from the standpoint of his official position. . . I respectfully suggest that any action which Mr. Lewis sees fit to take and which meets with your approval as the Executive official of the Legion in your Department will be satisfactory to National Headquarters.
>
> Yours sincerely,
> RUSSELL G. CREVISTON,
> Director of Organization".

In this manner the expected effect was vitiated and much constructive work accomplished. As noted in the minutes of a recent meeting of the Governing Board, reprinted on page 3 of this issue, the London organization is continuing to send literature to American Legion posts.

Another instance showing direct connection between English and American anti-Semitic activities is disclosed in the correspondence which has recently passed between the League and the publishing house of G. P. Putnam Sons. This correspondence is printed in another part of this issue.

In what manner have the Polish propagandists been operating?

Nearly all Polish newspapers published in America are definitely anti-Semitic. It does little or no good to protest to the editors against the injustice of their attacks or to disclose the paucity of evidence upon which they base their many charges. With them anti-Semitism is political. Some have offered to publish the truth in reference to the Jew if they were liberally paid. These offers were, of course, treated with the contempt they deserve. When, however, the Polish papers have attempted to spread their propaganda among others than their own people the League has taken direct action. In one instance, a certain Dukszta distributed an anti-Semitic circular to all Councils of the Knights of Columbus, with a request that it be posted on the bulletin boards. A communication addressed to the National officers of the Knights of Columbus had as one of its results the issuing of instructions to the twenty-two hundred lecturers of the Knights of Columbus to do all in their power to combat anti-Semitism in America.

The League is now engaged in investigating the activities of a prominent Polish citizen of New York City, who has recently financed an American edition of the Protocols printed in Polish for distribution among American Poles.

Has the League had any direct negotiations with Henry Ford or The Dearborn Independent?

On May 22, 1920, The Dearborn Independent published its first article attacking the Jews. Personal communication was at once established with Mr. Ford by the Detroit representative of the League. On June 5, 1920, the full Governing Board of the League met in Chicago and heard from the lips of its Detroit representative the whole sordid story of how Mr Ford had launched upon his campaign without realizing its injustice, how the poor weakling struggled in the hands of parasites whom he employed and how these had used the misguided efforts of certain self-appointed propagandists of our own faith to combat Mr. Ford's better instincts. A dignified letter asking for a conference was handed to Mr. Edsel Ford who promised that he would personally place it in his father's hands. The close cordon drawn about Mr. Ford by his anti-Semitic advisors made this procedure necessary. No acknowledgment or reply of any sort has ever been vouchsafed. Within a few weeks extensive investigation disclosed that the anti-Semitic campaign of The Dearborn Independent was deliberately planned by those who had induced Mr. Ford to undertake it, and a sufficient amount of evidence was secured to link up the Ford activities with Foreign anti-Semitic sources. The information so secured was given to the League confidentially and its nature was not disclosed. Most of it, however, has since been published in the columns of "Pipp's Weekly", a magazine published by a former editor of The Dearborn Independent who resigned a lucrative position rather than be a party to the Ford anti-Semitic campaign. The interested reader is referred to the files of that publication

In what manner has the League combated The Dearborn Independent's campaign?

By preparing answers to the main charges and distributing them wherever the Ford propaganda is being sent. By arousing public opinion generally to the dangers to American institutions inherent in Ford's campaign of hatred. By defending ourselves against some of our own defenders. The League has been consistently opposed to any form of reprisal. It has done so on the theory that our cause is a just one and must triumph, and that by descending to the methods of our enemies the League might alienate many who would otherwise spontaneously come to our defence. Further, no exposure of Ford or Liebold or Cameron could disgrace them more in the opinion of all decent-minded people than they have been disgraced by their own despicable conduct. The League has done everything in its power to impress upon some of our co-religionists the necessity of adopting a calm, dignified front in the face of the vicious attacks made upon them. It therefore opposed a paper published under the name of "Facts", which has adopted yellow journal methods and developed an unpleasant chauvinism in its editorial policy. In passing it might be noted that the publishers of this paper have recently offered to turn over to the Anti-Defamation League, the complete editorial direction of their journal. This offer was rejected for obvious reasons.

The League has devoted its attention in the main to the development of a sound public opinion and has abstained from exposing many facts which though discreditable to the author of the attacks bore but little relation to the subject matter and which would not have proved or disproved the accuracy of the charges contained in the Dearborn publication.

Almost a year ago the League published under the title "An Exposure", the first answer which had appeared up to that time from any authoritative source. This pamphlet was given wide distribution and served to demonstrate the hypocrisy of The Dearborn Independent's professions of sincerity. The pamphlet served also to answer the inquiries of thousands of correspondents who had been glutting the League's mail with requests for information. In December, 1920, the League joined with other representative national Jewish organizations in publishing a Joint Statement answering the charges. This statement was given wide publicity in the press of the country, and elicited much favorable editorial comment.

Public opinion as far as the public press is concerned is today almost unanimously lined up against the Ford anti-Semitic campaign. How much of this may be credited to a spontaneous reaction and how much of it may be due to the months of efforts exerted by the League to disclose the falsity of the evidence is of course a question which no one can answer. Hardly a day passes, however, but that some magazine or newspaper editor calls on the League for information and data. In a single day there was received for instance two letters, one from the editor of a Methodist publication who wanted more specific data than he had at hand to answer certain letters elicited by one of his editorials; the other from an editor of a paper published in North Carolina, who urgently requested literature and data with which to answer a four-column anti-Semitic tirade which by force of circumstances he was compelled to publish and "the effect of which he felt was foully slanderous". The four-column article in question was prepared by an attorney for Mr. Ford in answer to an editorial on Anti-Semitism. The editor felt compelled to publish it, but desired off-setting material to present in the same issue.

What publishing houses have been used by the anti-Semitic organizations?

Small, Maynard and Company, of Boston. published the first American translation of the Protocols. As an anonymous supplement to the text it published about one hundred pages of printed matter, the purpose of which was to prove the authenticity of the Protocols. This portion of the book, entitled "Evidence as to Origin and Authenticity", is a masterpiece of guile and hypocrisy. A protest addressed to the publishers calling their attention to the fact that the book was intended to arouse hatred against the Jew and would have that effect, that it was based upon falsehood and innuendo, and expressing the opinion that the publishers were not justified in thus acting in reckless disregard of the welfare of the country at large, brought the response from Mr. E. G. Rich, General Manager, that:

> "We feel the Jewish people owe us thanks in that by publishing the Protocols we removed this problem from that of a back-alley matter and brought it into the light of day so that the thing could be threshed out. If the Protocols are true, and you will note that I am very careful to make this extremely improbable, their publication will open a discussion which is of course of vital moment, and if they are untruthful their open discussion would emphasize their utter unworthiness and put a stop to the anti-Jewish propaganda based upon them".

This argument might have had more weight had not the major portion of the book published by Small, Maynard and Company consisted of a recitation of practically all the infamous anti-Jewish propaganda based upon the Protocols, and a mass of new perversions of the truth which might mislead, man on the street, but which were too obvious to deceive a Harvard graduate, of which institution Mr. Rich is an alumnus. Thousands of copies of this book were distributed free of charge and without having been ordered, directly from the publishing offices, to newspapers, lecturers, commercial organizations, etc. In an interview Mr. Rich stated that the material contained in the second half of the volume was prepared under his personal direction. Information secured by the League shows that the material was actually gathered by two Russians who are active in the organizations above mentioned. Recently Small, Maynard and Company have published another book by Brasol, this time not anonymously. The quotation above noted describing Bolshevism as a struggle of "Judas vs. Jesus", appears also in that volume.

Another firm involved in the publishing of anti-Semitic literature is G. P. Putnam & Sons. A statement of the correspondence between the League and this house will be found on another page of this issue.

A third publishing house which has recently printed an illustrated edition of the Protocols with the usual anti-Semitic addenda shall remain unnamed. "The Protocols" is the only book which this company has thus far published. The manager stated in an interview that he did not intend to advertise the book extensively because, as he put it "the Jews will do that for me". The plates from which this book were printed, however, have been traced to their source and it is possible that a sensational disclosure in this connection will be made in an early issue of this paper.

In what manner have national American associations been drawn into the anti-Semitic maelstrom?

Several American organizations have fallen easy prey to the wiles of foreign anti-Semitic propagandists. One organization, the name of which will be supplied on request, sent out letters to its members calling their attention to the Protocols and stating that the conspiracy disclosed in the book was "worthy of their serious consideration". A copy of the Small-Maynard edition was sent gratuitously to the recipients of these letters. One of the members, a stock broker, who received the letter and the book passed on the information to his customers in his weekly market letter in which he stated:

> "We have in our possession the complete translation of the Protocols showing the deliberate patience of the Jewish race over centuries, and containing some of the most astonishing and astounding statements. The very evident intent is, through the power of money to bankrupt the world"!

A lengthy correspondence between the League and the responsible parties resulted finally in a complete repudiation by the latter of the position previously taken. The president of the company also sent out, at his own expense, five hundred sets of the League's pamphlets, to those to whom he had originally sent the open letter above mentioned.

Direct correspondence with the officers and directors of the organization disclosed that action taken had not been authorized by the directors. The officials directly responsible made a complete denial. The League did not press the point, but took advantage of the offer of the president of the association to send out copies of the League's literature to all those among the members of the organization who had received copies of the Protocols. For this purpose he asked for and received one thousand sets of the League's pamphlets.

Another American patriotic organization which was imposed upon by the foreign propagandists is the National Civic Federation which is referred to in a previous section.

What original research work of a general nature is conducted by the League?

The Secretary of the League has been engaged for years in collecting and disseminating data bearing upon charitable, philanthropic, scientific, artistic and past and current worthy deeds, actions and accomplishments of Jews. The League has in its library all recent books printed in English, German or French bearing upon Jewish subjects. In addition the League has been fortunate in being made the depository of a vast amount of classified historical data which has been gathered as a result of decades of painstaking work and research by Professor Gotthard Deutsch of the Hebrew Union College. All Jewish newspapers and magazines published in the United States and many foreign papers are received regularly in the offices of the League and pertinent data appearing therein is classified and filed in such a manner as to be easily accessible. Many current secular magazines published in English, French or German are also received and digested regularly.

From time to time specific surveys and investigations of an economic nature have been undertaken. For instance, the League is now making a careful survey of the motion picture industry with a view to ascertaining the extent of the influence of Jews in the financing, filming, distributing and exhibiting of motion picture films.

It is the aim of the Governing Board to make the reference files of the League the most complete of its kind in the world.

With what other Jewish organizations is the Anti-Defamation League affiliated?

Four national Jewish organizations in addition to the parent organization are represented on the Governing Board of the League. A branch organization in Canada known as the Canadian Anti-Defamation Committee of the I. O. B. B., and a committee of London (England) Lodge are cooperating effectively with the League in combating anti-Semitic influences. It is also cooperating effectively in the accomplishment of their common object with the "Centralverein Deutscher Staatsbürger Jüdischen Glaubens" and the headquarters of District Grand Lodge, No. 8 (Berlin).

What non-Jewish organizations are cooperating with the League in its fight against anti-Semitism?

The League is cooperating effectively in its work with the following national organizations: The American Legion, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A., Boy Scouts of America and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Many local organizations of various kinds have also been cooperating.

What are the future plans of the League?

The League must continue to carry on all of the activities mentioned in the previous sections. In addition, if sufficient funds are made available, the lecture platform must be used in a far more extensive manner than has been possible up to this time. During the past year the League initiated its lecture program on a small scale. The Order has recently organized a National Lyceum Bureau which will provide lecturers for lodges on various Jewish topics of the day, on Jewish history, on conditions of our coreligionists in this and other lands and on the work accomplished by the various bureaus organized by the Order. The League will cooperate with the Lyceum Bureau in placing of special lecturers before non-Jewish audiences, especially in colleges and schools, so that the non-Jewish students may secure a true knowledge of Jewish history, philosophy and culture. It will also assist in the founding of Open Forum organizations in Jewish Temples which will be open to Jew and non-Jew and wherein all subjects affecting American citizens, ir-

(Continued on page 8).

G. P. Putnam's Sons Stop Printing Anti-Semitic Book

Agree "Cause of World Unrest" Unjust to the Jew

The publishing house of G. P. Putnam's Sons has evidently come to the conclusion that the Jew is not responsible for all the woes of the world. According to a letter just written to the Anti-Defamation League, the publishers agree that "The Cause of World Unrest" is "calculated to do injustice to the Jewish people of the world" and have decided to print no further supplies. This result was brought about through correspondence passing between the publishers and the League within the past few days.

It will be remembered that this publishing house announced last fall that it was printing and would soon release a new edition of the "Protocols" which was intended as a companion volume to the previously published "Cause of World Unrest." In deference to objections that were raised last November, the plans to publish the Protocols were abandoned. The firm, however, continued the publication and distribution of the "Cause of World Unrest".

In June of this year, the publishers deferred to the objections raised by certain Christian Scientists to an article criticizing Christian Science in one of their publications; the volume was recalled and another article inserted in its place. In explaining the reason for this action, one of the members of the firm stated that the action had been taken "out of a proper regard for the sensibility of people who have accepted Christian Science as their religious belief". Referring to this action, the Governing Board of the League wrote the publishers on June 29 as follows:

"The liberal spirit displayed in this matter encourages us to present our protest against the continued publication of another volume now being published and distributed by your company, which displays, to say the least, a disregard for the sensibility of people who have accepted Judaism as their religious belief. This book, 'The Cause of World Unrest', is an attempt to prove the authenticity of the Protocols by comparing the program contained therein with the trend of current events. The thesis of the anonymous writer, as stated on page 92, is that the Protocols predict 'a world revolution, and a world revolution carried out by a Jewish organization, and that the revolution now in progress—the Bolshevist revolution—is in fact carried on mainly by Jews, and is an attempt at a world revolution'. As proof that Bolshevism is a Jewish movement, the writer presents an astounding mass of half truths and utter falsehoods. If the book had been written by the most bitter anti-Semite for the purpose of inciting hatred against the Jew in this country, it could not have been more insidiously presented to accomplish that end.

"Should not the keen sense of fair play displayed in the Christian Science episode dictate a reexamination by your Publishing Board of 'The Cause of World Unrest'? We are confident that the members of the Board will make no invidious distinction between Jews and Christian Scientists in exercising a proper regard for the sensibilities of a large section of their fellow citizens".

In replying to this communication the publishers stated in part:

"We agree with you that the book in its entirety is calculated to do injustice to the Jewish people of the world. We should, on more grounds than one, not be interested in continuing the publication of the book in its present form, and we have decided to print no further supplies".

The letter from the publishers containing the above quotation and the reply of the League are published in full. Putnam's answer to the League's letter of July 15 has not been received up to the time this paper goes to press.

Leon L. Lewis, Esq.,
Anti-Defamation League,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

We write to acknowledge receipt of your favor of the 29th ult. and report as follows in regard to the matters in question:

1. The volume in regard to which, on behalf of Jewish American citizens, you make complaint, "The World Unrest", was brought into print in London under the authority of Mr. Gwynne, editor of The Morning Post. The Post is a paper which has had the reputation of being conservative not only in politics, but in its whole editorial standard. The material in the book had come into print in the first place as articles in the Post.

G. P. Putnam's Sons agreed, under the suggestion of Mr. Gwynne, to place an edition of the book in this country.

We were concerned to find, in having the entire text in our hands, that the volume contained material which was inaccurate and misleading, and not a few statements which were exaggerated and some of which were absolutely unwarranted.

We agree with you that the book in its entirety is calculated to do injustice to the Jewish people of the world.

We should, on more grounds than one, not be interested in continuing the publication of the book in its present form, and we have decided to print no further supplies.

2. The writer, however, finds himself in substantial accord with certain of the contentions maintained by Mr. Gwynne in his introduction. Bolshevism in Russia and Zionism in Palestine are at this time causes of grave unrest in certain divisions of the world, unrest which has its influence also in other regions.

The Bolshevist Government of Russia has been largely, it is fair to say with the names of the office holders on record, a Jewish undertaking. It is very sad that this government, in which the Jews had an exceptional opportunity of doing service to the world, with their exceptional intelligence and influence, should have brought so much misery upon Russia and anxiety upon Europe.

The writer has just returned from an annual visit to London. The information there secured confirms his impression that the announcements made by the Zionists and the operations that have been begun by them in Palestine have caused, and are still causing, unrest, trouble and war.

It is not surprising that the Arabians and Syrians, comprising nine-tenths of the population of Palestine, should be apprehensive of having their lands appropriated and their country exploited by the Zionists. The announcements from the Zionists headquarters in London give ground for such apprehension.

The fact that two thousand years ago the Jews were abominably treated in Palestine constitutes no justification for their attempting to redress that injustice today at the expense of the present inhabitants in Palestine who are in no way responsible for the earlier events.

The publication of Mr. Gwynne's volume has had the service of bringing into record the opinion of leading Jewish Americans, who include in their number some of the best citizens in our community, in strong condemnation of Bolshevism and in disapproval of Zionism.

In publishing Mr. Gwynne's volume, the publishers took pains to state in a publishers' introduction that they had accepted no responsibility for the statements and conclusions presented in the book. It had seemed to us, however, that the evils above specified called for frank and open discussion.

The writer took pains to secure from a scholarly Rabbi a promise to prepare for immediate publication a volume which should make reply to the charges in the World Unrest. After dawdling over the matter for a series of months, the Rabbi has finally, much to our annoyance, abandoned the task. We had made announcement of the book and through the failure of the Rabbi to keep his engagement we have been placed in a wrong position with the public.

We are very much disappointed that through the failure of our client to fulfil his agreement, we did not have the opportunity of associating our imprint with an authoritative statement in regard to the relations of the Jews to the troubles of the world. What we wanted to bring about was a fair investigation and a frank discussion of the matter.

3. There is no parallel between The World's Unrest and the indecent paper describing the Christian Scientists which had, through editorial laches, been permitted to find place in the Cambridge History of Literature.

The paper in question brought ridicule and abuse to bear upon a woman whose name is respected by millions of her followers. No gentleman ought to have allowed himself to use the phrases that found place in this article.

We have been ready as a mere matter of courtesy and justice and not on the ground of any pressure brought to bear from the Christian Scientists (and there has been no such pressure) to expend a considerable amount of money to cancel this paper and to reshape the volume.

Respectfully,
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS.

The Governing Board replied on July 15, 1921, as follows:

Gentlemen:

We are in receipt of your letter of the 1st instant advising that you have decided to print no further supplies of "The Cause of World Unrest". We are glad to note that you agree with us that the book in its entirety is calculated to do injustice to the Jewish people of the world, and that you have found material therein which was inaccurate and misleading, not a few statements which were exaggerated, and some which were absolutely unwarranted.

It would appear from your letter, however, that certain statements contained in "The Cause of World Unrest" have been accepted by you as facts. Had we been inclined to regard the book as innocuous because of its very extravagance, we would have been compelled to revise our opinion in this regard upon reading your statement that you find yourselves "in substantial accord with certain of the contentions maintained by Mr. Gwynne in his introduction".

Mr. Gwynne makes several contentions in his introduction, but one stands out preeminently and in the last analysis, is the raison d'etre of the volume, viz., that the Bolshevik Government of Russia is a Jewish government. From this premise he argues that Jews throughout the world "are engaged in a mighty attempt to destroy the established rule in many countries". This contention is, I presume, the one to which you refer, for in your letter you state "The Bolshevist Government of Russia has been largely, it is fair to say with the names of the office holders on record, a Jewish undertaking". While you rightfully deplore the misery which has been brought upon Russia as a result of the Soviet regime, you unjustly throw the onus for that misery upon the Jew. The official record of the personnel of the Soviet Republic shows the groundlessness of such a charge. There are, however, several unofficial lists which have been published by various propaganda organizations. One of these lists appears in your publication on page 112, and we presume that this is the "record" which induces you to state that the Bolshevist Government of Russia is a Jewish undertaking. As a matter of fact, that list is totally dishonest and it is evident that its compiler did not intend that the reader should know the truth. It is the basis for Mr. Gwynne's contention that eighty per cent of the Bolshevik leaders are Jews, and if accepted at its face value would prove that contention. A detailed examination of the list shows, however, how little reliability can be placed therein.

The ultimate power in the governmental system of Soviet Russia is in the hands of only a few men. These men are the virtual dictators of the country. For the most part they have been Bolsheviki long before the overthrow of the Czaristic Government. They are the men who have been conspiring for decades to secure the control over Russia which they now possess. They are guarding their power with all the oppression which is characteristic of dictators. They are the shapers of the policy of the Government in all its phases. These men constitute the Council of People's Commissars and they are seventeen in number. Sixteen of them are non-Jews. Eleven of these sixteen non-Jews are totally ignored in the list contained in your publication. Of the seventeen men who today rule Russia, only one, Trotsky, is a Jew. Only six members of the Council appear among the fifty names given in the "record" which you refer to, and of these six, only one, again Trotsky, is a Jew. Do you know who are the [illegible] for the [illegible], Interior, Finance, [illegible], Supplies, Justice, Labor and [illegible] Affairs? Do you know who [illegible] of the Economic Council [illegible], and who is the Executive Secretary of the Council of People's Commissars? You will not find their names in the "record" presented in your publication, but their names are easily ascertainable, and you will find that none of them are Jews. Nor are the ministers for Foreign Affairs, Industry and Commerce, Public Instruction or Public Welfare, Jews. In the list published by you are many men who are described as Jews who are totally unknown to those who have made a careful study of the personnel of the Russian Soviet Government. Included in the list also, are men who have distinguished themselves for their unremitting, self-sacrificing opposition to the Bolsheviki, namely Martov, Meshovsky, Dann and Abramovitch. The list also includes the name of Kamkov who was put to death by the Extraordinary Commission of the Bolsheviki for his anti-Bolshevik activities. Sentence was passed upon him by the head of the Extraordinary Commission, Dzerzhinsky, whose name does not appear upon your "record", but upon whose shoulders must rest the blame for much of the bitter cruelty and terrible excesses of the Russian reign of terror. Dzerzhinsky is not a Jew. It is obvious why his name does not appear in Mr. Gwynne's list. There are men whose names appear on the list as Jews who are incorrectly described. Manouilsky is a Gentile, an Ukrainian, Bogdanov is likewise incorrectly described as a Jew. A large number of names are names of men who do not hold and have never held any important positions in Russia either under the Bolsheviki or under the Kerensky Government. The assertion made in the paragraph directly following the list in "The Cause of World Unrest" that Lenin's mother and Karensky's mother are Jewish, is absolutely false.

Mr. Gwynne has for many years been the editor of the London Morning Post. That paper has been consistently opposed to the opening of trade relations between Great Britain and Soviet Russia. It has had facts at its disposal which few other papers have had because of its special interest in that subject. The list above mentioned which first appeared in the columns of that paper, must therefore, have been published with full knowledge of its total dishonesty. Almost immediately after its publication in the Morning Post, it was exposed as untrue by reports from disinterested sources. The writings of Wells, Brailsford and others show clearly the literary dishonesty of the Morning Post in this connection. The published list is the only basis for Mr. Gwynne's Jew-Bolshevik theory which is the keynote in the arch upon which he constructs his whole pseudo-history of Jewish plans for world domination. But like all lies it has persisted though the truth has become known. We would ordinarily not be surprised to find that men, whose daily work does not keep them in touch with the trend of world affairs, would found lasting opinions on Mr. Gwynne's falsehoods. It is astonishing however, that the truth had not permeated as far as the Publishing Board of G. P. Putnam's Sons at the time your firm undertook to publish "The Cause of World Unrest". The fact that it did not do so is perhaps the strongest proof that could be found of the far-reaching evil influence of anti-Semitic propaganda, for it must be assumed that had you known the list to be false you would not have accepted Mr. Gwynne's proposal to issue it under your imprint in America.

Your letter shows further, that other dishonest misrepresentations made in the volume have taken root. You state, "The fact that two thousand years ago the Jews were abominably treated in Palestine constitutes no justification for their attempting to redress that injustice today at the expense of the present inhabitants in Palestine who are in no way responsible for the earlier events". The insinuation is that the present inhabitants of Palestine are being abominably treated by Jews. This also is one of Mr. Gwynne's contentions. Another, as stated in his introduction, is that the policy of the British Government is definitely unfriendly to the Arabs, which he attempts to prove by the fact that the Government appointed a Jew as High Commissioner for Palestine. In passing it may be pertinent to state that Mr. Gwynne's paper, the London Morning Post, and other similar publications have been spreading the same propaganda contained in "The Cause of World Unrest" among the Arabs in Palestine. Every effort is being made to stir up antagonisms and animosities in that land. The same methods have been adopted as are being adopted in England and in America. The effect in Palestine has already become evident. The blood of the four hundred helpless and innocent men, women and children who were murdered and maimed during the Jaffa disturbances, will be credited in the last judgment to Mr. Gwynne and his colleagues.

You will bear with us, we hope, if we make this already long communication a little longer in order to advise you of certain easily provable facts which must have escaped your attention. Any one who knows the situation in Palestine could not make a statement such as is above quoted from your letter. The propaganda which has been spread in Palestine and throughout the world and which has had its effect in stirring up trouble in Jerusalem, in Jaffa and in other communities in Palestine is that a Jewish government is being set up to rule over the Moslem and Christian majority, that the Arab population of Palestine will have their holy places and lands taken from them and given to strangers. The High Commissioner of Palestine, in an address delivered at the Government House on June 3d on the occasion of the King's birthday, emphatically stated that this never was and never will be the policy of the British Government. In defining the meaning of the Balfour Declaration he stated that the interpretation which has been consistently placed upon that manifesto by the British authorities is that persecuted, homeless Jews "should be enabled to find here their home and that some among them, within the limits that are fixed by the numbers and interests of the present population, should come to Palestine in order to help by their resources and efforts to develop the country, to the advantage of all its inhabitants". Continuing, he said, "If any measures are needed to convince the Moslem and Christian population that those principles will be observed in practice and that their rights are really safe, such measures will be taken, for the British Government, the trustee under the Mandate for happiness of the people of Palestine, would never impose upon them a policy which that people had reason to think was contrary to their religious, their political and their economic interests". To what extent, it may be asked, has this policy been put into practice? The Arabs and Syrians have been taught by the propagandists that they would be ousted from their lands and reduced to slavery. The Morning Post and other propaganda papers are diligently spreading the story that a mass migration of Jews is about to be imposed upon them. Jewish agricultural colonies have existed in Palestine for decades. Their fertile farms were reclaimed from the desert. These colonists lived at peace with their Moslem neighbors until anti-Semitic propaganda defiled those far off communities with its loathsome touch. Vast irrigation projects are now taking form in Palestine and will eventually increase hundred fold the acreage already restored to cultivation. Moslem rights are in no way prejudiced by these projects. Until that land is reclaimed the Jewish immigration is rigorously limited. These facts are carefully ignored by the Gwynne type of propagandists who sows the seeds of hatred among the Moslems. No mass migration into Palestine is impending and the Moslems have no real cause for alarm. The only persons who are being admitted to Palestine are (a) travelers, i. e., people who do not intend to settle in Palestine and whose stay will not exceed three months, (b) persons of independent means, (c) wives, children and other persons wholly dependent upon residents in Palestine, (d) persons who have a definite prospect of employment with specified employers or enterprises, (e) members of professions who intend to follow their calling in Palestine.

If you will take the pains to investigate the truth of the assertions above made, we are sure you will not again charge the Jew with "an abominable treatment" of inhabitants of Palestine.

We have burdened you with this long statement because we wish to impress upon you the crowning injustice of your communication. You state that there is no parallel between "The Cause of World Unrest" and the Christian Science article in spite of the fact that the former involves the good name of three millions of your fellow citizens, whereas the latter involves the good name of one woman. You state that you were ready as a mere matter of courtesy and justice to cancel the Christian Science article, although in doing so there was considerable financial loss. In the case of "The Cause of World Unrest" you content yourselves with stating that you will print no further supplies. Your action in the case of the Christian Science article is what most people would have expected of you. It is difficult for us, however, to understand why the same considerations did not urge you to withdraw "The Cause of World Unrest" and cancel those copies which you now have in stock. Are not courtesy and justice equally involved in the present instance, and are there not other moral considerations of at least equal importance? It should be unnecessary for us to enumerate these. We will refrain from referring to the personal ethical standards involved, but in justice to the high ethical standards maintained by most of the publishing houses in this country, we cannot refrain from registering our opinion that your conduct in this instance does not measure up to that standard. We realize, of course, that publishers are not expected to vouch for the contents of books bearing their imprint, but the charges made in your publication are so serious and so far reaching in their consequences, so unfair and unjust to millions of Jews in this country and throughout the world, that only incontrovertible evidence could have justified the association of your imprint with the book. In place of evidence one finds only gossip, rumour and innuendo. Evidence in the true sense is totally lacking.

We are inclined to believe that the decision to publish "The Cause of World Unrest" was hastily made and that the above facts will induce your Publishing Board to make the amende honorable. May we hope therefore, that our original suggestion will be accepted and the book be resubmitted to your Publishing Board for further examination.

Very respectfully,
Governing Board,
LEON L. LEWIS,
Secretary.

AN A. D. L. CATECHISM.

(Continued from page 6).

respective of their religion, may be presented and discussed.

In these lectures as little reference as possible will be made to those who have abused the hospitable sanctuary afforded them on American shores by fanning the flames of class hatred among the ignorant and bigoted for their own selfish aims. Knowing as they do so well the baseness of their calumnies and calculated deception they must, in their hours of solitude, despise themselves with an intensity even greater than the contempt in which they are held by any victims of their slanderous attacks. But while they may be left to their own melancholy reflections on what, in their hearts, they know themselves to be, the issues which they raise are issues which must be met. To that task the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith is dedicated. Though truth is always invincible, it is sometimes slow in proving its strength. Patience and continued effort over a period of years is essential if that better understanding between Jew and non-Jew, which is the League's cardinal object, is to be accomplished.

WAR ORPHANS' BUREAU.

The Independent Order of B'nai B'rith has secured the services of Captain Elkan C. Voorsanger to take charge of its recently organized War Orphans' Bureau. Captain Voorsanger will also manage the Order's National Lyceum Bureau, which will supply lecturers to lodges and Jewish organizations generally, and, in cooperation with the Anti-Defamation League, will establish courses of lectures on Jewish subjects in schools and colleges. He will also cooperate with Mr. Sidney G. Kusworm, the director of Americanization, in extending the scope of the Americanization department.

Captain Voorsanger, who is a graduate of the Hebrew Union College and who, prior to the war, occupied pulpits in Grand Rapids and St. Louis, has had a most varied and interesting career. During the war he was chaplain for New York's famous fighting division, the 77th. After the armistice, as director of the Jewish Welfare Board work in France, he established most of the J. W. B. branches overseas. Subsequently he organized the overseas units of the Joint Distribution Committee and was director of personnel for the J. D. C. in Europe.

The Mysterious Nilus and the Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion

By A. M. du Chayla

(Reprinted from The Jewish Tribune, Paris, France)

Introduction.

In the first days of April, 1921, after the evacuation of Crimea, and after I had spent a few days in Constantinople, I arrived at Lyons. Great was my astonishment when I beheld among the new books exhibited in the windows of the bookstores on the Place Bellecour, a French edition of the Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion, the same book which Sergey Alexandrovitch Nilus, whom I knew personally, had edited in 1902. A long introduction by the French editor, Monseigneur Jouin, attempts to give a critical analysis of the previous editions and to determine the personality of the author. It contains many inaccuracies, the reason for which can, however, be easily understood.

Later, as I read the Russian periodicals appearing in Paris, it became clear to me that the Protocols had become the storm center for a serious polemic in the press of the world and even in the Russian press. These observations moved me to make public what I know of Nilus and his work.

I must declare at the outset that all the information given here on Nilus and his activities is based on a long and intimate relationship with him and with persons who know him well. These sources are above suspicion on the grounds of either honesty or impartiality.

I have no ill feeling against Nilus. That is the reason why in several details I have been obliged to spare his personality and to touch on his private life only to the extent to which it affected his public life and the revelation of truth. In doing this I have constantly kept before me the maxim, "Amicus Plato, sed magis amica Veritas".

I. How I Came to Know Nilus.

Towards the end of January, 1909, in my eagerness for religious research, I followed the advice of the late Metropolitan of St. Petresbourg, Monseigneur Anthony, and betook myself to the renowned cloister "Optina Poustine".

This monastery is situated about six versts from the city of Kozelsk, in the district of Kalouga, between a large pine forest and the left bank of the River Jizdra. Near the monastery were a number of villas, in which resided laymen who desired to lead a monastic life. At that time the community comprised about 400 monks, who busied themselves with agricultural labors and led a life of religious contemplation under the spiritual guidance of three Elders. In those days, the monastery at Optina was the source of a remarkable influence on Russian thought. It was frequently visited by the great Russian writers, such as Gogol, Tolstoi, and Dostoevskii, the latter of whom took one of the Elders of the monastery as a model for one of the characters in his "Brothers Karamazoff".

The day following my arrival, the head of the monastery, Archimandrite Xenophon, proposed to introduce me to Mr. S. A. Nilus, a religious writer living near the monastery. In Petersburg I had already heard of Nilus from Mr. W. A. Ternawtseff, in charge of special missions for the Procurator General of the Holy Synod and a member of the Society of Religious Philosophy. He had told me that Nilus was an interesting man, though very eccentric.

After dinner I was introduced to Nilus, in the rooms of the Archimandrite. He was a man of about 45, of the true Russian type—big and broad—with a gray beard and deep blue eyes, which, however, seemed to be veiled with a troubled shadow. He wore boots and a Russian blouse, girdled with an embroidered ribbon.

S. A. Nilus spoke French very well, which was very useful to me. We were both very glad to make one another's acquaintance, and I did not hesitate to accept his invitation to visit him. He lived in a large villa, of about ten rooms, where formerly lived pensioned priests. Nilus and his family, in all three people, occupied only four rooms. The other rooms formed a sort of asylum paid for by a pension, which the minister of the court had granted to Nilus' wife. This asylum sheltered all sorts of degenerates, idiots and lunatics, awaiting miraculous cures.

The ancestors of Nilus were Swiss emigres, who had come to Russia during the reign of Peter I. Nilus assured me that he was a direct descendant of Maliouta Skouratoff, special executioner under Ivan, the Terrible. Nilus himself was a ruined proprietor from the district of Orel. His brother, Demitry Alexandrovitch Nilus, was a judge in Moscow. The two brothers were enemies. Sergey Alexandrovitch regarded his brother as an atheist, while the latter looked upon Sergey as a madman.

Nilus was undoubtedly a man of excellent education. He had successfully graduated from the courses of law at the Moscow University. He knew perfectly French, German, and English, and was well acquainted with contemporary European literature. But, as I later learned, Nilus could not get along with anyone. His tumultous character and capricious temperament had forced him to give up his post at the Ministry of Justice, which had appointed him judge in Trans-Caucasia on the Persian frontier. He was a great admirer of Nietsche's philosophy, with its theoretical anarchism and radical negation of actual civilization.

With such a temperament Nilus found it impossible to stay in Russia. He went abroad with a certain Madame K. and lived a long time in France and especially in Biarritz, until he was informed that his property in Orel had become worthless. It was then, about 1900, that Nilus underwent a spiritual crisis which moved him to mysticism.

Nilus presented me to his wife, Helena Alexandrovna Ozerov, a former lady-in-waiting at the court of the Queen Alexandra Fiodorovna. She was the daughter of Ozerov, former Russian minister to Athens. Mme. Nilus was a good-natured and submissive woman, subordinate to her husband in every respect. So submissive was she, in fact, that she was in good relations with the former friend of Nilus, Mme. K., who, also ruined, had been given shelter in their house.

My friendly relations with Nilus lasted during the nine months of my stay at Optina, until November 10, 1909. When I later returned to Russia I again called on Nilus, but his intolerance forced me to break off relations with him.

In 1918, Nilus lived in Kiev at the convent known as Protection of the Holy Virgin. I later learned that in the winter of 1918-1919, after the fall of the Hetman, he escaped to Germany and lived in Berlin. This information was confirmed by Mme. Kartzeva, a nurse at the hospital of the White Cross in Crimea.

II. "The Map of the Kingdom of the Antichrist".

From the very beginning, my relations with Nilus were marked with endless discussions on religious questions, in which he made all efforts to convert me to his point of view. On the third or fourth day after our acquaintance, during a discussion on the relationship between civilization and Christianity, Nilus asked me if I was acquainted with the Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion, which he was editing. I replied that I knew nothing about them.

Nilus picked up a book and began to translate in French the most remarkable passages of the text and his commentaries on them. At the same time he was watching the expression on my face, imagining that I would be thunder-struck by his revelations. He was very much troubled when I declared that I could see nothing in the document that differed greatly from the pamphlets of Edouard Drumont and the mystifications of Leo Taxil. Nilus objected to this, saying that my knowledge of the Protocols was of a superficial and fragmentary character and that the verbal translation tends to weaken the effect. He said that it would be easy for me to acquaint myself with the Protocols, inasmuch as the original was written in French.

Later, I learned that the portfolio containing the Protocols was kept until January, 1909, at the home of the monk, Daniel Bolotoff, a portrait-painter well known in Petersburg. Nilus did not keep the manuscript of the Protocols with him, fearing that the Jews would steal it. I remember my amusement and his fear when a Jewish druggist from Kozelsk had wandered in Nilus' garden in the course of a walk through the forest near the monastery. Nilus was for a long time convinced that this Jewish druggist was a spy sent to watch on his movements.

A few days after our first conversation concerning the Protocols, about four o'clock in the afternoon, I received a note in which Nilus asked me to call at once about important business. I found Nilus alone in his study. His wife and Mme. K. had gone to attend vespers. I noticed on his desk a large envelope of a black material, with a large three-branched cross with the inscription, "By this sign thou shalt conquer". A small ikon of the Archangel Michael was placed on the envelope. The whole thing bore the character of exorcism.

Nilus, after some signs before a large ikon, opened the envelope and took out a note-book bound in leather. I later learned that both the envelope and the leather binding had been prepared in the monastery, under the personal supervision of Nilus. The cross and the other symbols had been executed by Mme. Nilus, under the direction of her husband.

"This", said Nilus, "is the map of the Kingdom of the Antichrist".

He opened the note book. On the first page I noticed a large blue spot as if some one had overturned an inkwell and that the ink had been removed to some extent. The paper was thick and yellowish. The text was written in French in several handwritings and, it seemed to me, even with different inks.

"The reason for this", said Nilus, "is that at the sessions of the Kahal different persons filled each time the duties of secretary. This accounts for the different handwritings".

Apparently Nilus regarded this detail as a proof that the manuscript was an original text. Yet I remember that he told me another time that the manuscript was only a copy.

After having shown me the manuscript, Nilus placed it before me on the desk, opened the first page and said "Now, read"! In reading the manuscript I was struck by certain peculiarities of the text. There were many mistakes in spelling and especially idioms that were not French. There was no doubt that the manuscript had not been prepared by a Frenchman. I read for two hours and one-half. When I had finished, Nilus took the note-book, replaced it in its envelope, and locked it in a drawer of his desk. While I was reading Mme. Nilus and Mme. K. returned from church. I did not know whether Mme. K. was a party to the secret of the manuscript. I therefore said nothing about it. Nilus, however, was eager to know my opinion and seeing my discomfiture, guessed exactly the cause of my silence.

"Come, you doubting Thomas", he said laughingly, "do you believe now after you have touched, seen, and read the Protocols? Tell us what you think of them. There are no strangers here. My wife knows all about them and as far as Mme. K. is concerned, it is, thanks to her, that the schemes of the enemies of Christ have been discovered."

I was greatly interested. Could it be that Nilus obtained the Protocols through Mme. K.? I was wondering how a woman so obese as to be almost immobile and who, moreover, suffered from disease, could have penetrated the "Secret Kahal of the Wise Men of Zion."

"Yes", said Nilus, "Mme. K. lived abroad for a long time. In Paris, she received from the hands of a Russian general this manuscript, which she transmitted to me. This general had removed the manuscript from the archives of the Freemasons."

I asked Nilus whether the name of this general was a secret.

"Not at all," replied Nilus, "it is General Ratchkovsky, a very brave and active man who has done much in his day to counteract the activities of the enemies of Christ."

I recalled that while in France, when I was taking lessons in Russian from a student called Ezopoff, the latter had told me that the Russian political police did not leave Russian political offenders in peace even when the latter had escaped to France. He said that General Ratchkovsky was at the head of this police. I asked Nilus if this General Ratchkovsky was not the head of the Russian political police in France. My question seemed to surprise and displease Nilus. He replied in a vague manner that Ratchkovsky fought against Freemasonry and Satanic sects.

Nilus was anxious to know the impression left on me by the Protocols. I told him plainly that I adhered to my former statement that the Protocols belong to the class of cheap mystifications such as "The Devil Unmasked" and the "Devil During the 19th Century", etc. Nilus' face clouded.

"You are indeed under the influence of the Devil", he said. "The greatest trick of the Devil is that he can make people deny not only his influence on human events but even his very existence. What will you say when I show you how everything contained in the Protocols has come true and how the mysterious sign of the Antichrist appears everywhere as an announcement of his approaching reign"?

Nilus arose and we all followed him into his study. He picked up his book and brought in from his own room a small chest, which I later called, "the museum of the Antichrist". He began to read further in the text and the commentaries which he was preparing for the edition. He then passed on to the "evidence". He opened the chest and I saw amidst indescribable disorder a number of objects made of rubber, some household utensils, insigniae of technical schools, even the cipher of the Queen Alexandra Fiodorovna and the cross of the Legion of Honor. On each of these objects his hallucination showed him the "seal of the Antichrist" in the guise of a triangle or a pair of crossed triangles. It was enough for any object to bear on it a figure resembling somewhat a triangle for his inflamed imagination to see in it the sign of the Antichrist and the seal of the Wise Men of Zion. All these observations entered into the edition of the Protocols, published in 1911.

With increasing restlessness, under the influence of a sort of mystic terror, Nilus explained to me that the sign of the "Son of Iniquity" has contaminated everything, and that it flourishes even amidst the designs and ornaments of churches and in the decorations of the holy ikons. It was midnight. The appearance, the voice, and the weird gestures of Nilus showed that his mind was on the brink of a precipice, and that his reason would at any moment dissolve into madness.

I tried to calm Nilus and to show him that even in the Protocols nothing is said of sinister signs. I did my best to convince him that he had discovered nothing new, since the mystic sign of which he spoke has been noted in every work on occultism from those of Hermes Triamegistus and Paracelsus, who surely were not Wise Men of Zion, down to our contemporaries, Papus, Stanislas de Guaita, etc., who surely are not Jews. Nilus noted carefully my arguments, but instead of calming him, as I hoped they would, they only aggravated to their utmost limit his morbid sensations.

A few days later, he sent to the bookseller, Gauthier, at Moscow, a large order for all the books on the hermetic sciences, which I had mentioned to him. In the third edition of the Protocols, which appeared two years later, in 1911, he inserted many extracts and illustrations, which he had borrowed from the books which I had mentioned to him.

A little later when General Ratchkovsky was involved in some political scandal, I asked Nilus, "Don't you believe that your General Ratchkovsky has been duped by some one and that in taking his Protocols as gospel truth you are following a false trail?"

"You know", replied Nilus, "my favorite citation from St. Paul is 'The will of God is accomplished through human weakness'. Let us admit that the Protocols are false, but is it not possible that God should make use of them in order to expose the iniquity which is approaching? Did not the ass of Balaam utter prophecy? Cannot God transform the bones of a dog into sacred miracles? If he can do these things, he can also make the announcement of truth come from the mouth of a liar".

III. How Nilus Edited the Protocols

Before exposing the circumstances which brought Nilus into possession of the Protocols, I wish to call to the attention of the reader a peculiarity in the 1917 edition of the Protocols. I refer to the statement by Nilus that the manuscript of the Protocols had been transmitted to him by a nobleman named Alexey Nikolaievitch Soukhotin. This statement is a direct contradiction of what Nilus had previously told me, namely, that the manuscript had been given to him by Mme. K., who had obtained it from General Ratchkovsky.

Being well acquainted with the intimate life of Nilus I can readily understand why, in a public document, he could not speak of Mme. K. . . . I am convinced that this A. N. Soukhotin is not a mythical person but, in all probability, the intermediary between Mme. K., who was then in Paris, and Nilus, who was in Russia. For intimate reasons Soukhotin thus became the veil. hiding from the reader the mysterious lady, Mme. K.

The translation of the document took place under the following circumstances:

In 1900 Nilus returned to Russia and wandered in poverty from monastery to monastery. It was then that he wrote, "Notes of an Orthodox, or the Great and the Little", a small volume in which he described the conversion of an intellectual atheist to religious mysticism. This booklet elicited some very warm reviews in the Russian religious periodicals, which eventually reached the Grand Duchess Elizabeta Fiodorovna, who thus became interested in Nilus.

The Grand Duchess had always fought against the adventurers, who surrounded the Czar, and especially a certain Philipp of Lyons. She was greatly dissatisfied with the confessor of the Royal Family archpriest Yamyscheff, whose duty it was to preserve the Czar from malign influences. The Grand Duchess thought that Nilus, a Russian mystic and orthodox. would exert a favorable influence on the Czar.

Major General Michael Petrovitch Stepanoff was greatly attached to the Grand Duchess, and it was through him that Nilus was sent to Tsarskoie Sielo and there introduced to Helena Alexandrovna Ozerov, who was later to become his wife. This took place in 1901.

When Nilus left France, there remained in Paris a person very dear to him, namely, Mme. K. This woman, who had lost her entire fortune and who was greatly saddened by her separation from Nilus, became interested in mysticism and frequented all the occult cenaeles in Paris. It was thus that she encountered Ratchkovsky, who moved in the same circles, and received from him the manuscript of the Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion, which she transmitted to Nilus. It is quite possible that Ratchkovsky, who was then intent on removing the influence of Philipp on the Czar, wished to make use of the Protocols in order to gain the good will of Nilus, who he thought would be the successor of Philipp.

Nilus produced a very good impression on Helena Ozerov and the rest of the court, who were opposed to Philipp. Thanks to the aid of these persons, he was enabled to publish in 1902 the first edition of the Protocols, with an appendix on his own religious experiences. The book was entitled, "The Great in the Little and the Antichrist as a Near Political Possibility". A copy of it was presented to the Czar and Czarina. At the same time the adversaries of Philipp arranged the marriage between Nilus and Mlle. Ozerov and the ordination of Nilus into the priesthood. Arrangements were also being made to establish Nilus as the confessor of the Czar. Things looked so promising that Nilus had already ordered priestly garments.

However, Philipp and his followers trumped up a canonical prohibition against the induction of Nilus into the priesthood. As soon as this prohibition was called to the attention of the ecclesiastical authorities, [illegible] fell into disgrace and was forced to leave Tsarskoie Sielo. Again penniless [illegible] the meagre honorarium, which [illegible] from the "Feuillets de la [illegible] he again wandered from mon[illegible]tery. Marriage was impossible for Mme Ozerov possessed nothing beyond the pension which she was receiving at court and which would have been withdrawn had she married Nilus.

In 1905, however, Philipp had ceased to exert any influence on the Czar. The friends of Nilus obtained the Imperial consent to grant Mlle. Ozerov her pension, even if she married. It was also through the influence of Mlle. Ozerov that Nilus was enabled to publish a second edition of the Protocols, with new material concerning St. Seraphin de Saroff. I remember that this edition bore a title different from the first and was published in Tsarskoie Sielo, under the auspices of the White Cross.

IV. The Russian Church and Russian Public Opinion on the Protocols.

The first two editions of the Protocols passed almost unnoticed in Russia. In fact, only one newspaper reviewed the books. The theological reviews did not even mention them, and it is doubtful whether they knew of their existence since the edition was a small one and was bought by very few people. Most of the authorities of the Russian Church with whom I spoke concerning Nilus and his work had a very poor opinion of Nilus whom they regarded as a crazed fanatic. In 1911, Nilus addressed a letter to the patriarchs of the Orient, to the Holy Synod, and to the Pope, asking them to call together the 8th Ecumenical Council in order to take measures to protect Christianity against the coming of the Antichrist. At the same time Nilus preached this doctrine of preparedness to the monks at Optina. The monastic peace was so troubled by Nilus that the authorities asked him never again to appear at the cloister.

The first indications of public interest in the Protocols became apparent in 1918. A new edition of the Protocols was published by Ismailoff, a Moscow lawyer. The Sentinel, a publication marked for its constant pogrom agitation was advertising the new edition. In February 1919, however, the Diet of the Don ordered the supression of this publication. The center of anti-Semitic propaganda was then transferred to Rostoff, the seat of the Department of Propaganda for the army of General Denikine. From Rostoff the Protoçols were sent out in great numbers and distributed among the units of the volunteers and among the Cossack troops at Kouban. They served as fuel to a violent agitation, in favor of pogroms and brought lurid and pernicious results. This propaganda demoralized the troops and gave them a justification for the pillages which were a cause of their eventual defeat. A circular against this propaganda was sent to all the chaplains at the front by Archpriest George Schavelsky, head of the military clergy, but the effects of this circular were paralyzed by the attitude of the commanding officers.

During the summer of 1918 Malakhoff, formerly a professor at the Moscow Academy, arrived at Rostoff and began a violent anti-Semitic agitation based on the Protocols. The Protocols were of special importance in the pogroms in the Ukraine. One of my friends, Colonel Dzougaeff, told me this characteristic anecdote: He was in Kiev during the fighting between the Hetman Skoropadsky and Petlioura. He escaped in disguise but was later arrested by the soldiers of Petlioura, who mistook him for a Jew and wished to shoot him. One of the chiefs whom he asked the reason for this, said, "You wish to give us a king with a head of gold. So it was stated at the sessions of your Wise Men of Zion". . . .

Crimea, during the regime of General Wrangel, was especially noted for anti-Semitic propaganda based on the Protocols. Professor Malakhoff, the priest Vostokoff and some journalists subsidized by the government, announced at the top of their voices the danger of the Protocols and the universal Judeo-Masonic plot.

In conclusion let me state that in Russia where the Protocols originated, they had no influence whatever for a long time. Their influence showed itself only as a justification for atrocities during civil war. That is why I was so astonished to see the Protocols translated into the principal European languages. It might be supposed that this interest has manifested itself in connection with the great events of our country, most of them indeed apocalyptic and inexplicable. But it seems to me that this manner of explaining an historical cataclysm greatly resembles the practises of the women of the Orient, who attempt to foretell the future by means of fantastic arrangement of stones or by the tossing of a coin.

Dr. Kravskopf Lauds Cardinal

Rabbi Evokes Storm of Applause at K. of C. Dinner

THE Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf of Philadelphia was a prominent figure at the reception dinner tendered Cardinal Dougherty by the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus of the First District of Pennsylvania and Delaware at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Dr. Krauskopf spoke as follows:

"Standing in the presence of His Eminence, the Cardinal, and of the other distinguished prelates and priests of the Church of Rome, as guest of the local Order of the Knights of Columbus, that has for its mission the strengthening of the benevolent work of the Mother Christian Church, I, a son of Israel, feel more inclined to offer a prayer than to make a speech—a prayer of Thanksgiving that I have lived to see the day when a Cardinal and a Rabbi can meet and greet as friends, when the honor that comes to the one is as heartily enjoyed by the other as if it had come to himself—a prayer of thanksgiving that, under the spiritual leadership of such Godly men as Archbishop Ryan, Prendergast and Dougherty, it has been made possible in this city for Catholic and Jew to live peacefully side by side, each respecting the other's faith and people, each ready and eager to labor with the other in every cause that makes for the good of humanity, for the peace and welfare of our beloved country.

"A time there was when the presence and participation of a rabbi at a gathering such as this could not even have been thought of, when it would have brought ignominy or excommunication or suffering upon the one who attempted to make it possible. A time there was when people of different religious faiths looked upon each other as enemies, ascribed to each other all sorts of devilish deeds and fiendish traits. There may still be readers of such vile papers as 'The Menace' or Henry Ford's 'Dearborn Independent' who believe that Catholic and Jew are hoofed and horned and tailed. I recall having been told that when Archbishop Ryan, of sainted memory, was stationed as a young priest at St. Louis, Mo., a lady was thrown almost into spasms upon being unexpectedly introduced to him at a public reception. Father Ryan, observing her stepping backward trembling, took off his cap, and, bowing low, said: 'Madame, you observe that I have no horns'. 'Yes, yes', she stammered in reply, 'Yes, yes, I see, but you are young yet'.

"Thank God, that people who are professing religion are becoming religious, that both Christian and Jew are beginning to understand that such teachings of the Old and New Testament as 'Love thy neighbor as thyself', 'Do as thou wouldst be done by' were not intended merely to be mouthed in the pulpit or to be mumbled in the pew, but to be practiced in our daily lives, in our relationship with our fellowmen, be their race or creed what it may. Thank God, that people are beginning to realize that God is present as much in the Cathedral as in the Abbey, in the Mosque as in the Synagogue. Wherever a man worships with a pure heart, there he kneels, or bows, or prostrates himself in the presence of God. To my synagogue there came one early morning a little Irish woman with market basket on her arm, proceeded up the centre aisle, knelt before the altar and recited her prayers. The sexton walked up to her, and, touching her gently on the shoulder, remarked: 'You have made a mistake. This is a synagogue, not a church'. The little woman looked confusedly about her for a moment or two, and then said: 'And sure, God is here, too'. I should have been glad to have met that little woman, and to have told her that she had expressed more of true religion in a few words than is contained in many a volume of theological lore.

"Creeds differ because parentage differs. Had I been born of Catholic parents I might have ministered today in one of Cardinal Dougherty's parishes. Had he been born of Jewish parents, he might have established a cardinalate in the Jewish Church. Creeds differ because minds differ. Had God wished all men to believe alike, He could as easily have made all minds to think alike. As harmony amidst diversity is a law of nature, so should harmony amidst diversity be a law of religion. There is room in Heaven for every man who has room in his heart for his fellowman, whether he worship in Greek or Latin, in Arabic or Hebrew or English. No man's creed can be wrong whose deed is right.

"When all is said and done, it is the deed that counts. What matters it whether the color of the cow is red or black or tawny as long as the milk is white and pure? What matters it where the wheat is grown as long as it makes wholesome bread? No matter how many and different the rivers that empty into the ocean, the clouds born of it scatter blessings far and wide. No matter how many and different the denominations, each contributes its share toward the civilization of the world. Our soldier lads sailed overseas from the North and from the South, from the East and from the West; there was no recognition of State line in the Argonne woods. There they were all alike, true and brave and victorious Americans.

"One night, years ago, I was sitting with other tourists in the natural ampitheatre about Old Faithful in Yellowstone Park, to witness an eruption of that geyser under a searchlight of different colors. While waiting, some of the tourists intoned their respective State songs, to discover thereby others of their State. Texan answered to the song of Texas, Ohioan to that of Ohio, California to that of California, each song telling of the glory of its State. At last the geyser burst forth and presented, under the different colored lights an awe-inspiring sight. For a while not a sound was heard beyond the hissing of steam and rushing of waters. Suddenly, as if commanded by the baton of an invisible leader, all rose and intoned in common our National Hymn, 'My Country 'Tis of Thee'. Kentuckian, Pennsylvanian, Rhode Islander had ceased to be. All alike were Americans.

"Even so, however much men may sing their songs of praise of their respective creeds, once within Heaven's gates their different songs will melt into one grand common hymn of praise of the common Father of all.

"I have read of a convent church in which the two sexes worshipped in common, but were separated from each other by a wall sufficiently high to prevent the monks and nuns seeing each other, but not so high as to prevent their voices from mingling, as the Latin chronicler wrote: 'Murus corpora, non voces disjungit'.

"Whatever the walls be that separate creed from creed they must never be so high and so forbidding as to prevent the hands and hearts and voices of their respective followers from joining in every cause making for the ennoblement of self, for the betterment of mankind.

"In the tearing down of forbidding walls and in the opening of pathways between his and other creeds, your honored Cardinal has rendered distinguished service in the past. And he will render yet greater service in the future. The more I see and hear of him the more assured am I that the spirit of God is in his soul and the love of man in his heart. Every inch of him betokens the priestly man and the manly priest. I honor his Church because of him and I honor him because of his Church and I honor you, Knights of Columbus, for honoring your Church by honoring him.

"By the same traits—greatness of heart and soul and mind—by which Abraham Lincoln raised himself from log cabin to White House, Dennis Dougherty raised himself from collier to Cardinal. And he may raise himself higher still. About this time, seven years ago, I witnessed during a Consistory at Rome the raising to the cardinalate of the present Pope. I may yet live to see 'Our Own Cardinal' raised to the dignity of the first American Pope of the Church of Rome".

U. S. CATHOLICS TO COMBAT ANTI-SEMITISM.

The Catholics of America will help the American Jews combat religious prejudice in this country, it is declared in the first issue of Columbia, organ of the Knights of Columbus. The magazine states further that it has received letters from every part of the country in which Supreme Knight Flaherty's sharp attack upon anti-Semitic propaganda is commended.

JEW AND MASON.

Evidently the Dearborn Independent is very solicitous lest its sponsorship of the Protocols should be construed as an attack upon the Mason as well as upon the Jew. A book review in the Topeka Capital by Honorable J. S. West, Justice of the Supreme Court of Kansas, elicited a request from the Dearborn publishers as to "where we have ever linked the Jew and Mason". Justice West answered in true judicial style, succinctly and to the point. His letter, which we reproduce, should put an end to further pettifoggery and quibbling in this connection:

The Dearborn Publishing Company,
Dearborn, Michigan.

Gentlemen:

I am in receipt of yours of the 16th in which you state that in my review of John Spargo's book the statement occurs: "Henry tries to make his readers believe that the Masons and the Jews have it all mapped out to join and tell us where to head in". And you ask if I will inform you "where we have ever linked the Jews and the Masons".

The Topeka Capital of May 10, 1921, under the heading "I've Been Reading" contains this communication:

"The Jews and American Ideals, By John Spargo.

"It is a superb vindication of the most wonderful race in the world from the charge of attempted subjugation of civilized humanity made by Henry Ford's Dearborn paper. Henry tries to make his readers believe that the Masons and the Jews have it all mapped out to join and tell all the rest of us where to head in.

"These people who for 2,000 years have been victims rather than wielders of force, whose tender family relations, freedom from the need of charity, and marvelous acumen, have marked their progress in spite of persecution and banishment, have been and are centuries ahead of us in their observance of the commandment to honor one's father and mother, and in their peaceful impulses. To the world war our Jews sent more men in proportion than we did. They have already furnished one premier and one lord chief justice to Great Britain and have one-ninth of the members of the American Supreme Court.

"The book is a monument to the historical knowledge, linguistic skill and native fair-mindedness of its socialist, non-Jewish author. Everybody ought to read it.

"J. S. WEST,
"Justice of supreme court of Kansas".

You suggest that I made the statement over my name with my "official title appended". I do not blame you for referring to this if you thought I was a big enough fool to append the title to the little item. Somebody in the Capital office did that appending, to my chagrin, but as it was already done when I saw the article I could not help it.

Now as to your question. You do not favor me with a denial that you have linked the Jews and the Masons. If you have, you need no proof from me. If you have not, then you ought to take up the matter with Mr. Spargo who says in this book that you have exploited the so-called Russian "protocols" which "protocols" he says claim that "the Masonic orders throughout the world have been blind dupes and tools of this superimperialism of the Jews". (p. 12.) He states that one "Nilus" asserted that these "protocols" were "signed by representatives of Zion of the Thirty-third Degree". (p. 23.) He says that Nilus stated:

"This document came into my possession some four years ago (1901) with the positive assurance that it is a true copy in translation of original documents stolen by a woman from one of the most influential and most highly initiated leaders of Freemasonry".

In "The History of a Lie", by Herman Bernstein, published in February, last, he states that directly after the protocols, comes a statement by Nilus that they are signed by representatives of Zion of the thirty-third degree. He quotes from the 1917 edition of Nilus as follows:

"But it is only definitely known to me now and in a manner worthy of belief, and that through Jewish sources, that these protocols are nothing other than the strategic plans for the conquest of the world under the heel of Israel. . . . ." (p. 12.)

Mr. Bernstein quotes from a book issued by G. Butmi, printed in 1907, dedicated to the Black Hundred organization. He says the headlines over the protocols in the Butmi 1907 version read as follows:

"Protocols taken out of the secret depositories of the main office of Zion. (Extracts from ancient and modern protocols of the Sages of Zion of the Universal Organization of Freemasons)". (p. 59).

He quotes from the introduction of the author the following:

"These secret protocols were secured with great difficulty in fragmentary form, and were translated into Russian in December, 1901. . . . The reader who is more or less familiar with the secrets of Freemasonry will draw from the general character of the criminal plot, outlined in the protocols, the conclusion as to their authenticity, and from several details he will suppose with great certainty that the mentioned protocols were taken from the documents of the Masonic lodge of Egyptian ritual, or Mizraim, which is joined mostly by Jews. But the above-mentioned failure to mention the time and place where the protocols were composed might call forth in the reader, who is entirely unfamiliar with the abominations of Masonic doctrines, doubts as to the authenticity of these documents". (p. 60.)

Turning now to your publication, "The International Jew" of November, 1920, "Being a reprint of a series of articles appearing in The Dearborn Independent from May 22 to October 2, 1920", I find the following:

"A copy of the Protocols was deposited in the British Museum and bears on it the stamp of the institution, 'August 10, 1906'. . . . . The protocols, without name attached, appearing for the most part in manuscript here and there, laboriously copied out from hand to hand, being sponsored by no authority that was willing to stand behind it, assiduously studied in the secret departments of the governments and passed from one to another among higher officials, have lived on and on, increasing in power and prestige by the sheer force of their contents". (pp. 92-93.)

At page 95 I find the following:

"Sheer lies do not live long, their power soon dies. These Protocols are more alive than ever".

"The Protocols are a World Program—there is no doubt anywhere of that. Whose program, is stated within the articles themselves".

At page 109 is the following:

"The purpose of the plan revealed in the Protocols is to undermine all authority in order that a new authority in the form of autocracy may be set up".

At page 116:

"It is almost certain that once the principles of the Protocols are known widely and understood by the people, the criticism which they now rightly make of the Gentile mind will no longer hold good. It is the purpose of future articles in this series to study these documents and to answer out of their contents all the questions that may arise concerning them."

At page 180:

"Those wonderful documents known as the 'Protocols' with their strong grasp of every element of life, have not overlooked Land".

The first sentence of chapter 17, page 187, is:

"The purpose of this article is twofold: to set forth what the Protocols have to say about the relation of the Press to the world program, and to make an introduction to a study of Jewish influence on the Press".

Page 201:

"The World Program as outlined in these strange documents turns upon many points, some of which have already been discussed".

The last paragraph of chapter 19 begins with this sentence:

"And with such a link between the American Hebrew, Russian Bolshevism and the Protocols, there are still Jewish publicists with the crust to say that only crazy people could see the connection".

This is followed by the sentence:

"Only blind people will not see it". (p. 223.)

It would seem to me that your exploitation of the Protocols which as herein indicated are heralded as of Masonic origin would amount to linking the Jews and Masons.

Hoping this satisfactorily answers your inquiry, I am

Very truly yours,
J. S. WEST.

A Quarter of a Century

By Dr. Felix A. Levy

THIS is the title of the report of the "Central Verein Deutscher Staatsburger Judischen Glaubens" (Central Association of Citizens of the Jewish Faith), which contains a survey of the history of the Association and its efforts to guard the civil and political rights of the Jews of the German Empire against the attacks of the prevalent anti-Semitism.

The need for such an organization was urgent in the leading Central power of Europe. Anti-Semitism in the former Kaiser's domain was an organized movement, with a press, and a program of propaganda, growing frequently to the dimensions of an almost popular movement represented in parliament by a strong political faction. For years after 1869, when political equality was granted all German citizens, campaigns to deprive the Jews of their newly won constitutional privileges were inaugurated, and might have been successful but for the giving of counter battle on the part of the Jews by the formation of an association both for defense against the charges of the enemy and the strengthening of the ranks and morale of a weak-kneed, self-satisfied Jewry.

The difference between anti-Semitism in Germany and that recently apparent in our own country lay in the fact that the former brand was largely political. In the United States the Jews have always had the same rights and privileges, duties and obligations under our Constitution as any other portion of our population. In America, we recognize no national groups or racial minorities. In Germany, up to 1869 the Jews were a distinct group, "Schutzjuden" under the protection of king or duke, with a status of their own, inferior politically to that of their non-Jewish neighbors. This happiness depended upon the favor of their "protector". When all distinctions among the peoples of Germany were leveled, there arose resentment, which grew into animosity and open hostility against the giving to the Jews of the long denied rights of citizenship. Anti-Semitism so-called, though actually centuries old, was revived in modern times in its new guise by Christian Lassen, in his book (1847) on "Hindu Archaeology" (Indische Altertums Kunde) in which he attempted to prove a theory of the superiority of the Aryan race over the Semitic. The Frenchman, Renan, unconsciously perhaps, followed in 1865 in his "History of the Semitic Languages" the thought enunciated by the German, though in 1883 he retracted his belief in the existence of a Jewish race in "The Jews as Race and Religion". But the mischief had been done and a scientific cult of Aryan pre-eminence was practiced in university and other cultured circles from where it permeated into the popular mind.

Yet, after all, this academic anti-Jewish bias, and even political anti-Jewish feeling, unknown in our own country, might not have been effective had there not been added the third element of economic anti-Semitism, of which we have an analogue in America. The growth of economic independence on the part of the Jews of Germany was watched with envious eyes and was maliciously attributed to usury, to exploitation and profiteering by a people who were now said to control the stock markets and the money exchanges of Europe. This was exactly the same sort of libel which we have recently met with here. Anti-Semitism finally received official sanction and endorsement when Bismarck called upon all conservative parties to unite against the Liberals, portraying in his appeal the Jews as dangerous rivals and competitors of patriotic property owners, small business men and officials. Following the victory of the Conservatives at the polls in 1878 the Christian-Socialist Party was founded under the leadership of the Court Chaplain Stocker, whose conscience knew no scruples. The Government flirted with the enemies of Jews; the courts favored them, all of which incited them to bolder measures against the hapless people. We need not go into further details; matters went from bad to worse. The Jews themselves with few exceptions realized the gravity of the situation. Here and there Christians like Professors Delitzsch, Mommsen or Chief-burgomaster Forckenbeck of Berlin and others came to their defense but the majority of both Jews and non-Jews were passive under the attacks.

Politically, the anti-Semites led a checkered career, going down to defeat very frequently. This, however, did not deter them from carrying their nefarious scheme of hatred into social organizations which excluded Jewish membership and into the schools, where teachers were given the opportunity of poisoning the minds of their pupils. The Prussian assembly at this time was overwhelmingly anti-Semitic. Finally, after repeated efforts on the p of liberal Christians and earnest Jews aware of the danger, in 1893 the Central Verein was founded, supplanting all other organizations, and it aroused in the Jews the conviction of the necessity of organized self-defense. The purpose of the new society was "to unite all citizens of the Jewish faith without distinction of religious or political affiliation in order to awaken them to a zealous guardianship of their political and social equality and to the unequivocal cultivation of a German attitude of mind". The society's platform insisted on the following: that Jews were Germans by nationality, ready to fulfill the duties of citizenship, maintaining their constitutional rights; that as Jews they were no political party, this being an individual matter; that their morality was as high as that of the other citizens; that they protested against the making of all Jewry responsible for the fault or misdeed of a single member.

The association immediately entered upon its work of publicity. By means of meetings and lectures, pamphlets and newspapers, including its own official organ, it reached a wide public. It established also a Central Bureau which attempted to handle all matters that came to its notice, thus protecting the rights of the Jew in every corner of the Empire and guarding his good name. The Anti-Defamation League does a similar work in our country, in a similar manner. Questions that came before it had to be handled delicately, quietly, diplomatically and inobtrusively. Success was almost immediate. The society provided a lawyer who could be consulted daily at specified hours for the disposition of cases in which a breach of Jewish rights was involved.

The proceeding against the anti-Semitic press is interesting. Whenever a Jew was attacked personally in one of these sheets, he was asked for an explanation. If the article proved to be slander, the association pushed the matter; if true, the fact of confession was salutary punishment for the evil-doer, deterring him and others from further defamation of the fair name of the Jew. The Association took up the cudgels for defense of an individual only in the event that through him all Jewry was involved. When necessary, cases were carried to court, which in the course of time had suffered a change of heart, dispensing justice less arbitrarily than had been their custom, by impositions of fines for calumnies, etc. A decision was finally obtained from the highest court making any insult of the Jewish religion punishable.

Medieval superstitions such as the blood accusation were frequently employed by the enemy to arouse feeling against the Jew. This charge was laid. Accusations that the Jews sold soiled meat to Christians were made punishable by fine. The charge that the oath of a Jew in court where he testified against a Christian could not be believed, and that on Yom Kippur he was exonerated for perjury, was effectively disproven. Jews were legally permitted to slaughter their cattle in their prescribed way, having proven that it was not cruelty to animals as the anti-Semites contended.

The combating of anti-Semitism in the seats of authority in the government was a tremendous task and was crowned with more than occasional successes. Official careers were open only to baptized Jews, this attitude putting the state in the position of rewarding disloyalty. On the latter ground the association grappled with its task. It likewise was continually occupied with guarding the Jewish Constitution alrights, as, for example, in the case of Jews excluded from serving on juries and assuming other duties of a similar nature. It received the assurance that in time of war the Jewish soldiers could rise from the ranks, for in peace no Jew was permitted to be an officer. It finally succeeded in minimizing the danger of anti-Semitic teaching in the public schools, by direction of effort against teacher, text book and magazine for the young.

The association was occasionally compelled to enter the field of politics, throwing its influence against an anti-Semitic candidate. It called upon its large membership to vote and to get votes for the candidate it endorsed, and thus when necessary it became quite a factor in determining the political fate of the anti-Semitic agitator who ran for office. The political parties had to become more careful in their selection of candidates. Converted Jews were served similarly, for by their disloyalty they had become virtual enemies.

The fight against the employer who desires no Jewish labor was carried on much as it is in our own country. This kind of economic disability we, too, have to contend with, except that in America the situation is not as serious. In Germany the chemist, the physician and other professional men suffer far more from discrimination because they are Jews than do their professional brothers here. It might be added that the association established a Central Bureau of vocational guidance with numerous branches in the provinces, to direct and help young men and women embarking on careers, in their selection of vocations.

Anti-Semitism in learned circles was fought on its own ground, on an intellectual plane, by the issuance of a monthly periodical, intentionally named "Im Deutschen Reich", in the German Empire. This paper has appeared without interruption since July, 1895, and has contained numerous splendid, well-written articles defending the Jew against his enemies, and has answered all objectors. The press of Germany was watched carefully for any prejudicial outbursts. This could be done because of the many local branches which the society has. Monographs and dissertations of a highly learned character written by experts were sent broadcast into the proper places refuting the higher anti-Semitism, carrying the battle into the heart of educated circles. Authors were importuned to change their written opinion of Jew and Judaism to bring it in consonance with the truth; for example, Sombart in the second edition of his "Jew and Modern Capital" (this is the English title) abandoned the erroneous assertions of the first edition, so often quoted in American anti-Semitic literature, regarding the influence of the Jewish religion upon economic life.

This, in brief, is a resume of the work of the Central Verein. It functioned only during the war as a Jewish Welfare Board. There have been setbacks and divisions during its history, but none of these was serious. Thus, a quarrel with the Zionists over the interpretation of Nationalism led to a small secession from its ranks, but it grows as it has grown until its members are many thousands. Every city of importance has its own Council which sends delegates to a Provincial Council, which in turn is represented by a National Board, which delegates to a committee of three, representative leadership.

This machinery is similar to that of the I. O. B. B. in the United States. It is well to remember in conclusion, that the starting point of all the activities of the Central Verein is that the Jew is not an alien in his native or adopted land, that he is a Jew by religion only, otherwise he is at one with his Gentile fellow. Citizenship and its rights belong as inherently to the Jew as to others. The Jew must be loyal to himself, his country and his God.

FURTHER ATTACKS ON JEWS IN GALICIA.

Warsaw (J. T. A.). Unheard-of excesses against the Jewish population are taking place in the region of Berzhanov, Galicia, for the past three weeks, but the Polish police take no measures to quell them. Bands, who remain unpunished, attack Jewish houses and rob them of all their contents. Jewish passengers are horribly [illegible]. The Jewish population has appealed to the official in authority, but he has done nothing in answer to their appeal.

A CHRISTIAN PROTEST.

By Edward Channing Baldwin, Ph. D.*

To the writer there came recently through the mail Volume II of the International Jew, being a collection of reprints of articles which had appeared in The Dearborn Independent. Accompanying the volume was a subscription blank on which was printed an excerpt from a review declaring that the articles "are written with a fullness of knowledge and a temperance of expression that are beyond praise". Opening the book at random, and reading the first article that caught my attention, I was impressed with the fact that the writer had written neither intelligently nor temperately; but that through ignorance or malice he had presented certain facts in a way likely to mislead an unintelligent reader.

The article is entitled "Disraeli—British Premier—Portrays Jews". Here Disraeli is described as a Jew who "gloried" in his Jewishness, and a man whom the Jews themselves "delight to honor". He is declared to have protrayed "in his book, Coningsby, . . . from the wealth of his traditions as a Jew, and the height of his observation as prime minister the method of the Jew in peace and war, exactly as others have tried to describe it". Then follow a number of quotations from Disraeli's romance in which the Jew, Sidonia, is represented as "lord and master of the money market of the world, and of course virtually lord and master of everything else". Throughout the article the impression evidently meant to be conveyed is that Disraeli, himself a loyal and patriotic Jew, had in book form portrayed "The International Jew . . . the Protocolist . . . wrapped in mystery".

Never once does the writer betray his knowledge of three important facts that invalidate his whole contention—namely that Disraeli was a Christian, that his opinions of modern Judaism were utterly at variance with those attributed to him in the article, and that Coningsby is not a dispassionate political treatise, but a romance.

To cite Disraeli as a Jew who gloried in his Judaism and whom the Jews themselves delight to honor is absurd, because he was baptized as a Christian at the age of thirteen, with the consent and approval of his father, who had himself severed his connection with the synagog in 1813, four years before. If Disraeli's testimony as to the character of Jews were as damaging as the article alleges, it would be discounted by the fact that it was the testimony of an apostate Jew regarding a faith he had abjured.

This testimony, however, the article completely misrepresents. Instead of regarding the Jews as radicals in temper, secretly arrayed against government, Disraeli looked upon them as one of the strongest conservative forces in modern society. In his Life of Lord George Bentinck he says of them: "The native tendency of the Jewish race is against the doctrine of the equality of man. They have also another characteristic—the faculty of acquisition. Thus it will be seen that all the tendencies of the Jewish race are conservative. Their bias is to religion, property and natural aristocracy".

Instead, however, of recognizing these opinions of Disraeli, the writer by quoting here and there a sentence, and by misapplying the quotations, contrives to extort a meaning quite contrary to that which Disraeli intended. In Chapter XXXVII, for example, of Coningsby, Disraeli makes Sidonia say: "The Jews, for example, independently of the capital qualities for citizenship, which they possess in their industry, temperance and energy and vivacity of mind, are a race essentially monarchial, deeply religious, and shrinking themselves from converts as from a calamity, are ever anxious to see the religious systems of the countries in which they live flourish; yet since your society has become agitated in England, and powerful combinations menace your institutions, you find the once loyal Hebrew invariably arrayed in the same ranks as the leveller and the latitudinarian, and prepared to support the policy which may even endanger his life and property, rather than tamely continue under a system which seeks to degrade him. . . . Yet the Jews, Coningsby, are essentially Tories".

Of this paragraph the writer quotes only the reference to the leveller and the latitudinarian. "Consider that," he cries triumphantly, ' Latitudinarism is the doctrine of the Protocols in a word. It is a break up by means of a welter of so-called liberal ideas which construct nothing themselves, but have power to destroy the established order".

Now every intelligent person knows that the term "latitudinarian" meant merely a "broad-church Anglican that it was applied to men holding liberal views on the religious questions of the day, and that the term denoted nothing of the political radicalism which the writer attributes to the Jewish temper.

Finally, it should be pointed out that Coningsby, instead of being a portrayal of life as it is, or as it was in Disraeli's day, is of intention a political romance, portraying life as one might imagine it to be, but making no claim to realism and scarcely to credibility. The author's purpose as stated in the preface to the fifth edition was "to do justice to the race which had founded Christianity".

Christianity Disraeli regarded as developed Judaism. In the attempt to vindicate Judaism looked upon as the precursor of Christianity, he created the character of Sidonia, an embodiment of the qualities that Disraeli admired in Judaism. Of course the character is a highly idealized type. He is a paragon of learning who "had exhausted all the sources of human knowledge; fabulously rich", "heir to the greatest fortune in Europe"; and "incredibly influential". To treat such a superman as if he had embodied Disraeli's ideas of conditions actually existing is as ridiculous as it would be to regard Lemuel Gulliver as embodying Swift's conception of the eighteenth century Englishman.

Because of the evident unfairness of this article, because it misrepresents Disraeli, and because the perversions and misrepresentations are a part of an infamous propaganda for the promotion of race hatred, I protest against both its untruthfulness and its malice.

---

*Prof Baldwin is a member of the faculty of the University of Illinois. He is the author of "Our Modern Debt to Israel" (Sherman, French & Co., Boston).

B'NAI B'RITH IN MEXICO.

(Continued from page 4).

From Mexico City the Committee proceeded to other cities in Mexico. Advices have just been received that relief committees have been organized at Vera Cruz, San Luis Potisi, Tampico and Guadalajara.

Immigrants Urged Not to Violate Law.

Possibly the most important work which was done by the committee in Mexico was by calling attention to the fact that the laws of the United States must in no way be violated by attempting to cross the border to enter this country illegally. Committees of immigrants were addressed, urged to try to establish themselves in Mexico and avail themselves of the school which had been organized and to try to become self-supporting, and eventually good and useful citizens of Mexico.

The Order has been in constant communication with the Department of Labor concerning this situation. We publish the last letter of the President of the Order and the answer thereto:

"July 16, 1921.

"Hon. E. J. Henning, Ass't Sec'y,
"Department of Labor,
"Washington, D. C.

"My dear Mr. Henning:

"A committee of our Organization went to Mexico for the purpose of doing whatever can be done to prevent immigrants from coming into the United States in violation of its laws. That committee, after a visit there of four weeks, reports to me that they have organized committees at Vera Cruz, Mexico City, San Luis Potisi, Tampico and Guadalajara. Those committees will see to it that immigrants coming to Mexico will be properly taken care of there.

"Our committee has opened a school in Mexico City to teach the immigrants the Spanish language and steps have been taken to aid such immigrants to become self-supporting.

"Our committee reports further that in Nenvo Laredo, Mexico, which is opposite Laredo, Texas, there is a German woman who keeps a so-called hotel where parties live who induce and assist immigrants to be smuggled across the river into the United States. Our committee is of opinion that the Mexican Immigration agents know that this is being done and that they share in the charges made for smuggling individuals across. They are also of opinion that this is true of the following places: Juarez, Mexico, opposite El Paso, Tex., C. P. Diaz, Mexico, opposite Eagle Pass Tex., Matamoros, Mexico, opposite Brownsville, Tex. I am calling your attention to this as it may be possible that your Department may be able to take proper measures to stop this and thereby help to solve the problem that is bothering us now.

"With best regards,
"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "ADOLF KRAUS".

"July 19, 1921.

"My dear Mr. Kraus:

"Your letter of the 16th came yesterday and I was glad to get it.

"On Saturday of last week, Mr. L. S. Gottlieb of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, together with some other officers of that organization, sailed from New York for Vera Cruz, and are to proceed from there to Mexico City and then to the American border, with somewhat the same purpose in mind which your committee had. I am wondering if the two organizations cannot work together in that respect. These gentlemen are expected back soon after the first of August and when their report comes in, I will try and see if I cannot bring the two together.

"Thank you for the information about the smuggling headquarters at the Mexican borders. I will direct the Bureau of Immigration to look into this and hope to get some result from it.

"I have been planning on being in Chicago on the 28th but I am afraid I may not be able to make it. I do expect to be there, however, on the 29th and may get in touch with you at that time.

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "E. J. HENNING,
"Assistant Secretary."

Work to Continue.

The B'nai B'rith intends to continue its work on this problem, especially with a view of stopping the illegal entry of immigrants into the United States. The lodges abroad have been notified to use their influence to prevent emigrants from being imposed upon by steamship agents and Mr. Seelenfreund, Secretary of the B'nai B'rith, who is now in Europe, will make it generally known that emigrants who enter the United States illegally will not only have to undergo the hardship of being deported but may have to serve a prison sentence prior to deportation.

Judging from correspondence which has passed between them lately, it is probable that the B'nai B'rith, the Industrial Removal Office and the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society will cooperate in the work whole-heartedly, and thereby set an example of how goodly and how pleasant it is when organizations work together in harmony.

HARDING NOT FORD'S GUEST.

Washington (Jewish Correspondence Bureau). President Harding's private secretary, Mr. Christian, replying to a Jewish protest against the action of the President accepting Henry Ford's invitation to camp together for a limited period, has stated that Harding was not Ford's guest but that he was visiting the same place where Mr. Ford was camping.

The Yiddish newspapers, notably the Jewish Daily News, rejoice at this statement which takes cognizance of the view of American Jewry, and removes what was looked upon as an affront to Jews who consider that the highest official of the country ought not accept the hospitality of a man who has insulted three million citizens of the United States and made consistent attempts to blacken the Jewish name.

The statement of the President's secretary is in itself proof that for the President to have accepted Ford's invitation would have been improper.

CONFIRM JEWISH ACCUSATIONS AGAINST GERMAN WAR PRISONS.

Berlin (Jewish Telegraphic Agency). An investigating committee appointed by the German government has substantiated the accusations made by Jews that Jewish war prisoners were beaten and starved in the war prison camps at Stuggart. It is stated that some of the officers responsible for these acts will soon be brought to trial. Conditions in the camps are improving, but it is expected that they will be disbanded shortly.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-URBANA
3 0112 042194651